Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That all that part of the territory of the United States included within the limits of the District of Columbia be, and the same is hereby, created into a government of the name of the District of Columbia, by which name it is hereby constituted a body corporate for municipal purposes, and may contract and be contracted with, sue and be sued, plead and be impleaded, have a seal, and exercise all other powers of a municipal corporation not inconsistent with the Constitution and laws of the United States and the provisions of this act.

The U.S. Supreme Court, in fact, has admitted that all governments are corporations when it held:

"Corporations are also of all grades, and made for varied objects; all governments are corporations, created by usage and common consent, or grants and charters which create a body politic for prescribed purposes; but whether they are private, local or general, in their objects, for the enjoyment of property, or the exercise of power, they are all governed by the same rules of law, as to the construction and the obligation of the instrument by which the incorporation is made [the Constitution is the corporate charter]. One universal rule of law protects persons and property. It is a fundamental principle of the common law of England, that the term freemen of the kingdom, includes 'all persons,' ecclesiastical and temporal, incorporate, politique or natural; it is a part of their magna charta (2 Inst. 4), and is incorporated into our institutions. The persons of the members of corporations are on the same footing of protection as other persons, and their corporate property secured by the same laws which protect that of individuals. 2 Inst. 46-7. 'No man shall be taken,' 'no man shall be disseised,' without due process of law, is a principle taken from magna charta, infused into all our state constitutions, and is made inviolable by the federal government, by the amendments to the constitution."

If we are acting as a federal "public officer" or contractor, then we are representing the "United States** federal corporation" known also as the "District of Columbia". That corporation is a statutory but not constitutional "U.S. citizen" under 8 U.S.C. §1401 which is completely subject to all federal law. In fact, it is officers of THIS corporation who are the only real "U.S. citizens" who can have a liability to file a tax return mentioned in 26 C.F.R. §1.6012-1(a). Human beings cannot fit into this category without engaging in involuntary servitude and violating the Thirteenth Amendment.

"A corporation is a citizen, resident, or inhabitant of the state or country by or under the laws of which it was created, and of that state or country only."
[19 Corpus Juris Secundum (C.J.S.), Corporations, §886 (2003)]

Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 17(b) says that when we are representing that corporation as “officers” or “employees”, we therefore become statutory “U.S. citizens” completely subject to federal territorial law:

IV. PARTIES > Rule 17.
Rule 17. Parties Plaintiff and Defendant; Capacity

(b) Capacity to Sue or be Sued.

Capacity to sue or be sued is determined as follows:

(1) for an individual who is not acting in a representative capacity, by the law of the individual's domicile;

(2) for a corporation, by the law under which it was organized; and

(3) for all other parties, by the law of the state where the court is located, except that:

(A) a partnership or other unincorporated association with no such capacity under that state's law may sue or be sued in its common name to enforce a substantive right existing under the United States Constitution or laws; and

(B) 28 U.S.C. §§ 754 and 959(a) govern the capacity of a receiver appointed by a United States court to sue or be sued in a United States court.

[\[Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 17\(b\)\]](#)

Yet on every government (any level) document we sign (e.g. Social Security, Marriage License, Voter Registration, Driver's License, BATF 4473, etc.) they either require you to be a “citizen of the United States” or they ask “are you a resident of Illinois?”, and they very deliberately don't tell you which of the three “United States” they mean because:

1. They want to encourage people to presume that all three definitions are equivalent and apply simultaneously and in every case, even though we now know that is NOT the case.
2. They want to see if they can trick you into surrendering your sovereign immunity pursuant to 28 U.S.C. §1603(b)(3). A person who is a statutory and not constitutional citizen cannot be a “foreign sovereign” or an instrumentality of a “foreign state” called a state of the Union.
3. They want to ask you if you will voluntarily accept an uncompensated position as a “public officer” within the federal corporation “United States**”. Everyone within the “United States**” is a statutory creation and “subject” of Congress. Most government forms, and especially “benefit applications”, therefore serve the dual capacity of its original purpose PLUS an application to become a “public officer” within the government. The reason this must be so, is that they are not allowed to pay “benefits” to private citizens and can only lawfully pay them to public employees. Any other approach makes the government into a thief. See the article below for details on this scam:

The Government “Benefits” Scam, Form #05.040

4. They want you to describe yourself with words that are undefined so that THEY and not YOU can decide which of the three “citizens of the United States” they mean. We'll give you a hint, they are always going to pick the second one because people who are domiciled in THAT United States are serfs with no rights:

“Indeed, the practical interpretation put by Congress upon the Constitution has been long continued and uniform to the effect [182 U.S. 244, 279] that the Constitution is applicable to territories acquired by purchase or conquest, only when and so far as Congress shall so direct. Notwithstanding its duty to 'guarantee to every state in this Union a republican form of government' (art. 4, 4), by which we understand, according to the definition of Webster, 'a government in which the supreme power resides in the whole body of the people, and is exercised by representatives elected by them,' Congress did not hesitate, in the original organization of the territories of Louisiana, Florida, the Northwest Territory, and its subdivisions of Ohio, Indiana, Michigan, Illinois, and Wisconsin and still more recently in the case of Alaska, to establish a form of government bearing a much greater analogy to a British Crown colony than a republican state of America, and to vest the legislative power either in a governor and council, or a governor and judges, to be appointed by the President. It was not until they had attained a certain population that power was given them to organize a legislature by vote of the people. In all these cases, as well as in territories subsequently organized west of the Mississippi, Congress thought it necessary either to extend to Constitution and laws of the United States over them, or to declare that the inhabitants should be entitled to enjoy the right of trial by jury, of bail, and of the privilege of the writ of habeas corpus, as well as other privileges of the bill of rights.”

Most deliberately vague government forms that ask you whether you are a “U.S. citizen” or “citizen of the United States” therefore are in effect asking you to assume or presume the second definition, the “United States**” (federal zone), but they don't want to tell you this because then you would realize they are asking you:

1. To commit the crime of impersonating a statutory “U.S. citizen” (8 U.S.C. §1401) in violation of 18 U.S.C. §911.

2. To commit perjury on a government form under penalty of perjury by identifying yourself as a statutory “citizen of the United States” (8 U.S.C. §1401) even though you can't be as a person born within and domiciled within a state of the Union.
3. To become a slave of their usually false and self-serving presumptions about you without any compensation or consideration.

Based on the preceding deliberate and self-serving misconceptions by the courts and the legal profession, some people mistakenly believe that:

1. They are not constitutional “citizens of the United States” under the Fourteenth Amendment.
2. The term “United States” as used in the Constitution Fourteenth Amendment has the same meaning as that used in the statutory definitions of “United States” appearing in 8 U.S.C. §1101\(a\)\(38\) and 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10) and as used in 8 U.S.C. §1401.
3. That a statutory “citizen of the United States” under the Internal Revenue Code, 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1(c) and under 8 U.S.C. §1401 is the same thing as a “citizen of the United States” under the Fourteenth Amendment.

The Supreme Court settled issue number one above in Boyd v. Nebraska, 143 U.S. 135 (1892), the U.S. Supreme Court, when it held that all persons born in a state of the Union are constitutional citizens, meaning citizens of the THIRD “United States***” above.

*“Mr. Justice Story, in his Commentaries on the Constitution, says: ‘Every citizen of a state is ipso facto a citizen of the United States.’ Section 1693. And this is the view expressed by Mr. Rawle in his work on the Constitution. Chapter 9, pp. 85, 86. Mr. Justice Curtis, in Dred Scott v. Sandford, 19 How. 393, 576, expressed the opinion that under the constitution of the United States ‘every free person, born on the soil of a state, who is a citizen of that state by force of its constitution or laws, is also a citizen of the United States.’ And Mr. Justice Swayne, in The Slaughter-House Cases, 16 Wall. 36, 126, declared that ‘a citizen of a state is ipso facto a citizen of the United States.’”

See also Minor v. Happersett, 88 U.S. 162 (1875).

As far as misconception #2 above, the term “United States”, in the context of statutory citizenship found in Title 8 of the U.S. Code, includes only federal territory subject to the exclusive or plenary jurisdiction of the general government and excludes land under exclusive jurisdiction of states of the Union. This is confirmed by the definition of “United States”, “State”, and “continental United States”. Below is a definition of “United States” in the context of federal statutory citizenship:

TITLE 8 - ALIENS AND NATIONALITY
CHAPTER 12 - IMMIGRATION AND NATIONALITY
SUBCHAPTER 1 - GENERAL PROVISIONS
Sec. 1101. - Definitions

(a)(38) The term “United States”, except as otherwise specifically herein provided, when used in a geographical sense, means the continental United States, Alaska, Hawaii, Puerto Rico, Guam, and the Virgin Islands of the United States.

Below is a definition of the term “continental United States” which reveals the dirty secret about statutory citizenship:

TITLE 8--ALIENS AND NATIONALITY CHAPTER 1--IMMIGRATION AND NATURALIZATION SERVICE,
DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE
PART 215--CONTROLS OF ALIENS DEPARTING FROM THE UNITED STATES
Section 215.1: Definitions

(f) The term continental United States means the District of Columbia and the several States, except Alaska and Hawaii.

The term “States”, which is suspiciously capitalized and is then also defined elsewhere in Title 8 as follows:

TITLE 8 - ALIENS AND NATIONALITY
SUBCHAPTER 1 - GENERAL PROVISIONS
Sec. 1101. - Definitions

1 (a)(36) The term "State" includes the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, Guam, and the Virgin Islands of the
2 United States.

3 As far as misconception #3 above, the term "United States" appearing in the statutory definition of term "citizen of the 4 United States" found in 8 U.S.C. §1401 includes only the federal zone and excludes states of the Union. On the other hand,
5 the term "United States" as used in the Constitution refers to the collective states of the Union and excludes federal
6 territories and possessions. Therefore, a constitutional "citizen of the United States" as defined in the Fourteenth
7 Amendment is different than a statutory "citizen of the United States" found in 8 U.S.C. §1401. The two are mutually
8 exclusive, in fact. The U.S. Supreme Court agreed when it held:

9 *"The 1st section of the 14th article [Fourteenth Amendment], to which our attention is more specifically invited,
10 opens with a definition of citizenship—not only citizenship of the United States[***], but citizenship of the 11 states. No such definition was previously found in the Constitution, nor had any attempt been made to define
12 it by act of Congress. It had been the occasion of much discussion in the courts, by the executive departments
13 and in the public journals. It had been said by eminent judges that no man was a citizen of the United
14 States[***] except as he was a citizen of one of the states composing the Union. Those therefore, who had
15 been born and resided always in the District of Columbia or in the territories, though within the United 16 States[*], were not citizens."*
17 [Slaughter-House Cases, 83 U.S. (16 Wall.) 36, 21 L.Ed. 394 (1873)]

18 A man or woman born within and domiciled within the states of the Union mentioned in the Constitution therefore is:

- 19 1. A "citizen of the United States" under the Fourteenth Amendment.
- 20 2. A "national" pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21).
- 21 3. NOT a statutory "citizen of the United States" under 8 U.S.C. §1401 or under the Internal Revenue Code.
- 22 4. NOT born within the federal "States" (territories and possessions pursuant to 4 U.S.C. §110(d)) mentioned in federal 23 statutory law or the Internal Revenue Code.
- 24 5. NOT A "U.S. national" or "national of the United States" pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22)(B) or 8 U.S.C. §1408.
25 These people are born in American Samoa or Swains Island, because the statutory "United States" as used in this
26 phrase is defined to include only federal territory and exclude states of the Union mentioned in the Constitution..

27 Consequently, you can't be a citizen of a state of the Union if you don't want to be a constitutional "citizen of the United 28 States***" under the Fourteenth Amendment, because the two are synonymous. The U.S. Supreme Court affirmed this fact
29 when it held the following:

30 *"It is impossible to construe the words 'subject to the jurisdiction thereof,' in the opening sentence, as less
31 comprehensive than the words 'within its jurisdiction,' in the concluding sentence of the same section; or to
32 hold that persons 'within the jurisdiction' of one of the states of the Union are not 'subject to the jurisdiction
33 of the United States[***]."*
34 U.S. v. Wong Kim Ark, [169 U.S. 649, 18 S.Ct. 456; 42 L.Ed. 890 (1898), emphasis added]

NOTES:

1. Domicile is a prerequisite to having any civil status per Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 17. One therefore cannot be a statutory "alien" under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(3) without a domicile on federal territory. Without such a domicile, you are a transient foreigner and neither an "alien" nor a "nonresident alien".
2. "United States" is described in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(38), (a)(36) and 8 C.F.R. §215.1(f) and includes only federal territory and possessions and excludes all Constitutional Union states. This is a product of the separation of powers doctrine that is the heart of the United States Constitution.
3. A "nonresident alien individual" who has made an election under 26 U.S.C. §6013(g) and (h) to be treated as a "resident alien" is treated as a "nonresident alien" for the purposes of withholding under I.R.C. Subtitle C but retains their status as a "resident alien" under I.R.C. Subtitle A. See 26 C.F.R. §1.1441-1(c)(3)(ii).
4. A "non-person" is really just a transient foreigner who is not "purposefully availing themselves" of commerce within the legislative jurisdiction of the United States on federal territory under the Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act, 28 U.S.C. Chapter 97. The real transition from a "NON-person" to an "individual" occurs when one:
  - 4.1. "Purposefully avails himself" of commerce on federal territory and thus waives sovereign immunity. Examples of such purposeful availment are the next three items.
  - 4.2. Lawfully and consensually occupying a public office in the U.S. government and thereby being an "officer and individual" as identified in 5 U.S.C. §2105(a). Otherwise, you are PRIVATE and therefore beyond the civil legislative jurisdiction of the national government.
  - 4.3. Voluntarily files an IRS Form 1040 as a citizen or resident abroad and takes the foreign tax deduction under 26 U.S.C. §911. This too is essentially an act of "purposeful availment". Nonresidents are not mentioned in section 911. The upper left corner of the form identifies the filer as a "U.S. individual". You cannot be an "U.S. individual" without ALSO being an "individual". All the "trade or business" deductions on the form presume the applicant is a public officer, and therefore the "individual" on the form is REALLY a public officer in the government and would be committing FRAUD if he or she was NOT.
  - 4.4. VOLUNTARILY fills out an IRS Form W-7 ITIN Application (IRS identifies the applicant as an "individual") AND only uses the assigned number in connection with their compensation as an elected or appointed public officer. Using it in connection with PRIVATE earnings is FRAUD.
5. What turns a "non-resident NON-person" into a "nonresident alien individual" is meeting one or more of the following two criteria found in 26 C.F.R. §1.1441-1(c)(3)(ii):
  - 5.1. Residence/domicile in a foreign country under the residence article of an income tax treaty and 26 C.F.R. §301.7701(b)-7(a)(1).
  - 5.2. Residence/domicile as an alien in Puerto Rico, Guam, the Commonwealth of Northern Mariana Islands, the U.S. Virgin Islands, or American Samoa as determined under 26 C.F.R. §301.7701(b)-1(d).
6. All "taxpayers" are STATUTORY "aliens" or "nonresident aliens". The definition of "individual" found in 26 C.F.R. §1.1441-1(c)(3) does NOT include "citizens". The only occasion where a "citizen" can also be an "individual" is when they are abroad under 26 U.S.C. §911 and interface to the I.R.C. under a tax treaty with a foreign country as an alien pursuant to 26 C.F.R. §301.7701(b)-7(a)(1)

And when he had come into the house, Jesus anticipated him, saying, "What do you think, Simon? From whom do the kings [governments] of the earth [lawfully] take customs or taxes, from their sons [citizens and subjects] or from strangers [aliens], which are synonymous with "residents" in the tax code, and exclude "citizens"?"

Peter said to Him, "From strangers [aliens]/"residents" ONLY. See 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1\(a\)\(2\)\(ii\) and 26 C.F.R. §301.6109-1\(d\)\(3\)."

Jesus said to him, "Then the sons [citizens] of the Republic, who are all sovereign "nationals" and "non-resident non-person" under federal law] are free [sovereign over their own person and labor. e.g. SOVEREIGN IMMUNITY]." [Matt. 17:24-27, Bible, NKJV]

1. “United States” is defined as federal territory within 26 U.S.C. §§7701\(a\)\(9\) and (a)(10), 7701\(a\)\(39\), and 7408\(d\), and 4 U.S.C. §110\(d\). It does not include any portion of a Constitutional state of the Union.
2. The “District of Columbia” is defined as a federal corporation but not a physical place, a “body politic”, or a de jure “government” within the District of Columbia Act of 1871, 16 Stat. 419, 426, Sec. 34. See: Corporatization and Privatization of the Government, Form #05.024; <http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>.
3. “nationals” of the United States of America who are domiciled outside of federal jurisdiction, either in a state of the Union or a foreign country, are “nationals” but not “citizens” under federal law. They also qualify as “non-resident non-persons” if not engaged in a public office and “nonresident aliens” under 26 U.S.C. §7701\(b\)\(1\)\(B\) if and only if they are engaged in a public office. See sections 4.11.2 of the Great IRS Hoax, Form #11.302 for details.
4. Temporary domicile in the middle column on the right must meet the requirements of the “Presence test” documented in IRS Publications.
5. “FEDERAL ZONE”=District of Columbia and territories of the United States in the above table

1 6. The term "individual" as used on the IRS Form 1040 means an "alien" engaged in a "trade or business". All
2 "taxpayers" are "aliens" engaged in a "trade or business". This is confirmed by 26 C.F.R. §1.1441-1(c)(3), 26 C.F.R.
3 §1.1-1(a)(2)(ii), and 5 U.S.C. §552a(a)(2). Statutory "U.S. citizens" as defined in 8 U.S.C. §1401 are not "individuals"
4 unless temporarily abroad pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §911 and subject to an income tax treaty with a foreign country. In
5 that capacity, statutory "U.S. citizens" interface to the I.R.C. as "aliens" rather than "U.S. citizens" through the tax 6 treaty.

1 Figure 5-7: Citizenship and domicile options and relationships

4 1. Changing domicile from "foreign" on the left to "domestic" on the right can occur EITHER by:
5 1.1. Physically moving to the federal zone.

- 1.2. Being lawfully elected or appointed to political office, in which case the OFFICE/STATUS has a domicile on federal territory but the OFFICER does not.
2. Statuses on the right are civil franchises granted by Congress. As such, they are public offices within the national government. Those not seeking office should not claim any of these statuses.

On the subject of citizenship, the Department of Justice Criminal Tax Manual, Section 40.05[7] says the following:

40.05[7] Defendant Not A "Person" or "Citizen"; District Court Lacks Jurisdiction Over Non-Persons and State Citizens

40.05[7][a] Generally

*Another popular protester argument is the contention that the protester is not subject to federal law because he or she is not a citizen of the United States, but a citizen of a particular "sovereign" state. This argument seems to be based on an erroneous interpretation of 26 U.S.C. §3121(e)(2), which states in part: "The term 'United States' when used in a geographical sense includes the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, Guam, and American Samoa." The "not a citizen" assertion directly contradicts the Fourteenth Amendment, which states "all persons born or naturalized in the United States, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the United States and of the state wherein they reside." The argument has been rejected time and again by the courts. See United States v. Cooper, 170 F.3d. 691, 691(7th Cir. 1999) (imposed sanctions on tax protester defendant making "frivolous squared" argument that only residents of Washington, D.C. and other federal enclaves are citizens of United States and subject to federal tax laws); United States v. Mundt, 29 F.3d. 233, 237 (6th Cir. 1994) (rejected "patently frivolous" argument that defendant was not a resident of any "federal zone" and therefore not subject to federal income tax laws); United States v. Hilgford, 7 F.3d. 1340, 1342 (7th Cir. 1993) (rejected "shop worn" argument that defendant is a citizen of the "Indiana State Republic" and therefore an alien beyond the jurisdictional reach of the federal courts); United States v. Gerads, 999 F.2d. 1255, 1256-57 (8th Cir. 1993) (imposed $1500 sanction for frivolous appeal based on argument that defendants were not citizens of the United States but instead "Free Citizens of the Republic of Minnesota" not subject to taxation); United States v. Silevan, 985 F.2d. 962, 970 (8th Cir. 1993) (rejected as "plainly frivolous" defendant's argument that he is not a "federal citizen"); United States v. Jagim, 978 F.2d. 1032, 1036 (9th Cir. 1992) (rejected "imaginative" argument that defendant cannot be punished under the tax laws of the United States because he is a citizen of the "Republic" of Idaho currently claiming "asylum" in the "Republic" of Colorado); United States v. Masat, 948 F.2d. 923, 934 (5th Cir. 1991); United States v. Sloan, 939 F.2d. 499, 500-01 (7th Cir. 1991) ("strange argument" that defendant is not subject to jurisdiction of the laws of the United States because he is a "freeborn natural individual" citizen of the State of Indiana rejected); United States v. Price, 798 F.2d. 111, 113 (5th Cir. 1986) (citizens of the State of Texas are subject to the provisions of the Internal Revenue Code).*

Notice the self-serving and devious "word or art" games and "word tricks" played by the Dept. of Injustice in the above:

- They deliberately don't show you the WHOLE definition in 26 U.S.C. §3121(e), which would open up a HUGE can of worms that they could never explain in a way that is consistent with everything that people know other than the way it is explained here.
- They FALSELY and PREJUDICIALLY "presume" that there is no separation of powers between federal territory and states of the Union, which is a violation of your rights and Treason punishable by death. The separation of powers is the very foundation of the Constitution, in fact. See:

Government Conspiracy to Destroy the Separation of Powers, Form #05.023

- They deliberately refuse to recognize that the context in which the term "United States" is used determines its meaning.
- They deliberately refuse to recognize that there are THREE definitions of the term "United States" according to the U.S. Supreme Court.
- They deliberately refuse to reconcile which of the three mutually exclusive and distinct definitions of "United States" applies in each separate context and WHY they apply based on the statutes they seek to enforce.
- They deliberately refuse to recognize or admit that the term "United States" as used in the Constitution includes states of the Union and excludes federal territory.
- They deliberately refuse to apply the rules of statutory construction to determine what is "included" within the definition of "United States" found in 26 U.S.C. §3121(e)(2). They don't want to admit that the definition is ALL inclusive and limiting, because then they couldn't collect any tax, even though it is.

§ 3121. Definitions

(e) State, United States, and citizen

1 For purposes of this chapter—

2 (1) State

3 The term “State” includes the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands,
 4 Guam, and American Samoa. [WHERE are the states of the Union?]

5 (2) United States

6 The term “United States” when used in a geographical sense includes the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, the 7 Virgin Islands, Guam, and American Samoa. [WHERE are the states of the Union?]

 9 “When a statute includes an explicit definition, we must follow that definition, even if it varies from that
 10 term's ordinary meaning. Meese v. Keene, 481 U.S. 465, 484-485 (1987) (“It is axiomatic that the statutory
 11 definition of the term excludes unstated meanings of that term”); Colautti v. Franklin, 439 U.S. at 392-393, n.
 12 10 (“As a rule, `a definition which declares what a term “means” . . . excludes any meaning that is not stated”);

 15 47.07, p. 152, and n. 10 (5th ed. 1992) (collecting cases). That is to say, the statute, read “as a whole,” post at
 16 998 [530 U.S. 943] (THOMAS, J., dissenting), leads the reader to a definition. That definition does not include
 17 the Attorney General's restriction -- “the child up to the head.” Its words, “substantial portion,” indicate the 18 contrary.”
 19 [Stenberg v. Carhart, 530 U.S. 914 \(2000\)]

20 “It is axiomatic that the statutory definition of the term excludes unstated meanings of that term. Colautti v.
 21 Franklin, 439 U.S. 379, 392, and n. 10 (1979) . Congress' use of the term “propaganda” in this statute, as 22 indeed in other legislation, has no pejorative connotation. As judges, it is our duty to [481 U.S. 485] construe
 23 legislation as it is written, not as it might be read by a layman, or as it might be understood by someone who
 24 has not even read it.”

 27 [Colautti v. Franklin, 439 U.S. 379 (1979), n. 10]

28 Therefore, if you are going to argue citizenship in federal court, we STRONGLY suggest the following lessons learned by 29 reading the United States Department of Justice Criminal Tax Manual article above:

30 1. Include all the language contained in the following within your pleadings.

Rules of Presumption and Statutory Interpretation, Litigation Tool #01.006

31 2. If someone from the government asks you whether you are a “citizen of the United States” or a “U.S. citizen”:

32 2.1. Cite the three definitions of the “United States” explained by the Supreme Court and then ask them to identify 33 which of the three definitions of “U.S.” they mean in the Table 5-71 earlier. Tell them they can choose ONLY

36 2.1.2. Federal territory and no part of any state of the Union “United States**”

37 2.1.3. States of the Union and no part of federal territory “United States***”

38 2.2. Ask them WHICH of the three types of statutory citizenship do they mean in Title 8 of the U.S. Code and tell
 39 them they can only choose ONE:

40 2.2.1. 8 U.S.C. §1401 statutory “citizen of the United States***”. Born in and domiciled on a federal territory and 41 possession and NOT a state of the Union.

42 2.2.2. 8 U.S.C. §1408 and 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22)(B) statutory “national of the United States***”. Born in and 43 domiciled in American Samoa or Swains Island.

44 2.2.3. 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) “national”. Born in and domiciled in a state of the Union and no subject to federal 45 legislative jurisdiction but only subject to political jurisdiction.

46 2.3. Hand them the following short form printed on double-sided paper and signed by you. Go to section 7 and point
 47 to the “national” status in diagram. Tell them you want this in the court record or administrative record and that 48 they agree with it if they can't prove it wrong with evidence.

Citizenship, Domicile, and Tax Status Options, Form #10.003
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

If you want more details on how to field questions about your citizenship, fill out government forms describing your citizenship, or rebut arguments that you are wrong about your citizenship, we recommend sections 11 through 13 of the following:

Why You are a "national", "state national", and Constitutional but not Statutory Citizen, Form #05.006

3. If your opponent won't answer the above questions, then forcefully accuse him of engaging in TREASON by trying to destroy the separation of powers that is the foundation of the United States Constitution. Tell them you won't help them engage in treason or undermine the main protection for your constitutional rights, which the Supreme Court said comes from the separation of powers. Then direct them at the following document that proves the existence of such TREASON.

Government Conspiracy to Destroy the Separation of Powers, Form #05.023

4. Every time you discuss citizenship with a government representative, emphasize the three definitions of the "United States" explained by the Supreme Court and that respecting and properly applying these definitions consistently is how we respect and preserve the separation of powers.
5. Admit to being a constitutional "citizen of the United States***" but not a statutory "citizen of the United States***". This will invalidate almost all the case law they cite and force them to expose their presumptions about WHICH "United States" they are trying to corn-hole you into.
6. Emphasize that the context in which the term "United States" is used determines WHICH of the three definitions applies and that there are two main contexts.

"It is clear that Congress, as a legislative body, exercise two species of legislative power: the one, limited as to its objects, but extending all over the Union: the other, an absolute, exclusive legislative power over the District of Columbia. The preliminary inquiry in the case now before the Court, is, by virtue of which of these authorities was the law in question passed?"

6.1. The Constitution: states of the Union and no part of federal territory. This is the "Federal government"

6.2. Federal statutory law: Community property of the states that includes federal territory and possession that is no party of any state of the Union. This is the "National government".

7. Emphasize that you can only be a STATUTORY "citizen" in ONE of the TWO unique jurisdictions above at a time because you can only have a domicile in ONE of the two places at a time. Another way of saying this is that you can only have allegiance to ONE MASTER at a time and won't serve two masters, and domicile is based on allegiance.

*"domicile. A person's legal home. That place where a man has his true, fixed, and permanent home and principal establishment, and to which whenever he is absent he has the intention of returning. Smith v. Smith, 206 Pa.Super. 310, 213 A.2d. 94. Generally, physical presence within a state and the intention to make it one's home are the requisites of establishing a "domicile" therein. The permanent residence of a person or the place to which he intends to return even though he may actually reside elsewhere. A person may have more than one residence but only one domicile. The legal domicile of a person is important since it, rather than the actual residence, often controls the jurisdiction of the taxing authorities and determines where a person may exercise the privilege of voting and other legal rights and privileges."*
[Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 485]

"Thus, the Court has frequently held that domicile or residence, more substantial than mere presence in transit or sojourn, is an adequate basis for taxation, including income, property, and death taxes. Since the Fourteenth Amendment makes one a citizen of the state wherein he resides, the fact of residence creates universally reciprocal duties of protection by the state and of allegiance and support by the citizen. The latter obviously includes a duty to pay taxes, and their nature and measure is largely a political matter. Of course, the situs of property may tax it regardless of the citizenship, domicile, or residence of the owner, the most obvious illustration being a tax on realty laid by the state in which the realty is located."
[Miller Brothers Co. v. Maryland, 347 U.S. 340 (1954) ]

8. Emphasize that it is a violation of due process of law and an injury to your rights for anyone to PRESUME anything about which definition of "United States" applies in a given context or which type of "citizen" you are. EVERYTHING must be supported with evidence as we have done here.

*(1) [8:4993] Conclusive presumptions affecting protected interests: A conclusive presumption may be defeated where its application would impair a party's constitutionally-protected liberty or property interests. In such cases, conclusive presumptions have been held to violate a party's due process and equal protection rights. [Vlandis v. Kline (1973) 412 U.S. 441, 449, 93 S.Ct. 2230, 2235; Cleveland Bd. of Ed. v. LaFleur (1974) 414 U.S. 632, 639-640, 94 S.Ct. 1208, 1215-presumption under Illinois law that unmarried fathers are unfit violates process]*

[Federal Civil Trials and Evidence, Rutter Group, paragraph 8:4993, p. 8K-34]

9. Emphasize that applying the CORRECT definition is THE MOST IMPORTANT JOB of the court, as admitted by the U.S. Supreme Court, in order to maintain the separation of powers between the federal zone and the states of the Union, and thereby protect your rights:

"The idea prevails with some, indeed it has found expression in arguments at the bar, that we have in this country substantially two national governments; one to be maintained under the Constitution, with all of its restrictions; the other to be maintained by Congress outside the independently of that instrument, by exercising such powers [of absolutism] as other nations of the earth are accustomed to.. I take leave to say that, if the principles thus announced should ever receive the sanction of a majority of this court, a radical and mischievous change in our system of government will result. We will, in that event, pass from the era of constitutional liberty guarded and protected by a written constitution into an era of legislative absolutism.. It will be an evil day for American liberty if the theory of a government outside the supreme law of the land finds lodgment in our constitutional jurisprudence. No higher duty rests upon this court than to exert its full authority to prevent all violation of the principles of the Constitution."

[Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 (1901)]

10. Emphasize that anything your opponent does not rebut with evidence under penalty of perjury is admitted pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 8(b)(6) and then serve them with a Notice of Default on the court record of what they have admitted to by their omission in denying.
11. Focus on WHICH "United States" is implied in the definitions within the statute being enforced.
12. Avoid words that are not used in statutes, such as "state citizen" or "sovereign citizen" or "natural born citizen", etc. because they aren't defined and divert attention away from the core definitions themselves.
13. Rationally apply the rules of statutory construction so that your opponent can't use verbicide or word tricks to wiggle out of the statutory definitions with the word "includes". See:

Meaning of the Words "includes" and "including", Form #05.014

14. State that all the cases cited in the Criminal Tax Manual are inapposite, because:
- 14.1. You aren't arguing whether you are a "citizen of the United States", but whether you are a STATUTORY "citizen of the United States".
- 14.2. They don't address the distinctions between the statutory and constitutional definitions nor do they consistently apply the rules of statutory construction.
15. Emphasize that a refusal to stick with the legal definitions and include only what is expressly stated and not "presume" or read anything into it that isn't there is an attempt to destroy the separation of powers and engage in a conspiracy against your Constitutionally protected rights.

[Senator Sam Ervin, during Watergate hearing]

[Confucius, 500 B.C.]

The subject of citizenship is covered in much more detail in the following sources, which agree with this section:

5.6.13.9.6.3 Power to tax derives from Sixteenth Amendment

Contention: The power of Congress to impose a federal income tax system on citizens and residents of the United States derives from the Sixteenth Amendment.

Authorities: Lonsdale v. Commissioner, 661 F.2d. 71, 72 (5th Cir. 1981); United States v. Updegrave, 97-1 U.S. Tax Cas. (CCH) ¶ 50,465 (E.D. Pa. 1997).

1 Rebuttal: There is no question that the authority to impose any kind of income tax derives from the “domicile” of the 2 persons taxed. This was confirmed by the U.S. Supreme Court in Miller Brothers Co. v. Maryland:

3 “Thus, the Court has frequently held that domicile or residence, more substantial than mere presence in
4 transit or sojourn, is an adequate basis for taxation, including income, property, and death taxes. Since the
5 Fourteenth Amendment makes one a citizen of the state wherein he resides, the fact of residence creates
6 universally reciprocal duties of protection by the state and of allegiance and support by the citizen. The latter
7 obviously includes a duty to pay taxes, and their nature and measure is largely a political matter. Of course,
8 the situs of property may tax it regardless of the citizenship, domicile, or residence of the owner, the most 9 obvious illustration being a tax on realty laid by the state in which the realty is located.”
10 [Miller Brothers Co. v. Maryland, 347 U.S. 340 (1954)]

11 What both “citizens” and “residents” have in common is a legal domicile within the “United States”, which is defined in 26
12 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10) and 4 U.S.C. §110(d) to be federal territory and is nowhere extended in the Internal 13 Revenue Code, Subtitle A to include any other place.

14 TITLE 26 > Subtitle F > CHAPTER 79 > Sec. 7701. [Internal Revenue Code]
15 Sec. 7701. - Definitions

16 (a) When used in this title, where not otherwise distinctly expressed or manifestly incompatible with the intent
17 thereof—

18 (9) United States

19 The term "United States" when used in a geographical sense includes only the States and the District of 20 Columbia.

21 (10) State

22 The term "State" shall be construed to include the District of Columbia, where such construction is necessary to
23 carry out provisions of this title.

24 Pursuant to the rules of statutory construction, that which is not explicitly included somewhere in the code, may be
25 presumed to be excluded:

27 thing is the exclusion of another. Burgin v. Forbes, 293 Ky. 456, 169 S.W.2d. 321, 325; Newblock v. Bowles,
28 170 Okl. 487, 40 P.2d. 1097, 1100. Mention of one thing implies exclusion of another. When certain persons
29 or things are specified in a law, contract, or will, an intention to exclude all others from its operation may be
30 inferred. Under this maxim, if statute specifies one exception to a general rule or assumes to specify the effects
31 of a certain provision, other exceptions or effects are excluded.”
32 [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, page 581]

33 “It is axiomatic that the statutory definition of the term excludes unstated meanings of that term,”
34 [Meese v. Keene, 481 U.S. 465, 484 (1987)]

35 The “citizens” he is talking about are statutory “nationals and citizens of the United States***” defined in 8 U.S.C. §1401
36 and 26 U.S.C. §3121(e). This type of STATUTORY citizen includes those born or naturalized anywhere in the country but 37 DOMICILED on federal territory within the exclusive jurisdiction of Congress and the “United States***”. It does NOT
38 include those domiciled within the exclusive jurisdiction of a constitutional state and therefore within “United States***”.
39 The U.S. Supreme Court confirmed that such a statutory “U.S.** citizen” subject to federal law is mutually exclusive from 40 the constitutional “Citizen” mentioned in U.S. Constitution or the Fourteenth Amendment.

42 *citizenship—not only citizenship of the United States[***], but citizenship of the states. No such definition was* 43 previously found in the Constitution, nor had any attempt been made to define it by act of Congress. It had 44 been the occasion of much discussion in the courts, by the executive departments and in the public journals.
45 *It had been said by eminent judges that no man was a citizen of the United States[***] except as he was a*
46 citizen of one of the state comprising the Union. Those, therefore, who had been born and resided always in 47 *the District of Columbia or in the territories, though within the United States[***], were not citizens.”*
48 [Slaughter-House Cases, 83 U.S. (16 Wall.) 36, 21 L.Ed. 394 (1873)]

49 The “residents” they are talking about are statutory “residents aliens” as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701\(b\)\(1\)\(A\). Both the
50 “U.S. citizens” and “U.S. residents” they are talking about, which collectively are called “U.S. persons” and defined in 26

1 U.S.C. §7701(a)(30) are subject to the EXCLUSIVE legislative jurisdiction of the United States by virtue of said legal
 2 domicile. Those without a domicile within the "United States" are "non-resident non-persons". If they are engaged in a
 3 public office, they would instead be "nonresident aliens", which are defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(B) as follows:

4 26 U.S.C. §7701\(b\)\(1\)\(B\) Nonresident alien

5 An individual is a nonresident alien if such individual is neither a citizen of the United States nor a resident of 6 the United States (within the meaning of subparagraph (A)).

7 These distinctions originate from the differences in meaning of the term "United States" between the two distinct contexts
 8 in which it is frequently used:

- 9 1. CONSTITUTIONAL CONTEXT: The U.S. Constitution.
 10 2. STATUTORY CONTEXT: Acts of Congress and the U.S. Code.

11 The "United States" can have one of four possible meanings, depending on the context, and as confirmed by the U.S.
 12 Supreme Court in Hooven and Allison v. Evatt, 324 U.S. 652 (1945):

- 13 1. The country "United States" in the family of nations throughout the world. We call this "United States**".
 14 2. The "federal zone". We call this "United States***".
 15 3. The states of the Union, also called "The United States of America". We call this "United States****". This is the 16 ONLY GEOGRAPHICAL context used within the U.S. Constitution.
 17 4. The "national"/"federal" government. We call this "United States*****".

18 In the context of "citizens" defined in Section 1 of the Fourteenth Amendment, it implies definition 3 above and means the 19 states of the Union and excludes federal territories and possessions. The "United States" as used in ordinary "Acts of 20 Congress" or federal statutes means exactly the opposite in most cases, which is the territories and possessions of the 21 United States and the District of Columbia and excluding states of the Union.

22 "The earliest case is that of Hepburn v. Ellzey, 2 Cranch, 445, 2 L.Ed. 332, in which this court held that, under
 23 that clause of the Constitution limiting the jurisdiction of the courts of the United States to controversies
 24 between citizens of different states, a citizen of the District of Columbia could not maintain an action in the
 25 circuit court of the United States. It was argued that the word 'state,' in that connection, was used simply to
 26 denote a distinct political society. 'But,' said the Chief Justice, 'as the act of Congress obviously used the word
 27 'state' in reference to that term as used in the Constitution, it becomes necessary to inquire whether Columbia is 28 a state in the sense of that instrument. The result of that examination is a conviction that the members of the 29 American confederacy only are the states contemplated in the Constitution . . . and excludes from the term
 30 the signification attached to it by writers on the law of nations.' This case was followed in Barney v.
 31 Baltimore, 6 Wall. 280, 18 L.Ed. 825, and quite recently in Hooe v. Jamieson, 166 U.S. 395, 41 L.Ed. 1049,
 32 17 Sup.Ct.Rep. 596. The same rule was applied to citizens of territories in New Orleans v. Winter, 1 Wheat.
 33 91, 4 L.Ed. 44, in which an attempt was made to distinguish a territory from the District of Columbia. But it
 34 was said that 'neither of them is a state in the sense in which that term is used in the Constitution.' In Scott v.
 35 Jones, 5 How. 343, 12 L.Ed. 181, and in Miners' Bank v. Iowa ex rel. District Prosecuting Attorney, 12 How. 1, 36 13 L.Ed. 867, it was held that under the judiciary act, permitting writs of error to the supreme court of a state in
 37 cases where the validity of a state statute is drawn in question, an act of a territorial legislature was not within 38 the contemplation of Congress."

39 [Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 (1901)]

40 The distinctions in meaning of the term "United States" between that used in the term "citizen of the United States" in the 41 Fourteenth Amendment, on the one hand, and Acts of Congress, on the other, is an important by-product, in fact, of the 42 Separation of Powers Doctrine, which the U.S. Supreme Court said exists primarily to protect individual liberties:

43 We start with first principles. The Constitution creates a Federal Government of enumerated powers. See U.S.
 44 Const., Art. I, 8. As James Madison wrote, "[t]he powers delegated by the proposed Constitution to the federal
 45 government are few and defined. Those which are to remain in the State governments are numerous and
 46 *indefinite." The Federalist No. 45, pp. 292-293 (C. Rossiter ed. 1961). This constitutionally
 47 mandated division of authority "was adopted by the Framers
 48 to ensure protection of our fundamental liberties." Gregory v. Ashcroft,*
 49 501 U.S. 452, 458 \(1991\) (internal quotation marks omitted). "Just as the separation and independence of
 50 the coordinate branches of the Federal Government serves to prevent the accumulation of excessive power in

1 any one branch, a healthy balance of power between the States and the Federal Government will reduce the
 2 risk of tyranny and abuse from either front." Ibid. "
 3 U.S. v. Lopez, [514 U.S. 549 (1995)]

4 We further alluded to this separation of powers earlier in section 4.6.2, where we showed the exact breakdown of the I.R.C
 5 between each of the two distinct and completely separate taxing jurisdictions: National v. Federal. What the U.S. attorney
 6 is trying to do is exploit legal ignorance of the reader and confusion in order to break down the distinct separation of
 7 powers between the states and the federal government in order to trample on your rights. This is a crime, and it's called 8 "conspiracy against rights", in violation of 18 U.S.C. §242. Do you want your public servants wasting your tax dollars in 9 this manner?

10 The Sixteenth Amendment, according to the U.S. Supreme Court, "does not extend the taxing power [of Congress] to new 11 or excepted subjects", so it's irrelevant and a red herring. See the following:

12 "The Sixteenth Amendment, although referred to in argument, has no real bearing and may be put out of view.
 13 As pointed out in recent decisions, it does not extend the taxing power to new or excepted subjects, but merely
 14 removes all occasion, which otherwise might exist, for an apportionment among the states of taxes [247 U.S.
 15 165, 173] laid on income, whether it be derived from one source or another. Brushaber v. Union Pacific R. R.
 18 [Peck v. Lowe, 247 U.S. 165 (1918)]

 20 "But, aside from the obvious error of the proposition, intrinsically considered, it manifestly disregards the fact
 21 that by the previous ruling it was settled that the provisions of the 16th Amendment conferred no new power of
 22 taxation, but simply prohibited the previous complete and plenary power of income taxation possessed by
 23 Congress from the beginning from being taken out of the category of indirect taxation to which it inherently
 24 belonged, and being placed [240 U.S. 103, 113] in the category of direct taxation subject to apportionment
 25 by a consideration of the sources from which the income was derived, -that is, by testing the tax not by what it
 26 was, a tax on income, but by a mistaken theory deduced from the origin or source of the income taxed."
 27 [Stanton v. Baltic Mining Co., 240 U.S. 103 (1916)]

28 5.6.13.9.6.4 Fourteenth Amendment controls

29 Contention:

30 The Fourteenth Amendment controls the definition of citizenship. The Amendment states that "all persons born or
 31 naturalized in the United States and subject to the jurisdiction thereof are citizens of the United States and of the States
 32 wherein they reside." Defendant's statements that federal income taxes do not apply to his "nonresident alien" customers,
 33 who are actually American citizens, are not supported by law. Federal income tax law applies not only to all citizens of this
 34 country, but also to residents of this country. I.R.C. §7701\(a\)\(14\) defines "taxpayer" as any person subject to any internal 35 revenue tax. As courts have stated, "All individuals, natural or unnatural, must pay federal income tax on their wages."

 38 also IRC § 7701(a)(30); United States v. Ward, 833 F.2d. 1538, 1539 (11th Cir. 1987); In re Becraft, 885 F.2d. at 548 n.2.

39 Rebuttal:

40 The U.S. attorney is trying to confuse statutory "nationals and citizens of the United States**" defined in 8 U.S.C. §1401
 41 with constitutional "citizens of the United States***" mentioned in the Fourteenth Amendment. These are two completely
 42 different contexts that use mutually exclusive definitions of the term "United States" and therefore reference two 43 completely different and separate political communities:

- 44 1. The federal zone, consisting of the District of Columbia and the territories and possessions of the United States**.
- 45 2. The states of the Union, who are party to the Constitution.

1 These two mutually exclusive political and legal communities created by the Constitution and the two types of citizens are
 2 exhaustively analyzed in the free pamphlet below, and the U.S. attorney is demanded to rebut the evidence and admissions
 3 at the end:

Why You are a "national", "state national", and Constitutional but not Statutory Citizen, Form #05.006
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

4 The U.S. Attorney does not define exactly what he means by "American citizens", but his meaning is clear: statutory
 5 "nationals and citizens of the United States**" as defined in 8 U.S.C. §1401 and 26 U.S.C. §3121(e) and excluding
 6 Fourteenth Amendment "citizens of the United States***". The U.S. attorney also fails to recognize that there are TWO
 7 and not ONE type of jurisdictions that a person can be subject to. This was alluded to by the U.S. Supreme Court in U.S. v.
 8 Wong Kim Ark:

9 "This section contemplates two sources of citizenship, and two sources only,-birth and naturalization. The 10 *persons declared to be citizens are 'all persons born or naturalized in the United States[***], and subject to the* 11 jurisdiction thereof.' The evident meaning of these last words is, not merely subject in some respect or degree
 12 *to the jurisdiction of the United States[**], but completely subject to their political jurisdiction, and*
 13 owing them direct and immediate allegiance. And the words relate to the time of birth in the one case, as they
 14 do [169 U.S. 649, 725] to the time of naturalization in the other. Persons not thus subject to the jurisdiction of 15 *the United States[***] at the time of birth cannot become so afterwards, except by being naturalized, either*
 16 individually, as by proceedings under the naturalization acts, or collectively, as by the force of a treaty by 17 which foreign territory is acquired."
 18 [U.S. v. Wong Kim Ark, 169 U.S. 649, 18 S.Ct. 456; 42 L.Ed. 890 (1898)]

19 A person can be subject to the "political jurisdiction" of the federal government WITHOUT also being subject to the 20 "legislative jurisdiction". This would happen, for instance, when his domicile is outside of the "United States". "Political 21 jurisdiction" is NOT the same as "legislative jurisdiction". "Political jurisdiction" was defined by the Supreme Court in
 22 Minor v. Happersett:

23 "There cannot be a nation without a people. The very idea of a political community, such as a nation is, implies
 24 an [88 U.S. 162, 166] association of persons for the promotion of their general welfare. Each one of the 25 *persons associated becomes a member of the nation formed by the association. He owes it allegiance and is 26 entitled to its protection. Allegiance and protection are, in this connection, reciprocal obligations. The one is 27 a compensation for the other; allegiance for protection and protection for allegiance.

28 "For convenience it has been found necessary to give a name to this membership. The object is to designate by
 29 a title the person and the relation he bears to the nation. For this purpose the words 'subject,' 'inhabitant,' and
 30 'citizen' have been used, and the choice between them is sometimes made to depend upon the form of the 31 *government. Citizen is now more commonly employed, however, and as it has been considered better suited to 32 the description of one living under a republican government, it was adopted by nearly all of the States upon
 33 their separation from Great Britain, and was afterwards adopted in the Articles of Confederation and in the 34 Constitution of the United States[***]. When used in this sense it [the word**
 35 "citizen"] is understood as conveying the idea of membership
 36 of a nation, and nothing more."

37 *"To determine, then, who were citizens of the United States[***] before the adoption of the amendment it is* 38 necessary to ascertain what persons originally associated themselves together to form the nation, and what 39 were afterwards admitted to membership."
 40 [Minor v. Happersett, 88 U.S. 162 (1874)]

41 Notice how the Supreme court used the phrase "and nothing more", as if to emphasize that citizenship doesn't imply
 42 legislative jurisdiction, but simply political membership. We described in detail the two political jurisdictions within 43 section 4.6.2. "Political jurisdiction" implies only the following:

- 44 1. Membership in a community (see Minor v. Happersett, 88 U.S. 162 (1874))
- 45 2. Right to vote.
- 46 3. Right to serve on jury duty.

47 "Legislative jurisdiction", on the other hand, implies being "completely subject" and subservient to federal laws and all
 48 "Acts of Congress", which only people in the District of Columbia and the territories and possessions of the United States<sup>[**]</sup> can be. You can be “completely subject to the political jurisdiction” of the United States<sup>**</sup> without being subject in any degree to a specific “Act of Congress” or the Internal Revenue Code, for instance. The final nail is put in the coffin on the subject of what “subject to the jurisdiction” means in the Fourteenth Amendment, when the Supreme Court further said in the above case:

“It is impossible to construe the words 'subject to the jurisdiction thereof,' in the opening sentence, as less comprehensive than the words 'within its jurisdiction,' in the concluding sentence of the same section; or to hold that persons 'within the jurisdiction' of one of the states of the Union are not 'subject to the jurisdiction of the United States'”<sup>[**]</sup>

So “subject to the jurisdiction” in the context of citizenship within the Fourteenth Amendment means “subject to the [political] jurisdiction” of the United States<sup>***</sup> and not legislative jurisdiction, and the Fourteenth Amendment definitely includes people born in states of the Union.

A picture is worth a thousand words. We’ll now summarize the results of the preceding analysis to make it crystal clear for visually-minded readers:

Citizenship	Defined in	Domicile in the federal zone?	Subject to legislative jurisdiction /police powers?	Subject to “ political jurisdiction ”?	A “nonresident alien”?

The table below describes the affect that changes in domicile have on citizenship status in the case of both “foreign nationals” and “domestic nationals”. A “domestic national” is anyone born anywhere within any one of the 50 states on nonfederal land or who was born in any territory or possession of the United States<sup>[**]</sup>. A “foreign national” is someone who was born anywhere outside of these areas. The jurisdiction mentioned in the right three columns is the “federal zone”.

NOTES:

1. “United States” is defined as federal territory within 26 U.S.C. §§7701\(a\)\(9\) and (a)(10), 7701\(a\)\(39\), and 7408\(d\), and 4 U.S.C. §110\(d\). It does not include any portion of a Constitutional state of the Union.
2. The “District of Columbia” is defined as a federal corporation but not a physical place, a “body politic”, or a de jure “government” within the District of Columbia Act of 1871, 16 Stat. 419, 426, Sec. 34. See: Corporatization and Privatization of the Government, Form #05.024; <http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>.
3. “nationals” of the United States of America who are domiciled outside of federal jurisdiction, either in a state of the Union or a foreign country, are “nationals” but not “citizens” under federal law. They also qualify as “nonresident aliens” under 26 U.S.C. §7701\(b\)\(1\)\(B\) if and only if they are engaged in a public office. See sections 4.11.2 of the Great IRS Hoax, Form #11.302 for details.
4. Temporary domicile in the middle column on the right must meet the requirements of the “Presence test” documented in IRS Publications.
5. “FEDERAL ZONE”=District of Columbia and territories of the United States in the above table
6. The term “individual” as used on the IRS Form 1040 means an “alien” engaged in a “trade or business”. All

“taxpayers” are “aliens” engaged in a “trade or business”. This is confirmed by 26 C.F.R. §1.1441-1(c)(3), 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1(a)(2)(ii), and 5 U.S.C. §552a\(a\)\(2\). Statutory “U.S. citizens” or “nationals and citizens of the United States” as defined in 8 U.S.C. §1401 are not “individuals” unless temporarily abroad pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §911 and subject to an income tax treaty with a foreign country. In that capacity, statutory “U.S. citizens” interface to the I.R.C. as “aliens” rather than “U.S. citizens” through the tax treaty.

When a federal officer asks you if you are a “citizen”, consider the context! The only basis for him asking this is federal law, because he isn’t bound by state law. If you tell him you are a “citizen” or a “U.S. citizen”, then indirectly, you are admitting that you are subject to federal law, because that’s what it means to be a “citizen” under federal law! Watch out! Therefore, as people born in and domiciled within a state of the union on land that is not owned by the federal government, we need to be very careful how we describe ourselves on government forms. Below is what we should say in each of the various contexts to avoid misleading those asking the questions on the forms. In this context, let’s assume you were born in California and are domiciled there. This guidance also applies to questions that officers of the government might ask you in each of the two contexts as well:

Table 5-76: Describing your citizenship and status on government forms

#	Question on form	Context
		State officer or form	Federal officer or form
1	Are you a “citizen”?	Yes. Of California.	No. Not under federal law.
2	Are you a “national”?	Yes. Of California.	Yes. I’m a “national of the United States[]” under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) but not under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22)
3	Are you a “U.S. citizen”?	No. I’m a California “citizen” or simply a “national”	No. I’m a California citizen or simply a “national”. I am not a federal “citizen” because I don’t reside on federal property.
4	Are you subject to the political jurisdiction of the United States[]?	Yes. I’m a state voter who influences federal elections indirectly by the representatives I elect.	Yes. I’m a state voter who influences federal elections indirectly by the representatives I elect.
5	Are you subject to the legislative jurisdiction of the United States[]?	No. I am only subject to the legislative jurisdiction of California but not the “State” of California. The “State of” California is a branch of the federal government that only has jurisdiction in federal areas within the state.	No. I am only subject to the laws and police powers of California, and not the federal government, because I don’t maintain a domicile on federal territory subject to “its” jurisdiction.
6	Are you a “citizen of the United States[]” under the Fourteenth Amendment?	Yes, but under federal law, I’m a “national”. Being a “citizen” under state law doesn’t make me subject to federal legislative jurisdiction and police powers. That status qualifies me to vote in any state election, but doesn’t make me subject to federal law.	Yes, but under federal law, I’m a “national”. Being a “citizen” under state law doesn’t make me subject to federal legislative jurisdiction and police powers. That status qualifies me to vote in any state election, but doesn’t make me subject to federal law.

Now that we understand the distinctions between “citizens” and “nationals” within federal law, we are ready to tackle the citizenship issue head on.

Moving on, the statement is made: “Federal income tax law applies not only to all citizens of this country, but also to residents of this country.” The question then becomes: Which “country” are they talking about? What most Americans think of as one homogenous “country” actually consists of 51 independent “nations” or “sovereignities”:

1. The U.S. Supreme Court said that states of the Union are “nations”.

“The States between each other are sovereign and independent. They are distinct and separate sovereignties, except so far as they have parted with some of the attributes of sovereignty by the Constitution. They continue to be nations, with all their rights, and under all their national obligations, and with all the rights of nations in

1 every particular; except in the surrender by each to the common purposes and objects of the Union, under the
 2 Constitution. The rights of each State, when not so yielded up, remain absolute."
 3 [Bank of Augusta v. Earle, 38 U.S. (13 Pet.) 519, 10 L.Ed. 274 (1839)]

4 2. Definitions from Black's Law Dictionary:

5 Foreign States: "Nations outside of the United States...Term may also refer to another state; i.e. a sister state.
 6 The term 'foreign nations', ...should be construed to mean all nations and states other than that in which the
 7 action is brought; and hence, one state of the Union is foreign to another, in that sense."
 8 [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 648]

9 Foreign Laws: "The laws of a foreign country or sister state."
 10 [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 647]

11 Dual citizenship. Citizenship in two different countries. Status of citizens of United States who reside
 12 within a state; i.e., person who are born or naturalized in the U.S. are citizens of the U.S. and the state wherein 13 they reside.
 14 [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 498]

16 3. The U.S. code says that states of the Union are "countries".

 18 Sec. 297. - Assignment of judges to courts of the freely associated compact states

19 (a) The Chief Justice or the chief judge of the United States Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit may assign
 20 any circuit or district judge of the Ninth Circuit, with the consent of the judge so assigned, to serve
 21 temporarily as a judge of any duly constituted court of the freely associated compact states whenever an 22 official duly authorized by the laws of the respective compact state requests such assignment and such 23 assignment is necessary for the proper dispatch of the business of the respective court.

24 (b) The Congress consents to the acceptance and retention by any judge so authorized of reimbursement from 25 the countries referred to in subsection (a) of all necessary travel expenses, including transportation, and 26 of subsistence, or of a reasonable per diem allowance in lieu of subsistence. The judge shall report to the 27 Administrative Office of the United States Courts any amount received pursuant to this subsection

28 4. Legal encyclopedia Corpus Juris Secundum:

29 "Generally, the states of the Union sustain toward each other the relationship of independent sovereigns or 30 independent foreign states, except in so far as the United States is paramount as the dominating government,
 31 and in so far as the states are bound to recognize the fraternity among sovereignties established by the federal 32 Constitution, as by the provision requiring each state to give full faith and credit to the public acts, records, and 33 judicial proceedings of the other states..."

35 Third, the statement is made: "As courts have stated, 'All individuals, natural or unnatural, must pay federal income tax on

 37 However, those not subject to federal jurisdiction because they are "non-resident non-persons" not engaged in the "trade or

25 5.6.13.9.6.5 I.R.C. Imposes a Duty on Individuals to File on Earnings Above the Exemption Amount

26 Contention:

27 The Internal Revenue Code imposes a duty on individuals to file tax returns and pay the appropriate amount of tax. I.R.C.

31 Rebuttal:

32 More deliberately ambiguous language. Nowhere is the term “individual” even defined in the Internal Revenue Code. The 33 only place it is defined is in the context of the Privacy Act, which defines “individual” as a government employee:

40 Note the above definition is within Title 5, which is entitled “Government Organization and Employees”. This is the real

42 defined as in 26 U.S.C. §7701\(a\)\(26\). After all, if he weren’t engaged in a “trade or business” and he is a “non-resident

Title 26: Internal Revenue

PART 1—INCOME TAXES

nonresident alien individuals

§ 1.872-2 Exclusions from gross income of nonresident alien individuals.

(f) Other exclusions.

Income which is from sources without [outside] the United States [federal territory per 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10)], as determined under the provisions of sections 861 through 863, and the regulations thereunder, is not included in the gross income of a nonresident alien individual unless such income is effectively connected for the taxable year with the conduct of a trade or business in the United States by that individual. To determine specific exclusions in the case of other items which are from sources within the United States, see the applicable sections of the Code. For special rules under a tax convention for determining the sources of income and for excluding, from gross income, income from sources without the United States which is effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business in the United States, see the applicable tax convention. For determining which income from sources without the United States is effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business in the United States, see section 864(c)(4) and §1.864-5.

Most laws passed by the government can only regulate the “public conduct” of “public employees”. The notion of allowing Congress to legislate generally upon the life, liberty, and property of private citizens, in fact, is “repugnant to the Constitution”, according to the U.S. Supreme Court:

“The power to “legislate generally upon” life, liberty, and property, as opposed to the “power to provide modes of redress” against offensive state action, was “repugnant” to the Constitution, Id., at 15. See also United States v. Reese, 92 U.S. 214, 218 (1876); United States v. Harris, 106 U.S. 629, 639 (1883); James v. Bowman, 190 U.S. 127, 139 (1903). Although the specific holdings of these early cases might have been superseded or modified, see, e.g., Heart of Atlanta Motel, Inc. v. United States, 379 U.S. 241 (1964); United States v. Guest, 383 U.S. 745 (1966), their treatment of Congress’ §5 power as corrective or preventive, not definitional, has not been questioned.”

5.6.13.9.6.6 I.R.C. Has No Application Outside the District of Columbia

Contention:

In addition, Defendant's representation that the internal revenue laws have no application outside the District of Columbia and other federal property is wrong. As the Supreme Court stated long ago, "The people of the United States resident within any State are subject to two governments: one State, and the other National. ..."

Authorities:

Rebuttal:

There is no question that persons domiciled within a state are subject to two governments and two sets of law. There is, however a division of authority between the two and the power to tax internal to a state of the Union is exclusive and plenary to the state, meaning that it excludes the federal government:

It is no longer open to question that the general government, unlike the states, Hammer v. Dagenhart, 247 U.S. 251, 275, 38 S.Ct. 529, 3 A.L.R. 649, Ann.Cas.1918E 724, possesses no inherent power in respect of the internal affairs of the states; and emphatically not with regard to legislation. The question in respect of the inherent power of that government as to the external affairs of the Nation and in the field of international law is a wholly different matter which it is not necessary now to consider. See, however, Jones v. United States, 137 U.S. 202, 212, 11 S.Ct. 80; Nishimur Ekiu v. United States, 142 U.S. 651, 659, 12 S.Ct. 336; Fong Yue Ting v. United States, 149 U.S. 698, 705 et seq., 13 S.Ct. 1016; Burnet v. Brooks, 288 U.S. 378, 396, 53 S.Ct. 457, 86 A.L.R. 747.
[Carter v. Carter Coal Co., 298 U.S. 238 (1936)]

“The difficulties arising out of our dual form of government and the opportunities for differing opinions concerning the relative rights of state and national governments are many; but for a very long time this court has steadfastly adhered to the doctrine that the taxing power of Congress does not extend to the states or their political subdivisions. The same basic reasoning which leads to that conclusion, we think, requires like limitation upon the power which springs from the bankruptcy clause. United States v. Butler, supra." [Ashton v. Cameron County Water Improvement District No. 1, 298 U.S. 513, 56 S.Ct. 892 (1936)]

A breakdown of that separation of taxing authority can only occur by the voluntary consent of the people themselves. The states cannot facilitate that breakdown of the separation of powers:

"State officials thus cannot consent to the enlargement of the powers of Congress beyond those enumerated in the Constitution." New York v. United States, [505 U.S. 142; 112 S.Ct. 2408; 120 L.Ed.2d. 120 (1992)]

That consent to allows federal income taxation within states of the Union requires a voluntary personal exercise of our private right to contract. A human being domiciled in a state of the Union, who starts out as a "non-resident non-person", can become a "resident", a "taxpayer", and an "individual" under the Internal Revenue Code by making the necessary "elections" in order to be treated as a "resident" engaged in a "trade or business" instead of a "non-resident non-person" not engaged in a "trade or business". That election is made as follows:

1. Pursuant to 26 C.F.R. §31.3401(a)-3(a), a "nonresident alien" may submit an IRS Form W-4 to his private employer and thereby elect (usually ILLEGALLY) to call his earnings statutory "wages", which makes him "effectively connected with a trade or business". This means, according to 26 U.S.C. §7701\(a\)\(26\) that he is engaged in a "public office".

Notwithstanding the exceptions to the definition of wages specified in section 3401(a) and the regulations thereunder, the term "wages" includes the amounts described in paragraph (b)(1) of this section with respect to which there is a voluntary withholding agreement in effect under section 3402(p). References in this chapter to the definition of wages contained in section 3401(a) shall be deemed to refer also to this section (§31.3401(a)-3.

2. Pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §7701\(b\)\(4\) and 26 U.S.C. §6013\(g\), he can decide to file an IRS Form 1040, and thereby become a "resident alien". IRS Published Products Catalog, Document 7130 (2003) identifies the IRS Form 1040 as being only suitable for use by "citizens and residents of the United States". The "individual" in the title "U.S. Individual Income Tax Return" means a "resident alien" in that scenario. This is explained in the following sources:
  - 2.1. Great IRS Hoax, Form #11.302, Section 5.5.3: You're Not a U.S. citizen if you file a 1040 form, You're an alien
  - 2.2. Great IRS Hoax, Form #11.302, Section 5.5.4 entitled: "You're not the U.S. citizen mentioned at the top of the 1040 form if you are a U.S. citizen domiciled in the federal United States"

Only AFTER the above "elections" or consent have been voluntarily procured completely absent any duress can the party become the object of involuntary IRS enforcement, and NOT before.

"Waivers of constitutional rights not only must be voluntary but must be knowing, intelligent acts done with sufficient awareness of the relevant circumstances and likely consequences." [Brady v. U.S., 397 U.S. at 749, 90 S.Ct. 1463 at 1i469 (1970)]

If no consent was ever explicitly (in writing) or implicitly (by conduct) given or if consent was procured through deceit, fraud, or duress, the contract is voidable at the option of the person subject to the duress:

"An agreement [consent] obtained by duress, coercion, or intimidation is invalid, since the party coerced is not exercising his free will, and the test is not so much the means by which the party is compelled to execute the agreement as the state of mind induced.<sup>176</sup> Duress, like fraud, rarely becomes material, except where a contract or conveyance has been made which the maker wishes to avoid. As a general rule, duress renders the contract or conveyance voidable, not void, at the option of the person coerced,<sup>177</sup> and it is susceptible of

 4 [American Jurisprudence 2d, Duress, §21 (1999)]

5 AFTER a non-resident non-person domiciled in a state has made the elections necessary to be treated as though he is
 6 "effectively connected with a trade or business" by voluntarily signing and submitting an IRS Form W-4, the code says he
 7 becomes a "resident alien". In fact, we allege that the term "effectively connected" is a code word for "contracted" or
 8 "consented". The act of engaging in a "trade or business" makes non-resident non-person subject to the code, and under 26
 9 U.S.C. §7701(a)(39) and 26 U.S.C. §7408(d), their "effective domicile" shifts to the District of Columbia because the 10 OFFICE they then occupy within the "U.S. Inc." federal corporation is domiciled in the District of Columbia. Beyond that 11 point, they become parties to federal law and whenever they walk into a federal district court, the courts are obligated to 12 treat them as though they effectively are domiciled in the District of Columbia. The older versions of the Treasury
 13 Regulations demonstrate EXACTLY how this election process works to transform "non-resident non-persons" into 14 statutory "residents" (aliens) who are then "taxpayers":

16 A domestic corporation is one organized or created in the United States, including only the States (and during 17 the periods when not States, the Territories of Alaska and Hawaii), and the District of Columbia, or under the 18 law of the United States or of any State or Territory. A foreign corporation is one which is not domestic. A 19 domestic corporation is a resident corporation even though it does no business and owns no property in the 20 United States. A foreign corporation engaged in trade or business within the United States is referred to in 21 the regulations in this chapter as a resident foreign corporation, and a foreign corporation not engaged in
 22 trade or business within the United States, as a nonresident foreign corporation. A partnership engaged in 23 trade or business within the United States is referred to in the regulations in this chapter as a resident
 24 partnership, and a partnership not engaged in trade or business within the United States, as a nonresident

Sec. 7701. - Definitions

(a)(10) State

The term "State" shall be construed to include the District of Columbia, where such construction is necessary to carry out provisions of this title.

Remember, the term "United States" as used in the Constitution and as used in Acts of Congress are two mutually exclusive places, in most acts of Congress. This was described earlier. The U.S. attorney is again trying to exploit the legal ignorance of the reader to create enough confusion to destroy the Separation of Powers Doctrine and thereby trample on your rights and destroy the protections that it affords. This is a conspiracy against rights in violation of 18 U.S.C. §241, and it is being done with what we call "word smithing", false presumption, and the abuse of law as "political propaganda" against an audience of people who went through twelve years of public (e.g. GOVERNMENT) schools and not once were taught the slightest thing about law. This is no accident, but an attempt to make government and the legal profession into the equivalent of a priesthood and an elite ruling class for the ignorant masses.

5.6.13.9.6.8 I.R.C. was enacted pursuant to the Sixteenth Amendment

Contention:

The I.R.C. was enacted by Congress pursuant to the Sixteenth Amendment and imposes an income tax on citizens and residents of the 50 states and the District of Columbia. Taxation is not limited to just the District of Columbia, but extends to "United States citizens throughout the nation, not just in federal enclaves,' such as post offices and Indian reservations."

Authorities:

Sloan, 939 F.2d. at 501 (quoting United States v. Collins, 920 F.2d. 619, 629 (10th Cir. 1990); Betz, 40 Fed.Cl. at 295; see also In re Becraft, 885 F.2d. at 549-50 ("no semblance of merit" to claim that federal laws only apply to territories and District of Columbia); Ward, 833 F.2d. at 1539 (contention that United States has jurisdiction only over D.C. and other federal enclaves is rejected as a "twisted conclusion").

Rebuttal:

This statement by the U.S. attorney is true if the "United States citizens" he is talking about are statutory "nationals and citizens of the United States**" defined in 8 U.S.C. §1401 and which exclude constitutional citizens as used in the Fourteenth Amendment. As pointed out earlier, "citizens of the United States" as used in the Fourteenth Amendment include persons born or naturalized in a state of the Union and exclude those born in federal territories and possessions .

Yes, the tax is imposed upon statutory (but NOT constitutional) "citizens of the United States" defined in 8 U.S.C. §1401 or 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1(c) and "resident aliens of the United States" as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701\(b\)\(1\)\(A\) and 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1(a)(2)(ii). However, these persons have in common a domicile within the "United States", which is defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701\(a\)\(9\) and (a)(10) to include the District of Columbia and not expanded elsewhere within Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A to include any other place. Consequently, pursuant to the rules of statutory construction, the states of the Union are excluded.

1 "Expressio unius est exclusio alterius. A maxim of statutory interpretation meaning that the expression of one
 2 thing is the exclusion of another. Burgin v. Forbes, 293 Ky. 456, 169 S.W.2d. 321, 325; Newblock v. Bowles,
 3 170 Okl. 487, 40 P.2d. 1097, 1100. Mention of one thing implies exclusion of another. When certain persons
 4 or things are specified in a law, contract, or will, an intention to exclude all others from its operation may be
 5 inferred. Under this maxim, if statute specifies one exception to a general rule or assumes to specify the effects
 6 of a certain provision, other exceptions or effects are excluded."

 12 "taxpayer", and an "individual" by making the necessary "elections" in order to be treated as a "resident" engaged in a
 13 "trade or business" instead of a "non-resident non-person" not engaged in a "trade or business". That election is made as 14 follows:

- 15 1. Pursuant to 26 C.F.R. §31.3401(a)-3(a), a "nonresident alien" may elect to call his earnings "wages", which makes him

- 25 2. Pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §7701\(b\)\(4\) and 26 U.S.C. §6013\(g\), he can decide to file an IRS Form 1040, and thereby
 26 become a "resident alien". IRS Published Products Catalog, Document 7130 \(2003\) identifies the IRS Form 1040 as 27 being only suitable for use by "citizens and residents of the United States". The "individual" in the title "U.S.
 28 Individual Income Tax Return" means a "resident alien" in that scenario. This is explained in the following sources:
 29 2.1. Great IRS Hoax, Form #11.302, Section 5.5.3: You're Not a U.S. citizen if you file a 1040 form, You're an alien
 30 2.2. Great IRS Hoax, Form #11.302, Section 5.5.4 entitled: "You're not the U.S. citizen mentioned at the top of the 31 1040 form if you are a U.S. citizen domiciled in the federal United States"

32 When a "non-resident non-person" makes that election by, for instance, submitting a 1040 form instead of the correct
 33 1040NR form, and signs a W-4, they are treated the same as any other "resident alien" domiciled within the United 34 States**. It is perfectly legal, because it was consensual and done through the private right to contract. Since the 35 Constitution protects the PRIVATE right to contract, no law or Constitutional mandate has been violated. HOWEVER:

- 36 1. The ONLY circumstance when such an election can lawfully be made is when the nonresident alien is MARRIED to a 37 statutory "U.S. person". It may NOT lawfully be made in ANY other circumstance. See 26 U.S.C. §6013(g) and (h).
 38 2. When this sort of ALIENATION of UNALIENABLE PRIVATE rights occurs, the government doing it
 39 2.1. Is working a purpose OPPOSITE for which it was created by DESTROYING and UNDERMINING PRIVATE 40 rights.
 41 2.2. Because it is undermining the purpose of its creation, which is the protection of PRIVATE rights, it ceases to be 42 acting as a government and goes down to the level of an ordinary person in equity.
 43 2.3. It may only lawfully alienate rights protected by the Constitution in places where the Constitution does not apply,
 44 which is limited to either federal territory OR to the activities of parties situated abroad and NOT within states of 45 the Union. Otherwise, it is violating the purpose of its creation and the Declaration of Independence.
 46 2.4. Because it is doing so extraterritorially and for the purposes of commerce, it implicitly waives sovereign
 47 immunity and agrees to be sued in equity in a state court under the authority of the Foreign Sovereign Immunities
 48 Act (F.S.I.A.), 28 U.S.C. Part 4, Chapter 97. It may be sued as a corporation and individual officers need NOT 49 therefore be sued.
 50 3. If the government refuses to acknowledge the above limitations and attempts to protect its PRIVATE business
 51 activities with sovereign immunity, then it is engaged in acts of international terrorism, extortion, and racketeering.

3 Contention:

4 Although the concept of federalism recognizes the dual sovereignty of the State of North Carolina and the United States of
 5 America, North Carolina is indeed one of the fifty states constituting the United States of America. <sup>180</sup> See, e.g., Testa v.
 6 Katt, 330 U.S. 386, 389-91 (1947); The Chinese Exclusion Case, 130 U.S. 581, 604-05 (1889); U.S. v. Cruikshank, 92 U.S.
 7 542, 550 (1876); Cohens v. Virginia, 19 U.S. 264, 380-83 (1821). “This State shall ever remain a member of the American
 8 Nation; there is no power on the part of this State to secede . . .” N.C.Const.art.I, § 4. “Every citizen of this State owes 9 paramount allegiance to the Constitution and government of the United States, and no law or ordinance of the State in 10 contravention or subversion thereof can have any binding force.” Id. at Art. I, § 5. “all persons born or naturalized in the 11 United States, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the United States and of the State wherein they reside.”
 12 U.S.Const.Amend. XIV, § 1.

13 The fact that Respondent is a citizen of North Carolina does not relieve him of the rights and obligations created by the 14 laws of the United States, including the Code. Dennis v. U.S., 660 F.Supp. 870, 875 n.2 (C.D.Ill. 1987) (“[T]he taxing

 19 at *5 (W.D. Ky. August 9, 1988)(opinion by Magistrate Judge King). To paraphrase Justice Willis Van Devanter, when 20 Congress, in the exertion of the power confided to it by the Sixteenth amendment, <sup>181</sup> adopted by the Code, it spoke for all
 21 the people and all the States, and thereby established a policy for all. That policy is as much the policy of North Carolina as
 22 if the Code had emanated from the North Carolina General Assembly, and should be respected accordingly by the citizens
 23 and courts of the State of North Carolina. Second Employers’ Liability Cases, 223 U.S. 1, 57 (1912). See also, Clafflin v.
 24 Houseman, 93 U.S. 130, 136 (1876) (“The laws of the United States are laws in the several States, and just as much binding
 25 on the citizens and courts thereof as the State laws are.”) Respondent’s “foreign state of North Carolina” argument is 26 patently frivolous, <sup>182</sup> and is hereby rejected as a basis for quashing the Collection Summonses in question.

27 Rebuttal:

28 The Court in the ruling above is trying to “cash in” on the confusion between the “States” mentioned in the Constitution
 29 and the “States” defined in the Internal Revenue Code, which are two mutually exclusive places. The “States” in the 30 Constitution are the states of the Union, whereas those in the Internal Revenue Code include the District of Columbia and
 31 federal territories and possessions, pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §7701\(a\)\(10\) and 4 U.S.C. §110(d) and exclude states of the 32 Union. Nowhere in Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A is the term “States” defined to include anything other than federal 33 areas within the external limits of a state of the Union. The “State” that the Court refers to is the same “State” mentioned in
 34 the Buck Act, which is defined in 4 U.S.C. §110\(d\) as a “territory or possession” of the “United States” federal

<sup>180</sup> So long as the separate organization of the members be not abolished, so long as it exists by a constitutional necessity for local purposes, though it should be in perfect subordination to the general authority of the Union, it would still be, in fact and in theory, an association of States, or a confederacy. The proposed Constitution, so far from implying an abolition of the State Governments, makes them constituent parts of the national sovereignty by allowing them a direct representation in the Senate, and leaves in their possession certain exclusive and very important portions of sovereign power. This fully corresponds, in every rational import of the terms, with the idea of a Federal Government.

“The Federalist No.9, at 55 (A. Hamilton) (J. Cooke ed.1961) (emphasis added) See also, “The Federalist” No.33, at 208 (A. Hamilton) (“CONCURRENT JURISDICTION in the article of taxation was the only admissible substitute for an entire subordination, in respect to this branch of power, of the State authority to that of the Union.”).”

<sup>182</sup> The contention that appellants are not taxpayers because they are ‘free born, white, preamble, sovereign, natural, individual common law ‘de jure’ citizens of Kansas’ is frivolous.” U.S. v. Dawes, 874 F.2d. 746, 750-51 (10th Cir.1989). See also U.S. v. Studley, 783 F.2d. 934, 937 (9th Cir. 1986) (an “absolute, freeborn and natural individual” is still a “person” under the Code and thus is subject to its provisions).

1 government. The states of the Union are not territories or possessions of the United States, but “foreign states” within the
2 U.S. Code. To wit:

25 Based on the judge's comments, the legal encyclopedia is “patently frivolous”, which is absurd!

26 The part of the states of the Union that are “possessions of the United States”, such as federal enclaves or areas within the 27 states, are the place where the Internal Revenue Code applies pursuant to the Buck Act, 4 U.S.C. §106, and its 28 implementing provisions found in 5 U.S.C. §5517. These areas are collectively referred to as the “federal zone”. This is 29 the “nation” that the court is referring to, which is “the federal zone”. You will note that the U.S. Supreme Court said that 30 the United States of America is NOT a “nation”, but a society.

31 “By that law the several States and Governments spread over

Chisholm v. Georgia, [2 Dall. \(U.S.\) 419, 1 L.Ed. 440 (1793)]

38 The Court is trying to use “words of art” to destroy the separation of powers between the state and federal governments and 39 thereby undermine the rights of the litigant, which is a conspiracy against rights. This conspiracy to destroy the separation
40 of powers and thereby undermine our Constitutional rights is exhaustively described below:

Government Conspiracy to Destroy the Separation of Powers, Form #05.023

41 We agree with the judge that the taxing power of the “United States of America”, which are the states United under the 42 Constitution and mentioned in the Articles of Confederation and which excludes the federal “States” (territories and 43 possessions defined in 4 U.S.C. §110\(d\)) mentioned in the Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A, extends to every “individual”
44 who is a “citizen” or “resident” of the federal zone. Dennis v. U.S., 660 F.Supp. 870, 875 n.2 (C.D.Ill. 1987) (“[T]he taxing 45 power of the United States of America extends to every individual who is a citizen or resident of this nation.”). However,
46 human beings domiciled within a state of the Union are not statutory “citizens” as defined in 8 U.S.C. §1401, nor 47 “residents”, as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701\(b\)\(1\)\(A\). Congress enjoys no legislative authority within a state of the Union
48 because of the separation of powers.

1 "It is no longer open to question that the general government, unlike the states, Hammer v. Dagenhart, 247
 2 U.S. 251, 275, 38 S.Ct. 529, 3 A.L.R. 649, Ann.Cas.1918E 724, possesses no inherent power in respect of the
 3 internal affairs of the states; and emphatically not with regard to legislation. The question in respect of the 4 inherent power of that government as to the external affairs of the Nation and in the field of international law is
 5 a wholly different matter which it is not necessary now to consider. See, however, Jones v. United States, 137
 6 U.S. 202, 212, 11 S.Ct. 80; Nishimur Ekiu v. United States, 142 U.S. 651, 659, 12 S.Ct. 336; Fong Yue Ting v.
 7 United States, 149 U.S. 698, 705 et seq., 13 S.Ct. 1016; Burnet v. Brooks, 288 U.S. 378, 396, 53 S.Ct. 457, 86
 9 [Carter v. Carter Coal Co., 298 U.S. 238 (1936)]

10 Consequently, no "act of Congress" can lawfully prescribe the citizenship status of a human being born in a state of the 11 Union or confer citizenship upon a human being born in a state of the Union. State law, which is "plenary" and "exclusive"
 12 within its INTERNAL borders, is the only thing that can lawfully prescribe this under the Constitution. This is 13 exhaustively proven in the paper below:

Why You are a "national", "state national", and Constitutional but not Statutory Citizen, Form #05.006
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

14 The judge also doesn't define what he means by "individual" and the Internal Revenue Code very deliberately doesn't
 15 define it. However, as we showed earlier in section 5.6.13.9.6.5, all "Individuals" within the Internal Revenue Code are 16 federal statutory "employees", officers, agencies, and/or instrumentalities and exclude private Americans domiciled in the 17 states. The only thing Congress has authority to legislate for are its own statutory "employees", officers, and 18 instrumentalities. This is further exhaustively analyzed in the following memorandum of law:

Why Your Government is Either a Thief or You are a "Public Officer" for Income Tax Purposes, Form #05.008
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

19 The fox, which is the government, cannot be in charge of protecting the rights of the chickens, who are "private citizens"
 20 who are not "public officers" engaged in a "trade or business", and simultaneously also have the authority to take those
 21 rights away through its legislation. This is an absurdity and on this subject, the judge contradicts himself.

22 Yes, the Secretary may issue summonses to inquire about liability. Sloan v. U.S., 621 F.Supp. 1072, 1073-74 (N.D. Ind.
 23 1985) (Secretary may issue summonses to obtain information about ANY potential tax liability), aff'd. in part, dismissed in 24 part, 812 F.2d. 1410 (7th Circuit 1987), aff'd. 939 F.2d. 499 (7th Cir. 1991), cert.den. ____ U.S. ____, 112 S.Ct. 940 (1992).
 25 However, the summonses can only be issued to address activity within "internal revenue districts" pursuant to 26 U.S.C.
 26 §7601 and the only remaining internal revenue district is found in the District of Columbia pursuant to Treasury Order 150-
 27 02. 26 U.S.C. §7621 confers upon the President the authority to establish "internal revenue districts" within the "United 28 States" (federal zone). By virtue of 3 U.S.C. §301, the President can delegate authority vested in him via Executive Order.
 29 A former president delegated authority for the Secretary of the Treasury to establish internal revenue districts via Executive
 30 Order 10289, as amended. You will find Executive Order 10289 published pursuant to 3 U.S.C. §301. If we refer to 26
 31 C.F.R. §301.7601-1, we find that Executive Order 10289 is in fact the authority for the Secretary of the Treasury to 32 establish internal revenue districts. The original authority for internal revenue districts was found in Treasury Order 150-
 33 01. The effect in law of the IRS Restructuring and Reform Act of 1998 was that the Secretary of the Treasury, in Treasury
 34 Order 150-02, abolished all then existing internal revenue districts and IRS offices outside of the District of Columbia or in 35 states of the Union.

36 Consequently, the only place the IRS has summons authority is within the District of Columbia and certainly not within 37 states of the Union that are not exclusive federal territory. If the esteemed judge disagrees, he is demanded to prove the 38 existence of internal revenue districts within any state of the Union. We have been looking for several years for this 39 information and have not found it, nor has any IRS employee we have ever met been able to produce it. Happy hunting!

40 We agree with the judge that "dual sovereignty" is shared between the federal government and the states. Second
 41 Employers' Liability Cases, 223 U.S. 1, 57 (1912). See also, Claffin v. Houseman, 93 U.S. 130, 136 (1876) ("The laws of
 42 the United States are laws in the several States, and just as much binding on the citizens and courts thereof as the State laws
 43 are.") However, the constitution delegates to the federal government authority primarily over affairs EXTERNAL to states
 44 of the Union while the states of the Union enjoy plenary power and exclusive legislative jurisdiction within their own
 45 INTERNAL borders. This is exhaustively explained in the case of United States v. Curtiss-Wright Export Corporation,
 46 299 U.S. 304 (1936). Yes, the exertion of the plenary lawmaking powers of Congress over EXTERNAL affairs is binding
 47 upon citizens of the states of the Union, but only indirectly and not directly. Carter v. Carter Coal Co., 298 U.S. 238

(1936). Persons domiciled in states of the Union are affected by tariffs on imports imposed by Congress, but are not bound to directly pay them or to directly observe the laws that pay them. These tariffs instead are paid by companies importing the goods and those costs are added by the importer to the price of the merchandise sold once it enters the states.

“Thus, Congress having power to regulate commerce with foreign nations, and among the several States, and with the Indian tribes, may, without doubt, provide for granting coasting licenses, licenses to pilots, licenses to trade with the Indians, and any other licenses necessary or proper for the exercise of that great and extensive power; and the same observation is applicable to every other power of Congress, to the exercise of which the granting of licenses may be incident. All such licenses confer authority, and give rights to the licensee.

But very different considerations apply to the internal commerce or domestic trade of the States. Over this commerce and trade Congress has no power of regulation nor any direct control. This power belongs exclusively to the States. No interference by Congress with the business of citizens transacted within a State is warranted by the Constitution, except such as is strictly incidental to the exercise of powers clearly granted to the legislature. The power to authorize a business within a State is plainly repugnant to the exclusive power of the State over the same subject. It is true that the power of Congress to tax is a very extensive power. It is given in the Constitution, with only one exception and only two qualifications. Congress cannot tax exports, and it must impose direct taxes by the rule of apportionment, and indirect taxes by the rule of uniformity. Thus limited, and thus only, it reaches every subject, and may be exercised at discretion. But, it reaches only existing subjects. Congress cannot authorize a trade or business within a State in order to tax it.”
License Tax Cases, [72 U.S. 462, 18 L.Ed. 497, 5 Wall. 462, 2 A.F.T.R. 2224 (1866)]

As far as the last item above goes, which is that of taxation, however, the U.S. Supreme Court has stated:

“The States, after they formed the Union, continued to have the same range of taxing power which they had before, barring only duties affecting exports, imports, and on tonnage. 2 Congress, on the other hand, to lay taxes in order 'to pay the Debts and provide for the common Defence and general Welfare of the United States', Art. I, Sec. 8, U.S.C.A.Const., can reach every person and every dollar in the land with due regard to Constitutional limitations as to the method of laying taxes.”
Graves v. People of State of New York, [306 U.S. 466 (1939)]

*“The difficulties arising out of our dual form of government and the opportunities for differing opinions concerning the relative rights of state and national governments are many; but for a very long time this court has steadfastly adhered to the doctrine that the taxing power of Congress does not extend to the states or their political subdivisions. The same basic reasoning which leads to that conclusion, we think, requires like limitation upon the power which springs from the bankruptcy clause. United States v. Butler, supra.”*
Ashton v. Cameron County Water Improvement District No. 1, [298 U.S. 513; 56 S.Ct. 892 (1936)]

“The grant of the power to lay and collect taxes is, like the power to regulate commerce, made in general terms, and has never been understood to interfere with the exercise of the same power by the State; and hence has been drawn an argument which has been applied to the question under consideration. But the two grants are not, it is conceived, similar in their terms or their nature. Although many of the powers formerly [22 U.S. 1, 199] exercised by the States, are transferred to the government of the Union, yet the State governments remain, and constitute a most important part of our system. The power of taxation is indispensable to their existence, and is a power which, in its own nature, is capable of residing in, and being exercised by, different authorities at the same time. We are accustomed to see it placed, for different purposes, in different hands. Taxation is the simple operation of taking small portions from a perpetually accumulating mass, susceptible of almost infinite division; and a power in one to take what is necessary for certain purposes, is not, in its nature, incompatible with a power in another to take what is necessary for other purposes. Congress is authorized to lay and collect taxes, and to pay the debts, and provide for the common defence and general welfare of the United States. This does not interfere with the power of the States to tax [internally] for the support of their own governments; nor is the exercise of that power by the States [to tax INTERNALLY], an exercise of any portion of the power that is granted to the United States [to tax EXTERNALLY]. In imposing taxes for State purposes, they are not doing what Congress is empowered to do. Congress is not empowered to tax for those purposes which are within the exclusive province of the States. When, then, each government exercises the power of taxation, neither is exercising the power of the other. But, when a State proceeds to regulate commerce with foreign nations, or among the several States, it is exercising the very power that is granted to Congress, [22 U.S. 1, 200] and is doing the very thing which Congress is authorized to do. There is no analogy, then, between the power of taxation and the power of regulating commerce.”
Gibbons v. Ogden, [22 U.S. 21 (1824)]

*“In Slaughter-house Cases, 16 Wall. 62, it was said that the police power is, from its nature, incapable of any exact definition or limitation; and in Stone v. Mississippi, 101 U.S. 818, that it is 'easier to determine whether* particular cases come within the general scope of the power than to give an abstract definition of the power itself, which will be in all respects accurate.' That there is a power, sometimes called the police power, which has never been surrendered by the states, in virtue of which they may, within certain limits, control everything within their respective territories, and upon the proper exercise of which, under some circumstances, may depend the public health, the public morals, or the public safety, is conceded in all the cases. Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 203. In its broadest sense, as sometimes defined, it includes all legislation and almost every function of civil government. Barbier v. Connolly, 113 U.S. 31; S.C. 5 Sup.Ct.Rep. 357. [ . . . ] Definitions of the police power must, however, be taken subject to the condition that the state cannot, in its exercise, for any purpose whatever, encroach upon the powers of the general [federal] government, or rights granted or secured by the supreme law of the land.

"Illustrations of interference with the rightful authority of the general government by state legislation-which was defended upon the ground that it was enacted under the police power-are found in cases where enactments concerning the introduction of foreign paupers, convicts, and diseased persons were held to be unconstitutional as conflicting, by their necessary operation and effect, with the paramount authority of congress to regulate commerce with foreign nations, and among the several states. In Henderson v. Mayor of New York, 92 U.S. 263, the court, speaking by Mr. Justice MILLER, while declining to decide whether in the absence of congressional action the states can, or how far they may, by appropriate legislation protect themselves against actual paupers, vagrants, criminals, [115 U.S. 650, 662] and diseased persons, arriving from foreign countries, said, that no definition of the police power, and 'no urgency for its use, can authorize a state to exercise it in regard to a subject-matter which has been confided exclusively to the discretion of congress by the constitution.' Chy Lung v. Freeman, 92 U.S. 276. And in Railroad Co. v. Husen, 95 U.S. 474, Mr. Justice STRONG, delivering the opinion of the court, said that 'the police power of a state cannot obstruct foreign commerce or interstate commerce beyond the necessity for its exercise; and, under color of it, objects not within its scope cannot be secured at the expense of the protection afforded by the federal constitution.'"
 [New Orleans Gas Company v. Louisiana Light Company, 115 U.S. 650 (1885)]

And the Federalist Paper # 45 confirms this view in regards to taxation:

"It is true, that the Confederacy is to possess, and may exercise, the power of collecting internal as well as external taxes throughout the States; but it is probable that this power will not be resorted to, except for supplemental purposes of revenue; that an option will then be given to the States to supply their quotas by previous collections of their own; and that the eventual collection, under the immediate authority of the Union, will generally be made by the officers, and according to the rules, appointed by the several States. Indeed it is extremely probable, that in other instances, particularly in the organization of the judicial power, the officers of the States will be clothed with the correspondent authority of the Union."

"Should it happen, however, that separate collectors of internal revenue should be appointed under the federal government, the influence of the whole number would not bear a comparison with that of the multitude of State officers in the opposite scale. "

"Within every district to which a federal collector would be allotted, there would not be less than thirty or forty, or even more, officers of different descriptions, and many of them persons of character and weight, whose influence would lie on the side of the State. The powers delegated by the proposed Constitution to the federal government are few and defined. Those which are to remain in the State governments are numerous and indefinite. The former will be exercised principally on external objects, as war, peace, negotiation, and foreign commerce; with which last the power of taxation will, for the most part, be connected. The powers reserved to the several States will extend to all the objects which, in the ordinary course of affairs, concern the lives, liberties, and properties of the people, and the internal order, improvement, and prosperity of the State. The operations of the federal government will be most extensive and important in times of war and danger; those of the State governments, in times of peace and security. As the former periods will probably bear a small proportion to the latter, the State governments will here enjoy another advantage over the federal government. The more adequate, indeed, the federal powers may be rendered to the national defense,

1 the less frequent will be those scenes of danger which might favor their ascendancy over the governments of 2 the particular States."

3 [Federalist Paper No. 45 (Jan. 1788), James Madison]

4 The introduction of the Sixteenth Amendment did not change any of the above. Even the Supreme Court agreed in the case
 5 of Stanton v. Baltic Mining that the Sixteenth Amendment "conferred no new powers of taxation", and they wouldn't have
 6 said it and repeated it if they didn't mean it. Whether or not the Sixteenth Amendment was properly ratified is 7 inconsequential and a nullity, because of the limited applicability of Subtitle A of the Internal Revenue Code to the federal 8 zone. The Sixteenth Amendment authorized that:

9 Sixteenth Amendment

10 The Congress shall have power to lay and collect taxes on incomes, from whatever source derived, without
 11 apportionment among the several States, and without regard to any census or enumeration.

12 And in fact, the above described amendment is exactly what an income tax under Subtitle A that only operates inside the 13 federal zone does: collect taxes on incomes without apportionment within federal territory against those engaging in
 14 voluntary excise taxable federal franchises such as "domicile" and a "trade or business" (public office). It operates
 15 extraterritorially in the case of "public officers" abroad who continue to maintain a domicile in the "United States" (federal 16 zone) pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §911 but has no authority to operate within the exclusive jurisdiction of any state of the Union.
 17 Furthermore, because the federal zone is not protected by the Constitution or the Bill of Rights (see Downes v. Bidwell, 182
 18 U.S. 244 (1901)), then there can be no violation of constitutional rights from the enforcement of the I.R.C. there. As a
 19 matter of fact, since due process of law is a requirement only of the Bill of Rights, and the Bill of Rights doesn't apply in 20 the federal zone, then technically, Congress doesn't even need a law to legitimately collect taxes in these areas! The federal 21 zone, recall, is a totalitarian socialist democracy, not a republic, and the legislature and the courts can do anything they like 22 there without violating the Bill of Rights or our Constitutional rights.

23 With all the above in mind, let's return to the following cites to further analyze them

24 "The laws of the United States are laws in the several States, and just as much binding on the citizens and
 25 courts thereof as the State laws are. The United States is not a foreign sovereignty as regards the several States,
 26 but is a concurrent, and, within its jurisdiction, paramount sovereignty. Every citizen of a State is a subject of 27 two distinct sovereignties, having concurrent jurisdiction in the State, -concurrent as to place and persons,
 28 though distinct as to subject-matter."

29 [Clafin v. Houseman, 93 U.S. 130, 136 (1876)]

30 "And the powers of the General Government, and of the State, although both exist and are exercised within the 31 same territorial limits, are yet separate and distinct sovereignties, acting separately and independently of each
 32 other, within their respective spheres."

33 Ableman v. Booth, [62 U.S. 506, 516 (1858)]

34 The Constitution and the Bill of Rights, which are the "laws" of the United States, apply equally to both the union states
 35 AND the federal government, as the cites explain. That is why either state or federal officers both have to take an oath to 36 support and defend the Constitution before they take office. However, the statutes or legislation passed by Congress, which 37 are called "Acts of Congress" have much more limited jurisdiction inside the Union states, and in most cases, do not apply
 38 at all. For example:

39 TITLE 18 > PART III > CHAPTER 301 > Sec. 4001.
 40 Sec. 4001. - Limitation on detention; control of prisons

41 (a) No citizen shall be imprisoned or otherwise detained by the United States except pursuant to an Act of 42 Congress.

43 The reason for the above is because the federal government has no police powers inside the states because these are 44 reserved by the Tenth Amendment to the state governments. Likewise, the feds have no territorial jurisdiction for most 45 subject matters inside the states either. See U.S. v. Bevans, 16 U.S. 336 (1818).

46 Now if we look at the meaning of "Act of Congress", we find such a definition in Rule 54\(c\) of the Federal Rules of
 47 Criminal Procedure prior to Dec. 2002, wherein is defined "Act of Congress." Rule 54(c) states:

48 Federal Rule of Criminal Procedure 54(c) prior to Dec. 2002

"Act of Congress" includes any act of Congress locally applicable to and in force in the District of Columbia, in Puerto Rico, in a territory or in an insular possession."

Keep in mind, the Internal Revenue Code is an "Act of Congress." The reason such "Acts of Congress" cannot apply within the sovereign states is because the federal government lacks what is called "police powers" inside the union states, and the Internal Revenue Code requires police powers to implement and enforce. THEREFORE, THE QUESTION IS, ON WHICH OF THE FOUR LOCATIONS NAMED IN RULE 54(c) IS THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT ASSERTING JURISDICTION WHEN THE U.S. ATTORNEY HAULS YOUR ASS IN COURT ON AN INCOME TAX CRIME? Hint, everyone knows what and where the District of Columbia is, and everyone knows where Puerto Rico is, and territories and insular possessions are defined in Title 48 United States Code, happy hunting!

The preceding discussion within this section is also confirmed by the content of 4 U.S.C. §72. Subtitle A is primarily a "privilege" tax upon a "trade or business". See and rebut the following if you disagree:

The "Trade or Business" Scam, Form #05.001
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

A "trade or business" is defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701\(a\)\(26\) as "the functions of a public office":

26 U.S.C. §7701 Definitions

(a)(26) Trade or business

"The term 'trade or business' includes the performance of the functions of a public office."

Title 4 of the U.S. Code then says that all "public offices" MUST be exercised ONLY in the District of Columbia and no place else, except as expressly provided by law:

All offices attached to the seat of government shall be exercised in the District of Columbia, and not elsewhere, except as otherwise expressly provided by law.

If the we then search all the titles of the U.S. Code electronically, we find only one instance where "public offices" are "expressly provided" by law to a place other than the seat of government in connection with the Internal Revenue Code. That reference is found in 48 U.S.C. §1612, which expressly provides that public offices for the U.S. Attorney are extended to the Virgin Islands to enforce the provisions of the Internal Revenue Code.

Consequently, the judge's arguments against the idea that a person domiciled in a state of the Union on other than federal territory is not a "nonresident alien" is "patently frivolous".

5.6.13.9.6.10 Ambort v. United States

A series of cases occurred in connection with a fellow named Ernest Glenn Ambort, who was convicted of 69 counts of aiding others in filing fraudulent Form 1040NR claims for refund

1. USA v. Ambort, 06-cv-00642 (2008)
2. Ambort v. U.S., 392 F.3d. 1138 (2004)
3. U.S. v. Ambort, 193 F.3d. 1169 (1999)
4. U.S. v. Ambort, 405 F.3d. 1109 (2005)

Ambort started a business whereby he taught nationwide seminars on the History of the Constitution and tax laws, claiming that:

1. The Fourteenth Amendment described a kind of citizenship that was based upon feudal principles which had been rejected by those who founded the American Republic.
2. That our legal history demonstrated that American citizenship had always been restricted to those of the white race;

3. That the Fourteenth Amendment created a second-class, feudal citizenship for non-whites.
4. That those of non-white ancestry would do well to assert in their claims for refund that Brown v. Board of Education (1954), the U.S. Supreme Court case that banished race from our laws, banished such racial discrimination not only in the classroom, but also as to citizenship for all Americans.
5. And that based upon that concept, they (the non-whites) were a part of the sovereignty which had formerly resided solely within those of the white race.
6. His belief was that the Fourteenth Amendment not only created a second-class kind of feudal citizenship, but also had the ultimate effect of relegating all Americans, white or otherwise, into this second-class, feudal citizenship, whereby the Federal Government became Lord & Master, the People became serfs living on the great feudal manor, and the states were reduced to mere field-operating units of the Federal Government.

The gist of Ambort's arguments was explained by the court as follows:

The basic precept of the ADL's seminars was that anyone can, for federal income tax purposes, claim to be a "nonresident alien" with no domestic-source income. ADL instructors told participants that the Fourteenth Amendment changed the definition of citizenship so that only non-white residents of the territorial United States were actually "residents" for income tax purposes. Thus, Ambort and his co-defendants told customers that they were to claim on their income tax returns that they were nonresident aliens, regardless of their place of birth, and to write "n/a" in the place where the tax forms asked for the taxpayer's social security number. They also told customers that they could use IRS Form 1040X to file a corrected return for the previous three tax years, assert nonresident status for each year, and obtain a full refund of any taxes paid or withheld for that period.

The Court's opinion is mistaken in that they taught the principles as set forth in brief above. Their class materials were much in agreement with the dissent of Chief Justice Fuller, who wrote:

The rule [of citizenship adopted by the majority] was the outcome of the connection in feudalism between the individual and the soil on which he lived, and the allegiance due was that of liegemen to their liege lord. It was not local and temporary, as was the obedience to the laws owed by aliens within the dominions of the Crown, but permanent and indissoluble, and not to be cancelled by any change of time or place or circumstances.

And it is this rule, pure and simple, which it is asserted determined citizenship of the United States during the entire period prior to the passage of the act of April 9, 1866, and the ratification of the Fourteenth Amendment, and governed the meaning of the words —citizen of the United States\ and —natural-born citizen\ used in the Constitution as originally framed and adopted.

I submit that no such rule obtained during the period referred to, and that those words bore no such construction; that the act of April 9, 1866, expressed the contrary rule; that the Fourteenth Amendment prescribed the same rule as the act, and that, if that amendment bears the construction now put upon it, it imposed the English common law rule on this country for the first time, and made it "absolute and unbending" just as Great Britain was being relieved from its inconveniences." –

There is no doubt in Ambort's mind that the allegiance purported to be due to the Federal Government by the Wong Kim Ark majority was not something contemplated by the Founders and those People who ratified the Constitution in 1789 and the Bill of Rights in 1791. The 14th Amendment, as construed by the majority, re-introduced the feudal-law principles into this Nation just over 100 years from our Founding.

Ambort had instructed his instructors not to assist anybody in filing either IRS Form 1040X or 1040NR tax returns, as he knew that every individual had to decide for themselves if they believed that what they were taught was borne out by their own research. Four of the instructors failed to follow their specific instructions, and that was how the Government came to ensnare Ambort into a conspiracy to aid others in filing false returns.

Ambort also advised the students in writing, before they were permitted to enroll in the classes, that they were not to act upon anything they were taught until they had consulted with licensed counsel.

In addition, Ambort taught that certain types of income, listed on page 4 of the Form 1040NR returns in 1992 constituted income taxable by the Federal Government under the Constitution, such as income from royalties, patents, and the like. So, it is not true that he taught that their students had no domestic-source income. He did, however, teach that the normal

1 income of the average working American did not constitute income that came within the taxing jurisdiction of the Federal
2 Government.

3 Abort taught that the term “resident” was a term derived from the term “reside” in the first sentence of the 14th Amendment.
4 The U.S. Supreme Court has ruled that Congress may not define terms used in the Constitution, because Congress could, by
5 that process, effectively amend the Constitution to mean something other than what the U.S. Supreme Court had construed
6 the particular term to mean and thereby bypass the requirement that the Constitution be amended only by the amendment
7 provisions set forth within the Constitution itself.

8 The term “resident,” therefore, meant that the new citizen-serf of the United States was also a resident-serf of the state
9 wherein he or she “resided.” Effectively, then, we are all “defrocked” sovereigns and had arrived at that status by the 10 majority’s construction of the first sentence of the 14th Amendment.

11 His teaching was not aimed at getting refunds from the IRS, although he is certain that this possibility was powerful
12 motivating factor for those who enrolled. His primary mission was to inform Americans as to the legal processes used to 13 reduce then from sovereigns to serfs on the great federal manor.

14 Naturally, the prosecution made a better story than he did by painting the picture for the jury that he ran something like a
15 “refund mill.” It didn’t help that the two attorneys assigned by the court to defend Ambort had never defended a tax-case
16 defendant, that they refused to assist Ambort in mounting his personal defense and that the court would not permit Ambort
17 to testify to the jury as to his understanding of the tax laws.

18 Ambort said he can well understand why Jesus had nothing to say when he stood accused before Pilate. What good would it
19 have done? He was deemed guilty before Pilate laid eyes on him. Ambort tried to say something, but his mouth was shut by 20 the court.

21 If the court’s interpretation of Glenn Ambort’s approach is accurate, then his approach was seriously defective. However,
22 most of the time our experience is that courts misrepresent arguments of litigants to evade addressing very compromising
23 violations of law by the government. Below is a list of things Abort overlooked and/or did wrong, as interpreted from the 24 court’s likely misrepresentation of the issues before it:

- 25 1. He challenged the willfulness component of the crimes he was charged with but was prevented by his court appointed
26 “public pretenders” from mounting the defense he wanted or even saying anything to the jury.. The I.R.C. is not
27 positive law and therefore not legal evidence of a liability. The court was very clear that Ambort could not argue any 28 aspect of the law before the jury. Moreover, when asked by his co-defendant about any aspect of the law, the 29 government was quick to object, and the court sustained every objection so made and never sustained any of his 30 objections. Kangaroo court would have been a grade or two higher, in his opinion, than the court he had.
31 1.1. 1 U.S.C. §204 legislative notes makes the entire title nothing but a presumption that is not evidence. It identifies 32 the title as “prima facie” evidence, meaning just a presumption:

33 “Prima facie. Lat. At first sight on the first appearance; on the face of it; so far as can be judged from the first
34 disclosure; presumably; a fact presumed to be true unless disproved by some evidence to the contrary. State
35 ex rel. Herbert v. Whims, 68 Ohio.App. 39, 38 N.E.2d. 596, 499, 22 O.O. 110. See also Presumption.”
36 [Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1189]

- 37 1.2. Presumptions do NOT constitute evidence of a liability.

38 This court has never treated a presumption as any form of evidence. See, e.g., A.C. Aukerman Co. v. R.L.
39 Chaides Constr. Co., 960 F.2d. 1020, 1037 \(Fed.Cir.1992\) (“[A] presumption is not evidence.”); see also Del
40 Vecchio v. Bowers, 296 U.S. 280, 286, 56 S.Ct. 190, 193, 80 L.Ed. 229 \(1935\) (“[A presumption] cannot 41 acquire the attribute of evidence in the claimant's favor.”); New York Life Ins. Co. v. Gamer, 303 U.S. 161, 171,
42 58 S.Ct. 500, 503, 82 L.Ed. 726 \(1938\) (“[A] presumption is not evidence and may not be given weight as 43 evidence.”). Although a decision of this court, Jensen v. Brown, 19 F.3d. 1413, 1415 \(Fed.Cir.1994\), dealing
45 [Ruten v. West, 142 F.3d. 1434 C.A.Fed.,1998]

- 46 1.3. No judge has the statutorily delegated authority to convert presumptions into evidence without violating due 47 process of law. If he does, he is:
48 1.3.1. Violating his delegated authority.

1.3.2. Violating equal protection of the law. The defendant is just as entitled to presume that he is NOT subject to the code and NOT a “taxpayer” as the judge is entitled that he IS. The only thing that can convert private law into “law” in the case of the defendant is written, express evidence of consent to participate in what amounts to nothing more than a “trade or business” franchise agreement. See the following for how this franchise and excise tax operates:

The “Trade or Business” Scam, Form #05.001

1.3.3. Imposing what is called a “statutory presumption” that is unconstitutional, keeping in mind that an entire title or subtitle of any code can be a “statutory presumption” just as readily as a single statute:

Statutes creating permanent irrebuttable presumptions have long been disfavored under the Due Process Clauses of the Fifth and Fourteenth Amendments. In Heiner v. Donnan, 285 U.S. 312, 52 S.Ct. 358, 76 L.Ed. 772 (1932), the Court was faced with a constitutional challenge to a federal statute that created a conclusive presumption that gifts made within two years prior to the donor's death were made in contemplation of death, thus requiring payment by his estate of a higher tax. In holding that this irrefutable assumption was so arbitrary and unreasonable as to deprive the taxpayer of his property without due process of law, the Court stated that it had ‘held more than once that a statute creating a presumption which operates to deny a fair opportunity to rebut it violates the due process clause of the Fourteenth Amendment.’ Id., at 329, 52 S.Ct., at 362. See, e.g., Schlesinger v. Wisconsin, 270 U.S. 230, 46 S.Ct. 260, 70 L.Ed. 557 (1926); Hoeper v. Tax Comm'n, 284 U.S. 206, 52 S.Ct. 120, 76 L.Ed. 248 (1931). See also Tot v. United States, 319 U.S. 463, 468-469, 63 S.Ct. 1241, 1245-1246, 87 L.Ed. 1519 (1943); Leary v. United States, 395 U.S. 6, 29-53, 89 S.Ct. 1532, 1544-1557, 23 L.Ed.2d. 57 (1969). Cf. Turner v. United States, 396 U.S. 398, 418-419, 90 S.Ct. 642, 653-654, 24 L.Ed.2d. 610 (1970).
 [Vlandis v. Kline, 412 U.S. 441 (1973)]

1.4. Any attempt to convert a presumption into evidence in the case of those protected by the Constitution and therefore possessed of constitutional rights is a violation of due process of law that renders a void judgment.

(1) [8:4993] Conclusive presumptions affecting protected interests:

A conclusive presumption may be defeated where its application would impair a party's constitutionally-protected liberty or property interests. In such cases presumptions have been held to violate a party's due process and equal protection rights. [Vlandis v. Kline (1973) 412 U.S. 441, 449, 93 S.Ct. 2230, 2235; Cleveland Bed. of Ed. v. LaFleur (1974) 414 US 632, 639-640, 94 S.Ct. 1208, 1215-presumption under Illinois law that unmarried fathers are unfit violates process]

The above is exhaustively explained in the following, which should have ended up in his administrative record every chance he had. The document below, by the way, is a mandatory basis for belief of all those who are Members of this fellowship precisely because of what happens to people like Glenn Ambort who don't rely on it:

Reasonable Belief About Income Tax Liability, Form #05.007

2. He filed IRS Form 1040X for past years for clients who previously filed IRS Form 1040. Not true, as explained above.

2.1. This is the WRONG form for a non-resident non-person. The 1040X does not allow the filer to change status from resident in a previous filing to nonresident in the current filing. The only way one can change status from a resident alien to a nonresident alien for a prior year is to file IRS Form 1040NR and NOT 1040X. All his clients had previously and erroneously filed “RESIDENT” 1040 tax returns. Here is a quote from the IRS's website:

“If you find changes in your income, deductions, or credits after you mail your return, file Form 1040X, Amended U.S. Individual Income Tax Return. Also use Form 1040X if you should have filed Form 1040, 1040A, or 1040EZ instead of Form 1040NR or 1040NR-EZ, or vice versa.”

2.2. He should have used a nontaxpayer form, such as the following form on our website, so that he wasn't presumed to be a “taxpayer”:

Federal Nonresident Nonstatutory Claim for Return of Funds Unlawfully Paid to the Government-Long, Form #15.001

3. The Fourteenth Amendment, Section 1 DOES describe the citizenship of those born in states of the Union and outside of federal territory. The U.S. Supreme Court affirmed this conclusion at least twice that we know of, and they did so AFTER the Fourteenth Amendment was ratified:

1 "It is impossible to construe the words 'subject to the jurisdiction thereof,' in the opening sentence, as less
 2 comprehensive than the words 'within its jurisdiction,' in the concluding sentence of the same section; or to
 3 hold that persons 'within the jurisdiction' of one of the states of the Union are not 'subject to the jurisdiction
 4 of the United States[***].'"

5 U.S. v. Wong Kim Ark, [169 U.S. 649, 18 S.Ct. 456; 42 L.Ed. 890 (1898), emphasis added]<sup>183</sup>

 8 opens with a definition of citizenship—not only citizenship of the United States[***], but citizenship of the
 9 states. No such definition was previously found in the Constitution, nor had any attempt been made to define
 10 it by act of Congress. It had been the occasion of much discussion in the courts, by the executive departments
 11 and in the public journals. It had been said by eminent judges that no man was a citizen of the United
 12 States[***] except as he was a citizen of one of the states composing the Union. Those therefore, who had
 13 been born and resided always in the District of Columbia or in the territories, though within the United
 14 States[*], were not citizens. Whether this proposition was sound or not had never been judicially decided."
 15 [Slaughter-House Cases, 83 U.S. (16 Wall.) 36, 21 L.Ed. 394 (1873)]

16 While that proposition had never been judicially decided before the Slaughter-House Cases, the 17 decision in this case did decide what the 14th Amendment meant as to citizenship, and was later
 18 clarified by the majority in Wong Kim Ark.

- 19 4. Some but not all of Glenn Ambort's students filed IRS Form 1040NR entirely on their own and without assistance.
 20 However, the prosecution made it APPEAR that he was preparing returns for others. This misrepresentation by the 21 prosecution left him and his students a sitting duck to become a victim and a slave of the rampant presumptions of both
 22 the IRS and the corrupted Courts. He said he never filed nor did I assist nor did he encourage anyone to file any tax
 23 returns or claims for refund. Even the government was unable to produce a shred of evidence that he did so. The 24 prosecution also acknowledged in pretrial proceedings that he had instructed his instructors not to assist or encourage 25 anyone in filing any tax forms, returns or claims for refund. However, they did not bring that to the jury's attention nor 26 did the two defense counsels (paid for by the government) raise that issue. Wonder why! See:

Presumption: Chief Weapon for Unlawfully Enlarging Federal Jurisdiction, Form #05.017

27 As you probably know, all IRS forms are for "taxpayers" and if you are a "nontaxpayer" you only have three choices in 28 order to preserve your status:

- 29 4.1. Use AMENDED IRS forms that remove the presumption of "taxpayer" status. See the following for a source of 30 AMENDED IRS forms.:

<http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/Forms/IRS/IRSFormsPubs.htm>

- 31 4.2. Use STANDARD IRS forms and then modify them to correctly reflect your status. The modifications required
 32 are listed in Section 1 of the link above. Sometimes, the IRS tries to penalize people who "alter" their forms.
 33 Ambort's students did precisely what we suggested above.
 34 4.3. Use STANDARD IRS forms that you don't modify but above your signature write "Not valid without signed Tax
 35 Form Attachment attached" and then attach this form. This approach avoids any penalties the IRS might attempt 36 to impose for "altering" their forms, and yet avoids you having to commit perjury under penalty of perjury on a 37 government form. The form to attach is the following:

- 38 5. Glenn Ambort didn't understand the distinctions between a franchisee called a "taxpayer" and those who are not 39 "taxpayers" as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(14).

- 40 5.1. He cited provisions of the "taxpayer" franchise agreement as his basis for his standing in court and thereby
 41 admitted he was a "taxpayer". He claims not to have the foggiest idea where we get this idea. He says he is

<sup>183</sup> Ambort claims this is a double-negative sentence and means that persons within the jurisdiction of one of the states of the Union are not subject to the jurisdiction of the United States. The double negative consists of "impossible" (not possible) and "are not subject".

"A double negative gives the sentence a positive sense."

Grammar Monster, SOURCE: [http://www.grammar-monster.com/glossary/double\_negative.htm]

"Certain uses of double negation, to express an affirmative, are fully standard: We cannot sit here and do nothing (meaning "we must do something"). In the not unlikely event that the bill passes, prices will rise (meaning the event is likely)."

1 acutely aware of the distinction between taxpayer and non-taxpayer. Furthermore, he has no idea what we refer
 2 to by the statement that he "cited provisions of the 'taxpayer' franchise agreement as his basis for his standing in
 3 court and thereby admitted he was a 'taxpayer.'"

4 "Revenue Laws relate to taxpayers [officers, employees, and elected officials of the Federal Government] and
 5 not to non-taxpayers [American Citizens/American Nationals not subject to the exclusive jurisdiction of the 6 Federal Government]. The latter are without their scope. No procedures are prescribed for non-taxpayers and
 7 no attempt is made to annul any of their Rights or Remedies in due course of law. With them[non-taxpayers]

10 5.2. He asked for an injunction and a declaratory judgment as a "taxpayer" even though the Anti-Injunction Act, 26
 11 U.S.C. §7421, and the Declaratory Judgments Act, 28 U.S.C. §2201(a) specifically forbid "taxpayers" from 12 asking for such things. He says he was aware of the provisions of these acts and of their restrictions. However,
 13 in his first interlocutory appeal to the Tenth Circuit, the appellate counsel for the government informed the 3-14 judge panel that it was a crime to challenge tax laws in claims for refund after having paid the tax that the law and
 15 the courts purported to be due and owing. All his students had paid the usual taxes. However, the government
 16 counsel opined, he could have filed for a clarification of the tax laws by filing under the two acts above. He says
 17 he did just that in order to show to the courts that the appellate counsel for the government was completely
 18 mistaken. Asking for an injunction or declaratory relief WITHOUT specifying WHY these acts DO NOT apply is 19 not a wise ideas is demonstrated in the following:

Flawed Tax Arguments to Avoid, Form #08.004, Sections 6.10 and 6.11
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

20 5.3. He acted like a "taxpayer" and filed "taxpayer" forms but showed students the specific modifications required to 21 make them accurate. If the student decided to file, they had to make the suggested modifications.
 22 5.4. He never stated that he was NOT a "taxpayer" as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(14). That is true because some 23 items of income on page 4 of the 1040NR forms are taxable under the Constitution.
 24 5.5. He should have invoked the common law instead of statutory law. Statutory law only applies to government
 25 officers and employees in nearly all cases. He maintains that such an approach would not work in a criminal tax 26 case. See:

Why Statutory Civil Law is Law for Government and Not Private Persons, Form #05.037
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

27 6. Glenn Ambort never challenged the false information returns that gave rise to the need to file IRS Form 1040NR
 28 returns to begin with. Without challenging the filing of these false information returns and the criminal activity they 29 represent he and his clients:
 30 6.1. Are presumed to be "taxpayers" as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(14) by the court.
 31 6.2. Are presumed to be engaged in the "trade or business" and a "public office" franchise within the U.S.
 32 government.
 33 6.3. Are acting in a representative capacity on behalf the U.S. government as "public officers". In that capacity, they 34 are "officers of a corporation", which corporation is the "United States" as defined in 28 U.S.C. §3002(15)(A).
 35 The "office" they occupy is a "citizen" or a "resident" within the meaning of federal law, no matter what their 36 personal status is.
 37 6.4. Are subject to the laws of the District of Columbia and therefore "residents" of the "United States" while acting 38 as said "public officers" under:
 39 6.4.1. Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 17(b).
 40 6.4.2. 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(39).
 41 6.4.3. 26 U.S.C. §7408(d).

42 He says any arguments above would not have been raised by his counsel, the government would have objected, if they had
 43 been raised, and the court would have been sustained the government's objections. He says that the views we expressed
 44 above may well be true in a world governed by truth. However, truth is considered to be a crime in a world governed by 45 lies. He says he truly wishes what we espouse above would be workable, but his long experience in the courts has 46 demonstrated to his satisfaction that such is not the case. Perhaps it will be so in the future, and he hopes it will, but, for 47 now, not even a remote chance.

The court deliberately didn't disclose the basis for its conclusion that Glenn Ambort's clients were "residents", but they certainly and properly took all the above into account and, we believe, reached a just conclusion that Glenn Ambort's clients were in fact "residents" rather than "non-resident non-persons" for all the reasons we indicated earlier in section 5.6.13.4.8, including the following reason:

26 C.F.R. §301.7701-5 Domestic, foreign, resident, and nonresident persons.

*A domestic corporation is one organized or created in the United States, including only the States (and during the periods when not States, the Territories of Alaska and Hawaii), and the District of Columbia, or under the law of the United States or of any State or Territory. A foreign corporation is one which is not domestic. A domestic corporation is a resident corporation even though it does no business and owns no property in the United States. A foreign corporation engaged in trade or business within the United States is referred to in the regulations in this chapter as a resident foreign corporation, and a foreign corporation not engaged in trade or business within the United States, as a nonresident foreign corporation. A partnership engaged in trade or business within the United States is referred to in the regulations in this chapter as a resident partnership, and a partnership not engaged in trade or business within the United States, as a nonresident partnership. Whether a partnership is to be regarded as resident or nonresident is not determined by the nationality or residence of its members or by the place in which it was created or organized.

Below is what the Glenn Ambort appeals court held, and they were correct in concluding that Glenn Ambort's clients were "residents" if he never rebutted the presumption that they were engaged in the "trade or business" franchise consistent with the above:

"Ambort conducted tax seminars throughout the United States instructing attendees that, although they were United States residents, they could legally claim to be "nonresident aliens" exempt from most federal income taxes. He assisted attendees in their filing of amended return forms claiming a refund for past years' taxes. [Ambort v. U.S., 392 F.3d. 1138 (2004)]

While he does not have a copy of the exact wording he taught almost 22 years after he actually taught the seminars, he recalls it something very close to this:

"I am a nonresident alien individual who at no time was engaged in a trade or business within the United States nor did I receive income which was effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business within the United States."

There was additional verbiage, but this is the wording that most closely addresses our discussion here.

The court also concluded that Glenn Ambort was a "U.S. citizen", but very deliberately refused:

1. To distinguish between constitutional and statutory "citizens". He says this is true, in that the Court denied that any citizenship existed except that under the 14th Amendment and so instructed the jury.
2. To identify which of the three different "United States" they meant in the phrase "United States residents". They could only have meant those domiciled on federal territory that is no part of any state of the Union and who are therefore statutory "U.S. persons" pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(30). Lots of luck with that in a criminal trial.

We know that the type of "U.S.** citizen" they were prejudicially presuming was a statutory "U.S.** citizen" franchisee pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1401 and not a constitutional "citizen of the United States***", and since Glenn Ambort seems not to have been aware of this or was prevented from talking about it to the jury, he was prevented from forcing them to admit this presumption and therefore acquit him. You're dead meat if you don't challenge and prevent rampant and self-serving prejudicial presumptions by the government, because that is the main tool they use to unlawfully usurp jurisdiction they in fact do not have, and Glenn Ambort apparently understood this but was prevented from discussing it at trial. See:

Presumption: Chief Weapon for Unlawfully Enlarging Federal Jurisdiction, Form #05.017

What the court didn't say on this subject is the key to avoiding the pitfalls Ambort fell into:

Moreover, a taxpayer who "refuses to utilize the mechanisms provided by Congress to present his claims of invalidity to the courts and to abide by their decisions" risks criminal prosecution. Cheek, 498 U.S. at 206,

111 S.Ct. 604 (emphasis added). The federal courts have long rejected Ambort's rationale for lack of tax liability. See United States v. Hanson, 2 F.3d. 942, 945 (9th Cir.1993) (rejecting appellant's contention that "as a natural born citizen of Montana he is a nonresident alien" and thus not subject to federal tax laws); United States v. Cheek, 882 F.2d. 1263, 1269, n. 2 (7th Cir.1989), vacated on other grounds, 498 U.S. 192, 111 S.Ct. 604, 112 L.Ed.2d. 617 (1991) (rejecting claim that defendant was not subject to taxation because he was a white male Christian, and not a "fourteenth amendment citizen"); United States v. Studley, 783 F.2d. 934, 937 & n. 3 (9th Cir.1986) (rejecting argument that an "absolute, freeborn, and natural individual" need not pay federal taxes and *1141 noting that "this argument has been [so] consistently and thoroughly rejected by every branch of the government for decades ... [that] advancement of such utterly meritless arguments is now the basis for serious sanctions imposed on civil litigants who raise them"). Indeed, this court has upheld a Fed.R.Civ.P. 12(b)(6) dismissal of Mr. Ambort's refund claim for failure to state a claim upon which relief may be granted. Benson v. United States, Nos. 94-4182, 95-4061, 1995 WL 674615, at **2 - 3 (10th Cir. Nov. 13, 1995). In that case, we specifically stated that "Mr. Ambort, a United States citizen born in California and living in the United States, is subject to the tax laws" and that his assertion of status as a nonresident alien was frivolous. Id. at *3.

He says he was not indicted because his theories of citizenship were incorrect, in the eyes of the government. He was indicted because he dared to challenge the tax laws after he and his students had actually paid the full taxes alleged to be due and owing. Here's how the Cheek Court stated one should challenge tax laws after paying the usual taxes:

There is no doubt that Cheek, from year to year, was to pay the tax that the law purported to require, file for a refund and, if denied, present his claims of invalidity, constitutional or otherwise, to the courts. –
[Cheek v. United States, 498 U.S. 192, 206 (1991)]

Here's what the Ninth Circuit had to say about the same passage from Cheek:

He [Defendant Kuball] also chose to ignore two legal alternatives for challenging the tax laws. He could have paid the taxes allegedly due, filed a refund claim, and if denied, brought suit in federal court. Cheek v. United States, 498 U.S. 192, ---, 111 S.Ct. 604, 613, 112 L.Ed.2d. 617 (1991). He could also have challenged the government's claims of tax deficiencies in the Tax Court without first paying the tax. Id. His actions "cannot be viewed as the proper path for petitioning for redress under the rights protected by the First Amendment." Citrowske, 951 F.2d. at 901.

So, you see, abiding by the exact instructions set forth by the U.S. Supreme Court is not always a defense, even when your understanding of the U.S. Supreme Court's decision is affirmed by the Ninth Circuit.

He says he taught the precise method that the Cheek Court set forth above and which was confirmed by the Ninth Circuit. He says he doesn't know how any court with a shred of honesty could say he refused to follow the accepted methods of doing so. However, he has long since become aware that court opinions are rarely based upon the facts adduced at trial and are more apt to be framed to suit the court's agenda.

Glenn Ambort could have forced the court to omit all the misleading rhetoric it engaged in above and focus on the core issues if he had employed the following tools attached to his pleadings and/or his filings with the IRS:

1. Flawed Tax Arguments to Avoid, Form #08.004, Sections 6.1 and 9-describes techniques for combating the above forms of "verbiage" by the court and the government counsel
2. Citizenship, Domicile, and Tax Status Options, Form #10.003-attach to pleadings and raise at trial

3. Rules of Presumption and Statutory Interpretation, Litigation Tool #01.006- attach to pleadings and raise at trial attach to pleadings and raise during litigation.

4. Affidavit of Citizenship, Domicile, and Tax Status, Form #02.001-attach to all tax returns, withholding documents, and correspondence with the IRS

He says he was not indicted because his theories may have been incorrect, and he does not think they were incorrect, but rather he was indicted simply because the government's theory of the case was that challenging tax laws after full payment of the taxes was criminal fraud.

1 Yet, the Ninth Circuit ruled just the opposite in Kuball, referring to the Cheek methods as “two legal alternatives for
2 challenging the tax laws.”

3 Glenn Ambort was sentenced to 9 years in jail and he is now out. The reasons he served in jail are mainly corruption of the 4 courts by interfering with his testimony, preventing discussion of his understanding of the law in front of the jury, and
5 granting all the government's objections and none of his own.

6 Ambort says the reason why he was indicted, tried, convicted and sentenced to prison and probation had nothing to do with
7 flawed legal theories as to citizenship, but everything to do with the government's theory, which the trial court and 10th
8 Circuit upheld, namely that the mere challenge to tax laws after full tax payment constitutes criminal fraud. This despite the 9 fact that Cheek specifically stated that John A. Cheek, and others who wish to challenge tax laws after full payment of the 10 taxes, were free to make any challenge to the tax laws, “constitutional or otherwise,” and that such challenges, according to
11 Kuball, were “legal alternatives” available “for challenging the tax laws.”

17 We spoke with Ambort in January 2014 about his conviction and about how he was handled by the judge in his case. He 18 told us the following:

- 19 1. The judge entered the jury room during trial to see to their comfort, food and accommodations, as far as he is aware.
20 The judge did not enter the jury room during deliberation, again, to Glenn's knowledge.
- 21 2. The judge wouldn't allow Ambort to even testify before the jury even though he wanted to. This creates an appealable
22 issue for his conviction. And it was appealed by the Federal Public Defender who later confessed that he was taken
23 aback by the bad judgment rendered against Ambort.
- 24 3. The judge told the jury that there was only ONE type of citizenship and that all “citizens” have to pay tax, which is 25 FRAUD.

26 We also offered Ambort an opportunity to comment on this section and his comments have been incorporated herein to 27 make it accurate. Since his conviction, he has coauthored a book on constitutional due process with John Benson entitled 28 Taxation by Misrepresentation. We highly recommend his book, available at:

30 5.6.13.9.6.11 Treasury Decisions 2313 in 1916 Shows Nonresident Aliens being “Taxpayers”

31 QUESTION:

32 Treasury Decision 2313 issued in 1916 shows “Nonresident Aliens” being “taxpayers”. You can't possibly be correct in 33 your conclusions that they are have no tax liability.

34 ANSWER:

35 You can read Treasury Decision 2313 in the article below, put into context:

<http://famguardian.org/Subjects/Taxes/CourtCases/BrushaberVUnionPacRR240US1.htm>

36 You are confusing "nonresidents" and "nonresident aliens" on the one hand with "nonresident alien INDIVIDUALS" on the 37 other hand. These distinctions were not made back when T.D. 2313 was issued because the I.R.C. wasn't even enacted at 38 that time and didn't come on the scene until 1939. To find out what they meant in T.D. 2313, you would have to go back to 39 the Revenue Act of 1915 and see how they defined it. Chances are, they meant an alien and state nationals are not “aliens”
40 but “non-resident non-persons” if not engaged in a public office and “nonresident aliens” if they are. If you want to 41 research this, the following may be helpful:

1 The essence of what it means to be a "nonresident" or a "nonresident alien" is that you are neither a "citizen" nor a
 2 "resident" (alien), per 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(B). One can be a "nonresident", "nonresident alien", or a "non-resident non-
 3 person" without being an "individual" or a "nonresident alien INDIVIDUAL": All individuals are aliens and those born
 4 within a state of the Union are not "aliens", and therefore neither "individuals", "residents" nor "nonresident alien
 5 individuals". This is covered in section 5.6.13.4.8 of this document.

6 All the duties, such as the duty to file and to use identifying numbers, pertain to "nonresident alien INDIVIDUALS". For
 7 instance, 26 C.F.R. §1.6012-1(b) imposes a duty to file a tax return upon "nonresident alien INDIVIDUALS" but none
 8 upon those who are not "individuals" (resident aliens). Nowhere is a duty imposed upon those who are "non-residents",
 9 "nonresident aliens", or "non-resident non persons" so they are excluded by implication from such duties.

10 "Expressio unius est exclusio alterius. A maxim of statutory interpretation meaning that the expression of one
 11 thing is the exclusion of another. Burgin v. Forbes, 293 Ky. 456, 169 S.W.2d. 321, 325; Newblock v. Bowles,
 12 170 Okl. 487, 40 P.2d. 1097, 1100. Mention of one thing implies exclusion of another. When certain persons or 13 things are specified in a law, contract, or will, an intention to exclude all others from its operation may be
 14 inferred. Under this maxim, if statute specifies one exception to a general rule or assumes to specify the effects
 15 of a certain provision, other exceptions or effects are excluded."

18 Being an "individual" simply means that you are nonresident but:

- 19 1. Have consensually waived sovereign immunity pursuant to 28 U.S.C. §1605(a)(2) and decided to engage in commerce
 20 within the legislative jurisdiction of the "United States" corporation in order to procure the benefits of the socialism
 21 franchise, such as free cheese, socialist security benefits, unemployment, etc. Describing yourself as a "nonresident" or
 22 a "nonresident national" who is NOT an "individual" and refusing to use a number avoids a waiver of sovereign 23 immunity.
- 24 2. Have decided to surrender the benefits of being a sovereign "Citizen" under the Constitution in exchange for the 25 disabilities of being a privileged alien so that you could engage in federal franchises.
- 26 3. You had to commit perjury to do the above, because you aren't an alien and there is no statute that allows you to 27 describe yourself as either an "alien" or "individual" if you were born anywhere in the country. Neither could the 28 government even lawfully write such a statute that applied within a state of the Union because the purpose of law is 29 protection and they can't write a law that allows you to waive that protection under the Constitution. This would be a 30 violation of the whole reason for having a government or a Constitution to begin with.

31 The W-8BEN form is only a "Taxpayer" form if you put a number on it and check one of the EXISTING options in block
 32 3. If you add "non-resident non-person non-taxpayer" to block 3 and check it, it ceases to be a "taxpayer" form. 26 C.F.R.
 33 §301.6109-1(b) says identifying numbers are only required in the case of "nonresident alien individuals" and you are not an
 34 "individual" if you are a state national and "non-resident non-person" or transient foreigner. Even for "nonresident alien
 35 individuals", they only need a number if they are selling real estate in the federal zone or are engaged in a "trade or 36 business", neither of which you are if you are a state national who does not serve in public office within the U.S.
 37 government. This is covered in:

About SSNs and TINs on Government Forms and Correspondence, Form #04.104

38 The W-8BEN form doesn't have an option in block 3 for those who are not "individuals". 26 C.F.R. §1.1441-1(c)(3) says
 39 that all "individuals" are aliens. If one is a state national not domiciled on federal territory, then they are not an "alien" or 40 an "individual", and therefore not a "nonresident alien individual". As long as one doesn't check the "individual" block in
 41 box 3 and instead adds an additional option such as "Transient foreigner", "Human", "Man", or "Woman" and doesn't use a
 42 number as the following document suggests, then they continue to be a "nontaxpayers" who are not "individuals":

Another alternative is to use the amended form in the above article or to use the substitute form, which is the following, and which indicates that it is a substitute for the W-8BEN:

Remember: The only thing the feds have jurisdiction over within a state are their own territory and franchises, which are property coming under Article 4, Section 3, Clause 2 of the Constitution. Being a privileged alien or "resident alien" is a franchise that they have exclusive jurisdiction over, even in a state. That is why all "taxpayers" must be "individuals" and privileged aliens within states of the Union: Because the only thing the constitution grants them jurisdiction over within a state is foreign affairs, including jurisdiction over aliens. This is covered in section 5.6.13.9.2.2 of this form.

5.6.13.9.6.12 Income taxation is an Article 1, Section 8 power, which is therefore constitutional and non-geographical

Contention:

The I.R.C. implements powers delegated to Congress by Article 1, Section 8, Clauses 1 and 3 of the United States Constitution. As such, it operates throughout the 50 states and is therefore non-geographical in scope. It is "subject matter" jurisdiction that operates outside of federal territory and within states of the Union.

By way of example, patents and copyrights are an Article 1, Section 8 power and they operate within the states independent of the exclusive or territorial jurisdiction of the national government. Same for counterfeiting and postal matters.

Social Security, for instance, is identified by the U.S. Supreme Court as an Article 1, Section 8 power. To wit:

*The subject matter of taxation open to the power of the Congress is as comprehensive as that open to the power of the states, though the method of apportionment may at times be different. "The Congress shall have power to lay and collect taxes, duties, imposts and excises." Art. 1, § 8. If the tax is a direct one, it shall be apportioned according to the census or enumeration. If it is a duty, impost, or excise, it shall be uniform throughout the United States. Together, these classes include every form of tax appropriate to sovereignty. Cf. Burnet v. Brooks, 288 U.S. 378, 403, 405; Brushaber v. Union Pacific R. Co., 240 U.S. 1, 12. Whether the tax is to be 582*582 classified as an "excise" is in truth not of critical importance. If not that, it is an "impost" (Pollock v. Farmers' Loan & Trust Co., 158 U.S. 601, 622, 625; Pacific Insurance Co. v. Soule, 7 Wall. 433, 445), or a "duty" (Veazie Bank v. Fenno, 8 Wall. 533, 546, 547; Pollock v. Farmers' Loan & Trust Co., 157 U.S. 429, 570; Knowlton v. Moore, 178 U.S. 41, 46). A capitation or other "direct" tax it certainly is not. "Although there have been from time to time intimations that there might be some tax which was not a direct tax nor included under the words 'duties, imposts and excises,' such a tax for more than one hundred years of national existence has as yet remained undiscovered, notwithstanding the stress of particular circumstances has invited thorough investigation into sources of powers." Pollock v. Farmers' Loan & Trust Co., 157 U.S. 429, 557. There is no departure from that thought in later cases, but rather a new emphasis of it. Thus, in Thomas v. United States, 192 U.S. 363, 370, it was said of the words "duties, imposts and excises" that "they were used comprehensively to cover customs and excise duties imposed on importation, consumption, manufacture and sale of certain commodities, privileges, particular business transactions, vocations, occupations and the like." At times taxpayers have contended that the Congress is without power to lay an excise on the enjoyment of a privilege created by state law. The contention has been put aside as baseless. Congress may tax the transmission of property by inheritance or will, though the states and not Congress have created the privilege of succession. Knowlton v. Moore, supra, p. 58. Congress may tax the enjoyment of a corporate franchise, though a state and not Congress has brought the franchise into being. Flint v. Stone Tracy Co., 220 U.S. 107, 155. The statute books of the states are strewn with illustrations of taxes laid on 583*583 occupations pursued of common right.<sup>121</sup> We find no basis for a holding that the power in that regard which belongs by accepted practice to the legislatures of the states, has been denied by the Constitution to the Congress of the nation.*

2. The tax being an excise, its imposition must conform to the canon of uniformity. There has been no departure from this requirement. According to the settled doctrine the uniformity exacted is geographical, not intrinsic.

6 Rebuttal:

7 The U.S. Supreme Court acknowledged that taxes laid on the District of Columbia, and by implication, all public offices
 8 within the national government exercised WITHIN the District of Columbia, is NOT an Article 1, Section 8 or 9 CONSTITUTIONAL power. Keep in mind that this is the only tax described in the I.R.C. Those who propose that it IS an
 10 Article 1 Section 8 power are therefore calling the U.S. Supreme Court a LIAR:

11 "Loughborough v. Blake, 5 Wheat. 317, 5 L.Ed. 98, was an action of trespass or, as appears by the original
 12 record, replevin, brought in the circuit court for the District of Columbia to try the right of Congress to impose
 13 a direct tax for general purposes on that District. 3 Stat. at L. 216, chap. 60. It was insisted that Congress
 14 could act in a double capacity: in one as legislating [182 U.S. 244, 260] for the states; in the other as a local
 15 legislature for the District of Columbia. In the latter character, it was admitted that the power of levying direct
 16 taxes might be exercised, but for District purposes only, as a state legislature might tax for state purposes; but
 17 that it could not legislate for the District under art. 1, 8, giving to Congress the power 'to lay and collect taxes,
 18 imposts, and excises,' which 'shall be uniform throughout the United States,' inasmuch as the District was no
 19 part of the United States [described in the Constitution]. It was held that the grant of this power was a general
 20 one without limitation as to place, and consequently extended to all places over which the government extends;
 21 and that it extended to the District of Columbia as a constituent part of the United States. The fact that art. 1, 2,
 22 declares that 'representatives and direct taxes shall be apportioned among the several states . . . according to
 23 their respective numbers' furnished a standard by which taxes were apportioned, but not to exempt any part of
 24 the country from their operation. 'The words used do not mean that direct taxes shall be imposed on states only 25 which are represented, or shall be apportioned to representatives; but that direct taxation, in its application to
 26 states, shall be apportioned to numbers.' That art. 1, 9, 4, declaring that direct taxes shall be laid in proportion
 27 to the census, was applicable to the District of Columbia, 'and will enable Congress to apportion on it its just 28 and equal share of the burden, with the same accuracy as on the respective states. If the tax be laid in this
 29 proportion, it is within the very words of the restriction. It is a tax in proportion to the census or enumeration
 30 referred to.' It was further held that the words of the 9th section did not 'in terms require that the system of 31 direct taxation, when resorted to, shall be extended to the territories, as the words of the 2d section require that 32 it shall be extended to all the states. They therefore may, without violence, be understood to give a rule when 33 the territories shall be taxed, without imposing the necessity of taxing them.'"

34 "There could be no doubt as to the correctness of this conclusion, so far, at least, as it applied to the District
 35 of Columbia. This District had been a part of the states of Maryland and [182 U.S. 244, 261] Virginia. It had 36 been subject to the Constitution, and was a part of the United States[***]. The Constitution had attached to it
 37 irrevocably. There are steps which can never be taken backward. The 38 tie that bound the states of Maryland and Virginia to the Constitution could not be dissolved, without at least
 39 the consent of the Federal and state governments to a formal separation. The mere cession of the District of 40 Columbia to the Federal government relinquished the authority of the states, but it did not take it out of the 41 United States or from under the aegis of the Constitution. Neither party had ever consented to that
 42 construction of the cession. If, before the District was set off, Congress had passed an unconstitutional act
 43 affecting its inhabitants, it would have been void. If done after the District was created, it would have been 44 equally void; in other words, Congress could not do indirectly, by carving out the District, what it could not do
 45 directly. The District still remained a part of the United States, protected by the Constitution. Indeed, it would
 46 have been a fanciful construction to hold that territory which had been once a part of the United States ceased
 47 to be such by being ceded directly to the Federal government."

 50 uniform to the effect [182 U.S. 244, 279] that the Constitution is applicable to territories acquired by purchase
 51 or conquest, only when and so far as Congress shall so direct. Notwithstanding its duty to 'guarantee to every 52 state in this Union a republican form of government' (art. 4, 4), by which we understand, according to the 53 definition of Webster, 'a government in which the supreme power resides in the whole body of the people, and is 54 exercised by representatives elected by them,' Congress did not hesitate, in the original organization of the 55 territories of Louisiana, Florida, the Northwest Territory, and its subdivisions of Ohio, Indiana, Michigan,
 56 Illinois, and Wisconsin and still more recently in the case of Alaska, to establish a form of government bearing
 57 a much greater analogy to a British Crown colony than a republican state of America, and to vest the 58 legislative power either in a governor and council, or a governor and judges, to be appointed by the President.
 59 It was not until they had attained a certain population that power was given them to organize a legislature by 60 vote of the people. In all these cases, as well as in territories subsequently organized west of the Mississippi,
 61 Congress thought it necessary either to extend to Constitution and laws of the United States over them, or to

1 declare that the inhabitants should be entitled to enjoy the right of trial by jury, of bail, and of the privilege of
 2 the writ of habeas corpus, as well as other privileges of the bill of rights."
 3 Downes v. Bidwell, [182 U.S. 244 (1901)]

4 Hence, since the District of Columbia is included within the definition of "United States" and all SIMILAR jurisdictions
 5 found in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10), then the tax imposed under I.R.C. Subtitles A and C:

- 6 1. Is NOT an Article 1, Section 8 tax.
- 7 2. Extends ONLY where the GOVERNMENT extends, as pointed out above. Sources WITHIN the government, in fact,
 8 are defined in the at 26 U.S.C. §864(c)(3) as "sources within the United States".
- 9 3. Is a tax on instrumentalities of the national government and not private humans.
- 10 4. It is neither CONSTITUTIONAL nor UNCONSTITUTIONAL, but rather EXTRA-CONSTITUTIONAL. It is an 11 EXTRA-constitutional tax because the Constitution doesn't protect what happens by consent to PUBLIC officers
 12 within the government. All those serving in public offices do so by consent and it is a maxim of law that you cannot 13 complain of an injury for things you consent to.
- 14 5. While it is NOT a constitutional but an EXTRA-constitutional tax, if tax terms such as "direct, indirect, excise" used 15 within the constitution WERE used to describe it, then it would have to be described as follows:
  - 16 5.1. Is a direct, unapportioned tax on INCOME as property. All direct taxes are on property. Note also that the 17 ONLY place it can be administered as a "DIRECT TAX" is the District of Columbia, which is why the terms
 18 "United States" and "State" are both defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10) as the District of Columbia and 19 no part of any state of the Union. This is also why the ONLY remaining "internal revenue district" within which 20 the I.R.S. can lawfully enforce pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §7601 is the District of Columbia.
  - 21 5.2. It is a DIRECT TAX because it involves both real estate and personal property or the "benefits" of such property.
 22 This definition of "direct" derives from Pollock v. Farmers' Loan & Trust Co., 157 U.S. 429 (1895).
  - 23 5.3. It is a direct tax upon PROPERTY owned BY THE GOVERNMENT because in POSSESSION of the 24 government at the time of payment.
  - 25 5.4. The earnings of public offices are property of the government, because the OFFICE is owned by the government 26 and was created by the government. The creator of a thing is always the owner.
  - 27 5.5. The "income" subject to the tax is payments FROM the government.
  - 28 5.6. It is an excise on the SOURCE of income.
  - 29 5.7. The SOURCE is the specific place the activity was accomplished, which is ALWAYS the government or a "U.S.
 30 source". A "U.S. source" means an activity WITHIN the government. Hence "INTERNAL revenue code". See:
 31 <http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/CitesByTopic/source.htm>

32 Source of Earned Income

33 The source of your earned income is the place where you perform the services for which you received the 34 income. Foreign earned income is income you receive for performing personal services in a foreign country.
 35 Where or how you are paid has no effect on the source of the income. For example, income you receive for 36 work done in France is income from a foreign source even if the income is paid directly to your bank account
 37 in the United States and your employer is located in New York City.

38 If you receive a specific amount for work done in the United States, you must report that amount as U.S. source
 39 income. If you cannot determine how much is for work done in the United States, or for work done partly in the 40 United States and partly in a foreign country, determine the amount of U.S. source income using the method
 41 that most correctly shows the proper source of your income.

42 In most cases you can make this determination on a time basis. U.S. source income is the amount that results
 43 from multiplying your total pay (including allowances, re-imbursements other than for foreign moves, and 44 noncash fringe benefits) by a fraction. The numerator (top number) is the number of days you worked within 45 the United States. The denominator is the total number of days of work for which you were paid.

46 [IRS Publication 54 (2000), p. 4]

- 47 5.8. It is INDIRECT in the sense that all indirect taxes are excise taxes upon activities that can be avoided by avoiding 48 the activity. However, it becomes DIRECT, a THEFT, and slavery/involuntary servitude if the government:
  - 49 5.8.1. Refuses to recognize or protect your right to NOT volunteer and not become a public officer.
  - 50 5.8.2. Refuses to acknowledge the nature of the activity being taxed, or PRESUMES that it is NOT a public office.
  - 51 5.8.3. Refuses to correct false information returns against those NOT engaging in the activity, and thereby through 52 omission causes EVERYONE who is the subject of such false reports to essentially be elected into a public
 53 office through a criminally false and fraudulent information return.

5.8.4. Enforces it outside of the exclusive jurisdiction of Congress or against those who are not public officers and officers of a corporation as required by Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 17(b).

5.9. The reason that direct and indirect can BOTH describe it, is that the constitution doesn't apply in the only place the activity can lawfully be exercised (per 4 U.S.C. §72), which is federal territory. It doesn't fit the constitution because it doesn't apply to the PRIVATE people who are the only proper subject of the constitution.

6. It is PRIVATE law and SPECIAL law, rather than PUBLIC law, that only applies to specific persons and things CONSENSUALLY engaged in activities on federal territory as AGENTS of the government ONLY. That is why the entire Title 26 of the U.S. Code is identified as NOT being "positive law" in 1 U.S.C. §204: Because it doesn't acquire the "force of law" or become legal evidence of an obligation until AFTER you consent to it. It is a maxim of law that anything done to you with your consent cannot form the basis for an injury or a remedy in a court of law. On the OTHER hand, if everyone fills out IRS Form W-4's and ACTS like a government statutory "employee", then for all intents and purposes it applies to EVERYONE and at least LOOKS like it is public law, even though it isn't.
7. Because it is PRIVATE and SPECIAL LAW, it is what the United States Supreme Court called "class legislation" in Pollock v. Farmers' Loan & Trust Co., 157 U.S. 429 (1895). The specific "class" to which it applies is that SUBSET of all "citizens" who are lawfully serving in an elected or appointed public office.
8. The activities SUBJECT to the tax must also occur on federal territory in order to be the lawful subject of any congressional civil enactment.
  - 8.1. All civil law is prima facie territorial.
  - 8.2. The Separation of Powers Doctrine, 40 U.S.C. §3112, 28 U.S.C. §1652, and Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 17 all forbid the enforcement of federal civil law outside the exclusive jurisdiction of Congress or within a constitutional state of the Union.
  - 8.3. If territory is divorced from the activity and the tax is enforced outside of federal territory, then the activity subject to tax becomes an act of private contract governed by the local CIVIL laws of the jurisdiction in which the activity occurred. And because it is private business activity, then there is a waiver of sovereign immunity AND it must be heard in a LOCAL state court having jurisdiction over the domicile of the public officer and NOT in a federal court. These facts are plainly stated in 40 U.S.C. §3112.
9. If it is enforced or offered in a constitutional state, then:
  - 9.1. An "invasion" has occurred under Article 4, Section 4. By "enforced", we mean that the ACTIVITY subject to the tax occurs within a constitutional state of the Union. Hence, "INTERNAL" in the phrase "INTERNAL Revenue Service", meaning INTERNAL to the government and INTERNAL to federal territory.
  - 9.2. The franchise is being illegally enforced:

"Thus, Congress having power to regulate commerce with foreign nations, and among the several States, and with the Indian tribes, may, without doubt, provide for granting coasting licenses, licenses to pilots, licenses to trade with the Indians, and any other licenses necessary or proper for the exercise of that great and extensive power; and the same observation is applicable to every other power of Congress, to the exercise of which the granting of licenses may be incident. All such licenses confer authority, and give rights to the licensee.

But very different considerations apply to the internal commerce or domestic trade of the States. Over this commerce and trade Congress has no power of regulation nor any direct control. This power belongs exclusively to the States. No interference by Congress with the business of citizens transacted within a State is warranted by the Constitution, except such as is strictly incidental to the exercise of powers clearly granted to the legislature. The power to authorize a business within a State is plainly repugnant to the exclusive power of the State over the same subject. It is true that the power of Congress to tax is a very extensive power. It is given in the Constitution, with only one exception and only two qualifications. Congress cannot tax exports, and it must impose direct taxes by the rule of apportionment, and indirect taxes by the rule of uniformity. Thus limited, and thus only, it reaches every subject, and may be exercised at discretion. But, it reaches only existing subjects. Congress cannot authorize a trade or business within a State in order to tax it."

There is no question that the income tax documented in the Internal Revenue Code, Subtitles A and C is an excise and a franchise tax upon privileges granted by Congress. The above case, Steward Machine Co. could just as easily be written to apply to the income tax, even though it addressed Social Security taxes instead of income taxes. However:

24 (a) When used in this chapter—

25 (1) The term "State", except where otherwise provided, includes the District of Columbia and the 26 Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, and when used in subchapters IV, V, VII, XI, XIX, and XXI of this chapter
 27 includes the Virgin Islands and Guam. Such term when used in subchapters III, IX, and XII of this chapter also 28 includes the Virgin Islands. Such term when used in subchapter V and in part B of this subchapter of this
 29 chapter also includes American Samoa, the Northern Mariana Islands, and the Trust Territory of the Pacific
 30 Islands. Such term when used in subchapters XIX and XXI of this chapter also includes the Northern Mariana
 31 Islands and American Samoa. In the case of Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, and Guam, subchapters I, X, and 32 XIV, and subchapter XVI of this chapter (as in effect without regard to the amendment made by section 301 of 33 the Social Security Amendments of 1972) shall continue to apply, and the term "State" when used in such 34 subchapters (but not in subchapter XVI of this chapter as in effect pursuant to such amendment after December
 35 31, 1973) includes Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, and Guam. Such term when used in subchapter XX of this 36 chapter also includes the Virgin Islands, Guam, American Samoa, and the Northern Mariana Islands. Such 37 term when used in subchapter IV of this chapter also includes American Samoa.

38 (2) The term "United States" when used in a geographical sense means, except where otherwise provided, the 39 States.

- 40 3. In the absence of express delegation of authority to tax within the CONSTITUTIONAL states, the I.R.C. Subtitles A
 41 and C and Social Security Act by default only apply within the exclusive territorial jurisdiction of Congress within 42 federal territory under Article 1, Section 8, Clause 17 ONLY.

43 "It is a well established principle of law that all federal regulation applies only within the territorial
 45 [Foley Brothers, Inc. v. Filardo, 336 U.S. 281 (1949)]

46 "The laws of Congress in respect to those matters [outside of Constitutionally delegated powers] do not extend 47 into the territorial limits of the states, but have force only in the District of Columbia, and other places that are 48 within the exclusive jurisdiction of the national government."
 49 [Caha v. U.S., 152 U.S. 211 (1894)]

50 "There is a canon of legislative construction which teaches Congress that, unless a contrary intent appears 51 [legislation] is meant to apply only within the territorial jurisdiction of the United States."

- 2 4. Because the I.R.C. Subtitles A and C and the Social Security Act are NOT expressly authorized by Congress to operate

- 35 4.2. Social Security and the Income Tax are NOT Article 1, Section 8, Clauses 1 and 3 "taxes" as legally defined.
36 They instead are Article 1, Section 8, Clause 17 taxes. The geographical definitions provided above PROVE this 37 when interpreted consistent with the rules of statutory construction indicated above.
38 4.3. The U.S. Supreme Court is confusing contexts between Congress' EXCLUSIVE legislative jurisdiction under 39 Article 1, Section 8, Clause 17 and their SUBJECT MATTER jurisdiction within states of the Union. This is 40 called a "fallacy by equivocation" and it is designed to STEAL and ENSLAVE. This fallacy is the common
41 thread on how the illegal enforcement of the tax laws initially got its footing, in fact.
42 5. CONSTITUTIONAL "States" and STATUTORY "States" are not equivalent in law, and do not fall "in the same 43 general class" under the rules of statutory construction.
44 6. The U.S. Supreme Court very deliberately refused in Steward Machine Co. v. Davis, 301 U.S. 548 (1937) to identify
45 the SPECIFIC "privilege" that is the SUBJECT of the Social Security EXCISE tax. In fact, that privilege is a public
46 office in the national government. It is, in fact, a violation of the Constitution to pay PUBLIC tax monies or "benefits"
47 to otherwise PRIVATE people. Hence, ALL "Social Security benefit recipients" MUST be statutory "employees" or 48 "federal personnel" AND public officers WITHIN the national government or a crime is being committed on a massive 49 scale consisting of the abuse of public funds.

50 "To lay, with one hand, the power of the government on the property of the citizen, and with the other to
51 bestow it upon favored individuals to aid private enterprises and build up private fortunes, is none the less a
52 robbery because it is done under the forms of law and is called taxation. This is not legislation. It is a decree
53 under legislative forms.

Nor is it taxation. 'A tax,' says Webster's Dictionary, 'is a rate or sum of money assessed on the person or property of a citizen by government for the use of the nation or State.' 'Taxes are burdens or charges imposed by the Legislature upon persons or property to raise money for public purposes.' Cooley, Const. Lim., 479.

Coulter, J., in Northern Liberties v. St. John's Church, 13 Pa.St., 104 says, very forcibly, 'I think the common mind has everywhere taken in the understanding that taxes are a public imposition, levied by authority of the government for the purposes of carrying on the government in all its machinery and operations—that they are imposed for a public purpose.' See, also Pray v. Northern Liberties, 31 Pa.St., 69; Matter of Mayor of N.Y., 11 Johns., 77; Camden v. Allen, 2 Dutch., 398; Sharpless v. Mayor, supra; Hanson v. Vernon, 27 Ia., 47; Whiting v. Fond du Lac, supra."
[Loan Association v. Topeka, 20 Wall. 655 (1874)]

"A tax, in the general understanding of the term and as used in the constitution, signifies an exaction for the support of the government. The word has never thought to connote the expropriation of money from one group for the benefit of another."
[U.S. v. Butler, 297 U.S. 1 (1936)]

7. The reason the U.S. Supreme Court in Steward Machine Company refused to identify the SPECIFIC "privilege" that is the subject of the Social Security excise tax was because:
  - 7.1. The litigants before them were NOT engaged in the public office privilege, and therefore NOT the subject of the tax.
  - 7.2. If they admitted that the "privilege" is a public office, then they:
    - 7.2.1. Would have foreclosed the illegal and unconstitutional expansion of this new franchise into the states of the Union.
    - 7.2.2. Would have provided grounds to the litigants to sue all those who compel them to participate for criminally impersonating a public officer.
  - 7.3. They knew that you cannot unilaterally "elect" yourself into public office, even with your consent, by filling out any government form, including a Social Security Form SS-5. This would completely destroy the separation of powers between PUBLIC and PRIVATE, and thereby essentially destroy ALL PRIVATE property by converting it to PUBLIC property.
8. Even IF Congress "expressly authorized" the public offices that are the subject of the Social Security and income tax excise taxes to be exercised within states of the Union, such a tax would NOT be a constitutional income tax. The reason is because it does not extend to PRIVATE people who are the subject of the Constitution or to anything BUT a "creation of Congress". The Constitution, in fact, does not even authorize "corporations" and the founding fathers loathed the idea of a government that was a corporation. Even to this day, the modern income tax is a CORPORATE income tax, and it is implemented as a tax on the PUBLIC OFFICERS within the GOVERNMENT national corporation.

"Income" has been taken to mean the same thing as used in the Corporation Excise Tax Act of 1909, in the Sixteenth Amendment, and in the various revenue acts subsequently passed. Southern Pacific Co. v. Lowe, 247 U.S. 330, 335; Merchants' L. & T. Co. v. Smetanka, 255 U.S. 509, 219. After full consideration, this Court declared that income may be defined as gain derived from capital, from labor, or from both combined, including profit gained through sale or conversion of capital. Stratton's Independence v. Howbert, 231 U.S. 399, 415; Doyle v. Mitchell Brothers Co., 247 U.S. 179, 185; Eisner v. Macomber, 252 U.S. 189, 207. And that definition has been adhered to and applied repeatedly. See, e.g., Merchants' L. & T. Co. v. Smetanka, supra; 518; Goodrich v. Edwards, 255 U.S. 527, 535; United States v. Phellis, 257 U.S. 156, 169; Miles v. Safe Deposit Co., 259 U.S. 247, 252-253; United States v. Supplee-Biddle Co., 265 U.S. 189, 194; Irwin v. Gavit, 268 U.S. 161, 167; Edwards v. Cuba Railroad, 268 U.S. 628, 633. In determining what constitutes income, substance rather than form is to be given controlling weight. Eisner v. Macomber, supra, 206. [271 U.S. 175]"

9. The first attempt at an income tax was addressed in Pollock v. Farmers' Loan & Trust Co., 158 U.S. 601 and in that case, the U.S. Supreme Court declared it unconstitutional and identified it as "class legislation". The CLASS that is the subject of the modern income tax is public offices, and these public offices are a SUBSET of the entire population, thus making it NOT a "tax", but a discriminatory measure against a SUBSET of the population who are public officers.

"The present assault upon capital is but the beginning. It will be but the stepping stone to others larger and more sweeping, until our political contest will become war of the poor against the rich; a war of growing intensity and bitterness. If the court sanctions the power of discriminating taxation, and nullifies the uniformity mandate of the constitution," as said by one who has been all his life a student of our institutions, "it will mark the hour when the sure decadence of our present government will commence."

The legislation, in the discrimination it makes, is class legislation. Whenever a distinction is made in the burdens a law imposes or in the benefits it confers on any citizens by reason of their birth, or wealth, or religion, it is class legislation, and leads inevitably to oppression and abuses, and to general unrest and disturbance in society.”
 [Pollock v. Farmers' Loan and Trust, 157 U.S. 429 (1895)]

Those who challenge our position on this subject are simply asked to answer the following questions:

1. Produce the GEOGRAPHICAL definition within both the Internal Revenue Code and the Social Security Act that EXPRESSLY includes constitutional states of the Union. Otherwise, that jurisdiction is PURPOSEFULLY excluded per the rules of statutory construction.

NOTE: If you are going to play the “includes” game in your response, then include answers to all the questions at the end of the following memorandum of law at section 14:

Meaning of the Words “includes” and “including”, Form #05.014

2. Identify EXACTLY WHAT the Congressionally granted “privilege” is that is the subject of the I.R.C. Subtitles A and C income tax and Social Security excise taxes.
3. Admit that the subject of the I.R.C. Subtitles A and C income tax and Social Security excise taxes is a public office in the national government.
4. Admit that Congress can only tax a public office when it is exercised in a geographical place that is EXPRESSLY AUTHORIZED by statute per 4 U.S.C. §72.

TITLE 4 > CHAPTER 3 > § 72

All offices attached to the seat of government shall be exercised in the District of Columbia, and not elsewhere, except as otherwise expressly provided by law.

5. Admit that Congress has NOT “expressly authorized” any of the following:
  - 5.1. The creation of any new public offices under the Internal Revenue Code.
  - 5.2. The “election” of any new public officers by filling out any tax form.
  - 5.3. The exercise of any public offices within constitutional states of the Union under the Internal Revenue Code.
6. Admit that there are no “internal revenue districts” within any constitutional state of the Union WITHIN WHICH the I.R.S. can lawfully enforce any provision of the Internal Revenue Code as authorized by 26 U.S.C. §7601.
7. Admit that the Internal Revenue Code Subtitles A and C are a public officer “kickback” tax designed to LOOK like a constitutional income tax. See and rebut:

The “Trade or Business” Scam, Form #05.001

The words you use to describe this tax can get you into trouble in court and attract insincere and covetous judges and prosecutors to call you frivolous and try to penalize you to evade addressing the issues raised in this memorandum. We would therefore strongly suggest that in describing this tax in court pleadings or to juries and in front of malicious judges, you:

6. Never describe it as either direct or indirect. It’s irrelevant and could truthfully be described as either. The U.S. Supreme Court, for instance, calls it a “direct unapportioned tax” applicable only to the District of Columbia, while the Congressional Research Service (C.R.S.) calls it an INDIRECT tax. They are BOTH right! This is a red herring.
7. NOT argue about whether the Internal Revenue Code is constitutional or unconstitutional. It is entirely constitutional. What is unconstitutional is how it is wilfully and maliciously MISREPRESENTED and illegally enforced by both the Department of Justice and the Internal Revenue Service.
8. Demand written proof of your consent to occupy or be held accountable for the duties associated with the illegally created public office that is the subject of the tax.
9. Pay SPECIAL focus on the CONTEXT for terms: STATUTORY v. CONSTITUTIONAL. These two contexts are mutually exclusive and non-overlapping for the purpose of the income tax. They will attempt many different “fallacies by equivocation” in order to mislead the jury and undermine your defense. We talk about this at length in:

Why You are a “national”, “state national”, and Constitutional but not Statutory Citizen, Form #05.006

<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

10. Instead focus on:

- 10.1. The activity that is the subject of the tax and how you, as a private nonresident in a legislatively foreign state can lawfully engage in the activity.
- 10.2. How the choice of law rules documented herein do not permit the enforcement of the tax under federal law, and therefore, that there is no jurisdiction to enforce or collect the tax.
- 10.3. WHERE the activity may be lawfully exercised and that you are NOT located in that place, which is the District of Columbia and no part of any state of the Union. See 4 U.S.C. §72.
- 10.4. The fact that it is a crime to impersonate a public office, even with your consent. 18 U.S.C. §912.
- 10.5. The fact that compelled withholding causes the crime of bribery to solicit you to be treated illegally as a public officer. 18 U.S.C. §211.

5.6.13.9.7 Summary of methods for avoiding the pitfalls of objections to the NRA Position

The important lessons learned from the previous discussion and rebuttal of objections to the Non-Resident Non-Person Position include the following:

1. It is naïve and injurious to presume that you can change your status without changing every aspect of your behavior to be consistent with that change. Those who intend to BE “nonresidents” must ACT like “nonresidents” in every conceivable way:

- 1.1. They must correct citizenship records about themselves.

Legal Notice of Change in Domicile/Citizenship Records and Divorce from the United States, Form #10.001
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

- 1.2. They must obtain a passport as a state national using the following:

USA Passport Application Attachment, Form #06.007
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

- 1.3. They must quit Social Security. Only “residents” are eligible for Social Security and can use an SSN or the corresponding TIN. See:

Resignation of Compelled Social Security Trustee, Form #06.002
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

- 1.4. They must close their financial accounts and reopen them as non-resident non-persons:

About IRS Form W-8BEN, Form #04.202
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

- 1.5. They must update the withholding paperwork with all their business associates:

Federal and State Tax Withholding Options for Private Employers, Form #09.001
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

All of the above steps are summarized in the following document on the opening page of our website, which all those who use our materials MUST abide by:

Path to Freedom, Form #09.015

2. On every occasion where they correspond with the government, they should present as much of the above exculpatory evidence as they can so that it will end up in their administrative record and can be used in their defense. Our favorite approach is to scan in our administrative record and attach the entire record as a CD to every correspondence, thus making it instantly admissible as evidence in any tax proceeding.
3. If you don't rebut the false information returns connecting you to a “trade or business”, the courts are going to presume you made an election under 26 C.F.R. §301.7701-5 (older version) above and under the Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act (F.S.I.A.), 28 U.S.C. §1605 to be treated as a “resident” alien. You will contradict yourself if you claim to be a “non-resident non-person” without also contesting the false information returns.
4. Don't ever claim to be a “taxpayer” or act like a “taxpayer”:
  - 4.1. When people accuse you of being a “taxpayer”, argue with them.
  - 4.2. Don't invoke the terms of a franchise agreement, Internal Revenue Code, Subtitles A and C, that only pertains to “taxpayers” in your own defense.
  - 4.3. Don't use “taxpayer” only forms without at least attaching something that makes it into a “nontaxpayer” form such as the following:

Tax Form Attachment, Form #04.201

5. If you are compelled, under threat of criminal prosecution, to file a tax return, you cannot use a standard IRS form without at least attaching something to clarify what you are doing such as the following:

Federal Nonresident Nonstatutory Claim for Return of Funds Unlawfully Paid to the Government-Long, Form #15.001

- 1 6. Use the techniques found in the following to combat judicial and government verbicide aimed at destroying the
2 separation of powers by confusing your citizenship status and kidnapping your identity to move it onto federal 3 territory:

Flawed Tax Arguments to Avoid, Form #08.004, Sections 5.1 and 8

<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

- 4 7. Don't ever claim to be anything that can't be found in statutes and therefore can't be proven with evidence, including:
5 7.1. "White male Christian"
6 7.2. "Not a Fourteenth Amendment citizen"
7 7.3. "Absolute, freeborn, and natural individual".
8 Instead, stick with the statutory references and definitions found in Title 8 itself, and refer to yourself with the only
9 status found in Title 8 that is in fact and indeed consistent with the circumstances of someone born within and 10 domiciled within a state of the Union on other than federal territory: State nationals pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21).
11 Then, challenge them to produce a definition of "United States" anywhere in Title 8 that includes the exclusive
12 jurisdiction of a state of the Union. Without such an express definition, states of the Union are presumed to be 13 purposefully excluded by implication:

14 "When a statute includes an explicit definition, we must follow that definition, even if it varies from that
15 term's ordinary meaning. Meese v. Keene, 481 U.S. 465, 484-485 (1987) ("It is axiomatic that the statutory 16 definition of the term excludes unstated meanings of that term"); Colausti v. Franklin, 439 U.S. at 392-393, n.

17 10 ("As a rule, 'a definition which declares what a term 'means' . . . excludes any meaning that is not stated");

18 Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Lenroot, 323 U.S. 490, 502 (1945); Fox v. Standard Oil Co. of N.J., 294 U.S.

19 87, 95-96 (1935) (Cardozo, J.); see also 2A N. Singer, Sutherland on Statutes and Statutory Construction §
20 47.07, p. 152, and n. 10 (5th ed. 1992) (collecting cases). That is to say, the statute, read "as a whole," post at
21 998 [530 U.S. 943] (THOMAS, J., dissenting), leads the reader to a definition. That definition does not include
22 the Attorney General's restriction -- "the child up to the head." Its words, "substantial portion," indicate the
23 contrary."
24 [Stenberg v. Carhart, 530 U.S. 914 (2000)]

25 "It is axiomatic that the statutory definition of the term excludes unstated meanings of that term. Colausti v.
26 Franklin, 439 U.S. 379, 392, and n. 10 (1979). Congress' use of the term "propaganda" in this statute, as indeed
27 in other legislation, has no pejorative connotation. As judges, it is our duty to [481 U.S. 485] construe
28 legislation as it is written, not as it might be read by a layman, or as it might be understood by someone who
29 has not even read it."
30 [Meese v. Keene, 481 U.S. 465, 484 (1987)]

31 "As a rule, 'a definition which declares what a term "means" . . . excludes any meaning that is not stated'"
32 [Colausti v. Franklin, 439 U.S. 379 (1979), n. 10]

- 33 8. Do everything you can to prevent being victimized by presumptions of both the IRS, the DOJ, and the Courts by 34 attaching the following to all your pleadings:
35 8.1. Federal Pleading/Motion/Petition Attachment, Litigation Tool #01.002
36 <http://sedm.org/Litigation/LitIndex.htm>
37 8.2. Citizenship, Domicile, and Tax Status Options, Form #10.003
38 <http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>
39 8.3. Affidavit of Citizenship, Domicile, and Tax Status, Form #02.001
40 <http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>
41 9. On every correspondence and every occasion you have to communicate with the government, rebut the presumption
42 that you are not engaged in a "trade or business" as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26):
43 9.1. Regularly rebut all false information returns using the following:

Correcting Erroneous Information Returns, Form #04.001

<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

- 44 9.2. Submit the proper withholding paperwork that correctly represents your status as a nonresident who is not 45 engaged in a "trade or business". See item 4.3 above and the following:

Federal and State Tax Withholding Options for Private Employers, Form #09.001

5.6.13.10 How To Correct Government Records to Reflect Your True Status as a Non-Resident Non-Person

We, as natural persons, declare ourselves to be nonresident aliens for the purposes of federal income taxes by:

1. Reading and carefully studying our article on “domicile”, so we know all the ins and outs of what makes a person a “resident”. You will need this information later when filling out government forms that ask you about your “permanent address” and “residence address”. If you haven't read this article, you won't understand what they are asking for. See:

Why Domicile and Becoming a “Taxpayer” Require Your Consent, Form #05.002

2. Correcting government records to remove false presumptions about our citizenship status. This is done by:
  - 2.1. Filling out and resubmitting any form that indicated a citizenship status, such as the SS-5 Social Security application, Jury Summons, Voter registration, etc. On these forms we fill out and resubmit, we must.
    - 2.1.1. Remove indications of statutory “citizen of the [federal] United States” status under 8 U.S.C. §1401.
    - 2.1.2. If we checked “U.S. person” (as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701\(a\)\(30\)), then we uncheck it.
    - 2.1.3. If we checked “U.S. resident” or simply “resident”, unchecking it.
    - 2.1.4. Indicate that we are “national” or a “state national” as defined in 8 U.S.C. §1101\(a\)\(21\) , 8 U.S.C. §1101\(a\)\(22\)\(B\), or 8 U.S.C. §1452.
  - 2.2. Applying for a new passport using Form DS-11 and indicating we are a “national” under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) but not a statutory “citizen” under 8 U.S.C. §1401. See:

Getting a USA Passport as a “state national”, Form #09.007

- 2.3. Submitting our form below:

Legal Notice of Change in Domicile/Citizenship Records and Divorce from the United States, Form #10.001

<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

3. Requesting certified copies of our passport records, including those developed in step 1.2 above, pursuant to the article below, for use as legal proof of our status to the appropriate financial institutions:

<http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/Forms/Emancipation/DOS-CertDS11.htm>
4. Closing all financial accounts we have that have Social Security Numbers attached to them and reopening them with IRS Form W-8BEN's and without Social Security Numbers. 26 C.F.R. §301.6109-1 says that the use of a Social Security Number creates a prima facie presumption that we are a “U.S. person” with a domicile in the District of Columbia who is “effectively connected with a trade or business”. For instructions on how to open financial accounts without SSNs and using the W-8, see:

About IRS Form W-8BEN, Form #04.202

5. Changing our employment withholding forms by replacing any IRS Form W-4s with AMENDED IRS Form W-8 or W-8 BEN as follows:
  - 5.1. Do NOT use the original, because you are NOT a “Beneficial Owner”.
  - 5.2. As an alternative, you can use the form below as an even better substitute, if the recipient will accept it:

Affidavit of Citizenship, Domicile, and Tax Status, Form #02.001

<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

- 5.3. Use the instructions below to fill out the AMENDED IRS Form W-8BEN found at:

About IRS Form W-8BEN, Form #04.202

- 5.4. Provide the AMENDED W-8BEN form or our Form 02.001 above to:

5.4.1. Financial institutions when opening accounts.

5.4.2. Our private employer to stop illegal withholding of all donations (fraudulently disguised as “taxes”) from our pay. Guidance on how to do this is contained in the following free resource:

Federal and State Tax Withholding Options for Private Employers

<http://famguardian.org/Publications/FedStateWHOOptions/FedStateWHOOptions.pdf>

5.4.3. The IRS and state revenue agencies with every correspondence we send to them. It might also be helpful to attach the following form:

Affidavit of Citizenship, Domicile, and Tax Status, Form #02.001

<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

6. Not deducting or withholding Subtitle A federal donations on any of our earnings, as permitted by the applicable regulations. See the following free book:

Federal and State Tax Withholding Options for Private Employers

<http://famguardian.org/Publications/FedStateWHOOptions/FedStateWHOOptions.pdf>

- 1 7. Educating financial institutions and private employers, as necessary, about the laws on withholding and reporting so
 2 that they do not submit false reports connecting us to a “trade or business”. Sue them under 26 U.S.C. §7434 for filing
 3 of false information returns if they refuse to obey the laws. See:
 4 7.1. Income Tax Withholding and Reporting Course, Form #12.004

 8 7.3. Tax Withholding and Reporting: What the Law Says, Form #04.103
 9 <http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>
- 10 8. Regularly and repeatedly rebutting all false information returns, such as W-2, 1042-S, 1098, and 1099, that might have 11 been filed on us at any point in the past, and which are filed at any point in future from that point on. See:

 23 8.7. Correcting Erroneous IRS Form W-2's, Form #04.006:
 24 <http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>
- 25 9. If we file income tax returns, using the AMENDED 1040NR form instead of the 1040 form. IRS Document 7130
 26 reveals that the IRS 1040 form is only for “resident aliens” as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701\(b\)\(1\)\(A\), or statutory 27 “citizens” when abroad under 26 U.S.C. §911, who are ALSO resident aliens coming under a tax treaty with a foreign
 28 country. “Nonresident aliens” as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701\(b\)\(1\)\(B\) cannot use the IRS Form 1040 without making
 29 an “election” to become a “resident” pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §6103(g) or (h) or 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(4)(B). On this form, 30 we must:
 31 9.1. Not take any deductions. Nonresident aliens cannot take deductions against earnings not connected with a “trade
 32 or business” pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §162 because only those connected with a “trade or business” can take 33 deductions. A person with no “trade or business” income needs no deductions anyway.
 34 9.2. Indicate zero for “trade or business” income because we don't hold “public office” as defined in 26 U.S.C.
 35 §7701(a)(26).
 36 9.3. Indicate zero for earnings not connected with a “trade or business” unless we receive payments from the U.S.
 37 government, such as Social Security. 26 U.S.C. §861\(a\)\(8\) and 26 U.S.C. §871\(a\)\(3\) say that Social Security
 38 payments must be included as earnings from within the District of Columbia, which is what “United States” is

 44 with a “trade or business”, and this “trade or business” is the same “trade or business” referenced in the Internal 45 Revenue Code at 26 U.S.C. §7701\(a\)\(26\) and 26 U.S.C. §162. If you are not a “public official” or if you do not

 51 Revenue Code, codified in 26 U.S.C. §7343, incidentally is EXACTLY the same as the above. Therefore, all tax
 52 crimes require that the violator must be acting in a fiduciary capacity as a Trustee of some kind or another, whether it

1 be as an Executor over the estate of a deceased "taxpayer", or over the Social Security Trust maintained for the benefit

4 Nonresident aliens pay on a graduated scale for income derived from the "trade or business"/public office franchise within
5 the [federal] United States (corporation) in accordance with 26 U.S.C. §871\(b\). They pay a flat 30% on earnings from
6 within the District of Columbia and nothing on earnings from within states of the Union under 26 U.S.C. §871(a). When
7 we declare ourselves as nonresident aliens, we should be very careful to properly change our citizenship status as indicated

15 The hardest part for most people is completing the AMENDED IRS Form W-8 or W-8BEN, which is the form you have to
 16 submit to a bank, employer, or financial institution declaring yourself to be a non-resident non-person and thereby
 17 eliminating the need to withhold on your income. The problem they have is with the definition of the term “nonresident 18 alien” on the W-8BEN form, which is:

19           “Any individual who is not a citizen or resident of the United States is a nonresident alien individual. An
 20 alien individual meeting either the “green card test” or the “substantial presence test” for the calendar year is a
 21 resident alien. Any person not meeting either test is a nonresident alien individual.

22           “Additionally, an alien individual who is a resident of a foreign country under the residence article of an
 23 income tax treaty, or an alien individual who is a resident of Puerto Rico, Guam, the Commonwealth of the 24 Northern Mariana Islands, the U.S. Virgin Islands, or American Samoa is a nonresident alien individual. See
 25 Pub 519, U.S. Tax Guide for Aliens, for more information on resident and nonresident alien status.”

26 IRS Publication 519: U.S. Tax Guide for Aliens says the following, which clarifies this:

27           “If you are an alien (not a U.S. citizen), you are considered a nonresident alien unless you meet one of the two 28 tests described next under Resident Aliens.”
 29 [IRS Publication 519]

36 What you need to remember is that if you follow the procedures we give to correct erroneous government records
 37 describing your citizenship and domicile status found in section 2.5.3.13 of the Sovereignty Forms and Instructions
 38 Manual, Form #10.005, then you become an “national” and a “non-resident non-person” for the purposes of the tax code.
 39 Once you become a “non-resident non-person”, you regain your constitutional rights and simultaneously deprive the federal 40 government of jurisdiction over you. That is why we say that this step is VERY IMPORTANT!

41 IRS Publication 519, after the above clarification of the definition of “alien”, then talks about the two tests, which include
 42 the “Green Card Test” and the “Substantial Presence Test”. People look at the Substantial Presence Test and erroneously
 43 conclude that they pass the test and thereby qualify as resident aliens. They point to IRS Publication 519, which states that 44 the term “United States” includes the 50 Union states. This is true, but misleading. The term “United States” includes
 45 federal” enclaves” or “areas” within the 50 Union states but NOT nonfederal areas! Furthermore, one is a federal

1 statutory "U.S. citizen" under 8 U.S.C. §1401 if they were born or naturalized in the District of Columbia or a territory of
2 the U.S. but NOT the nonfederal areas of the 50 Union states. The Fourteenth Amendment section 1 states the following:

3 "Section 1. All persons born or naturalized in the United States, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are
4 citizens of the United States and of the state wherein they reside. No state shall make or enforce any law which
5 shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States; nor shall any state deprive any 6 person of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law; nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction the
7 equal protection of the laws."

8 The U.S. Supreme Court has clearly defined the meaning of the phrase "and subject to the jurisdiction thereof" in Elk v.
9 Wilkins, 112 U.S. 94 (1884):

10 "The persons declared to be citizens are ALL PERSONS BORN OR NATURALIZED IN THE UNITED 11 STATES AND SUBJECT TO THE JURISDICTION THEREOF. The evident meaning of these last words is,
12 not merely subject in some respect or degree to the jurisdiction of the United States, but COMPLETELY
13 SUBJECT [e.g., under Article 1, Section 8, Clause 17 of the Constitution] to their political jurisdiction, and
14 owing them direct and immediate allegiance. And the words relate to the time of birth in the one case, as they
15 do to the time of naturalization in the other. Persons not thus subject to the jurisdiction of the United States at 16 the time of birth cannot become so afterwards, except by being naturalized, either individually, as by
17 proceedings under the naturalization acts; or collectively, as by the force of a treaty by which foreign territory
18 is acquired. Indians born within the territorial limits of the United States, members of, and owing immediate
19 allegiance to, one of the Indiana tribes, (an alien though dependent power,) although in a geographical sense
20 born in the United States, are no more 'born in the United States and subject to the jurisdiction thereof,' within 21 the meaning of the first section of the fourteenth amendment, than the children of subjects of any foreign 22 government born within the domain of that government, or the children born within the United States, of 23 ambassadors or other public ministers of foreign nations. ."

25 jurisdiction". "their political jurisdiction" in the above simply means the exercise of political rights, which include voting
26 and jury service within states of the Union and nothing more. It doesn't mean that they are "completely subject" to the 27 legislative jurisdiction of any act of Congress or to federal statutes under Article 1, Section 8, Clause 17 of the Constitution.
28 You must be a "citizen" or "resident" under an "act of Congress" or federal statute in order to be subject to the general or 29 exclusive legislative jurisdiction of Congress. Now the above considerations do not preclude "nationals" from electing to 30 be federal "U.S.** citizens" under 8 U.S.C. §1401, which the federal government loves to do because that is how they
31 manufacture "taxpayers" out of formerly sovereign Americans! Technically, and by law, however, a person born in a state
32 of the Union isn't a federal "U.S.** citizen" under 8 U.S.C. §1401. Natural persons born in states of the Union, however,
33 are "citizens of the United States" under the 14th Amendment because the term "United States" in the Constitution means
34 the collective states of the Union. Quite clearly, most people have never been statutory "U.S.** citizens" under 8 U.S.C.
35 §1401, but instead are "nationals" and "state nationals" under the following statutes:

37 Because of these considerations, it's clear that there is IRS deception going on with IRS Form W-8BEN. "United States",
38 in the context of natural persons, cannot include nonfederal areas of the 50 Union states because of Constitutional
39 prohibitions against direct taxes found in Article 1, Section 9, Clause 4 and Article 1, Section 2, Clause 3 of the U.S.
40 Constitution. Remember!:

You should NOT and CANNOT rely on fraudulent IRS publications, including the W-8 for W-8BEN, to sustain a position or a good-faith belief, or even a fact, and therefore you should not assume that "United States" includes non-federal areas within the 50 Union states. This is covered extensively in section 3.19 of this book. Because you can't rely on IRS
Publications or forms to sustain a position, then you have no choice but to rely on the law, which includes the Internal Revenue Code and the Treasury Regulations found in 26 C.F.R. The law is so ambiguous that it is "Void for Vagueness"
(as section 5.9 of this book concludes) and there is no way for you to determine your liability or even if you are truthfully answering the questions on forms that don't even define the terms they are using. And even if they defined the terms, you couldn't trust them! This is described in our pamphlet:

Reasonable Belief About Income Tax Liability, Form #05.007
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

41 Another interesting fact to consider when you fill out your W-8 or W-8BEN form is that the entire Internal Revenue Code
42 does not define the term "individual" to mean "natural person"! The closest it comes is in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(1), where it
43 defines "person" to include "an individual" but not a natural person, which is the proper legal term. Note the phrase "an individual” instead of “all individuals”. They are talking about a specific type of individual and not all natural persons generally. These conclusions are confirmed by the content of section 3.12.1.10 earlier. 26 U.S.C. §6331\(a\) confirms that the specific person who is the only type of “individual” in the Internal Code is a “public officers” or federal instrumentality, in fact, because this is the only person against whom distraint (force) is authorized. The word “individual” is also then never defined anywhere in the Internal Revenue Code, so we have to use the legal definition. If we look up the definition of “individual” in Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, page 773, we find:

“Individual. As a noun, this term denotes a single person as distinguished from a group or class, and also, very commonly, a private or natural person as distinguished from a partnership, corporation, or association; but it is said that this restrictive signification is not necessarily inherent in the word, and that it may, in proper cases, include artificial persons.”
[Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 773]

So naming “an individual” in 26 U.S.C. §7701\(a\)\(1\) as a “person” upon whom a tax is “imposed” in 26 U.S.C. §1 still doesn’t imply natural persons like you and me. As a matter of fact, according to the above definition from the legal dictionary, “individual” most commonly refers to artificial persons, which in this case are corporations and partnerships involved in foreign commerce as we said earlier in this chapter. These corporations, by the way, are the only entities involved in taxable activities under the 861 source position we cited in section 5.6.10 and following. The only thing Congress has done by using the word “individual” in the definition of “person” is create a circular definition. Such a circular definition is also called a “tautology”: a word which is defined using itself, which we would argue doesn’t define anything! If Congress wants to include natural persons as those liable for the income tax, then they must explicitly say so or the Internal Revenue Code is void for vagueness. At least the California Revenue and Taxation Code defines it correctly:

17005. “Individual” means a natural person
[California Revenue and Taxation Code, Section 17005].

Since we can’t find the definition of “individual” in the Internal Revenue Code, we concluded that it must be buried somewhere in the regulations in order to hide the truth. After searching all 17,000 pages of the regulations (26 C.F.R.) electronically, we found that definition and it confirmed our suspicions. Below is the only definition of “individual” we could find anywhere in the Internal Revenue Code (26 U.S.C.) or the Treasury Regulations (26 C.F.R.), which also appeared earlier in section 5.5.1:

26 C.F.R. 1.1441-1 Requirement for the deduction and withholding of tax on payments to foreign persons.

(c) Definitions

(3) Individual.

(i) Alien individual.

The term alien individual means an individual who is not a citizen or a national of the United States. See Sec. 1.1-1(c).

(ii) Nonresident alien individual.

The term nonresident alien individual means a person described in section 7701(b)(1)(B), an alien individual who is a resident of a foreign country under the residence article of an income tax treaty and Sec. 301.7701(b)-7(a)(1) of this chapter, or an alien individual who is a resident of Puerto Rico, Guam, the Commonwealth of Northern Mariana Islands, the U.S. Virgin Islands, or American Samoa as determined under Sec. 301.7701(b)-1(d) of this chapter. An alien individual who has made an election under section 6013 (g) or (h) to be treated as a resident of the United States is nevertheless treated as a nonresident alien individual for purposes of withholding under chapter 3 of the Code and the regulations thereunder.

Did you notice that the definition of “individual” did not include “U.S. citizens”? Did you also notice that the definitions were not qualified to only apply to a specific chapter or section? That means that they apply generally throughout the Internal Revenue Code and implementing regulations! Therefore, we must conclude that the REAL “individual” in the phrase “U. S. Individual Income Tax Return” (1040 form) that Congress and the IRS are referring to can only mean “nonresident aliens” and “aliens”. That is why they don’t just come out and say “U.S. Citizen Tax Return” on the form.

1 So there you have it: if you were born in one of the 50 Union states outside of the federal zone and therefore are a “national
2 of the United States*** of America”, then you aren't a statutory “U.S. citizen” defined in 8 U.S.C. §1401 or an “resident

5 opens with a definition of citizenship—not only citizenship of the United States[***], but citizenship of the
6 states. No such definition was previously found in the Constitution, nor had any attempt been made to define
7 it by act of Congress. It had been the occasion of much discussion in the courts, by the executive departments
8 and in the public journals. It had been said by eminent judges that no man was a citizen of the United
9 States[***] except as he was a citizen of one of the states composing the Union. Those therefore, who had
10 been born and resided always in the District of Columbia or in the territories, though within the United
11 States[*], were not citizens. Whether this proposition was sound or not had never been judicially decided.”
12 [Slaughter-House Cases, 83 U.S. (16 Wall.) 36, 21 L.Ed. 394 (1873)]

14 The Court today holds that the Citizenship Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment has no application to Bellei
15 [an 8 U.S.C. §1401 STATUTORY citizen]. The Court first notes that Afroyim was essentially a case construing
16 the Citizenship Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment. Since the Citizenship Clause declares that: ‘All persons
17 born or naturalized in the United States * * * are citizens of the United States * * *.’ the Court reasons that the 18 protections against involuntary expatriation declared in Afroyim do not protect all American citizens, but only
19 those ‘born or naturalized in the United States.’ Afroyim, the argument runs, was naturalized in this country so
20 he was protected by the Citizenship Clause, but Bellei, since he acquired his American citizenship at birth in 21 Italy as a foreignborn child of an American citizen, was neither born nor naturalized in the United States and,
22 hence, falls outside the scope of the Fourteenth Amendment guarantees declared in Afroyim. One could hardly 23 call this a generous reading of the great purposes the Fourteenth Amendment was adopted to bring about.
24 While conceding that Bellei is an American citizen, the majority states: ‘He simply is not a Fourteenth-
25 Amendment-first-sentence citizen.’ Therefore, the majority reasons, the congressional revocation of his 26 citizenship is not barred by the Constitution. I cannot accept the Court's conclusion that the Fourteenth
27 Amendment protects the citizenship of some Americans and not others. [ . . . ]

28 The Court today puts aside the Fourteenth Amendment as a standard by which to measure congressional 29 action with respect to citizenship, and substitutes in its place the majority's own vague notions of ‘fairness.’
30 The majority takes a new step with the recurring theme that the test of constitutionality is the Court's own
31 view of what is ‘fair, reasonable, and right.’ Despite the concession that Bellei was admittedly an American
32 citizen, and despite the holding in Afroyim that the Fourteenth Amendment has put citizenship, once
33 conferred, beyond the power of Congress to revoke, the majority today upholds the revocation of Bellei's
34 citizenship on the ground that the congressional action was not ‘irrational or arbitrary or unfair.’ The 35 majority applies the ‘shock-the-conscience’ test to uphold, rather than strike, a federal statute. It is a
36 dangerous concept of constitutional law that allows the majority to conclude that, because it cannot say the 37 statute is ‘irrational or arbitrary or unfair,’ the statute must be constitutional.

39 Since the Court this Term has already downgraded citizens receiving public welfare, Wyman v. James, 400 U.S.
40 309, 91 S.Ct. 381, 27 L.Ed.2d. 408 (1971), and citizens having the misfortune to be illegitimate, Labine v.
41 Vincent, 401 U.S. 532, 91 S.Ct. 1917, 28 L.Ed.2d. 288, I suppose today's decision downgrading citizens born
42 outside the United States should have been expected. Once again, as in James and Labine, the Court's opinion
43 makes evident that its holding is contrary to earlier decisions. Concededly, petitioner was a citizen at birth, not 44 by constitutional right, but only through operation of a federal statute.
45 [Rogers v. Bellei, 401 U.S. 815 (1971)]

46 The only other thing you can be at that point is a “nonresident alien individual” and still be the “individual” mentioned in 47 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(1) who is the subject of the income tax in Subtitle A! If the Internal Revenue Code was written
48 unambiguously, then it would define “Individual” to mean only corporations or partnerships involved in foreign commerce,
49 which is why they chose to define it ambiguously in the first place! For everyone else who aren't corporations, the money
50 they pay to the IRS is a donation and not a tax! Are you blown away yet? Are you MAD yet?

51 Investigating this matter of the definition of “person” further, we find that there is a dead pointer in 4 U.S.C. §110(a) which
52 points to a repealed 26 U.S.C. §3797 definition of the term "person". You can't know whether you , as a “natural person”
53 fit the description of "person" found in the tax code unless and until it is clearly and unambiguously defined to mean
54 “natural person”, which it is not anywhere in subtitles A and C. The closest realistic thing we have to a definition of the 55 term "person" is in 26 C.F.R. §301.6671-1(b), which defines who penalties may be levied against under Subtitle F of the 56 Internal Revenue Code:

57 [Code of Federal Regulations]

1 [Title 26, Volume 17, Parts 300 to 499]

 6 TITLE 26--INTERNAL REVENUE
 7 Additions to the Tax and Additional Amounts--Table of Contents
 8 Sec. 301.6671-1 Rules for application of assessable penalties.
 9 ...

10 (b) Person defined. For purposes of subchapter B of chapter 68, the term "person"
 11 includes an officer or employee of a corporation, or a member
 12 or employee of a partnership, who as such officer, employee, 13 or member is under a duty to perform the act in respect of 14 which the violation occurs.

15 The reason the government won't define the term "person" is because the U.S. Supreme Court in Eisner v. Macomber, 252
 16 U.S. 189 (1920) ruled the following, which defines clearly that the true meaning of "person" in the tax code is 17 "corporation":

18 "In order, therefore, that the [apportionment] clauses cited from article I [§2, cl. 3 and §9, cl. 4] of the 19 Constitution may have proper force and effect ...[I]t becomes essential to distinguish between what is an what 20 is not 'income,' ...according to truth and substance, without regard to form. Congress cannot by any definition
 21 it may adopt conclude the matter, since it cannot by legislation alter the Constitution, from which alone, it
 22 derives its power to legislate, and within those limitations alone that power can be lawfully exercised... [pg.
 23 207] ...After examining dictionaries in common use we find little to add to the succinct definition adopted in two
 24 cases arising under the Corporation Tax Act of 1909, Stratton's Independence v. Howbert, 231 U.S. 399, 415,
 25 34 S.Sup.Ct. 136, 140 [58 L.Ed. 285] and Doyle v. Mitchell Bros. Co., 247 U.S. 179, 185, 38 S.Sup.Ct. 467,

27 [emphasis added]

28 Among the cases referred to above in Eisner in the definition of "income" included the case of Doyle v. Mitchell Brothers
 29 Co., 247 U.S. 179, 185, 38 S.Ct. 467 (1918), which further helps us define the term "income" and who the "person" is that 30 is liable for tax on that income.

31 "...Whatever difficulty there may be about a precise scientific definition of 'income,' it imports, as used here,
 32 something entirely distinct from principal or capital either as a subject of taxation or as a measure of the tax;
 33 conveying rather the idea of gain or increase arising from
 34 corporate activities."

35 [Doyle v. Mitchell Brothers Co., 247 U.S. 179, 185, 38 S.Ct. 467 (1918), emphasis added]

 37 399, 414, 58 L.Ed. 285, 34 Sup.Ct. 136 (1913):

38 "This court had decided in the Pollock Case that the income tax law of 1894 amounted in effect to a direct tax
 39 upon property, and was invalid because not apportioned according to populations, as prescribed by the 40 Constitution. The act of 1909 avoided this difficulty by imposing not an income tax, but an excise tax upon the 41 conduct of business in a corporate capacity, measuring, however, the amount of tax by the income of the 42 corporation...Flint v. Stone Tracy Co., 220 U.S. 107, 55 L.Ed. 389, 31 Sup.Ct.Rep. 342, Ann. Cas."

43 So the real "person" to which Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A applies is a "corporation", and corporations can be 44 "citizens" and "residents" just as readily as natural persons.

45 "A corporation is a citizen, resident, or inhabitant of the state or country by or under the laws of which it was 46 created, and of that state or country only."
 47 [19 Corpus Juris Secundum (C.J.S.), Corporations, §886 (2003)]

48 When the Supreme Court says above that "income" means corporate profit, it means corporate profit from corporations
 49 involved in foreign commerce that comes under federal jurisdiction. Intrastate or interstate commerce of state-chartered

1 corporations are exempt of the prohibition against taxes on exports from any state found in Article 1, Section 9, Clause 5 of
2 the U.S. Constitution. To tax a government privilege requires receipt of the privilege, and state corporations do not receive
3 privileges, including the privilege of existing, from the federal government. Furthermore, even though the income tax is an
4 indirect excise tax on privileges, it becomes a direct tax if it is levied upon natural persons, even if these persons are in
5 receipt of privileges! A tax cannot be indirect unless it is levied on businesses and other artificial entities other than natural
6 persons. Such artificial entities, according to the U.S. Supreme Court, can only be corporations involved in foreign 7 commerce.

8 After studying the nonresident alien issue exhaustively, we reiterate the very important table found in section 5.2.1, which 9 clearly establishes jurisdiction of the Federal government.

Table 5-77: Limits of U.S. Sovereignty by Subject Matter

#	Subject matter	Legal reference	"Federal zone" Jurisdiction? (U.S.)	Sovereign 50 Union states jurisdiction? (nonfederal areas, U.S.* or U.S.)
1	Immigration and naturalization	Constitution 1:8:4	YES	YES
2	Regulate/tax foreign commerce (excises on imports )	Constitution 1:8:3	YES	YES
3	Tax exports from sovereign states	Constitution 1:9:5	NO	NO
4	Coining money and punishing counterfeiting	Constitution 1:8:5	YES	YES
5	Establish military, forts, magazines	Constitution 1:8:12 thru 1:8:16	YES (on land ceded to U.S. by states)	NO
6	Subtitle A-C personal income taxes on natural persons	Constitution 1:2:3 and 1:9:4 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) 26 U.S.C. §77019(a)(10) U.S. v. Spelar, 338 U.S. 217 (1949)	YES	NO
7	Subtitle A and C personal income taxes on corporations involved in foreign commerce	Constitution 1:8:1 and 1:8:3	YES	YES
8	Subtitle D and E excise taxes on U.S. chartered licenses and corporations only	Constitution 1:8:1 and 1:8:3	YES	YES

EXAMPLE: 1:9:4=Article 1, Section 9, Clause 4 of the U.S. Constitution.

NOTE: The federal government may only reach inside the borders of a sovereign state for the sake of enforcing areas over which the government has subject matter jurisdiction, because it cannot have territorial jurisdiction and cannot be sovereign there. Sovereignty is only exercised when the type of jurisdiction is exclusively territorial. This point is very important to remember when you read the Constitution.

Items #6 and 7 above clearly establish the lack of jurisdiction of the federal government to tax natural persons outside of the federal zone. The feds only have jurisdiction to tax profits of corporations located outside of the federal zone that are involved in foreign commerce but they can do so only under Subtitles D and E of the Internal Revenue Code and not under Subtitles A and C. They can't tax natural persons because natural (biological) persons don't make "profit" as it is legally defined. That is why the term "United States" found on the W-8BEN form coming under Subtitle A cannot mean nonfederal areas inside the 50 Union states if the person completing the form is other than a corporation resident in the federal zone. Sneaky, huh?

5.6.14 The Information Return Scam

As we said in the preceding section, the income tax described by Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A is a franchise and excise tax upon "public offices" within the U.S. government, which the code defines as a "trade or business". Before an income tax can lawfully be enforced or collected, the subject of the tax must be connected to the activity with court-admissible evidence. Information returns are the method by which the activity is connected to the subject of the tax under the authority of 26 U.S.C. §6041(a). When this connection is made, the person engaging in the excise taxable activity is called “effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business within the United States”.

(a) Payments of $600 or more

All persons engaged in a trade or business and making payment in the course of such trade or business to another person, of rent, salaries, wages, premiums, annuities, compensations, remunerations, emoluments, or other fixed or determinable gains, profits, and income (other than payments to which section 6042 (a)(1), 6044 (a)(1), 6047 (e), 6049 (a), or 6050N (a) applies, and other than payments with respect to which a statement is required under the authority of section 6042 (a)(2), 6044 (a)(2), or 6045), of $600 or more in any taxable year, or, in the case of such payments made by the United States, the officers or employees of the United States having information as to such payments and required to make returns in regard thereto by the regulations hereinafter provided for, shall render a true and accurate return to the Secretary, under such regulations and in such form and manner and to such extent as may be prescribed by the Secretary, setting forth the amount of such gains, profits, and income, and the name and address of the recipient of such payment.

The government cannot lawfully regulate private conduct. The ability to regulate private conduct is, in fact, “repugnant to the constitution” as held by the U.S. Supreme Court. The only thing the government can regulate is “public conduct” and the “public rights” and franchises that enforce or implement it. Consequently, the government must deceive private parties into submitting false reports connecting their private labor and private property to such a public use, public purpose, and public office in order that they can usurp jurisdiction over it and thereby tax and plunder it.

In a sense, the function of an information return therefore is to:

1. Provide evidence that the owner is consensually and lawfully engaged in the “trade or business” and public office franchise. These reports cannot lawfully be filed if this is not the case. 26 U.S.C. §7206 and 7207 make it a crime to file a false report.
2. Donate formerly private property described on the report to a public use, a public purpose, and a public office with the consent of the owner without any immediate or monetary compensation in order to procure the “benefits” incident to participation in the franchise.
3. Subject the property to excise taxation upon the “trade or business” activity.
4. Subject the property to use and control by the government:

“Men are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable rights, -life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness;’ and to ‘secure,’ not grant or create, these rights, governments are instituted. That property [or income] which a man has honestly acquired he retains full control of, subject to these limitations: First, that he shall not use it to his neighbor’s injury, and that does not mean that he must use it for his neighbor’s benefit [e.g. SOCIAL SECURITY, Medicare, and every other public “benefit”]; second, that if he devotes it to a public use, he gives to the public a right to control that use; and third, that whenever the public needs require, the public may take it upon payment of due compensation.”
[\[Budd v. People of State of New York, 143 U.S. 517 \(1892\)\]](#)

On the other hand, if the information return:

1. Was filed against an owner of the property described who is not lawfully engaged in a public office or a “trade or business” in the U.S. government. . .OR
2. Was filed in a case where the owner of the private property did not consent to donate the property described to a public use and a public office by signing a contract or agreement authorizing such as an IRS Form W-4. . .OR
3. Was filed mistakenly or fraudulently.

. . .then the following crimes have occurred:

1. A violation of the Fifth Amendment Takings Clause has occurred:

U.S. Constitution, Fifth Amendment

No person shall be held to answer for a capital, or otherwise infamous crime, unless on a presentment or indictment of a Grand Jury, except in cases arising in the land or naval forces, or in the Militia, when in actual service in time of War or public danger; nor shall any person be subject for the same offence to be twice put in jeopardy of life or limb; nor shall be compelled in any criminal case to be a witness against himself, nor be deprived of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law; nor shall private property be taken for public use, without just compensation.*

2. A violation of due process has occurred. Any taking of property without the consent of the owner is a violation of due process of law.
3. The subject of the information return is being compelled to impersonate a public officer in criminal violation of 18 U.S.C. §912.

TITLE 18 > PART I > CHAPTER 43 > § 912
§ 912. Officer or employee of the United States

Whoever falsely assumes or pretends to be an officer or employee acting under the authority of the United States or any department, agency or officer thereof, and acts as such, or in such pretended character demands or obtains any money, paper, document, or thing of value, shall be fined under this title or imprisoned not more than three years, or both.

4. An unlawful conversion of private property to public property has occurred in criminal violation of 18 U.S.C. §654. Only officers of the government called “withholding agents” appointed under the authority of 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(16) and the I.R.C. can lawfully file these information returns or withhold upon the proceeds of the transaction. All withholding and reporting agents are public officers, not private parties, whether they receive direct compensation for acting in that capacity or not.

§ 654. Officer or employee of United States converting property of another

Whoever, being an officer or employee of the United States or of any department or agency thereof, embezzles or wrongfully converts to his own use the money or property of another which comes into his possession or under his control in the execution of such office or employment, or under color or claim of authority as such officer or employee, shall be fined under this title or not more than the value of the money and property thus embezzled or converted, whichever is greater, or imprisoned not more than ten years, or both; but if the sum embezzled is $1,000 or less, he shall be fined under this title or imprisoned not more than one year, or both.

The “Trade or Business” Scam, Form #05.001, Section 2
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

Nearly all private Americans are not in fact and in deed lawfully engaged in a “public office” and cannot therefore serve within such an office without committing the crime of impersonating a public officer. This is exhaustively proven in the following:

The “Trade or Business” Scam, Form #05.001, Section 11
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

What makes someone a “private American” is, in fact, that they are not lawfully engaged in a public office or any other government franchise. All franchises, in fact, make those engaged into public officers of one kind or another and cause them to forfeit their status as a private person and give up all their constitutional rights in the process. See:

Government Instituted Slavery Using Franchises, Form #05.030
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

1 IRS therefore mis-represents and mis-enforces the Internal Revenue Code by abusing their tax forms and their
2 untrustworthy printed propaganda as a method:

- 3 1. To unlawfully create public offices in the government in places they are forbidden to even exist pursuant to 4 U.S.C.
4 §72.
- 5 2. To “elect” the average American unlawfully into such an office.
- 6 3. To cause those involuntarily serving in the office to unlawfully impersonate a public officer in criminal violation of 18
7 U.S.C. §912.
- 8 4. To enforce the obligations of the office upon those who are not lawfully occupying said office.
- 9 5. Of election fraud, whereby the contributions collected cause those who contribute them to bribe a public official to 10 procure the office that they occupy with unlawfully collected monies, in criminal violation of 18 U.S.C. §210. IRS
11 Document 6209 identifies all IRS Form W-2 contributions as “gifts” to the U.S. government, which is a polite way of 12 describing what actually amounts to a bribe.

14 § 210. Offer to procure appointive public office

15 Whoever pays or offers or promises any money [withheld unlawfully] or thing of value, to any person, firm, or

17 office or place under the United States for any person, shall be fined under this title or imprisoned not more
18 than one year, or both.

19 For instance, innocent Americans ignorant of the law are deceived into volunteering to unlawfully accept the obligations of 20 a public office by filing an IRS Form W-4 “agreement” to withhold pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §3402\(p\) , 26 C.F.R.
21 §31.3401(a)-3(a) , and 26 C.F.R. §31.3402(p)-1. To wit:

32 An employee and his employer may enter into an agreement under section 3402(b) to provide for the 33 withholding of income tax upon payments of amounts described in paragraph (b)(1) of §31.3401(a)-3, made
34 after December 31, 1970. An agreement may be entered into under this section only with respect to amounts
35 which are includible in the gross income of the employee under section 61, and must be applicable to all
36 such amounts paid by the employer to the employee. The amount to be withheld pursuant to an agreement
37 under section 3402(p) shall be determined under the rules contained in section 3402 and the regulations
38 thereunder. See §31.3405(c)-1, Q&A-3 concerning agreements to have more than 20-percent Federal income 39 tax withheld from eligible rollover distributions within the meaning of section 402.

40 Those who have not voluntarily signed and submitted the IRS Form W-4 contract/agreement and who are were not lawfully
41 engaged in a “public office” within the U.S. government BEFORE they signed any tax form cannot truthfully or lawfully
42 earn reportable “wages” as legally defined in 26 U.S.C. §3402. Therefore, even if the IRS sends a “lock-down” letter
43 telling the private employer to withhold at a rate of “single with no exemptions”, he must withhold ONLY on the amount of 44 “wages” earned, which is still zero. If a W-2 is filed against a person who does not voluntarily sign and submit the W-4 or 45 who is not lawfully engaged in a public office:

- 46 1. The amount reported must be ZERO for everything on the form, and especially for “wages”.
- 47 2. If any amount reported is other than zero, then the payroll clerk submitting the W-2 is criminally liable for filing a false
48 return under 26 U.S.C. §7206, punishable as a felony for up to a $100,000 fine and three years in jail.

3. If you also warned the payroll clerk that they were doing it improperly in writing and have a proof you served them with it, their actions also become fraudulent and they additionally liable under 26 U.S.C. §7207, punishable as a felony for up to $10,000 and up to one year in jail.

The heart of the tax fraud and SCAM perpetrated on a massive scale by our government then is:

- To publish IRS forms and publications which contain untrustworthy information that deceives the public into believing that they have a legal obligation to file false information returns against their neighbor.

"IRS Publications, issued by the National Office, explain the law in plain language for taxpayers and their advisors... While a good source of general information, publications should not be cited to sustain a position."
[Internal Revenue Manual (I.R.M.), Section 4.10.7.2.8 (05-14-1999)]

- To reinforce the deliberate deception and omissions in their publications with verbal advice that is equally damaging and untrustworthy:

p. 21: "As discussed in §2.3.3, the IRS is not bound by its statements or positions in unofficial pamphlets and publications."

p. 34: "6. IRS Pamphlets and Booklets. The IRS is not bound by statements or positions in its unofficial publications, such as handbooks and pamphlets."

p. 34: "7. Other Written and Oral Advice. Most taxpayers' requests for advice from the IRS are made orally. Unfortunately, the IRS is not bound by answers or positions stated by its employees orally, whether in person or by telephone. According to the procedural regulations, 'oral advice is advisory only and the Service is not bound to recognize it in the examination of the taxpayer's return.' 26 C.F.R. §601.201(k)(2). In rare cases, however, the IRS has been held to be equitably estopped to take a position different from that stated orally to, and justifiably relied on by, the taxpayer. The Omnibus Taxpayer Bill of Rights Act, enacted as part of the Technical and Miscellaneous Revenue Act of 1988, gives taxpayers some comfort, however. It amended section 6404 to require the Service to abate any penalty or addition to tax that is attributable to advice furnished in writing by any IRS agent or employee acting within the scope of his official capacity. Section 6404 as amended protects the taxpayer only if the following conditions are satisfied: the written advice from the IRS was issued in response to a written request from the taxpayer; reliance on the advice was reasonable; and the error in the advice did not result from inaccurate or incomplete information having been furnished by the taxpayer. Thus, it will still be difficult to bind the IRS even to written statements made by its employees. As was true before, taxpayers may be penalized for following oral advice from the IRS."

- To make it very difficult to describe yourself as either a "nontaxpayer" or a person not subject to the Internal Revenue Code on any IRS form. IRS puts the "exempt" option on their forms, but has no option for "not subject". You can be "not subject" and a "nontaxpayer" without being "exempt" and if you want to properly and lawfully describe yourself that way, you have to either modify their form or create your own substitute. You cannot, in fact be an "exempt individual" as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(5) without first being an "individual" and therefore subject to the I.R.C.. The following entity would be "not subject" but also not an "exempt individual" or "exempt", and could include people as well as property:

(a) When used in this title, where not otherwise distinctly expressed or manifestly incompatible with the intent thereof—

The term "foreign estate" means an estate the income of which, from sources without the United States which is not effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business within the United States, is not includible in gross income under subtitle A.

6.4. The IRS then comes back and says they don't keep the original Forms 1096 and W-3 either! Consequently, there is no way to identify the specific individual who filed the original false reports or to prosecute them criminally under 26 U.S.C. §§7206 and 7207 or civilly under 26 U.S.C. §7434. In that sense, IRS FOIA offices act as "witness protection programs" for those communist informants for the government willfully engaged in criminal activity.

Information Returns Transcripts - 1099 Information

1. Generally, information returns are destroyed upon processing. Therefore, original returns cannot be retrieved. In addition, the IRS may not have record of all information returns filed by payers. The Information Returns Master File (IRMF), accessed by CC IRPTR, contains records of many information returns. The master files are not complete until October of the year following the issuance of the information document, and contain the most current year and five (5) previous years. Taxpayers should be advised to first seek copies of information documents from the payer. However, upon request, taxpayers or their authorized designee may receive "information return" information.
2. Follow guidelines IRM 3.5.20.1 through 3.5.20.11, to ensure requests are complete and valid.
3. This information can be requested on TDS.
4. This information is also available using IRPTR with definer W.

7. To deliberately interfere with efforts to correct these false reports by those who are the wrongful subject of them:
  - 7.1. By penalizing filers of corrected information returns up to $5,000 for each Form 4852 filed pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §6702.
  - 7.2. By not providing forms to correct the false reports for ALL THOSE who could be the subject of them. IRS Form 4852, for instance, says at the top "Attach to Form 1040, 1040A, 1040-EZ, or 1040X." There is no equivalent form for use by non-resident non-persons who are victims of false IRS Form W-2 or 1099-R and who file a Form 1040NR.
  - 7.3. To refuse to accept IRS W-2C forms filed by those other than "employers".
  - 7.4. To refuse to accept custom, substitute, or modified forms that would correct the original reports.
  - 7.5. To not help those submitting the corrections by saying that they were not accepted, why they were not accepted, or how to make them acceptable.
8. To ignore correspondence directed at remedying all the above abuses and thereby obstruct justice and condone and encourage further unlawful activity.

So what we have folks is a deliberate, systematic plan that:

1. Turns innocent parties called "nontaxpayers" into guilty parties called "taxpayers", which the U.S. Supreme Court said they cannot do.

"In Calder v. Bull, which was here in 1798, Mr. Justice Chase said, that there were acts which the Federal and State legislatures could not do without exceeding their authority, and among them he mentioned a law which punished a citizen for an innocent act; a law that destroyed or impaired the lawful private [labor] contracts [and labor compensation, e.g. earnings from employment through compelled W-4 withholding] of citizens; a law that made a man judge in his own case; and a law that took the property from A [the worker], and gave it to B [the government or another citizen, such as through social welfare programs]. 'It is against all reason and justice,' he added, 'for a people to intrust a legislature with such powers, and therefore it cannot be presumed that they have done it. They may command what is right and prohibit what is wrong; but they cannot change innocence into guilt, or punish [being a "nontaxpayer"] as a crime [being a "taxpayer"], or violate the right of an antecedent lawful private [employment] contract [by compelling W-4 withholding, for instance], or the right of private property. To maintain that a Federal or State legislature possesses such powers [of THEFT!] if they had not been expressly restrained, would, in my opinion, be a

2. Constitutes a conspiracy to destroy equal protection and equal treatment that is the foundation of the Constitution, assigning all sovereignty to the government, and compelling everyone to worship and serve it without compensation.
3. Constitutes a conspiracy to destroy all Constitutional rights by compelling Americans through false reports to service the obligations of an office they cannot lawfully occupy and derive no benefit from:

*"It has long been established that a State may not impose a penalty upon those who exercise a right guaranteed by the Constitution." Frost & Frost Trucking Co. v. Railroad Comm'n of California, 271 U.S. 583. "Constitutional rights would be of little value if they could be indirectly denied,' Smith v. [Harman v. Forssenius, 380 U.S. 528 at 540, 85 S.Ct. 1177, 1185 (1965)]

4. Constitutes an abuse of tax forms as a federal election device to unlawfully elect those who aren't eligible and without their consent into public office in the government, in criminal violation of 18 U.S.C. §912.
5. Encourages Americans on a massive scale to file false reports against their neighbor that compel them into economic servitude and slavery without compensation:

"You shall not circulate a false report [information return]. Do not put your hand with the wicked to be an unrighteous witness."
[Exodus, 23:1, Bible, NKJV]

6. Constitutes a plan to implement communism in America. The Second Plank of the Communist Manifesto, Karl Marx is a heavy, progressive income tax that punishes the rich and abuses the taxation powers of the government to redistribute wealth.
7. Constitutes a conspiracy to replace a de jure Constitutional Republic into nothing but a big for-profit private corporation and business in which:
  - 7.1. Government becomes a virtual or political entity rather than physical entity tied to a specific territory. All the "States" after the Civil War rewrote their Constitutions to remove references to their physical boundaries. Formerly "sovereign" and independent states have become federal territories and federal corporations by signing up for federal franchises:

*At common law, a "corporation" was an "artificial perso[n] endowed with the legal capacity of perpetual succession" consisting either of a single individual (termed a "corporation sole") or of a collection of several individuals (a "corporation aggregate"). 3 H. Stephen, Commentaries on the Laws of England 166, 168 (1st Am. ed. 1845) . The sovereign was considered a corporation. See id., at 170; see also 1 W. Blackstone, Commentaries *467. Under the definitions supplied by contemporary law dictionaries, Territories would have been classified as "corporations" (and hence as "persons") at the time that 1983 was enacted and the Dictionary Act recodified. See W. Anderson, A Dictionary of Law 261 (1893) ("All corporations were originally modeled upon a state or nation"); I J. Bouvier, A Law Dictionary Adapted to the Constitution and Laws of the United States of America 318-319 (11th ed. 1866) ("In this extensive sense the United States may be termed a corporation"); Van Brocklin v. Tennessee, 117 U.S. 151, 154 (1886) ("The United States is a . . . great corporation . . . ordained and established by the American people") (quoting United [495 U.S. 182, 202] States v. 7.3. "citizens" and "residents" are little more than "employees" and officers of the corporation described in 26 U.S.C. §6671(b), 26 U.S.C. §7343, and 5 U.S.C. §2105. See:

7.6. Federal Reserve Notes (FRNs) serve as a substitute for lawful money and are really nothing but private scrip for internal use by officers of the government. They are not lawful money because they are not redeemable in gold or silver as required by the Constitution. See:

The Money Scam, Form #05.041

The Government "Benefits" Scam, Form #05.040

7.8. The so-called "law book", the Internal Revenue Code, is the private law franchise agreement which regulates compensation to and "kickbacks" from the officers of the corporation, which includes you. See:

7.10. Terms in the Constitution have been redefined to limit themselves to federal territory not protected by the original de jure constitution through judicial and prosecutorial word-smithing.

8. Constitutes a plan to unwittingly recruit the average American into servitude of this communist/socialist effort.

TITLE 50 > CHAPTER 23 > SUBCHAPTER IV > Sec. 841.

The Congress finds and declares that the Communist Party of the United States [consisting of the IRS, DOJ, and a corrupted federal judiciary], although purportedly a political party, is in fact an instrumentality of a conspiracy to overthrow the [de jure] Government of the United States [and replace it with a de facto government ruled by the judiciary]. It constitutes an authoritarian dictatorship [IRS, DOJ, and corrupted federal judiciary in collusion] within a [constitutional] republic, demanding for itself the rights and privileges [including immunity from prosecution for their wrongdoing in violation of Article 1, Section 9, Clause 8 of the Constitution] accorded to political parties, but denying to all others the liberties [Bill of Rights] guaranteed by the Constitution. Unlike political parties, which evolve their policies and programs through public means, by the reconciliation of a wide variety of individual views, and submit those policies and programs to the electorate at large for approval or disapproval, the policies and programs of the Communist Party are secretly [by corrupt judges and the IRS in complete disregard of the tax laws] prescribed for it by the foreign leaders of the world Communist movement [the IRS and Federal Reserve]. Its members [the Congress, which was terrorized to do IRS bidding recently by the framing of Congressman Traficant] have no part in determining its goals, and are not permitted to voice dissent to party objectives. Unlike members of political parties, members of the Communist Party are recruited for indoctrination [in the public schools by homosexuals, liberals, and socialists] with respect to its objectives and methods, and are organized, instructed, and disciplined [by the IRS and a corrupted judiciary] to carry into action slavishly the assignments given them by their hierarchical chieftains. Unlike political parties, the Communist Party [thanks to a corrupted federal judiciary] acknowledges no constitutional or statutory limitations upon its conduct or upon that of its members. The Communist Party is relatively small numerically, and gives scant indication of capacity ever to attain its ends by lawful political means. The peril inherent in its operation arises not from its numbers, but from its failure to acknowledge any limitation as to the nature of its activities, and its dedication to the proposition that the present constitutional Government of the United States ultimately must be brought to ruin by any available means, including resort to force and violence [or using income taxes]. Holding that doctrine, its role as the agency of a hostile foreign power [the Federal Reserve and the American Bar Association (ABA)] renders its existence a clear present and continuing danger to the security of the United States. It is the means whereby individuals are seduced into the service of the world Communist movement, trained to do its bidding, and directed and controlled in the conspiratorial performance of their revolutionary services. Therefore, the Communist Party should be outlawed

5.6.15 All compensation for your personal labor is deductible from "gross income" on your tax return

It may surprise you to learn that the Internal Revenue Code allows for anyone to deduct the full market value and compensation received in exchange for their personal labor. This section will summarize why this is, and is based on a free pamphlet available below:

How the Government Defrauds You Out of Legitimate Deductions for the Market Value of Your Labor, Form #05.026
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

The following subsections do not advocate the position that all the costs of producing one's own labor (i.e. food, shelter, clothing, health maintenance expenses) should be deducted from the earnings arising therefrom in computing "profit". Instead, this document establishes that no part of one's own labor constitutes "profit" under Natural Law or within the context of the United States Constitution or the legislative intent of Congress. Others have attempted to deduct the cost of keeping one's body whole (e.g. food, shelter, clothing, medicine) as a deduction for the production of their own labor. This is a complete misunderstanding of the value of one's own labor as their own exclusive property, as further established herein with cogent legal authorities. The primary reason why one cannot deduct the costs for producing their own labor is because then the government could tell you what size house you could live in, what car you drive, and what food you eat as reasonable deductions for the production of said labor. We certainly don't want the government meddling in or dictating any of these choices that only we have a protected right to make. If you want an example of how NOT to approach the issues raised in this pamphlet, it may be instructive to read a book by former U.S. Attorney John C. Garrison entitled The New Income Tax Scandal. In that book, he wrongfully tries to establish that we should be allowed deductions associated with the cost of producing our labor, rather than the approach established herein of saying that there is no such thing as "profit" in the context of one's own labor on one's own tax return.

5.6.15.1 Why One's Own Labor is not an article of Commerce and cannot Produce "profit" in the Context of Oneself

QUESTION: What is "profit" in the context not of a business, but a private individual who offers his valuable labor in exchange for some other valuable commodity?

ANSWER: In the context of private individuals who sell their labor in exchange for money, there cannot lawfully be any such thing as "profit". The exchange of valuable labor for some other valuable commodity is an EQUAL exchange which does not have any profit involved, and therefore cannot be the subject of any kind of tax upon profits. If labor has no value in the exchange, then no one would be willing to pay anything for it! Anyone who argues with this premise can do nothing but contradict themselves.

The above conclusions are confirmed by the U.S. Code, which says that "the labor of a human being is not a commodity or article of commerce":

§ 17. Antitrust laws not applicable to labor organizations

The labor of a human being is not a commodity or article of commerce. Nothing contained in the antitrust laws shall be construed to forbid the existence and operation of labor, agricultural, or horticultural organizations, instituted for the purposes of mutual help, and not having capital stock or conducted for profit, or to forbid or restrain individual members of such organizations from lawfully carrying out the legitimate objects thereof; nor shall such organizations, or the members thereof, be held or construed to be illegal combinations or conspiracies in restraint of trade, under the antitrust laws.

If "the labor of a human being is not a commodity or article of commerce", then at least in the context of oneself, it cannot produce "profit" in the context of oneself as a natural person. Consequently, there can be neither "profit" NOR its inverse, which is "loss", in connection with one's own labor. The full market value of the labor, which is the full amount we received as payment for it and not more, may lawfully be deducted from the compensation received in EQUAL exchange for it pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §83, thus rendering neither profit nor loss. We cannot lawfully take deductions in connection with the expenses needed to produce our own labor, because these expenses might exceed the compensation and thereby produce a loss which compels the government to in effect subsidize people who work for less than the full Fair Market Value or Cost of Producing their labor by giving them a tax break.

The debates on the Sixteenth Amendment, which the government frequently identifies as the source of their authority to tax the labor of a human being, also abundantly confirm that the legislative intent of the Sixteenth Amendment never included the goal of taxing the labor of a human being. Instead, the main purpose of that amendment was to tax passive, unearned profits large corporations and trusts that had grown to gargantuan proportions at that time. You can read the entire Sixteenth Amendment Congressional debates below, and it is electronically searchable for your convenience:

<http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/History/Congress/1909-16thAmendCongrRecord.pdf>

Among the statements during those debates were the following, which confirm the findings of this section:

"Mr. Brandegee. Mr. President, what I said was that the amendment exempts absolutely everything that a man makes for himself. Of course it would not exempt a legacy which somebody else made for him and gave to him. If a man's occupation or vocation—for vocation means nothing but a calling—if his calling or occupation were that of a financier it would exempt everything he made by underwriting and by financial operations in the course of a year that would be the product of his effort [LABOR]. Nothing can be imagined that a man can busy himself about with a view of profit which the amendment as drawn would not utterly exempt."

The U.S. Supreme Court has also admitted that labor is not taxable, when it said:

"Every man has a natural right to the fruits of his own labor, is generally admitted; and no other person can rightfully deprive him of those fruits, and appropriate them against his will..."

1 [The Antelope, 23 U.S. 66, 10 Wheat 66, 6 L.Ed. 268 (1825)]

2 "There is a clear distinction in this particular case between an individual and a corporation, and that the latter
3 has no right to refuse to submit its books and papers for an examination at the suit of the State. The individual
4 may stand upon his constitutional rights as a citizen. He is entitled to carry on his private business in his own
5 way. His power to contract is unlimited. He owes no such duty to the State, since he receives nothing
6 therefrom, beyond the protection of his life and property. His rights are such as existed by the law of the land
7 long antecedent to the organization of the State, and can only be taken from him by due process of law, and
8 in accordance with the constitution. Among his rights are a refusal to incriminate himself, and the immunity of 9 himself and his property from arrest or seizure except under a warrant of the law. He owes nothing to the 10 public so long as he does not trespass upon their rights."
11 [Hale v. Henkel, 201 U.S. 43, 74 (1906)]

12 So the question for our esteemed readers is: What part of:

13 "He owes NOTHING [including so-called "income taxes"] to the public so long as he does not trespass upon 14 their rights."

15 . . .do you NOT understand? Why is this? Because the government cannot tax or regulate the exercise of RIGHTS
16 protected by the Constitution. The only "persons" they can tax or regulate are those who engage in "privileges". To wit:

17 The power to tax the exercise of a privilege is the power to control or suppress its enjoyment. Magnano Co. v.
18 Hamilton, 292 U.S. 40, 44, 45 S., 54 S.Ct. 599, 601, and cases cited. Those who can tax the exercise of this
19 religious practice can make its exercise so costly as to deprive it of the resources necessary for its 20 maintenance. Those who can tax the privilege of engaging in this form of missionary evangelism can close its 21 doors to all those who do not have a full purse. Spreading religious beliefs in this ancient and honorable
22 manner would thus be denied the needy. Those who can deprive religious groups of their colporteurs can take 23 from them a part of the vital power of the press which has survived from the Reformation.

24 It is contended, however, that the fact that the license tax can suppress or control this activity is unim- [319
25 U.S. 105, 113] portant if it does not do so. But that is to disregard the nature of this tax. It is a license tax-a
26 flat tax imposed on the exercise of a privilege granted by the Bill of Rights. A state may not impose a charge
27 for the enjoyment of a right granted by the federal constitution. Thus, it may not exact a license tax for the 28 privilege of carrying on interstate commerce ( McGoldrick v. Berwind-White Co., 309 U.S. 33, 56-58, 60 S.Ct.
29 388, 397, 398, 128 A.L.R. 876), although it may tax the property used in, or the income derived from, that
30 commerce, so long as those taxes are not discriminatory. Id., 309 U.S. at page 47, 60 S.Ct. at page 392, 128
31 A.L.R. 876 and cases cited. A license tax applied to activities guaranteed by the First Amendment would have 32 the same destructive effect. It is true that the First Amendment, like the commerce clause, draws no distinction
33 between license taxes, fixed sum taxes, and other kinds of taxes. But that is no reason why we should shut our 34 eyes to the nature of the tax and its destructive influence. The power to impose a license tax on the exercise of 35 these freedoms is indeed as potent as the power of censorship which this Court has repeatedly struck down.
36 Lovell v. Griffin, 303 U.S. 444, 58 S.Ct. 666; Schneider v. State, supra; Cantwell v. Connecticut, 310 U.S.
37 296, 306, 60 S.Ct. 900, 904, 128 A.L.R. 1352; Largent v. Texas, 318 U.S. 418, 63 S.Ct. 667, 87 L.Ed. --;
38 Jamison v. Texas, supra. It was for that reason that the dissenting opinions in Jones v. Opelika, supra, stressed
39 the nature of this type of tax. 316 U.S. at pages 607-609, 620, 623, 62 S.Ct. at pages 1243, 1244, 1250, 1251,
40 141 A.L.R. 514. In that case, as in the present ones, we have something very different from a registration system
41 under which those going from house to house are required to give their names, addresses and other marks of 42 identification to the authorities. In all of these cases the issuance of the permit or license is dependent on the 43 payment of a license tax. And the license tax is fixed in amount and unrelated to the scope of the activities of 44 petitioners or to their realized revenues. It is not a nominal fee [319 U.S. 105, 114] imposed as a regulatory 45 measure to defray the expenses of policing the activities in question. 8 It is in no way apportioned. It is a flat
46 license tax levied and collected as a condition to the pursuit of activities whose enjoyment is guaranteed by 47 the First Amendment. Accordingly, it restrains in advance those constitutional liberties of press and religion
48 and inevitably tends to suppress their exercise. That is almost uniformly recognized as the inherent vice and
49 evil of this flat license tax. As stated by the Supreme Court of Illinois in a case involving this same sect and an
50 ordinance similar to the present one, a person cannot be compelled 'to purchase, through a license fee or a
51 license tax, the privilege freely granted by the constitution.' 9 Blue Island v. Kozul, 379 Ill. 511, 519, 41 N.E.2d.
52 515, 519. So it may not be said that proof is lacking that these license taxes either separately or cumulatively
53 have restricted or are likely to restrict petitioners' religious activities. On their face they are a restriction of the 54 free exercise of those freedoms which are protected by the First Amendment.
55 [Murdock v. Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, 319 U.S. 105; 63 S.Ct. 870 (1943)]

56 The ability to exchange your labor, which has an intrinsic and definable value, for some other valuable commodity is a
57 right guaranteed by the Constitution of the United States of America. This is the reason for the existence of 26 U.S.C. §83
58 and the reason why no part of your own personal labor, including that connected with privileged activities such as a "trade
59 or business", can be the subject of any tax. There is no such thing as "profit" in the context of your own personal labor,
60 because they can't tax or regulate the enjoyment of a right guaranteed by the Constitution. The state may tax profits

1 associated with other people you hire in the context of your business<sup>186</sup>, but not your OWN personal labor in the context of
 2 your OWN personal income tax return. You have a RIGHT to enjoy property, and you are your own property! Lynch v.
 3 Household Finance Corp., 405 U.S. 538 (1972). You own, govern, and control the exclusive and enjoyment of yourself.<sup>187</sup>
 4 Anyone who interferes with the enjoyment of that right is instituting involuntary servitude in violation of the Thirteenth
 5 Amendment. Please view the fascinating animation on this subject below:

28 The U.S. Supreme Court defined "labor" as property"

29 “Among these unalienable rights, as proclaimed in that great document [the Declaration of Independence] is 30 the right of men to pursue their happiness, by which is meant, the right any lawful business or vocation, in any
 31 manner not inconsistent with the equal rights of others, which may increase their prosperity or develop their
 32 faculties, so as to give them their highest enjoyment...It has been well said that, THE PROPERTY
 33 WHICH EVERY MAN HAS IN HIS OWN LABOR, AS IT IS THE ORIGINAL
 34 FOUNDATION OF ALL OTHER PROPERTY SO IT IS THE MOST SACRED AND 35 INVOLABLE... to hinder his employing this strength and dexterity in what manner he thinks proper 36 without injury to his neighbor, is a plain violation of this most sacred property.”
 37 Butchers' Union Co. v. Crescent City Co., [111 U.S. 746 (1884), Concurring opinion of Justice Field]

38 There is ample case law to support the principle of statutory construction which makes the term “any property” all
 39 inclusive; meaning that nothing is to be excluded by the word “any”. This is confirmed by the following cases where the 40 United States contends successfully that “any property” is all inclusive and means all property (see U.S. v. Monsanto, 491
 41 U.S. 600, 607-611 and (syllabus) (1989); United States v. Alvarez-Sanchez, 511 U.S. 350, 357 (1994); US. v. Gonzales,

<sup>186</sup> If in fact Congress has expressly extended the authority of the Secretary of the United States Treasury to operate outside the District of Columbia and within the several 50 states of the Union pursuant to 4 U.S.C. §72. As of the time of this writing, no officer of the United States has been able to produce even one statute or law which so extends the authority of the Secretary to the 50 states of the Union pursuant to 4 U.S.C. §72.

<sup>187</sup> You have an exclusive right to decide whether you go to work today, how much you want to work for, or whether you want to give away your labor for free. You don't have to ask the government's permission to make ANY one of these decisions. Therefore, your labor is completely and exclusively your own property, and no one can dictate what one can do with that property or the fruits of that property in a truly free society.

1 520 U.S. 1, 4-6 (1997); Department of Housing and Urban Renewal v. Rucker, X35 U.S. 125, 130-31 (2002) citing

3 "Heroin manufacturer Monsanto argues that he should be allowed to keep enough money for attorney's fees,
4 but the DOJ argues successfully that "any property" is all inclusive and therefore means the U.S. can seize any
5 and all property unless Monsanto can point to a specific exclusion of attorney's fees under the law. DOJ can
6 seize everything owned by defendant."
7 U.S. v. Monsanto, [491 U.S. 600, 607-611]

8 As used in statutes and regulations, the terms "any" or "any property" are to be construed as all inclusive until Congress
9 "expressly" provides an exception to support the notion that such terms are not all inclusive. Since the 1989 Monsanto
10 decision regarding "any property," three very recent decisions supra deal directly with the same question as to how to 11 interpret the term "any"; as all inclusive and not subject to derogation.

12 The U.S. Supreme Court has also affirmed the RIGHT of everyone to exchange their labor, which is property, for 13 something of equal value. When any third party, including the government, interferes with such an exchange, for instance
14 by involuntarily withholding a portion of that exchange and thereby depriving either party to the contract of liberty and 15 property, then that party is violating rights. Such interference, we might add, also includes levying involuntary taxes upon
16 one's labor. To wit:

17 "Included in the right of personal liberty and the right of private property-partaking of the nature of each- is
18 the right to make contracts for the acquisition of property. Chief among such contracts is that of personal
19 employment, by which labor and other services are exchanged for money or other forms of property. If this
20 right be struck down or arbitrarily interfered with, there is a substantial impairment of liberty in the long-
21 established constitutional sense. The right is as essential to the laborer as to the capitalist, to the poor as to the 22 rich; for the vast majority of persons have no other honest way to begin to acquire property, save by working 23 for money.

24 An interference with this liberty so serious as that now under consideration, and so disturbing of equality of
25 right, must be deemed to be arbitrary, unless it be supportable as a reasonable exercise of the police power of
26 the state. But, notwithstanding the strong general presumption in favor of the validity of state laws, we do not
27 think the statute in question, as construed and applied in this case, can be sustained as a legitimate exercise of
28 that power. To avoid possible misunderstanding, we should here emphasize, what has been said before, that so
29 far as its title or enacting clause expresses a purpose to deal with coercion, compulsion, duress, or other undue
30 influence, we have no present concern with it, because nothing of that sort is involved in this case. As has [236
31 U.S. 1, 15] been many times stated, this court deals not with moot cases or abstract questions, but with the 32 concrete case before it. California v. San Pablo & T. R. Co. 149 U.S. 308, 314, 37 S. L.Ed. 747, 748, 13
34 Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Cade, 233 U.S. 642, 648, 58 S. L.Ed. 1135, 1137, 34 Sup.Ct.Rep. 678. We do not
35 mean to say, therefore, that a state may not properly exert its police power to prevent coercion on the part of 36 employers towards employees, or vice versa.

38 As to the interest of the employed, it is said by the Kansas supreme court to be a matter of common
39 knowledge that 'employees, as a rule, are not financially able to be as independent in making contracts for
40 the sale of their labor as are employers in making a contract of purchase thereof.' No doubt, wherever the 41 right of private property exists, there must and will be inequalities of fortune; and thus it naturally happens that
42 parties negotiating about a contract are not equally unhampered by circumstances. This applies to all
43 contracts, and not merely to that between employer and employee. Indeed, a little reflection will show that 44 wherever the right of private property and the right of free contract coexist, each party when contracting is 45 inevitably more or less influenced by the question whether he has much property, or little, or none; for the 46 contract is made to the very end that each may gain something that he needs or desires more urgently than that
47 which he proposes to give in exchange. And, since it is self-evident that, unless all things are held in common,
48 some persons must have more property than others, it is from the nature of things impossible to uphold freedom
49 of contract and the right of private property without at the same time recognizing as legitimate those
50 inequalities of fortune that are the necessary result of the exercise of those rights. But the 14th Amendment, in 51 declaring that a state shall not 'deprive any person of life, liberty, or property without due process of law,' gives
52 to each of these an equal sanction; it recognizes 'liberty' and 'property' as coexistent human rights, and debars
53 the states from any unwarranted interference with either.

54 And since a state may not strike them down directly, it is clear that it may not do so indirectly, as by declaring
55 in effect that the public good requires the removal of those [236 U.S. 1, 18] inequalities that are but the 56 normal and inevitable result of their exercise, and then invoking the police power in order to remove the 57 inequalities, without other object in view. The police power is broad, and not easily defined, but it cannot be 58 given the wide scope that is here asserted for it, without in effect nullifying the constitutional guaranty. "

In short, an interference with the normal exercise of personal liberty and property rights is the primary object of the statute [or tax], and not an incident to the advancement of the general welfare. But, in our opinion, the 14th Amendment debars the states from striking down personal liberty or property rights, or materially restricting their normal exercise, excepting [236 U.S. 1, 19] so far as may be incidentally necessary for the accomplishment of some other and paramount object, and one that concerns the public welfare. The mere restriction of liberty or of property rights cannot of itself be denominated 'public welfare,' and treated as a legitimate object of the police power; for such restriction is the very thing that is inhibited by the Amendment.

5.6.15.3 Why the Cost of Labor is Deductible from Gross Receipts In Computing Profit

The conversion they are talking about is the conversion of "labor" and "capital" into finished goods. The code reflects the requirement for "profit" in 26 U.S.C. §83, which says that profit in the context of labor is any amount collected in excess of the value of the labor collected. Below is an enumerated analysis of how this works:

1. Because labor is property and has a basis of its own that is deductible from the cost of procuring it, then it is a violation of 26 U.S.C. §§83, 212, 1001, 1011, and 1012 to report the entirety of "compensation for services" as described in 26 U.S.C. §61\(a\)\(1\) as "gross income".
2. Moreover, the law and the regulations govern what the Secretary or his alleged Delegates can do with regard to the calculation of "Gross Income" as previously cited in 26 U.S.C. §§83, 212, 1001, 1011, and 1012 above.

"The regulations...now govern, and will continue to govern, the abbreviated application process. See Fort Stewart Schools v. FLRA, 495 U.S. 641, 654, 110 S.Ct. 2043, 2051, 109 L.Ed.2d. 659 (1990). No matter what an agency said in the past, or what it did not say, after an agency issues regulations it must abide by them."
[Schering Corp. v. Shalala, 995 F.2d. 1103 (D.C.Cir. 1993)]

3. The plain language of 26 U.S.C. §83 states that when compensation is received in [exchange] for services rendered, ONLY the "excess" of the "property" [compensation] over the "amount paid" [labor] in costs is to be included in gross income:

§ 83. Property transferred in connection with performance of services

(a) General rule

If, in connection with the performance of services [labor], property is transferred [compensation] to any person [employee] other than the person for whom such services are performed [employer], the excess of—

(1) the fair market value of such property [compensation] (determined without regard to any restriction other than a restriction which by its terms will never lapse) at the first time the rights of the person having the beneficial interest in such property are transferable or are not subject to a substantial risk of forfeiture, whichever occurs earlier, over

(2) the amount (if any) paid [labor] for such property [compensation], shall be included in the gross income of the person who performed such services [employee] in the first taxable year in which the rights of the person having the beneficial interest in such property are transferable or are not subject to a substantial risk of forfeiture, whichever is applicable. The preceding sentence shall not apply if such person sells or otherwise disposes of such property in an arm's length transaction before his rights in such property become transferable or not subject to a substantial risk of forfeiture.

4. Here is the formula for 26 U.S.C. §83:
  - 4.1. "Gross Income" = "Excess"; and
  - 4.2. "Excess" = ("property")—(the "amount paid")... or
  - 4.3. "Excess" = ("compensation")---(value of labor)
5. The "amount paid" is defined in 26 C.F.R. §1.83-3\(g\) as: definition of cost:

26 C.F.R. §1.83-3\(g\)

(g) Amount paid. For purposes of section 83 and the regulations thereunder, the term "amount paid" refers to the value of any money or property [labor is property.] paid for the transfer of property [compensation] to which section 83 applies...

- 1 6. The value of the “amount paid” [labor] is determined by what the employer paid for the services [labor] rendered. 26
 2 C.F.R. §1.83-3(g) is all inclusive and includes “any money or property.”
 3 7. The fair market value (“FMV”) of property (“amount paid” or “labor”) is established through the terms of an
 4 “arm’s length transaction.”<sup>188</sup>
 5 8. To confirm that this understanding is correct, we can come to the same conclusion by reviewing other sections of the 6 IRC and the regulations thereunder.
 7 9. To properly calculate what constitutes “Gross Income”, pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §83, one needs to know “the amount
 8 paid” (cost of labor) so it can be deducted from the “property” (compensation) in order to calculate the “excess”
 9 [profit] which is to be included in the “Gross Income”. To determine these factors, one must turn to the regulations:

10 “If property [compensation] to which 1.83-1 applies is transferred [from employer to employee] at an arm’s
 11 length [Blacks law pg. 109], the basis [cost of labor] of the property [compensation] in the hands of the 12 transferee [recipient or employee] shall be determined under section 1012 and the regulations thereunder”
 13 [26 C.F.R. § 1.83-4\(b\)\(2\)]

- 14 10. Before one can determine the “excess”, one must identify the “amount paid.”
 15 11. As property, labor has a value with regard to the related compensation transaction and 26 U.S.C. §1012 will either 16 include or exclude said cost for labor.

17 § 1012. Basis of property—cost

18 The basis of property [labor] shall be the cost [compensation] of such property...

- 19 12. The regulations confirm the basis of property:

20 26 C.F.R. §1.1012 -1 Basis of property.

21 *(a) General rule. In general, the basis of property [compensation] is the cost thereof. The cost is the amount
 22 paid [labor] for such property [compensation] in cash or other property [labor]...*

- 23 13. Congress has cited what it considers to be a “cost”. The “amount paid for such property in cash or other property”.
 24 The Secretary will take note that nothing is excluded from that which is considered by Congress to be a cost. If
 25 Congress intended to exclude labor from that which is a cost, 26 U.S.C. §1012 would reflect such an exclusion. Since 26 it is not excluded, it is to be considered as a cost in the calculation of the “excess” which is included in “Gross Income”
 27 and in the determination as to whether one has enough “gross income” to make it necessary to even file a return.
 28 14. The “amount paid” [labor] is the value of the cost [labor] and is also known as the “adjusted basis”. Regulations
 29 require that this amount be “withdrawn” from the amount realized in the [payment for services] transaction and that it
 30 be “restored to the taxpayer.”

31 26 C.F.R. §1.1011-1 Adjusted basis.

32 The adjusted basis for determining the gain or loss from the sale or other disposition of property is the cost or 33 other basis prescribed in section 1012 or other applicable provisions of subtitle A of the code, adjusted to the 34 extent provided in sections 1016, 1017, and 1018 or as otherwise specifically provided for under applicable
 35 provisions of internal revenue laws.

36 26 C.F.R. § 1.1001-1\(a\)

37 (a) ...from the amount realized upon the sale or exchange there shall be withdrawn a sum sufficient to restore
 38 *the adjusted basis prescribed by section 1011 and the regulations thereunder...The amount which remains 39 [excess] after the adjusted basis [cost of labor] has been restored to the taxpayer constitutes the realized gain 40 [profit].

- 41 15. After determining the value of property (labor) that is a cost, as defined by United States law (see 26 C.F.R. § 1.1012-
 42 1\(a\) , and 26 C.F.R. § 1.1001-1\(a\)), the value of the “amount paid,” or the “adjusted basis” (labor), must be subtracted
 43 from the amount realized (compensation) BEFORE including ONLY the “excess” balance which remains (if any) in

“Gross Income”. The Federal 1040 type returns do not accommodate § 83 in any way and therefore it is not possible for any Citizen to complete a 1040 return and claim the right as articulated by Congress in § 83.

16. Again, the conclusion reached by reviewing additional sections of the IRC and the regulations thereunder, as cited above, is the same conclusion articulated by Congress in 26 C.F.R. §1.83-3\(g\) where the “amount paid” is defined as “any money or property” (labor is not excluded):

26 C.F.R. §1.83-3(g)

(g) Amount paid. For purposes of section 83 and the regulations thereunder, the term “amount paid” [labor] refers to the value of any money or property [labor] paid for the transfer of property [compensation] to which section 83 applies...

17. The sections of the IRC which embraces intangible personal property as a cost (see 26 U.S.C. §1012) is calculated as one’s cost when having only sold one’s labor, and 26 C.F.R. §1.83-3\(g\) does the same. In fact, in order to impose amounts which are not to be included in “Gross Income” upon those who may be “taxpayers”, the Secretary must deny even “taxpayers” their rights as identified by Congress in 26 U.S.C. §§83, 1011, and 1012.
18. The law does not exclude any property for which there is no basis from cost. The cost equals the value of any and all property (labor) disposed to obtain other property (compensation), unless it is expressly excluded under 26 U.S.C. §1012.
19. The difference between cost and income is further articulated by Congress in 26 U.S.C. §212 as follows:

In the case of an individual, there shall be allowed as a deduction all the ordinary and necessary expenses [cost] paid or incurred during the taxable year—

(1) for the production or collection of income;

(2) for the management, conservation, or maintenance of property held for the production of income; or

(3) in connection with the determination, collection, or refund of any tax.

20. The Secretary has a duty to notice that a deduction is mandated (“shall”) but it is not specified from where or what the expenses are to be deducted. Based on 26 U.S.C. §83, the deduction (labor) is to be taken from “such property” (compensation) to create the “excess” which then is included in “Gross Income”.
21. The Secretary is hereby put on notice that to deny the rights of Sovereign Americans simply for the purpose of converting them into a “taxpayer” status or to exact amounts from them in excess of that which is provided by law is criminal conversion and United States law mandates filing of a criminal complaint, pursuant to 18 U.S.C. §4, against the Secretary and his subordinates pursuant for any violation of United States law or denial of rights.

In conclusion, if you run into either a public servant or a judge who tries to argue with you about whether there is a cost to produce labor that the laborer should be compensated for, indirectly, they are:

1. Admitting that their labor is worth nothing.
2. Receiving unjust compensation or enrichment. Anyone who paid anything for something that worth nothing has benefited from unjust enrichment.

Unjust enrichment doctrine. General principle that one person should not be permitted unjustly to enrich himself at expense of another, but should be required to make restitution of or for property or benefits received, retained or appropriated, where it is just and equitable that such restitution be made, and where such action involves no violation or frustration of law or opposition to public policy, either directly or indirectly. Tulalip Shores, Inc. v. Mortland, 9 Wash.App. 271, 511 P.2d. 1402, 1404. Unjust enrichment of a person occurs when he has and retains money or benefits which in justice and equity belong to another. L & A Drywall, Inc. v. Whitmore Cons. Co., Inc., Utah, 608 P.2d. 626, 630.

Three elements must be established in order to sustain a claim based on unjust enrichment: A benefit conferred upon the defendant by the plaintiff; and appreciation or knowledge by the defendant of the benefit; and the acceptance or retention by the defendant of the benefit under such circumstances as to make it inequitable for the defendant to retain the benefit without the payment of its value. Everhart v. Miles, 47 Md.App. 131, 136, 422 A.2d. 28. See also Quantum meruit.

Unjust enrichment. Retention of a benefit conferred by another without offering compensation in circumstances where compensation is reasonably expected. A benefit obtained from another not intended as a gift and not legally justifiable for which the beneficiary must make restitution or recompense. The area of law dealing with unjustifiable benefits of this kind.
[Black's Law Dictionary, Seventh Edition, p. 1536]

3. Asking for a pay cut and are admitting they are paid too much.
4. Admitting the corporations, which routinely deduct the cost of labor from their earnings in computing corporate profits, are being given favored status and that you are not entitled to the same equal protection. This violates the requirement for equal protection of the law mandated in Fourteenth Amendment, Section 1.

Therefore, tell them their labor isn't worth anything and that the government pays them too much and that they should refund all their pay and benefits. After all, if it isn't an equal exchange of value, any amount of money accepted for it amounts to STEALING from the government.

5.6.16 IRS Has no Authority to Convert a Tax Class 5 "gift" into a Tax Class 2 liability

This section builds on the content of section 5.6.8, where we showed that payroll deductions you make to the federal government are classified as Tax Class 5, which means estate and gift taxes, and that these taxes are donations or gifts to the U.S. government. In this section we will add to this analysis to also show that the IRS has no delegated authority to change a Tax Class 5 gift into a Tax Class 2 Liability that would appear on an IRS Form 1040. This is equivalent to saying that the IRS has no authority to do a Substitute For Return (SFR) on a natural person.

Table 5-78: Tax Class as appearing in Section 4 of the 6209 or ADP/IDRS Manual

Tax Class (Third digit of Document Locator Number or DLN)	Tax Class
0	Employee Plans Master File (EPMF)
1	Withholding and Social Security
2	Individual Income Tax, Fiduciary Income Tax, Partnership return
3	Corporate Income Tax, 990C, 990T, 8083 Series, 8609, 8610
4	Excise Tax
5	Information Return Processing (IRP), Estate and Gift Tax
6	NMF
7	CT-1
8	FUTA
9	Mixed-Segregation by tax class not required

When you submit IRS Form W-4 to your private employer, he becomes the equivalent of a de facto, unlawful withholding agent for Tax Class 5 gifts to the U.S. government. After you submit this form, he will complete and submit an IRS Form W-2 at the end of each year, which is called an "Information Return". The above table also classifies Information Returns as Tax Class 5, which means a gift or estate tax. Since an Information Return is NOT a tax, then the only type of tax it can be is one of these two types. However, notice that:

1. IRS Form 1040 is Tax Class 2, which means "Individual Income Tax, Fiduciary Tax, Partnership return".
2. Tax Class 5 is NOT the same as Tax Class 2, and that they may not be interchanged, because doing so would convert what amounts to a gift into a liability.
3. There is no statute in the Internal Revenue Code nor implementing regulation in 26 C.F.R. that authorizes the IRS to convert what amounts to a gift made through withholding into a liability that is owed.
4. Only the filing of an IRS Form 1040 or some variant can turn the gift into a liability, which is why when you file a 1040, you must staple the Information Returns, including W-2, 1099's, etc to the return and sign the form under penalty of perjury indicating a liability.
5. No statute or authorizes the IRS to do an involuntary Substitute For Return upon a natural person. This was covered earlier in section 5.4.15.
6. No provision within the Internal Revenue Manual authorizes Substitute For Returns against natural persons. In fact, Internal Revenue Manual (I.R.M.), Section 5.1.11.6.8 specifically exempts IRS Form 1040 and all its variants from the Substitute For Return program.

One of our readers did a Freedom Of Information Act request asking the IRS for the statute, implementing regulation, and the Internal Revenue Manual (I.R.M.), Section authorizing the IRS to convert a Tax Class 5 Information Return into a Tax Class 2 liability, and below is the response they got back:

"We have no documents responsive to your request."

What they are admitting indirectly is that they have no authority to perform involuntary assessments or Substitute For Returns against natural persons who would ordinarily file an IRS Form 1040. This is consistent with Internal Revenue Manual (I.R.M.), Section 5.1.11.6.8, which indicates that SFR's using IRS Form 1040 are NOT legally allowed.

5.6.17 Taxes are not "debts" and therefore not a liability

Another very good reason we aren't liable to pay taxes is that no less than the U.S. Supreme Court has indicated that "taxes" as legally defined are not "debts". If "taxes" are not debts, then a Notice of Federal Tax Lien cannot and does not create a valid or collectible "debt" as legally defined.

In his work on the Constitution, the late Mr. Justice Story whose praise as a jurist is in all civilized lands, speaking of the clause in the Constitution giving to Congress the power to lay and collect taxes, says of the theory which would limit the power to the object of paying the debts that, thus limited, it would be only a power to provide for the payment of debts then existing. [Footnote 4] And certainly if a narrow and limited interpretation would thus restrict the word "debts" in the Constitution, the same sort of interpretation would in like manner restrict the same word in the act. Such an interpretation needs only to be mentioned to be rejected. We refer to it only to show that a right construction must be sought through larger and less technical views. We may, then, safely decline either to limit the word "debts" to existing dues, or to extend its meaning so as to embrace all dues of whatever origin and description.

What, then, is its true sense? The most obvious, and, as it seems to us, the most rational answer to this question is that Congress must have had in contemplation debts originating in contract or demands carried into judgment, and only debts of this character. This is the commonest and most natural use of the word. Some strain is felt upon the understanding when an attempt is made to extend it so as to include taxes imposed by legislative authority, and there should be no such strain in the interpretation of a law like this.

We are the more ready to adopt this view because the greatest of English elementary writers upon law, when treating of debts in their various descriptions, gives no hint that taxes come within either, [Footnote 5] while American state courts of the highest authority have refused to treat liabilities for taxes as debts in the ordinary sense of that word, for which actions of debt may be maintained.

The first of these cases was that of Pierce v. City of Boston, [Footnote 6] 1842, in which the defendant attempted to set off against a demand of the plaintiff certain taxes due to the city. The statute allowed mutual debts to be set off, but the court disallowed the right to set off taxes. This case went, indeed, upon the construction of the statute of Massachusetts, and did not turn on the precise point before us, but the language of the court shows that taxes were not regarded as debts within the common understanding of the word.

The second case was that of Shaw v. Pickett, [Footnote 7] in which the Supreme Court of Vermont said,

"The assessment of taxes does not create a debt that can be enforced by suit, or upon which a promise to pay interest can be implied. It is a proceeding in invitum."

The next case was that of the City of Camden v. Allen, [Footnote 8] 1857. That was an action of debt brought to recover a tax by the municipality to which it was due. The language of the Supreme Court of New Jersey was still more explicit: "A tax, in its essential characteristics," said the court, "is not a debt nor in the nature of a debt. A tax is an impost levied by authority of government upon its citizens or subjects for the support of the state. It is not founded on contract or agreement. It operates in invitum. A debt is a sum of money due by certain and express agreement. It originates in and is founded upon contracts express or implied."

These decisions were all made before the acts of 1862 were passed, and they may have had some influence upon the choice of the words used. Be this as it may, we all think that the interpretation which they sanction is well warranted.

We cannot attribute to the legislature an intent to include taxes under the term debts without something more than appears in the acts to show that intention.

The Supreme Court of California, in 1862, had the construction of these acts under consideration in the case of Perry v. Washburn. [Footnote 9] The decisions which we have cited were referred to by Chief Justice Field, now holding a seat on this bench, and the very question we are now considering, "What did Congress intend by the act?" was answered in these words:

"Upon this question, we are clear that it only intended by the terms debts, public and private, such obligations for the payment of money as are founded upon contract."

In whatever light, therefore, we consider this question, whether in the light of the conflict between the legislation of Congress and the taxing power of the states, to which the interpretation, insisted on in behalf of the County of Lane, would give occasion, or in the light of the language of the acts themselves, or in the light of the decisions to which we have referred, we find ourselves brought to the same conclusion, that the clause making the United States notes a legal tender for debts has no reference to taxes imposed by state authority, but relates only to debts in the ordinary sense of the word, arising out of simple contracts or contracts by specialty, which include judgments and recognizances. [Footnote 10]

Whether the word "debts," as used in the act, includes obligations expressly made payable or adjudged to be paid in coin has been argued in another case. We express at present, no opinion on that question. [Footnote 11] [Lane County v. Oregon, 74 U.S. 7 Wall. 71 71 (1868)]

5.6.18 The "Constitutional Rights" Position

"It is elementary when the constitutionality of a statute is assailed, if the statute be reasonably susceptible of two interpretations, by one of which it would be unconstitutional and by the other valid, it is our plain duty to adopt that construction which will save the statute from constitutional infirmity. [Cite omitted.] And unless this rule be considered as meaning that our duty is to first decide that a statute is unconstitutional, and then proceed to hold that such ruling was unnecessary because the statute is susceptible of two constructions, by one of which grave and doubtful constitutional questions are avoided, our duty is to adopt the latter."

Any tax system creates a threat to individual liberty because "the power to tax involves the power to destroy," as Chief Justice John Marshall observed.<sup>189</sup> But the federal income tax and its illegal enforcement within states of the union by the IRS harm civil liberties much more than necessary to raise needed funds for the government. Certainly, the IRS performs poorly and too easily abuses the rights of citizens. But ultimately Congress is to blame for creating an excessively complex and high-rate tax system. New laws to increase taxpayer protections and replacement of the income tax with a simpler, flatter consumption-based tax could greatly reduce the following 10 areas of civil liberties abuse.

1. "Vertical" Inequality. Although equality under the law is a bedrock American principle, the income tax treats citizens unequally. "Vertical" inequality is created by hugely different tax burdens on citizens at different income levels. For example, households earning between $30,000 and $75,000 pay an average 10 percent of their income in federal income taxes, compared to 27 percent for households earning more than $200,000.<sup>190</sup> Fully 36 percent of U.S. households pay no income tax.<sup>191</sup> Besides violating the spirit of equal protection guarantees of the Constitution, such unequal burdens distort perceptions about the costs and benefits of government because programs appear to be free of cost to many.
2. "Horizontal" Inequality. Even people with similar incomes are treated unequally by the many exemptions, deductions, credits, and other intricacies of the income tax. For example, there are 59 income tax provisions that vary depending on marital status.<sup>192</sup> Likewise, the tax differences between homeowners and renters with the same incomes can be thousands of dollars because of itemized deductions for property taxes and mortgage interest. Another disparity is the unequal access to savings vehicles in the tax code depending on individuals' work situations and other factors. If all individual savings were exempt from tax, as under a consumption-based system, individuals would be treated more equally.
3. Complexity, Ambiguity, and Uncertainty. Certainty in the law is a bulwark against arbitrary and abusive government. But there is no certainty under the income tax because it rests on an inherently difficult-to-measure tax base, uses no consistent definition of "income" or other concepts, and is a labyrinth of narrow and limited provisions created by politicians intent on social engineering.<sup>193</sup> The current IRS commissioner concedes that the income tax has become too complex for accurate administration, which is evident in the 28 percent IRS error rate on phone inquiries and 60 percent error rate on audits.<sup>194</sup> Business tax rules are so ambiguous that many disputes drag on for years and are valued in the hundreds of millions of dollars.<sup>195</sup> Individuals are baffled by the complex rules on capital gains, pension and savings plans, and a growing list of targeted incentives. Those complexities would be eliminated under a flat consumption-based tax system.

- 1 4. Huge Size and Instability of Tax Code. Citizens are required to know the country's laws and comply with them. Yet
 2 federal tax rules are massive in scope and constantly changing. Tax statutes, regulations, and related documentation
 3 span 45,662 pages.<sup>196</sup> There were 441 changes to tax rules in last year's tax-cut law alone.<sup>197</sup> That law guaranteed a
 4 decade of tax instability with phased-in changes lasting until 2010. Income tax instability is typified by changes in
 5 taxes on capital. There have been 25 substantial changes in the treatment of long-term capital gains since 1922.<sup>198</sup>
 6 Pension taxing statutes have been substantially changed nearly every year since the early 1980s, creating regulatory
 7 backlogs and leaving employers unsure about how to comply.<sup>199</sup> Last year's tax-cut law alone had 64 separate rule
 8 changes for pension and saving plans.<sup>200</sup>
- 9 5. Lack of Financial Privacy. The broad-based income tax necessitates a large invasion of financial privacy that a low-rate
 10 consumption-based tax could avoid. The IRS regularly gains access to a myriad of personal records, such as mortgage
 11 records, credit card data, phone records, banking and investment records, real property transaction data, and personal
 12 correspondence. This broad IRS authority to obtain records without court supervision has been referred to by the 13 Supreme Court as "a power of inquisition."<sup>201</sup>
- 14 6. Denial of Due Process. The Fifth Amendment right to due process is ignored in many respects by the federal income
 15 tax regime. Due process requires that government provide accused citizens a clear notice of a claim against them and 16 allow the accused a hearing before executing enforcement action. But the IRS engages in many summary judgments,
 17 and enforces them prior to any judicial determinations. Moreover, the very complexity and ambiguity of the income tax
 18 seems to violate due process. In 1926, the Supreme Court noted that a statute that is "so vague that men of common
 19 intelligence must necessarily guess at its meaning and differ as to its application, violates that first essential of due 20 process of law."<sup>202</sup>
- 21 7. Shifting of the Burden of Proof. For non-criminal tax cases -- the vast majority of cases -- the tax code reverses the 22 centuries-old common law principle that the burden of proof rests with the accuser. Except in some narrow
 23 circumstances, the IRS does not have to prove the correctness of its determinations. When the IRS makes erroneous
 24 assessments, as it often does, citizens carry the burden to prove that they are wrong. Efforts to shift the burden of proof
 25 to the IRS in the 1998 IRS Restructuring and Reform Act did not accomplish that goal. In addition, the new rules do
 26 not apply to the 97 percent of IRS actions that are deemed administrative in nature.<sup>203</sup>
- 27 8. No Trial by Jury in U.S. Tax Court. Despite Sixth and Seventh Amendment guarantees of trial by jury, the federal tax
 28 system carefully sidesteps such protections. To contest an IRS tax calculation prior to assessment, one must file a
 29 petition in the U.S. Tax Court. But since this is an administrative court, not an Article III court, no jury trial is required.
 30 To obtain a jury trial and related rights for civil tax cases, one must file suit in a U.S. District Court. But before that can
 31 happen, the alleged tax, penalties, and interest must be paid in full. And if the citizen wins, there is a burdensome route
 32 to retrieving the disputed money. For most people, those rules effectively eliminate the right to trial by jury in tax 33 cases.
- 34 9. Unreasonable Searches and Seizures. In most situations, the Fourth Amendment guarantees that, before the 35 government can search private property and seize records, it must demonstrate to a court that there is "probable cause"
 36 to believe that lawless conduct exists. However, the IRS's summons authority under tax code section 7602 allows it to 37 obtain records of every description from any person without showing probable cause and without a court order. There
 38 has also been an explosion in information reporting required by the IRS and a big expansion in its computer searching
 39 for personal records. Recently, the IRS won the power to access financial data on Visa cards issued by foreign banks.
 40 Many examples of abusive IRS searches and seizures were revealed in U.S. Senate hearings in 1997.<sup>204</sup>

1 10. Forced Self-Incrimination. The requirement to file tax returns sworn to under penalty of perjury operates to invalidate
 2 the Fifth Amendment protection against self-incrimination. Citizens face a legal dilemma. On the one hand, refusing to
 3 file a return would expose a citizen to prosecution for failure to file. On the other hand, disclosing information sought
 4 in tax returns constitutes a waiver of Fifth Amendment protections. The IRS can and does release that information to 5 federal, state, and local agencies for both tax and non-tax related enforcement purposes.

6 Below is a summarized listing of Constitutional Provisions that are violated or conflicted as a result of imposing direct
 7 federal income taxes on earnings from within the United States of America, also called the 50 union states. See section
 8 5.2.2 of this book for further details on these issues:

9 Table 5-79: Laws that income taxes violate

Subject	Law	Explanation
Direct taxes	Article 1, Section 9, Clause 4 states that: "No Capitation or other direct tax shall be laid unless in proportion to the Census or Enumeration herein before directed to be taken."	Congress cannot directly tax incomes without apportionment among the states and based on a Census or Enumeration and not on incomes.
Direct taxes	Article 1, Section 2, Clause 3 of the Constitution states that: "Representatives and direct taxes shall be apportioned among the several States"	Congress cannot directly tax incomes without apportionment among the states. Income taxes are direct taxes.
Prohibition against unreasonable searches and seizure by the government without probable cause and without a warrant	4th Amendment	4th Amendment prohibits unreasonable searches and seizure by the government without probable cause and without a warrant. Also protects security of property and personal effects from the government.
Prohibition of individuals being compelled to be a witness against oneself	5 th Amendment	Being compelled to file a 1040 tax form and become a witness against oneself is unconstitutional
Prohibition against slavery	13th Amendment abolished slavery	Being compelled to pay income taxes is a form of slavery
Violation of due process—government cannot take property from a Citizen without a court hearing	5 th and 14th Amendments require that citizens cannot be deprived of their property without a court hearing	Tax collections violate due process protections, because seizures and levies are commonly instituted without a hearing
Definition of "income"	Article 1, Section 8, Clause 1 Sixteenth Amendment	Supreme court indicated in several cases that "income" means ONLY corporate profit , and not what most people think it is. See Eisner v. Macomber , 252 U.S. 189 (1920); Stratton's Independence v. Howbert , 231 U.S. 399 (1913); Doyle v. Mitchell Brothers Co. , 247 U.S. 179 (1918); Flint v. Stone Tracy Co. , 220 U.S. 107 (1911); Bowers v. Kerbaugh-Empire Co. , 271 U.S. 170 (1926)
Privacy	Fourth Amendment	"The right of the people to be secure in their persons, houses, papers, and effects, against unreasonable searches and seizures, shall not be violated, and no Warrants shall issue, but upon probable cause, supported by Oath or affirmation, and particularly describing the place to be searched, and the persons or things to be seized."

10 Of great interest is the idea that we can use the above conflicts of constitutional law to point out precisely where the federal 11 income tax can lawfully operate. The only place it can operate legally and not conflict with the above statutes and
 12 Constitutional provisions are those places that do not have Constitutional rights (Bill of Rights), and those areas are limited

1 to foreign countries, U.S. territories and possessions, and enclaves within the states that are not covered by the Constitution,
 2 as we pointed out earlier in sections 4.8 and 5.2.12. You don't want to live there or mistakenly tell the government you live
 3 there by signing the default perjury statement they provide at the end of their tax forms (see 28 U.S.C. §1746 for more
 4 about this)! Below are some of the rights you don't have in such areas:

- 5 1. Free speech (First Amendment)
- 6 2. Due process of law (Fourth and Fifth Amendment)
- 7 3. A jury trial (Sixth and Seventh Amendment)
- 8 4. Freedom from direct taxes (1:9:4, 1:2:3 of Constitution).
- 9 5. Freedom from slavery (Thirteenth Amendment)
- 10 6. Financial Privacy (see Fourth Amendment)

11 Without due process of law, then the government can define its jurisdiction and the word "includes" any way it likes. If 12 you then petition your case to U.S. Tax Court as a "taxpayer" and/or a "U.S. person" under 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(30) or 13 statutory "U.S. citizen" under 8 U.S.C. §1401 (a federal serf), which is an Article I court that exercises authority only 14 within such areas, this is exactly the kind of tyranny you have volunteered to subject yourself to.

- 15 • No rights. 28 U.S.C. §2201(a) took away the ability of the court to rule on your rights related to federal taxes. This 16 legislation alone would be illegal if you lived in the 50 Union states and were a "national" as we pointed out in section 17 5.2.12.
- 18 • No jury trial. We show later on in section 6.9.2 that the federal courts aren't even obligated to give you a jury trial if 19 you are suing the federal government for wrongdoing, because they have sovereign immunity and the Constitution
 20 doesn't require it! In the case of U.S. Tax Court, one person who isn't even a judge rules on the case, and the only 21 reason he has any authority at all is because you gave him jurisdiction by petitioning to hear your case in that court.
 22 You didn't have to and you are a fool to do this. You could have gone to U.S. District court instead and been much 23 more likely to get a jury trial.
- 24 • No freedom from direct taxes. Why would a kangaroo Tax Court judge tell you that you don't owe taxes, especially 25 after you realize that the term of his appointment is 15 years and if he rules in your favor, he could be fired? If the IRS
 26 can audit and harass him for not enforcing taxes, why would he rule in your favor, even if the law required it?
- 27 • No free speech. They will suppress your legitimate evidence, and refuse to allow you to bring up religious or first 28 amendment issues.
- 29 • No due process of law. The pseudo-judge can, for instance, define the word "includes" any way he likes to legally 30 expand federal jurisdiction because he doesn't have a Fifth Amendment right he would be violating for doing so! He
 31 can even deny your demand that the government meet its burden of proof by showing the statute that makes you liable
 32 for income taxes, which we now know doesn't even exist!
- 33 • Slavery. Remember that volunteering into the jurisdiction of the U.S. Tax court virtually guarantees that you are 34 volunteering into federal slavery. When you are inside the federal zone, you are inside of a totalitarian monarchy
 35 where the king (Congress/President) are false gods and you are one of their subjects/serfs.

36 The judge in U.S. Tax Court laughs at people who expect their rights to be honored and respected, because he's not 37 obligated to by law under 26 U.S.C. §2201(a)! Your lie to him about your citizenship status and filing a 1040 form, which 38 is the wrong form, describing yourself as a "U.S. individual" (which is a "U.S. person" under 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(30)) at 39 the top of the form was the only thing he needed to know in order to conclude that you live in a federal territory not covered
 40 by the Constitution and that you are a federal serf/slave! Shut up BOY, or we'll empty your pocket, throw you in federal 41 prison, give you 40 lashes and send you to bed hungry without a blanket!

42 Later in section 6.6.4, we will talk about First Amendment violations of church rights by the IRS. We will show how the 43 IRS violates freedom of speech and assembly by denying 501(c ) tax exemptions to religious organizations that are 44 politically active. However, since the First Amendment doesn't apply within foreign countries, federal territories, and
 45 selected enclaves within the states not covered by the Constitution, then the IRS and the federal courts can legally silence
 46 those churches whose members have incorrectly claimed that they are "U.S. citizens", which we said in section 4.11.3
 47 means that they have volunteered into the jurisdiction of the federal courts and have lied to the government that they reside
 48 inside the federal zone.

49 Some members of the legal profession like to contradict the content of this section by asserting that rights can be taxed and
 50 they will cite some of the following Supreme Court Cases as their ammunition:

1            “[T]he laws of all civilized states recognize in every citizen the absolute right to his own earnings, and to the
2            enjoyment of his own property, and the increase thereof, during his life, except so far as the state may require
3            him to contribute his share for public expenses ...”
4            [U.S. v. Perkins, 163 U.S. 625, 627 (1896) ]

5            “Taxes, which are but the means of distributing the burden of the cost of government, are commonly levied on 6            property or its use, but they may likewise be laid on the exercise of personal rights and privileges.”
7            [Carmichael v. Southern Coal & Coke Co., 301 U.S. 495, 508 (1937)]

8            “Government in casting about for proper subjects of taxation is not confined by the traditional classification of 9            interests or estates. It may tax, not only ownership, but any right or privilege that is a constituent of 10            ownership.”
11            [Burnett v. Wells, 289 U.S. 670 (1933)]

12            “However absolute the right of an individual may be, it is still in the nature of that right, that it must bear a 13            portion of the public burdens; and that portion must be determined by the legislature.”
14            [Providence Bank v. Billings, 29 U.S. 514, 563 (1830)]

15            The above cases, for instance, are cited by the following at the address below as proof that income taxes do not violate
16            rights:

Anti-Tax Protester, Brian Rookyard
http://www.geocities.com/b\_rookard/letters.html

17            What all of the above cases have in common is that all of the entities who were being taxed were in receipt of government
18            privileges and/or made some kind of voluntary choice to accept those privileges. We have analyzed each of these cites
19            below for your benefit:

- 20            • U.S. v. Perkins, 163 U.S. 625, 627 (1896): This case was about a state trying to tax the inheritance of a man who 21            died within its jurisdiction and who bequeathed his entire estate to the United States Government. The court ruled
22            that the state had a right to tax the inheritance. The court ruled that the tax was on the deceased and the right of 23            transfer of his property, and not upon the recipient, which in this case was the United States government. The case
24            had nothing to do with personal income taxes and is therefore irrelevant to the theme of this book. The 25            constitution does not forbid inheritance taxes, nor does it even mention them, and we don't dispute anywhere in 26            this book that inheritance taxes are authorized.
- 27            • Carmichael v. Southern Coal & Coke Co., 301 U.S. 495, 508 (1937): This case was filed by two corporations
28            against the government to stop it from levying an unemployment tax against them. Corporations don't have rights,
29            only government granted privileges. The Supreme Court ruled against the corporations and in favor of the state, as 30            they should have. Private rights of a private business that was not a corporation were not in question in this case.
31            Neither were the private rights of a natural person in question.
- 32            • Burnett v. Wells, 289 U.S. 670 (1933): This case dealt with whether life insurance on the creator of a trust which 33            was paid for by the trust he created is considered taxable income, given that the recipient was already a “taxpayer”
34            for his other income and was already filing returns on his other income. Since he was already a “taxpayer” and 35            was therefore “liable” for taxes on income, then it's silly to argue that certain of his income was taxable while
36            other income wasn't. By claiming to be a “taxpayer”, his goose was cooked and he gave the government an 37            opportunity to tax whatever he made. This case has no relationship to the audience for this book, which is entirely
38            and only “nontaxpayers”. This case doesn't decide anything as it relates to “nontaxpayers”. Since Mr. Burnett
39            was a “taxpayer” and identified himself as such by filing a return, he had no rights and essentially admitting to
40            being domiciled in the federal zone and being a “public officer” of the United States government. Saying that the 41            government can tax rights by using as an example a natural person who put himself in the unfortunate position of 42            having no rights is ridiculous.
- 43            • Providence Bank v. Billings, 29 U.S. 514, 563 (1830): This case concerned a state-chartered banking corporation
44            in Rhode Island that sought to avoid taxation by a state. Corporations are creatures of law in receipt of 45            government privileges, and must submit to taxation by the government or state that created them, and the Supreme 46            Court agreed.

47            Can you see the kind of deception that Mr. Rookyard attempted on his unsuspecting readers? He accuses tax honesty
48            advocates of deception all the time but he is guilty of worse deception. In fact, the hypothesis that the government may not

1 tax the exercise of rights of natural persons remains intact, since he has given no concrete examples of the government's
2 ability to tax a natural person who was a "nontaxpayer", who was not in receipt of privileges, and who therefore had rights.

3 The one thing we want to emphasize from this section is that yes, the exercise of rights of a natural person can be taxed, but
4 only if these rights have been relinquished through an informed, voluntary choice of a natural person. That informed choice
5 manifests itself in one of two ways:

- 6 1. The choice of volunteering or consenting to become a "taxpayer" who is therefore "liable" for tax.
- 7 2. The choice to become part of a group of people who have formed a corporation or partnership in receipt of government
8 privileges.

9 The other thing we want to emphasize is that businesses, corporations, partnerships, and trusts are not natural persons and
10 therefore neither they nor the people who function within them have rights relative to the entity they are part of. For 11 instance, neither a corporation nor its officers have a Fifth Amendment right to not incriminate the corporation if they are
12 put on the stand and asked questions about the conduct of the corporation. The only basis they have to refuse to answer
13 under the Fifth Amendment is if they personally were involved in criminal activity. Likewise, a corporation or business
14 does not have a First Amendment right of free speech or freedom of religion.

15 On the basis that income taxes violate all of the constitutional provisions mentioned in this section in the context of natural
16 persons (biological people), Americans domiciled in states of the Union (but NOT in the federal zone) have a massive case
17 against the federal government for fraud, extortion, and racketeering, and a class action lawsuit for these issues is long 18 overdue!

19 5.6.19 The Internal Revenue Code was Repealed in 1939 and we have no tax law

20 What? You didn't know that the Internal Revenue Code was repealed in 1939? Well maybe you should write your 21 Congressman and ask him! We didn't know either until we started to read the Internal Revenue Code for ourselves. Below

23 Internal Revenue Code of 1939, Chapter 2, 53 Stat 1

24 Sec. 4. Repeal and Savings Provisions.—(a) The Internal Revenue Title, as hereinafter set forth, is intended to 25 include all general laws of the United States and parts of such laws, relating exclusively to internal revenue, in
26 force on the 2d day of January 1939 (1) of a permanent nature and (2) of a temporary nature if embraced in 27 said Internal Revenue Title. In furtherance of that purpose, all such laws and parts of laws codified herein, to 28 the extent they relate exclusively to internal revenue, are repealed, effective, except as provided in section 5,
29 on the day following the date of enactment of this act.

30 (b) Such repeal shall not affect any act done or any right accruing or accrued, or any suit or proceeding had
31 or commenced in any civil cause before the said repeal, but all rights and liabilities under said acts shall 32 continue, and may be enforced in the same manner, as if said repeal had not been made; nor shall any office,
33 position, employment board, or committee, be abolished by such repeal, but the same shall continue under the 34 pertinent provisions of the Internal Revenue Title.

35 (c) All offenses committed, and all penalties or forfeitures incurred under any statute hereby repealed, may be
36 prosecuted and punished in the same manner and with the same effect as if this act had not been passed.

37 Sec. 5. Continuance of Existing Law.—Any provision of law in force on the 2d day of January 1939
38 corresponding to a provision contained in the Internal Revenue Title shall remain in force until the
40 [Revenue Act of 1939, 53 Stat. 1, Section 4, emphasis added]

42 <http://www.famguardian.org/Disks/LawDVD/Federal/RevenueActs/Revenue%20Act%20of%201939.pdf>

43 Some people look at the above and try to argue the point that it was repealed. They will cite paragraph 4(b) above and say
44 that the repeal changed nothing. The reason for that paragraph is that for certain persons who had installment agreements
45 and existing liabilities under the old code, the government needed a way to continue their debts until after they were paid
46 off following the repeal. Likewise, there are no committees, employments, positions, etc established by the code so there is

1 nothing to continue. In fact, we have a letter from a Congressman indicating the entire IRS was NOT established by law,
2 so what is there to disestablish if the "code" is repealed?:

3 <http://famguardian.org/Subjects/Taxes/Evidence/IRSNotEstByLaw/IRSnotGov.pdf>

4 Paragraph 4(b) is therefore a red herring. These weasels are slippery and they don't want you to know the truth. What they
5 did was enact the "Title" but not the code within the Title. It is only enacted in the sense that it represents the Statutes at 6 Large from which it was derived, but it DOES NOT and cannot obligate anyone to do anything who does not live on
7 federal property unless they at least volunteer, as we pointed out earlier. The Congress and the Supreme Court both have
8 said many times that the income tax is an indirect excise tax, and all such excise taxes are avoidable by avoiding the activity
9 that is taxed.

10 Based on the above, the Internal Revenue Code of 1939 is not positive law and has been repealed. Every revision of the 11 Internal Revenue Code since then, including the 1954 code, the 1986 code, etc, have all been "amendments" to this 12 repealed code. How can you amend something that isn't an enacted positive law?

QUESTION FOR DOUBTERS: If you don't believe it was repealed, then please answer some questions for us:

1. Why would the legislative notes under 1 U.S.C. §204 say that Title 26 is NOT enacted into positive law?
2. Since the IRS does not exist by the authority of any part of the I.R.C., then of what significance is it to say above that "nor shall any office, position, employment board, or committee, be abolished by such repeal, but the same shall continue under the pertinent provisions of the Internal Revenue Title."? The I.R.C. doesn't establish any committees, employments, offices, or positions whatsoever so this provision has not significance.

13 The 1939 code and all of its successors can therefore not have any effect on anyone except those in government by and for 14 whom it was written. The phrase

15 "all rights and liabilities under said acts shall continue, and may be enforced in the same manner, as if said
16 repeal had not been made".

17 is deliberately misleading. At this point in this chapter, we now know by now that there are not "liabilities" under I.R.C., 18 Subtitles A and C, and that the only natural person made "liable" for anything is in 26 U.S.C. §1461 is the paymaster for 19 Congressmen and the President. Therefore, no rights or liabilities of natural persons in the general public are affected by 20 the Internal Revenue Code since 1939, except for those who declare themselves to be any one of the following three things:

- 21 1. "employees", which are elected or appointed, of the United States government as defined in 26 U.S.C. §3401(c), 26
22 C.F.R. §31.3401(c)-1.
- 23 2. "nonresident aliens" engaged in a "trade or business in the United States" as required by 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26), 26
24 C.F.R. §1.861-8(f)(1)(iv). "Trade or business" is defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26) as the "functions of a public 25 office", and that public office is in the United States Government.
- 26 3. Those ignorant and mislead members of the general public who enter into "voluntary withholding agreements" with the 27 federal government using an IRS Form W-4 and thereby declare themselves to be "employees" of the federal 28 government, who by implication are involved in a "trade or business within the United States government". Look at 29 the upper left corner of the IRS Form W-4. It says "Employee Withholding Allowance Certificate".

30 We also learned earlier in the chapter that the IRS is not an "enforcement" agency, that there are not implementing
31 regulations authorizing collection or enforcement of Subtitle A income taxes (see section 5.4.15 through 5.4.19), and that
32 the revenues collected under Subtitle A are therefore donations and gifts to the United States government, which are 33 defined in 31 U.S.C. §321(d). Consequently, the repeal of the code in 1939 meant that only government employees could 34 be affected by it from that point forward, and that no one else's rights could be affected domiciled in states of the Union.
35 The IRS had their "balls" chopped off at that point, so why are they still with us?

36 Sometimes, the truth about our tax system can be stranger than fiction, folks! This is so because money is the root of all
37 evil, and the great lengths that politicians will go to steal your money astounds the average person when they find out about 38 it.

39 5.6.20 Use of the Term "State" in Defining State Taxing Jurisdiction

1 Most state constitutions do not allow residents of the state to be liable for state income taxes because of the constraints
 2 imposed by the first ten amendments to the U.S. Constitution under the Fourteenth Amendment. This creates a difficult
 3 situation for the states in collecting income taxes. The legislators at the state level had to play the same kind of word games
 4 as the federal government to fool natural persons who are state residents into thinking they were liable for state income
 5 taxes. How did they do it? They played with the definition of the word "State" in their tax codes!

6 For the sake of comparison, we begin by crafting a definition of "State" which is deliberately designed to create absolutely
 7 no doubt or ambiguity about its meaning:

8 For the sole purpose of establishing a benchmark of clarity, the term "State" means any one of the 50 States of 9 the Union, the District of Columbia, the territories and possessions belonging to the Congress, and the federal
 10 enclaves lawfully ceded to the Congress by any of the 50 States of the Union.

11 Now, compare this benchmark with the various definitions of the word "State" that are found in Black's Law Dictionary
 12 and in the Internal Revenue Code. Black's is a good place to start, because it clearly defines two different kinds of "states".
 13 The first kind of state defines a member of the Union, i.e., one of the 50 Union states which are united by and under the 14 U.S. Constitution:

 16 states of the United States of America.

18 The second kind of state defines a federal state, which is entirely different from a member of the Union:

19 *Any state of the United States**, the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, and any territory*
 20 or possession subject to the legislative authority of the United States. Uniform Probate Code, Section 1-

23 The term "State" is also defined in 4 U.S.C. §§105-113 as part of the Buck Act of 1940. 4 U.S.C. §110(d) defines "State"
 24 as follows:

25 TITLE 4 - FLAG AND SEAL, SEAT OF GOVERNMENT, AND THE STATES
 26 CHAPTER 4 - THE STATES
 27 Sec. 110 Definitions

28 (d) The term "State" includes any Territory or possession of the United States.

29 Notice carefully that a state of the Union is not defined as being "subject to the legislative authority of the United States"
 30 because states are sovereign. Also, be aware that there are several different definitions of "State" in the IRC, depending on 31 the context. One of the most important of these is found in a chapter specifically dedicated to providing definitions, that is,
 32 Chapter 79 (not exactly the front of the book). To de-code the Code, read it backwards! In this chapter of definitions, we 33 find the following:

34 When used in this title, where not otherwise distinctly expressed or manifestly incompatible with the intent
 35 thereof -- ...

36 (10) State. -- The term "State" shall be construed to include the District of Columbia, where such

38 [I.R.C. §7701(a)(10)]

39 [emphasis added]

40 Already, it is obvious that this definition leaves much to be debated because it is ambiguous and it is not nearly as clear as
 41 our "established benchmark of clarity" (which will be engraved in marble a week from Tuesday). Does the definition
 42 restrict the term "State" to mean only the District of Columbia? Or does it expand the term "State" to mean the District of 43 Columbia in addition to the 50 States of the Union? And how do we decide? We would argue the that confusion created by this definition on the part of the authors in Congress is deliberate!

The California Revenue and Taxation Code (R&TC) capitalizes on this confusion by introducing a similar definition of the term "State" that is consistent with the one above but is more clear:

You can read the above for yourself at: <http://www.leginfo.ca.gov/cgi-bin/displaycode?section=rtc&group=17001-18000&file=17001-17039.1>. This definition basically says that "State" means federal enclaves within the borders of the state. We only present California law here as an example, but most states do the same thing in their tax code as California with their definition of "State".

Why does the definition of "State" matter? Because California, it turns out, only taxes nonresidents of California! California's Franchise Tax Board Form 590, the Withholding Exemption Certificate, says:

I certify that for the reasons checked below, the entity or individual named on this form is exempt from California income tax withholding requirements on payment(s) made to the entity or individual. Read the following carefully and check the box that applies to the vendor/payee:

Individuals—Certification of Residency

I am a resident of California and I reside at the address shown above. If I become a nonresident at any time, I will promptly inform the withholding agent. See instructions for Form 590. General Information D. for the definition of resident.

B. Law

R&TC Section 18662 and the related regulations require withholding of income or franchise tax on payments of California source income made to nonresidents of this state.

So you only pay income tax if you are a nonresident of California. But how do they fool residents of California into declaring they are nonresidents or have income as a nonresident? They do it with the word "State". On line 12 of the California form 540 income tax return, the state companion to the 1040, they state:

Why didn't they just put "income" on this line, you might ask? The answer is that they wanted to fool you! So what they are saying is that the income appearing on line 12 is income originating from within federal enclaves within California! If you put anything other than zero on this line, you are admitting that you:

1. Are a nonresident of California because you live in a federal enclave within the state.
2. Have income from within that federal enclave within the state.
3. Because you live within that enclave, you have no Constitutional rights under the Fourteenth Amendment because the Fourteenth Amendment only applies on nonfederal land within the states.
4. Without Constitutional rights, you are liable for paying income taxes and can't claim the Fifth Amendment protections of due process and the privilege of non-self incrimination.

The Federal government has cooperated with them in the above fraud by passing what is called the Assimilated Crimes Act, found in 18 U.S.C. §13. Subsection (a) of this section of the federal criminal code at first glance would appear attempt to apply prevailing state law inside of federal enclaves within States. However, the definition of "State" used in that section actually means federal States and not the sovereign 50 Union states or areas within those states outside of federal jurisdiction. Otherwise, the Separation of Powers Doctrine would be nullified. You can read more about this trickery earlier in section 5.2.14.

1 When you expose this fraud for what it is on your state tax return as we have and call the bluff of your state taxing
 2 authority, they will respond with an automated letter that has all kinds of court case cites, but if you look at the cites
 3 closely, they are almost entirely from federal courts. They couldn't cite any cases from their own state courts even if they
 4 wanted to, because they know that the federal zone is outside of their territorial jurisdiction and if you are paying income
 5 taxes, you by implication reside there and are a nonresident of your state! As we pointed out in section 5.2.14, the states
 6 are "foreign countries" and "foreign states" with respect to the federal government, which means that your state in effect is
 7 admitting in their responsive letter that you reside inside of the federal zone by using federal courts as their authority!
 8 Leave it to a slimy state tax lawyer to think up a scheme and a scam like this! This is a conspiracy against rights if we ever
 9 saw one and it should have been exposed on a massive scale a long time ago.

10 5.6.21 Why you aren't an "exempt" individual

12 "Exempt. To release, discharge, waive, relieve from liability. To relieve, excuse, or set free from a duty or 13 service imposed upon the general class to which the individual exempted belongs; as to exempt from military
 14 service. [ . . . ] See also Exemption; Exemption laws."
 15 [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 571]

16 "Exempt individuals" are statutorily defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(5).

18 Sec. 7701 - Definitions

19 (b)(5) Exempt individual defined

20 For purposes of this subsection –

21 (A) In general

22 An individual is an exempt individual for any day if, for such day, such individual is -

- 23 (i) a foreign government-related individual,
- 24 (ii) a teacher or trainee,
- 25 (iii) a student, or
- 26 (iv) a professional athlete who is temporarily in the United States to compete in a charitable sports
- 27 event described in section 274(l)(1)(B).

28 (B) Foreign government-related individual

29 The term "foreign government-related individual" means any individual temporarily present in the United

30 States by reason of -

- 31 (i) diplomatic status, or a visa which the Secretary (after consultation with the Secretary of State)
- 32 determines represents full-time diplomatic or consular status for purposes of this subsection,
- 33 (ii) being a full-time employee of an international organization, or
- 34 (iii) being a member of the immediate family of an individual described in clause (i) or (ii).

35 (C) Teacher or trainee

36 The term "teacher or trainee" means any individual -

- 37 (i) who is temporarily present in the United States under subparagraph (J) or (Q) of section 101(15)
- 38 of the Immigration and Nationality Act (other than as a student), and
- 39 (ii) who substantially complies with the requirements for being so present.

40 (D) Student

41 The term "student" means any individual -

- 42 (i) who is temporarily present in the United States -
- 43 (I) under subparagraph (F) or (M) of section 101(15) of the Immigration and Nationality Act, or
- 44 (II) as a student under subparagraph (J) or (Q) of such section 101(15), and (ii) who substantially
- 45 complies with the requirements for being so present.

46 (E) Special rules for teachers, trainees, and students

- 47 (i) Limitation on teachers and trainees
- 48 An individual shall not be treated as an exempt individual by reason of clause (ii) of subparagraph
- 49 (A) for the current year if, for any 2 calendar years during the preceding 6 calendar years, such
- 50 person was an exempt person under clause (ii) or (iii) of subparagraph (A). In the case of an
- 51 individual all of whose compensation is described in section 872(b)(3), the preceding sentence shall
- 52 be applied by substituting "4 calendar years" for "2 calendar years".

53 (ii) Limitation on students

54 For any calendar year after the 5th calendar year for which an individual was an exempt individual

55 under clause (ii) or (iii) of subparagraph (A), such individual shall not be treated as an exempt

56 individual by reason of clause (iii) of subparagraph (A), unless such individual establishes to the

57 satisfaction of the Secretary that such individual does not intend to permanently reside in the United

58 States and that such individual meets the requirements of subparagraph (D)(ii).

To be “exempt”, one must first be otherwise liable in general for something and then lose the liability by virtue of meeting some special provision of the I.R.C. listed above. Most people are not “exempt individuals” because they do not meet any of the above criteria, and only those who are “exempt” should be filling out the word “EXEMPT” on an IRS Form W-4. As we point out repeatedly throughout this book and especially the Tax Fraud Prevention Manual, Form #06.008, the W-4, in fact, is the WRONG form to be using to stop withholding for most Americans. The correct form is the W-8BEN form, which may be used by “nationals” and “non-resident non-persons”. The form should be modified to add to Block 3 “non-resident non-person non-taxpayers”. We showed earlier in section 5.6.13 and following that this is the status of Americans born in states of the Union and living and working outside of federal jurisdiction.

Being an “exempt individual” and being an “nontaxpayer” are entirely different things that are not equivalent. The term “nontaxpayer” is not even defined in the Internal Revenue Code or the legal dictionary and is only defined by the courts, but it means someone who is not subject to the jurisdiction of the Internal Revenue Code because he or she does not come under its provisions. This condition may be caused by any one of the following factors and possibly others not listed:

1. One is a “nonresident” of the jurisdiction, meaning that he is not subject to the territorial jurisdiction of the law or statute.
2. One is not engaged in any excise taxable activity identified in the code and has no earnings that would “effectively connect” them to the I.R.C. Recall that 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1(a)(2)(ii) says that only income of “aliens” and “nonresident aliens” which is “effectively connected with a trade or business” is subject to the code. Since “trade or business” is statutorily defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26) as the “functions of a public office”, if one is not engaged in a public office, is not a federal corporation involved in interstate or foreign commerce coming under the provisions of Article 1, Section 8, Clause 3 of the Constitution, then one is not the proper subject of the code.
3. One is not the subject of the code by virtue of a Constitution restriction on the taxing power of Congress. For instance, Article 1, Section 9, Clause 4 and Article 1, Section 2, Clause 3 specifically state that the federal government has no power to institute direct taxes on anything other than a State, and may not directly tax individuals. If one is an individual domiciled in a state of the Union, then one is not the proper subject of any direct federal tax, and this includes all of Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A.

Of the two statuses, “exempt” and “nontaxpayer”, the preferable one to have is that of a “nontaxpayer”, which is a person not subject to the jurisdiction of the Internal Revenue Code at all. For instance, people domiciled in China are all “nontaxpayers” relative to the Internal Revenue Code. As soon as they either get involved in importing goods into the country, which is foreign commerce, or hold a “public office” in the United States government for compensation, then they become subject to federal jurisdiction because they involved themselves in an excise taxable privileged activity. Likewise, a person who lives in California is a “nonresident” and an “alien” with respect to an adjacent state such as Nevada, and therefore is a “nontaxpayer” with respect to Nevada state tax laws.

5.7.5 The Irwin Schiff Position

There are many different approaches to rid oneself of income taxes illegally enforced by the IRS. The most popular approach by far as of the writing of this book is the Irwin Schiff approach. Mr. Schiff has been de-taxing people since 1985, which is longer than most other people in the freedom movement. During that time, he has perfected his approach to make many of his techniques very effective. His overall approach has some serious flaws that have drawn warranted government ire, but there is still much that we can learn from his approach. We'll give a summary of his approach in this section to show you how what we have learned elsewhere in this book applies to the practical aspects of untaxing yourself. We have attended his seminars and are impressed with the thoroughness of his approach but we don't recommend his zero return method because he uses the wrong form, which is the 1040 instead of the 1040NR. You are also encouraged to visit his website at:

Pay No Income Tax Website, Irwin Schiff

Table 5-80: Summary of the Irwin Schiff Position

#	Element	Description
1. JURISDICITON AND AUTHORITY
1.1	The IRS has no delegated authority to do anything! The 1954 code removed all references to the Commissioner of the IRS from the 1939 code and replaced these references with the Secretary of the Treasury.	Read the code yourself or search it electronically online at http://www4.law.cornell.edu/uscode/ . You will not find a single reference anywhere giving the IRS authority to do anything . There are also NO delegation of authority orders from the Secretary of the Treasury to the IRS delegating that authority.

#	Element	Description
1.2	Most IRS agents are ignorant of the law. They are just clerks with no delegated authority and: “Clerks are jerks!” Holding an Internal Revenue Code book in front of an IRS agent is like holding a cross in front of a vampire!	IRS agents are taught about procedures and not law. If they knew the law and that what they were doing was illegal, they would quit in droves because they were being asked to do things that they knew were illegal and unethical.
2. LIABILITY
2.1	We don't file tax returns, we file “confessions”. Since the constitution says that we can't be compelled to testify against ourselves under the Fifth Amendment, then we can't be compelled to file tax returns or assess ourselves.	Justice Hugo Black declared in U.S. v. Kahriger, 345 U.S. 22 (1953) that, “The United States has a system of taxation by confession.” (Italics added). Since the courts are corrupt, however, Irwin recommends filing zero returns to avoid “Willful Failure to File” convictions under 26 U.S.C. 7203. Doing so ensures that the clock starts on the statute of limitations so they can't go back indefinitely for taxes not paid (there is no statute of limitations for back taxes if you don't file).
2.2	“Income” means Corporate Profit according to the Supreme Court	Congress cannot either define statutorily or change the definition of “income”. The Constitution is the only thing that can define it. The Supreme Court has ruled repeatedly that the income tax is an indirect excise tax on corporate profits. See section 5.6.5 earlier for an exhaustive treatment of this subject.
2.3	We have no taxable “income” as defined by the Supreme Court.	Because natural persons or biological people can't have a “profit” and they aren't corporations, then they have no taxable income. Look at 26 U.S.C. §61 and you will find that it defines “gross income” without defining “income”. You can't have “gross income” until you have “income”.
2.4	Without any taxable income, we are NOT LIABLE for payment of income taxes.	You only pay tax if you have taxable income.
2.5	Most state income taxes require a federal liability before there is a state liability. Therefore, if you file a federal return saying you have zero income, then you would be committing perjury to not do the same thing on your state return.	California is one example of this, but it also applies in New York and Texas and other states.
2.6	Payment of income taxes is strictly voluntary..	See Flora v. U.S., 362 U.S. 145 (1960) for the Supreme Court's opinion on the voluntary nature of income taxes. The privacy act notice in the 1040 booklet doesn't say we are liable. It says “you must file a return or statement for any tax you are liable for.” But there is NO LAW that makes you liable! The government tries to confuse people on this issue by throwing in the word “compliance” after the word “voluntary” to keep people in cognitive dissonance so they think they have to comply, but in fact, they aren't liable for any tax. If you look in the index for the Internal Revenue Code, under the subject of “Liability for tax”, you will find NO MENTION of income taxes!
2.7	You aren't obligated to incriminate yourself	The 1040 Privacy Act Notice also tries to confuse the government's ability to ask for information with your legal liability to provide it. Under the Fifth Amendment, you cannot be forced to testify against yourself, nor to answer any questions at a summons or IRS examination. Even the IRS' own Handbook for Special Agents says you don't have to provide ANYTHING, including books or records, about yourself.

#	Element	Description
2.8	There IS NO law that makes us liable for the payment of income taxes.	Ask the IRS to show you the law! Show them the code book and demand that they show you the law!
2.9	The income tax system is based on self-assessment . The IRS CANNOT assess you. Only YOU can assess yourself.	No IRS agent has a delegation order that allows them to prepare a Form 1040 for you because income taxes are voluntary.  The Internal Revenue Manual (IRM) does not allow IRS agents to prepare form 1040's for persons either. See Section 5500.
2.10	Assessing yourself for having ZERO INCOME means you don't have to pay income taxes, since the IRS can't assess you.	You aren't liable unless you have taxable income.
2.11	The courts and the legal profession are corrupt and we should try to stay out of them. Don't go to a lawyer if you want the truth about income taxes.	Irwin Schiff's methods help you stay out of court.
3. EXAMINATIONS, RECORDS, AND ASSESSMENTS
3.1	The Internal Revenue Code says the only person other than the person filing the return who is authorized to do assessments is the Secretary of the Treasury, not the IRS, and he is NOT authorized to do assessments on other than stamp taxes for cigarettes and alcohol.	See 26 U.S.C. Section 6201(a)(1) for further details.
3.2	Since we have never been assessed as having anything other than zero income, then we can't be expected to pay any tax.	The IRS likes to try to drag people into tax court so the corrupt pseudo-judges there can extort your money. He has proven techniques to win in U.S. Tax Court as well.
3.3	The IRS must issue a "Notice and Demand" before it can attempt collection activity, including liens, levies, and seizures and it never issues a valid one.	See 26 C.F.R. §301.6303-1. This regulation, however, does not have the force of law because it is not a legislative regulation and does not point to a statute for its authority. It exceeds the delegated authority of the IRS to issue such a notice and demand. See also item 3.4 below.
3.4	There is no law requiring us to keep records of income or expenses under Subtitles A and C income taxes. 26 U.S.C. Section 6001 says the Secretary of the Treasury must personally notify us of the requirement to keep records and absent a regulation requiring records, we aren't liable to do this.	26 U.S.C. §6001 says: "Whenever in the judgment of the Secretary it is necessary, he may require any person, by notice served upon such person or by regulations, to make such returns, render such statements, or keep such records, as the Secretary deems sufficient to show whether or not such person is liable for tax under this title."  There are not laws mentioning records under Subtitles A and C, even though the other subtitles have such requirements. See 26 U.S.C. Sections 4403, 5114, 5124, and 5741 and their implementing regulations for examples.
4. COLLECTIONS AND DISTRRAINT
4.1	The IRS must issue a "Notice and Demand" before it can attempt collection activity, including liens, levies, and seizures and it never issues a valid one.	See 26 C.F.R. §301.6303-1. This regulation, however, does not have the force of law because it is not a legislative regulation and does not point to a statute for its authority. It exceeds the authority of the delegated authority of the IRS to issue such a notice and demand. See also item 3.4 below.

#	Element	Description
4.2	Collection activity requires a proper delegation order by the agent administering the code, and NO agents have enforcement or collection authority as indicated by their pocket commission.	Agents must have enforcement ability and an "E" suffix on their badge in order to institute collections. See Internal Revenue Manual (IRM), [1.16.4]3.1 through [1.16.4] 3.2.
4.3	We should at all times question authority of everyone we are dealing with at the IRS by insisting on seeing their pocket commission and their Delegation Orders.	IRS agents routinely try to exceed their delegated authority in order to maximize their "productivity" (the amount of extorted assets) so that they can get raises and promotions. Read the Supreme Court case of Federal Crop Insurance v. Merrill , 332 U.S. 380-388 for the following quote: "Anyone entering into an arrangement with the government takes the risk of having accurately ascertained that he who purports to act for the government stays within the bounds of his authority, even though the agent himself may be unaware of the limitations upon his authority."
4.4	There are three types of regulations: legislative, interpretive, and procedural. Only legislative regulations have the force of law. Only those regulations that have a citation of a specific statute at the bottom are legislative and have the force of law. Most regulations that purport to try to enforce Subtitle A income taxes are not legislative regulations and do not have the force of law as indicted by the absence of a statutory citation at the bottom	Examples of regulations that are NOT legislative because they do NOT refer to a section of the Internal Revenue Code in the notes are: 26 C.F.R. §301.6303-1 (Notice and Demand) 26 C.F.R. §301.6331-1 (Levy and distraint)  These are bogus or bootleg regulations that you must remind everyone do not have the force of law!
4.5	The Parallel Table of Authorities in the 26 C.F.R. indicates that the only regulations that authorize distraint are contained in 27 U.S.C. having to do with Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms. There are NO regulations for any of the enforcement provisions of Subtitle F that point anywhere in Subtitles A and C, for instance.	Look at the Parallel Table of Authorities for yourself at: http://www.access.gpo.gov/nara/cfr/parallel/parallel_table.html

1 Because we describe most of the above issues he raises elsewhere in this book and even in this chapter, we won't repeat
2 them here to keep the size of the book to a minimum. We did, however, want to summarize his position very succinctly to
3 give you a flavor for how the most popular untaxing advocate in the country approaches the problem. Based on the above
4 approaches, Mr. Schiff recommends to his thousands of students the annual filing of a "zero return" on an IRS Form 1040.
5 A zero return is one where everything on the return is zero except for the tax paid, and therefore, by filing a return you are
6 requesting everything back. Even if you have a nonzero number reported on the W-2's from your employer, the "income"
7 is zero because the Supreme Court defines "income" as corporate profit. Mr. Schiff is correct on this point, but what he
8 fails to realize is that anyone who works for the government works for a federal corporation as an "employee", and
9 especially those who file even the W-4 Exempt. As such, they earn "corporate profit" for the federal corporation, which is 10 their "employer" and the tax return is a "profit and loss statement" for what essentially amounts to a privileged federal 11 business trust that is a "public office" wholly owned by the national government, for which all "employees" are trustees and 12 "public officers" completely subject to the I.R.C. See:

Resignation of Compelled Social Security Trustee, Family Guardian Fellowship
<http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/Forms/Emancipation/SSTrustIndenture.pdf>

Schiff describes his “zero return” approach in a book he publishes entitled The Federal Mafia: How the Government Illegally Imposes and Unlawfully Collects Income Taxes, ISBN 0-930374-09-6 available from Freedom Books, Las Vegas, NV 89104; 702-385-6920 for $38. Mr. Schiff's tangles with the federal government have been numerous over the years, and his Mafia book is a storyteller's perspective on his odyssey, which is quite interesting.

Mr. Schiff publishes an annual product called his “Schiff Reports” for $100 per year which is a series of audio cassettes that contain excerpts from his lectures and seminars and which address selected topics. Each new Schiff report incorporates the latest updates to his procedures based on lessons learned to that point. These reports are where you learn about his processes and the practical aspects of how to deal with the IRS. He does not discuss processes in any of his books because he says they are too dynamic. He therefore does not document or publish a description of his processes and procedures as we attempt to do in Chapter 3 of the Tax Fraud Prevention Manual, Form #06.008. Everything is in audio format and is not indexed, which means that it may be more difficult than necessary to find the specific help that you need for your given situation. Nevertheless, his materials are very good and we recommend them highly.

The weak point of Mr. Schiff's approach is that he thinks citizenship is irrelevant and unimportant and that it doesn't matter what tax return or withholding form you file, so he says filing an IRS Form 1040 filled with zeros and a W-4 Exempt is fine. This is a HUGE mistake. We instead use either a “not liable” or a one cent return and file an IRS Form 1040NREZ instead of a 1040 so that our return reflects our proper status as “non-resident non-persons” to the foreign jurisdiction known as the Internal Revenue Code. For our withholding forms, we use a modified version of the W-8BEN form. See:

About IRS Form W-8BEN, Form #04.202

We believe that the reason Mr. Schiff has gotten into so much trouble in the federal courts over the years most likely is because of what we perceive are the following weaknesses in his position which he doesn't seem inclined to want to fix:

1. He is obstinate, arrogant, and refuses to learn from the research of others or listen to anything they have to say. It is difficult to get a word in edge wise when he is in the same room with you.
2. Files form 1040, indicating that he is an “alien” domiciled inside the federal zone, which means he has no Constitutional rights. At the same time, he wonders why the federal courts disregard his Constitutional rights. We instead suggest filing the 1040NREZ. IRS Document 7130 says that the 1040 form is only for use by statutory “U.S. citizens and residents”, who collectively are “U.S. persons” defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(30) who have a domicile in the federal zone. This needlessly subjects Schiff to the jurisdiction of what actually are foreign courts for a person domiciled in a state of the Union. Bad idea!
3. Doesn't know what a “nontaxpayer” is or doesn't declare himself to be a “nontaxpayer” as we discussed earlier in section 5.3.1. He therefore erroneously uses the Internal Revenue Code for his basis of claims against the U.S. government, never realizing that he should instead not be using any part of the IRC in his legal defense other than to prove he is a “nontaxpayer” and file a due process violation suit under 28 U.S.C. §1331 and 28 U.S.C. §1332, claiming “diversity of citizenship”. Instead, he never claims diversity of citizenship, creating a false presumption by the court that he is a “U.S. citizen”, which means he has no Constitutional rights. The lack of Constitutional rights then forms the basis for why the court can disregard his rights, so he just sits there and goes in circles, runs up legal fees unnecessarily, and litigates the wrong issues.
4. Erroneously thinks he is a statutory “U.S. citizen” pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1401, which makes him a “U.S. person” domiciled in the federal zone and needlessly gives federal courts jurisdiction they wouldn't otherwise have over him. Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 17(b) says that the law applicable to anyone is the law of their domicile, and if you have a domicile outside the federal zone, then you aren't subject to federal law, including the I.R.C.
5. Uses form W-4 Exempt to stop withholding, which constitutes an erroneous assertion that you are a “U.S. person” and a federal “employee”, which is a “public officer” of the United States government as defined in 26 C.F.R. §31.3401(c) who is completely subject to the penalty provisions of the I.R.C. §6671(b) and 7343. We instead use one of the following two forms:
  - 5.1. Amended IRS Form W-8BEN, Form #04.202
<http://sedm.org/Forms/04-Tax/W-8BEN/AboutIRSFormW-8BEN.htm>
  - 5.2. Affidavit of Citizenship, Domicile, and Tax Status, Form #02.001
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>
6. Doesn't think it's important to modify the perjury statement on the forms he files with the government to put him OUTSIDE of federal jurisdiction so that he is outside of the legislative and judicial jurisdiction of the government.

7. Attacks other freedom advocates for their weaknesses and doesn't complement them for the things they do right. This isolates him and makes him an easy government target for persecution. Without friends and a support network of like-minded freedom fighters, he is literally a sitting duck.
8. Schiff doesn't understand federal jurisdiction or any of the implications of the separation of powers doctrine. Consequently, he, like many others, does not endorse or agree with the Non-Resident Non-Person Position that is the foundation of this book. This incomplete understanding is the main reason the government keeps hauling him into court: Because his own behavior has given them false evidence on government forms he has submitted over the years which demonstrates that he has a domicile in the foreign jurisdiction of the federal government.
9. Doesn't understand that I.R.C., Subtitle A describes an indirect excise tax upon a "trade or business". Therefore, he doesn't rebut information returns that create a prima facie presumption that his earnings are "taxable income". This is a HUGE oversight. See:

Income Tax Withholding and Reporting Course, Form #12.004
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

Other than the above defects, we believe that Mr. Schiff's ideas summarized above correct but terribly incomplete and inadequate and unusable for the average American. We follow his zero income tax return idea but use the 1040NR form instead, and use our own letter instead of the one he sells on CD-ROM to his students. Our example letter remedies the weaknesses in his position above by emphasizing non-resident non-person status, rescission of signatures, and amendment of government records to correctly reflect your "national" citizenship status. You can find that letter at:

While at his seminar on October 7, 2001, we asked Mr. Schiff what he had to say about various other untaxing experts and the various positions mentioned in this book and this chapter that they advocate. We have summarized his answers in the list below for your benefit.

DISCLAIMER: The views expressed below are not those of the author, but those imputed to Mr. Irwin Schiff. We are simply reporting what we heard for the purpose of expanding your education about freedom and taxes.

1. Avoid Bill Conklin. He is a fraud. All he wants is your money but he can't do anything for you. He'll charge you $700 and then tell you that you should pay your taxes in full and ask for a refund, which you will never get. He advises not filing W-4 Exempts and it's perfectly legal and proper to do so.
2. Otto Skinner is way off base. His books are ridiculous nonsense. He spends more time criticizing other untaxing experts than he spends helping his own people with his flawed arguments.
3. The 861 argument advocated by Larken Rose is myopic and doesn't look at the big picture. It's way too complicated for the average person to deal with and doesn't focus on the real issues of the voluntary nature of income taxes and the limited authority and jurisdiction of the IRS.
4. Changing your citizenship, becoming a nonresident alien, or expatriating to avoid tax are unnecessary, because the law very clearly says Citizens aren't liable for income taxes. The problem is not our citizenship or the tax code. The Internal Revenue Code is fine and it clearly says most Americans born in and living within states of the Union aren't liable for income taxes. The problem is the corruption in the federal courts and the legal profession. We agree with him on that!
5. The biggest collection of criminals in the country sits on the federal bench. You are a fool if you trust a lawyer to protect your rights when it comes to income taxes. Most lawyers are incompetent wimps who are only interested in their own pocketbook. And after they get tired of practicing law, they promote themselves to the next highest level of incompetence consistent with the Peter Principle and become corrupt federal judges!

5.7.6 The 861 "Source" Position

The "861 source" argument is a complicated argument used most often by those who profess themselves to be any of the following:

1. Statutory "U.S.** citizens" under 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1(c).
2. Statutory "residents" as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(A).
3. Statutory "taxpayers" as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(14) and 26 U.S.C. §1313.

1 . . . instead of their proper status as “nationals” and “non-resident non-persons” (see discussion starting in section 5.6.13
 2 later). Most often, this position is used by itself with no other supporting arguments or defenses by those who prefer to
 3 “live within the code” (the I.R.C.) and keep their position simple and easy to deal with administratively. On a number of
 4 occasions, it has embarrassed the IRS, who gave its proponents refunds. In the case of Dave Bossett, an accountant, he got
 5 several thousand dollars back in refunds. The IRS was so embarrassed by the highly publicized event that they sued to get
 6 their refund money back. Starting in February 2001, the IRS went on a rampage against those who promoted this
 7 argument, including Thurston Bell, who now has an injunction against him, Larken Rose, who was convicted on failure to
 8 file in August 2005, and Dave Bossett, who had an injunction issued against him. As of 2005, federal courts have taken a 9 dim view of those who use this argument, even though not one case has actually dealt directly with the issues.
 10 Consequently, they are proceeding under presumption and legislating from the bench on this issue to keep the dam from 11 breaking.

12 The 861 position relies on 26 U.S.C. §861 and implementing regulations to show that “income” as legally defined from 13 “within the (federal) United States” and not associated with specific taxable activities or sources is not subject to tax. The 14 weakness of the 861 argument is that because the people who use it are simplistic in their legal approach, they most often 15 don't understand the following:

- 16 1. The effect of “domicile” on one's status and liability. See section 5.4.8 earlier, which has some VERY important 17 information on this subject.
- 18 2. The separation of powers between the state and federal government and the affect this has on the legislative jurisdiction
 19 of the federal government within states of the Union.
- 20 3. The fact that the Internal Revenue Code is not “positive law”, and therefore Subtitles A and C are irrelevant to those 21 outside of exclusive/general federal jurisdiction. See section 5.4.4 and following.
- 22 4. The definition of words of art like “United States”, or “State” found in 26 U.S.C. §7701 or in section 4.6.
- 23 5. “income” means corporate profit because Subtitle A income taxes are indirect excise taxes as we discussed earlier in
 24 section 5.6.5
- 25 6. The definitions of “employee”, and “trade or business” found earlier in sections 3.12.1.5 or 3.12.1.22.
- 26 7. The very limited territorial jurisdiction of the U.S. government and federal courts, which is limited to the federal zone
 27 for all matters relating to the Internal Revenue Code Subtitles A through C.
- 28 8. Their proper citizenship status as “nationals” or “state nationals” rather than “U.S. citizens”, which we clarified earlier 29 in chapter 4.
- 30 9. The lack of liability statutes under Subtitle A and no implementing regulations authorizing enforcement activity like 31 penalties or collection. Consequently, the code can only be enforced against federal employees without implementing 32 regulations, as shown in 44 U.S.C. §1505(a)(1). We explained this, for instance, earlier in sections 5.4.15, 5.4.17, and 33 5.4.18.
- 34 10. That I.R.C., Subtitle A is primarily a tax upon a “trade or business”, and that most people end up owing money
 35 primarily because the forms that they file or are filed against them in most cases contain false information that creates a
 36 false presumption that they are “taxpayers”. They don't understand, for instance, that these false reports must be
 37 corrected to remove the prima facie presumption that they are “taxpayers”, and that life will be hell if they don't 38 correct these false reports. See:

Income Tax Withholding and Reporting Course, Form #12.004

<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

39 In our own personal case, we avoid this argument because it is too complicated to defend and overlooks much more
 40 important issues like those above. Because of their relative ignorance (in most but not all cases), proponents of the 861
 41 position therefore get trapped into committing fraud on their tax returns by incorrectly claiming that they are “U.S.**
 42 individuals”, which is what it says at the top of the 1040 form they file, and they are tricked and confused by specious and
 43 downright incorrect arguments of the IRS that invalidate the 861 position. They also misrepresent their domicile status on 44 the 1040 form they file by basically admitting that they live in the federal united States (see 28 U.S.C. §1746(2)). Their
 45 relative ignorance, in turn, needlessly subjects them to the jurisdiction of the federal courts, which then use their ignorance
 46 to financially and legally abuse and enslave them and deprive them of constitutional rights. This is the same failing of 47 Irwin Schiff and his followers, because they also file form 1040 and claim to be statutory “U.S. citizens” and “U.S.
 48 Individuals”. Remember that once you falsely conclude that you live inside the federal zone as 861 proponents do:

- 49 1. You lose your constitutional rights because constitutional rights don't apply to federal territories over which the 50 U.S. is sovereign as per Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 (1901).

2. All of your earnings are classified as a “trade or business” under 26 U.S.C. §864(c)(3). See our article on the trade or business scam starting earlier in section 5.6.12.

The above considerations are why we said in Chapter 4 and section 5.6.13.1 that you are making a BIG mistake to claim you are a “U.S.** citizen” under 8 U.S.C. §1401 or “resident” (alien), under 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(A), because most people don't maintain a domicile in the federal zone. We know based on the definition of “United States” in 26 U.S.C. §7701 that Natural born persons born in the 50 Union states are born as “nationals” who are regarded as non-resident non-persons with respect to federal jurisdiction. Because of their ignorance, they then deceive the government into thinking that they are domiciliaries of the federal zone by getting a Social Security Number and claiming to be a statutory “U.S. citizen” on the SSA Form SS-5 they fill out. When they reach age 18, they complete the masochistic process of becoming a “U.S.** citizen” by filing their first IRS Form 1040, which is explained in 26 C.F.R. §1.871-10 as an “Election to treat their income as effectively connected with a trade or business in the United States”. This process is also described in IRS Publication 54 as “making a choice”. In effect, however, they are telling their government that they live in the District of Columbia or other federal territory or enclave within the “federal zone”, hold public office (see the definition of “trade or business” in section 3.12.1.22), and therefore are in receipt of government privileges and are accordingly liable for paying the communistic graduated income tax. This whole process is sheer fraud that anyone with minimal legal training and a little time surfing the web could easily figure out for themselves, like we did.

Some tax freedom advocates like Lynne Meredith (author of Vultures in Eagles Clothing) claim that the 861 argument isn't even relevant unless and until we declare our proper status as “non-resident non-persons”, and we agree with her! Why? Because as “U.S.** citizens” under 8 U.S.C. §1401, we have no constitutional rights, and filing the 1040 form amounts to an admission that we have a domicile in the federal zone and are subject to the sovereignty of the U.S. government. Without rights or Constitutional protections, are taxable sources or due process protections under the Bill of Rights even relevant? Definitely not!

The 861 position was first popularized by Save-A-Patriot Fellowship (<http://www.save-a-patriot.org/>). Rumor has it that it was discovered by Thurston Bell, who then left Save-A-Patriot Fellowship to join Taxgate, John Feld (<http://www.taxgate.com/>). He later left Taxgate to start his own de-taxing business called the National Institute for Taxpayer Education (NITE) at <http://www.nite.org/>. That business is now defunct and has been illegally shut down by a corrupted judge in an act of obstruction of justice. The 861 position most recently has been championed by a fellow named Larken Rose, whose name you may recognize from earlier sections of this book. Larken maintains a website called TaxableIncome.net (<http://www.taxableincome.net/>). Larken has also been affiliated with the We The People group (<http://www.givemeliberty.org>) and has appeared at Congressional Hearings on the subject of taxation along with We the People Representative Bob Schulz. In about June of 2002, Larken began selling a fine non-profit video he produced titled Theft By Deception that very clearly explains the 861 position in a way that the average American can understand. The video is available at <http://www.theft-by-deception.com> at a price of $20, which is a very good bargain and it makes an excellent defense against willful failure to file. We bought a copy for use as a defense of our beliefs in court. Larken has been careful to stay out of the federal cross-hairs by avoiding giving legal advice or telling people how to stop paying taxes, and that is one of the main reasons he is still around after all these years while all of his compatriots were shut down.

We have prepared a series of deposition questions that focus on the 861 position for use in an administrative due process hearing or an IRS deposition. You can use this series of questions to reveal the truth to the IRS and defeat most of their bogus arguments. These questions are derived from the We The People Truth in Taxation Hearing Questions. We have expanded the original questions considerably to make them more potent. These questions are found at:

5.7.6.1 Introduction and definitions

Recall from section 5.6.5 earlier that “income” is defined as corporate profit. This is a direct consequence of the fact that Title 26 Subtitle A revenues are indirect excise taxes on federal privileges within the territorial jurisdiction of the U.S.

1 government, which is the federal zone. The Congress and especially the IRS have a vested interest in hiding these critical
 2 facts from the average American. The only way they could hide these facts was to obfuscate the tax code over the years to
 3 obscure the truth. We talk about how they did it later in Chapter 6, sections 6.4 and 6.5 and their subsections. Most of this
 4 obfuscation occurs in the regulations, which are written by the Secretary of the Treasury, who incidentally has no delegated
 5 authority to legislate by enlarging the scope of the statutes to illegally expand their jurisdiction. The Secretary, however,
 6 has done his very best over the years to confuse the regulations he is responsible to write and has tried to systematically
 7 scare people away from reading the regulations associated with 26 U.S.C. §861, because they reveal the truth about the very
 8 limited nature of Subtitle A income taxes. The federal circuit courts have also colluded in this fraud by sanctioning those 9 who focus their litigation on the nature of income taxes as indirect excise taxes. In effect, the courts have repeatedly
 10 avoided ruling on which of the five constitutional taxes that the income tax is from in section 5.1. We will describe how 11 they continue to do this later in section 6.6 and its subsections.

12 The key to unraveling the fraud is to realize that Subtitle A federal income taxes are and always have been indirect excise
 13 taxes on federal corporate privileges according to the U.S. Supreme Court. Excise taxes are always tied to taxable
 14 activities, which are also called “sources” in the regulations under section 861. The people who lose the 861 position
 15 argument with the IRS usually don't understand this simple fact. Once we know that Subtitle A income taxes are indirect
 16 excise taxes, we also know that the tax is on privileged taxable “sources” or “activities”, as they are called in the regulations
 17 under 26 U.S.C. §861. These privileged activities are associated with “operative sections” and “statutory groupings” of the 18 code, which are identified in the regulations as corporate activities under 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(f)(1), to include mainly profit
 19 of Domestic International Sales Corporations (DISC) or Foreign International Sales Corporations (FSC).

20 To fully understand and use the 861 position, you must review older versions of the Internal Revenue Code to show how
 21 the truth has been carefully obscured and hidden by the government over the years. Earlier versions of the law were written
 22 much more clearly to show the truth. The law still tells the truth, but it has been obfuscated over the years to conceal and
 23 confuse the truth. This is especially true of 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8, which is the main regulation upon which the 861 position
 24 is based. This regulation especially has been considerably obfuscated over the years to hide the truth from the average
 25 American and illegally expand the perceived jurisdiction of Subtitle A federal income taxes. Regulation 26 C.F.R. §1.861-
 26 8 has been obfuscated, for instance, with needless confusing terms and definitions and the inclusion of an unnecessary
 27 procedure that shows how to compute taxable income. Even the title of the section has also been disguised by the 28 government to hide what it is to be used for. Those who know the law, however, also know that titles of code sections have 29 no legislative effect or significance under 26 U.S.C. §7806(b).

30 Some devious opponents of the 861 position such as IRS agents like to point to the title of 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(a)(2), which
 31 says “Allocation and apportionment of deductions in general”, and say that the regulation is only to be used for calculating
 32 deductions and not for identifying proper “sources” of taxable gross income. This position, however, is simply frivolous
 33 and false, because it would be meaningless to group deductions by taxable source or activity if we aren't going to identify 34 what a taxable source or activity is and the amount of taxable gross income from each source! It is also frivolous to give
 35 any credence at all to the title of any section of the code or regulations as we said earlier, because 26 U.S.C. §7806(b)
 36 specifically says that section titles and tables of contents don't mean anything from a legal perspective.

37 Before we launch into an explanation of the 861 position, some critical definitions are in order for the enlightenment of the 38 reader. Most of the terms below are used in 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8:

1 5.7.6.2 The Basics of the Federal Law

2 The laws enacted by Congress through the legislative process are compiled into statutes in the 50 "Titles" of the United
3 States Code. (Each "Title" deals with a category of law, and Title 26 is the federal tax title, often called the "Internal
4 Revenue Code.") A federal agency then has the duty (assigned by Congress) to implement and enforce the statutes by
5 writing and publishing regulations, which explain that agency's interpretation of the statutes, as well as setting the rules
6 which govern how the agency will enforce the statutes. The regulations, when published in the Federal Register, are the official notice to the public of what the law requires, and are binding on the federal agencies (including the IRS). For federal taxes, the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to write such regulations.

*“Sec. 7805. Rules and regulations
(a) Authorization - ... the Secretary [of the Treasury] shall prescribe all needful rules and regulations for the enforcement of this title [Title 26]...” [26 U.S.C. §7805]*

(The citation “26 U.S.C. §7805” refers to Section 7805 of the statutes of Title 26, with “USC” meaning “United States Code.” The symbol “§” means “section.” Citations of regulations are similar, but contain “CFR” instead, meaning “Code of Federal Regulations.”)

Section 1 of the Title 26 statutes imposes the “income tax” in five different categories (unmarried people, married people filing jointly, etc.). In each case, the wording reads “there is hereby imposed on the taxable income of...” The law generally defines “taxable income” in the following section of the statutes:

(a) In general - ...the term “taxable income” means gross income minus the deductions allowed by this chapter...” [26 U.S.C. §63]*

In other words, when someone determines his “gross income,” and then subtracts all allowable deductions, the remainder is “taxable income.” (So for income to be “taxable income,” it must first be “gross income.”) The following section of the statutes gives a general definition of “gross income”:

(a) General definition - ... gross income means all income from whatever source derived, including (but not limited to) the following items:
(1) Compensation for services...;
(2) Gross income derived from business;
(3) Gains derived from dealings in property;
(4) Interest;
(5) Rents;
(6) Royalties;
(7) Dividends;... [more items listed]” [26 U.S.C. §61]*

This is the point at which many tax “experts” err, either by assuming that the “items” of income listed constitute “sources” of income, or by assuming that “from whatever source derived” means that all of the “items” of income listed, regardless of where they come from, are subject to the “income tax.” Both of these assumptions are provably incorrect and even the Supreme Court agrees:

*“The Court has hitherto consistently held that a literal reading of a provision of the Constitution which defeats a purpose evident when the instrument is read as a whole, is not to be favored... [and one of the examples they give is...]'From whatever source derived,' as it is written in the Sixteenth Amendment, does not mean from whatever source derived. Evans v. Gore, 253 U.S. 245, 40 S.Ct. 550, 11 A.L.R. 519. See, also, Robertson v. Baldwin, 165 U.S. 275, 281, 282 S., 17 S.Ct. 326; Gompers v. United States, 233 U.S. 604, 610, 34 S.Ct. 693, Ann.Cas.1915D, 1044; Bain Peanut Co. v. Pinson, 282 U.S. 499, 501, 51 S.Ct. 228, 229; United States v. Lefkowitz, 285 U.S. 452, 467, 52 S.Ct. 420, 424, 82 A.L.R. 775.”

The difference and relationship between “items” and “sources” will be explained below.

5.7.6.3 English vs. Legalese

In our system of written law, Congress may use a term to mean almost anything, as long as the law itself defines that meaning. When the written law explains the meaning of a term used in the law, standard English usage becomes irrelevant. For example, by the definition in 26 U.S.C. § 7701(a)(1), the term “person” includes estates, companies and corporations. While no one would call Walmart a “person” in everyday conversation, Walmart is a “person” under federal tax code. The legal use of a term is often significantly different from basic English, and therefore reading one section of the law alone can be very misleading.

As a good example, 26 U.S.C. §5841 states that “[t]he Secretary [of the Treasury] shall maintain a central registry of all firearms in the United States which are not in the possession or under the control of the United States.” The law has a far more limited application than this section by itself would seem to imply. In 26 U.S.C. §5845(a) it is made clear that the

1 term “firearm” in these sections does not include the majority of rifles and handguns (while the term “firearm” in basic
 2 English obviously would), but does include poison gas, silencers and land mines. The average American reading the law
 3 will naturally tend to assume that he already knows what the words in the law mean, and may have difficulty accepting that
 4 the legal meaning of the words used in the law may bear little or no resemblance to the meaning that those words have in
 5 common English. For example, reading the phrase “all firearms” in Section 5841 in a way that excludes most rifles and
 6 handguns is contrary to instinctive reading comprehension. (But any lawyer reviewing Sections 5841 and 5845 would
 7 confirm that such a reading would be absolutely correct.)

Reading one section of the law without being aware of the legal definitions of the words being used can give an entirely incorrect impression about the application of the law.

8 As demonstrated, sometimes the apparent meaning of a simple phrase in the law is very different from the legal meaning.
 9 The “income tax” is imposed on “income from whatever source derived.” If the law did not explain what constitutes
 10 “sources of income,” then the law would be interpreted using basic English. However, the law does explain what the term
 11 means, and therefore standard English usage is irrelevant.

12 5.7.6.4 Sources of Income

13 Recall in our previous discussion that in the case of United States v. Burke, 504 U.S. 229, 119 L.Ed.2d. 34, 112 S.Ct. 1867
 14 (1992), the Supreme Court ruled that “gross income” that was to be taxed had to come from a “source”. Why? Because 15 otherwise the income tax code would be so broad as to tax EVERYONE in the world! Federal government income taxes
 16 are imposed on government sources (taxable activities) within specific geographical boundaries, and not the income itself,
 17 per United States v. Burke. Since the income tax is an indirect excise tax as ruled by the U.S. Supreme Court, then the 18 income received is just a way to compute the amount of tax but the tax itself is on some taxable activity within a geographic
 19 government jurisdiction. Clearly, there has to be some section of the Internal Revenue Code that ties the income taxes we 20 pay to some geographical boundary and taxable activity, or the code would be “void for vagueness” as we point out later in 21 section 5.10 and following. The sections of the code that identify such privileged “taxable activities” are called “operative 22 sections” in the regulations at 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(a)(1). This section deals with that subject.

23 There is often a lot of confusion in people’s mind over the significance of the word “source” that we’d like to clear up
 24 before we go on. Therefore we’d like to refine the use of the term before continuing on with an explanation of specific 25 “sources”. Merriam Webster Dictionary of Law defines “source” as follows:

26 source
 27 1: a point of origin
 28 Example: the source of the conflict

29 There are actually two uses of the word “source” in the Internal Revenue Code. “Source” is used to describe a TAX source
 30 (a source for government revenue) in 26 U.S.C. §861, the 16th Amendment, and the IRS regulations (26 C.F.R. §1.861) we 31 discuss subsequently. Revenue or tax “sources” for the government are always tied to a territorial jurisdiction and the 32 occurrence of a specific privileged taxable activity or situation (called a “situs”). With all excise taxes, the occurrence of a 33 privileged taxable activity within the territorial jurisdiction of the taxing authority creates a situs (or situation or 34 government right) for taxation and we already know based on our earlier discussion that the income tax is indeed an
 35 indirect excise tax, as confirmed both by the U.S. Supreme Court and the Congressional Research Service. For instance,
 36 there is a federal excise tax on gasoline. The privileged activity or event of a corporation selling imported gasoline (foreign 37 commerce) to consumers within the geographical boundaries of the United States of America is an occasion for paying that
 38 particular federal excise tax. Note that the federal government can only tax this transaction if the gasoline was imported
 39 because Article 1, Section 8, Clause 3 limits federal taxing power to matters of trade and commerce external to the states
 40 and to the country.<sup>205</sup> So if a privileged corporation sells imported gasoline in California, for instance, then we have created
 41 a situs for imposing the tax, which is described in 26 U.S.C. §4611. But remember that such excise taxes fall under 42 Subtitles D of the Internal Revenue Code, which applies throughout the country (the 50 states), instead of just within the 43 federal zone. This is confirmed by the definitions found in 26 U.S.C. §4612(a)(4)(A), which define the term “United 44 States” to mean the 50 States. Note that this definition of “United States” is different than that one found in 26 U.S.C.
 45 §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10), where the “United States” there includes only the District of Columbia. Subtitle A income taxes
 46 are different because they only apply to persons domiciled inside the federal zone and to federal payments from the

1 government. If the sale of imported gasoline occurs outside of the geographical boundaries of the U.S.A or the "United
2 States of America" or doesn't involve the selling of imported gasoline, then the tax can't be enforced and no one is liable
3 because there is therefore no situs for taxation:

4 situs. Lat. Situation; location; e.g. location or place of crime or business. Site; position; the place where a
5 thing is considered, for example, with reference to jurisdiction over it, or the right or power to tax it. It imports
6 fixedness of location. Situs of property, for tax purposes, is determined by whether the taxing state has 7 sufficient contact with the personal property sought to be taxed to justify in fairness the particular tax. Town of
8 Cady v. Alexander Const. Co., 12 Wis.2d. 236, 107 N.W.2d. 267, 270.
9 [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1387]

10 "Source" is also used to describe an INCOME source for individuals or "persons" (as defined in 26 U.S.C. 7701(a)(1)) in
11 Chapter 24 of the I.R.C, which is entitled "CHAPTER 24 - COLLECTION OF INCOME TAX AT SOURCE ON WAGES
12 " and section 3402 of the I.R.C. These sections deal with withholding, but the withholding is occurring on the natural
13 person's income "source" as defined under 26 U.S.C. §61. The regulations at 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(a)(3) identify sources of 14 income for people that fall under 26 U.S.C. §61 as "classes of gross income". This "source" of income for the person then
15 becomes a "source" of tax revenue from the government upon receipt by the government of taxes paid by the person. In 16 this case, the withholding on wages occurs as an imputed "excise tax" based on the "event" or situs of a "resident"
17 receiving income from their employer in connection with a "trade or business" conducted within the territorial jurisdiction
18 of the "United States" as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9), which is the District of Columbia ONLY. Note, however, that 19 indirect excise taxes that are Constitutional always occur on business or corporate transactions. In particular, the U.S.
20 Supreme Court has ruled that all such taxes are on profit from corporations involved in foreign commerce. Excise taxes are 21 referred to in the Constitution as indirect taxes, as we learned in our discussion of the Supreme Court case of Pacific Ins.
22 Co. v. Soule, 74 U.S. 433 (1868) in section 6.9.4.2 and they always fall on consumers of the product made by the business.
23 These taxes are built into the cost of the product we buy, and because the choice to buy the product is voluntary, the 24 payment of the tax is voluntary. If you want to avoid the tax, then you don't have to buy the product!

25 Valid federal excise taxes CANNOT fall directly on natural persons within states of the Union or citizens because then they
26 become unapportioned direct taxes. Unapportioned direct taxes on biological people violate Article 1, Section 9, Clause 4
27 of the U.S. Constitution, which states "No Capitation or other direct tax shall be laid unless in proportion to the Census or 28 Enumeration herein before directed to be taken." Unapportioned direct taxes also violate Article 1, Section 2, Clause 3 of 29 the Constitution. This prohibition, by the way, relates exclusively to states of the Union, and does not prohibit such taxes
30 inside the federal zone or "federal United States". However, there is no such prohibition if the direct tax is only imposed
31 upon "residents" or legal "persons" that have a domicile within exclusive federal jurisdiction, such as the District of 32 Columbia..

33 In the case of federal excise taxes on natural persons, the income taxes on "wages" are deducted and paid by the employer
34 (the business) with the consent or permission of the employee (W-4), but in actuality they also REDUCE the income of the 35 recipient and the taxes must be accounted for and a return prepared by the citizen/recipient, not the business, which makes
36 them act like a direct tax that is clearly unconstitutional if it is within states of the Union but which is perfectly legal inside
37 the federal zone. It is very important to understand this distinction between direct taxes and indirect taxes. A good way to 38 think about this is if a tax reduces the income of a biological or natural person from what they otherwise would have 39 received and if it is involuntary and not discretionary, then it's a direct tax. This issue was settled in the Supreme Court
40 Case of Pollock v. Farmers' Loan & Trust Co., 157 U.S. 429, 158 U.S. 601 (1895).

41 One of the devious tricks that both the IRS and the state taxing authorities like to pull is to try to confuse the definition of 42 "source" for the layman, so that proponents of the 861 position cannot use their arguments successfully. The most famous
43 case they will cite in this dishonest, devious, and underhanded obfuscation is the case of Commissioner v. Glenshaw Glass
44 Company, 348 U.S. 426, 429 (1955). Here is the portion of the case they will try to cite, which appears in IRS Notice
45 2001-40:

47 The above is correct, but misleading. Congress doesn't have to apply any limitations because the Constitution itself, which 48 is "fundamental law", implies all the needed limitations on sources as we have shown. Even the Supreme Court admits 49 this:

50 "It is elementary law that every statute is to be read in the light of the constitution,"...

1 "However broad and general its language, it cannot be interpreted as extending beyond those matters which it
2 was within the constitutional power of the legislature to reach"
3 [McCullough v. Com. Of Virginia, 172 U.S. 102 (1898)]

5 "The Court has hitherto consistently held that a literal reading of a provision of the Constitution which defeats
6 a purpose evident when the instrument is read as a whole, is not to be favored... [and one of the examples they
7 give is...]'From whatever source derived,' as it is written in the Sixteenth Amendment, does not mean from 8 whatever source derived. Evans v. Gore, 253 U.S. 245, 40 S.Ct. 550, 11 A.L.R. 519. See, also, Robertson v.
9 Baldwin, 165 U.S. 275, 281, 282 S., 17 S.Ct. 326; Gompers v. United States, 233 U.S. 604, 610, 34 S.Ct. 693,
10 Ann.Cas.1915D, 1044; Bain Peanut Co. v. Pinson, 282 U.S. 499, 501, 51 S.Ct. 228, 229; United States v.
12 [Wright v. U.S., 302 U.S. 583 (1938)]

13 Thieves and deceivers in the government who use this specious argument will then try to expand the above to conclude by 14 induction that the "source" of income doesn't matter, and that all sources are taxable without saying which of the above two
15 "sources" (sources within under IRC 861 and sources without under IRC 862 the federal "United States") they are referring
16 to, as if to say that there is no reason to even have 26 U.S.C. Section 861 through 865 at all and that everyone in the world
17 is subject to U.S. federal income taxes because all government sources are taxable everywhere, including China!. This is an 18 absurd conclusion to reach that is completely inconsistent with law, but that is what you have to believe if you believe their
19 specious and deceptive arguments. In effect, what they are trying to do is dishonestly remove the territorial jurisdiction and 20 requirement for a situs to impose the tax so that everything one receives becomes "gross income" which is taxable. This
21 simply isn't true, however, because 26 U.S.C. §861(a)(3)(C)(i) specifically says that monies earned by a "nonresident
22 alien" not derived from a "trade or business in the [federal] United States" is not classified as "gross income" and therefore 23 is not taxable. That is the position that this book, as a matter of fact, tries to get you to take.

24 TITLE 26 > Subtitle A > CHAPTER 1 > Subchapter N > PART 1 > Sec. 861.
25 Sec. 861. - Income from sources within the [federal] United States

26 (a) Gross income from sources within United States

27 (3) Personal services

28 Compensation for labor or personal services performed in the United States; except that compensation for 29 labor or services performed in the United States shall not be deemed to be income
30 from sources within the United States if-

31 (A) the labor or services are performed by a nonresident alien individual temporarily present in the United 32 States for a period or periods not exceeding a total of 90 days during the taxable year,

33 (B) such compensation does not exceed $3,000 in the aggregate, and

34 (C) the compensation is for labor or services performed as an employee of or under a contract with -

35 (i) a nonresident alien, foreign partnership, or foreign corporation, not engaged in trade or business within 36 the United States, or

37 When you read double-speak of liars and deceivers like the above cite from the Supreme Court, you therefore need to be
38 very clear what type of "source" they are talking about. Taxable "sources" of income for legal "persons" are found in 26
39 U.S.C. §61, and taxable "sources" of revenue for the government with a situs requirement are found in 26 U.S.C. §861 and 40 862. What the Supreme Court is talking about in the Glenshaw case are taxable sources of income for persons and the 41 ruling simply expands I.R.C. section 61, but does NOT invalidate or render ineffective any part of the situs to tax
42 established in 26 U.S.C. Sections 861 through 865 and the supporting regulations. We talk about this devious deceit and 43 show you the error in the governments deception later in section 5.7.6.11.7. We strongly encourage you to read that section
44 if you are going to use the 861 position, because we can virtually guarantee that the deceitful feds or your state government
45 will try to bring up this case when you try to use 861 in an effort to confuse and dissuade you from using the 861 position,
46 which stands up quite well against this U.S. Supreme Court case.

47 With that out of the way, we'll spend the remainder of this section talking about government "sources" and situs of income,
48 so let's review: the "income tax" is imposed on "taxable income," which means "gross income" minus deductions. "Gross

1 income” is defined in 26 U.S.C. §61 as “all income from whatever source derived.” The phrase “from whatever source
 2 derived” may initially appear all-encompassing, but for the specifics about “income from sources,” the reader of the law is
 3 repeatedly referred to Section 861 and following (of the statutes) and the related regulations. For example, in the full
 4 version of Title 26 (with all notes and amendments) which appears on Congress’ own website, Section 61 itself has the 5 following cross-reference:

6 “Income from sources -
 7 Within the United States, see section 861 of this title.
 8 Without the United States, see section 862 of this title.”

9 So the section which generally defines “gross income” specifically refers to 26 U.S.C. §861 regarding income from 10 “sources” within the United States** (the federal zone). A similar reference is also found in the indexes of the United 11 States Code, which (although they vary somewhat in the exact wording) have entries such as:

12 “Income tax
 13 Sources of income
 14 Determination, 26 § 861 et seq.
 15 Within the U.S., 26 § 861”

16 Again, income from “sources” within the United States** (the federal zone) is specifically dealt with by Section 861, and
 17 “determination” of sources of income is also dealt with by Section 861 and the following sections. In addition, Sections 79,
 18 105, 410, 414 and 505 each identify Section 861 as the section which determines what constitutes “income from sources
 19 within the United States,” and Section 306 even uses the phrase “part I of subchapter N (sec. 861 and following, relating to 20 determination of sources of income.”

21 As shown, 26 U.S.C. §861 and following (which make up Part I of Subchapter N of the Code) are very relevant to
 22 determining what is considered a “source of income,” and Section 861 in particular deals with income from “sources”
 23 within the United States** (the federal zone). Not surprisingly, Section 861 is entitled “Income from sources within the 24 United States,” and the first two subsections of Section 861 are entitled “Gross income from sources within the United
 25 States” and “Taxable income from sources within the United States.” Section 861 is also the first section of Subchapter N
 26 of the Code, which is entitled “Tax based on income from sources within or without the United States.” Clearly this is 27 relevant to a tax on “income from whatever source derived.”

28 As mentioned before, the statutes passed by Congress are interpreted and implemented by regulations published in the 29 Code of Federal Regulations (“CFR”) by the Secretary of the Treasury. The Index of the CFR, under “Income taxes,” has 30 an entry that reads “*Income from sources inside or outside U.S., determination of sources of income, 26 C.F.R. §1 (L.861-
 31 I--1.864-8T).” This is the only entry in the Index relating to income from sources within the United States** (the federal 32 zone), and the regulations listed (26 C.F.R. §1.861-1 and following) correspond to Section 861 of the statutes. (The “26”
 33 refers to Title 26, the “I” after “CFR” refers to Part 1 of the regulations (“Income Taxes”), and the “.861” refers to Section
 34 861 of the statutes.) These regulations fall under the heading “Determination of sources of income.” The following is 35 how these regulations begin:*

37 (a) Categories of income. Part I (section 861 and following), subchapter N, chapter 1 of the Code, and the 38 regulations thereunder determine the sources of income for purposes of the income tax.”
 39 [26 C.F.R. §1.861-1]

40 The meaning of this is unmistakable. The “income tax” is imposed on “income from whatever source derived,” and 41 Section 861 and following, and the related regulations, determine what is considered a “source” of income “for purposes of 42 the income tax.” The first sentence of the regulations under 26 U.S.C. §861 has stated this since 1954, when Section 861
 43 first came into existence. Note that these define “the” sources of income subject to the tax, meaning there are no others.
 44 Therefore, the meaning of “income from whatever source derived” (the definition of “gross income” in Section 61) is 45 limited by Section 861 (and following sections) and the related regulations. The meaning of the phrase “whatever source”
 46 depends completely on the meaning of the word “source.” The word “whatever” does not expand the meaning of “source”
 47 any more than the phrase “all firearms” (in the example above) expands the legal meaning of the word “firearm.”

The above section of regulations also refutes the common but incorrect position that the “items” of income listed in Section 61 are “sources,” since Section 61 is obviously not the section which determines the “sources” of income for purposes of the income tax.

(There is a chart at the end of this report showing the outline of Part I of Subchapter N and related regulations, and showing many of the citations used in this report.)

While the significance of Section 861 and the related regulations may be obvious, the point needs to be thoroughly proven, since most tax professionals concede that Section 861 and its regulations are not about the income of United States citizens living and working exclusively within the 50 Union states of the United States. (Below it will be shown why it is so significant that “section 861 and following... and the regulations thereunder, determine the sources of income for purposes of the income tax.”). The IRS’s own publications clarify the issue of “source” for us. In IRS Publication 54 (2000), p. 4, we read the following:

Source of Earned Income

The source of your earned income is the place where you perform the services for which you received the income. Foreign earned income is income you receive for performing personal services in a foreign country. Where or how you are paid has no effect on the source of the income. For example, income you receive for work done in France is income from a foreign source even if the income is paid directly to your bank account in the United States and your employer is located in New York City.

If you receive a specific amount for work done in the United States, you must report that amount as U.S. source income. If you cannot determine how much is for work done in the United States, or for work done partly in the United States and partly in a foreign country, determine the amount of U.S. source income using the method that most correctly shows the proper source of your income.

In most cases you can make this determination on a time basis. U.S. source income is the amount that results from multiplying your total pay (including allowances, re-imbursements other than for foreign moves, and noncash fringe benefits) by a fraction. The numerator (top number) is the number of days you worked within the United States. The denominator is the total number of days of work for which you were paid.

IMPORTANT NOTE: The term “United States” in the Internal Revenue Code by default actually means the “federal zone” and not the 50 Union states of the United States. That is because of the definition of the terms “United States” and “State” found in 26 U.S.C. section 7701(a)(9) and 7701(a)(10) respectively. There are two exceptions to this rule found in I.R.C. sections 3121 and 4612, which have to do with taxes other than personal income taxes. This finding is also consistent with Article 1, Section 9, Clause 4 and Article 1, Section 2, Clause 3 of the U.S. Constitution, which both forbid direct taxes on natural persons without using apportionment.

This is also suggested by the title of Part I of Subchapter N (of which 861 is the first section), “Source rules and other general rules relating to foreign income.” Under the usual overly-broad (and incorrect) interpretation of the legal scope of the term “gross income,” this would appear as a contradiction, since “Income from sources within the United States” (the title of Section 861) would at first glance seem to be the opposite of “foreign income.” The specific taxable sources shown later demonstrate that income from within the United States** (the federal zone) can be taxable only if received by certain individuals outside of the United States** (the federal zone), thus making the income foreign income. For the purposes of the income tax, as we discussed in section 5.3, income earned from within the 50 Union states is counted as “foreign income”.

While the title of a part of the statutes may indicate what that part is about, it should be mentioned that 26 U.S.C. §7806(b) states that such titles do not change the actual meaning of the law (“nor shall any... descriptive matter relating to the contents of this title be given any legal effect”). The above explanation for the title of Part I, Subchapter N is therefore not crucial, but does give a possible explanation of why the title is as it is.

QUESTION FOR DOUBTERS: Does Part I (Section 861 and following) of Subchapter N, and related regulations, determine what is considered a “source” of income for purposes of the federal income tax?

5.7.6.5 Determining Taxable Income from U.S.** Sources

In addition to the fact that Section 861 and following, and related regulations, determine what is considered a “source” of income subject to the income tax, the regulations also repeatedly state that these are also the specific sections to be used to determine “gross income” and “taxable income” from sources within and/or without the United States** (the federal zone).

“Rules are prescribed for determination of gross income and taxable income derived from sources within and without the United States, and for the allocation of income derived partly from sources within the United States and partly without the United States or within United States possessions.  §§ 1.861-1 through 1.864. (Secs. 861-864; ‘54 Code.)”
[Treasury Decision 6258]

The sections which are specifically for determining taxable income from sources within the United States** (the federal zone) are 26 U.S.C. §861(b) of the statutes, and the corresponding regulations found at 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8. (The regulations under Section 63, the section defining “taxable income,” do not explain how to determine taxable income.) While the relevance of these sections may quickly become obvious, the repeated documentation is important since most tax professionals are already aware that these sections are not about the income of most Americans.

Section 861(b) (as mentioned above) is entitled “Taxable income from sources within the United States.” This section states that taxable income from sources within the United States** (the federal zone) is the gross income described in 861(a) minus allowable deductions. The regulations under Section 861 state (in the first paragraph):

(1) Within the United States. The gross income from sources within the United States... See Secs. 1.861-2 to 1.861-7, inclusive, and Sec. 1.863-1. The taxable income from sources within the United States... shall be determined by deducting therefrom, in accordance with sections 861(b) and 863(a), [allowable deductions]. See Secs. 1.861-8 and 1.863-1.”
[26 C.F.R. §1.861-1(a)(1)]

(The other two categories of income are income from “without” (outside of) the United States** (the federal zone), dealt with by Section 862 and related regulations, and income from sources partly within and partly without the U.S., dealt with by Section 863 and related regulations.)

As the above citation states, items of “gross income” from sources within the U.S. are dealt with by 861(a) of the statutes and 1.861-2 through 1.861-7 of the regulations. Taxable income is determined by 861(b) of the statutes, and the corresponding regulations in 1.861-8. These regulations are predictably entitled “Computation of taxable income from sources within the United States and from other sources and activities,” and reiterate the point:

“Sections 861(b) and 863(a) state in general terms how to determine taxable income of a taxpayer from sources within the United States after gross income from sources within the United States has been determined.”
[26 C.F.R. §1.861-8]

In the regulations under Section 863 (concerning income from sources inside and outside the U.S.), the following is stated:

“Determination of taxable income. The taxpayer's taxable income from sources within or without the United States will be determined under the rules of Secs. 1.861-8 through 1.861-14T for determining taxable income from sources within the United States.”
[26 C.F.R. §1.863-1(c)]

(The vast majority of tax professionals do not use these sections to determine taxable income from sources within the United States of America. At this point, the average American reading this report may guess that there must be some “context,” or some other section, or something somewhere which would justify the tax professionals blatantly disregarding and disobeying the clear language used in the citations shown above. There is not.)

Note how sections 1.861-8 and following of the regulations are identified as the sections “for determining taxable income from sources within the United States,” as well as being the sections to be used whether the income is from sources within or without the United States** (the federal zone). A similar structure occurs in the regulations under Section 862 (dealing with income from outside of the United States**):

1                   “(b) Taxable income. The taxable income from sources without the United States... shall be determined on the
2 same basis as that used in Sec. 1.861-8 for determining the taxable income from sources within the United
4                   [26 C.F.R. §1.862-1]

5 Section 1.863-6 of the regulations (dealing with income from within a foreign country or federal possession) also identifies
6 sections 1.861-1 through 1.863-5 as applying “[t]he principles... for determining the gross and the taxable income from 7 sources within and without the United States.” Over and over again it is shown that 26 U.S.C. §861(b) of the statutes and
8 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8 of the regulations are to be used to determine the taxable income from sources within the United 9 States** (the federal zone).

10 QUESTION FOR DOUBTERS: Are 26 U.S.C. §861(b) and 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8 the sections to be used to determine
11 *taxable income from government sources of tax revenue within the United States**?*

12 After all the preceding discussion on taxable sources of income for the government, let us summarize with a picture/table,
13 exactly what we mean. The table on the following page was constructed directly from the Internal Revenue Code and the 14 underlying Treasury regulations to clearly show what is and is not subject to federal tax. In order for income received by an 15 American to be taxable, it must fit into at least one category in each of the three vertical columns appearing in the table. If 16 it does not, then the income cannot be lawfully taxed.

Income may be realized, therefore, in the form of services, meals, accommodations, stock, or other property, as well as in cash. Section 61 lists the more common items of gross income for purposes of illustration. For purposes of further illustration, Sec. 1.61-14 mentions several miscellaneous items of gross income not listed specifically in section 61. Gross income, however, is not limited to the items so enumerated. (b) Cross references. NOTES:

1. This table is used for determining the portion of a "person's" income that is subject to tax. Each "item" of gross income received by a "person" (which is a corporation or partnership involved in foreign commerce) must fall into a category found in each of the three columns, 1 through 3.
2. We will now give you some simplified examples of how to apply this table:
  - 2.1. Let's say you are an U.S.** citizen who has profit from an investment within the U.S.** (also called the federal zone, which is federal property only).
    - 2.1.1. Your income does not meet the description of "income" subject to tax under the U.S. Supreme Court in Column 1, and is therefore not taxable on this basis alone.
    - 2.1.2. Your income meets the definition of gross income under 26 C.F.R. § 1.61(a) above.
    - 2.1.3. Your income cannot be allocated to a taxable source within the United States** as identified in Column 3 and within 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(f). Therefore, it is not subject to federal tax and the recipient cannot be liable for federal tax on the amount based on this exclusion alone.
  - 2.2. You are a non-resident non-person not involved in a "trade or business/public office in the U.S.**" (holding political office) in receipt of wage income as a federal statutory "employee".
    - 2.2.1. Your income does not meet the definition of "income" found in Column 1 per the Supreme Court because it is not profit from a corporation involved in foreign commerce.
    - 2.2.2. Your income meets the definition of "gross income" found in Column 2 and 26 C.F.R. §1.61(a) above.
    - 2.2.3. Your income also cannot be allocated to a taxable source of income "within the United States**" under Column 3 and 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(f). Because the income cannot be allocated to something found in all three columns, then it is not taxable and the recipient cannot be liable for tax.

- 1       2.3. You are a U.S. Congressman who is a nonresident alien and who is in receipt of wages connected with political office.
- 2           2.3.1. Your income does not meet the definition of "income" found in Column 1 as defined by the Supreme Court, and is not taxable on that basis alone.
- 3           2.3.2. Your income meets the definition of "gross income" found in Column 2 and 26 C.F.R. §1.61(a).
- 4           2.3.3. Your income does fall in a taxable source from within the U.S.* as found in Column 3 above and 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(f)(1)(iv) (entitled Effectively
- 5               Connected Income).

5.7.6.6 Specific Taxable Sources

Source rules for purposes of gross income that is the subject of taxation are identified in 26 U.S.C. Sections 861 through 863. Section 861 covers sources “within” the “United States”, meaning income derived or effectively connected with a trade or business within the only the District of Columbia. Section 862 covers sources “without” the “United States”, which is to say income received from within or between the 50 Union states of the United States of America. We will now cover the requirements relating to these sources independently.

5.7.6.6.1 Sources “within” the United States: Income originating inside The District of Columbia

Section 861 of the statutes uses general language that at first seems to apply to all income coming from within the United States of America, by saying

However, as we emphasized in section 4.8 (entitled “The Federal Zone”) we need to keep reminding ourselves of the definition of the term “United States” as we read this section and all the implementing regulations. Once again, the “United States”, as defined in Section 7701 of the IRC, actually consists of only the “District of Columbia” and does not include the 50 Union states! The main reason for going through the mental exercise in this section of identifying specific sources in the implementing regulations is to confirm this limited jurisdiction of the Internal Revenue Code and that Congress stays within its Constitutional constraints in Article 1, Section 8, Clauses 1 through 3 and 1:9:4. As we will see, the statutes and the regulations are indeed completely consistent with these Constitutional constraints and the definition of the term “United States” as only the “federal zone” and not the 50 Union states.

Following the introductory statement indicated above, section 861 then lists similar “items” of income to those listed in Section 61 (while specifying that they are coming from within the United States**). As with Section 61, it is easy to misconstrue this list of “items” as being a list of “sources,” which it is not. The regulations related to Section 861 contradict this possible misinterpretation. (And, as will be shown later, the older regulations and statutes make the correct application of the law crystal clear.)

The regulations in Section 1.861-8 begins by saying that Section 861(b) of the statutes describes “in general terms” how to determine taxable income from sources within the United States** (the federal zone). These same regulations later specify that Section 861 is about items of income derived from “specific sources.”

“(ii) Relationship of sections 861, 862, 863(a), and 863(b). Sections 861, 862, 863(a), and 863(b) are the four provisions applicable in determining taxable income from specific sources.”
[26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(f)(3)(ii)]

In the first paragraph of Section 1.861-8 of the regulations (the section “for determining taxable income from sources within the United States”), it is again made clear that the section applies only to the listed “items” of income when derived from “specific sources.”

[26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(a)]

Again, a few paragraphs later, in defining the term “statutory grouping,” these regulations again state that taxable income must come from a “specific source.”

[26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(a)(4)]

In 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(f)(1) it is again made clear that Section 1.861-8 (the section “for determining taxable income from sources within the United States”) is applicable only to income derived from “specific sources.”

“...the determination of taxable income of the taxpayer from specific sources or activities and which gives rise to statutory groupings [see previous citation] to which this section is applicable...”

1 [26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(f)(1)]

2 From these it is clear that the term “source” as used in Sections 61 and 861 does not simply mean any activity from which
3 income is derived. If it did, there would be no need for Section 861 and following, and related regulations, to “determine
4 the sources of income for purposes of the income tax.” The following citations show that Section 1.861-8(f)(1) lists the 5 “specific sources” of income subject to the income tax.

6 Again, the first paragraph of 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8 states the following (the meaning of “operative section” will be explained 7 below):

8 “The rules contained in this section apply in determining taxable income of the taxpayer from specific sources
9 and activities under other sections of the Code, referred to in this section as operative sections. See paragraph
10 (f)(1) of this section for a list and description of operative sections.”
11 [26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(a)(1)]

12 The definition of “statutory grouping” (mentioned above) also refers to “paragraph (f)(1)” as the list of “specific sources.”

14 determined in order to arrive at ‘taxable income’ from which specific source or activity under an operative
15 section. (See paragraph (f)(1) of this section.)”
16 [26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(a)(4)]

17 The regulations twice identify “paragraph (f)(1) of this section” (26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(f)(1)) as the list of specific sources.
18 Paragraph (f)(1) itself confirms this again, and then lists the “specific sources” subject to the income tax:

19 “The operative sections of the Code which require the determination of taxable income of the taxpayer from 20 specific sources or activities and which gives rise to statutory groupings to which this section is applicable
21 include the sections described below.
22 (i) Overall limitation to the foreign tax credit...
23 (ii) [Reserved]
24 (iii) DISC and FSC taxable income... [international and foreign sales corporations]
25 (iv) Effectively connected taxable income. Nonresident alien individuals and foreign corporations engaged
26 in trade or business within the United States...
27 (v) Foreign base company income...
28 (vi) Other operative sections. The rules provided in this section also apply in determining--
29 (A) The amount of foreign source items...
30 (B) The amount of foreign mineral income...
31 (C) [Reserved]
32 (D) The amount of foreign oil and gas extraction income...
33 (E) (deals with Puerto Rico tax credits)
34 (F) (deals with Puerto Rico tax credits)
35 (G) (deals with Virgin Islands tax credits)
36 (H) The income derived from Guam by an individual...
37 (I) (deals with China Trade Act corporations)
38 (J) (deals with foreign corporations)
39 (K) (deals with insurance income of foreign corporations)
40 (L) (deals with countries subject to international boycott)
41 (M) (deals with the Merchant Marine Act of 1936)” [26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(f)(1)]

42 None of these “sources” apply to natural persons (people rather than artificial “person”) who live and work exclusively
43 within the 50 Union states of the United States of America. (Federal “possessions,” such as Guam, Puerto Rico, etc., are 44 considered “foreign” under the law.) This is the only list of “sources” in Part I of Subchapter N, or the regulations
45 thereunder, which (as the regulations say) “determine the sources of income for purposes of the income tax.” We can see
46 quite clearly that all of these taxable sources are part of the “federal zone”, which includes the District of Columbia and all
47 federal possessions, or pertain to foreign commerce as allowed under Article 1, Section 8, Clause 3 of the constitution.

48 The next subsection (1.861-8(g)) gives examples about how 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8 works, and states that “[i]n each example,
49 unless otherwise specified, the operative section which is applied and gives rise to the statutory grouping of gross income is
50 the overall limitation to the foreign tax credit under section 904(a),” again showing that there must be some “operative
51 section” in order for the section to apply, and in order for there to be taxable income.

52 So, to review, the sections which “determine the sources of income for purposes of the income tax” (namely, 861 and 53 following and related regulations) apply only to income from the “specific sources” listed in 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(f)(1).

1 Most people do not receive income from these “sources of income for purposes of the income tax,” and most people do not,
2 therefore, receive “income from whatever source derived” (the general definition of “gross income”) subject to the income

4 QUESTION FOR DOUBTERS: Under 26 U.S.C. §861 and 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8, is income taxable only if derived from 5 “specific sources” related to international and foreign commerce (including federal possessions)?

6 5.7.6.6.2 Sources “without” the United States: Income originating inside the 50 Union states, territories and
7 possessions, and foreign nations

8 This section deals with income from sources “without” the [federal] United States** (the federal zone). Because the term
9 “United States” is defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701 to include only the District of Columbia, then income from “without” the 10 “United States***” includes all income earned in the 50 Union states and in any foreign nation. The states of the Union are 11 also considered “foreign countries” and “foreign nations” for the purposes of the Internal Revenue Code, which is 12 considered municipal (private or special) law that applies only to the federal zone:

13 “The state governments, in their separate powers and independent sovereignties, in their reserved powers, are
14 just as much beyond the jurisdiction and control of the National Government as the National Government in its 15 sovereignty is beyond the control and jurisdiction of the state government.”

16 “...a State has the same undeniable and unlimited jurisdiction over all persons and things within its 17 territorial limits, as any foreign nation...”

18 [Mayer, etc. of the City of New York v. Miln., 36 U.S. 102, 11 Pet. 102, 9 L.Ed. 648 (1837)]

20 “The States between each other are sovereign and independent. They are distinct and separate sovereignties,
21 *except so far as they have parted with some of the attributes of sovereignty by the Constitution. They continue
22 to be nations, with all their rights, and under all their national obligations, and with all the rights of nations in*
23 every particular; except in the surrender by each to the common purposes and objects of the Union, under the
24 Constitution. The rights of each State, when not so yielded up, remain absolute.”
25 [Bank of Augusta v. Earle, 38 U.S. (13 Pet.) 519, 10 L.Ed. 274 (1839)]

26 By implication, any income derived from “without” the “United States” is “foreign income” connected with a “foreign 27 business” and a “foreign corporation” (see 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(5)). The only exception to this is if you work for a
28 corporation that is registered in the District of Columbia and recognized by the U.S. Government, in which case you work
29 for a “domestic corporation” as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(4). Keep in mind also that corporations within a state can be 30 “U.S. citizens” at law, which is how the extortionists in Congress and the IRS get their jurisdiction to tax them.

31 IRS publication 54 refers to areas where you receive “foreign income” as a “foreign country”. Interestingly, if you occupy
32 one of the 50 Union states of the United States, you do indeed occupy a “foreign country” per the IRS’ own “word of art”
33 definitions found in publication 54. We explain and justify this in both section 5.2.14 entitled “The definition of ‘foreign
34 income’ relative to the Internal Revenue Code” and in section 5.3.2 entitled “What’s Your Proper Federal Income Tax
35 Filing Status?”. This all sounds rather confusing, we’ll admit, but then again, that’s the way the IRS and our Congress likes
36 to keep things so they have plenty of wiggle room to manipulate and abuse ignorant Americans into paying an unlawfully 37 enforced income tax.

38 Section 862 of the I.R.C. describes income from sources “without” the United States as follows:

39 Sec. 862. Income from sources without the United States

40 (a) Gross income from sources without United States

41 The following items of gross income shall be treated as income from sources without the United States:

42 (1) interest other than that derived from sources within the United States as provided in section
43 861(a)(1);

44 (2) dividends other than those derived from sources within the United States as provided in section
45 861(a)(2);

(3) compensation for labor or personal services performed without the United States;

(4) rentals or royalties from property located without the United States or from any interest in such property, including rentals or royalties for the use of or for the privilege of using without the United States patents, copyrights, secret processes and formulas, good will, trade-marks, trade brands, franchises, and other like properties;

(5) gains, profits, and income from the sale or exchange of real property located without the United States;

(6) gains, profits, and income derived from the purchase of inventory property (within the meaning of section 865(i)(1)) within the United States and its sale or exchange without the United States;

(7) underwriting income other than that derived from sources within the United States as provided in section 861(a)(7); and

(8) gains, profits, and income from the disposition of a United States real property interest (as defined in section 897(c)) when the real property is located in the Virgin Islands.

(b) Taxable income from sources without United States

From the items of gross income specified in subsection (a) there shall be deducted the expenses, losses, and other deductions properly apportioned or allocated thereto, and a ratable part of any expenses, losses, or other deductions which cannot definitely be allocated to some item or class of gross income. The remainder, if any, shall be treated in full as taxable income from sources without the United States. In the case of an individual who does not itemize deductions, an amount equal to the standard deduction shall be considered a deduction which cannot definitely be allocated to some item or class of gross income.

On the surface, it would appear that everything without the U.S. (the federal zone) fits into the category of “gross income”. But examining the regulations further, we find a completely different story! In 26 C.F.R. §1.864-2(b)(i), we can see that income from personal services derived from “without” the United States and received by a nonresident alien individual is not subject to tax. Keep in mind that the definition of “foreign” in the below case is anything outside the territorial jurisdiction of the United States, which includes only the federal zone:

Sec. 1.864-2 Trade or business within the United States.

(b) Performance of personal services for foreign employer--(1) Excepted services. For purposes of paragraph (a) of this section, the term “engaged in trade or business within the United States” does not include the performance of personal services--

(i) For a nonresident alien individual, foreign partnership, or foreign corporation, not engaged in trade or business within the United States at any time during the taxable year, or

(ii) For an office or place of business maintained in a foreign country or in a possession of the United States by an individual who is a citizen or resident of the United States or by a domestic partnership or a domestic corporation, by a nonresident alien individual who is temporarily present in the United States for a period or periods not exceeding a total of 90 days during the taxable year and whose compensation for such services does not exceed in the aggregate gross amount of $3,000.

You will note that most of us fit in the above category, because we do not inhabit the U.S./federal zone and are a non-resident NON-person. We will explain why shortly. Even more enlightening is that the graduated income tax that most of us have needlessly paid all these years applies ONLY to income effectively connected with a trade or business in the United States:

26 U.S.C. §871(b)(2)-GRADUATED RATE OF TAX...

“(2) DETERMINATION OF TAXABLE INCOME.—In determining taxable income...gross income includes ONLY gross income which is effectively connected with the conduct of a TRADE OR BUSINESS within the United States.”

26 U.S.C §7701(a)(26) makes it clear that public officers are engaged in a “trade or business”. Residents and Citizens of the 50 Union states (which is most of us) are American Citizens who are NOT performing any of the functions of a public

1 office* and, therefore, we are not engaged in, and have earned no income effectively connected to a “trade or business”
 2 within the United States (federal zone) or the U.S. Government.

3 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26) Definitions. Trade or Business. The term “trade or business” includes [only] the 4 performance of the functions of a public office.”

5 Following is a definition of “public office”:

6 *Public Office, pursuant to Black’s Law Dictionary, Abridged Sixth Edition, means:

7 “Essential characteristics of a ‘public office’ are:

8 (11) Authority conferred by law,

9 (12) Fixed tenure of office, and

10 (13) Power to exercise some of the sovereign functions of government.

11 (14) Key element of such test is that “officer is carrying out a sovereign function’.

12 (15) Essential elements to establish public position as ‘public office’ are:

13 (a) Position must be created by Constitution, legislature, or through authority conferred by 14 legislature.

15 (b) Portion of sovereign power of government must be delegated to position,

16 (c) Duties and powers must be defined, directly or implied, by legislature or through 17 legislative authority.

18 (d) Duties must be performed independently without control of superior power other than 19 law, and

20 (e) Position must have some permanency.”

21 For the purposes of the income tax, “Trade or Business” 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26), is a “term” or “word of art” defined by 22 Congress. Pursuant to Congressional rules of statutory construction a “term” may have a limited definition which is 23 different than the common understanding or the dictionary definition of the same word(s). Such term must be clearly and 24 specifically defined by Congress within the Code utilizing it.

25 *Term: “An expression or word especially one that has a particular meaning in a particular profession.”
 26 i.e.- term of art. –Ballentine’s Law Dictionary.

27 “Words of Art”—These are “words that have a particular meaning in a particular area of study and have 28 either no meaning or a different meaning outside of that field”.-Barron’s Dictionary.

29 In statutes levying taxes, the word “includes” is a word of limitation. It limits the definition of the term to include only the 30 specific elements or words following the word “includes”. However, granting a Congressional intent to make “includes”, a
 31 word of enlargement, pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §7701(c) , it could only be enlarged to introduce other words, which are 32 synonymous to, or in the precise same category or genus of, the other words used in the meaning.

33 The term ‘trade or business’ includes the performance of the functions of a ‘public office’, cannot, therefore, be expanded
 34 by implication, to also include the functions of private, independent, non-governmental occupations of common right, or 35 occupations of common right within the government:

36 “(1) To comprise, comprehend, or embrace...(2) To enclose within; contain; confine...But granting that the
 37 word ‘including’ is a term of enlargement, it is clear that it only performs that office by introducing the specific
 38 elements constituting the enlargement. It thus, and thus only, enlarges the otherwise more limited, preceding
 39 general language...The word ‘including’ is obviously used in the sense of its synonyms, comprising;
 40 comprehending; embracing.”

41 [Treasury Decision 3980, Vol. 29, January-December, 1927, pgs. 64 and 65]

42 “Includes is a word of limitation. Where a general term in Statute is followed by the word, ‘including’ the
 43 primary import of the specific words following the quoted words is to indicate restriction rather than
 44 enlargement. Powers ex re. Covon v. Charron R.I., 135 A. 2nd 829, 832

45 [Definitions-Words and Phrases pages 156-156, Words and Phrases under ‘limitations’]

46 “In the interpretation of statutes levying taxes, it is the established rule not to extend their provisions by
 47 implication beyond the clear import of the language used, or to enlarge their operations so as to embrace
 48 matters not specifically pointed out. In case of doubt they are construed most strongly against the government
 49 and in favor of the citizen.”

50 [Gould v. Gould, 245 U.S. 151, at 153]

1 Because residents and Citizens of the 50 Union states are not engaged in a “trade or business” within the United States,
 2 pursuant to 26 C.F.R. §1.871-1(b)(1)(i), for the purposes of the income tax, they are in a class of “non-resident alien
 3 individuals”, defined as follows:

5 “...(b) Classes of non-resident aliens-

6 In general. For purposes of the income tax, nonresident alien individuals are divided into the following classes:

7 Nonresident alien individuals who at no time during the taxable year engaged in a trade or business in the
 8 United States...”

9 Therefore, pursuant to 26 C.F.R. §1.871-7, state Citizens and “nationals” and residents of the 50 Union states, are not 10 subject to the graduated income tax imposed by 26 U.S.C. Section 1.

11 26 C.F.R. §1.871-7

12 Taxation of nonresident alien individuals not engaged in trade or U.S. business.—

13 Imposition of tax. (1) “...a nonresident alien individual...is NOT subject to the tax imposed by Section 1”
 14 [Subtitle A, Chapter 1]

15 5.7.6.7 Operative Sections

16 The earlier sections of Title 26 (26 U.S.C. §61 and following) deal with types of income that may be taxable (such as 17 compensation for services). However, these sections do not specify where the transaction is taking place, or who is 18 receiving the income. Obviously not everyone on earth who receives “compensation for services” is taxable under U.S.
 19 law. A separate part of the law, found in Subchapter N, deals with what types of commerce generate taxable income.

20 Subchapter N is entitled “Tax based on income from sources within or without the United States.” As the title suggests,
 21 this subchapter explains when income from within or without the United States** (the federal zone) is subject to the 22 income tax. But on examining Subchapter N, it is readily apparent that it relates only to international and foreign 23 commerce, but not to citizens who receive all of their income from within the 50 Union states. This can be seen by the 24 titles of the five “Parts” of Subchapter N, which are “Source rules and other general rules relating to foreign income” (Part 25 I), “Nonresident aliens and foreign corporations” (Part II), “Income from sources without [outside of] the United States”
 26 (Part III), “Domestic international sales corporations” (Part IV), and “International boycott determinations” (Part V).

27 The statutes of Part I of Subchapter N (beginning with 26 U.S.C. §861) give general rules about “within” and “without,”
 28 but the regulations thereunder make it quite clear that these rules apply only to the taxable activities described throughout 29 the other “Parts” of Subchapter N.

30 “(ii) Relationship of sections 861, 862, 863(a), and 863(b). Sections 861, 862, 863(a), and 863(b) are the four
 31 provisions applicable in determining taxable income from specific sources.”
 32 [26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(f)(3)(ii)]

33 This term “specific sources” is used in three other places in the regulations, every one of which specifically refers to taxable
 34 activities described in the “operative sections” of the statutes throughout Subchapter N (which are listed in 1.861-8(f)(1)
 35 of the regulations). In other words, while the regulations list the taxable activities all in one place (26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(f)(1),
 36 the statutes describe those taxable activities in numerous sections throughout all of Subchapter N. The “specific sources”
 37 listed in the regulations each refer specifically to sections of the statutes (called “operative sections”) describing those 38 activities. For example, item “(iv)” on the list in 1.861-8(f)(1) specifically refers to sections 871(b)(1) and 882(a)(1) of the 39 statutes, which state the following:

40 “A nonresident alien individual engaged in trade or business within the United States... shall be taxable as 41 provided in section 1...”
 42 [26 U.S.C. §871(b)(1)]

43 “A foreign corporation engaged in trade or business within the United States... shall be taxable as provided in
 44 section 11...”

Here the statutes state that these specific activities (or “sources”) may produce taxable income. If an “item” of income (such as compensation for services) derives from the activity described in this “operative section,” that income is subject to the income tax. The “shall be taxable” phrase would be entirely unnecessary if “from whatever source derived” had the broad meaning that the usual (and incorrect) interpretation of the law gives it.

There is no such “shall be taxable” phrase, nor any “operative section” describing an activity in which a United States Citizen living and working exclusively within the 50 Union states receives income from within the 50 Union states. The regulations under Section 861 make it clear that the “items” of income must derive from a taxable source or activity described in an “operative section” of the statutes in order to be taxable. Other income does not legally constitute “income from whatever source derived.”

The following analogy may help to clarify the matter of “items” of income and “sources” of income. Suppose that there was a law imposing a tax on “Zonkos,” and that the law defined “Zonkos” as “all toys from whatever store derived, including the following toys: plastic cars, dolls, yoyos,” etc. Then the law stated that another section “determines the stores for purposes of the Zonko tax,” and that section listed “Bob’s Toys,” “Toy City,” and “Toy World” as “toy stores.”

In this example, there would be two distinct aspects of the term “Zonko”: whether an item is a taxable “toy,” and whether it comes from a taxable “store.” Both criteria would have to be met for it to legally constitute a “Zonko.” For example, a baby bottle bought at Toy World would not be a “Zonko” (even though it came from a “store”), if baby bottles are not within the legal definition of “toys.” Also, a doll bought from “Chuck’s Bargain Basement” also would not be a “Zonko” (even though it is a “toy”), as it did not come from something within the legal meaning of “store.” A yoyo from Toy World would be a “Zonko” as it is both a “toy” and comes from a “store.”

Similarly, if an “item” of income (such as dividends) does not come from a taxable “source” or activity (such as a foreign corporation doing business within the United States**), it does not constitute “gross income.” While the law goes to great length to specify which “items” of income may be included in “gross income,” the other condition must still be met in order for those items to be taxable: they must derive from a taxable “source” or activity under an “operative section” of Subchapter N (as explained in Section 1.861-8(f)(1) of the regulations). (Note that the definition of “gross income” includes both criteria: “all income from whatever source derived.”)

5.7.6.8 Summary of the 861 position

The current statutes and regulations show the correct, limited application of the “income tax” imposed by 26 U.S.C. §1, which is in conflict with what the public generally believes regarding the matter.

TO SUMMARIZE:

1. A direct tax is one levied directly upon citizens. The federal income tax under Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A is in actuality an indirect excise tax upon federal corporate privileges as ruled by the Supreme Court, but the IRS attempts to illegally enforce it as though it were an direct tax on live people. Direct taxes were best explained in the Supreme Court case of Knowlton v. Moore (178 U.S. 41) in 1900, which stated that:

“Direct taxes bear immediately upon persons, upon the possession and enjoyment of rights; indirect taxes are levied upon the happening of an event as an exchange.”

2. Article 1, Section 2, Clause 3 of the U.S. Constitution states that “Representatives and direct taxes shall be apportioned among the several States...”
3. Article 1, Section 9, Clause 4 of the U.S. Constitution states that “No Capitation or other direct tax shall be laid unless in proportion to the Census or Enumeration herein before directed to be taken.”
4. There can be no unapportioned direct tax, or it would violate the above constitutional limitations. This means that direct taxes must be requested NOT from citizens, but requested from the individual states by the Federal Government. Therefore, a Citizen CANNOT be made liable for the payment of federal income taxes.
5. The 16th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution, which allegedly authorized the imposition of federal taxes on “income”, did not change the Constitution in such a way as to eliminate the constitutional distinction between direct and indirect taxes. The Supreme Court in the case of Stanton v. Baltic Mining, as a matter of fact, said the following:

1 "... [the 16th Amendment] conferred no new power of taxation... [and]... prohibited the ... power of income
 2 taxation possessed by Congress from the beginning from being taken out of the category of indirect [e.g. excise
 3 taxes] taxation to which it inherently belonged...".
 4 [United States Supreme Court in Stanton v. Baltic Mining Co., 240 U.S. 103 (1916)]

5 The 16th Amendment therefore did not authorize the imposition of direct, unapportioned Federal Income Taxes
 6 upon citizens of the United States of America, in spite of the lies that you hear from Congressmen and the IRS just
 7 about every day on this subject. Instead, it authorized the taxation of income as an indirect excise tax, which is to 8 say that it is a business tax levied on federal corporate or business income, and not directly on individuals.

- 9 6. As we thoroughly covered earlier in section 5.6.5, the Supreme Court has ruled in the case of Eisner v. Macomber,
 10 252 U.S. 189, 207, 40 S.Ct. 189, 9 A.L.R. 1570 (1920) that Congress cannot by legislation define the word
 11 "income". They also ruled that for the purposes of the income tax, "income" means corporate profit from foreign 12 commerce of either federal or state corporations:

13 "We must reject in this case, as we have rejected in cases arising under the Corporation Excise Tax Act of 14 1909 (Doyle, Collector, v. Mitchell Brothers Co., 247 U.S. 179, 38 Sup.Ct. 467, 62 L.Ed.--), the broad 15 contention submitted on behalf of the government that all receipts—everything that comes in—are income
 16 within the proper definition of the term 'gross income,' and that the entire proceeds of a conversion of 17 capital assets, in whatever form and under whatever circumstances accomplished, should be treated as gross
 18 income. Certainly the term "income" has no broader meaning in the 1913 act than in that of 1909 (see 19 Stratton's Independence v. Howbert, 231 U.S. 399, 416, 417 S., 34 Sup.Ct. 136), and for the present purpose we 20 assume there is not difference in its meaning as used in the two acts."
 21 [Southern Pacific Co. v. Lowe, 247 U.S. 330, 335, 38 S.Ct. 540 (1918)]

23 "...Whatever difficulty there may be about a precise scientific definition of 'income,' it imports, as used here,
 24 something entirely distinct from principal or capital either as a subject of taxation or as a measure of the tax;

25 conveying rather the idea of gain or increase arising from
 26 corporate activities."

27 [Doyle v. Mitchell Brothers Co., 247 U.S. 179, 185, 38 S.Ct. 467 (1918)] [emphasis added]

29 "Income has been taken to mean the same thing as used in the Corporation Excise Tax Act of 1909 (36 Stat.
 30 112) in the 16th Amendment, and in the various revenue acts subsequently passed."
 31 [Bowers v. Kerbaugh-Empire Co., 271 U.S. 170, 174 (1926)]

- 32 7. From a legal standpoint, and as interpreted by the federal courts, income to be treated as taxable MUST meet all of 33 the following three criteria
 34 a. Must be "income", which means it must be "corporate profit".
 35 b. Must be a "class of gross income" found in 26 U.S.C. §61 and 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(a)(3).
 36 c. Must be an "item of income" (identified in 26 U.S.C. §861) that is taxable (e.g. profit, sales tax, etc),
 37 AND
 38 d. Must derive from a taxable source or activity identified in 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(f)(1). Income that meets
 39 ALL FOUR of these criteria is called "gross income". There are many taxable types or items of income
 40 but very few taxable sources as far as the federal government is concerned. All of these sources are
 41 identified only in 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8, and all other types are excluded by implication. A favorite IRS
 42 trick is to talk about every type of conceivable income as taxable and say nothing about taxable source.
 43 8. Federal income taxes under Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A are indirect excise taxes, and the Congressional 44 Research Service report 97-59A entitled "Frequently Asked Questions Concerning the Federal Income Tax".
 45 Indirect excise taxes are on corporations involved in foreign commerce only and apply only to specific taxable
 46 activities or sources. It is ludicrous to attempt to lay an indirect excise tax and then not specify which activities or 47 sources are taxable anywhere in the statutes, and to do so is a blatant attempt to unlawfully extend federal 48 jurisdiction to tax beyond the clear intent of the Constitution. The IRS and Congress have attempted over the 49 years since the 16th Amendment was introduced to abuse their power to broaden the definition of "income" and
 50 eliminate the use of taxable activities and sources from the Internal Revenue Code so as to try to apply indirect
 51 excise taxes in Subtitle A to individuals and thereby transform the indirect excise taxes under Subtitle A into direct
 52 taxes. The Constitution, however, does not authorize them to do this and the Supreme Court on repeated occasions
 53 has pointed this out.
 54 9. There has been a concerted effort over the years by the federal government, and more importantly by the IRS and 55 the Congress, to disguise or hide the simple facts contained in section 5.6.10 and subsections. We have traced the history of changes to the law that they made to show that there is an intent to confuse and deceive the average American into thinking that all of their income is “gross income”, which simply is not true. Chapter 6 of this book also reveals the extent of collusion and conspiracy over the years between the various branches of government to enlarge and extend the perceived, but not actual, jurisdiction of the federal government to levy federal income taxes on private individuals domiciled in the 50 Union states outside of the federal zone. An examination of older versions of the Internal Revenue Code clearly shows to whom the tax applies and what types of sources are taxed, while the laws available today have been deliberately obfuscated and confused to hide the truth. Manipulation of the media by the IRS and the relative legal ignorance of the average American have prevented the word from getting out about the fraud and obfuscation involved with the federal government’s attempts to hide and obfuscate the truth and illegally broaden the federal income tax beyond its clear Constitutional limits.

The following sections of the U.S. Code conclusively demonstrate that they are all collectively consistent in their entirety with the above constitutional limitations on the federal government’s ability to tax:

1. 26 U.S.C. §1 imposes the income tax on “taxable income.”

2. 26 U.S.C. §61 defines “gross income” generally as income “from whatever source derived.” The Supreme Court has ruled in Wright v. U.S., 302 U.S. 583 (1938) that “from whatever source derived” does not mean that the source is irrelevant:

*“The Court has hitherto consistently held that a literal reading of a provision of the Constitution which defeats a purpose evident when the instrument is read as a whole, is not to be favored... [and one of the examples they give is...]‘From whatever source derived,’ as it is written in the Sixteenth Amendment, does not mean from whatever source derived. Evans v. Gore, 253 U.S. 245, 40 S.Ct. 550, 11 A.L.R. 519. See, also, Robertson v. Baldwin, 165 U.S. 275, 281, 282 S., 17 S.Ct. 326; Gompers v. United States, 233 U.S. 604, 610, 34 S.Ct. 693, Ann.Cas.1915D, 1044; Bain Peanut Co. v. Pinson, 282 U.S. 499, 501, 51 S.Ct. 228, 229; United States v. Lefkowitz, 285 U.S. 452, 467, 52 S.Ct. 420, 424, 82 A.L.R. 775.”*

3. 26 U.S.C. §§ 861 - 865, and related regulations, determine the taxable “sources of income.”

4. 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(f), which is the implementing regulation for 26 U.S.C. §861, shows that the taxable “sources of income” apply only to those engaged in international or foreign commerce (including commerce within federal possessions) or who hold public office. More precisely, it shows that the only thing taxable is federal corporate profit, which in that section of the regulation is identified as Domestic International Sales Corporations (DISC) and Foreign Sales Corporations (FSC’s).

The income tax is therefore a “voluntary” tax and amounts to a “stupidity tax” on those individuals who are residents of the 50 Union states and who have only domestic income but who have allowed themselves to be deceived by the IRS into thinking they are “liable” for tax on all income from all “sources”.

5.7.6.9 Why Hasn't The 861 Issue Been Challenged in Court Already?

After reading the essence of the evidence up to this point, skeptics often ask us the question:

“Why Hasn't The 861 Issue Been Challenged in Court Already? After all, the issue seems pretty straightforward and easy to understand?”

What follows is our answer to that question. We have searched Supreme Court Cases going back to 1900 and Federal Appellate cases going back to 1930 using both the FindLaw index (<http://www.findlaw.com>) and the Versus Law index (<http://www.versuslaw.com>). We have found absolutely no references to the 26 U.S.C. §861 issue. The fact is that the 861 loophole may already have been used and successfully litigated in the courts, but that there are no records of cases dealing with the issue in any of the Federal Reporters or online databases we could find. We are then left to ourselves to try to explain and understand how this might have happened. Let us offer three possible and even probable explanations:

1. IRS Doesn't Argue The 861 Issue or Impose Taxes on People Who Use It. The law on this issue is so clear it doesn't need to be litigated so it never gets into court and is settled by the IRS before it gets to court. They may be content in this case to just keep the truth out of the courts so the whole system doesn't collapse when everyone finds out about this undiscovered/unpublished loophole.
2. IRS Obfuscation. The IRS keeps coming up with lame excuses why section IRC section 861 doesn't apply, for instance, by raising doubt about the meaning of "foreign". They also misinterpret the 16th Amendment phrase "from whatever source derived", to mean that the source of income is irrelevant, which we clearly know is false.
3. Federal judicial conspiracy to protect the income tax. We have extensively documented the existence of a federal judicial conspiracy to protect the income tax in chapter 6. This has lead the federal courts hearing cases dealing with the 861 issue to ensure that the findings are "unpublished". Going unpublished means the judge seals the court record for that case and won't allow the court's findings to be put in the Federal Reporter or any online case database so that others may read the findings and use them as precedents that must be respected later by the courts as part of "stare decisis." They will do this if the case would be an embarrassment to either the judge personally (because of a conflict of interest by the judge, for instance) or the government generally. As an example, if a federal district or appellate court judge is ruling against the U.S. Supreme Court and violating precedent, and doesn't want to have to explain why or be questioned by the Supreme Court or his supervisors, then he will seal the case record and make the case unpublished. This conspiratorial tactic, for instance, was quite common among the several Fifth Amendment cases litigated by the famous tax freedom fighter Bill Conklin in the federal district courts (see section 6.9.7).

We think the most likely of the three explanations above is number 3. You will understand why after you read chapter 6 completely, and especially section 6.6, which talks about the judicial conspiracy to protect the income tax. If the federal courts are doing what we believe they are doing, then the cases dealing with 26 U.S.C. §861 aren't being published and are being kept secret by the judges, who after all have a conflict of interest in wanting to perpetuate the flow of revenue that pays their salaries. However, in the process of sealing the court record for cases dealing with section 861, the courts are demonstrating involvement in extortion, racketeering, and First Amendment and censorship and rights violation, for which these judges should have been prosecuted for a "conspiracy against rights" under 18 U.S.C. §241.

Even for unpublished cases, there are still ways to overcome this conspiracy by the courts. If you know the case number and the court for an unpublished case, you can go directly to the court where the case was heard and request the transcripts and the court's judgment. This will bypass the conspiracy and allow us to gather evidence that will implicate judges in the conspiracy so that we can pursue a class action criminal lawsuit against them. All we need are at least 40 citizens who have been injured by the IRS to put together a class action lawsuit. This leads to the following request we'd like to impose on everyone reading this book:

If you litigate the 26 U.S.C. Section 861 issue, we request that you send us your case number and the court and date your case was heard in so that we can post the case judgment and transcripts, and this is especially true if the judge has sealed the record of your case or made it unpublished! We promise to post a record of it on our website and submit it to the website at <http://iresist.com/ice/welcome.htm> (Investigation of Curious Evidence, e.g. ICE) for use as legal evidence by other tax freedom fighters. Better yet, please send us a copy of the court's findings as well. Call us up to get the address to mail it to and we will scan it in and put it on our website. Let's work together against this conspiracy, folks!

5.7.6.10 Why the 861 argument is not good to use in court

In closing our treatment of the 861 Position, we want to provide valuable insight crafted by one of our more informed readers. His insights are very revealing in showing why it is probably not a good idea to use the 861 Position in court, and why it is better to focus on jurisdictional issues. His comments will become even clearer after you read section 5.3.1 entitled "Taxpayer" v. "Nontaxpayer". His comments follow this paragraph and occupy the remainder of the section.

Long ago, when I knew far less than I do right now, like many folks, I readily grasped the 861 Position that has been so eloquently explained by Larken Rose. And, I feel, Larken is a genuine American Hero for his noble efforts over the years. He has educated countless Americans and for that, he is a great man. However, that said, upon further reflection and after much self-study, I came to the conclusion a long time ago, that the 861 thesis is wholly subordinate to the Jurisdictional Argument. At bottom, it is as simple as this.

The IRC is special law, not positive law, as revealed in the legislative notes under 1 U.S.C. §204, and it applies to a small number of predefined people located in predefined locales. Since I am an American Citizen, I am not one of those predefined people. And since I am not located inside Washington, DC, or any other federal enclave, I am not located in the

1 IRC's predefined locality. Therefore, since the IRC does not apply to me, it simply makes no sense to use and apply the
 2 IRS' IRC, in an effort to attempt to prove that it does not apply to me, excepting those applicable sections that reveal the
 3 IRC's limited geographic and territorial jurisdiction. One can readily rely upon U.S. Supreme Court cases and the Organic
 4 Laws to prove the same facts. A lot of well-meaning folks in the Tax Honesty Movement are going to a U.S. Government-
 5 controlled territorial court, and attempting to defend themselves by citing the municipal code that is the IRC. I think such 6 an approach is a BIG mistake.

7 The fact is, the IRC is written to ensnare "taxpayers", and, quite appropriately, its provisions are therefore designed to
 8 extract income tax from "taxpayers" while also setting forth the payment procedures and IRS practices of collection, etc.
 9 But one must always keep in mind how the IRC defines the term, "taxpayer." According to the IRC, a "taxpayer" is one
 10 who is subject to or liable for an income tax. So any section of the IRC or tax regulations that uses the term "taxpayer",
 11 should set off an ALARM!!! I do not believe that one who believes themselves to be a "nontaxpayer", should be relying
 12 upon a regulation that uses the term "taxpayer", within the actual regulation. The impact of this all-encompassing
 13 definition of "taxpayer" is sweeping in its effect and it literally "sweeps-up" everything in its path.

14 Here is one example of what I mean. This reveals the danger of relying solely upon 861 without buttressing it with the more
 15 powerful jurisdictional thesis. At 26 C.F.R. §1.863-1(c) it says:

16 "The taxpayer's taxable income from sources within or without the United States will be determined under the 17 rules of Secs.1.861-8 through 1.861-14T for determining taxable income from sources within the United States."

18 DANGER!! DANGER!! WILL ROBINSON!! Notice how the regulation asserts "The taxpayers taxable income. . .blah,
 19 blah" So, right up front they are saying if you use this section to determine taxable income, then ergo, you must be a
 20 "taxpayer" who HAS taxable income.

21 Look, an 'alleged' taxpayer who uses 861 to demonstrate that they DO NOT have any taxable income, is arguing against 22 themselves and running in place. Why? Because they do not meet the definition of "taxpayer" as defined at 26 U.S.C.
 23 §7701(a)(14). If one is truly a "non-taxpayer", then it makes no sense to use regulations written only for "taxpayers", in 24 order to try and prove that one is NOT a taxpayer!!!

25 The tax regulations are for the benefit (chuckle) of "taxpayers" and apply only to them. ONLY "taxpayers" can have 26 taxable income. The quoted section above is ONLY applicable to "taxpayers". And taxpayers are those who have taxable
 27 income. The section is craftily written and applies circular logic to keep one within the jurisdiction of the IRC and the IRS.

28 What I am saying is very careful, because the 861 regulations are a trap and a ruse. Especially inside a courtroom. The 861
 29 regulations are specifically designed to ensnare those poor souls who can't see the dangerous word-games that are being
 30 used to trap them in a house of mirrors. And rest assured, judges continually take silent judicial notice of the ensnaring
 31 nature of the 861 regulations, without ever recognizing evidence that refutes or disproves the 861 regs. 861 Regs apply a 32 series of circular logic stratagems to en-snare folks and keep them arguing within the scope (and the jurisdiction) of the 33 IRC.

34 5.7.6.11 Common IRS and tax professional objections to the 861/source issue with rebuttal

35 In this subsection, we play the devil's advocate and document all of the deceiving, obfuscating, ill-informed criticisms,
 36 complaints, and downright lies you are likely to hear from the IRS in responding to the issues raised in this chapter. The 37 IRS will take these approaches because they will do anything to hold on to your money (remember 1 Tim. 6:10 "The love
 38 of money is the root of all evil."?), even if you aren't liable for tax. Their deceitful unethical lawyers have no scruples
 39 and will say whatever they have to, including lying to you in order to keep you paying taxes you aren't liable for. Why not
 40 lie?: The regulations and the courts say they can't be held legally liable for the advice they give you! But if you give them
 41 bad numbers based on your misunderstanding of the proper application of the Internal Revenue Code, they fine and 42 penalize you. Hypocrisy!!

43 We are including these arguments so you can take the offensive with the IRS by being proactive in anticipating the 44 problems they will try to create and having answers for them. We have to keep the Internal Revenue Service (I.R.S.) on the 45 defensive at all times. Don't ever let yourself be on the defensive or be unprepared with them, because they will try to 46 carve you up by intimidating you with your own ignorance and fear as their best offensive weapon! Don't hand them that

1 card to play with. Knowledge is power, and you can have the lion's share of the power just by reading and studying this
2 book and our website!

3 5.7.6.11.1 "We are all taxpayers. You can't get out of paying income tax because the law says you are liable."

4 IRS OBJECTION: "We're all taxpayers. You can't get out of paying income tax because the law says you are liable."

5 YOUR PROPER RESPONSE: "Show me the law that makes me liable as a Citizen of the 50 Union states with income
6 from the 50 Union states and don't refer in your answer to the fraudulent IRS Publications, but instead to the 7 Internal Revenue Code and your Regulations themselves. The fact is, there is no law and I vehemently deny any
8 liability for tax. Until such time as you can show me proof with the law itself that I am a 'taxpayer', I don't want
9 you referring to me as such, but instead using the term 'National'. You are only using the term 'taxpayer' to keep
10 me on the defensive and to shift the burden of proof onto me, but you are the person who has the burden of proof
11 at this point until you demonstrate otherwise."

12 5.7.6.11.2 "Section 861 says that all income is taxable."

13 IRS OBJECTION: "26 U.S.C. §861 says that income of most people is taxable."

14 YOUR PROPER RESPONSE:

15 This is a common erroneous "interpretation" which the IRS and tax professionals have regarding Section 861,
16 which is that it is relevant to everyone, but that it does show the income of most people to be taxable. This is due
17 in large part to the general language used in Section 861, which reads:

18 "Sec. 861. Income from sources within the United States
19 (a) Gross income from sources within United States
20 The following items of gross income shall be treated as income from sources within the United States: (1)
21 Interest - Interest from the United States... (2) Dividends... (3) Personal services - Compensation for labor..."
22 [26 U.S.C. §861]

23 (Interestingly, most tax professionals are aware that the application of this section is not as broad as it appears to 24 be at first glance.)

25 As shown above, this section of the statutes applies only in determining taxable income from 'specific sources,'
26 which are all related to international and foreign commerce. The history of the regulations and statutes, as shown
27 above, make this point clear. However, certain sections of the regulations (taken out of context) are used to try to 28 support the claim that the tax is not limited to the "specific sources."

29 (The entire issue of "residual groupings" mentioned below is settled easily using the older regulations, but for the 30 sake of completeness it will also be dealt with using the current regulations. The following explanation deals with 31 an issue intended to be confusing; it is included for the purpose of being thorough in documenting and refuting
32 anything likely to be used to try to refute the conclusions of this report.)

33 The regulations define a "statutory grouping" of gross income as income from a specific source, while "residual 34 grouping of gross income" means income from anywhere else.

35 "...the term 'statutory grouping of gross income' or 'statutory grouping' means the gross income from a
36 specific source or activity... (See paragraph (f)(1) of this section.) Gross income from other sources or 37 activities is referred to as the 'residual grouping of gross income' or 'residual grouping.'"
38 [26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(a)(4)]

39 The argument is that income from somewhere other than the "specific sources" may also be taxable. The idea is 40 that "gross income" must constitute "taxable income" (after deductions are subtracted), since the definition of 41 "taxable income" is "gross income" minus deductions. However, the regulations often use the term "gross
42 income" in a more general way, meaning any income, whether taxable or not. In fact, the regulations specifically 43 state that the "residual grouping" may be excluded from federal taxation.

1                    "...the residual grouping may include, or consist entirely of, excluded income. See paragraph (d)(2) of this
2 section with respect to the allocation and apportionment of deductions to excluded income."
3 [26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(a)(4)]

4 A clear example of tax-exempt income being referred to as "gross income" in a "residual grouping" is shown
5 below. As stated in 26 U.S.C. §882(a)(2), foreign corporations are only taxable on "gross income which is
6 effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business within the United States." The following example
7 therefore shows that any regulation which discusses "gross income" (not "taxable income") from the "residual
8 grouping" in no way shows that the residual grouping must be taxable.

9                    "(iii) Apportionment Since X is a foreign corporation, the statutory grouping is gross income effectively
10 connected with X's trade of business in the United States, namely gross income from sources within the United 11 States, and the residual grouping is gross income not effectively connected with a trade or business in the 12 United States, namely gross income from countries A and B."
13 [26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(g), Example 21]

14 The fact that the regulations refer to income as "gross income" does not mean it is taxable. In discussing an item
15 of income, the regulations state the following:

16                    "Gross income from sources within the United States includes compensation for labor or personal services
17 performed in the United States..."
18 [26 C.F.R. §1.861-4]

19 In the generic sense, compensation for labor within the United States** (the federal zone) is "gross income."
20 However, as the current regulations repeatedly explain, it can only be "taxable income" if it comes from a
21 "specific source." The older regulations dealt with this "item" of income in a very similar way, and the context of 22 the surrounding regulations made it perfectly clear in what situations this "item" could be taxable.

23                    "Sec. 29.119-1. Income from sources within the United States.
24 Nonresident alien individuals, foreign corporations, and citizens of the United States or domestic corporations
25 entitled to the benefits of section 251 are taxable only upon income from sources within the United States..."

26 The Internal Revenue Code divides the income of such taxpayer into three classes:

- 27                    (1) Income which is derived in full from sources within the United States;
28                    (2) Income which is derived in full from sources without the United States;
29                    (3) Income which is derived partly from sources within and partly from sources without the United States...

30 Sec. 29.119-2. Interest...

31 Sec. 29.119-3. Dividends...

32 Sec. 29.119-4. Compensation for labor or personal services. - Except as provided in section 119(a)(3), gross
33 income from sources within the United States includes compensation for labor or personal services
34 performed within the United States...

35 Sec. 29.119-5. Rentals and royalties...

36 Sec. 29.119-6. Sale of real property...

37 Sec. 29.119-10. Apportionment of deductions.

38 From the items specified in sections 29.119-1 to 29.119-6, inclusive, as being derived specifically from sources
39 within the United States there shall, in the case of nonresident alien individuals and foreign corporations
40 engaged in trade or business within the United States, be deducted [allowable deductions]. The remainder
41 shall be included in full as net income from sources within the United States..."

42 The fact that income is referred to in the regulations as "gross income" certainly doesn't mean it is taxable. In 43 fact, after stating that the "residual grouping of gross income" may or may not be taxable, the regulations refer the 44 reader to "paragraph (d)(2)" regarding "excluded income." As shown above, the only types of income listed as 45 not exempt are:

47                    (B) In computing the combined taxable income of a DISC or FSC...

48                    (C) For all purposes under subchapter N of the Code... the gross income of a possessions corporation...

49                    (D) Foreign earned income as defined in section 911 and the regulations thereunder..."

50 [26 C.F.R. §1.861-8T(d)(2)(iii)]

51 Deductions must be divided between the "statutory grouping" (income from a specific source) and the "residual 52 grouping" (income from anywhere else). This does not mean that the "residual grouping" is taxable. The

1 regulations show in several places that there must be an “operative section” which applies in order to determine
2 taxable income.

3 *“A taxpayer to which this section applies is required to allocate deductions to a class of gross income and,
4 then, if necessary to make the determination required by the operative section of the Code, to apportion
5 deductions within the class of gross income between the statutory grouping of gross income (or among the 6 statutory groupings) and the residual grouping of gross income.”*
7 [26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(a)(2)]

8 The regulation which states that the “residual grouping” may be exempt from taxation also shows that there must 9 be an “operative section” applicable.

10 “In some instances, where the operative section so requires, the statutory grouping or the residual grouping 11 may include, or consist entirely of, excluded income.”
12 [26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(a)(4)]

13 This is only logical, based on the simple fact that the section “for determining taxable income from sources within 14 the United States” (26 C.F.R. §1.861-8) states over and over again that it is for determining taxable income from 15 “specific sources,” not the “residual groupings.”

16 *“The rules contained in this section apply in determining taxable income of the taxpayer from specific sources
17 and activities under other sections of the Code, referred to in this section as operative sections...”*
18 [26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(a)(1)]

19 *“The operative sections of the Code which require the determination of taxable income of the taxpayer from 20 specific sources or activities and which give rise to statutory groupings to which this section is applicable
21 include the sections described below...”*
22 [26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(f)(1)]

23 *“A taxpayer to which this section applies is required to allocate deductions to a class of gross income and,
24 then, if necessary to make the determination required by the operative section of the Code, to apportion
25 deductions...”*
26 [26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(a)(2)]

27 The regulations (and statutes) are not about determining taxable income from anywhere other than the “specific 28 sources.” Part of the confusion is from the fact that, in stating that the “residual grouping” may consist of 29 excluded income, the regulations imply that it also may be taxable. This is correct, but deceptive. The possibility
30 of the “residual grouping” being taxable could easily lead to the erroneous conclusion that income from 31 somewhere other than the “specific sources” might be taxable. The assumption is that the “residual grouping”
32 cannot be from one of the listed “specific sources.” This is not the case.

33 If person ‘A’ gets taxable income from two “specific sources” (taxable activities described in “operative 34 sections”), the regulations state that all the calculations must be done for each “specific source” separately.
35 Paragraph (f)(1) lists the “specific sources” under the “operative sections,” and then the next paragraph states the 36 following:

37 *“(i) Where more than one operative section applies, it may be necessary for the taxpayer to apply this section
38 separately for each applicable operative section.”*
39 [26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(f)(2)]

40 While person ‘A’ is calculating all the deductions, etc. for the first “specific source,” his income from the second
41 “specific source” falls in the category of “residual grouping.” Likewise, when he is doing the calculations for the 42 taxable income from the second “specific source,” the income from the first is in the “residual grouping.” The 43 temporary regulations at 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8T demonstrate this.

44 “Thus, in determining the separate limitations on the foreign tax credit imposed by section 904(d)(1) or by 45 section 907, the income within a separate limitation category constitutes a statutory grouping of income and 46 all other income not within that separate limitation category (whether domestic or within a different separate 47 limitation category) constitutes the residual grouping.”
48 [26 C.F.R. §1.861-8T(c)(1)]

49 (The same thing is said again in 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8T(f)(1)(ii).)

Even an example in the regulations showing that the “residual grouping” may be taxable therefore does not imply that income from somewhere other than the “specific sources” may be taxable. The “operative sections” involving individuals receiving income from within federal possessions also makes it possible for an American to have “taxable income” from within and without the United States** (the federal zone).

The “residual grouping” argument relies on making assumptions based on something that complex deduction allocation examples might seem to suggest, but do not state (that income not from the “specific sources” can be taxable), while at the same time ignoring several sections of regulations which contradict this theory. The over-complexity of these regulations seems designed to cause confusion and uncertainty. But even if the current complicated regulations by themselves, combined with some “creative interpretation,” allowed for the “residual grouping” argument to have some credibility, the older regulations (as shown above) erase that credibility entirely.

The 1945 regulations made no mention of “operative sections,” “specific sources,” “statutory groupings” or “residual groupings,” and didn’t take dozens of pages to create a jumbled, confusing mess. Since there was nothing about “residual groupings” back then to base an argument on, to use the argument now would require the claim that since 1945 there must have been a massive expansion of what income is taxable, from international and foreign commerce to all commerce, and that the Secretary decided to inform the public of this by innuendos hidden in confusing examples about deduction allocation related to the per-country limitation on the foreign tax credit. (And, as shown before, Congress stated that “no substantive change” was made anyway.)

The common “interpretation” of the Internal Revenue Code relies on multiple assumptions, as well as simply ignoring various sections which contradict those assumptions. Some may wish to imagine that some other “sources” of income which the law does not mention must also be taxable. Some may like to assume that everything is taxable unless the law specifically says it is not. And some may say that if there is some uncertainty about what the law requires, then the government by default “wins.” All of these are in direct conflict with a basic principle of tax law, which has been explained on numerous occasions by the Supreme Court.

“In the interpretation of statutes levying taxes it is the established rule not to extend their provisions, by implication, beyond the clear import of the language used, or to enlarge their operations so as to embrace matters not specifically pointed out. In case of doubt they are construed most strongly against the government, and in favor of the citizen.”
[Gould v. Gould, 245 U.S. 151 (1917)]

“Keeping in mind the well-settled rule that the citizen is exempt from taxation unless the same is imposed by clear and unequivocal language, and that where the construction of a tax law is doubtful, the doubt is to be resolved in favor of those upon whom the tax is sought to be laid.”
[Spreckels Sugar Refining Co. v. McClain, 192 U.S. 397 (1904)]

The extensive evidence of the correct, limited application of the income tax leaves little room for doubt. But even if the IRS, or others who would challenge the conclusions of this report, could obfuscate and confuse matters to the point where “it could go either way,” the Supreme Court makes it clear that such a disagreement is to be settled in favor of the Citizen, not the government.

5.7.6.11.3 “IRC Section 861 falls under Subchapter N, Part I, which deals only with FOREIGN Income”

IRS OBJECTION: “26 U.S.C. Section 861 only deals with Foreign income and falls under Subchapter N (‘Subchapter N - Tax Based on Income From Sources Within or Without’), Part I of the code, which is entitled ‘SOURCE RULES AND OTHER GENERAL RULES RELATING TO FOREIGN INCOME’. You shouldn’t be looking in this section to identify taxable sources because it doesn’t pertain to most Americans, who don’t have foreign income.”

YOUR PROPER RESPONSE: “First of all, 26 U.S.C. §7806 makes your comment irrelevant, because it says that the titles, table of contents, and organization of the code mean nothing and have no force and effect. Since the word “Foreign” is only used in the title, then it is irrelevant to the discussion:

*United States Code
TITLE 26 - INTERNAL REVENUE CODE
Subtitle F - Procedure and Administration
CHAPTER 80 - GENERAL RULES
Subchapter A - Application of Internal Revenue Laws
Sec. 7806. Construction of title*

1 (b) Arrangement and classification

2 No inference, implication, or presumption of legislative construction shall be drawn or made by reason of the 3 location or grouping of any particular section or provision or portion of this title, nor shall any table of 4 contents, table of cross references, or similar outline, analysis, or descriptive matter relating to the contents
 5 of this title be given any legal effect. The preceding sentence also applies to the sidenotes and ancillary tables
 6 contained in the various prints of this Act before its enactment into law.

7 Second, as we analyze in detail in section 6.5.8 of this document, the title of Part I used to be “Determination of
 8 sources of income” and was obfuscated by Congress in 1988 to instead read “Source rules and other general rules
 9 relating to foreign income”. The underlying procedures and source rules were not substantially changed. Only 10 the title was changed to further confuse people about source rules and cover up the truth.

11 QUESTION FOR DOUBTERS: What other conclusion explains why this change was made other than to 12 confuse and further conceal the truth? We can see none.

13 Even entertaining the notion that your argument about “foreign” is relevant, please answer the question of why
 14 does IRC section 861 deal with sources both ‘within and without’ the United States? Doesn’t “foreign income”
 15 only come from without the United States** (the federal zone) by the definition of “foreign” found in the 16 collegiate dictionary? Let’s not forget the definition of the term “United States”, which really only means the 17 District of Columbia and the “federal zone”. Furthermore, why does neither the Internal Revenue Code or 26
 18 C.F.R. define the word “foreign” anywhere unless there was an intent to conceal the true jurisdiction of the U.S.
 19 government? Here are a few examples of the correct meaning of this word from commercial law dictionaries:

 21 [Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 647]

22 Foreign States: “Nations outside of the United States...Term may also refer to another state; i.e. a sister state.
 23 The term ‘foreign nations’, ...should be construed to mean all nations and states other than that in which the
 24 action is brought; and hence, one state of the Union is foreign to another, in that sense.”
 25 [Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 648]

26 Why is the word ‘within’ also included in the title to Part I and section 861? As we discussed in section 5.2.14
 27 “The definition of ‘foreign income’ relative to the Internal Revenue Code”, all income earned from outside the 28 District of Columbia and other parts of the “federal zone” is counted as “foreign income” as far as Congress is
 29 concerned. If I am a natural person and a “national” but not a “U.S. citizen” domiciled in one of the 50 sovereign
 30 states of the United States of America outside of the federal zone, then as far as the U.S. Government is concerned,
 31 all of my income comes from a foreign “source” and therefore section 861 absolutely DOES apply to my tax
 32 situation and 26 C.F.R. §1.1441-1 does define state citizens engaged in a public office as a “nonresident alien”!

33 Also, how do you explain the changes made to section 61 of the tax code in approximately 1982 where references
 34 pointing to section 861 were deliberately removed by Congress? These references had previously been part of the 35 code since 1921 and indicated that section 861 of the code was to be used for determining valid sources of income!
 36 What new law or court case permitted or requires this ‘hiding of evidence’ and further obfuscation of the tax code?
 37 Instead, we think Congress just changed the title of the subsection to confuse people into not looking in this
 38 section and to hide the fact that this applies to everyone! Earlier versions of the law made it much clearer that 39 citizens with income from the 50 Union states weren’t liable for federal income tax. Under the original tax code,
 40 most “persons” outside of the “federal zone” were nonresident citizens of the U.S. paying taxes on income from a
 41 “foreign source”. Why has this been progressively hidden in the tax code over the years for no disclosed reason?
 42 The IRS is trying to blow smoke and confuse people with the law instead of telling the truth directly to 43 people...that if they are state citizens domiciled in the 50 Union states with income from the 50 Union states, then
 44 they don’t owe tax. Please show me a positive law federal statute somewhere that contradicts this conclusion 45 about tax liability and is consistent with 1:2:3 (apportionment requirement for direct taxes), 1:9:4 (constraints on 46 direct taxes) and 1:8:1-3 (taxing authority) of the Constitution and the First, Fourth, Fifth, Sixth, and Thirteenth
 47 Amendments to the Constitution. Direct taxes based on income violate so many provisions of the U.S.
 48 Constitution it isn’t funny, and the Sixteenth Amendment, even if you count it as a validly ratified law, didn’t 49 change that situation or amend these sections to make an exception.

If you aren't going to refer to section 861 for taxable sources within and without the United States** (the federal zone), then what section in the code ARE you going to use to specify specific taxable sources? There are at least two Supreme Court cases that state that a tax on income is NOT a tax on its "source", including James v. United States, 366 U.S. 213 and United States v. Burke, 504 U.S. 229. You must tie the income tax somewhere in the code to a specific geographic area and/or taxable event (excise), which are collectively called a "situs", or the IRC would be invalid and would apply to everyone in the world! This would violate the Sixth Amendment and the 'void for vagueness' criteria we define in sections 3.11.11 and 5.10. The Supreme Court has ruled repeatedly that the income tax is an excise/indirect tax and is unconstitutional as a direct tax (Stanton v. Baltic Mining, 240 U.S. 103; Evans v. Gore, 253 U.S. 245), and excises always apply to geographic areas and events. I assume the event is the receipt of income, but where is the section that identifies the geographic area if it isn't 861?"

5.7.6.11.4 "The Sixteenth Amendment says 'from whatever source derived'...this means the source doesn't matter!"

IRS OBJECTION: "The Sixteenth Amendment says 'The Congress shall have power to lay and collect taxes on incomes, from whatever source derived'. This means that the source doesn't matter. Why all the big deal about something that is irrelevant?"

YOUR PROPER RESPONSE: "The Treasury regulations on taxable source make it very clear that specific sources must be identified as taxable in order for the income to be taxable. See 26 C.F.R. §1.861-1 thru 1.861-14, which identify specific taxable sources. If sources don't matter, why do these regulations even exist? For instance, 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(a) says:

"...The rules contained in this section apply in determining taxable income of the taxpayer from specific sources and activities under other sections of the Code referred to in this section as operative sections. See paragraph (f)(1) of this section for a list and description of operative sections."

And what about 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(a)(4)?:

This approach by the IRS rests on the misreading of "from whatever source derived" (as used in 26 U.S.C. §61) to mean "no matter where it comes from." This interpretation requires the reader to ignore all of the evidence presented in section 5.7.6.4 ("Sources of Income") and section 5.7.6.5 ("Determining Taxable Income from U.S.** Sources") of this document; most notably, the sections of regulations which state that Section 861 and following, and the regulations thereunder, "determine the sources of income for purposes of the income tax," and the sections which state that "determining taxable income from sources within the United States" is to be done using 26 U.S.C. §861(b) and 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8. It is a frivolous position because it is in disagreement with the U.S. Supreme Court also:

*"The Court has hitherto consistently held that a literal reading of a provision of the Constitution which defeats a purpose evident when the instrument is read as a whole, is not to be favored... [and one of the examples they give is...]'From whatever source derived,' as it is written in the Sixteenth Amendment, does not mean from whatever source derived. Evans v. Gore, 253 U.S. 245, 40 S.Ct. 550, 11 A.L.R. 519. See, also, Robertson v. Baldwin, 165 U.S. 275, 281, 282 S., 17 S.Ct. 326; Gompers v. United States, 233 U.S. 604, 610, 34 S.Ct. 693, Ann.Cas.1915D, 1044; Bain Peanut Co. v. Pinson, 282 U.S. 499, 501, 51 S.Ct. 228, 229; United States v. Lefkowitz, 285 U.S. 452, 467, 52 S.Ct. 420, 424, 82 A.L.R. 775."*
[Wright v. U.S., 302 U.S. 583 (1938)]

How's that for an amazing admission? For support, the court cites another case (Evans v. Gore), and here are some quotes from that case (emphasis added):

"[T]o enable Congress to reach all TAXABLE income more conveniently and effectively than would be possible as to much of it if an apportionment among the states were essential, the Sixteenth Amendment was proposed and ratified. In other words, the purpose of the amendment was to eliminate all occasion for such an

1 apportionment because of the source from which the income came, -A CHANGE IN NO WISE AFFECTING
 2 THE POWER TO TAX but only the mode of EXERCISING it.
 3 [Evans v. Gore, 253 U.S. 245 (1920)]

4 The court mentions that the governor of New York "expressed some apprehension lest [the 16th Amendment]
 5 might be construed as EXTENDING THE TAXING POWER TO INCOME NOT TAXABLE BEFORE," but that
 6 those who proposed the amendment described its purpose proving that was not the case. Back to Evans v. Gore, 7 the court went on...

8 "Thus the genesis and words of the amendment unite in showing that it DOES NOT EXTEND THE TAXING
 9 POWER TO NEW OR EXCEPTED SUBJECTS, but merely removes all occasion otherwise existing for an
 10 apportionment among the states of taxes laid on income, whether derived from one source or another."
 11 [Evans v. Gore, 253 U.S. 245 (1920)]

12 We're not sure why they beat this point to death like they did, but we're glad they did.

13 "It is not, in view of recent decisions, contended that [the 16th Amendment] rendered anything taxable as 14 income that was NOT so taxable before."
 15 [Evans v. Gore, 253 U.S. 245 (1920)]

16 This frivolous position by the IRS is therefore the result of backwards logic. Tax professionals start with the 17 incorrect assumption that most people receive taxable income. Therefore, when they discover that (for example)
 18 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8 does not show most income to be taxable income, they incorrectly conclude (based on a false 19 premise) that that section should not be used by most people, even though the regulations clearly state otherwise.
 20 This is usually stated as "that section doesn't apply to you." The following analogy demonstrates the logical flaw
 21 with this half-truth.

22 As shown above (see "English vs. Legalese", section 5.7.6.3), one section of the statutes of Subtitle E states that
 23 the Secretary shall maintain a central registry of "all firearms." But a separate section defines the term "firearm,"
 24 and the legal meaning is far more restrictive than the meaning of the word in common English. For example, a
 25 basic hunting rifle is obviously a "firearm" in common English, but is not considered a "firearm" for purposes of 26 Section 5841. An individual who owns one hunting rifle could, therefore, correctly state that Section 5841 does 27 not impose any obligation on him.

28 Now imagine someone arguing to him the following: "The definition of 'firearms' doesn't apply to your firearm,
 29 so you should just ignore the definition in Section 5845. Just look at Section 5841, where it says 'all firearms.'
 30 That includes your rifle." Such an argument would be ludicrous, and yet this is precisely the logic (or lack of 31 logic) used by the tax professionals regarding 26 U.S.C. §861.

32 Section 61 defines "gross income" generally as "all income from whatever source derived," and Part I of 33 Subchapter N (Section 861 and following) and related regulations "determine the sources of income for purposes
 34 of the income tax." Many tax professionals will argue that Section 861 "doesn't apply" to most people, and 35 therefore most readers should ignore the sections which "determine the sources of income for purposes of the 36 income tax." This is entirely illogical, but it is the only way for the tax professionals to avoid coming face-to-face
 37 with their monumental error. Contrary to the evidence, they continue to claim that most citizens receive taxable
 38 income.

39 The main citation used in an attempt to justify this misinterpretation is found in the regulations related to Section 1
 40 of the statutes (which imposes the income tax).

42 (a) General rule. (1) Section 1 of the Code imposes an income tax on the income of every individual who is a
 43 citizen or resident of the United States and, to the extent provided by section 871(b) or 877(b), on the income of 44 a nonresident alien individual... The tax imposed is upon taxable income (determined by subtracting the 45 allowable deductions from gross income).

46 (b) Citizens or residents of the United States liable to tax. In general, all citizens of the United States,
 47 wherever resident, and all resident alien individuals are liable to the income taxes imposed by the Code
 48 whether the income is received from sources within or without the United States."

49 [26 C.F.R. §1.1-1]

This section is a masterpiece of deception. While being literally correct (as the law must be), it is likely to give the wrong impression. Stating that a tax is imposed “on the income of every individual who is a citizen or resident” of the U.S. gives the impression that all income of these individuals is taxable. But anyone even slightly familiar with Internal Revenue Code knows this is not the case. The section goes on to specify that the tax is not on all income, but on “taxable income” (which is “gross income” minus deductions). As shown above, 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8 is the section for determining “taxable income” from within the United States** (the federal zone). The language could just as easily (and just as correctly) stated that “everyone on earth, no matter where he is and no matter where his income comes from, is taxable upon his taxable income.” The meaning of the statement is, of course, totally dependent upon the meaning of “taxable income.”

Subsection “(b)” also gives a false impression at first glance, while being literally correct. It doesn't matter where someone lives, provided that he receives income from “sources” within or without the United States** (the federal zone). And Part I of Subchapter N and related regulations “determine the sources of income for purposes of the income tax.”

It is a word game, where what may be inferred differs from what is actually stated. If someone does not have “taxable income,” and if someone does not receive “income from sources” (as defined by law), then 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1 becomes irrelevant. Nothing in the section has any effect on the legal meaning of “taxable income” or “sources of income.” Instead, the section uses these terms in a context which makes them sound less restricted.

The predecessors of the current regulations were worded slightly differently.

*“19.11-1 Income tax on individuals
Chapter 1 of the Internal Revenue Code [*]... imposes an income tax on individuals, including a normal tax (section 11), a surtax (section 12), and a defense tax [*]... The tax is upon net income which is determined by subtracting the allowable deductions from the gross income. (See generally 21 to 24, inclusive.)”*

[* - Words omitted related only to which years the law was applicable.]

*“19.11-2 Citizens or residents of the United States liable to tax
In general, citizens of the United States, wherever resident, are liable to the tax, and it makes no difference that they may own no assets within the United States and may receive no income from sources within the United States. Every resident alien individual is liable to the tax, even though his income is wholly from sources outside the United States.”*

The wording of these regulations (from 1945), while deceptive, does not give quite as persuasive a deception as the current regulations. The only solid conclusion which can be inferred from these older regulations is that income from outside of the United States** (the federal zone) can be taxable to United States citizens and residents.

5.7.6.11.5 “The courts have consistently ruled against the 861 issue”

YOUR PROPER RESPONSE: “Oh really? We haven't found a single case since 1930 in any of the federal district or appellate courts or since 1900 in the U.S. Supreme Court that mentions the 861/source issue. Can you please quote me the specific case numbers and names so I can research it for myself to validate your specific assertions?” Furthermore, your own Internal Revenue Manual says in section 4.10.7.2.9.8 that you can't quote cases below the Supreme Court to apply to more than the person who was the subject of the suit, so please give me a Supreme Court cite that proves your contention.

LIKELY IRS RESPONSE TO YOUR RESPONSE: “I don't have time to deal with this and I'm not here to give legal advice. You need to get a lawyer who understands the laws because you certainly don't. You're walking on thin ice and headed for trouble, buddy.”

1 YOUR PROPER RESPONSE: “IRS Publication 1 says about the rights of ‘taxpayers’:

2 “I. IRS employees will explain and protect your rights as a taxpayer throughout your contact with us.”

3 [QUESTION: What about my right to not be taxed directly per the constitution 1:9:4? What about my Fifth Amendment
4 right not to be compelled to testify against myself? What about my First Amendment right to NOT be compelled or
5 penalized NOT communicating with my government on a tax return? What about my right to understand the law and what
6 is specifically prohibited as required by the Sixth Amendment?]

7 “IRS Mission Statement: ‘Provide Americas taxpayers top quality service by helping them understand and meet their 8 tax responsibilities and by applying the tax law with integrity and fairness to all.’”

9 [QUESTION: What about ‘citizens’ who technically aren’t ‘taxpayers’ but are being deceived into thinking they are and
10 want to know the law that makes them liable? Do they get equal treatment under the law and a proper explanation of their
11 non-liability to pay income taxes and the legal foundation for it? How can I properly apply the tax laws if IRS employees
12 won’t interpret it for me or help or show me where I can read and interpret it myself? Why aren’t employees at the IRS
13 held liable for the advice they give, especially if following it causes me to end up paying a fine? Why have them helping 14 me at all on your 800 number if they can’t be held legally responsible for the advice they give me and refuse to describe
15 my legal obligations without referring to the IRS Publications, which we have said repeatedly are a fraud and do not have
16 the force of law?]

17 “You are responsible for paying only the correct amount of tax due under the law—no more, no less.”

18 [QUESTION: How can a Citizen know the correct amount of tax due if IRS support people won’t refer to the tax law and 19 insist on using IRS Publications, which are clearly in error and which the courts have consistently ruled do not have the 20 force of law?]

21 Did you notice that the IRS consistently called ALL PEOPLE “taxpayers” above? Does that mean that if you don’t pay tax,
22 you have NO rights and that you are fair game for the predators and extortionists at the IRS? We have found personally
23 that you can easily answer this question for yourself by calling their 800 number for help. Call them and assert that you
24 have no income tax liability, correct them when they refer to you as a “taxpayer” and insist instead that they refer to you as
25 an American and that it is their responsibility under the law to demonstrate your liability and meet the burden of proof
26 imposed upon them under the Administrative Procedures Act, 5 U.S.C. §556(d) before you will refer to yourself otherwise.
27 You will find out, as we did, that they will put you on hold forever, get rude and belligerent, refuse to talk to you, and won’t
28 show you the law that makes you liable because there is none, and will then refuse to talk about anything but the fraudulent
29 IRS Publications! This ought to be a big red flag that it’s all a big fraud! Why do they do this? Because if they listen to 30 you and learn the truth, someone might drag them into court and prosecute them for conspiracy to violate rights and
31 misapplication of the law and breach of fiduciary duty. This is also the reason why they won’t give you their full name or 32 direct phone number or email or mail address—they don’t want to be held legally liable in any way because they know they 33 don’t have a legal leg to stand on.

34 This last response by the IRS is a scare/intimidation tactic to keep you afraid and ignorant but avoid the law or liability for
35 communicating the law to you correctly and completely in order to protect themselves from culpability for improperly
36 implementing it (this is called “plausible deniability”, and they use it as a self-defense mechanism). Instead, the IRS wants
37 to force another expensive attorney to wear you out financially and abuse you in hopes that you will exhaust and wear out
38 quickly and no longer be a bother to them. This same attorney they want you to get will let you die on the vine in front of
39 the judge because he is an “officer of the court” who can only practice law in court with the permission and approval of a
40 federal judge who receives bribes every month in his paycheck that are derived from tax dollars extorted illegally from you.

41 5.7.6.11.6 “You are misunderstanding and misapplying the law and you’re asking for trouble”

42 IRS OBJECTION: “You are misunderstanding and misapplying the law and you’re asking for trouble.”

43 YOUR PROPER RESPONSE: “Then why aren’t you helping me interpret the law correctly? Why is it that you can make 44 me afraid of misapplying the law but won’t tell me how to correctly apply it to either define or meet my alleged 45 tax liabilities as your mission statement obligates you to do? Could it be that you want to use my own fear and 46 ignorance to make me compliant and paying the largest amount of tax and penalties instead of empowering me
47 with the knowledge of the law needed to pay the minimum tax and penalties? Prove to me that I am wrong and 48 prove to me that I am liable to pay tax, because I am convinced I’m not liable and would like to give you the 49 benefit of the doubt!”

5.7.6.11.7 “Commissioner v. Glenshaw Glass Co. case makes the source of income irrelevant and taxes all ‘sources’”

IRS OBJECTION: “The U.S. Supreme Court has already dealt with the frivolous 861 ‘source’ issue in the case of Commissioner v. Glenshaw Glass Co., 348 U.S. 426, 429 (1955). That ruling makes the source of income irrelevant. See IRS Notice 2001-40. The IRS stated the following in their Notice 2001-40, available from <http://ftp.fedworld.gov/pub/irs-drop/n-01-40.pdf>. The Notice 2001-40 was issued on 07-Jun-01 00:30 and the hyperlink to this IRS Notice [ n-01-40.pdf ] can be found at: <http://ftp.fedworld.gov/pub/irs-drop/>

The proponents of this position misread the Code and the Treasury Regulations. Although the proponents acknowledge that section 1 imposes income tax on “taxable income,” that taxable income “consists of “gross income” minus deductions (section 63) and that “gross income” is income “from whatever source derived” (section 61), they assert that sections 861 through 865 of the Code and the regulations thereunder (in particular, Treasury regulation section 1.861-8) limit taxable “sources” of income to certain foreign-based activities.

*That assertion is refuted by the express and unambiguous terms of the Code. Section 61 includes in gross income “all income from whatever source derived.” As the Supreme Court stated in Commissioner v. Glenshaw Glass Co., 348 U.S. 426, 429 (1955), “Congress applied no limitations as to the source of taxable receipts . . . @. Nothing in sections 861 to 865 of the Code limits the gross income subject to United States taxation to foreign-source income. The rules of sections 861 through 865 have significance in determining whether income is considered from sources within the United States or without the United States, which is relevant, for example, in determining whether a U.S. citizen or resident may claim a credit for foreign taxes paid. See Great-West Life Assurance Co. v. United States, 678 F.2d 180, 183 (Ct. Cl. 1982) (stating that “[t]he determination of where income is derived or ‘sourced’ is generally of no moment to either United States citizens or United States corporations, for such persons are subject to tax under I.R.C. § 1 and I.R.C. § 11, respectively, on their worldwide income” and that “[l]ikewise, the income of a resident alien individual is taxed under I.R.C. § 1 without regard to source”). The source rules do not operate to exclude from U.S. taxation income earned by United States persons from sources within the United States. Williams v. Commissioner, 114 T.C. 136 (2000) (rejecting the claim that income was not subject to tax because it was not from any of the sources listed in Treas. Reg. sec. 1.861-8(a)); Aiello v. Commissioner, T.C. Memo. 1995-40 (1995) 2(rejecting the claim that section 861 lists the only sources of income relevant for purposes of section 61).*

YOUR PROPER RESPONSE:

First of all, did you notice that the IRS committed a deliberate typo in their quote from Commissioner v. Glenshaw Glass Co., whereby you put an @ sign where there should have been a close quote. The IRS, in that Notice, was trying to deceive the reader that their own assertions were actually quoted from the Supreme Court. You want me to believe that the following statement came from the Supreme Court, when in fact it does not because we looked up the case:

Nothing in sections 861 to 865 of the Code limits the gross income subject to United States taxation to foreign-source income. The rules of sections 861 through 865 have significance in determining whether income is considered from sources within the United States or without the United States, which is relevant, for example, in determining whether a U.S. citizen or resident may claim a credit for foreign taxes paid.

More IRS deception. The close quote should appear where the @ sign was based on reading the case. Secondly, the Glenshaw case was about the following issue quoted directly from that case:

The common question is whether money received as exemplary damages for fraud or as the punitive two-thirds portion of a treble-damage antitrust recovery must be reported by a taxpayer as gross income under 22 (a) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1939.

The party to that case was not arguing the 861 position, and as a matter of fact, the case dealt with an older version of the code with different section numbers.

Next, we note that the most authoritative cite they have at the end of the article is from T.C. Memos, which may NOT be cited to apply generally to all Americans as per their own Internal Revenue Manual (I.R.M.), Section 4.10.7.2.9.8:

“Decisions made at various levels of the court system are considered to be interpretations of tax laws and may be used by either examiners or taxpayers to support a position.

Certain court cases lend more weight to a position than others. A case decided by the U.S. Supreme Court becomes the law of the land and takes precedence over decisions of lower courts. The Internal Revenue Service must follow Supreme Court decisions. For examiners, Supreme Court decisions have the same weight as the Code.

Decisions made by lower courts, such as Tax Court, District Courts, or Claims Court, are binding on the Service only for the particular taxpayer and the years litigated. Adverse decisions of lower courts do not require the Service to alter its position for other taxpayers."
[Internal Revenue Manual (I.R.M.), Section 4.10.7.2.9.8 (05/14/99)]

More IRS deception. So clearly, the only thing we can rely on in everything they cited above is the Supreme Court Glenshaw case. In that case, the court did not mention whether the party involved was a STATUTORY citizen or a STATUTORY "nonresident alien". As we repeatedly suggest throughout this book, it's important to correct government records describing your citizenship status because they create false presumptions that misrepresent your true status as a "non-resident non-person" and a "national under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) but not "citizen" under 8 U.S.C. §401 to escape the reach of the tax "imposed" in 26 U.S.C. §1. Based on the way they treated this party, we have to assume that he was a "U.S.** citizen" who therefore had no Constitutional rights.

Moving on, the Glenshaw court stated:

The sweeping scope of the controverted statute is readily apparent:

"SEC. 22. GROSS INCOME.

"(a) GENERAL DEFINITION. - 'Gross income' includes gains, profits, and income derived from salaries, wages, or compensation for personal service . . . of whatever kind and in whatever form paid, or from professions, vocations, trades, businesses, commerce, or sales, or dealings in property, whether real or personal, growing out of the ownership or use of or interest in such property; also from interest, rent, dividends, securities, or the transaction of any business carried on for gain or profit, or gains or profits and income

This Court has frequently stated that this language was used by Congress to exert in this field "the full measure of its taxing power." Helvering v. Clifford, 309 U.S. 331, 334; Helvering v. Midland Mutual Life Ins. Co., 300 U.S. 216, 223; Douglas v. Willcuts, 296 U.S. 1, 9; Irwin v. Gavit, 268 U.S. 161, 166. Respondents contend that punitive damages, characterized as "windfalls" flowing from the culpable conduct of third parties, are not within the scope of the section. But Congress applied no limitations as to the source of taxable receipts, nor restrictive [348 U.S. 426, 430] labels as to their nature. And the Court has given a liberal construction to this broad phraseology in recognition of the intention of Congress to tax all gains except those specifically exempted. Commissioner v. Jacobson, 336 U.S. 28, 49; Helvering v. Stockholms Enskilda Bank, 293 U.S. 84, 87-91. Thus, the fortuitous gain accruing to a lessor by reason of the forfeiture of a lessee's improvements on the rented property was taxed in Helvering v. Bruun, 309 U.S. 461. Cf. Robertson v. United States, 343 U.S. 711; Rutkin v. United States, 343 U.S. 130; United States v. Kirby Lumber Co., 284 U.S. 1. Such decisions demonstrate that we cannot but ascribe content to the catchall provision of 22 (a), "gains or profits and income derived from any source whatever." The importance of that phrase has been too frequently recognized since its first appearance in the Revenue Act of 1913 <sup>5</sup> to say now that it adds nothing to the meaning of "gross income."

The key to deciphering what was said here lies in the definition of "source" and in what context it is used. The question is:

1. The "source" (or taxable activities within specific identified jurisdictions, which is also called the situs for taxation) of income for the government as per 26 U.S.C. §§861 and 862, or...
2. The "source" of income for the subject of the tax, who is the "tax payer"?

BIG DIFFERENCE!

If the Glenshaw case above refers to the tax payer, which we believe it does, then what the court really meant is that if you admit to being a "taxpayer" (meaning a person who mistakenly admits liability for tax) and if you have income, from wherever you get it ("whatever tax payer source derived"), then you have to pay income tax on it, and we would agree with that conclusion! However, that is not the assertion we are making with the 861 argument or the context we are talking about in the context of the word "source"! We are not referring to "sources" of income for the tax payer, but the proper situs of taxation (the lawful and constitutional sources of income) for the excise tax called the income tax assessed by the government, which is completely different, and which the court did not address in the Glenshaw case cited. 26 U.S.C. Sections 861 and 862 do NOT talk about "sources" of income for the tax payer, but "sources" of income (taxation situs) for the government. More IRS and government lies and deception.

Concluding that the Supreme Court in the Glenshaw case was referring to the situs for taxation or sources of income for the government leads to some rather absurd and irrational conclusions. For instance it leads us to conclude that:

1. There is no reason for sections 861 (sources within the United States) and 862 (Sources without the United States) to even exist in the tax code, because the "source" (or situs) of government income doesn't matter and all sources of "income" are liable to taxation. Let's get rid of these two sections then, OK? Why do they appear in the code and under what circumstances are they used, then?
2. That all "sources" of government income from anywhere in the world are taxable, including sources in China (try explaining that to the Chinese!). This would expand the situs for taxation by the U.S. government to everyone in every country anywhere in the world, which is clearly an irrational conclusion.

Therefore, the only rational way to interpret the code is to leave sections 861 and 862 intact and to treat them as applying to all government sources of income (situs for taxation), and to ensure that the table found in section 5.7.6.5 entitled "Determining Taxable Income from U.S.** Sources" is applied to every type of income received to determine whether or not the person in receipt of it is liable for tax. That is exactly what 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8 does: it tells Americans how to apply the source rules for government income to every item of gross income he is in receipt of in order to determine whether or not it is taxable and consequently, whether he is a "taxpayer".

5.7.6.11.8 Frivolous Return Penalty Assessed by IRS for those Using the 861 Position<sup>206</sup>

The IRS occasionally blatantly lies to you about your rights, in an attempt to avoid "due process." You ought to be told the truth. The IRS does not want to directly address the 861/"source" issue. They occasionally will try to avoid the issue by threatening to impose a $500 "frivolous return" penalty, supposedly under the authority of 26 U.S.C. §6702, on some who use the 861/"source" issue to file claims for refund. The IRS' letter states that the courts, including the Supreme Court, have ruled such a position to be "frivolous." This is an outright lie. (They are using a form letter which has nothing to do with the 861/"issue.") Feel free to ask them for a citation of such a ruling, but don't hold your breath waiting to actually get one.

The letter also states that the penalty must be paid in full, before the matter can be appealed. Again, this is an outright lie. According to the Treasury regulations, appeals consideration applies to questions regarding "[i]ability for additions to the tax, additional amounts, and assessable penalties provided under Chapter 68 of the Code [which includes 26 U.S.C. §6702]" (26 C.F.R. §601.106(a)(1)(ii)(c)). And the Internal Revenue Manual agrees, and shows that Appeals consideration can occur before any payment is made.

Internal Revenue Manual
Section 8.11.1.10.1 (02-26-1999)
Processing IRC 6703 Claims for Refund on IRC 6700, 6701, and 6702 Penalties

1. Per IRC 6703, the following procedural rules apply to the penalties under IRC 6700, 6701 and 6702: A. The burden of proof is on the Government...
4. IRC 6702 provides a $500 penalty for filing a frivolous return. This penalty is not subject to a reasonable cause/basis provision. However, penalties under IRC 6702 for returns filed after December 31, 1989, may be appealed under the post-assessment penalty appeal program."

Internal Revenue Manual
Section 8.11.1.7 (02-26-1999)
Postassessment Penalty Appeal Procedure

1. Except for the penalties listed below [none applicable to 26 U.S.C. §6702], the Post Assessment Penalty Appeal procedure applies to all assessed additions to the tax, additional amounts and penalties (commonly referred to as penalties) imposed by Chapter 68 of the Code [which includes 26 U.S.C. §6702]...
3. Assessed penalties may be appealed before or after payment."

As you can also see in the citations above, in a meeting regarding a penalty under 26 U.S.C. §6702, they have the burden of proof (see also 26 U.S.C. §6703). (Since there are no regulations promulgated under 26 U.S.C. §6702, you might also want to ask to see a delegation order allowing them to impose the penalty at all.) It would be interesting (just as one example) to watch them try to prove that it is "frivolous" to use 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8 for determining taxable income from sources within the United States, when the Treasury regulations specifically and repeatedly state that you should use 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8 "for determining taxable income from sources within the United States" (26 C.F.R. §1.863-1(c)).

Probably the main goal of the IRS is to come up with an excuse to avoid due process altogether, including in-person meetings (which you have the right to record under 26 U.S.C. §7521). They don't want an administrative record showing that they have no substantive rebuttal. However, their manual shows that the return is to be processed regardless of the penalty, so they should not be allowed to get away with ignoring the return, whether they impose the penalty or not. (And this would defeat the whole purpose of their letter, which is to "stonewall" any discussion of the issue.)

Internal Revenue Manual
120.1.10.9 (08-12-1998)
IRC section 6702

1. IRC section 6702 provides for an immediate assessment of a $500 civil penalty against individuals who file frivolous income tax returns or frivolous amended income tax returns... A frivolous return... Does constitute a valid return when the Service is able to process the return."

For any return, if the Service challenges it, you have a right to an Examination meeting, a meeting with the examiner's supervisor, and if you can't reach an agreement, Appeals consideration (see 26 C.F.R. §§601.105, 601.106).

The IRS has a lot to lose if they address the issue, and not much to lose by making these stupid threats, false accusations, evasions, etc. They are relying on these tactics to scare or intimidate people. Anyone approaching the IRS, expecting them to act like reasonable, honest people, is in for a rude awakening. If they have nothing to lose, they will most likely ignore the law, ignore your rights, and ignore their own published procedures. Basically, the message from the IRS is this:

"It is frivolous for you to believe that the federal regulations mean what they say. If you ask us to explain what they mean, or ask us to answer any questions, we will accuse you of breaking the law, threaten to punish you, and then we will refuse to discuss the matter ever again. That is how we 'serve' you."

If this isn't exactly what you would call "due process of law," you might want to tell that to your "representative" or the "Taxpayer Advocate" (although you may find that neither of those terms is accurate).

5.7.6.11.9 The income tax is a direct, unapportioned tax on income, not an excise tax, so you still are liable for it

IRS OBJECTION: "The income tax is a direct, unapportioned tax on income, not an excise tax. See United States v. Collins, 920 F.2d. 619, (10th Cir. 11/27/1990)."

YOUR PROPER RESPONSE: "First of all, this conclusion is in direct conflict with all the rulings of the U.S. Supreme Court related to income taxes. The Supreme Court has consistently ruled that the income tax is an indirect excise tax. See Pollock v. Farmers' Loan & Trust Co., 157 U.S. 429, 158 U.S. 601 (1895); Stanton v. Baltic Mining Co., 240 U.S. 103 (1916); Eisner v. Macomber, 252 U.S. 189 (1920), etc. Secondly, let's just fallaciously assume for the sake of argument that the income tax is a direct, unapportioned tax on income. Under such circumstances, it would have to be an ad valorem tax on intangible assets (income or profit received). If it is an ad valorem tax on

1 intangibles, then the income taxed must be beneficially received within the territorial jurisdiction of the 'United
 2 States'. The case of Wheeling Steel Corp. v. Fox, 298 U.S. 193 (1936) clearly establishes this requirement:

3 "We have held that it is essential to the validity of such a tax, under the due process clause, that the property
 4 shall be within the territorial jurisdiction of the taxing state.... When we deal with intangible property, such
 5 as credits and choses in action generally, we encounter the difficulty that by reason of the absence of physical
 6 characteristics they have no situs in the physical sense, but have the situs attributable to them in legal
 7 conception. Accordingly we have held that a state may properly apply the rule mobilia sequuntur personam
 8 and treat them as localized at the owner's domicile for purposes of taxation. Farmers' Loan & Trust Co. v.
 9 Minnesota, 280 U.S. 204, 211, 50 S.Ct. 98, 65 A. L.R. 1000. And having thus determined 'that in general
 10 intangibles may be properly taxed at the domicile of their owner,' we have found 'no sufficient reason for saying
 11 that they are not entitled to enjoy an immunity against taxation at more than one place similar to that accorded 12 to tangibles.' Id., 280 U.S. 204, at page 212, 50 S.Ct. 98, 100, 65 A.L.R. 1000. The principle thus announced in 13 Farmers' Loan & Trust Co. v. Minnesota has had progressive application. Baldwin v. Missouri, 281 U.S. 586, 14 50 S.Ct. 436, 72 A.L.R. 1303; Beidler v. South Carolina Tax Commission, 282 U.S. 1, 51 S.Ct. 54; First
 15 National Bank v. Maine, 284 U.S. 312, 328, 329 S., 52 S.Ct. 174, 177, 77 A.L.R. 1401. But despite the wide
 16 application of the principle, an important exception has been recognized."

17 The territorial jurisdiction of the United States is limited to areas over which the sovereignty (exclusive territorial 18 jurisdiction under Article 1, Section 8, Clause 17 of the U.S. Constitution) of the government of the United States
 19 extends, to include the District of Columbia, federal enclaves within the states, and the territorial waters as per 26
 20 C.F.R. §301.7701:

21 26 C.F.R. Sec. 301.7701(b)-1 Resident alien

22 (ii) UNITED STATES.

23 For purposes of section 7701(b) and the regulations thereunder, the term "United States" when used in a
 24 geographical sense includes the states and the District of Columbia. It also includes the territorial waters of the 25 United States and the seabed and subsoil of those submarine areas which are adjacent to the territorial waters
 26 of the United States and over which the United States has exclusive rights, in accordance with international
 27 law, with respect to the exploration and exploitation of natural resources. It does not include the possessions
 28 and territories of the United States or the air space over the United States.

29 IRS Publication 54 for year 2000, entitled Tax Guide for U.S. Citizens and Aliens Abroad (which you can 30 download from our website), further helps to clarify the meaning of the territorial jurisdiction of the United States:

31 "A foreign country usually is any territory (including the air space and territorial waters) under the 32 sovereignty of a government other than that of the United States.... The term 'foreign country' does not 33 include Puerto Rico, Guam, the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands, the Virgin Islands, or U.S.
 34 possessions such as American Samoa."

35 [Emphasis added]

36 Consequently, Americans residing on nonfederal land (outside the federal zone) within the borders of the 37 sovereign states are domiciled in a "foreign country" and outside of the territorial jurisdiction of the United States
 38 because they are located on land outside the sovereignty of the United States government. Therefore, they cannot 39 be the proper subject of a federal ad valorem direct property tax.

40 5.7.6.11.10 "Source" issues only apply to expenses, and not income

41 This issue came from page 5 of the very revealing deposition of Larken Rose by the IRS which is posted at:

42 <http://www.taxableincome.net/extortion/thugs/transcript.html>

43 This deposition devolved into a debate and Larken really carved them up, and by doing so averted being indicted for 26
 44 U.S.C. §6700 Abusive Tax Shelter criminal charges which were simultaneously levied against three other individuals,
 45 including Thurston Bell of Hanover PA, Dave Bossett of FL, and Harold E. Hearn of Atlanta. You can read an article that 46 talks about the indictments at:

IRS OBJECTION: “The vast majority of the regulations under 861 deal strictly with allocating expenses, deductions and credits, but NOT income. The code sections referenced in 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(f) are not specifically sources of income, but instead are deductions and allocations.”

YOUR PROPER RESPONSE: “The regulations under 26 U.S.C. §861 and 26 U.S.C. §862 specifically contradict that assertion by saying you must use 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(f) to determine taxable income both from sources within the federal United States and from sources without the federal United States. They don't say you only use this regulation to allocate deductions or expenses. The regulations also don't say you only use those sections if you're involved in one of these activities. They say you use those sections, 'for determining taxable income from sources within the United States'. And they say it over and over and over again. You're fishing around in other sections so you can retroactively back into saying 'well you just use it for this and don't look at it otherwise.' Section 861 does deal with allocating expenses, but it is also used for allocating income to specific taxable sources and activities, and the regulations clearly say that. Both expenses and income must be allocated to the same source, either within or without, in order to derive taxable income for that source, and 26 U.S.C. §863 does most of that allocation. Total taxable income equals the taxable income from sources within the federal United States plus taxable income from sources without the federal United States. If you are going to assert that the only thing that 26 U.S.C. §861 does is allocate expenses, then why don't you show me a regulation or statute that says 861 and 862 are only used for allocating expenses, instead of both expenses and income. You won't be able to find one because there isn't one! You're trying to confuse the legal issues because your paycheck relies on people not understanding the law.”

5.8 Considerations Involving Government Employment Income

Do you receive a check from City, County, State or Federal Government? Then on that amount the recommendations in this document do apply in most cases but require further explanation. In Article 1, Section 8, Clause 13, of the Constitution of the United States, Congress was delegated the authority “to make Rules for the Government.” The truth is that the Internal Revenue Code as well as other U.S. Government Codes are merely special Codes created to regulate the U.S. Government's own employees. IBM has a “Dress Code” that their employees must either adhere to or not work for IBM. In the same manner, the Government has a Code that demands that “public officers”, contractors, and instrumentalities either pay what is referred to as an official privilege tax (known as “The Income Tax”) or not work for, or contract with, the U.S. Government. Citizens engaged in occupations of common right in the American states of the Union are not required by law to file a 1040 Form or to pay income tax! You have also already learned throughout the preceding sections in this chapter and by examining 44 U.S.C. §1505(a)(1) that when the government is managing its own employees, it doesn't have to write regulations or publish them in the Federal Register like it does for laws that apply to private citizens. That is why most of the enforcement provisions of the Internal Revenue Code that accomplish liens, levies, assessments, etc do not have implementing regulations.

Following are some definitions of “employee” and “employer” defined at 26 U.S.C. §3401(c) and “employer” at § 3401(d), as follows:

26 U.S.C. §3401(c)

Employee. For purposes of this chapter, the term “employee” includes an officer, employee, or elected official of the United States, a State, or any political subdivision thereof, or the District of Columbia, or any agency or instrumentality of any one or more of the foregoing. The term “employee” also includes an officer of a corporation.

26 C.F.R. §31.3401(c)-1. Employee

a) the term ‘employee’, includes officers and employees, whether elected or appointed of the United States, a State, Territory, Puerto Rico, or any political subdivision thereof, ...

c) Generally, physicians, lawyers, dentists, veterinarians, contractors, public stenographers, auctioneers, and others who follow an independent trade, business, or profession, in which they offer their services to the public, are not employees.

26 U.S.C. §3401(d) Employer.

For purposes of this chapter, the term "employer" means the person for whom an individual performs or performed any service, of whatever nature, as the employee of such person.

Now we throw in the government's definition of "wages" to tie things together. Below is an abbreviated version from 26 U.S.C. §3401\(a\) and section 5.6.7 earlier:

"For purposes of this chapter, the term 'wages' means all remuneration (other than fees paid to a public official) for services performed by an employee for his employer..."

This is circular logic designed to deliberately confuse. The term "employee" is defined in 26 C.F.R. §31.3401(c) to mean only elected or appointed officials of the U.S. government, but then the above statutes says that all "employees" other than these are the only ones who receives "wages". Technically then, NO ONE receives "wages" as legally defined! But if we look at the ONLY persons who can have their pay levied in 26 U.S.C. §6331\(a\) in order to pay off a tax debt, we find once again that it is ONLY public officers and federal instrumentalities, which implies that these are the only persons who are really the subject of Subtitle A income taxes!:

TITLE 26 > Subtitle F > CHAPTER 64 > Subchapter D > PART II > Sec. 6331.
Sec. 6331. - Levy and distraint

(a) Authority of Secretary

If any person liable to pay any tax neglects or refuses to pay the same within 10 days after notice and demand, it shall be lawful for the Secretary to collect such tax (and such further sum as shall be sufficient to cover the expenses of the levy) by levy upon all property and rights to property (except such property as is exempt under section 6334) belonging to such person or on which there is a lien provided in this chapter for the payment of such tax. Levy may be made upon the accrued salary or wages of any officer, employee, or elected official, of the United States, the District of Columbia, or any agency or instrumentality of the United States or the District of Columbia, by serving a notice of levy on the employer (as defined in section 3401(d)) of such officer, employee, or elected official. If the Secretary makes a finding that the collection of such tax is in jeopardy, notice and demand for immediate payment of such tax may be made by the Secretary and, upon failure or refusal to pay such tax, collection thereof by levy shall be lawful without regard to the 10-day period provided in this section.

But why would these people's pay be subject to levy if there is no statute making anyone liable for Subtitle A income taxes? The question confounds us.

Some people might say that the definition of federal "employee" is rather restrictive, as demonstrated in 5 U.S.C. §2105. Take the cite below, for instance, from 26 U.S.C. Chapter 24: "Collection of Income Taxes at the Source" (Federal employment tax withholding):

Title 5

2105. DEFINITIONS

(a) For the purpose of this title, "employee", except as otherwise provided by this section or when specifically modified, means an officer and an individual who is -

- (1) appointed in the civil service by one of the following acting in an official capacity -
  - (A) the President;
  - (B) a Member or Members of Congress, or the Congress;
  - (C) a member of a uniformed service;
  - (D) an individual who is an employee under this section;
  - (E) the head of a Government controlled corporation; or
  - (F) an adjutant general designated by the Secretary concerned under section 709(c) of title 32;
- (2) engaged in the performance of a Federal function under authority of law or an Executive act; and
- (3) subject to the supervision of an individual named by paragraph (1) of this subsection while engaged in the performance of the duties of his position.

[...skipped a few entries since irrelevant...]

(d) A Reserve of the armed forces who is not on active duty or who is on active duty for training is deemed not an employee or an individual holding an office of trust or profit or discharging an official function under or in

1 connection with the United States because of his appointment, oath, or status, or any duties or functions
2 performed or pay or allowances received in that capacity.

3 We have heard people claim that all federal employees meet the definitions above, because they were appointed to federal
4 civil service when they and another government official signed their SF-50 form. They will say that the other government
5 official who signs the SF-50 form was given the authority to sign their form because the power they had was delegated
6 to them through a chain of authority that ultimately derives from the president and/or the U.S. Congress. However, we don't
7 support this view because anyone else who is not elected or appointed by the President, Congress, etc. as above was hired
8 in effect to perform a trade or skill as an occupation of "common right" as we will see shortly. Employees performing an
9 occupation of "common right" do not depend chiefly on the privileges granted to them as an elected or appointed federal
10 employee in order to perform their job. Instead, they are exercising skills they could just as productively employ outside
11 the federal government, probably for greater pay.

12 The Public Salary Tax Act of 1939, was codified in 4 U.S.C. §111. Below is an excerpt from that law which clearly 13 authorizes taxation of federal employees:

14 (a) General Rule. - The United States consents to the taxation of pay or compensation for personal service as 15 an officer or employee of the United States, a territory or possession or political subdivision thereof, the 16 government of the District of Columbia, or an agency or instrumentality of one or more of the foregoing, by a 17 duly constituted taxing authority having jurisdiction, if the taxation does not discriminate against the officer
18 or employee because of the source of the pay or compensation.

19 What they are saying here is that the U.S. will honor whatever state or local taxes are imposed. It is very important in the 20 above cite to remember, however, that last phrase "if the taxation does not discriminate against the officer or employee
21 because of the SOURCE of pay or compensation." Why is this important? Because 26 U.S.C. §861 and the underlying 22 regulation found in 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8 defines the only authorized "sources" of income that may be taxed by the federal
23 government for the purposes of internal revenue, and we believe they are trying to say here that the taxable "sources" of 24 income are unchanged by virtue of being a federal "employee", and that such employees are to be treated no differently
25 than private sector employees for the purposes of the graduated federal income tax.

26 Each Federal department and agency is responsible for designating a withholding agent, and the General Accounting Office
27 has responsibility for making determinations as to whether or not someone is liable for additional obligations ... see 5
28 U.S.C. §5512, 26 U.S.C. §7401 & 31 U.S.C. §3702, and attending regulations.

29 The income tax for federal "employees" does not rely on the definition of "gross income" at I.R.C. § 61 for the purposes of 30 computing the amount of withholding, which is different than the payment or liability for income taxes. Instead, it defines
31 all remuneration received as wages for the purpose of income tax withholding, which is clearly different from the way
32 private employers and employees are treated. However, like private employees, (which incidentally are not "employees" 33 within 26 U.S.C.) the withholding still cannot occur without an IRS Form W-4 being completed and signed by the 34 employee giving the government permission to withhold. Why can they legally withhold on all wages, rather than relying
35 directly on the definition of "gross income" found in I.R.C. section 61? The IRS will tell you that the wages received are a
36 direct result of the "privileges" granted to federal "employees" who we allege are ONLY elected or appointed to office.
37 Note that this does NOT apply to employees who are not elected or appointed directly by the Congress or the President, but
38 instead are practicing a trade profession that is of "common right", which we will explain further later. You will also note
39 that "employees" as defined in 26 C.F.R. §31.3401(c) all work in the District of Columbia, which isn't subject to the same
40 tax and withholding rules as the rest of the 50 Union states. This face, incidentally, is why they had to define "employees"
41 the way they did . (Rather twisted, isn't all of this! That's the way lawyers like it because that's where they get their job
42 security from....COMPLEX LAWS!)

43 The distinction between the Chapter 1 income tax and wages, i.e., two different taxes, or tax sources, is recognized in 44 several court cases, with Commissioner v. Kowalski, 434 U.S. 77 (1977) among them:

45 The income tax is imposed on taxable income, 26 U.S.C. §1. Generally, this is gross income minus allowable
46 deductions. 26 U.S.C. §63(a). Section 61(a) defines as gross income "all income from whatever source derived"
47 including, under § 61(a)(1), "[c]ompensation for services." The withholding tax, in some contrast, is confined 48 to wages, § 3402(a), and § 3401(a) defines as "wages," all remuneration (other than fees paid to a public 49 official) for services performed by an employee for his employer, including the cash value of all remuneration
50 paid in any medium other than cash.

1 The two concepts -- income and wages -- obviously are not necessarily the same. All wages of federal "employees" are
 2 reported as income by the United States (the federal zone), but remember that the same source rules (e.g. 26 U.S.C. §861)
 3 still apply to federal employees as to private employees as found in the Internal Revenue Code. This means that federal
 4 employees can still ask for all the earnings back that they received because it did not derive from a taxable "source".

5 The Department of the Treasury has been helpful in unraveling the long standing income tax scam. Possibly the greatest
 6 treasure posted on the Department of the Treasury Internet network is the Treasury Financial Manual, produced by the
 7 Financial Management Service. Volume I, Part 3, Chapter 4000 prescribes the process by which Federal employee taxes are 8 to be collected by the agency, then transferred to IRS:

9 Section 4010 - SCOPE AND APPLICABILITY

10 This chapter prescribes procedures for (1) withholding and depositing Federal income, social security, and
 11 Medicare taxes on wages paid to civilian and military employees; (2) for filing tax returns with the Internal 12 Revenue Service (IRS); and (3) for filing income tax statements with the Social Security Administration (SSA).

13 For information beyond the scope of this chapter, refer to IRS Publication 15, Circular E, Employer's Tax
 14 Guide, or an IRS office. Circular E describes employer tax responsibilities; explains withholding, depositing,
 15 and reporting requirements; and paying taxes. It explains the forms your employees must use and those you
 16 must send to the IRS and SSA.

17 Withheld Federal taxes will be transferred to the IRS using the FEDTAX application of the Government-On-line
 18 Accounting Link System (GOALS). Any Federal agency that has not been established on FEDTAX should 19 contact GOALS Marketing, Financial Management Service (FMS), on FTS 874-8788 or 202-874-8788.

20 Withholding of qualified State, county and local taxes, in accordance with 31 C.F.R. § 215, is then prescribed in 21 Volume I, Part 3, Chapter 5000, here in part:

22 Section 5010 - SCOPE AND APPLICABILITY

23 This chapter provides instructions for withholding State, city, or county income taxes when an agreement has
 24 been reached between a State, city, or county and the Secretary of the Treasury. Agreements between the 25 Secretary of the Treasury and States, cities, or counties prescribe how Federal agencies withhold State, city, or 26 county income or employment taxes from the compensation of Federal employees and Armed Forces members.
 27 (See 31 C.F.R. 215 at Appendix 1).

28 All of the above leads to another interesting question, however. If the income tax was an indirect excise tax which can only
 29 occur on businesses as a tax on sales relating to foreign commerce, then one might well ask:

30 "Why do I get involved at all in paying an income tax or keeping track of liability or payment, if this is
 31 supposed to be a tax on my employer and not directly on me? Why do I have to list it in my income tax return at 32 all if it is a tax on my employer and not me? Why isn't the tax invisible to the point where it doesn't affect or
 33 reduce my compensation directly at all? Wouldn't it be a 'direct tax' within the meaning of the constitution if it
 34 negatively impacted my compensation as a private employer residing in a state of the Union? Likewise, if it is 35 an excise tax on my employer, then why do I the employee need to sign a W-4 to give my permission to withhold 36 or get directly involved at all in authorizing or deduction of the tax from my pay?"

37 The answer is that the sneaky Congress calls it an indirect excise tax (see Congressional Research Service Report 97-59A 38 on our website) but let's federal employees treat it like a direct tax, so the government doesn't need to increase your
 39 compensation to adjust for its impact as the direct tax that it really is. Recall that direct taxes are prohibited by the
 40 Constitution, as explained in detail in section 3.10.6 and in Article 1, Section 9, Clause 4 and Article 1, Section 2, Clause 3
 41 of the Constitution. Being a federal employee doesn't change this situation at all, unless the person being paid is an elected 42 or appointed (by the President) public officer, whose job depends primarily on the authority (and the privileges they 43 contract to obtain by becoming a political officer) they get from their elected office to do their job.

44 Understanding the nature as well as the "source" of the income tax is important. On p. 2580 of the 1943 edition of the 45 Congressional Record-House (March 27), we find the following (which is NOT a law, but is helpful for explanation):

46 "The income tax is, therefore, not a tax on income as such. It is an excise tax with respect to certain activities
 47 and privileges which is measured by reference to the income which they produce. The income is not the subject
 48 of the tax; it is the basis for determining the amount of tax."

1 The term "income tax" is a general classification heading for excise taxes, all of which fall into the indirect tax category.
 2 Even the Federal employee tax is not a tax on the wage, but the wage simply provides a "measure" for the tax. The income
 3 tax on government "employees" is a tax on "privileges" attending Federal employment. However, this leads us to
 4 question the meaning of "privilege," since we saw from section 3.18.4 in the case of Sims v. Ahrens, 271 S.W. 720
 5 (1925) that:

6 "An income tax is neither a property tax nor a tax on occupations of common right, but is an EXCISE tax...The
 7 legislature may declare as 'privileged' and tax as such for state revenue, those pursuits not matters of common
 8 right, but it has no power to declare as a 'privilege' and tax for revenue purposes, occupations that are of 9 common right."

10 What does "occupations that are of common right" mean? Our understanding is that it includes any profession you can 11 choose to do or undertake in private industry in any field or trade and which do not depend on the authority granted you as
 12 part of a political office. Occupations that are not of common right are things you can only do as an elected or appointed
 13 officer or politician working for a government agency by virtue of the rights and privileges and delegated authority granted
 14 to you as a consequence of your election or appointment to that political office. That is why the definition of "employee" in 15 5 U.S.C. §2105 quoted above is so very restrictive: because it has to define "occupations that are not of common right and 16 which depend on the privileges associated with government service alone".

17 Following is an example of the rambling verbiage of "terms" the Internal Revenue Code drafters created to try to hide the 18 fact that the earnings of private Citizens are not taxable under the law. They could have just as easily summed up the 19 following in one regulation that read, "Only elected or appointed government officials are liable for the graduated income
 20 tax imposed in Section 1 of Subtitle A of Title 26".

21 26 U.S.C. §871(b)(2)-GRADUATED RATE OF TAX

22 "... (2) DETERMINATION OF TAXABLE INCOME.—In determining taxable income...gross income includes
 23 ONLY gross income which is effectively connected with the conduct of a 'trade or business,' within the United

25
 26 26 U.S.C. §864(b) DEFINITIONS AND SPECIAL RULES.— (b) Trade or business within the United States

27 For purposes of this part, part II, and chapter 3, the term "trade or business within the United States" includes
 28 the performance of personal services within the United States at any time within the taxable year, but does not*
 29 include –

30
 31 26 C.F.R. Sec. 1.469-9 Rules for certain rental real estate activities.

32 (b)(4) PERSONAL SERVICES.

33 Personal services means any work performed by an individual in connection with a trade or business.
 34 However, personal services do not include any work performed by an individual in the individual's capacity as 35 an investor as described in section 1.469-5T(f)(2)(ii).

 37 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26) TRADE OR BUSINESS.—“Includes [only] the performance of functions of a public 38 office.”

39 Following is the definition of Public Office, pursuant to Black's Law Dictionary, Abridged Sixth Edition, means:

40 "Essential characteristics of a 'public office' are: (1) authority conferred by law, (2) fixed tenure of office, and
 41 (3) power to exercise some of the sovereign functions of government; key element of such test is that 'officer is
 42 carrying out sovereign function'. Essential elements to establish public position as 'public office' are: Position
 43 must be created by Constitution, legislature, or through authority conferred by legislation, portion of sovereign
 44 power of government must be delegated to position, duties and powers must be defined, directly or implied, by 45 legislature or through legislative authority, duties must be performed independently without control of superior
 46 power other than law, and position must have some permanency."

1 Therefore, to be involved in a "trade or business", as defined for the purposes of the Internal Revenue Code, an American
2 must hold a public office.

3 Administration of Internal Revenue Code (I.R.C.) Chapter 24 "employment taxes" , qualified State, county and
4 local taxes, and other Federal personnel obligations (not related to federal income taxes), is under authority of 5
5 U.S.C. §§5512-5520a, not Subtitle F of the Internal Revenue Code generally. However, these sections only apply to
6 parties who are either subject to State or local income tax or are in arrears to the U.S. Government for overpayment
7 of wages or legal judgments, and DO NOT relate to the collection of income taxes that come under Title 26, the 8 Internal Revenue Code.

9 To briefly summarize this section:

- 10 1. Elected or appointed federal "employees" as defined legally in 5 U.S.C. §2105, are the only ones subject to graduated 11 income tax withholding under the I.R.C. Chapter 24, and the withholding is on all compensation or wages received, 12 regardless of source.
- 13 2. All income tax withholding, including that on federal "employees" (meaning elected or appointed officers of the U.S.
14 government) is entirely voluntary and cannot be coerced because of limitations imposed by the Fifth Amendment that 15 require that no person can be deprived of their property without due process of law or just compensation, unless they 16 volunteer to give it away, in which case it is a donation and not a tax.
- 17 3. The fact that Subtitle C employment taxes are withheld for federal employees doesn't necessarily make them "liable"
18 to pay income taxes under Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A. As a matter of fact, Subtitle C employment taxes, as we 19 discussed in section 5.6.8, Subtitle C employment withholding taxes are classified legally as "gifts" to the U.S.
20 government! Federal employees can and should ask for all their employment withholding taxes back at the end of the 21 year just like a private Citizen can, and they can still claim the same 26 U.S.C. §861 "source" issues and other issues in 22 this chapter as their basis just like private citizens and everyone else.
- 23 4. The reason the federal withholding tax rules for federal "employees" can be different from private sector employees in 24 the 50 Union states is that all income of these "employees" is incident exclusively on the privileges of the elected
25 political office they hold and are not a matter of "common right" nor are they associated with a commercial trade or 26 profession. (see Sims v. Ahrens 271 S.W. 720 and others for more details).
- 27 5. Federal employees have a statutory obligation to pay social security taxes because of the retirement system they fall
28 under. The statutory authority for this requirement comes from 5 U.S.C. §8422. This statute creates a "presumption"
29 that they consent to contribute to the Social Security Program but they can rebut that presumption by providing a
30 written, notarized affidavit to their federal employer. Technically and legally, this should be all the notification needed
31 for federal or other government employers to stop contributing to the Social Security Program. Doing this does not
32 terminate your right to collect benefits based on what you contributed up to that point. As long as you have 10 years or 33 40 quarters of participation, you qualify for full benefits without contributing further under the SSA program.
- 34 6. There are no references anywhere in Title 26 that indicate that the code DOES NOT apply to federal employees.
- 35 7. Federal employees can and should ask for all their employment withholding taxes back at the end of the year just like a
36 private Citizen can, and they can still claim the same 26 U.S.C. §861 "source" issues and other issues raised in this 37 chapter as their basis just like private Citizens and everyone else.

38 5.9 So What Would Have to be Done to the Constitution to Make Direct Income Taxes Legal?

39 A question that often arises is the question about what it would take to allow Congress to constitutionally impose the tax
40 that the American public believes already exists? Could they not "fix" the law somehow, to make it apply to all Americans?

41 (One obstacle to this would be accomplishing it without anyone noticing, since an admission of the true purpose of such an
42 endeavor would also be an admission that some in the federal government have already committed several trillion dollars'
43 worth of fraud and extortion. Even if they could impose such a tax in the future, they could not retroactively undo the 44 fraud of the past.)

45 If the Sixteenth Amendment didn't authorize Congress to directly tax the income of all Americans, what would it take to 46 amend the Constitution to allow it? In short, it could not be done without repealing most of the Constitution. Because such a
47 tax would necessarily constitute a massive regulation of behavior, behavior that is not under federal jurisdiction, the Tenth
48 Amendment would first need to be repealed.

1 After that, Article I would have to be amended (and in effect, destroyed) by saying that Congress can regulate any behavior
 2 it wants within the 50 Union states, as long as it does it through "tax" legislation. To do this would, in the words of the 3 Supreme Court, "break down all constitutional limitation of the powers of Congress and completely wipe out the
 4 sovereignty of the states." It would mean the end of the Constitution, the end of the Union, the end of the 50 Union states,
 5 and the institution of a centralized police power. It cannot be done.

6 (Incidentally, for the same reasons, the entire debate over a flat income tax, a national sales tax, or any similar
 7 "replacement" for the current tax Code, is entirely pointless, as the limits on Congress' taxing power would limit all of 8 these (and anything similar) to commerce under federal jurisdiction, i.e. international and foreign commerce.)

9 5.10 Abuse of Legal Ignorance and Presumption: Weapon of tyrants

10 5.10.1 Application of "innocent until proven guilty" maxim of American Law

11 A well-known and universal rule of American Jurisprudence throughout the states and federal government that nearly 12 everyone is aware of is the following, elucidated by the Supreme Court:

13 The presumption of innocence plays a unique role in criminal proceedings. As Chief Justice Burger explained
 14 in his opinion for the Court in Estelle v. Williams, 425 U.S. 501 (1976): [507 U.S. 284]:

15 The presumption of innocence, although not articulated in the Constitution, is a basic component of 16 a fair trial under our system of criminal justice. Long ago this Court stated:

17 The principle that there is a presumption of innocence in favor of the accused is the undoubted law,
 18 axiomatic and elementary, and its enforcement lies at the foundation of the administration of our 19 criminal law. Coffin v. United States, 156 U.S. 432, 453 (1895).

20 To implement the presumption, courts must be alert to factors that may undermine the fairness of the factfinding
 21 process. In the administration of criminal justice, courts must carefully guard against dilution of the principle
 22 *that guilt is to be established by probative evidence and beyond a reasonable doubt. In re Winship, 397 U.S.
 23 358, 364 (1970). [425 U.S. 501, 504]*
 24 [Delo v. Lashely, 507 U.S. 272 (1993)]

25 The implication of this rule to the interpretation of law is that the law must state clearly and unambiguously what conduct is 26 prohibited and what specific conduct is required.

27 "The purpose of law cannot be to compel confusion. The reason for this is that the purpose of law is to protect 28 by defining for the person of average intelligence exactly what behavior is required in order to sustain an 29 orderly society free from crime, injury, and duress."
 30 [Family Guardian Fellowship]

31 The Supreme Court defined why laws must be written specifically for the audience of ordinary Americans when it stated:

32 "whether right or wrong, the premise underlying the constitutional method for determining guilt or innocence in 33 federal courts is that laymen are better than specialists [such as judges and lawyers] to perform this task."
 34 United States ex rel. Toth v. Quarles, [350 U.S. 11, 18 (1955)]

35 The innocent until proven guilty rule is a "rule of presumption". It requires that a jury must presume the Defendant is not 36 guilty until evidence is produced which clearly and unambiguously demonstrates otherwise. Any presumption to the 37 contrary will prejudice the rights of the Defendant and is a violation of due process:

38 (1) [8:4993] Conclusive presumptions affecting protected interests: A conclusive presumption may be
 39 defeated where its application would impair a party's constitutionally-protected liberty or property interests. In 40 such cases, conclusive presumptions have been held to violate a party's due process and equal protection
 41 rights. Vlandis v. Kline (1973) [412 US 441, 449, 93 S.Ct. 2230, 2235; Cleveland Bed. of Ed. v. LaFleur (1974)
 42 414 US 632, 639-640, 94 S.Ct. 1208, 1215-presumption under Illinois law that unmarried fathers are unfit
 43 violates process]
 44 [Federal Civil Trials and Evidence (2005), Rutter Group, paragraph 8:4993, p. 8K-34]

45 5.10.2 Role of Law and Presumption in Proving Guilt

1 Among the types of evidence that may be introduced in a court setting to establish guilt include quoting the enacted law
2 itself. Evidence based upon “law” only becomes admissible when the law cited is “positive law”.

3 “Positive law. Law actually and specifically enacted or adopted by proper authority for the government of an
4 organized jural society. See also Legislation.”
5 [Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1162]

6 Evidence that is NOT positive law, becomes “prima facie” evidence, which means that it is “presumed” to be evidence
7 unless challenged or rebutted:

8 TITLE 1 > CHAPTER 3 > § 204
9 § 204. Codes and Supplements as evidence of the laws of United States and District of Columbia; citation of
10 Codes and Supplements

11 In all courts, tribunals, and public offices of the United States, at home or abroad, of the District of Columbia,
12 and of each State, Territory, or insular possession of the United States—

13 (a) United States Code.— The matter set forth in the edition of the Code of Laws of the United States current at 14 any time shall, together with the then current supplement, if any, establish prima facie the laws of the United
15 States, general and permanent in their nature, in force on the day preceding the commencement of the session
16 *following the last session the legislation of which is included: Provided, however, That whenever titles of such
17 Code shall have been enacted into positive law the text thereof shall be legal evidence of the laws therein
18 contained, in all the courts of the United States, the several States, and the Territories and insular
19 possessions of the United States.

20 The above statute, which is “positive law”, establishes what is called a “statutory presumption” that courts are obligated to 21 observe. The statute above creates the notion of “prima facie” evidence. “Prima facie evidence” is defined below:

22 “Prima facie evidence. Evidence good and sufficient on its face. Such evidence as, in the judgment of the law,
23 is sufficient to establish a given fact, or the group or chain of facts constituting the party’s claim or defense, and
24 which if not rebutted or contradicted, will remain sufficient. Evidence which, if unexplained or uncontradicted,
25 is sufficient to sustain a judgment in favor of the issue which it supports, but which may be contradicted by
26 other evidence. State v. Haremza, 213 Kan. 201, 515 P.2d. 1217, 1222.

27 That quantum of evidence that suffices for proof of a particular fact until the fact is contradicted by other
28 evidence; once a trier of fact is faced with conflicting evidence, it must weigh the prima facie evidence with all
29 the other probative evidence presented. Godesky v. Provo City Corp., Utah, 690 P.2d. 541, 547. Evidence
30 which, standing alone and unexplained, would maintain the proposition and warrant the conclusion to support
31 which it is introduced. An inference or presumption of law, affirmative or negative of a fact, in the absence of 32 proof, or until proof can be obtained or produced to overcome the inference. See also Presumptive evidence.”
33 [Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1190]

34 Black’s Law Dictionary defines the term “presumption” as follows:

35 “presumption. An inference in favor of a particular fact. A presumption is a rule of law, statutory or judicial,
36 by which finding of a basic fact gives rise to existence of presumed fact, until presumption is rebutted. Van
37 Wart v. Cook, Okl.App., 557 P.2d. 1161, 1163. A legal device which operates in the absence of other proof to 38 require that certain inferences be drawn from the available evidence. Port Terminal & Warehousing Co. v.
39 John S. James Co., D.C.Ga., 92 F.R.D. 100, 106.

40 A presumption is an assumption of fact that the law requires to be made from another fact or group of facts
41 found or otherwise established in the action. A presumption is not evidence. A presumption is either conclusive
42 or rebuttable. Every rebuttable presumption is either (a) a presumption affecting the burden of producing 43 evidence or (b) a presumption affecting the burden of proof. Calif.Evid.Code, §600.

44 In all civil actions and proceedings not otherwise provided for by Act of Congress or by the Federal Rules of 45 Evidence, a presumption imposes on the party against whom it is directed the burden of going forward with 46 evidence to rebut or meet the presumption, but does not shift to such party the burden of proof in the sense of 47 the risk of nonpersuasion, which remains throughout the trial upon the party on whom it was originally cast.
48 Federal Evidence Rule 301.

49 See also Disputable presumption; inference; Juris et de jure; Presumptive evidence; Prima facie; Raise a 50 presumption.”
51 [Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1185]

1 A “statutory presumption” is one that occurs in a court of law because it is mandated by a positive law statute. The U.S.
2 Supreme Court has said that “statutory presumptions” which prejudice constitution rights are forbidden:

3 “A rebuttable presumption clearly is a rule of evidence which has the effect of shifting the burden of proof,
4 Mobile, J. & K. C. R. Co. v. Turnipseed, 219 U.S. 35, 43, 31 S.Ct. 136, 32 L.R.A. (N. S.) 226, Ann. Cas. 1912A,
5 463; and it is hard to see how a statutory rebuttable presumptions is turned from a rule of evidence into a
6 rule of substantive law as the result of a later statute making it conclusive. In both cases it is a substitute for
7 proof; in the one open to challenge and disproof, and in the other conclusive. However, whether the latter
8 presumption be treated as a rule of evidence or of substantive law, it constitutes an attempt, by legislative fiat,
9 to enact into existence a fact which here does not, and cannot be made to, exist in actuality, and the result is
10 the same, unless we are ready to overrule the Schlesinger Case, as we are not; for that case dealt with a
11 conclusive presumption, and the court held it invalid without regard to the question of its technical 12 characterization. This court has held more than once that a statute creating a presumption which operates to 13 deny a fair opportunity to rebut it violates the due process clause of the Fourteenth Amendment. For 14 example, Bailey v. Alabama, 219 U.S. 219, 238, et seq., 31 S.Ct. 145; Manley v. Georgia, 279 U.S. 1, 5-6, 49
15 S.Ct. 215.

16 'It is apparent,' this court said in the Bailey Case ( 219 U.S. 239, 31 S.Ct. 145, 151) 'that a 17 constitutional prohibition cannot be transgressed indirectly by the creation of a statutory 18 presumption any more than it can be violated by direct enactment. The power to create
19 presumptions is not a means of escape from constitutional restrictions.'

20 “If a legislative body is without power to enact as a rule of evidence a statute denying a litigant the right to
21 prove the facts of his case, certainly the power cannot be made to emerge by putting the enactment in the guise
22 of a rule of substantive law.”

23 [Heiner v. Donnan, 285 U.S. 312 (1932) ]

24 The Internal Revenue Code contains several statutory presumptions. Below is an example:

25 TITLE 26 > Subtitle F > CHAPTER 76 > Subchapter E > § 7491
26 § 7491. Burden of proof

27 (a) Burden shifts where taxpayer produces credible evidence

28 (1) General rule

29 If, in any court proceeding, a taxpayer introduces credible evidence with respect to any factual issue relevant to
30 ascertaining the liability of the taxpayer for any tax imposed by subtitle A or B, the Secretary shall have the
31 burden of proof with respect to such issue.

32 (2) Limitations

33 Paragraph (1) shall apply with respect to an issue only if—

34 (A) the taxpayer has complied with the requirements under this title to substantiate any item;

35 (B) the taxpayer has maintained all records required under this title and has cooperated with reasonable
36 requests by the Secretary for witnesses, information, documents, meetings, and interviews; and

37 (C) in the case of a partnership, corporation, or trust, the taxpayer is described in section 7430 (c)(4)(A)(ii).

38 Subparagraph (C) shall not apply to any qualified revocable trust (as defined in section 645 (b)(1)) with respect
39 to liability for tax for any taxable year ending after the date of the decedent's death and before the applicable
40 date (as defined in section 645 (b)(2)).

41 (3) Coordination

42 Paragraph (1) shall not apply to any issue if any other provision of this title provides for a specific burden of 43 proof with respect to such issue.

44 5.10.3 Statutory Presumptions that Injure Rights are Unconstitutional

45 A statutory presumption is a presumption which is mandated by a statute. Below is an example of such a presumption:

46 26 U.S.C. Sec. 7701\(c\) INCLUDES AND INCLUDING.

1           The terms 'include' and 'including' when used in a definition contained in this title shall not be deemed to
2           exclude other things otherwise within the meaning of the term defined."

3           What Congress is attempting to create in the above is the following false presumption:

4           "Any definition which uses the word 'includes' shall be construed to imply not only what is shown in the statute
5           and the code itself, but also what is commonly understood for the term to mean or whatever any government
6           employee deems is necessary to fulfill what he believes is the intent of the code."

7           We know that the above presumption is unconstitutional and if applied as intended, would violate the Void for Vagueness
8           Doctrine described later in section 5.10.6 and following. It would also violate the rules of statutory construction described 9           earlier in section 3.8 that say:

- 10          1. The purpose for defining a word within a statute is so that its ordinary (dictionary) meaning is not implied or assumed 11           by the reader.
- 12          2. When a term is defined within a statute, that definition is provided usually to supersede and not enlarge other 13           definitions of the word found elsewhere, such as in other Titles or Codes.

14          The U.S. Supreme Court has ruled many times that statutory presumptions which prejudice or threaten constitutional rights
15          are unconstitutional. Below are a few of its rulings on this subject to make the meaning perfectly clear:

16           "Legislation declaring that proof of one fact of group of facts shall constitute prima facie evidence of an
17           ultimate fact in issue is valid if there is a rational connection between what is proved and what is to be 18           inferred. A prima facie presumption casts upon the person against whom it is applied the duty of going
19           forward with his evidence on the particular point to which the presumption relates. A statute creating a 20           presumption that is arbitrary, or that operates to deny a fair opportunity to repel it, violates the due process
21           clause of the Fourteenth Amendment. Legislative fiat may not take the place of fact in the judicial
22           determination of issues involving life, liberty, or property. Manley v. Georgia, 279 U.S. 1, 49 S.Ct. 215, 73
23           L.Ed. -, and cases cited."
24           [\[Western and Atlantic Railroad v. Henderson, 279 U.S. 639 \(1929\)\]](#)

25           _____

26           "[I]t is unconstitutional for a legislature to remove from the jury the assessment of facts that increase the 27           prescribed range of penalties to which a criminal defendant is exposed. It is equally clear that such facts must 28           be established by proof beyond a reasonable doubt."
29           [McMillan v. Pennsylvania, 477 U.S. 79 (1986)]

30           _____

31           It has always been recognized that the guaranty of trial by jury in criminal cases means that the jury is to be the 32           factfinder. This is the only way in which a jury can perform its basic constitutional function of determining the 33           guilt or innocence of a defendant. See, e. g., United States ex rel. Toth v. Quarles, 350 U.S. 11, 15 -19; Reid v.
34           Covert, 354 U.S. 1, 5 -10 (opinion announcing judgment). And of course this constitutionally established power
35           of a jury to determine guilt or innocence of a defendant charged with crime cannot be taken away by Congress,
36           directly or indirectly, in whole or in part. Obviously, a necessary part of this power, vested by the Constitution
37           in juries (or in judges when juries are waived), is the exclusive right to decide whether evidence presented at
38           trial is sufficient to convict. I think it flaunts the constitutional power of courts and juries for Congress to tell
39           them what "shall be deemed sufficient evidence to authorize conviction." And if Congress could not thus directly
40           encroach upon the judge's or jury's exclusive right to declare what evidence is sufficient to prove the facts
41           necessary for conviction, it should not be allowed to do so merely by labeling its encroachment a
42           "presumption." Neither Tot v. United States, 319 U.S. 463, relied [380 U.S. 63, 78] on by the Court as
43           supporting this presumption, nor any case cited in Tot approved such an encroachment on the power of judges
44           or juries. In fact, so far as I can tell, the problem of whether Congress can so restrict the power of court and
45           jury in a criminal case in a federal court has never been squarely presented to or considered by this Court,
46           perhaps because challenges to presumptions have arisen in many crucially different contexts but
47           nevertheless have generally failed to distinguish between presumptions used in different ways, treating them
48           as if they are either all valid or all invalid, regardless of the rights on which their use may impinge. Because
49           the Court also fails to differentiate among the different circumstances in which presumptions may be utilized
50           and the different consequences which will follow, I feel it necessary to say a few words on that subject before
51           considering specifically the validity of the use of these presumptions in the light of the circumstances and 52           consequences of their use.

53           In its simplest form a presumption is an inference permitted or required by law of the existence of one fact,
54           which is unknown or which cannot be proved, from another fact which has been proved. The fact presumed

1 may be based on a very strong probability, a weak supposition or an arbitrary assumption. The burden on the
 2 party seeking to prove the fact may be slight, as in a civil suit, or very heavy - proof beyond a reasonable doubt
 3 - as in a criminal prosecution. This points up the fact that statutes creating presumptions cannot be treated as 4 fungible, that is, as interchangeable for all uses and all purposes. The validity of each presumption must be
 5 determined in the light of the particular consequences that flow from its use. When matters of trifling
 6 moment are involved, presumptions may be more freely accepted, but when consequences of vital importance
 7 to litigants and to the administration of justice are at stake, a more careful scrutiny is necessary. [380 U.S.
 8 63, 79]

9 In judging the constitutionality of legislatively created presumptions this Court has evolved an initial
 10 criterion which applies alike to all kinds of presumptions: that before a presumption may be relied on, there
 11 must be a rational connection between the facts inferred and the facts which have been proved by competent 12 evidence, that is, the facts proved must be evidence which is relevant, tending to prove (though not 13 necessarily conclusively) the existence of the fact presumed. And courts have undoubtedly shown an
 14 inclination to be less strict about the logical strength of presumptive inferences they will permit in civil cases
 15 than about those which affect the trial of crimes. The stricter scrutiny in the latter situation follows from the 16 fact that the burden of proof in a civil lawsuit is ordinarily merely a preponderance of the evidence, while in 17 a criminal case where a man's life, liberty, or property is at stake, the prosecution must prove his guilt
 18 beyond a reasonable doubt. See Morrison v. California, 291 U.S. 82, 96 -97. The case of Bailey v. Alabama,
 19 219 U.S. 219, is a good illustration of this principle. There Bailey was accused of violating an Alabama statute
 20 which made it a crime to fail to perform personal services after obtaining money by contracting to perform
 21 them, with an intent to defraud the employer. The statute also provided that refusal or failure to perform the 22 services, or to refund money paid for them, without just cause, constituted "prima facie evidence" (i. e., gave 23 rise to a presumption) of the intent to injure or defraud. This Court, after calling attention to prior cases
 24 dealing with the requirement of rationality, passed over the test of rationality and held the statute invalid on 25 another ground. Looking beyond the rational-relationship doctrine the Court held that the use of this
 26 presumption by Alabama against a man accused of crime would amount to a violation of the Thirteenth
 27 Amendment to the Constitution, which forbids "involuntary [380 U.S. 63, 80] servitude, except as a
 28 punishment for crime." In so deciding the Court made it crystal clear that rationality is only the first hurdle
 29 which a legislatively created presumption must clear - that a presumption, even if rational, cannot be used to 30 convict a man of crime if the effect of using the presumption is to deprive the accused of a constitutional 31 right.
 32 [United States v. Gainly, 380 U.S. 63 (1965)]

33 The reason a statutory presumption that injures rights is unconstitutional was also revealed in the Federalist Papers, which 34 say on the subject:

35 "No legislative act [including a statutory presumption] contrary to the Constitution can be valid. To deny this 36 would be to affirm that the deputy (agent) is greater than his principal; that the servant is above the master;
 37 that the representatives of the people are superior to the people; that men, acting by virtue of powers may do
 38 not only what their powers do not authorize, but what they forbid...[text omitted] It is not otherwise to be
 39 supposed that the Constitution could intend to enable the representatives of the people to substitute their will 40 to that of their constituents. It is far more rational to suppose, that the courts were designed to be an 41 intermediate body between the people and the legislature, in order, among other things, to keep the latter within 42 the limits assigned to their authority. The interpretation of the laws is the proper and peculiar province of the 43 courts. A Constitution is, in fact, and must be regarded by judges, as fundamental law. If there should 44 happen to be an irreconcilable variance between the two, the Constitution is to be preferred to the statute."
 45 [Alexander Hamilton, Federalist Paper # 78]

46 The implication of the prohibition against statutory presumptions is that:

- 47 1. No human being who is domiciled within a state of the Union and protected by the Bill of Rights may be victimized or 48 injured in any way by any kind of statutory presumption.
- 49 2. Statutory presumptions may only be applied against legal "persons" who do not have Constitutional rights, which 50 means corporations or those who are domiciled in the federal zone, meaning on land within exclusive federal 51 jurisdiction that is not protected by the First Ten Amendments to the United States Constitution. See Downes v.
 52 Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 (1901).
- 53 3. Any court which uses "judge made law" to do any of the following in the case of a natural person protected by the Bill
 54 of Rights is involved in a conspiracy against rights:
  - 55 3.1. Imposes a statutory presumption.
  - 56 3.2. Extends or enlarges any definition in the Internal Revenue Code based on any arbitrary criteria.
  - 57 3.3. Invokes an interpretation of a definition within a code which may not be deduced directly from language in the 58 code itself.

59 The above inferences help establish who the only proper audience for the Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A is, which is 60 federal corporations, payments from the federal government, and those domiciled within the federal zone but not within

states of the Union. The reason is that those domiciled in the federal zone are not protected by the Bill of Rights. The only exception to this rule is that any natural person who is domiciled in a state of the Union but who is exercising agency of a federal corporation or legal "person" which has a domicile within the federal zone also may become the lawful subject of statutory presumptions, but only in the context of the agency he is exercising. For instance, we demonstrate in the following:

Resignation of Compelled Social Security Trustee, Family Guardian Fellowship
<http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/Forms/Emancipation/SSTrustIndenture.pdf>

. . .that those participating in the Social Security program are deemed to be "agents", "employees", and "fiduciaries" of the federal corporation called the United States, which has a "domicile" in the federal zone (District of Columbia) under 4 U.S.C. §72. Therefore, unless and until they eliminate said agency using the above document, statutory presumptions may be used against them without an unconstitutional result, but only in the context of the agency they are exercising.

5.10.4 Purpose of Due Process: To completely remove "presumption" from legal proceedings

All presumption which prejudices a right guaranteed by the Constitution represents a violation of Constitutional Due Process. The only exception to this rule is if the Defendant is not covered by the Constitution because:

1. Domiciled in areas not covered by the Bill of Rights, such as federal territories, possessions, and the federal areas within the states. These areas are called the "federal zone" in this book.
2. Exercising agency of a corporation that is domiciled in the federal zone.

The above is also confirmed by reading Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 17(b) , which says that the law to be applied in a civil case must derive either from the law of the parties' domicile or from the domicile of the corporation they are acting as an agent for.

According to the Bible, "presumption" also happens to be a Biblical sin in violation of God's law as well, which should result in the banishment of a person from his society:

"But the person who does anything presumptuously, whether he is native-born or a stranger, that one brings reproach on the LORD, and he shall be cut off from among his people."
 [Numbers 15:30, Bible, NKJV]

"Keep back Your servant also from presumptuous sins; Let them not have dominion over me. Then I shall be blameless, And I shall be innocent of great transgression."
 [Psalm 19:13, Bible, NKJV]

"Now the man who acts presumptuously and will not heed the priest who stands to minister there before the LORD your God, or the judge, that man shall die. So you shall put away the evil from Israel. 13 And all the people shall hear and fear, and no longer act presumptuously."
 [Deut. 17:12-13, Bible, NKJV]

We have therefore established that "presumption" is something we should try very hard to avoid, because it is a violation of both man's law AND God's law. As a matter of fact, a whole book has been written about how "presumption" is systematically promoted and exploited by your public servants to destroy the separation of powers and unlawfully enlarge federal jurisdiction:

Presumption: Chief Weapon for Unlawfully Enlarging Federal Jurisdiction, Form #05.017
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

The chief purpose of Constitutional "due process" is therefore to completely remove bias and the presumption that produces it from every legal proceeding in a court of law. This is done by:

1. Preventing the application of any "statutory presumptions" that might prejudice the rights of the Defendant.
2. Insisting that every conclusion is based on physical and non-presumptive (not "prima facie") evidence.
3. To apply the same rules of evidence equally against both parties.

- 1 4. Choosing jurors who are free from bias or prejudice during the voir dire (jury selection) process.
- 2 5. Choosing judges who are free from bias or prejudice during the voir dire process.
- 3 6. Counsel on both sides ensuring that all presumptions made by the opposing party are challenged in a timely manner at
- 4 all phases of the litigation.

5 You can tell when presumptions are being prejudicially used in a legal proceeding in federal court, for instance, when:

- 6 1. The judge or either party uses any of the following phrases:
  - 7 1.1. "Everyone knows. . ."
  - 8 1.2. "You knew or should have known..."
  - 9 1.3. "A reasonable [presumptuous] person would have concluded otherwise..."
- 10 2. The judge does not exclude the I.R.C. from evidence in the case involving a person who:
  - 11 2.1. Is not domiciled in the federal zone.
  - 12 2.2. Has no employment, contracts, or agency with the federal government.
  - 13 2.3. Who has provided evidence of the same above.
- 14 3. The judge allows the Prosecutor to throw accusations at the Defendant in front of the jury without insisting on evidence
- 15 to back it up.
- 16 4. The judge admits into evidence or cites a statutory presumption that prejudices your rights.

17 "It is apparent," this court said in the Bailey Case ( 219 U.S. 239, 31 S.Ct. 145, 151) 'that a constitutional
 18 prohibition cannot be transgressed indirectly by the creation of a statutory presumption any more than it can be 19 violated by direct enactment. The power to create presumptions is not a means of escape from constitutional 20 restrictions."

21 [Heiner v. Donnan, 285 U.S. 312 (1932); Bailey v. Alabama, 219 U.S. 219, 238, et seq., 31 S.Ct. 145; Manley
 22 v. Georgia, 279 U.S. 1, 5-6, 49 S.Ct. 215.]

- 23 5. A judge challenges your choice of domicile and/or citizenship. In such a case, the court is illegally involving itself in
- 24 what actually are strictly political matters and what is called "political questions". One's choice of domicile is a
- 25 political matter that may not be coerced or presumed to be anything other than what the subject himself has clearly and
- 26 unambiguously stated, both orally and on government forms. See our free memorandum of law below:

Political Jurisdiction, Form #05.004
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

27 Unscrupulous government prosecutors will frequently make use of false presumption as their chief means of winning a tax
 28 case as follows:

- 29 1. They will choose a jury that is misinformed or under-informed about the law and legal process. This makes them into
- 30 sheep who will follow anyone.
- 31 2. They will use the ignorance and prejudices and the presumptions of the jury as a weapon to manipulate them into
- 32 becoming an angry "lynch mob" with a vendetta against the Defendant. This was the same thing that they did to Jesus.
- 33 See the Section 5.4.3.5 entitled "Modern Tax Trials are religious 'inquisitions' and not valid legal processes" available
- 34 at: <http://famguardian.org/Publications/GreatIRSHoax/GreatIRSHoax.htm>.
- 35 3. They will make frequent use of "words of art" to deceive the jury into making false presumptions that will prejudice
- 36 the rights of the defendant.

37 "The power to create presumptions is not a means of escape from constitutional restrictions,"
 38 [New York Times v. Sullivan, 376 U.S. 254 (1964)]

39 Most of these Some of these "words of art" are identified in the sections 3.9.1 through 3.9.1.27 of this book.

- 40 4. They will:
  - 41 4.1. Avoid defining the words they are using.
  - 42 4.2. Prevent evidence of the meaning of the words they are using from entering the court record or the deliberations.
- 43 Federal judges will help them with this process by insisting that "law" may not be discussed in the courtroom.

44 A good judge will ensure that the above prejudice does not happen, because it is primary duty to defend and protect the 45 Constitutional rights of the parties. He must especially do so where the matter involves taxation and where there is no jury
 46 or where anyone in the jury is either a "taxpayer" or a recipient of government benefits. He will do so in order to avoid 47 violation of 18 U.S.C. §597, which forbids bribing of voters, since jurors are a type of voter. However, in practice we have

1 observed that there are not have many good judges who will be this honorable in the context of a tax trial because their pay
2 and retirement, they think, depends on a vigorous illegal enforcement of the Internal Revenue Code in violation of 28
3 U.S.C. §455.

4 TITLE 28 > PART I > CHAPTER 21 > § 455
5 § 455. Disqualification of justice, judge, or magistrate judge

6 (a) Any justice, judge, or magistrate judge of the United States shall disqualify himself in any proceeding in 7 which his impartiality might reasonably be questioned.

8 (b) He shall also disqualify himself in the following circumstances:

9 [. . .]

10 (4) He knows that he, individually or as a fiduciary, or his spouse or minor child residing in his household, has
11 a financial interest in the subject matter in controversy or in a party to the proceeding, or any other interest
12 that could be substantially affected by the outcome of the proceeding;

13 Most of the injustice that occurs in federal courtrooms across the country relating to income taxation occurs primarily
14 because the above statute is violated. This statute wasn't always violated. It was only in the 1930's that federal judges
15 became "taxpayers". Before that, they were completely independent, which is why most people were not "taxpayers"
16 before that. For details on this corruption of our judiciary, see sections 6.5.15, 6.5.18, 6.8.2 through 6.9.12:

17 <http://famguardian.org/Publications/GreatIRSHoax/GreatIRSHoax.htm>

18 The U.S. Supreme Court has declared that judges must be alert to prevent such unconstitutional encroachments upon the 19 sacred Constitutional Rights of those domiciled in the states of the Union, when it gave the following warning, which has 20 gone largely unheeded by federal circuit and district courts since then:

21 "It may be that it...is the obnoxious thing in its mildest and least repulsive form; but illegitimate and
22 unconstitutional practices get their first footing in that way; namely, by silent approaches and slight
23 deviations from legal modes of procedure. This can only be obviated by adhering to the rule that
24 constitutional provisions for the security of person and property should be liberally construed. A close and
25 literal construction deprives them of half their efficacy, and leads to gradual depreciation of the right, as if
26 it consisted more in sound than in substance. It is the duty of the courts to be watchful for the constitutional
27 rights of the citizens, and against any stealthy encroachments thereon. Their motto should be obsta
28 principalis," [Mr. Justice Brewer, dissenting, quoting Mr. Justice Bradley in Boyd v. United States, 116 U.S.
29 616, 29 L.Ed. 746, 6 Sup.Ct.Rep. 524]
30 [Hale v. Henkel, 201 U.S. 43 (1906)]

31 If you would like to read more authorities on the subject of "presumption", see:

32 <http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/CitesByTopic/presumption.htm>

33 Another very important point needs to be made about the subject of "presumption", which is that "presumption", when it is 34 left to operate unchecked in a federal court proceeding:

- 35 1. Has all the attributes of religious "faith". Religious faith is simply a belief in anything that can't be demonstrated with 36 physical evidence absent presumption.
- 37 2. Turns the courtroom into a federal "church", and the judge into a "priest".
- 38 3. Produces a "political religion" when exercised in the courtroom.
- 39 4. Corrupts the court and makes it essentially into a political, and not a legal tribunal.
- 40 5. Violates the separation of powers doctrine, which was put in place to protect our rights from such encroachments.

41 If you would like to investigate the fascinating matter further of how the abuse of presumption in federal courtrooms has
42 the effect of creating a state-sponsored religion in violation of the First Amendment Establishment Clause, please consult 43 sections 5.4 through 5.4.6.6 earlier.

44 5.10.5 Application of "Expressio unius est exclusio alterius" rule

1 “Expressio unius est exclusio alterius. A maxim of statutory interpretation meaning that the expression of one
 2 thing is the exclusion of another. Burgin v. Forbes, 293 Ky. 456, 169 S.W.2d. 321, 325; Newblock v. Bowles,
 3 170 Okl. 487, 40 P.2d. 1097, 1100. Mention of one thing implies exclusion of another. When certain persons
 4 or things are specified in a law, contract, or will, an intention to exclude all others from its operation may be
 5 inferred. Under this maxim, if statute specifies one exception to a general rule or assumes to specify the effects
 6 of a certain provision, other exceptions or effects are excluded.”
 7 [Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 581]

8 The above important rule establishes that what is not enumerated in law can safely be ignored. The Supreme court has said
 9 about the above rule:

- 10 1. That it is a rule of statutory construction and interpretation, and not a substantive law. See U.S. v. Barnes, 222 U.S.
 11 513 (1912).
 12 2. That the rule can never override clear and contrary evidences of Congressional intent. See Neuberger v. Commissioner
 13 of Internal Revenue, 311 U.S. 83 (1940).
 14 3. A few exceptions to the Exclusio Rule were made in the following cases:
 15 3.1. Springer v. Government of the Philippine Islands, 277 U.S. 189 (1928)
 16 3.2. U.S. v. Barnes, 222 U.S. 513 (1912)
 17 3.3. Neuberger v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, 311 U.S. 83 (1940)

18 5.10.6 Scams with the Word “includes”

19 One very frequently used trick the IRS likes to pull on uninformed Americans is to abuse the word “includes” to confuse
 20 people and illegally expand their jurisdiction. They will attempt to do this using essentially statutory presumptions, which
 21 we showed earlier were unconstitutional. Their false argument is based on the definition of “includes” found in 26 U.S.C.
 22 §7701\(c\) :

23 TITLE 26 > Subtitle F > CHAPTER 79 > Sec. 7701.
 24 Sec. 7701. - Definitions

25 (c) Includes and including

26 The terms "includes" and "including" when used in a definition contained in this title shall not be deemed to
 27 exclude other things otherwise within the meaning of the term defined.

28 They will point to this definition, and then say that any word whose definition uses this word essentially isn't bounded or
 29 defined by that definition and can be arbitrarily expanded to include other things not listed. They will then try to apply this
 30 false concept to the several places that “includes” is used in the Internal Revenue Code, most importantly in the definitions
 31 of the following words:

- 32 • “State” found in 26 U.S.C. §7701\(a\)\(10\) and 4 U.S.C. §110
 33 • “United States” found in 26 U.S.C. §7701\(a\)\(9\)
 34 • “employee” found in 26 U.S.C. §3401\(c\) and 26 C.F.R. §31.3401\(c\) Employee
 35 • “person” found in 26 C.F.R. §301.6671-1 (which governs who is liable for penalties under Internal Revenue Code)

36 If you are using the Non-Resident Non-Person Position, they will point to the definition of the term “United States” found
 37 in 26 U.S.C. §7701\(a\)\(9\) and say that it can mean anyplace in the country, because the definition uses the word “includes”
 38 and therefore can be “expansive” and apply anywhere. Ridiculous nonsense! You must first realize that this flagrant abuse
 39 of our language and of the meaning of the word “includes” is part of an obfuscation approach designed by Congress and the 40 IRS to illegally expand the jurisdiction of the federal government to assess I.R.C., Subtitle A income taxes beyond their
 41 clear constitutional limits and beyond federal property or territories and into the 50 sovereign states. It violates common
 42 sense, and every other use of the word “includes” in the English language we ever learned throughout our lifetime. It also 43 violates the government's own definition of the word “includes” published in the Federal Register, :

44 Treasury Decision 3980, Vol. 29, January-December, 1927, pgs. 64 and 65 defines the words includes and 45 including as:

46 “(1) To comprise, comprehend, or embrace...(2) To enclose within; contain; confine...But granting that the
 47 word 'including' is a term of enlargement, it is clear that it only performs that office by introducing the specific
 48 elements constituting the enlargement. It thus, and thus only, enlarges the otherwise more limited, preceding

1           general language...The word 'including' is obviously used in the sense of its synonyms, comprising;
2           comprehending; embracing."

3           The IRS definition of the word includes also violates several court rulings. Below is just one example:

4           "Includes is a word of limitation. Where a general term in Statute is followed by the word, 'including' the
5           primary import of the specific words following the quoted words is to indicate restriction rather than
6           enlargement. Powers ex re. Covon v. Charron R.L., 135 A. 2nd 829, 832"
7           [Definitions-Words and Phrases pages 156-156, Words and Phrases under 'limitations']

8           As you may know, Black's Law Dictionary is the Bible of legal definitions. Let's see what it says about the definition of 9           "includes" from the Sixth Edition on p. 763:

10           "Include. (Lat. Includere, to shut in. keep within.) To confine within, hold as an inclosure. Take in, attain, shut
11           up, contain, inclose, comprise, comprehend, embrace, involve. Term may, according to context, express an
12           enlargement and have the meaning of and or in addition to, or merely specify a particular thing already
13           included within general words theretofore used. "Including" within statute is interpreted as a word of 14           enlargement or of illustrative application as well as a word of limitation. Premier Products Co. v. Cameron,
15           240 Or. 123, 400 P.2d. 227, 228."
16           [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 763]

17           In other words, according to Black's, when the word "include" is used, it expands to take in all of the items stipulated or 18           listed, but is then limited to them.

19           Abuses of the word includes by the Congress and the IRS is a clear assault on our liberty, as it undermines our very
20           language and our means of comprehending precisely and exclusively not only what the law requires of us, but what it
21           doesn't require. Here is what Confucius said about this kind of conspiracy:

22           "When words lose their meaning, people will lose their liberty."
23           [Confucius, 500 B.C.]

24           Such an approach also amounts to a clear violation of due process under the Fourth and Sixth Amendment , in that it causes
25           the law to not specifically define what is or is not required of the citizen:

26           "A statute which either forbids or requires the doing of an act in terms so vague that men and women of 27           common intelligence must necessarily guess at its meaning and differ as to its application, violates the first 28           essential of due process of law."
29           [Connally v. General Construction Co., 269 U.S. 385 \(1926\)]

30           The above finding gives rise to a doctrine known as the "void for vagueness doctrine", that was advocated by the U.S.
31           supreme Court. This doctrine is deeply rooted in our right to due process (under the Fifth Amendment) and our right to 32           know the nature and cause of any criminal accusation (under the Sixth Amendment). The latter right goes far beyond the 33           contents of any criminal indictment. The right to know the nature and cause of any accusation starts with the statute which 34           a defendant is accused of violating. A statute must be sufficiently specific and unambiguous in all its terms, in order to 35           define and give adequate notice of the kind of conduct which it forbids.

36           The essential purpose of the "void for vagueness doctrine" with respect to interpretation of a criminal statute,
37           is to warn individuals of the criminal consequences of their conduct. ... Criminal statutes which fail to give
38           due notice that an act has been made criminal before it is done are unconstitutional deprivations of due process
39           of law.
40           [U.S. v. De Cadena, 105 F.Supp. 202, 204 (1952), emphasis added]

41           If it fails to indicate with reasonable certainty just what conduct the legislature prohibits, a statute is necessarily void for
42           uncertainty, or "void for vagueness" as the doctrine is called. In the De Cadena case, the U.S. District Court listed a
43           number of excellent authorities for the origin of this doctrine (see Lanzetta v. New Jersey, 306 U.S. 451) and for the 44           development of the doctrine (see Screws v. United States, 325 U.S. 91, Williams v. United States, 341 U.S. 97, and Jordan
45           v. De George, 341 U.S. 223). Any prosecution which is based upon a vague statute or a vague (or expansive) definition
46           must fail, together with the statute itself. A vague criminal statute is unconstitutional for violating the 5th and 6th
47           Amendments.

IMPORTANT: We should remember that without the Bill of Rights (including the 4th, 5th, and 6th Amendments), our federal government can define “includes” any way they want because absent a Bill of Rights, the Void for Vagueness Doctrine is irrelevant and inapplicable! As we clarified earlier, the Bill of Rights do not apply inside the federal zone as per Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 (1901) and so the expansive use of “includes” is lawful there! That is why we must never claim to be “U.S. persons” or “U.S. citizens” who reside inside the federal zone: because then the Internal Revenue Code really can mean whatever the judge says it means, and this is especially true in an Article 1 court! See section 2.5.5.9 of the Sovereignty Forms and Instructions Manual, Form #10.005 for further details on the distinction between an Article 1 and Article III court. Note that the U.S. Tax Court is an Article I legislative court that can only address matters affecting citizens and residents of the federal zone. You’re playing with fire and a hazard to yourself if you litigate in this court and claim to be a U.S. citizen!

The abuse of the word “includes” or its expansive use also violates the rules of statutory construction, which are founded on the Fourth Amendment right of due process of law:

“Keeping in mind the well-settled rule that the citizen is exempt from taxation unless the same is imposed by clear and unequivocal language, and that where the construction of a tax law is doubtful, the doubt is to be resolved in favor of those upon whom the tax is sought to be laid.”
[Spreckels Sugar Refining Co. v. McClain, 192 U.S. 397 (1904)]

This fact only underscores our duty to refrain from reading a phrase into the statute when Congress has left it out. “ [W]here Congress includes particular language in one section of a statute but omits it in another ..., it is generally presumed that Congress acts intentionally and purposely in the disparate inclusion or exclusion.”
Russello v. United States, 464 U.S. 16, 23, 78 L.Ed.2d. 17, 104 S.Ct. 296 (1983) (citation omitted).
[Keene Corp. v. United States, 508 U.S. 200, 124 L.Ed.2d. 118, 113 S.Ct. 1993. (emphasis added)]

Here are two particularly pertinent rules of statutory construction that confirm the restrictive use of the word “includes” advocated throughout this book:

*“Expressio unius est exclusio alterius. A maxim of statutory interpretation meaning that the expression of one thing is the exclusion of another. Burgin v. Forbes, 293 Ky. 456, 169 S.W.2d. 321, 325; Newblock v. Bowles, 170 Okl. 487, 40 P.2d. 1097, 1100. Mention of one thing implies exclusion of another. When certain persons or things are specified in a law, contract, or will, an intention to exclude all others from its operation may be inferred. Under this maxim, if statute specifies one exception to a general rule or assumes to specify the effects of a certain provision, other exceptions or effects are excluded.”*
[Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 581]

*“Ejusdem generis. Of the same kind, class, or nature. In the construction of laws, wills, and other instruments, the “ejusdem generis rule” is, that where general words follow an enumeration of persons or things, by words of a particular and specific meaning, such general words are not to be construed in their widest extent, but are to be held as applying only to persons or things of the same general kind or class as those specifically mentioned. U.S. v. LaBrecque, D.C. N.J., 419 F.Supp. 430, 432. The rule, however, does not necessarily require that the general provision be limited in its scope to the identical things specifically named. Nor does it apply when the context manifests a contrary intention.*

*Under “ejusdem generis” canon of statutory construction, where general words follow the enumeration of particular classes of things, the general words will be construed as applying only to things of the same general class as those enumerated. Campbell v. Board of Dental Examiners, 53 Cal.App.3d. 283, 125 Cal.Rptr. 694, 696.”*
[Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 517]

So when the word “includes” is used, then anything not specified is presumed excluded by the first rule of statutory construction above “Expressio Unius est exclusio alterius”. The second rule of statutory construction above says that when the word “includes” introduces a list of items, then the list must be presumed to be of the same kind or class. For instance, the definition of “United States” found in Title 8 of the U.S. Code says:

[8 U.S.C. Sec. 1101\(a\)\(36\): State \[Aliens and Nationality\]](#)

The term “State” includes the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, Guam, and the Virgin Islands of the United States.

1 The above list of items introduced with the word “includes” in Title 8 of the U.S. Code are federal States or territories, and
 2 so this is the “general class” that they all fall into. This definition of “State” is the basis for determining whether a person is
 3 born in the “United States” for the purposes of citizenship, as defined in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(38) and 8 C.F.R. §215.1(f).

4 If the act doesn't specifically identify what is forbidden or “included” and we have to rely not on the law, but some judge
 5 or lawyer or politician or a guess to describe what is “included”, then our due process has been violated and our
 6 government has thereby instantly been transformed from a government of laws into a government of men. And in this case,
 7 it only took the abuse of one word in the English language to do so!

8 The concept of “due process of law” as it is embodied in Fifth Amendment demands that a law shall not be
 9 unreasonable, arbitrary, or capricious and that the means selected shall have a reasonable and substantial
 10 relation to the object being sought.
 11 [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 500, under the definition of “due process of law”]

12 If the word “includes” can be lawlessly abused to mean other things not specifically identified or at least classified in the 13 statute, then the whole of the Internal Revenue Code essentially defines NOTHING, because it all hinges on jurisdiction,
 14 and 26 U.S.C. §7701\(a\)\(9\), which establishes jurisdiction uses the word “includes”. How can the code define ANYTHING
 15 that uses the word “includes”, based on the definition of “definition” found below?:

16 definition: A description of a thing by its properties; an explanation of the meaning of a word or term. The
 17 process of stating the exact meaning of a word by means of other words. Such a description of the thing*
 18 defined, including all essential elements and excluding all nonessential, as to distinguish it from all other things
 19 and classes.”
 20 [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 423]

21 Is the word “United States” defined exactly, if “includes” can mean that you can add whatever you arbitrarily want to be 22 “included” in the definition?

23 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9)

24 United States

25 The term "United States" when used in a geographical sense includes only the States and the District of
 26 Columbia.

27 This clear and flagrant disregard for due process of law strikes at the heart of our liberty and freedom and we ought to
 28 boycott the income tax based on this clever ruse by the shysters in Congress and the IRS who invented it. If the word
 29 “includes” is used in its expansive sense, we have, in effect, subjected ourselves to the arbitrary whims of however the
 30 currently elected politician or judge wants to describe what is “included”. That leads to massive chaos, injustice, and
 31 unconstitutional behavior by our courts and our elected representatives, which is exactly what we have today. To put it
 32 bluntly, such deceptive actions are treasonable. The abuse also promotes unnecessary litigation over the meaning of the tax
 33 code, to the benefit of lawyers, lawmakers, and the American Bar Association, which is a clear conflict of interest. See
 34 section 3.20.1 for details on how the legal profession has exploited this uncertainty to their advantage in maximizing
 35 litigation. Here is what the U.S. Supreme Court says about the confusion created by the expansive abuse of the word 36 “includes”:

37 “In the interpretation of statutes levying taxes, it is THE ESTABLISHED RULE NOT TO EXTEND their
 38 provisions, by implication, BEYOND THE CLEAR IMPORT OF THE LANGUAGE USED, OR TO ENLARGE
 39 their operations SO AS TO EMBRACE MATTERS NOT SPECIFICALLY POINTED OUT”.
 40 [Gould v. Gould, 245 U.S.151 (1917)]

41 If this ridiculous and abusive interpretation of the word “includes” by the IRS is allowed to stand by the courts and this
 42 assault on our liberty by Congress is allowed to continue, then below is the essence of what the government has done to us,
 43 represented as a satirical press release by the U.S. supreme Court:

44 NEW RULES FOR LAW

45 SMUCKWAP NEWSSERVICE, Washington: The Supreme Court ruled today that judges can do whatever the
 46 hell they want. In a landmark case, Black-Robed Lawyers vs. Everyone Else, the justices handed down their
 47 inestimable judgment that since lawyers in general and judges in particular are such fine examples of humanity,
 48 not to mention smart enough to get through law school, judges can do whatever they please.

1 "The Rule of Law has ended," proclaimed Supreme Court Justice Arrogant B. Astart, "and the Rule of Judges
2 begins!"

3 Turning their shiny black backs on the rest of America, the justices decided to toss out two hundred years of
4 Constitutional law and indeed, to rid themselves completely of having to heed the Constitution.

5 "The law is what we say it is," said Justice Whiney I. Diot. "It has been this way for some time now, but with
6 Black-Robed Lawyers vs. Everyone Else, we are coming out of our judicial closet. No more arguments will be
7 allowed from anyone, and we don't want to hear any more of your complaining about your rights. In fact, any
8 mention of so-called rights will guarantee you 100 years, hard labor."

9 Justice K. Rupt Assin concurred in his opinion that "judicial oligarchy has now fully come into its place in
10 American history and will be fully enforced by an iron rule of law, and remember, law is whatever we say it is."

11 The Center for People Who Want to Leave This Country Because It Is Beginning to Look Too Much Like Nazi
12 Germany analyzed the justices' decision.

13 "Judges now legally can put anyone in prison for any reason they want, for as long as they want," states the
14 analysis. "Judges can also put jurors in prison for 'obstructing justice' and for anything else, including not
15 handing the judge whatever money they may have on them at the time. Jurors who don't behave exactly as the 16 judge desired have been persecuted in the past, but "now they can receive prison terms much longer than their
17 own lifespan added to the lifespan(s) of the defendant(s) in any trial.

18 The report also mentioned the justices' decision that anyone who says anything disagreeable in their courtroom
19 can be immediately arrested and jailed, their property confiscated, and their spouses and children taken as
20 "wards" of the court under the justices own personal pleasure ... or... supervision.

21 The concept of separation of powers was addressed in the Center's report on the decision.

22 "There is no separation of powers," it reads, "when not only all the justices are lawyers, so are all
23 Congressmen and the President, his wife, his cabinet, the entire Department of Justice, most lobbyists and 24 almost everyone else in Washington, D.C."

25 When questioned about what effect the decision would have on all Americans, the spokesman for the Center
26 said, "I can't be certain. I suspect that emigration rather than immigration will become a major concern. Those 27 Americans who are lawyers will be fine, for the most part. No one will ever again show up for jury duty. But if 28 we thought we had an overcrowded prison problem before, we're in for a *major* shock!"

29 If you would like a more detailed treatment of why the word "includes" is used as a word of limitation within the Internal 30 Revenue Code, we have prepared a pamphlet on the subject specifically for this purpose with an exhaustive analysis of 31 several of the subjects covered in the last few sections:

32 5.10.7 Guilty Until Proven Innocent: False Presumptions of Liability Based on Treacherous Definitions<sup>207</sup>

33 We described earlier in section 5.3.1 the definition of the term "taxpayer" and the monumentally important distinction
34 between the word "taxpayer" and other words like "nontaxpayer" and "Citizen". Recall from that section that a "taxpayer"
35 is someone who is "liable for" or "subject to" an imputed Internal Revenue tax and that the IRS calls everyone "taxpayers",
36 even though in most cases they are committing fraud in doing so. Many Americans have been systematically misinformed
37 about the proper application of the Internal Revenue Code by their government and a corrupted legal and tax preparation
38 profession to such an extent that they falsely believe or "presume" they are "taxpayers". This brainwashing usually occurs
39 because of a naïve reading of the Internal Revenue Service's deceptive at best and downright fraudulent at worst
40 publications, which consistently use the term "taxpayer" to describe everyone. To further bias this presumption in the 41 government's favor, our deceitful government even created another name for your Social Security Number, by calling it a
42 "Taxpayer Identification Number" and requiring you to use it on every return under 26 U.S.C. §6109, but only if you are 43 required to file, and there is no such requirement under Subtitle A because there is no liability statute. We also know that

<sup>207</sup> Adapted from a paper by the Institute for Policy Innovation, Policy Report #165 entitled A Monument of Deficient Wisdom: The Constitutional Conflict in Federal Income Tax Law Enforcement.

1 the courts do not have the power to turn a “nontaxpayer” into a “taxpayer” because only you, as the sovereign, can do that
2 to yourself voluntarily:

3 *“And by statutory definition the term ‘taxpayer’ includes any person, trust or estate subject to a tax imposed by
4 the revenue act... Since the statutory definition of ‘taxpayer’ is exclusive, the federal courts do not have the 5 power to create nonstatutory taxpayers for the purpose of applying the provisions of the Revenue Act.”
6 [C.I.R. v. Trustees of L. Inv. Ass’n., 100 F.2d. 18 (1939)]*

7 When an IRS bureaucrat is then asked about whether most Americans are “liable” to pay the tax, they will stack the deck in 8 their favor with their answer by saying such things as:

9 “A taxpayer has never won on that in court.”

10 and they literally won't be telling a lie on that because a “taxpayer” is someone who is “liable” or has made himself or
11 herself “liable” by volunteering. We have a scene from an evening news clip in the “How to Keep 100% of Your Earnings
12 Video” online on our website (<http://nontaxpayer.info/Media/movie.htm>) where an IRS representative does exactly that on 13 the evening news in response to a question about liability. What no IRS employee will tell you is that NO ONE in the 14 context of the Subtitle A personal income tax is “liable” or is a “taxpayer” unless they volunteer because their boss would
15 probably fire them for telling the truth! The disastrously false presumption that you are a “taxpayer” gets you into all kinds
16 of due process traps and Constitutional rights violations with the IRS that are very difficult to get out of without a much 17 clearer understanding of the law and the facts than most people have:

18 *“The significant problems we face cannot be solved at the same level of thinking we were at when we created 19 them.”
20 [Albert Einstein]*

21 This section examines one such due process violation arising out of this mistaken presumption that we are all “taxpayers”
22 by examining the issue of burden of proof. If we falsely presume we are “taxpayers”, then statutory and case law clearly
23 establishes that the burden of proof falls squarely on us as the alleged “taxpayer” to prove our lack of liability. This is 24 exactly the bargaining position our covetous and deceitful government wants us in so they can get the upper hand most of 25 the time, and we'll explain just how deep a hole you will fall into when the government succeeds in tricking you with this
26 subtle but very effective word trap. Because of this word trap, when we fall for it, we basically end up with no
27 constitutional protections, no due process rights, and big legal bills trying to prove the government wrong. Just by the 28 words they used to describe us, they prejudiced our rights and the only thing that allowed them to get away with it was our 29 own ignorance of the law and imprecise language.

30 Before we launch further into some rather disturbing revelations about the burden of proof requirements applying to
31 “taxpayers”, we'd like to remind you again that it is a violation of due process of law for the government as a moving party
32 to call you a “taxpayer” absent your voluntary consent and cooperation without first meeting the burden of proving that you
33 indeed are a “taxpayer” with evidence. Remember what Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, says under the definition of 34 “due process of law” on page 500:

35 Due process of law. Law in its regular course of administration through courts of justice. Due process of law
36 in each particular case means such an exercise of the powers of the government as the settled maxims of law
37 permit and sanction, and under such safeguards for the protection of individual rights as those maxims
38 prescribe for the class of cases to which the one in question belongs. A course of legal proceedings according 39 to those rules and principles which have been established in our systems of jurisprudence for the enforcement
40 and protection of private rights. To give such proceedings any validity, there must be a tribunal competent by 41 its constitution—that is, by the law of the creation—to pass upon the subject-matter of the suit; and, if that 42 involves merely a determination of the personal liability of the defendant, he must be brought within its 43 jurisdiction by service of process within the state, or his voluntary appearance. Pennoyer v. Neff, 95 U.S. 714,
44 24 L.Ed. 565. Due process of law implies the right of the person affected thereby to be present before the 45 tribunal which pronounces judgment upon the question of life, liberty, or property, in its most comprehensive
46 sense; to be heard, by testimony or otherwise, and to have the right of controverting, by proof, every material
47 fact which bears on the question of right in the matter involved. If any question of fact or liability be 48 conclusively be presumed [rather than proven] against him, this is NOT due process of law.
49 [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 500]*

50 So if there are any assumptions or presumptions about you that are unproven, including your identity as a “taxpayer”, your 51 due process rights have been violated, and any judge with integrity wouldn't allow that in his courtroom. However, if the 52 government uses the word “taxpayer” to describe you and you don't object, then you are a “taxpayer” by presumption

1 under the Law of Presumptions, which we discuss more fully in sections 3.4.4 and 3.4.6 of the Tax Fraud Prevention
2 Manual, Form #06.008. Watch out! Incidentally, we show you in these two sections how to use the same devious tactic in
3 reverse against the IRS.

4 You therefore need to keep reminding yourself that the legal discussion in this section only pertain to “taxpayers” and not
5 to all Americans, and that the government must produce a statute making you liable for a tax and show taxable income,
6 which in all cases under Subtitle A means corporate profit (see section 5.6.5 earlier), before you become a “taxpayer”. This
7 is the only way you can successfully challenge their jurisdiction and play the cards right that they will try to deal you.
8 Since there is no statute under Subtitle A making private natural persons “liable” for the income tax imposed in 26 U.S.C.
9 §1, this is a burden of proof that they simply can't meet in most cases, unless a tyrannical and corrupt judge steers the jury
10 and the case away from talking about this subject, thus violating your First Amendment right of free speech to 11 communicate with your government in the way that you see fit and in defense of your liberties.

12 The original article upon which this section was derived mistakenly used the terms “citizen” and “taxpayer”
13 interchangeably, so we had to edit it to clarify the subtle distinctions in order to avoid being deceived and to make the truth
14 plain. More than anything, the battle to empty your pocket is a war of words but it is still a war and amounts to treason
15 against the Constitution, and we must be vigilant to note guerilla warfare tactics such as the “taxpayer” trap appearing in 16 this section.

17 The idea of placing the burden of proof upon the accuser derives from English common law. The common law was deeply
18 entrenched in the colonies during the time of the founding and continues as the basis of American law. The common law
19 itself derives from the Great Charter of Liberties, Magna Charta. Magna Charta was the declaration of the liberties of 20 English freemen signed by King John in 1215 AD. It was extracted from the King at the point of a sword as the price for 21 retaining his throne. Magna Charta was reconfirmed numerous times by English monarchs over the ensuing centuries to the 22 point where its principles became engrained in the fabric of English—and by extension, American—jurisprudence.

23 Chapter 39 of the Great Charter sets forth many of the fundamental rights of citizens in the judicial process. It established
24 the concepts of both due process of law and the burden of proof as we know them today. Chapter 39 (chapter 29 in the 1225 25 version) reads:

26 No freeman shall be seized, or imprisoned, or dispossessed, or outlawed, or in any way destroyed; nor will we
27 condemn him, nor will we commit him to prison, excepting by the legal judgment of his peers, or by the laws of 28 the land.

29 By this declaration, citizens were not to be considered guilty at any level in the judicial process until after a trial. In the 30 Notes on the Great Charters, English jurists declared that the protections afforded by Magna Charta chapter 39/29 are so
31 important that they alone “would alone have procured for it the title of the Great Charter.”<sup>62</sup> In practice, this principle
32 created the axiom of law holding that the accuser, whether in the criminal or civil context, was solely responsible to prove
33 the verity of his claims against the accused before any punishment could apply.

34 Income tax codes and regulations heap upon the shoulders of “taxpayers” innumerable requirements to carry out affirmative
35 duties under the pain of imprisonment, civil penalties, additional tax and interest assessments. Moreover, the code allows
36 the IRS to make determinations with respect to a taxpayer's filing status, annual income, deductible expenses, dependent
37 exemptions, etc. In all but a few exceptions, the IRS never has to prove that its actions or determinations are correct. The 38 Supreme Court, in the 1933 case of Welch v. Helvering, 290 U.S. 111 (1933) declared that the IRS is entitled to the 39 “presumption of correctness” with regard to its determinations. As such, the “taxpayer” “has the burden of proving” such 40 actions to be wrong. In a very real way, the consequence of this is that the “taxpayer” is essentially guilty until proven
41 innocent, a reversal of the fundamental rule of law regarding the burden of proof. The Supreme Court, in the case of Bull v.
42 United States, 295 U.S. 247 (1935) used this explanation to describe how the litigation process is fundamentally altered in 43 tax cases:

44 Thus, the usual procedure for the recovery of debts is reversed in the field of taxation. Payment precedes
45 defense, and the burden of proof, normally on the claimant, is shifted to the taxpayer.

46 The [tax] assessment supersedes the pleading, proof, and judgment necessary in an action at law, and has the 47 force of such a judgment. The ordinary defendant stands in judgment only after a hearing. The taxpayer often is

1                   afforded his hearing after judgment and after payment, and his only redress for unjust administrative action is
2                   the right to claim restitution.<sup>208</sup>

3     The shift in the burden of proof does not apply to the various criminal provisions of the tax code. To place the burden of
4     proof on the accused in a criminal matter is a clear deprivation of due process and flatly unconstitutional. However, the
5     vast majority of the penalty provisions of the tax code are civil in nature and it naturally follows that the overwhelming
6     number of penalty assessments are likewise civil in nature. As a result, the courts seem content to dissolve the historic
7     protection in most civil cases. But despite the fact that the imposition of civil penalties does not carry the risk of loss of 8     liberty, such imposition, as well as civil collection in general, most certainly does imply the loss of property, a condition
9     Magna Charta referred to as being “dispossessed.” As the evidence presented above clearly shows, the Founders put the 10    importance of property and the protection thereof on par with that of personal liberty. The due process clauses of both the 11    Fifth and Fourteenth Amendments speak clearly to the protection of life, liberty and property.

12    What could justify a departure from the settled principles of due process such that the burden of proof is shifted from the 13    government to the citizen? The answer is found in a statement by the Bull court that has become a common thread woven
14    into the fabric of tax litigation for more than six decades. That statement is:

15                   “But taxes are the lifeblood of government, and their prompt and certain availability an imperious need.”<sup>209</sup>

16    Thus, in the mind of the Supreme Court, the government’s “imperious need” for money justifies the abandonment of one of 17    the most important elements of American liberty. The concept of “need” was reiterated in the case of Carson v. United 18    States, where the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals more pointedly declared that such departure is justified based upon “the 19    government’s strong need to accomplish swift collection of revenues and in the need to encourage taxpayer recordkeeping.”

20    This reasoning presents a recurring theme: government’s need for money is, by itself, sufficient to override settled
21    constitutional protections. This notion is antithetical to liberty and to the notion of a government with limited, narrowly
22    prescribed powers. If the courts are able to set aside specific constitutional protections on the mere assertion by the 23    government of a “compelling need,” all the rights declared sacrosanct in the Constitution are but empty vessels.

24    This shift in the burden of proof is responsible for innumerable abuses by the IRS. Many of these were brought to light
25    during the 1997 Senate Finance Committee hearings into IRS abuse. Specifically, the practice of placing the burden on 26    “taxpayers” has the effect of allowing the IRS to issue penalty assessments at will, without regard to the specific facts of a
27    case and in violation of its own stated policy on penalty assessments. A good share of the more than thirty million penalties
28    issued every year are issued through automatic computer assessments. In this way, the IRS does not even make an effort to 29    determine whether the facts of a case justify imposition of the penalty. The “taxpayer” is left to assert defenses if he is able 30    to navigate the procedural quagmire.

31    This is equally true of the millions of computer notices issued by the IRS annually. Many such notices claim to correct
32    errors allegedly made by “taxpayers” in their tax returns. And while the law provides a means for a “taxpayer” to challenge
33    these notices, the burden is on the “taxpayer” to correctly respond to the notice in a timely fashion, craft a response
34    sufficient to apprise the IRS of the objection and prosecute the objection through the system while carrying the burden of 35    proving not only that the IRS’ determination is incorrect, but what the correct determination should be.

36    The unfortunate reality is that the vast majority of citizens embroiled with the IRS do not understand their rights or legal 37    remedies under the Internal Revenue Code. As such, people fail to realize that they are in fact “prosecutors” when it comes 38    to correcting errant IRS action. That is to say, the citizen must instigate appeal actions, both administrative and judicial, in 39    order to challenge a tax audit determination. The citizen must instigate proper challenges to collection actions in order to 40    prevent the loss of property in the collection process. The citizen must instigate administrative or judicial challenges to the 41    IRS’ investigative powers in the hope of maintaining any right of privacy. In the context of all such challenges (with rare 42    and narrow exceptions), the citizen must carry the burden of proving IRS error, with respect to both the law and facts of the 43    case.

44    The extensive focus on the burden of proof issue led Congress to enact code section 7491 as part of the Internal Revenue
45    Restructuring and Reform Act of 1998. This provision received much attention because it purports to shift the burden of

1 proof to the IRS, thereby curing the problems set forth above. On careful inspection, however, it can be said that that law
2 cannot possibly attain that goal. Section 7491(a)(1) states as follows:

3 If, in any court proceeding, a taxpayer introduces credible evidence with respect to any factual issue relevant to
4 ascertaining the liability of the taxpayer for any tax imposed by subtitle A or B, the Secretary shall have the
5 burden of proof with respect to such issue.

6 The statute indeed purports to shift the burden to the IRS but only if the citizen first “introduces credible evidence”
7 concerning the issue. In other words, the citizen bears the burden of proof necessary to shift the burden of proof. What
8 constitutes “credible evidence” is undefined by statute and promises to be the subject of ongoing litigation. Thus, the 9 “taxpayer” retains the duty to present initial evidence to show the IRS is wrong with regard to a “factual issue.”

10 Even if he is successful in this first task, the burden shifts only in “any court proceeding.” The fact is, 97 percent of all IRS
11 actions are carried out, not in a judicial context, but rather, in the administrative context. For example, virtually all penalty
12 assessments and computer tax assessments are administrative in nature. The initial determination of tax liability by the IRS
13 is administrative in nature. Likewise, the vast majority of IRS’ collection actions are administrative in nature. And while 14 some courts have limited jurisdiction to review collection actions, the taxpayer must instigate the review. Moreover, as the 15 statute declares, the taxpayer bears the initial burden to introduce “credible evidence” with regard to the “factual issues.”

16 In the larger sense, as examined in more detail later in this report, federal laws expressly prohibit the courts from taking 17 jurisdiction over the IRS in collection cases. This is because of the Anti-Injunction Act, 26 U.S.C. §7421. It expressly 18 denies jurisdiction to the federal courts to enjoin or restrain the ascertainment, computation, assessment or collection of any 19 internal revenue tax.

20 Moreover, subsection (a)(2)(A) of code section 7491 places two serious limitations on the supposed shift. The first is that
21 the “taxpayer” must have “complied with the requirements under this title to substantiate any item.” This language vitiates
22 all the foregoing language to the extent that such could have been read to shift the burden to the IRS. In countless places in 23 the tax code, the law places the burden on the “taxpayer” to “substantiate” a given claim. The substantiation requirement is 24 in practical effect, a burden of proof. Without providing evidence to support one’s claim under a particular code section, he 25 has failed to “substantiate” his entitlement to the relief or benefit provided by that section.

26 Consider further the language of subsection (a)(2)(B). It provides that the burden shifts only if “the taxpayer has maintained
27 all records required under this title and has cooperated with the reasonable requests of the Secretary for witnesses,
28 information, documents and interviews.” The terms “reasonable requests” and “cooperated” are undefined. The practical
29 effect of this is for the IRS to assert a laundry list of demands for documents, evidence, exhibits, witnesses, etc., and for the 30 IRS to allege “lack of cooperation” in order to prevent the burden from shifting.<sup>68</sup>

31 This is standard procedure for the IRS and is precisely what happened in the U.S. Tax Court case of Higbee v.
32 Commissioner, the first case in which the Tax Court addressed the new burden of proof statute. Higbee asserted that the 33 burden shifted to the IRS under the new law. IRS argued that because Higbee “failed to meet the requirements of code
34 section 7491(a)(1) and (2),” the taxpayer and not the IRS should retain the burden of proof. As to each of the three issues
35 presented by Higbee, the court ruled against Higbee, claiming:

36 Again, we reiterate that petitioners have failed to provide this Court with credible evidence for us to allow
37 petitioners’ claims with respect to the disallowed deductions. We therefore reject all of petitioners’ contentions
38 as to these issues.<sup>210</sup>

39 In the final analysis, the burden of proof was in no way shifted to the IRS. Two other Restructuring Act amendments are 40 claimed to positively impact the burden of proof for citizens. The first is code section 6751. The second is section 7491(c).
41 Subsection 6751(a) states that with respect to an assessment:

42 The Secretary shall include with each notice of penalty under this title information with respect to the name of 43 the penalty, the section of this title under which the penalty is imposed, and a computation of the penalty.

44 Code section 7491(c) provides that the “burden of production” is upon the IRS with respect to any penalty assessment that 45 is the subject of a court proceeding.

1 Neither the language of code section 6751 nor section 7491(c) operates to shift the burden of proof to the IRS. Section 6751
2 is merely a notification provision. It says nothing whatsoever regarding a burden of proof.

3 The impact of section 7491(c) is clearly addressed by the Higbee Court. Analyzing the statute and the legislative history,
4 Higbee concludes:

5 Congress' use of the phrase "burden of production" and not the more general phrase "burden of proof" as
6 used in section 7491(a) [discussed in detail above] indicates to us that Congress did not desire that the burden
7 of proof be placed upon the Commissioner with regard to penalties.<sup>211</sup>

8 In the overall scheme of the tax code, these laws do little to place the burden of proof upon the shoulders of the IRS. In 9 sum, both the IRS and "taxpayers" rest in essentially the same position now as they did before these provisions were 10 enacted.

11 If the reader of this section didn't know the subtle meaning of the term "taxpayer" and that there is no liability statute under 12 Subtitle A, then this section, without the warnings we placed here, could easily discourage anyone into thinking that the 13 Constitution is being violated because of the "burden of proof" games described. To the extent that the laws are applied as 14 described only within the federal zone, that would be an erroneous conclusion because that area, for the most part, isn't
15 covered by the Bill of Rights as we describe repeatedly. However, to the extent that the rules in this section for burden of 16 proof are applied outside of the federal zone and inside the 50 Union states, it would be valid to conclude that the 17 constitution is indeed being violated. We must always remember that Subtitle A income taxes, however, can only be made
18 mandatory to persons domiciled in the federal zone or working in the government, wherever located. For everyone else,
19 it's not a tax, but a donation!

20 5.10.8 Purpose of Vague Laws is to Chain you to IRS Control<sup>212</sup>

21 Vague laws are deliberately passed by Congress to aid governmental agencies to control natural persons through
22 administrative process. Forcing the making and delivery of the "U.S. Individual Income Tax Returns" based on false belief
23 occurs because of such laws. It is the duty of the judge to prevent the use of vague laws as a vehicle to deprive persons of 24 their rights or their property. It is also the function of the court to see that separation of powers exists so justice is served.

25 The system to serve justice in this country is adversarial. This means that lawyers in the private sector must attack
26 vagueness in the law. Justice Department lawyers are also duty bound not to misuse any law, vague ones notwithstanding.
27 If they do, judges must admonish and not permit any lawyer to proceed if he or she does not vigorously take exception to 28 the vague law.

29 It will be argued that the accused must shoulder the responsibility if he hires an ineffective lawyer (one who refuses to be 30 an advocate) because he exercised his free choice in selecting that attorney. In other words, one has the right to prejudice
31 himself by his selection of an attorney. But, the duty of a judge is to see that justice prevails and overrides such a prejudice.
32 Currently, however, free choice in legal counsel is not readily available to the average American because attorneys are not
33 trained to take exception to vague laws.

34 Justice is not a person, but a condition. It is the duty of the judge to recognize and stop the use of the courtroom before
35 injustice occurs. Injustice does not occur when the burden to prove innocence has been forced upon the accused by the 36 vagueness of a law which prevents the accused from implementing any possible defense.

37 There is intent to commit injustice in the courtroom when a U.S. Justice Department lawyer uses vague laws to control the 38 person accused in what is deemed a prosecution. Injustice also manifests itself when the lawyer for the accused cooperates
39 with the Justice Department by not defending against a prosecution under a vague law. If the U.S. judge permits such 40 conduct to occur, the rights of the accused are not protected by the court and justice is not served. Only the Justice
41 Department and the lawyer in the private sector are served. What results is malicious prosecution—an action in a 42 courtroom that is not a fair trial but a trial by ordeal.

1 Finding a lawyer who will defend a client and not merely represent him is very difficult. The client must literally know the
 2 law himself and dictate to the lawyer what he wants done. The matter of time becomes a factor since one does get a speedy
 3 trial. The matter of cost becomes a factor since the old saying "money talks" seems to apply in the courtroom. There is 4 also a matter of understanding what to look for in a lawyer.

5 The Sixth Amendment to the U.S. Constitution guarantees certain rights to the accused. It says:

6 "In all criminal prosecutions, the accused shall...be informed of the nature and cause of the accusation; ... and 7 to have the assistance of counsel for his defense."

8 One is not informed of the nature and cause of a criminal accusation, or of the requirements on a civil basis, when he is 9 accused or confronted in either a criminal or civil situation under laws that are vague. Proper notice is not available.
 10 Further, in any situation where the assistance of counsel for his defense is required, the U.S. Constitution guarantees that
 11 one shall have counsel who is concerned with defending your life, liberty, and property, not one who is partial to vague
 12 laws which lead to malicious prosecution in order to enhance the counsel's livelihood. When such attorneys do not attempt 13 to destroy vague laws, they violate the Sixth Amendment rights of the accused and make a record of their ineffectiveness.
 14 The end result is to unduly convict a person. This violates the Sixth, Eighth and Thirteenth Amendments of the U.S.
 15 Constitution.

16 The burden to provide an adversarial process is upon the lawyer in the private sector, and the judge should demand that it
 17 exist in the U.S. courtroom.<sup>213</sup> In the process of serving justice, a U.S. judge must be ever diligent with regard to vague
 18 laws so as not to impair the rights of the accused. This is the duty of the court, not the duty of the accused. When vague
 19 laws are used, the accused is forced to defend against an unfair system and not against a violation of the law.

20 A U.S. judge actually cooperates in seeing that injustice is perpetuated in his or her courtroom when vague laws are 21 permitted to be used for the purpose of enforcing the intentions of a government agency. In this process, the person and his
 22 rights are controlled to his prejudice. Such conduct impairs the integrity of the court and raises the question of whether or 23 not the Federal Government employees involved are in contempt of the court as well as being involved in concealment of 24 violations of due process of law.

25 The vague laws of the I.R. Code are intended to control property of the general public that is not authorized under law.
 26 Competent attorneys would attempt to destroy these vague laws.

27 The story of the alleged conviction of Frank Kowalik described in his book IRS Humbug: Weapons of Enslavement, Frank
 28 Kowalik, ISBN 0-9626552-0-1, 1991 reveals how lawyers cooperated to send him to prison, and how vague law made it
 29 possible. In place of an adversarial process, it was a malicious prosecution with intent to force him to cooperate with the 30 lawyers and the IRS, and return him to a condition of peonage and slavery.

31 Vague laws along with lawyers cooperating with one another make the use of the U.S. courtroom for undue convictions
 32 possible. Any person targeted by the IRS or other Federal Government agency can be unduly punished for doing what he 33 or she has the right to do under the law, simply because vague laws make possible a violation of his rights and liberties and
 34 are used to create a false appearance of government jurisdiction where none actually exists.

35 5.10.9 Why the "Void for Vagueness Doctrine" Should be Invoked By The Courts to Render the Internal Revenue 36 Code Unconstitutional in Total

37 "Fundamental fairness requires that a person cannot be sent to jail for a crime he could not with reasonable
 38 certainty know he was committing; reasonable certainty in that respect is all the more essential when vagueness
 39 might induce individuals to forgo their rights of speech, press, and association for fear of violating an unclear
 40 law."

41 [Scull v. Commonwealth of Virginia, 359 U.S. 344, 79 S.Ct. 838, 3 L.Ed.2d. 865 (1959)]

42 As we stated clearly earlier in section 3.20.1 entitled "Uncertainty of the Federal Tax Laws", it is quite evident that there is
 43 a lot of disagreement and a complete lack of consistency (or "stare decisis", or adherence to precedent) about how to
 44 interpret and apply the Internal Revenue Code at every level of the federal judiciary, including the Federal District and

1 Appellate Courts as well as the U.S. Supreme Court, not to mention the state courts. This ought to be more than ample
2 evidence that the IRC lacks clarity.

3 We would argue that the Internal Revenue Code is deliberately vague, because if the code told the complete truth
4 clearly, then citizens of the 50 Union states with income from the 50 Union states would not pay direct income taxes and
5 could successfully use as their justification Article I, Section 9, clause 4 of the U.S. Constitution., which is still in force
6 and was not changed by the Sixteenth Amendment.

7 The most effective way to discover where the truth is being hidden by the greedy lawyer-conspirators in Congress is to look
8 in the Internal Revenue Code for either undefined terms or for terms, confusing definitions, or particular parts of the code
9 over which the most litigation has occurred. Most of the controversy and illegal taxation would end if Congress would
10 accurately define the following terms. Note that we have included the proper definition for each of these terms:

11 “employee”: This term means an elected or appointed officer of the federal United States government in receipt of excise
12 taxable privileges.

13 “source”: This term defines the geographical or territorial boundaries that this Title shall apply to.

14 “State” and “States”: Within this Title, the term State refers to a federal possession or territory, to include Guam, Puerto
15 Rico, American Samoa, etc. State DOES NOT include the 50 states of the Union, but does apply to federal 16 possessions and facilities within those states. Note that the District of Columbia is not a “State”, but instead is 17 described in Title 4 as the seat of government.

18 “United States”: The term “United States” is defined as any federal territory or land over which the federal government
19 has exclusive control and jurisdiction, including District of Columbia, Guam, Puerto Rico, and federal reservations
20 within the 50 states of the Union. It does NOT include the 50 States of the Union. The term “federal zone” shall 21 also be synonymous with the term “United States” as used in this title.

22 “foreign income”: Income from outside of the “United States” or the “federal zone”. Income from within one of the 50
23 Union states is counted as foreign income.

24 Do you think there might be a conflict of interest by the lawyers in Congress who write the laws to not define these terms 25 accurately because:

- 26 1. They would destroy income taxes on individuals and make the country financially insolvent.
- 27 2. They would undermine their livelihood after they left Congress, because they 28 are only in office temporarily. Remember that lawyers make most of their money litigating, or fighting in court. If the 29 tax code was clear, litigation over taxes would end, and they would be without jobs because there would be no more
30 people victimized by an unjust or obfuscated tax system. The law would be so clear that we wouldn't need to hire
31 lawyers to act as “high priests” to interpret the confusing laws for us.

32 For these and many other reasons, conflict of interest on the part of the U.S. Congress and the legal profession in general
33 (American Bar Association, or ABA) to keep the tax system the way it is will guarantee that the system will never improve
34 until the citizens relentlessly apply heat to their representatives to fix things and speak with one very clear voice on the
35 issue. That is why we wrote this book: to make the issues sufficiently clear that we can all speak with one loud and 36 unanimous voice to the IRS and Congress, and all simultaneously use the same processes in dealing with both of them.

37 The vagueness of the IRC, in turn, represents a violation of our due process protections guaranteed by the Sixth
38 Amendment and described in section 3.11.8.4 entitled “6th Amendment: Rights of Accused in Criminal Prosecutions”. We 39 will demonstrate how this is the case in this section.

40 There is a concept called the “void for vagueness” doctrine that was advocated by the U.S. Supreme Court. This doctrine is 41 deeply rooted in our right to due process (under the Fifth Amendment) and our right to know the nature and cause of any 42 criminal accusation (under the Sixth Amendment). The latter right goes far beyond the contents of any criminal indictment.
43 The right to know the nature and cause of any accusation starts with the statute which a defendant is accused of violating.
44 A statute must be sufficiently specific and unambiguous in all its terms, in order to define and give adequate notice of the 45 kind of conduct which it forbids.

The essential purpose of the "void for vagueness doctrine" with respect to interpretation of a criminal statute, is to warn individuals of the criminal consequences of their conduct. ... Criminal statutes which fail to give due notice that an act has been made criminal before it is done are unconstitutional deprivations of due process of law.
 [U.S. v. De Cadena, 105 F.Supp. 202, 204 (1952), emphasis added]

If it fails to indicate with reasonable certainty just what conduct the legislature prohibits, a statute is necessarily void for uncertainty, or "void for vagueness" as the doctrine is called. In the De Cadena case, the U.S. District Court listed a number of excellent authorities for the origin of this doctrine (see Lanzetta v. New Jersey, 306 U.S. 451) and for the development of the doctrine (see Screws v. United States, 325 U.S. 91, Williams v. United States, 341 U.S. 97, and Jordan v. De George, 341 U.S. 223). Any prosecution which is based upon a vague statute must fail, together with the statute itself. A vague criminal statute is unconstitutional for violating the 5th and 6th Amendments. The U.S. Supreme Court has emphatically agreed:

"That the terms of a penal statute creating a new offense must be sufficiently explicit to inform those who are subject to it what conduct on their part will render them liable to its penalties is a well-recognized requirement, consonant alike with ordinary notions of fair play and the settled rules of law; and a statute which either forbids or requires the doing of an act in terms so vague that men of common intelligence must necessarily guess at its meaning and differ as to its application violates the first essential of due process of law."
 [Connally et al. v. General Construction Co., 269 U.S. 385, 391 (1926), emphasis added]

The debate that is currently raging over the correct scope and proper application of the IRC is obvious, empirical proof that men of common intelligence are differing with each other. Section 3.20.1 on "Uncertainty of the Federal Tax Laws" is proof of the extent of the conflicts in interpreting the Internal Revenue Code by the federal appellate courts. For example, some people advocate definitions of "includes" and "including" which are expansive, not restrictive. The matter could be easily decided if the IRC would instead exhibit sound principles of statutory construction, state clearly and directly that "includes" and "including" are meant to be used in the expansive sense, and itemize those specific persons, places, and/or things that are "otherwise within the meaning of the terms defined". If the terms "includes" and "including" must be used in the restrictive sense, the IRC should explain, clearly and directly, that expressions like "includes only" and "including only" must be used, to eliminate vagueness completely. Instead, they currently define the term "includes" and "including" using the expansive sense and then contradict their own definition in IRC section 61 by adding the phrase "(but not limited to)".

Alternatively, the IRC could exhibit sound principles of statutory construction by explaining clearly and directly that "includes" and "including" are always meant to be used in the restrictive sense.

Better yet, abandon the word "include" entirely, together with all of its grammatical variations, and use instead the word "means" (which does not suffer from a long history of semantic confusion). It would also help a lot if the 50 Union states were consistently capitalized and the federal states were not. The reverse of this convention can be observed in the regulations for Title 31 (see 31 C.F.R. Sections 51.2 and 52.2). Section 2.9 of the Sovereignty Forms and Instructions Manual, Form #10.005 entitled "What would it take for the IRS and the U.S. Congress to 'come clean'" talks about how to rewrite the tax code in Title 26 of the U.S.C. in s.

These, again, are excellent grounds for deciding that the IRC is vague and therefore null and void. Of course, if the real intent is to unconstitutionally expand federal jurisdiction in order to subjugate the 50 Union states under the dominion of federal government (defined along something like ZIP code boundaries a la the Buck Act, codified in Title 4), and to replace the sovereign Republics with a monolithic totalitarian socialist dictatorship, carved up into arbitrary administrative "districts", that is another problem altogether. Believe it or not, the case law which has interpreted the Buck Act admits to the existence of a "State within a state"! So, which State within a state are you in? Or should we be asking this question: "In the State within which state are you?" (Remember: a preposition is a word you should never end a sentence with!)

The absurd results which obtain from expanding the term "State" to mean the 50 Union states, however, are problems which will not go away, no matter how much we clarify the definitions of "includes" and "including" in the IRC. There are 49 other U.S. Codes which have the exact same problem. Moreover, the mountain of material evidence impugning the ratification of the so-called 16th Amendment should leave no doubt in anybody's mind that Congress must still apportion all direct taxes levied inside the sovereign borders of the 50 Union states. The apportionment restrictions have never been repealed.

Likewise, Congress is not empowered to delegate unilateral authority to the President to subdivide or to join any of the 50 Union states. There are many other constitutional violations which result from expanding the term "State" to mean the 50

1 States of the Union. In this context, the mandates and prohibitions found in the Bill of Rights are immediately obvious,
2 particularly as they apply to Union state Citizens (as distinct from United States** citizens a/k/a federal citizens).
3 Clarifying the definitions of "includes" and "including" in the IRC is one thing; clarifying the exact extent of sovereign
4 jurisdiction is quite another. Congress is just not sovereign within the borders of the 50 Union states.

5 Sorry, all you Senators and Representatives. When you took office, you did not take an oath to uphold and defend the Ten
6 Commandments. You did not take an oath to uphold and defend the Uniform Commercial Code. You did not take an oath
7 to uphold and defend the Communist Manifesto, Karl Marx. You did take an oath to uphold and defend the Constitution
8 for the United States of America.

9 It should be obvious, at this point, that capable authors do agree that the 50 Union states do not belong in the standard
10 definition of "State" found in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(10) of the IRC because they are in a class that is different from the class
11 known as federal states. Within the borders of the 50 Union states, the "geographical" extent of exclusive federal 12 jurisdiction is strictly confined to the federal enclaves; this extent does not encompass the 50 Union states themselves. See 13 40 U.S.C. §3112, which clearly shows that the jurisdiction of the federal courts only extend onto federal property.

14 This ruling was significant, because it divides the United States of America into what we call the "federal zone", which
15 includes the District of Columbia, U.S. Possessions, and Territories on the one hand, and the 50 Union states on the other
16 hand. This issue is very important and explains the definitions of "State" and "United States" found in sections 3.12.1.19
17 and 3.12.1.23 respectively.

18 We cannot blame the average American for failing to appreciate this subtlety. However, we can blame all of the federal 19 courts for failing to resolve these controversies to the benefit of the Citizen, as the U.S. Supreme Court has clearly said they 20 are obligated to do in the following case:

21 "Keeping in mind the well-settled rule that the citizen is exempt from taxation unless the same is imposed by
22 clear and unequivocal language, and that where the construction of a tax law is doubtful, the doubt is to be
23 resolved in favor of those upon whom the tax is sought to be laid."
24 [Spreckels Sugar Refining Co. v. McClain, 192 U.S. 397 (1904)]

25 The confusion that results from the vagueness we observe is inherent in the Code and evidently intentional, which raises
26 some very serious questions concerning the real intent of that Code in the first place. Could money have anything to do
27 with it? That question answers itself. An even more interesting question was raised by one of our readers, who wrote:

28 Family Guardian,

29 Greetings... The more that I mull this issue over, the more that I believe that the weak point of the tax laws are 30 that they do not meet nor surpass the "Void for Vagueness" criteria. If it is up to the individual to determine
31 their liability then, to ascertain that they must, at the very least, read and understand all of title 26. If they do
32 not then they cannot sign certifying that they are in compliance and that they are legally liable. If this is 33 actually the burden placed upon the American public then I believe that this should be the focus or at least one
34 of the main focuses of the issues and questions raised with the government and the Congress.

35 Regards,

37 In the meantime, the IRC should have been thrown out by the courts long ago because it violates the Sixth Amendment by
38 not being sufficiently specific as to clearly define who specifically is liable for paying federal income tax. But if the courts
39 did this, then judges would have to shut off what they think is the source of their paycheck, and you know that kind of 40 honesty and integrity is nowhere to be found in our corrupt government, much less anywhere in the legal profession.

41 5.11 Other Clues and Hints At the Correct Application of the IRC

42 There are numerous other bits of information that hint at the correct application of the law, a few of which are included here
43 as supporting evidence.

44 5.11.1 On the Record

As the Supreme Court and the Secretary of the Treasury have repeatedly stated, the federal income tax is (and has always been) an indirect excise tax. Excises, generally speaking, are taxes imposed on certain activities or privileges. In light of this, there are some interesting comments in the Congressional Record from March 27, 1943, p. 2580. A statement is included by a “Mr. F. Morse Hubbard, formerly of the legislative drafting research fund of Columbia University, and a former legislative draftsman in the Treasury Department” (clearly someone whose job would require a comprehensive understanding of the proper application of the law). His comments include the following:

“The income tax is, therefore, not a tax on income as such. It is an excise tax with respect to certain activities and privileges which is measured by reference to the income which they produce. The income is not the subject of the tax: it is the basis for determining the amount of the tax.”

The income tax is imposed on “income from whatever source derived” (minus deductions). The mere receipt of income, by itself, is not (and could not be) the subject of this excise tax. It is the “source” which is the subject of the tax, and the amount of income received from that “source” is what is used to determine the amount of tax due. All “sources” are taxable activities and as we explained earlier in section 5.6.11 earlier, there are only two taxable activities under Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A: 1. Foreign commerce; 2. Public office in the United States Government. The above citations coincide well with the fact that the section of regulations for determining taxable income (26 C.F.R. §1.861-8) states that it applies only to income “from specific sources and activities.” And the statutes and regulations under the part which “determine[s] the sources of income for purposes of the income tax” all apply only to these same “specific sources and activities,” which are all related to international or foreign commerce.

5.11.2 Section 306

Section 306 of the statutes deals with individuals receiving income from selling certain stocks. After dealing with the income itself, the section discusses the “source” of income.

“Sec. 306. Dispositions of certain stock

(1) Dispositions other than redemptions -

If such disposition is not a redemption...

(f) Source of gain - The amount treated under subsection (a)(1)(A) as ordinary income shall, for purposes of part I of subchapter N (sec. 861 and following, relating to determination of sources of income), be treated as derived from the same source as would have been the source if money had been received from the corporation as a dividend at the time of the distribution of such stock. If under the preceding sentence such amount is determined to be derived from sources within the United States, such amount shall be considered to be fixed or determinable annual or periodical gains, profits, and income within the meaning of section 871(a) or section 881(a), as the case may be.”

[26 U.S.C. §306(f)]

The section states that if the income comes from “sources within the United States,” then it constitutes “gains, profits, and income” under Section 871(a) or 881(a). Sections 871 and 881 deal exclusively with nonresident aliens and foreign corporations, respectively (both are found in Part II of Subchapter N, “Nonresident aliens and foreign corporations”). The wording of Section 306 implies that if the income in question comes from “*sources within the United States***,” then it must apply to one of these sections. If a statutory “U.S. citizen” domiciled in the United States** (the federal zone) receives the type of income dealt with in Section 306, and believes it constitutes “income from sources within the United States,” halfway through the last sentence the reader is left in limbo. The sentence structure is “if A, then B.” Using the usual overly-broad interpretation of the Code, if a citizen receives income from the type of stock mentioned from “sources within the United States,” then that income “shall be considered to be” taxable for nonresident aliens or foreign corporations. A contradiction exists, unless one realizes that the term “sources of income” has a restricted meaning, which in this case would apply only to foreigners.

5.11.3 Strange Links

In various sections of the statutes, Section 911 is referenced where it does not seem to fit in (if one accepts the common, overly-broad interpretation of the Code). One example exists in Section 1 itself (the section imposing the income tax on individuals). Subsection (g) of Section 1 deals with certain income of children being treated as income of that child’s parents, and shows that the term “earned income” is defined in 26 U.S.C. §911(d)(2).

1                   “(g) Certain unearned income of minor children taxed as if parent's income...
 2                   (4) Net unearned income
 3                   For purposes of this subsection--
 4                   (A) In general
 5                   The term “net unearned income” means the excess of--
 6                   (i) the portion of the adjusted gross income for the taxable year which is not attributable to earned
 7                   income (as defined in section 911(d)(2))...”
 8                   [26 U.S.C. §1(g)]

9                   This section (26 U.S.C. §1(g)) is referred to later in Section 59(j), and Section 911(d)(2) is again mentioned as the section
 10                   which defines “earned income.” Other sections, such as 26 U.S.C. § 66(d) and 26 U.S.C. § 469(e), also refer to Section
 11                   911(d)(2) for the definition of “earned income.” There is nothing peculiar about the definition in 26 U.S.C. §911(d)(2)
 12                   itself, which states:

13                   “(d) Definitions and special rules
 14                   For purposes of this section--
 15                   (2) Earned income
 16                   (A) In general
 17                   The term “earned income” means wages, salaries, or professional fees, and other amounts received as 18                   compensation for personal services actually rendered, but does not include...”
 19                   [26 U.S.C. §911(d)]

20                   What is interesting is the location of the definition:

21                   Subchapter N -- Tax based on income from sources within or without the United States
 22                   Part III -- Income from sources without the United States
 23                   Subpart B -- Earned income of citizens or residents of United States
 24                   Sec. 911. Citizens or residents of the United States living abroad

25                   While it is true that the location of such a definition does not legally change the meaning of the definition, it is still 26                   somewhat telling that the definition is found in Subchapter N, rather than in Subchapters A and B (which impose the tax,
 27                   and define “gross income” and “taxable income”). It is also telling that the definition itself (even though the definition is 28                   also “borrowed” by other sections) says that the definition is “for purposes of this section,” meaning Section 911, which 29                   deals exclusively with the “foreign earned income” of United States citizens.

30                   Another strange connection occurs in the section regarding “community income,” which comes shortly after Section 63
 31                   defining “taxable income.”

32                   “Sec. 66. Treatment of community income
 33                   (a) Treatment of community income where spouses live apart
 34                   If- (1) 2 individuals are married to each other...;
 35                   (2) such individuals-- (A) live apart... (B) do not file a joint return...;
 36                   (3) one or both of such individuals have earned income for the calendar year which is community income;
 37                   and
 38                   (4) no portion of such earned income is transferred (directly or indirectly) between such individuals before
 39                   the close of the calendar year,
 40                   then, for purposes of this title, any community income of such individuals for the calendar year shall be 41                   treated in accordance with the rules provided by section 879(a).”
 42                   [26 U.S.C. §66]

43                   Note that this is giving the rules applicable to all of Title 26 regarding “community income.” But the section it refers to for 44                   such rules reads:

45                   “Sec. 879. Tax treatment of certain community income in the case of nonresident alien individuals
 46                   (a) General rule - In the case of a married couple 1 or both of whom are nonresident alien individuals and 47                   who have community income for the taxable year, such community income shall be treated as follows:...”
 48                   [26 U.S.C. §879(a)]

49                   The text here specifically states that it applies only where one or both are nonresident aliens. To use the same rules for two
 50                   citizens of the United States, Section 66 would have to say something similar to “shall be treated in accordance with the 51                   rules provided by 879(a) regarding nonresident aliens, notwithstanding the fact that the individuals may be citizens or 52                   residents of the United States.” But it says no such thing, implying that “community income” applies only if at least one
 53                   partner is a nonresident alien.

5.11.4 Following Instructions

Form 1040 is divided into several categories, such as personal information, “Filing Status,” “Exemptions,” “Income,” etc. In the instruction booklet for that form, there is a section that gives line-by-line instructions. The general category of “Income” begins:

“Foreign-Source Income

You must report unearned income, such as interest, dividends, and pensions, from sources outside the United States unless exempt by law or a tax treaty. You must also report earned income, such as wages and tips, from sources outside the United States.

If you worked abroad, you may be able to exclude part or all of your earned income. For details, see Pub. 54, Tax Guide for U.S. Citizens and Resident Aliens Abroad, and Form 2555, Foreign Earned Income, or Form 2555-EZ, Foreign Earned Income Exclusion.

Community Property States... *

Rounding Off to Whole Dollars... ”

[1996 Instruction Booklet for Form 1040]

That is all it has to say about the general subject of income. The booklet then tells where the listed “items” (interest, dividends, wages, etc.) should be entered on Form 1040. While there is a statement specifically saying that “you must report” these items if from sources outside the United States** (the federal zone), there is no statement that these items must be reported if they come from within the United States** (the federal zone).

This admission in the booklet is very easy for most readers to simply disregard as irrelevant to them. If there was the need to say that foreign-source income must be reported, why was there no need to say that any other income must be reported? Why did the statement not say that foreign source income “as well as domestic income” must be reported? One is left free to make the incorrect assumption that all income must be reported, when this is not the case.

A similar situation exists with IRS Publication 525, “Taxable and Nontaxable Income.” The first thing this publication says concerning taxes, which appears on the cover, is:

“Important Reminder

Foreign Source Income

If you are a U.S. citizen, you must report income from sources outside the United States (foreign income) on your tax return unless it is exempt by U.S. law.”

Then, in the introduction (which follows the above “reminder”), the publication states that the publication “discusses many kinds of income and explains whether they are taxable or nontaxable.” Other than the “foreign source income” reminder, the publication deals only with “items” of income, not “sources.” Again, one is left free to assume that income from within the United States** (the federal zone) is taxable to U.S. citizens, but it is not stated.

5.11.5 Treasury Decision 2313

The Supreme Court’s decision in the Brushaber case in 1916 (240 U.S. 1) is often cited by the IRS as demonstrating that the income tax is Constitutional (which it is, because of its very limited legal application). What the IRS fails to mention, and what is not apparent from looking at the court’s ruling in the case, is that the case concerned income from within the United States** (the federal zone) accruing to a “nonresident alien”, which is subject to the income tax. Treasury Decision 2313 makes this apparent.

“Under the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States in the case of Brushaber v. Union Pacific Railway Co., decided January 24, 1916, it is hereby held that income accruing to nonresident aliens in the form of interest from the bonds and dividends on the stock of domestic corporations is subject to the income tax imposed by the act of October 3, 1913.”
[Treasury Decision 2313]

Note how in this case an “item” of income (interest) is subject to the income tax when paid to nonresident aliens, because that is one of the legal “sources” of taxable income. The decision also states a proper use of Form 1040.

“The responsible heads, agents, or representatives of nonresident aliens, who are in charge of the property owned or business carried on within the United States, shall make a full and complete return of the income therefrom on Form 1040, revised, and shall pay any and all tax, normal and additional, assessed upon the income received by them in behalf of their nonresident alien principals.”
[Treasury Decision 2313]

While this in itself does not prove that Form 1040 should not be used in any other situation, something telling appears later in the decision. Speaking of the responsibility of fiduciaries of domestic entities, it states:

“[W]hen there are two or more beneficiaries, one or all of whom are nonresident aliens, the fiduciary shall render a return on Form 1041, revised, and a personal return on Form 1040, revised, for each nonresident alien beneficiary.”

This both implies that a Form 1041 is not required if there are no nonresident alien beneficiaries (only citizens and residents), as well as implying that a Form 1040 is not to be issued for the citizen and resident beneficiaries.

5.11.6 Other Clues

As mentioned above, the only form ever approved for use with section 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1 of the regulations (under the Paperwork Reduction Act) was Form 2555, “Foreign Earned Income.” In addition, the only form approved by the Office of Management and Budget for 26 C.F.R. §1.861-2 and -3 (which deal with interest and dividends from within the United States) is Form 1040NR, “U.S. Nonresident Alien Income Tax Return.” Similarly, the only form approved under 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8 itself is Form 1120-F, “U.S. Income Tax Return of a Foreign Corporation.”

Below each section of regulations in the C.F.R. there is a citation of the legal authority under which the regulations are made. The statutory authority for 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8 is listed as 26 U.S.C. §7805 (which is the general rule-making authority for the Secretary, as shown in the first citation of this report), as well as 26 U.S.C. §882(c), which reads:

*“Tax on income of foreign corporations connected with United States business...
(c) Allowance of deductions and credits
(1) Allocation of deductions
(A) General rule... the proper apportionment and allocation of the deductions for this purpose shall be determined as provided in regulations prescribed by the Secretary.”*
[26 U.S.C. §882(c)]

This matches the fact that only the income tax return for a foreign corporation has been approved for use with this section of regulations by the OMB. The newer, temporary regulations in 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8T cite no statutory authority, but instead cite Treasury Decision 8228, which states that the authors of the regulation both work in the “Office of the Associated Chief Counsel (International).” The scope of the regulations is identified in the first paragraph of Treasury Decision 8228:

“Summary: This document provides temporary Income Tax Regulations relating to the allocation and apportionment of interest expense and certain other expenses for purposes of the foreign tax credit rules and certain other international tax provisions.”
[Treasury Decision 8228]

So the authorities cited as the legal basis for the regulations for “determining taxable income from sources within the United States” (temporary and final) show that the regulations are about international commerce.

Another legal resource which demonstrates the true applicability of the “income tax” is the annotated index of the United States Code. While there are different versions which vary somewhat in exact wording, under “Income tax, citizens,” only things such as citizens “living abroad” or “about to depart from U.S.” are listed.

Both the indexes and the contents of “Internal Revenue Bulletins” (which contain rulings and decisions by the IRS regarding interpretation of the law) reinforce the conclusions of this report. For example, the 1957-1960 cumulative bulletin has nine listings under “Citizens,” every one of which deals with citizens being outside of the United States** (the federal zone). This same bulletin, under “Income - Source,” has 35 listings, all of which deal with specific issues related to

1 international commerce, with one exception; and that exception again reinforces the significance of Part I of Subchapter N,
2 and the related regulations:

3 "Within and without United States; determination. - Rules are prescribed for determination of gross income
4 and taxable income derived from sources within and without the United States... §§ 1.861-1 through 1.864.
5 (Secs. 861-864; '54 Code) T.D. 6258, C. B. 1957-2, 368."

6 The bulletins show similar patterns year after year, from 1913 (when the basis of the current federal income tax was 7 written) to the present.

8 Another resource which indicates the true nature of the "income tax" is the Internal Revenue Manual, which is the 9 instruction manual for all divisions of the Internal Revenue Service. The Criminal Investigation Division of the IRS is the
10 division which deals with criminal violations of the federal "income tax" laws, including tax evasion and failure to file a
11 return. Section 1132.55 of the Internal Revenue Manual (entitled "Criminal Investigation Division") begins as follows:

12 "The Criminal Investigation Division enforces the criminal statutes applicable to income, estate, gift,
13 employment, and excise tax laws... involving United States citizens residing in foreign countries and 14 nonresident aliens subject to Federal income tax filing requirements..."
15 [Internal Revenue Manual (I.R.M.), Section 1132.55 (1991 Ed.)]

16 Similarly, the federal regulations found in 26 C.F.R. §601.101(a) describe in general the functions of the Internal Revenue
17 Service. The only specific mention in these regulations of who or what is subject to taxes administered by the Internal 18 Revenue Service reads as follows:

19 "The Director, Foreign Operations District, administers the internal revenue laws applicable to taxpayers
20 residing or doing business abroad, foreign taxpayers deriving income from sources within the United States,
21 and taxpayers who are required to withhold tax on certain payments to nonresident aliens and foreign 22 corporations..."
23 [26 C.F.R. §601.101(a)]

24 In keeping with the deceptive structure used throughout the statutes and regulations, the reader is left to assume that some 25 other matters are also under IRS jurisdiction, but nothing else is specifically mentioned.

26 5.11.7 5 U.S.C., Section 8422: Deductions of OASDI for Federal Employees

27 Personnel who are employed by the Federal Government and who fall under the Federal Employee Retirement System fall
28 under 5 U.S.C. Section 8422. This law sets forth the requirement to withhold OASDI for such employees. Here is the text
29 of the law (which you can view for yourself at http://uscode.house.gov/title\_05.htm). Please note the section which has a
30 box around it, which was highlighted for emphasis:

(b) Each employee or Member is deemed to consent and agree to the deductions under subsection (a). Notwithstanding any law or regulation affecting the pay of an employee or Member, payment less such deductions is a full and complete discharge and acquittance of all claims and demands for regular services during the period covered by the payment, except the right to any benefits under this subchapter, or under subchapter IV or V of this chapter, based on the service of the employee or Member.

Now isn't that interesting? The tyrants in Washington, D.C. who you elected to office just decided to in effect make contributions to Social Security "a precondition of employment" for federal "employees". They in effect have told federal employees:

We know that if you were out in private industry, you wouldn't need to pay Social Security, so if you want to come to work for us, then you'll have to agree to allow us to take it out of your paycheck. And by the way, when we do, don't count on being able to take us to court for reducing your take home pay and depriving you of your property without due process, because by coming to work for us, you become indentured servants who agree implicitly that they are not being taken advantage of unfairly.

I'll bet the vast majority of federal employees don't even know that they are involuntarily consenting in this way to subsidize a bankrupt system such as Social Security by hiring on with the Federal Government. If contributing to social security were mandatory, do you think they would need a statute like this? Absolutely NOT!

All is not lost, however, because the "employee" they are talking about is that defined in 5 U.S.C. §2105, and does not include ordinary workers, but only public officers.

5.12 How Can I Know When I've Discovered the Truth About Income Taxes?

"Income tax has made more liars out of the American people than golf."

[Will Rogers]

One of the important questions people ask us about the contents of this book goes something like this:

QUESTION: Since there is a big government and legal profession cover-up and I therefore can't get the government or the IRS to even discuss with me or admit the truths that I've discovered about income taxes by virtue of reading this book, then how can I know that my conclusions are correct? The same argument applies to finding a legal coach, because most lawyers enjoy keeping their clients as ignorant as possible since that is how they can extort the most legal fees.

Good question! This is one of the first questions we asked ourselves when we started writing this book because we wanted to make sure everything in it was correct and obtain evidence supporting every aspect of our position right from the government's own mouth. In addition to answering the above question, we also wanted to answer the following even more important questions in the writing of this book, and we believe we have succeeded in answering all the questions posed in this section in this book. The reason for these additional questions is that if we can't answer them, then we don't have the basis for a sound "reliance defense" that we can use in court, should we ever be indicted for a tax crime and want to show the jury that there is no way we could have a "willful" intent to evade a known legal duty:

1. How can we establish a sound basis for understanding our tax liabilities if all the sources available from the government are not trustworthy? What exactly IS a trustworthy source? None of the following are trustworthy sources for a good-faith belief for a person who doesn't reside in the federal zone and isn't a statutory "U.S. citizen" under 8 U.S.C. §1401, so what exactly are the trustworthy sources of good faith belief?:
  - 1.1. The IRS and the federal courts say you can't rely on any of its forms and publications as a basis for belief about liability. See section 3.19 earlier for details on this scam.
  - 1.2. The Internal Revenue Code is not positive law, according to the legislative notes under 1 U.S.C. §204, so you can't rely on it. It is "prima facie evidence" of law, but that simply means it is "presumptive evidence". Anything involving presumption is a violation of due process and it is a sin for Christians to presume anything. Therefore, the I.R.C. is not a sound basis for belief. See section 5.4.2.4 and following earlier for details on this scam.
  - 1.3. All of the legal and accounting professionals who handle tax issues are government-licensed and therefore have a conflict of interest, so you can't trust them. See section 1.11.5 earlier for details on this scam.
  - 1.4. Federal judges who either receive benefits from the income tax, or who pay income taxes and are subject to IRS extortion cannot be objective in ruling on income tax issues. Our original constitutional model called for them to be paid from taxes on imports by people over which they have no jurisdiction to ensure no conflict of interest. Since the advent of unconstitutional federal taxation within the states of the Union by the IRS starting in 1942, the system has been totally corrupt. Therefore, all federal judges who participate in Subtitle A income taxation are biased and have a conflict of interest in violation of 18 U.S.C. §208. See 28 U.S.C. §960 and the following link for details on this scam:
<http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/Forms/Discovery/Deposition/WhyCourtsCantAddressQuestions.htm>
  - 1.5. Juries who try the issue in a federal court are not authorized by law to do so in most cases, because they don't live on federal property and are not statutory "citizens of the United States" (under 8 U.S.C. §1401) as required by 28 U.S.C. §1865. Therefore their findings are a violation of due process and not admissible as evidence of liability.
  - 1.6. The rulings of federal district and circuit courts are irrelevant to people who are "nationals" and "non-resident non-persons" and who do not have a domicile or presence on federal property or within exclusive federal jurisdiction. Only the Supreme Court can rule on Constitutional issues anyway, and there aren't any Supreme Court rulings that contradict the content of this book. Why then should American nationals who are not connected to federal jurisdiction be expected to rely on irrelevant sources of law such as district and circuit courts?
2. How can we explain the irrational and inconsistent behavior of the federal judiciary towards the income tax issue? The constitutionality of the income tax has been continually debated in the federal district and circuit courts since the passage of the Sixteenth Amendment in 1913. These courts have had over 90 years to reach a sound and consistent policy and approach and yet there is still wide variations between the circuit courts on the constitutionality and authority of the federal income tax? The Fourteenth Amendment guarantees us equal protection of the laws, and yet the protection is NOT equal between circuit courts. Why is this? See section 3.20.1 earlier for detailed coverage of this area of "cognitive dissonance" in relation to income taxation.
3. Who are the specific key individuals chiefly responsible throughout history for erecting and maintaining this fraud and usury by our government called income tax? We answer that question in detail in the next chapter and put everything into historical context so you can see exactly how the "scheme" was created and who was responsible for it.

- 1 4. How has the legislative intent of the founding fathers been violated in erecting the fraudulent system of taxation we
2 have now? What elements of the legislative intent have been violated? We answer that question in the next chapter, in
3 section 6.1.
- 4 5. What efforts has the federal judiciary and the legal profession taken to conceal or hide the truth about these issues?
5 What is the detailed history on this subject? We answer this question in the next chapter. We believe that the most
6 reliable source of truth is to observe the things that people hide or avoid, and this tendency is confirmed by John 3:18-
7 21 in the Bible.

8 To get to the answer to your question and the above additional equally important questions, you must take into 9 consideration the following factors:

- 10 1. The IRS doesn't want you to know the truth. They won't respond to or acknowledge any of your good arguments.
11 Usually, they will instead pick the weakest argument that won't stand up in court and assess you with a $500 frivolous
12 return penalty for it using a meaningless form letter that doesn't teach you anything about the truth.
- 13 2. The legal profession doesn't want you to know the truth. That ought to be very clear from reading this chapter and 14 section 6.10 of this book. The legal profession also has a monopoly of influence over all three branches of the federal
15 government, because most of the people at the top are or have been lawyers, so they have a vested interest to preserve
16 and enhance their power by keeping the general populace ignorant.
- 17 3. The courts don't want you to know the truth about income taxes. If they let the truth out, it would destroy the income
18 tax system and eliminate the main source of pay for most federal judges, which amounts to a conflict of interest. Most
19 federal judges probably also think you would destabilize our country economically if they entertained your valid
20 arguments and the truth about income taxes. We know this isn't necessarily the case by reading section 1.10.9, but that
21 is what they think. You can use the data in that section to convince them otherwise. Section 6.9 also clearly
22 documents a judicial conspiracy to protect the income tax and how it is being implemented. Nevertheless, there are 23 therefore strong incentives for judges to nix any and all arguments and to do everything they can to keep you from 24 getting your evidence admitted and in keeping the jury, if there is one, from hearing the truth.
- 25 4. Your Congressman doesn't want you to know the truth. If he let the public hear the truth, he would probably:
26 4.1. Reduce his benefits and fat retirement because of funding shortfalls in the government.
27 4.2. Destroy his chances of being elected President.
28 4.3. See a reduction of his power and influence by virtue of controlling half of your income to be spend on his favorite
29 pet project.

30 If you look through the list above, the one that stands out and which provides the clearest evidence of conspiracy and
31 actually allows you to research the cover-up and expose it is item 3 above: the federal courts. The courts are required to 32 keep everything on the record, so when there is a cover-up, it's easier to spot and document. The key elements of the 33 arguments we raise in this book have to do with the following issues:

- 34 1. No liability statutes in section 5.4.15.
35 2. The 861 source position in section 5.6.10.
36 3. The Non-Resident Non-Person Position in section 5.6.13, which hinges mainly on the definition of "State" and
37 "United States".
38 4. Deceiving definitions found in section 3.12.1.

39 What we are trying to expose is a large-scale federal court cover-up of approaches that are successful in litigating against
40 the income tax in court, so what we are looking for is the absence of discussion about the above subjects in the court
41 records, and the avoidance of publishment of cases that deal with them. When we say "court" here, we don't mean "U.S.
42 Tax Court", because U.S. Tax Court is a Kangaroo court that isn't even a court, which is why we recommend staying away
43 from it! Instead, we mean Article III federal courts at the District and Circuit level, as well as the Supreme Courts. We are 44 also looking for information from persons who have litigated any of these issues where judges have deliberately chosen to
45 not publish their case and have sealed the court record (a violation of the First Amendment, we might add!). For such 46 cases, we then want to go to the particular court where it was tried and request the findings of the court directly, because 47 they would not be published in any electronic case databases we could search.

48 The above tactics describe exactly what we have done and the most convincing evidence we have of the truthfulness of the
49 conclusions in this book is the conspicuous absence in any of the federal case databases of cases dealing with any of the 50 four issues above. We searched over 200 years of case databases for the Supreme Court, Circuit courts, and District courts
51 and found nothing that talks about any of these issues. Certainly, none of the issues we raise in this book are novel or new,

1 and as a person who isn't a lawyer and who wrote this book, we would expect that there would have been at least one
2 lawyer out there smarter than us who had used our arguments, but we found no record of any. The reason is because
3 federal judges won't allow anything about those issues, which are guaranteed to be successful, to end up in any court
4 record, for obvious reasons related to their continued employment and pay and in what appears to be a clear conflict of
5 interest in violation of 28 U.S.C. 455. Section 6.9.7 (an ominous number!) talks about a positive act by a specific federal
6 judge of covering up several cases litigated by William Conklin on issues of the Fifth Amendment relative to the income
7 tax. The case of Lloyd Long found in section 9.2.6 is another example where a person was successful in defeating the 8 income tax in court and which therefore went unpublished by the court. That is why we posted the court's findings for this 9 case on our website at:

10 <http://famguardian.org/Subjects/Taxes/CaseStudies/LloydLong/long1.htm>

11 The case of Loren C. Troescher is another example of someone who was successful against the income tax in federal court
12 and whose judgment went unpublished. We have the judgment posted at:

13 <http://famguardian.org/Subjects/Taxes/CaseStudies/LTroescher/LorenTroescher.htm>

14 We are sure there are other concrete examples of federal court cover-ups like Lloyd Long, William Conklin, and Loren C.
15 Troescher. We therefore welcome your anecdotes, and especially those with specific information about cases you litigated
16 that were unpublished. We would like to get the transcripts from a few such cases to post on our website, so please send us
17 information about your cases, including hearing date(s), case numbers, and the court they were litigated in.

18 One more thing you will discover as you use the knowledge you have learned in this book against the IRS and your state
19 taxing authorities is that as your skills improve and your arguments become clearer and better, the amount of time required
20 for them to respond to your correspondence and income tax filings will go up dramatically. Our first tax refund filing was 21 rejected in less than a couple months when we were still learning and had some flawed ideas. After we fixed all of the 22 misconceptions in our logic, expanded this book considerably, and re-filed during a down season when few people were
23 filing, we have been waiting over six months for a response from the California Franchise Tax Board. Sticking to the main
24 arguments listed above and avoiding spurious arguments or weaker arguments clearly makes it very difficult for the IRS
25 and state taxing authorities to respond to refund requests and zero income tax return filings (no income). Why? Remember
26 that whenever you file a tax refund request or a zero tax return, the IRS and the state taxing authorities like to respond by
27 citing the corrupt federal courts as their justification or precedent, which by the way are irrelevant if you don't reside in the 28 federal zone. They will seldom respond by quoting taxing statutes or regulations to justify their position, because then you
29 can hold them accountable for incorrectly applying the law and they can no longer claim "plausible deniability" as a
30 defense. If you use successful arguments in your tax return filing that the courts have tried to cover up and won't publish,
31 then you leave the IRS and your state taxing authorities with nothing to cite except the law in their response, and the law
32 clearly shows that no one is liable! They are speechless and have no way to respond! For such a case, they will assign
33 your return to some junior lawyer or clerk, who then gets stuck with "high maintenance" returns that no one wants to deal
34 with, and these people are even less equipped to respond, so it takes forever.

35 The failure of the IRS or your state taxing authorities to respond to you is what we call a "Fifth Amendment" response.
36 The Fifth Amendment, by the way, does not apply collectively to organizations like the IRS and only applies to natural
37 persons (people). Therefore, they can't legally use it while representing the IRS, so they instead will just refuse to respond
38 so they can keep you in fear and guessing. Likewise, if you call them on the carpet about assessing penalties against you
39 and they recognize their error and eliminate the penalties or the invalid assessment, then they aren't likely to call you or
40 send a letter letting you know they did this because they would then have to admit they were wrong and who they were, and
41 that would subject them to personal liability. Therefore, if they drop penalties or assessments because you prove them
42 wrong, don't expect any confirmation. If you want to find out who dropped the penalty or assessment and why they did it,
43 you will most often have to call them back and demand information about who did it and why they did it. Or you will have
44 to do a Freedom of Information Act request to get the documents showing what they did, and in some cases, they will
45 redact the identity of the specific agent by blacking out the employee number so he isn't culpable. These people are 46 criminals and weasels and they know it! It is very rare that you will get anything in writing about their mistakes, because 47 then you could use it as evidence to sue them! They will therefore wait for you to call back and ask, and you ought to get it
48 on tape for use as evidence in court. Under such circumstances, get the name and number of the incompetent employee and 49 sue him for malfeasance using the information he provides about himself.

The principles revealed in this section are the Achilles Heel of the government's fraudulent and corrupt tax system and the secret to DESTROYING it. If you stick to good, sound arguments, stay on point, insist on your due process rights, and submit correspondence and returns that are MASSIVE, flawless, and so difficult and time consuming to deal with that they can't automate it and must hand it to an expensive IRS attorney to deal with, then the whole corrupt system will come crashing and burning down just like the statue of Lenin and the Berlin Wall did when communism fell in the Soviet Union! Make no mistake about it: communism and socialism are the SAME evil monsters we are fighting in this country in the case of the income tax, but our fight is a little bit different and mostly on an economic, political, and legal scale rather than by military means. Here is what the U.S. supreme Court said about the communism we are fighting, and these words are very profound:

"... the maxim that the King can do no wrong has no place in our system of government; yet it is also true, in respect to the State itself, that whatever wrong is attempted in its name is imputable to its government and not to the State, for, as it can speak and act only by law, whatever it does say and do must be lawful. That which therefore is unlawful because made so by the supreme law, the Constitution of the United States, is not the word or deed of the State, but is the mere wrong and trespass of those individual persons who falsely spread and act in its name."

"This distinction is essential to the idea of constitutional government. To deny it or blot it out obliterates the line of demarcation that separates constitutional government from absolutism, free self-government based on the sovereignty of the people from that despotism, whether of the one or the many, which enables the agent of the state to declare and decree that he is the state; to say 'L'Etat, c'est moi.' Of what avail are written constitutions, whose bills of right, for the security of individual liberty, have been written too often with the blood of martyrs shed upon the battle-field and the scaffold, if their limitations and restraints upon power may be overpassed with impunity by the very agencies created and appointed to guard, defend, and enforce them; and that, too, with the sacred authority of law, not only compelling obedience, but entitled to respect? And how else can these principles of individual liberty and right be maintained, if, when violated, the judicial tribunals are forbidden to visit penalties upon individual offenders, who are the instruments of wrong, whenever they interpose the shield of the state? The doctrine is not to be tolerated. The whole frame and scheme of the political institutions of this country, state and federal, protest against it. Their continued existence is not compatible with it. It is the doctrine of absolutism, pure, simple, and naked, and of communism which is its twin, the double progeny of the same evil birth."

5.13 How the Government exploits our weaknesses to ILLEGALLY manufacture fraudulent "taxpayers"

The federal government uses a very methodical and sophisticated process to convert sovereign American Nationals into "taxpayers" who are subject to their laws and to illegal IRS extortion. Before you could understand all the nuances of this approach, you had to read nearly this entire chapter, which is why we waited until the end of this chapter to explain it. The process exploits the many human weaknesses and sins we talked about earlier in section 2.8 in order to expand the operation of the income tax to every person in society, including: Deception, presumption, fear, and ignorance.

"Objections to its [the income tax] renewal are long, loud, and general throughout the country. Those who pay are the exception, those who do not pay are millions; the whole moral force of the law is a dead letter. The honest man makes a true return; the dishonest hides and covers all he can to avoid this obnoxious tax. It has no moral force. This tax is unequal, perjury-provoking and crime encouraging, because it is a war with the right of a person to keep private and regulate his business affairs and financial matters. Deception, fraud, and falsehood mark its progress everywhere in the process of collection. It creates curiosity, jealousy, and prejudice among the people. It makes the tax-gatherer a spy...The people demand that it shall not be renewed, but left to die a natural death and pass away into the future as pass away all the evils growing out of the Civil War."

In order to retain and protect your sovereignty as a "nontaxpayer" and a "non-resident non-person" or "state national", you must understand exactly how their "matrix" functions so they won't be able to connect you up to it and so that you can disconnect yourself from it completely if you are already connected. Hence, this section. We have taken the time to break the "Government Matrix" into a detailed sequence of process steps that are employed against the average American so you can see how you progress from a free person to a government serf with no rights or privacy. At each step, we show you:

- 1 1. The event that denigrates or undermines your sovereign status as a “nontaxpayer” and a “non-resident non-person”
- 2 2. How your legal status, or at least your “presumed” status, changes at the conclusion of each significant event.
- 3 3. How the government uses the event to perform the abuse.
- 4 4. The legal authorities and references elsewhere in this book where you can learn more about the technique described in
- 5 the step.
- 6 5. A few things you can do to fight their tactics at each stage.

7 These process steps are summarized below for your benefit. The table shows all the steps for a typical American who is
8 born in a state of the Union, from the time he his born until the time that he reaches full adulthood.

1 Table 5-83: How the federal government manufactures "taxpayers" from Americans born in states of the Union

#	Event	Your status	What the federal government does	Legal reference(s) and evidence	Tactics to counter the government's fraud and coercion
1	Born in any American Hospital	<ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>1. "citizen of the United States" under Section 1 of the Fourteenth Amendment</li> <li>2. "nontaxpayer"</li> <li>3. Not a statutory "U.S. citizen" under 8 U.S.C. §1401</li> <li>4. No SSN if your parents refused to give you a number under the Enumeration at Birth Program of the SSA.</li> </ol>	Social Security Administration "Enumeration at Birth Program" causes hospital to give your child an SSN before his feet even touch the ground. They will pre-assign the number and then tell you that you can't refuse it.	See section 2.8.7.1: Social Security Enumeration at Birth Program	Don't name your baby until AFTER you leave the hospital. Make your own birth certificate using witnesses who were present at the birth. That way the government doesn't know what name to assign to the SSN they will try to force on you.
2	Pre-natal healthcare		If mother gets under Medical or any other state or federal aid, she must provide SSN and must show her tax returns as evidence of income and the fact that she is "paying her fair share" to the welfare worker.	Unofficial agency policy. Their forms will state that you can be denied the benefit if you refuse to disclose.	Get a business name from the county that uses your all caps name. Then apply for several numbers using the business name and an IRS Form W-7 or W-9. After they accept your application, cancel the business and the number.
3	Mother filing income tax forms	<ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>1. A presumed statutory "U.S. citizen" under 8 U.S.C. §1401. Your mother's or father's tax return says so.</li> <li>2. Mother gets an SSN so she can claim you as a dependent.</li> </ol>	IRS says on 1040 form that if you want a deduction for your child, you must claim them as "U.S. citizens" and list their Socialist Security Number. That means 8 U.S.C. §1401 citizens and NOT 14 th Amendment citizens! In fact, there is no law requiring an SSN in order to claim a child as a dependent. It's IRS policy but there is no law.	See the IRS form 1040 at: http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/Forms/IncomeTaxRtn/Federal/IRSForm1040Instr.pdf .	Don't file the 1040 form. It's the WRONG form. If you file anything, it should be the 1040NR, and even then, most people born in states of the Union don't have any taxable income.
4	Your child needs to attend classes at grammar school	<ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>1. Must get an SSN.</li> <li>2. Linked to global federal databases because of SSN.</li> </ol>	The school will demand a Social Security Number form the child or they won't allow them to register for classes.	Unofficial school policy. They won't be able to show you a law that says you have to provide an SSN, but they will effectively discriminate against your child if he doesn't provide one because they will say that their computer system is not equipped to keep track of him without a number. Baloney!	<ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>1. Refuse to provide a number and demand that they show you the law that requires your child to have a number in the first place.;</li> <li>2. Tell them to make up a number and bogus name that no other student has, and then correct the printouts after they are printed. No big deal.</li> <li>3. If worst comes to worst, sue the school for discrimination against your child because he fails to obtain or use the mark of the beast.</li> </ol>

5	Your child reaches his teens and might be working on the side soon	<ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>Child brainwashed to falsely believe that income taxes are required by law.</li> <li>Officially put on notice that they will be government "serfs" when they reach 18 by government goons.</li> </ol>	Public/government school invites the IRS and the American Bar Association in to terrorize teenage students in the public school classroom by warning them that "the law" says they have to pay "taxes" when they get a job. They refuse to answer any questions about the law itself or teach the students about the Constitutional limitations on the taxing power of the government. Likewise, the history teacher never taught the students about the Constitution limits on the government, and since the teacher and the school endorsed the visitors, the class full of teenagers believes them. Anyone else from the outside who insists on being present when the IRS and ABA are there to balance the story is told they aren't welcome, because the government that runs the school wants to "own" and control the sheep. The guests will base their visit on the deceptive IRS publications but will say nothing about the actual law.	See section 1.11.3, where we show an actual announcement by the IRS Tax Practitioner Newsletter showing their school mentorship program.	Remind your child that if a teacher or school attempts this, then you want to know about it. Call your school and find out if they have such a program. Then demand equal time and tell the students the "rest of the story" BEFORE the IRS agent and lawyer show up. They will be booted out. Show them the evidence. Use the materials in the SEDM Freedom University as your curricula: http://sedm.org/FreedomU/FreedomU.htm
5	Your child reaches his/her teens and wants a summer job.	<ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>Fills out a W-4 and submits to private employer. Ends up in IRS databases with his/her name connected to SSN.</li> </ol>	His summer employer, who has been terrorized by the state and federal authorities to obey presumed "law" that in fact doesn't even exist, will be risk averse. He will do everything to transfer all the risks associated with noncompliance to the child by forcing him/her to provide an SSN and fill out an IRS Form W-4 so that he can begin withholding. If he fails to comply, he will be terminated and/or not hired for his summer job. Since kids are a dime a dozen and employers have little patience with them, the kid caves in.	<ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>26 U.S.C. §6109</li> <li>26 C.F.R. §301.6109-1(d)(3)</li> <li>IRS Form W-4</li> <li>Section 5.4.13: You Don't have to provide a Social Security Number on your Tax Return</li> <li>Section 5.4.14: Your Private Employer Isn't Authorized by Law to Act as a Federal "withholding agent"</li> </ol>	Coach the kid on the trick the government will try to pull. Also get the kid off to a good start by marching down to talk with his first employer yourself and make sure he hears and understands every word. Use our booklet "Federal and State Tax Withholding Options for Private Employers" available at: http://famguardian.org/Publications/FedStateWHOptions/FedStateWHOptions.pdf
6	The child receives his first W-2 from his private employer	<ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>IRS assumes they elected or volunteered to become federal serfs and treats SSN as a TIN, even though TINs can only be issued to "aliens" under 26 C.F.R. §301.6109-1(d)(3).</li> <li>Child is now a "taxpayer" because he provided an SSN that IRS will illegally treat as a "TIN" in their system.</li> </ol>	The IRS now has the kid's name in their computer connected with a number. 26 USC 6109 says the only type of number that is mandatory is a TIN, and an SSN is not a TIN. The IRS will try to match the SSN with an existing TIN in their system. When they find no match, they "assume" that the child volunteered to allow the IRS to treat the SSN on the W-2 form as a TIN. They won't tell the child that they made this presumption, but they have to make the presumption in order to collect anything from him or justify keeping the withheld funds. Otherwise, they are in receipt of monies wrongfully paid and must return them.	W-2 Form reports "wages". The only people who earn "wages" under 26 C.F.R. §31.3401(a)-3 are "public officers" of the federal government engaged in a "trade or business" under 26 U.S.C. 7701(a)(26) and 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(f)(1)(iv) who have volunteered to participate in the tax system. Participation is not mandatory.	The child can send to the IRS a form 4852 which zeros out all reported wages and therefore nullifies the false W-2. Make sure to include an attached letter indicating that the SSN/TIN reported by your employer was provided under duress, is wrong, and that the person responsible for the fact that it is wrong is the person instituting the duress, which is the payroll clerk at the private employer.

7	Your child needs to travel with you overseas and needs a passport	<ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>1. Child's/person's name is now connected with an SSN in the Department of State databases, and this information is shared with the IRS.</li> <li>2. If child/person already owes taxes or any kind of child support, the federal government will not issue him a passport or let him leave the country until he/she "pays up".</li> </ol>	The child fills out a DS-11 Passport form to get a passport. The form asks for a Social Security Number and warns that failure to disclose one can result in a $500 penalty by the IRS. This is a bogus warning, as we point out, because it has no implementing regulations, violates the Constitution because it is a Bill of Attainder. The form also creates a false presumption that the child is a statutory "U.S. citizen" under 8 U.S.C. §1401, because the only option it gives is that of statutory "U.S. citizen" for both you or your parents. If you fill out the form the way the government wants, you get an SSN and declare yourself under federal jurisdiction by being a statutory "U.S. citizen". Wrong idea!	<ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>1. Consequently, he picks up a commercial tax guide written by Ernst and Young, which has repeatedly been persecuted by the IRS for not putting what the government wants the public to hear about the tax code in their commercial publications. ### 5.14 Federal Income Taxes Within Territories and Possessions of the United States

This section summarizes liability for federal taxes within possessions and territories of the United States. The territories and possessions of the United States are enumerated in Title 48 of the U.S. Code. Throughout this book, we have said that these territories and possessions, the District of Columbia, and enclaves within states of the Union collectively comprise the entire “United States” that is the proper subject of Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A. Each of these areas, however, has its own unique constraints that are prescribed by the Internal Revenue Code.

We will now enumerate the major territories and possessions and summarize the constraints applicable to each. We'll also provide the applicable statutes and regulations that describe the requirements for each. The table below contains a list of the territories and possessions of the United States and the liability for payroll and income taxes within those areas:

Table 5-84: Federal Income Taxes Within Territories and Possessions of the United States

#	Name of place	Legal Status	Governing codes and regulation(s)	Tax liability
1	Virgin Islands	Territory	26 U.S.C. §932 48 U.S.C. §1397	Tax treaty in effect between U.S. and Virgin Islands. Federal gross income includes all income from sources within V.I. for nonresidents. Taxes between V.I. and Federal are split based on percentage of income “effectively connected to a trade or business” (public office) derived from each source.
2	Puerto Rico	Territory	26 U.S.C. §933(1) 26 C.F.R. §31.3401(a)(8)(C)-1(a)	Earnings in Puerto Rico by residents are not “gross income”. No payroll tax withholding for “citizens of the United States”
3	Guam	Territory	26 U.S.C. §931(a)	Earnings in possessions are not “gross income”.
4	American Samoa	Possession	26 U.S.C. §931(a) 26 C.F.R. §31.3401(a)(8)(B)-1(a)	Earnings in possessions are not “gross income”. No payroll tax withholding for “citizens of the United States”
5	Swains Island	Possession	26 C.F.R. §31.3401(a)(8)(B)-1(a)	No payroll tax withholding for “citizens of the United States”
6	Northern Mariana Islands	Possession	26 U.S.C. §931(a)	Earnings in possessions are not “gross income”. No payroll tax withholding for “citizens of the United States”

The interesting thing about the statutes and regulations listed above is the use of the term “citizen of the United States”. That “citizen of the United States” is an 8 U.S.C. §1401 citizen born in a territory of the United States. If he/she was not born in a territory or was born in a possession, then he/she is a “national of the United States**” under 8 U.S.C. §1408 and 8 U.S.C. §1452. Several federal publications we have read, which are mentioned in section 4.11.7.5 identify the only “nationals of the United States” under federal law as those persons born in American Samoa and Swains Island. The other type of “national of the United States”, the one born in a state of the Union, is not specifically mentioned but also included in that category by implication.

To summarize the above table, the only territory or possession that is subject to income tax under Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A is the Virgin Islands. 48 U.S.C. §1397 says that all revenues collected from income taxes within the Virgin Islands shall be given to the government of the Virgin Islands instead of the United States government. All the other territories and possessions don't have to participate in the tax system or get involved with payroll withholding. Earlier versions of IRS internal manuals relating to IMF decoding reveal that the people domiciled in the Virgin Islands are the only parties who for which a Transaction Code 150 is appropriate within the Individual Master File (IMF). The Individual Master File, recall, is the electronic record that the IRS uses to maintain the tax account of “individuals”. Individuals, in turn, consist of only “aliens” and “nonresident aliens” under 26 C.F.R. §1.1441-1(c)(3).

5.15 Congress has made you a Political “tax prisoner” and a “feudal tax serf” in your own country!

The U.S. Congress wants to obfuscate and abuse the law and your rights to make you a political tax prisoner and a “feudal tax serf” in your own country.

“Shall the [throne of iniquity \[the U.S. Congress and the federal judiciary\]](#), which devises evil by [obfuscating the] law [to expand their jurisdiction and consolidate all economic power in their hands by taking it away from the states], have fellowship with You? They gather together against the life of the righteous, and condemn innocent blood of “nontaxpayers” and [persons outside their jurisdiction, which is an act of extortion and racketeering]. But the Lord has been my defense, and my God the rock of my refuge. He has brought on them their own iniquity, and shall cut them off in their own wickedness; the Lord our God and those who obey Him and [His word] shall cut them off from power and from receiving illegal bribes cleverly disguised by an obfuscated “code” as legitimate “[taxes”].”
[Psalm 94:20-23, Bible, NKJV.]

QUESTION FOR DOUBTERS: Who else BUT Congress and the judiciary can devise “evil by law”?

They want the slaves to stay in “tax prison” and live on the federal plantation so they can harvest the loot from them. You're a host organism for the federal parasite and you better learn to like it, boy. You're part of the matrix! 26 U.S.C. §877, entitled “Expatriation to avoid tax” compels people domiciled inside the federal zone to continue paying extortion money for up to ten years after they expatriate their “national” status if they did so in order to avoid “taxes”. Here is an excerpt from that statute, which by the way isn't a “law”:

TITLE 26 > Subtitle A > CHAPTER 1 > Subchapter N > PART II > Subpart A > Sec. 877.
 Sec. 877. - Expatriation to avoid tax

(a) Treatment of expatriates

(1) In general

Every nonresident alien individual who, within the 10-year period immediately preceding the close of the taxable year, lost United States citizenship, unless such loss did not have for one of its principal purposes the avoidance of taxes under this subtitle or subtitle B, shall be taxable for such taxable year in the manner provided in subsection (b) if the tax imposed pursuant to such subsection (after any reduction in such tax under the last sentence of such subsection) exceeds the tax which, without regard to this section, is imposed pursuant to section 871.

(2) Certain individuals treated as having tax avoidance purpose

For purposes of paragraph (1), an individual shall be treated as having a principal purpose to avoid such taxes if -

(A) the average annual net income tax (as defined in section 38(c)(1)) of such individual for the period of 5 taxable years ending before the date of the loss of United States citizenship is greater than $100,000, or

(B) the net worth of the individual as of such date is $500,000 or more.

In the case of the loss of United States citizenship in any calendar year after 1996, such $100,000 and $500,000 amounts shall be increased by an amount equal to such dollar amount multiplied by the cost-of-living adjustment determined under section 1(f)(3) for such calendar year by substituting "1994" for "1992" in subparagraph (B) thereof. Any increase under the preceding sentence shall be rounded to the nearest multiple of $1,000.

Note one very important aspect of the above!: That a person who is a "nonresident alien" and who is expatriating their "nationality", is the proper subject of this law. This confirms the main hypothesis of this book, which is that you can indeed be a "nonresident alien" and a "national" and still not be a statutory "U.S. citizen" (8 U.S.C. §1401), because a "nonresident alien" is defined in 26 U.S.C. §7791(b)(1)(B) as a person who is neither a "[statutory] citizen nor a [statutory] resident of the United States**[federal zone]".

Based on the above, if you have property inside the federal zone and attempt to abandon your "national" status by expatriating and do it for the specific and main purpose of avoiding federal "taxes", then you are punished by having to pay taxes for the next ten years on any earnings you declare on a tax return! Don't let this law scare you though, because if you are an "alien" or a "nonresident" with respect to the federal zone, then you don't come under the jurisdiction of this law because Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A is internal to the federal zone only. The IRS may try to misuse this law, however, to jeopardize or attach property that you have inside the federal zone if you refuse to pay extortion they will mistakenly say you owe under this provision. In other words, the IRS may try to use this as a source for "in rem" jurisdiction over your real property within the federal United States.

The U.S. Congress said long ago that the ability to expatriate is a right fundamental in protecting our liberties and must not be hindered or interfered with by government, and yet that same Congress is now contradicting itself by punishing those who expatriate because they want to pick their pockets before they leave the federal slave plantation!:

"Almost a century ago, Congress declared that "the right of expatriation [including expatriation from the District of Columbia or "U.S. Inc", the corporation] is a natural and inherent right of all people, indispensable to the enjoyment of the rights of life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness," and decreed that "any declaration, instruction, opinion, order, or decision of any officers of this government which denies, restricts, impairs, or questions the right of expatriation, is hereby declared inconsistent with the fundamental principles of this government." 15 Stat. 223-224 (1868), R.S. § 1999, 8 U.S.C. § 800 (1940).<sup>214</sup> Although designed to apply especially to the rights of immigrants to shed their foreign nationalities, that Act of Congress "is also broad enough to cover, and does cover, the corresponding natural and inherent right of American citizens to expatriate themselves." Savorgnan v. United States, 1950, 338 U.S. 491, 498 note 11, 70 S.Ct. 292, 296, 94 L.Ed. 287.<sup>215</sup> The Supreme Court has held that the Citizenship Act of 1907 and the Nationality Act of 1940 "are to be read in the light of the declaration of policy favoring freedom of expatriation which stands unrepealed." Id., 338 U.S. at pages 498-499, 70 S.Ct. at page 296. That same light, I think, illuminates 22 U.S.C.A. §211a and 8 U.S.C.A. §1185."
[Walter Briehl v. John Foster Dulles, 248 F.2d. 561, 583 (1957)]

On the other hand, when states of the Union have attempted to do almost exactly the same thing in their statutes by trying tax and thereby punish those who try to physically leave the state or travel outside it and thereby escape its jurisdiction, the U.S. Supreme Court hypocritically struck down the law that did this. Here is an example:

"It was so decided in 1867 by Crandall v. Nevada, 6 Wall. 35, 39. In that case this Court struck down a Nevada tax 'upon every person leaving the State' by common carrier. Mr. Justice Miller writing for the Court held that the right to move freely throughout the nation was a right of national citizenship. That the right was implied did not make it any the less 'guaranteed' by the Constitution. Id., 6 Wall. page 47. To be sure, he emphasized that the Nevada statute would obstruct the right of a citizen to travel to the seat of his national government or its offices throughout the country. And see United States v. Wheeler, 254 U.S. 281, 299, 41 S.Ct. 133, 136. But there is not a shred of evidence in the record of the Crandall case that the persons there involved were en route on any such mission any more than it appears in this case that Duncan entered California to interview some federal agency. The point which Mr. Justice Miller made was merely in illustration of the damage and havoc which would ensue if the States had the power to prevent the free movement of citizens from one State to another. [314 U.S. 160, 179] This is emphasized by his quotation from Chief Justice Taney's dissenting opinion in the Passenger Cases, 7 How. 283, 492: 'We are all citizens of the United States, and as members of the same community must have the right to pass and repass through every part of it without interruption, as freely as in our own States.' Hence the dictum in United States v. Wheeler, supra, 254 U.S. page 299, 41 S.Ct. page 136, which attempts to limit the Crandall case to a holding that the statute in question directly burdened 'the performance by the United States of its governmental functions' and limited the 'rights of the citizens growing out of such functions,' does not bear analysis.

"The conclusion that the right of free movement is a right of national citizenship stands on firm historical ground. If a state tax on that movement, as in the Crandall case, is invalid, a fortiori a state statute which obstructs or in substance prevents that movement must fall. That result necessarily follows unless perchance a State can curtail the right of free movement of those who are poor or destitute. But to allow such an exception to be engrafted on the rights of national citizenship would be to contravene every conception of national unity. It would also introduce a caste system utterly incompatible with the spirit of our system of government. It would permit those who were stigmatized by a State as indigents, paupers, or vagabonds to be relegated to an inferior class of citizenship. It would prevent a citizen because he was poor from seeking new horizons in other States. It might thus withhold from large segments of our people that mobility which is basic to any guarantee of freedom of opportunity. The result would be a substantial dilution of the rights of national citizenship, a serious impairment of the principles of equality. Since the state statute here challenged involves such consequences, it runs afoul of the privileges and immunities clause of the Fourteenth Amendment." [Edwards v. People of the State of California, 314 U.S. 160 (1941)]

In effect, the state of Nevada in Crandall was trying to punish people for leaving the state by taxing them, so they would stay in the state. "Expatriation" has the equivalent effect of removing one's "res in public trust" from the jurisdiction and purview of the federal corporation called the "United States" government. In effect, people who expatriate are "divorcing" themselves from the corporate state and become political dissidents and "stateless persons" who refuse to subsidize what they may often view as unethical, immoral, and evil activities of that state. The federal government has no more right to obstruct, punish, or interfere with your ability to choose your citizenship or to leave the "federal corporation" (slave plantation) than the states have a right to tax citizens who choose to physically leave them. On that basis, the above punishment for those expatriating their nationality and allegiance is an unconstitutional deprivation of due process of law, not to mention unspeakably hypocritical on the part of the federal government. This kind of hypocrisy also amounts to an unconstitutional Bill of Attainder, which is a penalty imposed absent a court judgment, if the tax is imposed or collected without a court judgment in each specific instance of attempted collection.

5.16 The government's REAL approach to tax law

"The more corrupt the state, the more numerous the laws."
[Tacitus, Roman historian 55-117 A.D.]

"Sometimes the law defends plunder and participates in it. Thus the beneficiaries are spared the shame and danger that their acts would otherwise involve... But how is this legal plunder to be identified? Quite simply. See if the law takes from some persons what belongs to them and gives it to the other persons to whom it doesn't belong. See if the law benefits one citizen at the expense of another by doing what the citizen himself cannot do without committing a crime. Then abolish that law without delay ... No legal plunder; this is the principle of justice, peace, order, stability, harmony and logic"
[The Law, Frederic Bastiat]

"It's a game. We [tax lawyers] teach the rich how to play it so they can stay rich-- and the IRS keeps changing the rules so we can keep getting rich teaching them."
[John Grisham]

1 "The prestige of government has undoubtedly been lowered considerably by the prohibition law. For nothing is more destructive of respect for the government and the law
2 of the land than passing laws which cannot be enforced. It is an open secret that the dangerous increase of crime in this country is closely connected with this."
3 [Albert Einstein, "My First Impression of the U.S.A.", 1921]

4 One of the most fascinating and informative books we've read about the subject of government and politics in general is Atlas Shrugged by Ayn Rand. This book changed
5 my life when I read it for the first time at age 19. Here is how Ayn Rand describes government's approach to writing laws. We provide it here as intriguing food for
6 thought and a nice dog biscuit (thanks!) for all of you with the diligence to read this far. It fits in very nicely with the previous section about the "void for vagueness"
7 doctrine. The excerpt from Atlas Shrugged which follows describes a situation where the government [represented by Dr. Ferris] has cornered an honest and good man
8 [Rearden] with bad laws into trying to make him believe that he has committed a crime so they can get what they want to STEAL from him, which is a valuable invention
9 of his, the Rearden Metal:

10 Dr. Ferris smiled. . . . "We've waited a long time to get something on you. You honest men are such a problem and such a headache. But we knew you'd slip sooner or 11 later - and this is just what we wanted."

12 "You seem to be pleased about it."

13 "Don't I have good reason to be?"

14 "But, after all, I did break one of your laws."

15 "Well, what do you think they're for?"

16 Dr. Ferris did not notice the sudden look on Rearden's face, the look of a man hit by the first vision of that which he had sought to see. Dr. Ferris was past the stage of 17 seeing; he was intent upon delivering the last blows to an animal caught in a trap.

18 "Did you really think that we want those laws to be observed?" said Dr. Ferris. "We want them broken. You'd better get it straight that it's not a bunch of boy scouts
19 you're up against - then you'll know that this is not the age for beautiful gestures. We're after power and we mean it. You fellows were pikers, but we know the real trick,
20 and you'd better get wise to it. There's no way to rule innocent men. The only power any government has is the power to crack down on criminals. Well, when there
21 aren't enough criminals, one makes them. One declares so many things to be a crime that it becomes impossible for men to live without breaking laws. Who wants a
22 nation of law-abiding citizens? What's there in that for anyone? But just pass the kind of laws that can neither be observed nor enforced nor objectively interpreted - and
23 you create a nation of law-breakers - and then you cash in on guilt. Now, that's the system, Mr. Rearden, that's the game, and once you understand it, you'll be much 24 easier to deal with."

32                  After having diligently read Chapter 5 of this book, which documents extensively using current case law, statutes, and
33                  regulations why most Americans, and especially those who do not consent, are not liable to either file returns or pay income
34                  taxes under Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A, you most likely are thinking something like the following:

35                  "The conclusions you reached and thoroughly documented in Chapter 5 of this book are totally incredible! I
36                  am simply stunned and rendered speechless by them and still have trouble believing them because they sound
37                  too good to be true. Surely our federal government wouldn't lie to us on that large a scale and get away with it,
38                  would they? Wouldn't the courts have blown the whistle on this a long time ago? Why doesn't my lawyer know
39                  this and if he does, why won't he tell me? I would feel much more thoroughly convinced of your arguments if 40                  you could analyze the issues and assertions you are making from a historical perspective to show how our
41                  nation evolved to the allegedly lawless state it currently finds itself in with regard to federal income taxes. If
42                  what you are saying is true, and so far I have no reason to doubt that it isn't, then there is a historical
43                  explanation for all of this that is completely consistent with your conclusions. Being the perpetual skeptic that I
44                  am [GOOD!..KEEP IT UP!], I therefore demand to see historical evidence that is consistent with your 45                  conclusions to make the picture completely clear for me and remove all remaining doubt."

46                  Answering the above concerns is therefore the main focus of this chapter. We will show how corrupt lawyers and
47                  politicians over the years have conspired to deceive you into volunteering for a tax that didn't apply to you and which they
48                  had no jurisdiction to make you liable for paying. We will show how they cleverly weaved and perfected the deceptive
49                  spider web that snares you into their system and makes you into an unwilling slave of a federal government that has turned
50                  from the chief protector of your rights to the worst possible violator of your rights. Other additional but very valid reasons
51                  for documenting the history of this alleged conspiracy to defraud Americans of their income include the following:

- 52                  1. There are two main statutory crimes involving federal income taxes that could possibly affect those who choose not to 53                  "volunteer" to pay federal income taxes:

- 1.1. Tax Evasion, 26 U.S.C. §7201
- 1.2. Willful Failure to File, 26 U.S.C. §7203
2. Both of the above statutory crimes are most often proved or demonstrated conclusively in court by the government by showing the jury that there was a willful attempt to conceal “taxable” income by the defendant. This requires the government to prove that:
- 2.1. The defendant is completely familiar with the Internal Revenue Code and the implementing regulations found in 26 C.F.R..
- 2.2. The defendant had income that was “taxable”, which means that Internal Revenue Code (somewhere in the code) made you liable (you had a legal duty) for paying the tax.
- 2.3. Because the defendant was liable to pay a tax, then he was also liable to file a return under the tax imposed in 26 U.S.C. §1.
- 2.4. The defendant knew that that the law made him liable to pay the tax but he still refused to pay it and tried to circumvent it or the collection of it (Tax Evasion, 26 U.S.C. §7201)
- 2.5. He violated a legal duty he knew he had by refusing to file the return showing his liability (26 U.S.C. §7203).
3. The motive for the act of concealment is extremely important in establishing the basis for the charge of “willfulness”. If the motive for the concealment did not involve hiding taxable income or violating a known legal duty, but simply a desire to protect one’s constitutional rights, one’s property, obey the law, and guarantee that the government also obeys the law, then the act of concealment cannot be “willful”.
4. There are more motives or reasons to conceal “income” from the government than simply just to evade taxes. One major additional reason might be because the government is quite frankly corrupt and lawless and simply can’t be trusted to obey the laws on federal income taxes, which clearly show that there is no liability to either file a return or pay a tax. The act of concealing income under such circumstances is simply an exercise of liberty and pursuit of justice in conformance with laws designed to protect oneself from unlawful government abuse which essentially amounts to organized extortion and fraud.
5. The contents of this chapter will therefore trace the history of our country to convincingly and clearly show the basis for the conclusion and good faith belief that:
- 5.1. We have a criminal and abusive federal government that tramples our Constitutional rights and which is downright dishonest in its dealings with most Americans with regard to federal income taxes. The main motive for that dishonesty is a love and lust for money and power, which the Bible says in 1 Tim. 6:10 is “the root of all evil”.
- 5.2. The criminal nature of our federal government and its widespread violation of our Constitutional rights and tax statutes found in the Internal Revenue Code and regulations undermines its credibility and violates the public trust and fiduciary relationship that it clearly has with Americans as document in Section 2.1 of this book.
- 5.3. This tyrannical violation of law and public trust causes Americans to distrust their government, creates civil unrest, undermines our prosperity, and makes most people want to run and hide from the government to protect their privacy and liberty rather than risk being harmed by it. For instance, it makes people want to conceal private information from the federal government because of a fear that the information they provide will be misused to illegally single them out or prosecute them wrongfully using fabricated evidence and misquoted or falsified or misleading statements about their lawful tax responsibilities. This type of treatment is called blackmail and extortion when anyone other than the government does it, but the government seldom prosecutes or enforces such criminal laws when its own officers undertake such abuses.
- 5.4. Running and hiding from our government because of our mistrust and its lawless behavior is a legitimate and honorable motivation for concealing income, and that this motivation has nothing to do with defying a known legal duty or with the notion of “willfulness”. To the contrary, it is the only cost-effective way, in the absence of a government that obeys its own taxing statutes and the presence of a corrupt legal profession, to ensure that the outcome in our case is more consistent with the requirements of the law in the presence of a criminal government.

47 “When the wicked arise, men hide themselves;
 48 But when they perish, the righteous increase.”
 49 [Prov. 28:28, Bible, NKJV]

50 “A prudent man foresees evil and hides himself [and his assets from plunder and harm],
 51 But the simple pass on and are punished.”
 52 [Prov. 22:3, Bible, NKJV]

53 “A prudent man foresees evil and hides himself; The simple pass on and are punished.”
 54 [Prov. 27:12, Bible, NKJV]

55 “The simple believes every word,

1 But the prudent man considers well his steps.

2 A wise man fears and departs from evil.

3 But a fool rages and is self-confident.

4 [Prov. 14:15, Bible, NKJV]

5 5.5. Because there is no such thing as taxable income under Subtitle A for Americans who refuse to volunteer for the 6 tax, it constitutes a fraud for our government to claim or imply otherwise, whether it be in the IRS Publications,
7 the Internal Revenue Code, or 26 Code of Federal Regulations. In spite of this fact, we will show how the 8 government has committed a constructive fraud by obfuscating the tax code over the years to further violate the 9 public trust and illegally and fraudulently broaden public perception of their otherwise very limited jurisdiction to 10 tax incomes only within the federal United States.

11 5.6. Fear created in the reader by a knowledge and complete understanding of this chapter will hopefully provide a
12 sufficient basis to forever avoid the charge of “willfulness” in the act of concealment because we can show a
13 valid and honorable and lawful motive for concealment related to other than criminal intent or defiance of a
14 known legal duty.

15 Before we begin our first section within the chapter, we’d like to give you the big picture, or 20,000 foot view, of why you
16 should believe that history confirms what we said in Chapter 5. All you have to do is consider the scenario below to realize 17 that there is something seriously wrong going on here with our federal government.

- 18 1. The Supreme Court in 1895, in the case of Pollock v. Farmers' Loan & Trust Co., 157 U.S. 429, 158 U.S. 601 (1895), 19 declared that the first income tax imposed on Americans as unconstitutional.
- 20 2. The Sixteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States of America,, fraudulently ratified in 1913, is what 21 most federal politicians and tax lawyers erroneously say overcame the Pollock decision in 1895 and authorized the 22 imposition of direct income taxes on sovereign Americans.
- 23 3. The Supreme Court declared in 1916, after the passage of the Sixteenth Amendment , the following in a case that has 24 never been overruled:

25 *“..by the previous ruling it was settled that the provisions of the Sixteenth
26 Amendment conferred no new power of taxation but simply prohibited
27 the previous complete and plenary power of income taxation possessed by Congress from the beginning from 28 being taken out of the category of indirect taxation to which it inherently belonged and being placed in the 29 category of direct taxation subject to apportionment by a consideration of the sources from which the income
30 was derived, that is by testing the tax not by what it was -- a tax on income, but by a mistaken theory deduced
31 from the origin or source of the income taxed. ”
32 [Stanton v. Baltic Mining Co., 240 U.S. 103 (1916)]

- 33 4. No changes to the Constitution that would affect income taxation have been made that would authorize the ruling in 34 Pollock v. Farmers' Loan and Trust, 158 U.S. 601 (1895) to be invalidated or superseded.
- 35 5. In spite of all of the above, to this day, the federal government, and especially our dishonest Congressmen and the IRS, 36 still continues to commit fraud and deceive the public by insisting that:
  - 37 5.1. The Sixteenth Amendment authorized Subtitle A income taxes on natural persons.
  - 38 5.2. The Sixteenth Amendment was properly ratified and therefore valid.
  - 39 5.3. Income taxes are legal and lawful for natural persons.
  - 40 5.4. Income taxes do not violate our constitutional rights.
  - 41 5.5. All Americans are “taxpayers” (persons liable for the payment of income taxes under Subtitle A), even though 42 there is not statute or regulation creating such a liability.
  - 43 5.6. All Americans are statutory “U.S. citizens” pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1401, which means they are domiciled federal 44 territory subject to the sovereignty of the U.S. government. This is a fraud, because they are in most cases
45 “nationals” but not statutory “citizens” pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) who are effectively “nonresident
46 aliens” as far as the Internal Revenue Code is concerned. “U.S. citizens” are defined in 26 C.F.R. §31.3121\(e\)-1
47 to mean

48 “... a citizen of the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico or the Virgin Islands, and, effective January 1, 1961, a 49 citizen of Guam or American Samoa.”

- 50 5.7. That being a statutory “U.S. citizen” is what makes a person liable for income taxes, and that it is a patriotic duty 51 to “pay our fair share.”

- 1 5.8. That the “individual” described at the top of the income tax form means statutory “U.S. citizen”, when in fact it
 2 really means “U.S. resident alien” or “nonresident alien” as per 26 C.F.R. §1.1441-1\(c\)\(3\).
 3 5.9. That the IRS publications are to be trusted to establish a good faith belief about our legal liabilities, even though
 4 the courts and even the IRS claim that they can’t be relied upon for such purposes and that only the law is useful
 5 in establishing good faith belief.

6 Do you smell something REALLY FISHY going on here? We hope we have at least made you curious enough to finish
 7 reading this chapter and see for yourself that what we are saying is truthful and completely consistent with the law and with
 8 our country's history.

9 George Washington, in his Farewell Address to our country, said that religion and morality are indispensable aspects of our
 10 government. We believe this chapter painfully and forcefully confirms what happens when they cease to be priorities of 11 our government and our courts:

12 Of all the dispositions and habits which lead to political prosperity, religion and morality are indispensable
 13 supports. In vain would that man claim the tribute of patriotism who should labor to subvert these great
 14 pillars of human happiness—these firmest props of the duties of men and citizens. The mere politician,
 15 equally with the pious man, ought to respect and to cherish them. A volume could not trace all their 16 connections with private and public felicity. Let it simply be asked, “where is the security for property, for 17 reputation, for life, if the sense of religious obligation desert the oaths which are the instruments of 18 investigation in courts of justice?” And let us with caution indulge the supposition that morality can be 19 maintained without religion. Whatever may be conceded to the influence of refined education on minds of 20 peculiar structure, reason and experience both forbid us to expect that national morality can prevail in 21 exclusion of religious principle.

22 It is substantially true that virtue or morality is a necessary spring of popular government. The rule indeed
 23 extends with more or less force to every species of free government. Who that is a sincere friend to it can look 24 with indifference upon attempts to shake the foundation of the fabric?

25 Promote, then, as an object of primary importance, institutions for the general diffusion of knowledge. In 26 proportion as the structure of a government gives force to public opinion, it is essential that public opinion
 27 should be enlightened.

28 George Washington also confirmed the above assertions in the following quotes:

29 “Propitious smiles of heaven can never be expected on a nation that disregards the eternal rules of order and 30 right which heaven itself has ordained.” - George Washington (1732-1799)

31 “One’s god dictates the kind of law one implements and also controls the application and development of that
 32 law over time. Given enough time, all non-Christian systems of law self-destruct in a fit of tyranny.”

33 The history of our country is ripe with examples of noble statesmen like George Washington, who were wise statesmen of 34 faith and character. Contemporary liberal media, liberal politicians, and a liberal education system have conspired to hide
 35 the deeds and beliefs of these noble men from the view of our young ones, and corrupted them to believe that there is no
 36 God, no absolute source of truth, and no right and wrong and everything is relative. The new god of the 21st century has 37 become science and evolutionism, which together have robbed our children of religion and faith and mocked the Bible and 38 God and our marvelous national birthright.

39 In the process of promoting their selfish agenda in our educational system, licentious and corrupt individuals in the legal,
 40 education, and media professions have made us into a carnal, licentious, and idolatrous society where the government robs
 41 us of our income using the ignorance it created in us as a weapon and thereby forces us to therefore depend on and trust it
 42 instead of God or our own initiative. In effect, they have outlawed personal responsibility by forcing us to participate in a 43 Social Security Ponzi Scheme and income tax system. This violates the first commandment of the Bible.

44 “You shall have no other gods [including government] before Me.”
 45 [Exodus 20:3, Bible, NKJV]

46 Now we have a whole generation of conceited and idolatrous people (the “ME generation”) who have known nothing but
 47 this selfish lie and deception and who do not know any other reality or even the way things used to be in our country
 48 because our public school history books have been censored to remove our spiritual heritage. See the following website
 49 created by David Barton for more information on this liberal censorship scam:

<http://www.wallbuilders.com/>

To make things even worse, public distaste for lawyers has caused few men of character to be attracted to public service or political office, thus leaving our government and our courts in the hands of selfish rogue lawyers and arrogant thieves. As our leaders, these losers set the standard for our society and are dragging it down with them:

"Our government is the potent, the omnipresent teacher. For good or of for ill, it teaches the whole people by its example. Crime is contagious. If the government becomes a lawbreaker, it breeds contempt for the law; it invites every man to become a law unto himself; it invites anarchy. To declare that in the administration of the criminal law the end justifies the means...would bring terrible retribution. Against that pernicious doctrine this Court should resolutely set its face."
 [Justice Brandeis, Olmstead v. United States, 277 U.S. 438, 485 (1928)]

Is it therefore any surprise to see the extent of corruption in our government with these types of selfish and lawless individuals writing our laws and enforcing them? We think not.

The one thought we want you to finish this chapter with is the following, right from the Bible in Jeremiah 17:9-11:

The heart is deceitful above all things,
 And desperately wicked;
 Who can know it?
*I, the Lord, search the heart,
 I test the mind,
 Even to give every man according to his ways,
 According to the fruit of his doings
 As a partridge that broods but does not hatch,
So is he who gets riches, but not by right;
*It will leave him in the midst of his days,
And at his end he will be a fool.
 [Jeremiah 17:9-11, Bible, NKJV]

In the meantime while we are waiting for Divine Justice and doing justice ourselves at every turn as Micah 6:8 requires, the Bible warns us what to expect and how we should behave in Micah 7:2-10:

*The faithful man has perished from the earth,
 And there is no one upright among men,
 They all lie in wait for blood;
 Every man hunts his brother with a net.*

That they may successfully do evil with both hands—

The prince asks for gifts,
 The judge seeks a bribe,
 And the great man utters his evil desire;
 So they scheme together.

*The best of them is like a brier;
 The most upright is sharper than a thorn edge;
 The day of your watchman and your punishment comes;
 Now shall be their perplexity.*

*Do not trust in a friend;
 Do not put your confidence in a companion;
 Guard the doors of your mouth
 From her who lies in your bosom.
 For son dishonors father,
 Daughter rises against her mother,
 Daughter-in-law against her mother-in-law;
 A man's enemies are the men of his own household.
 Therefore I will look to the Lord;
 I will wait for the God of my salvation;
 My God will hear me.*

*Do not rejoice over me, my enemy;
 When I fall, I will arise;
 When I sit in darkness,
 The Lord will be a light to me.
 I will bear the indignation of the Lord,*

1           Because I have sinned against Him,
 2           Until He pleads my case
 3           And executes justice for me.
 4           He will bring me forth to the light;
 5           I will see His righteousness.
 6           Then she who is my enemy will see,
 7           And shame will cover her who said to me,
 8           "Where is the Lord your God?"
 9           My eyes will see her;
 10          Now she will be trampled down
 11          Like mud in the streets."
 12          [Micah 7:2-10, Bible, NKJV]

13          Finally, if you find that the contents of the chapter leave questions unanswered about the history of the income tax fraud
 14          and the moral decay in this country and you would like a clearer or more complete picture, we refer you to another excellent

28          6.1          How Scoundrels Corrupted Our Republican Form of Government

29                    "All systems of government suppose they are to be administered by men of common sense and common
 30                    honesty. In our country, as all ultimately depends on the voice of the people, they have it in their power, and it
 31                    is to be presumed they generally will choose men of this description: but if they will not, the case, to be sure,
 32                    is without remedy. If they choose fools, they will have foolish laws. If they choose knaves, they will have 33                    knavish ones. But this can never be the case until they are generally fools or knaves themselves, which, thank 34                    God, is not likely ever to become the character of the American people." [Justice Iredell] (Fries's Case (CC) F
 35                    Cas No 5126, supra.)
 36                    [Ludecke v. Watkins, 335 U.S. 160, 92 L.Ed. 1881, 1890, 68 S.Ct. 1429 (1948)]

 38                    monopoly in the market of ideas, and utter, benighted ignorance."
 39                    [Adderley v. State of Florida, 385 U.S. 39, 49 (1967)]

40          We very thoroughly covered the foundations of our republican form of government earlier in chapter 4. We showed you in 41          section 4.1 the hierarchy of sovereignty and where you fit personally in that hierarchy. We showed you in section 4.5 that 42          Article 4, Section 4 of the U.S. Constitution guarantees to all Americans a "republican form of government". Then in 43          section 5.1.1 we showed you the order that our state and federal governments were created and the distinct sovereignties
 44          that comprise all the elements of our republican (not democratic) political system. Now we are going to tie the whole
 45          picture together and show you graphically the tools and techniques that specific covetous government servants have used
 46          over the years to corrupt and debase that system for their own personal financial and political benefit.

47                    "The king establishes the land by justice; but he who receives bribes overthrows it."
 48                    [Prov. 29:4, Bible, NKJV]

49          After you have learned these techniques by which corruption was introduced, we will spend the rest of the chapter showing
 50          exactly how these techniques have been specifically applied over the years to corrupt and debase and destroy our political
 51          system and undermine our personal liberties, rights, and freedoms. This will train your perception to be on the lookout for

1 any future attempts by our covetous politicians to further corrupt our system so that you can act swiftly at a political level to
2 oppose and prevent it.

3 First of all, the foundation of our republican form of government is the concept of separation of powers. This concept is
4 called the "Separation of Powers Doctrine":

5 "Separation of powers. The governments of the states and the United States are divided into three departments
6 or branches: the legislative, which is empowered to make laws, the executive which is required to carry out the 7 laws, and the judicial which is charged with interpreting the laws and adjudicating disputes under the laws.
8 Under this constitutional doctrine of "separation of powers," one branch is not permitted to encroach on the 9 domain or exercise the powers of another branch. See U.S. Constitution, Articles I-III. See also Power
10 (Constitutional Powers)."
11 [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1365]

12 Here is how no less than the U.S. Supreme Court described the purpose of this separation of powers:

13 "We start with first principles. The Constitution creates a Federal Government of enumerated powers. See U.S.
14 Const., Art. I, 8. As James Madison wrote, "[t]he powers delegated by the proposed Constitution to the federal
15 government are few and defined. Those which are to remain in the State governments are numerous and
16 *indefinite." The Federalist No. 45, pp. 292-293 (C. Rossiter ed. 1961). This constitutionally
17 mandated division of authority "was adopted by the Framers
18 to ensure protection of our fundamental liberties." Gregory v. Ashcroft,
19 501 U.S. 452, 458 (1991) (internal quotation marks omitted). "Just as the separation and independence of
20 the coordinate branches of the Federal Government serves to prevent the accumulation of excessive power in
21 any one branch, a healthy balance of power between the States and the Federal Government will reduce the 22 risk of tyranny and abuse from either front." Ibid.
23 *[U.S. v. Lopez, 514 U.S. 549 (1995) ]

24 The founding fathers believed that men were inherently corrupt. They believed that absolute power corrupts absolutely so
25 they avoided concentrating too much power into any single individual.

26 "When all government, domestic and foreign, in little as in great things, shall be drawn to Washington as the
27 center of all power, it will render powerless the checks provided of one government on another and will become
28 as venal and oppressive as the government from which we separated."
29 [Thomas Jefferson to Charles Hammond, 1821. ME 15:332 ]

30 "Our government is now taking so steady a course as to show by what road it will pass to destruction; to wit: by 31 consolidation first and then corruption, its necessary consequence. The engine of consolidation will be the 32 Federal judiciary; the two other branches the corrupting and corrupted instruments."
33 [Thomas Jefferson to Nathaniel Macon, 1821. ME 15:341 ]

34 "The [federal] judiciary branch is the instrument which, working like gravity, without intermission, is to press
35 us at last into one consolidated mass."
36 [Thomas Jefferson to Archibald Thweat, 1821. ME 15:307 ]

37 "There is no danger I apprehend so much as the consolidation of our government by the noiseless and therefore 38 unalarming instrumentality of the Supreme Court."
39 [Thomas Jefferson to William Johnson, 1823. ME 15:421 ]

40 "I wish... to see maintained that wholesome distribution of powers established by the Constitution for the 41 limitation of both [the State and General governments], and never to see all offices transferred to Washington
42 where, further withdrawn from the eyes of the people, they may more secretly be bought and sold as at market."
43 [Thomas Jefferson to William Johnson, 1823. ME 15:450 ]

44 "What an augmentation of the field for jobbing, speculating, plundering, office-building and office-hunting
45 would be produced by an assumption of all the State powers into the hands of the General Government!"
46 [Thomas Jefferson to Gideon Granger, 1800. ME 10:168 ]

47 "I see,... and with the deepest affliction, the rapid strides with which the federal branch of our government is
48 advancing towards the usurpation of all the rights reserved to the States, and the consolidation in itself of all
49 powers, foreign and domestic; and that, too, by constructions which, if legitimate, leave no limits to their
50 power... It is but too evident that the three ruling branches of [the Federal government] are in combination to 51 strip their colleagues, the State authorities, of the powers reserved by them, and to exercise themselves all 52 functions foreign and domestic."

1 [Thomas Jefferson to William Branch Giles, 1825. ME 16:146 ]

2 "We already see the [judiciary] power, installed for life, responsible to no authority (for impeachment is not
3 even a scare-crow), advancing with a noiseless and steady pace to the great object of consolidation. The
4 foundations are already deeply laid by their decisions for the annihilation of constitutional State rights and the 5 removal of every check, every counterpoise to the engulfing power of which themselves are to make a sovereign 6 part."

[Thomas Jefferson to William T. Barry, 1822. ME 15:388]

8 For further quotes supporting the above, see:

9 <http://famguardian.org/Subjects/Politics/ThomasJefferson/jeff1060.htm>

10 They instead wanted an egalitarian and utopian society. They loathed the idea of a king because they had seen how corrupt
11 the monarchies of Europe had become by reading the history books. They loathed it so much that they specifically
12 prohibited titles of nobility in Article 1, Section 9, Clause 8:

13 U.S. Constitution: Article 1, Section 9, Clause 8

14 No Title of Nobility shall be granted by the United States: And no Person holding any Office of Profit or Trust
15 under them, shall, without the Consent of the Congress, accept of any present, Emolument, Office, or Title, of 16 any kind whatever, from any King, Prince or foreign State.

17 So the founders instead distributed and dispersed political power into several independent branches of government that 18 have sovereign power over a finite sphere and prohibited the branches from assuming each other's duties. This, they 19 believed, would prevent collusion against their rights and liberties. They therefore divided the government into the 20 Executive, Legislative, and Judicial branches and made them independent of each other, and assigned very specific duties
21 to each. In effect, these three branches became "foreign" to each other and in constant competition with each other for 22 power and control.

23 The founders further dispersed political power by dividing power between the several states and the federal government and
24 gave most of the power to the states. They gave each state their own seats in Congress, in the Senate. They made the states
25 just like "foreign countries" and independent nations so that there would be the greatest separation of powers possible
26 between the federal government and the states:

27 "The States between each other are sovereign and independent. They are distinct and separate sovereignties,
28 *except so far as they have parted with some of the attributes of sovereignty by the Constitution. They 29 continue to be nations, with all their rights, and under all their national 30 obligations, and with all the rights of nations in every particular; except in 31 the surrender by each to the common purposes and objects of the Union, under the Constitution. The rights of 32 each State, when not so yielded up, remain absolute."
33 [Bank of Augusta v. Earle, 38 U.S. (13 Pet.) 519, 10 L.Ed. 274 (1839)]

34 Then the founders created multiple states so that the states would be in competition with each other for citizens and for
35 commerce. When one state got too oppressive or taxed people too much, the people could then move to an economically
36 more attractive state and climate. This kept the states from oppressing their citizens and it gave the people a means to keep 37 their state and their government in check. Then they put the federal government in charge of regulating commerce among 38 and between the states, and the intention of this was to maximize, not obstruct, commerce between the states so that we
39 would act as a unified economic union and like a country. Even so, they didn't want our country to be a "nation" under the 40 law of nations, because they didn't want a national government with unlimited powers. They wanted a "federation", so
41 they called our central government the "federal government" instead of a "national government". To give us a "national 42 government" would be a recipe for tyranny:

43 "By that law the several States and Governments spread over
44 our globe, are considered as forming a society, not a
45 NATION. It has only been by a very few comprehensive minds, such as those of Elizabeth and the 46 Fourth Henry, that this last great idea has been even contemplated. 3rdly. and chiefly, I shall examine the

1 important question before us, by the Constitution of the United States, and the legitimate result of that valuable
2 instrument. "
3 [Chisholm v. Georgia, 2 Dall. (U.S.) 419, 1 L.Ed. 440 (1793)]

4 The ingenious founders also made the people the sovereigns in charge of both the state and federal governments by giving
5 them a Bill of Rights and mandating frequent elections. Frequent elections:

- 6 1. Ensured that rulers would not be in office long enough to learn enough to get sneaky with the people or abuse their 7 power.
- 8 2. Kept the rulers accountable to the people and provided a prompt feedback mechanism to make sure politicians and 9 rulers were incentivized to listen to the people.
- 10 3. Created a stable political system that would automatically converge onto the will of the majority so that the country
11 would be at peace instead of at war within itself.

12 The founders even gave the people their own house in Congress called the House of Representatives, so that the power
13 between the states, in the Senate, and the People, in the House, would be well-balanced. They also made sure that these 14 sovereign electors and citizens were well armed with a good education, so they could keep their government in check and
15 capably defend their freedom, property, and liberty by themselves. When things got rough and governments became 16 corrupt, these rugged and self-sufficient citizens were also guaranteed the right to defend their property using arms that the 17 U.S. Constitution said in the Second Amendment that they had a right to keep and use. This ensured that citizens wouldn't 18 need to depend on the government for a handout or socialist benefits and wouldn't have to worry about having a
19 government that would plunder their property or their liberty.

20 The founding fathers created the institution of trial by jury, so that if government got totally corrupt and passed unjust laws
21 that violated God's laws, the people could put themselves back in control through jury nullification. This also effectively
22 dealt with the problem of corrupt judges, because both the jury and the grand jury could override the judge as well when 23 they detected a conflict of interest by judging both the facts and the law. Here is how Thomas Jefferson described the duty
24 of the jury in such a circumstance:

25 "It is left... to the juries, if they think the permanent judges are under any bias whatever in any cause, to take
26 on themselves to judge the law as well as the fact. They never exercise this power but when they suspect
27 partiality in the judges; and by the exercise of this power they have been the firmest bulwarks of English 28 liberty."
29 [Thomas Jefferson to Abbe Arnoux, 1789. ME 7:423, Papers 15:283]

30 Then the founders separated church and state and put the state and the church in competition with each other to protect and 31 nurture the people. We talked about this church/state separation and dual sovereignty earlier in section 4.3.6.

32 The design that our founding fathers had for our political system was elegant, unique, unprecedented, ingenious, perfectly
33 balanced, and inherently just. It was founded on the concept of Natural Order and Natural Law, which as we explained in 34 section 4.1 are based on the sequence that things were created. This concept made sense, even to people who didn't believe
35 in God, so it had wide support among a very diverse country of immigrants from all over the world and of many different
36 religious faiths. Natural Law and Natural Order unified our country because it was just and fair and righteous. That is the 37 basis for the phrase on our currency, which says:

38 "E Pluribus Unum"

39 ...which means: "From many, one." Our system of Natural Law and Natural Order also happened to be based on God's 40 sovereign design for self-government, as we explained throughout chapter 4. The founders also recognized that liberty
41 without God and morality are impossible:

42 "We have no government armed with the power capable of contending with human passions unbridled by 43 morality and religion. Avarice [greed], ambition, revenge, or gallantry [debauchery], would break the 44 strongest cords of our Constitution as a whale goes through a net. Our Constitution was made only for a 45 moral and religious people. It is wholly inadequate to the government of any other."
46 [John Adams, 2nd President.]

47 So the founders included the requirement for BOTH God and Liberty on all of our currency. They put the phrase "In God
48 We Trust" and the phrase "Liberty" side by side, and they were probably thinking of the following scripture when they did
49 that!:

1 "Now the Lord is the Spirit; and where the Spirit of the Lord is, there is liberty."
 2 [2 Cor. 3:17, Bible, NKJV]

3 By creating such distinct separation of powers among all the forces of government, the founders ensured that the only way
 4 anything would get done within government was exclusively by informed consent and not by force or terror. The
 5 Declaration of Independence identifies the source of ALL "just" government power as "consent". Anything not consensual
 6 is therefore unjust and tyrannical. An informed and sovereign People will only do things voluntarily and consensually
 7 when it is in their absolute best interests. This would ensure that government would never engage in anything that wasn't in
 8 the best interests of everyone as a whole, because people, at least theoretically, would never consent to anything that would 9 either hurt them or injure their Constitutional rights. The Supreme Court described this kind of government by consent as 10 "government by compact":

11 "In Europe, the executive is synonymous with the sovereign power of a state...where it is too commonly 12 acquired by force or fraud, or both...In America, however the case is widely different. Our government is 13 founded upon compact [consent expressed in a written contract called a Constitution or in positive law].
 14 Sovereignty was, and is, in the people."
 15 [The Betsy, 3 (U.S.) Dall 6]

16 Here is the legal definition of "compact" to prove our point that the Constitution and all federal law written in furtherance
 17 of it are indeed a "compact":

18 "Compact, n. An agreement or contract between persons, nations, or states. Commonly applied to working
 19 agreements between and among states concerning matters of mutual concern. A contract between parties,
 20 which creates obligations and rights capable of being enforced and contemplated as such between the parties,
 21 in their distinct and independent characters. A mutual consent of parties concerned respecting some property
 22 or right that is the object of the stipulation, or something that is to be done or forborne. See also Compact
 23 clause; Confederacy; Interstate compact; Treaty."
 24 [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 281]

25 Enacting a mutual agreement into positive law then, becomes the vehicle for expressing the fact that the People collectively
 26 agreed and consented to the law and to accept any adverse impact that law might have on their liberty. Public servants
 27 then, are just the apparatus that the sovereign People use for governing themselves through the operation of positive law.
 28 As the definition above shows, the apparatus and machinery of government is simply the "rudder" that steers the ship, but
 29 the "Captain" of the ship is the People both individually and collectively. In a true Republican Form of Government, the 30 REAL government is the people individually and collectively, and not their "public servants". That is the true meaning of 31 the phrase "a government of the people, by the people, and for the people" used by Abraham Lincoln in the Gettysburg
 32 Address.

33 Our de jure Constitutional Republic started out as a perfectly balanced and just system indeed. But somewhere along the 34 way, it was deliberately corrupted by evil men for personal gain. Just like Cain (in the Bible) destroyed the tranquility and
 35 peace of an idyllic world and divided the family of Adam by first introducing murder into the world, greedy politicians who 36 wanted to line their pockets corrupted our wonderful system and brought evil into our government. How did it happen?
 37 They did it with a combination of force, fraud, and the corrupting influence of money. This process can be shown
 38 graphically and described in scientific terms over a period of years to show precisely how it was done. We will now
 39 attempt to do this so that the process is crystal clear in your mind. What we are trying to show are the following elements
 40 in our diagram:

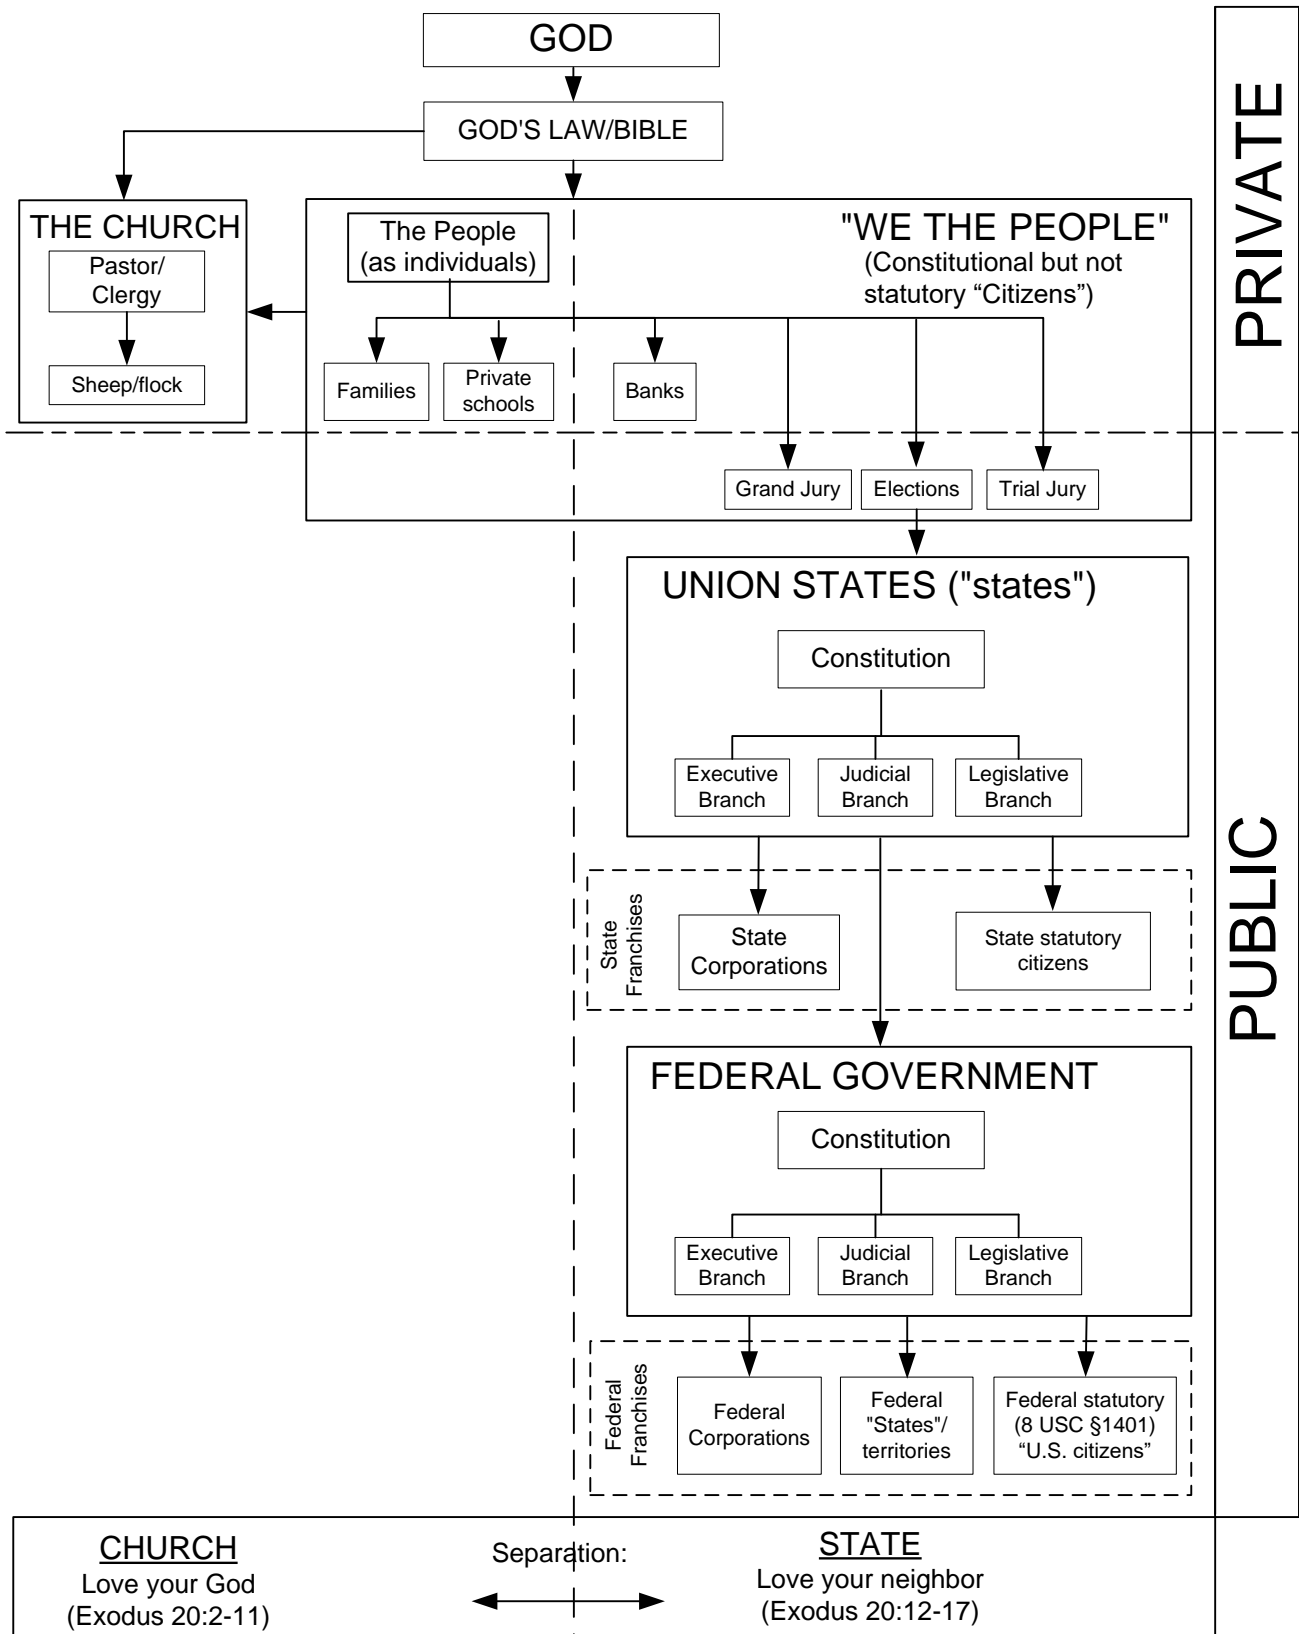

- 41 1. The distinct sovereignties between governments:
  - 42 1.1. States
  - 43 1.2. The federal government
- 44 2. The sovereignties within governments:
  - 45 2.1. Executive branch
  - 46 2.2. Legislative branch
  - 47 2.3. Judicial branch
- 48 3. The hierarchy of sovereignty between all the sovereignties based on their sequence of creation.
- 49 4. The corrupting influence of force, fraud, and money, including the branch that initiated it, the date it was initiated, and 50 the object it was initiated against.

51 To meet the above objectives, we will start off with the diagram found in section 5.1.1 and expand it with some of the 52 added elements found in the Natural Order diagram found earlier in section 4.1. To the bottom of the diagram, we add the

1 Ten Commandments, which establishes the “Separation of Church v. State”. The first four commandments in Exodus 20:2-
2 11 establish the church and the last six commandments found in Exodus 20:12-17 define how we should relate to other
3 people, who Jesus later called our “neighbor” in Matt. 22:39. The main and only purpose of government is to love and
4 protect and serve its inhabitants and citizens, who collectively are "neighbors". What results is a schematic diagram of the 5 initial political system that the founders gave us absent all corruption. This is called the “De jure U.S. Government”. It is
6 the only lawful government we have and its organization is defined by our Constitution. It’s organization is also defined by 7 the Bible, which we also call "Natural Law" throughout this document.

2 Each box in the above diagram represents a sovereignty or sovereign entity that helps distribute power throughout our
 3 system of government to prevent corruption or tyranny. The arrows with dark ends indicate an act of creation by the

1 sovereign above. That act of creation carries with it an implied delegation of authority to do specific tasks and establishes a
2 fiduciary relationship between the Creator, and his subordinate creation. The above system as shown functions properly
3 and fully and provides the best defense for our liberties only when there is complete separation between each sovereignty,
4 which is to say that all actions performed and all choices made by any one sovereign:

- 5 1. Are completely free of fraud, force, conflict of interest, or duress.
- 6 2. Are accomplished completely voluntarily, which is to say that they are done for the mutual benefit of all parties 7 involved rather than any one single party exercising undue influence.
- 8 3. Involve fully informed consent made with a full awareness by all parties to the agreement of all rights which are being 9 surrendered to procure any imputed benefits.
- 10 4. Are done mainly or exclusively for the benefit of the Sovereign above the agent who is the actor.
- 11 5. Are done for righteous reasons and noble intent, meaning that they are accomplished for the benefit of someone else
12 rather than one's own personal or financial benefit. This requirement is the foundation of what a fiduciary relationship
13 means and also the only way that conflicts of interest and the corruption they can cause can be eliminated.

14 With the above in mind, we will now add all of the corrupting influences accomplished to our system of government over
15 the years. These are shown with dashed lines representing the application of unlawful or immoral force or fraud. The 16 hollow end of each line indicates the sovereign against which the force or fraud is applied. The number above or next to 17 the dotted line indicates the item in the table that follows the diagram which explains each incidence of force or fraud.

(on diagram above)	Year(s)	Acting Sovereignty/agent	Law(s) violated	Explanation
1	1868	State legislatures State judges Federal legislature Federal judges	18 U.S.C. §241 (conspiracy against rights) Thirteenth Amendment (slavery and peonage) 42 U.S.C. §1994 (peonage) 18 U.S.C. §1581 (peonage/slavery) 18 U.S.C. §2381 (treason)	After the civil war, the 14 th Amendment was passed in 1868. That amendment along with "words of art" were used as a means to deceive constitutional citizens to falsely believe that they were also privileged statutory "U.S. citizens" pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1401, and thus to unconstitutionally extent federal jurisdiction and enforce federal franchises within states of the Union. The citizenship status described in that amendment was only supposed to apply to emancipated slaves but the federal government in concert with the states confused the law and the interpretation of the law enough that everyone thought they were statutory federal citizens rather than the "non-resident non-persons" immune from federal jurisdiction, which is foreign with respect to states of the Union. This put Americans in the states in a privileged federal status and put them under the jurisdiction of the federal government. At the point that Americans voluntarily and unknowingly accept privileged federal citizenship, they lose their sovereignty and go to the bottom of the sovereignty hierarchy. State courts and state legislatures cooperated in this conspiracy against rights by requiring electors and jurists to be presumed statutory "U.S. citizens" in order to serve. At the same time, they didn't define the term "U.S. citizen" in their election laws or voter registration, creating a "presumption" in favor of people believing that they are statutory "citizens of the United States", even though technically they are not.
2	1913	Corporations/ businesses/and special interests	18 U.S.C. §201 (bribery of public officials) Const. Art. 1, Sect. 2, Clause 3 (direct taxes) Const. Art. 1, Sect. 9, Clause 4 (direct taxes) 18 U.S.C. §219 (government employees acting as agents of foreign principals- Federal Reserve)	Around the turn of the century, the gilded age created a lot of very wealthy people and big corporations. The corrupting influence of the money they had lead them to dominate the U.S. senate and the Republican party., which was the majority party at the time. The people became restless because they were paying most of the taxes indirectly via tariffs on imported goods while the big corporations were paying very little. This lead to a vote by Congress to send the new Sixteenth Amendment to the states for ratification. Corporations heavily influenced this legislation so that it would favor taxing individuals instead of corporations, which lead the Republicans in the Senate to word the Amendment ambiguously so that it could or would be misconstrued to apply to natural persons instead of the corporations it was really intended to apply to by the American people. This created much subsequent litigation and confusion on the part of the Average American about exactly what the taxing powers of Congress are, and gave Congressman a lot of wiggle room to misrepresent the purpose of the Sixteenth Amendment to their constituents. Today, Congressmen use the ambiguity of the Amendment to regularly lie to their Constituents by saying that the "Sixteenth Amendment" authorizes Congress to tax the income of every American. This is an absolute lie and is completely inconsistent with the rulings of the U.S. Supreme Court. Courts below the Supreme Court have also used the same ambiguity mechanism to expand the operation of the income tax beyond its clearly limited application to the federal zone. During the same year as the Sixteenth Amendment was ratified, in 1913, the Congress also passed the Federal Reserve Act immediately after the Sixteenth Amendment. By doing this, they surrendered their control over the money system to a consortium of private banks. The Sixteenth Amendment was passed first in February of 1913 because it was the lender-security for the Non-Federal Reserve that would be needed to create a "credit line" and collateral. The Federal Reserve Act was passed in December of that same year. At that point, the Congress had an unlimited private credit line from commercial banks and a means to print as much money as they wanted in order to fund socialist expansion of the government. But remember that the bible says: "The rich ruleth over the poor, and the borrower [is] servant to the lender." [Prov. 22:7]

3	1911- 1939	Federal legislature	28 U.S.C. §144 (conflict of interest of federal judges) 28 U.S.C. §455 (conflict of interest of federal judges)	In 1911, the U.S. Congress passed the Judicial Code of 1911 and thereby made all District and Circuit courts into entirely administrative courts which had jurisdiction over only the federal zone. All the federal courts except the U.S. Supreme Court changed character from being Article III courts to Article IV territorial courts only. All the district courts were renamed from “District Court of the United States” to “United States District Court”. The Supreme Court said in Balzac v. Porto Rico, 258 U.S. 298 (1922) that the “United States District Court” is an Article IV territorial court, not an Article III constitutional court. Consequently, all the federal courts excepting the Supreme Court became administrative courts that were part of the Executive rather than the Judicial Branch of the government and all the judges became Executive Branch employees. See our article “Authorities on Jurisdiction of Federal Courts” for further details. The Revenue Act of 1932 then tried to apply income taxes against federal judges. The purpose was to put them under complete control of the Executive Branch through terrorism and extortion by the IRS. This was litigated by the Supreme Court in 1932 in the case of O’Malley v. Woodrough, 309 U.S. 277 (1939) just before the war started. The court ruled that the Executive Branch couldn’t unilaterally modify the terms of their employment contracts, so they rewrote the tax code to go around it subsequent to that by only taxing NEW federal judges and leaving the existing ones alone so as not to violate the Constitutional prohibition against reducing judges salaries. Since that time, federal judges have been beholden to the greed and malice of the Legislative branch because they are under IRS control. This occurred at a time when we had a very popular socialist President who threatened the Supreme Court if they didn’t go along with his plan to replace capitalism with socialism, starting with Social Security. President Roosevelt tried to retire all the U.S. Supreme Court justices and then double the size of the court and pack the court with all of his own socialist cronies in a famous coup called “The Roosevelt Supreme Court Packing Plan”.
4	1939- Present	Federal executive branch	28 U.S.C. §144 (conflict of interest of federal judges) 28 U.S.C. §455 (conflict of interest of federal judges) Separation of powers Doctrine	Right after the Supreme Court case of O’Malley v. Woodrough in 1939, the U.S. Congress wasted no time in passing a new Revenue Act that skirted the findings of the Supreme Court’s that declared income taxes levied against them to be unconstitutional. In effect, they made the payment of income taxes by federal judges an implied part of their employment agreement as “appointed officers” of the United States government in receipt of federal privileges. Once the judges were under control of the IRS, they could be terrorized and plundered if they did not cooperate with the enforcement of federal income taxes. This also endowed all federal judges with an implied conflict of interest in violation of 28 U.S.C. §455 and 28 U.S.C. §144
5	1939- Present	Federal legislative branch	Const. Art. 1, Sect. 2, Clause 3 Const. Art. 1, Sect. 9, Clause 4 18 U.S.C. §1589(3) (forced labor)	The Revenue Act of 1939 passed by the U.S. Congress instituted a very oppressive income tax to fund the upcoming World War II effort. It was called the “Victory Tax” and it was a voluntary withholding effort, but after the war and after people on a large scale got used to sending their money to Washington, D.C. every month through payroll withholding, the politicians cleverly decided not to tell them the truth that it was voluntary. The politicians then began rewriting the tax code to further confuse and deceive people and hide the truth about the voluntary nature of the income tax. This included the Internal Revenue Codes of 1954 and 1986, which were major updates of the IRC that further hid the truth from the legal profession and added so much complexity to the tax code that no one even understands them anymore.

6	1950- Present	Federal executive branch	18 U.S.C. §597 (expenditures to influence voting) 18 U.S.C. §872 (extortion) 18 U.S.C. §880 (receiving the proceeds of extortion) 18 U.S.C. §1957 (Engaging in monetary transactions in property derived from specified unlawful activity)	Federal government uses income tax revenues after World War II to begin socialist subsidies, starting with Lyndon Johnson's "Great Society" plan. Instead of paying off the war debt and ending the income tax like we did after the Civil war in 1872, the government adopted socialism and borrowed itself into a deep hole, following the illustrious example of Franklin Roosevelt's "New Deal" program. This socialist expansion was facilitated by the enactment of the Federal Reserve Act of 1913, which gave the government unlimited borrowing power. The income tax, however, had to continue because it was the "lender security" for the PRIVATE Federal Reserve banking trust that was creating all this debt and fake money. The income tax had the effect of making all Americans into surety for government debts they never authorized. The Civil Rights movement of the 1960's accelerated the growth of the socialist cancer to cause voters to abuse their power to elect politicians who would subsidize and expand the welfare-state concept.  "Democracy has never been and never can be so desirable as aristocracy or monarchy, but while it lasts, is more bloody than either. Remember, democracy never lasts long. It soon wastes, exhausts, and murders itself. There never was a democracy that never did commit suicide." John Adams, 1815.
7	1939- Present	Trial jury	18 U.S.C. §2111 (robbery)	Trial juries filled with people receiving government socialist handouts (money STOLEN from hard-working Americans) vote against tax protesters to illegally enforce the Internal Revenue Code, and especially in the case of the wealthy. Trial by jury becomes MOB RULE and a means to mug and rob the producers of society. The jurists are also under duress by the judge, who does not allow evidence to be admitted that would be prejudicial to government (or his retirement check) and who makes cases unpublished where the government lost on income tax issues. Because these same jurists were also educated in public schools, they are easily lead like sheep to do the government's dirty work of plundering their fellow citizens by upholding a tax that is actually voluntary. The result is slavery of wage earners and the rich to the IRS. The war of the "have-nots" and the "haves" using the taxing authority of the government continues on and expands.
8	1960- Present	Federal government	18 U.S.C. §873 (blackmail) 18 U.S.C. §208 (acts affecting a personal financial interest 18 U.S.C. §872 (extortion)	The federal government begins using income tax revenues and socialist welfare programs to manipulate the states. For instance: 1. They made it mandatory for states to require people getting drivers licenses to provide a Socialist Security Number or their welfare subsidies would be cut off. 2. They encourage states to require voters and jurists to be "U.S. citizens" in order to serve these functions so that they would also be put under federal jurisdiction. 3. They mandate that all persons receiving welfare benefits or unemployment benefits that include federal subsidies to have Socialist Security Numbers.
9	1980's- Present	Federal executive branch	18 U.S.C. §208 (conflict of interest) 18 U.S.C. §872 (extortion) 18 U.S.C. §876 (mailing threatening communications)	IRS abuses its power to manipulate and silence churches that speak out about government abuses or are politically active. This has the effect of making the churches politically irrelevant forces in our society so that the government would have no competition for the affections and the allegiance of the people.
10	1960- Present	Federal judicial branch	God's laws (bible)	Federal judiciary eliminates God and prayer in the schools. This leaves kids in a spiritual vacuum. Drugs, sex, teenage pregnancy run rampant. Families begin breaking apart. God is blasphemed. Single parents raise an increasing number of kids and these children don't have the balance they need in the family to have proper sex roles. Gender identity crisis and psychology problems result, causing homosexuality to run rampant. This further accelerates the breakdown of the family because these dysfunctional kids have dysfunctional families of their own. Because God is not in the schools, eventually the people begin to reject God as well. This expands the power of government because when the people aren't governed by God, they are ruled by tyrants and become peasants and serfs eventually. That is how the Israelites ended up in bondage to the Egyptians: because they would not serve God or trust him for their security. They wanted a big powerful Egyptian government to take care of them and be comfortable and safe, which was idolatry toward government.

11	2000- Present	State executive branch	18 U.S.C. §208 (acts affecting a personal financial interest)	The state executive branches abuse their power to set very high licensing requirements for home schools and private schools, backed by teachers unions and contributions of these unions to their political campaigns. Licensing requirements become so high that only public schools have the capital to comply, virtually eliminating private and home schooling. Teachers and inferior environment in public schools further contributes to bad education and liberal socialist values, further eroding sovereignty of the people and making them easy prey for sly politicians who want to enslave them with more unjust laws and expand their fiefdom. Government continues to grow in power and rights and liberties simultaneously erode further.

1 After our corrupt politicians are finished socially re-engineering our system of government using the tax code and a
2 corrupted federal judiciary, below is what happens to our original republican government system. This is what we refer to
3 as the “De facto U.S. Government”. It has replaced our “De jure U.S. Government” not through operation of law, but
4 through fraud, force, and corruption. One of our readers calls this new architecture for social organization “The New Civil
5 Religion of Socialism”, where the collective will of the majority or whatever the judge says is sovereign, not God, and is
6 the object of worship and servitude in courtrooms all over the country, who are run by devil-worshipping modern-day
7 monarchs called “judges”. These tyrants wear black-robos and chant in Latin and perform exorcism on hand-cuffed
8 subjects to remove imaginary “demons” from the people that are defined by majority vote among a population of criminals
9 (by God’s law), homosexuals, drug abusers, adulterers, and atheists. The vilification of these demons are legislated into 10 existence with “judge-made law”, which is engineered to maximize litigation and profits to the legal industry. The legal 11 industry, in turn, has been made into a part of the government because it is licensed and regulated by government. This
12 profession “worships” the judge as an idol and is comprised of golf and law school buddies and fellow members of the 13 American Bar Association (ABA), who hobnob with the judge and do whatever he says or risk having their attorney license
14 pulled. In this totalitarian socialist democracy/oligarchy shown below, the people have no inalienable or God-given
15 individual rights, but only statutory “privileges” and franchises granted by the will of the majority that are excise taxable.
16 After all, when God and Truth are demoted to being a selfish creation of man and a politically correct vain fantasy, then the 17 concept of “divine right” vanishes entirely from our political system.
18

1 Figure 6-3: Result of Corrupting Our Republican Form of Government

 3 In the above diagram, all people in receipt of federal funds stolen through illegally collected or involuntarily paid federal
 4 income taxes effectively become federal "employees" or "public officers". They identified themselves as such when they
 5 filed their W-4 payroll withholding form, which is a contract that says on the top "Employee Withholding Allowance
 6 Certificate". The Internal Revenue Code identifies "employee" to mean someone who works for the federal government in
 7 26 U.S.C. §3401(c). These federal "employees" are moral and spiritual "whores" and "harlots". They are just like Judas or

1 Essau...they exchanged the Truth for a lie and liberty for slavery and they did it mainly for money and personal security.
2 They are:

- 3 1. So concerned about avoiding being terrorized by their government or the IRS for “making waves”.
- 4 2. So immobilized by their own fear and ignorance that they don’t dare do anything.
- 5 3. So addicted to sin and other unhealthy distractions that they don’t have the time to do justice.
- 6 4. So poor that they can’t afford an expensive lawyer to be able to right the many wrongs imposed on them by a corrupted
7 government. Justice is a luxury that only the rich can afford in our society.
- 8 5. So legally ignorant, thanks to our public “fool”, I mean “school” system that they aren’t able to right their wrongs on 9 their own in court without a lawyer.
- 10 6. So afraid of corrupt judges and lawyers who are bought and paid for with money that they stole from hardworking
11 Americans in illegally enforcing what is actually a voluntary Subtitle A income against those who in fact and indeed
12 can only be described per the law as “nontaxpayers”.
- 13 7. So unable to take care of their own needs because:
  - 14 7.1. Most of their money has been plundered by a government unable and unwilling to control its spending.
  - 15 7.2. They have allowed themselves to depend too much on government and allowed too much of their own hard-16 earned money to be stolen from them.
  - 17 7.3. They spent everything they had and went deep in debt to buy things they didn't need.
- 18 8. So covetous of that government welfare or socialist security or unemployment check or paycheck that comes in the 19 mail every month.

20 ...that they wouldn’t dare upset the apple cart or try to right the many wrongs that maintain the status quo by doing justice
21 as a voter or jurist. As long as they get their socialist handout and they live comfortably on the “loot” their “Parens
22 Patriae”, or “Big Brother” sends them, they don’t care that massive injustice is occurring in courtrooms and at the IRS
23 every day and that they are sanctioning, aiding, and abetting that injustice as voters and jurists with a financial conflict of 24 interest in criminal violation of 18 U.S.C. §§201 and 208. In effect, they are bribed to look the other way while their own
25 government loots and oppresses their neighbor and then uses that loot to buy votes and influence.

26 “Thou shalt not steal.”
27 [Exodus 20:15 ]

28 For all the law is fulfilled in one word, even in this: “You shall love your neighbor as yourself.”
29 [Gal 5:14, Bible, NKJV]

30 Would you rob your neighbor? No you say? Well then, would you look the other way while someone else robs him in 31 your name? Government is YOUR AGENT. If government robs your neighbor, God will hold you, not the agent who did
32 it for you, personally responsible, because government is your agent. God put you in charge of your government and you
33 are the steward. Frederic Bastiat described the nature of this horrible corruption of the system in the following book on our 34 website:

The Law, Frederic Bastiat
<http://famguardian.org/Publications/TheLaw/TheLaw.htm>

35 If you want to know what the above type of government is like spiritually, economically, and politically, read the first-hand
36 accounts in the book of Judges found in the Bible. Corruption, sin, servitude, violence, and wars characterize this notable
37 and most ignominious period and “social experiment” as documented in the Bible. Now do you understand why God’s law
38 mandates that we serve ONLY Him and not be slaves of man or government? When we don’t, the above totalitarian 39 socialist democracy/tyranny is the result, where politicians and judges in government become the only sovereign and the 40 people are there to bow down to and “worship” and serve an evil and corrupt government as slaves.

41 Below is the way God himself describes the corrupted dilemma we find ourselves in because we have abandoned the path
42 laid by our founding fathers, as described in Isaiah 1:1-26:

43 Alas, sinful nation,
44 A people laden with iniquity
45 A brood of evildoers
46 Children who are corrupters!

47 They have forsaken the Lord

1 They have provoked to anger
 2 The Holy One of Israel,
 3 They have turned away backward.
 4 Why should you be stricken again?
 5 You will revolt more and more.
 6 The whole head is sick [they are out of their minds!: insane or STUPID or both].
 7 And the whole heart faints....

8 Wash yourselves, make yourselves clean;
 9 Put away the evil of your doings from before My eyes.
 10 Cease to do evil.
 11 Learn to do good;
 12 Seek justice.
 13 Rebuke the oppressor [the IRS and the Federal Reserve and a corrupted judicial system];
 14 Defend the fatherless.
 15 Plead for the widow [and the "nontaxpayer"]....

16 How the faithful city has become a harlot!
 17 It [the Constitutional Republic] was full of justice;
 18 Righteousness lodged in it.
 19 But now murderers [and abortionists, and socialists, and democrats, and liars and corrupted judges].
 20 Your silver has become dross,
 21 Your wine mixed with water.
 22 Your princes [President, Congressmen, Judges] are rebellious,
 23 Everyone loves bribes,
 24 And follows after rewards.
 25 They do not defend the fatherless,
 26 nor does the cause of the widow [or the "nontaxpayer"] come before them.

27 Therefore the Lord says,
 28 The Lord of hosts, the Mighty One of Israel,
 29 "Ah, I will rid Myself of My adversaries,
 30 And take vengeance on My enemies.
 31 I will turn My hand against you,
 32 And thoroughly purge away your dross,
 33 And take away your alloy.
 34 I will restore your judges [eliminate the BAD judges] as at the first,
 35 And your counselors [eliminate the BAD lawyers] as at the beginning.
 36 Afterward you shall be called the city of righteousness, the faithful city."
 37 [Isaiah 1:1-26, Bible, NKJV]

38 So according to the Bible, the real problem is corrupted lawyers and judges and people who are after money and rewards,
 39 and God says the way to fix the corruption and graft is to eliminate the bad judges and lawyers. Whose job is that? It is 40 the even more corrupted Congress! (see 28 U.S.C. §134\(a\) and 28 U.S.C. §44\(b\))

41 "O My people! Those who lead you cause you to err, 42 And destroy the way of your paths."
 43 [Isaiah 3:12, Bible, NKJV]

44 "The king establishes the land by justice; but he who receives bribes overthrows it."
 45 [Prov. 29:4, Bible, NKJV]

46 Can thieves and corrupted judges and lawyers and jurors, who are all bribed with unlawfully collected money they lust after 47 in the pursuit of socialist benefits, reform themselves if left to their own devices?

48 "When you [the jury] saw a thief [the corrupted judges and lawyers paid with extorted and stolen tax money],
 49 you consented with him, And have been a partaker with adulterers."
 50 [Psalm 50:18, Bible, NKJV]

51 "The people will be oppressed,
 52 Every one by another and every one by his [socialist] neighbor [sitting on a jury who 53 was indoctrinated and brainwashed in a government school to trust government];
 54 The child will be insolent toward the elder,
 55 And the base toward the honorable."
 56 [Isaiah 3:5, Bible, NKJV]

57 "It must be conceded that there are rights [and property] in every free government beyond the control of the 58 State [or any judge or jury]. A government which recognized no such rights, which held the lives, liberty and

1 property of its citizens, subject at all times to the disposition and unlimited control of even the most democratic
 2 depository of power, is after all a despotism. It is true that it is a despotism of the many--of the majority, if you
 3 choose to call it so--but it is not the less a despotism."
 4 Loan Ass'n v. Topeka, [87 U.S. \(20 Wall.\) 655, 665 (1874)]

5 The answer is an emphatic no. It is up to We The People as the sovereigns in charge of our lawless government to right
 6 this massive injustice because a corrupted legislature and judiciary and the passive socialist voters in charge of our
 7 government today simply cannot remedy their own addiction to the money that was stolen from their neighbor by the
 8 criminals they elected into office. These elected representatives were supposed to be elected to serve and protect the 9 people, but they have become the worst abusers of the people because they only got into politics and government for selfish
 10 reasons. Notice we didn't say they got into "public service", because we would be lying to call it that. It would be more
 11 accurate to call what they do "self-service" instead of "public service". One of our readers has a name for these kinds of 12 people. He calls them SLAT: Scum, Liars, and Thieves. If you add up all the drug money, all the stolen property, all the 13 white collar crime together, it would all pale in comparison to the "extortion under the color of law" that our own de facto
 14 government and the totally corrupted people who work for it are instituting against its own people. If we solve no crime
 15 problem other than that one problem, then the government will have done the most important thing it can do to solve our
 16 crime problem and probably significantly reduce the prison population at the same time. There are lots of people in jail
 17 who were put there wrongfully for income tax crimes that aren't technically even crimes. These people were maliciously
 18 prosecuted by a corrupted Satan worshipping DOJ with the complicity of a corrupted judiciary and they MUST be freed
 19 because they have become slaves and political prisoners of a corrupted state for the sake of statutes that operate as the 20 equivalent of a "civil religion" and which are not and cannot be law in their case. That's right: the corrupted state has
 21 erected a counterfeit church and religion that is a cheap imitation of God's design complete with churches, prayers, priests,
 22 deacons, tithes, and even its own "Bible" (franchise) and they have done so in violation of the First Amendment. The 23 nature of that civil religion is exhaustively described below:

24 We will now close this section with a tabular summary that compares our original "de jure" government to the "de facto"
 25 government that we presently suffer under. This corrupted "de facto" government only continues to exist because of our 26 passive and tolerant approach towards the illegal activities of our government servants. We can fix this if we really want to,
 27 folks. Let's do it!

28 Table 6-2: Comparison of our "De jure" v. "De facto" government

#	Type of separation of powers	De jure government	De facto government
1	Separation of Church and State	Government has no power to control or regulate the political activities of churches	IRS 501(c ) designation allows government to remove tax exemption from churches if they get politically involved
2	Separation of Money and State	Only lawful money is gold and the value of the dollar is tied to gold. Government can't manufacture more gold so they can't abuse their power to coin money to enrich themselves.	Fiat currency is Federal Reserve Notes (FRNs). Government can print any amount of these it wants and thereby enrich itself and steal from the those who hold dollars by lowering the value of the dollars in circulation (inflation)
3	Separation of Marriage and State	People getting married did not have marriage licenses from the state. Instead, the ceremony was exclusively ecclesiastical and it was recorded only in the family Bible and church records.	Pastor acts as an agent of both God and the state. He performs the ceremony and is also licensed by the state to sign the state marriage license. Churches force members getting married to obtain state marriage license by saying they won't marry them without a state-issued marriage license.
4	Separation of School and State	Schools were rural and remote and most were private or religious. There were very few public schools and a large percentage of the population was home-schooled.	Most student go to public schools. They are dumbed-down by the state to be good serfs/sheep by being told they are "taxpayers" and being shown in high school how to fill out a tax return without even being shown how to balance a check book. They are taught that government is the sovereign and not the people, and that people should obey the government.

5	Separation of State and Federal government	States control the Senate and all legislation and taxation internal to a state. Federal government controls only foreign commerce in the form of imposts, excises, and duties under Article 1, Section 8, Clause 3 of the Constitution.	Federal government receives lion's share of income taxes over both internal and external trade. It redistributes the proceeds from these taxes to the socialist states, who are coerced to modify their laws in compliance with federal dictates in order to get their fair share of this stolen "loot".
6	Separation between branches of government: Executive, Legislative, Judicial	Three branches of government are entirely independent and not controlled by other branches.	Judges are "employees" of the executive branch and have a conflict of interest because they are beholden to IRS extortion. Executive controls the illegal tax collection activities of the IRS and dictates to other branches its tax policy through illegal IRS extortion. Using the IRS, Executive becomes the "Gestapo" that controls everything and everyone. Congress and the courts refuse to reform this extortion because they benefit most financially by it.
7	Separation of Commerce and State	Federal government regulates only foreign commerce of corporations. States regulate all internal commerce. Private individuals have complete privacy and are not regulated because they don't have Socialist Security Numbers and are not monitored by the IRS Gestapo. Banks are independent and do not have to participate in a national banking system so they don't coerce their depositors to bet government-issued numbers nor do they snoop/spy on their depositors as an agent of the IRS Gestapo. Private employers are not regulated or monitored by federal Gestapo and their contracts with their employees are private and sacred.	All credit issued by a central, private Federal Reserve consortium. Federal Reserve rules coerce private banks to illegally enforce federal laws in states of the Union that only apply in the federal zone. Namely, they force depositors to have Socialist Security Numbers and they report all currency transactions over $3,000 to the Dept of the Treasury (CTR's). "Spying" on financial affairs citizens by government makes citizens afraid of IRS and government and coerces them to illegally pay income taxes by government. Employers are coerced to enslave their employees to IRS through wage reporting and withholding, often against the will of employees.
8	Separation of Media and State	Press was free to report as they saw fit under the First Amendment. Most newspapers were small-town newspapers and were private and independent.	Television, radio, the internet, and corporations have taken over the media and concentrated control of it to the hands of a very few huge and "privileged" corporations that are in bed with the federal and state governments. Media is no longer independent, and broadcasters don't dare cross the government for fear of either losing their FCC license, being subjected to an IRS audit, or having their government sponsorship revoked.
9	Separation of Family and State	Families were completely separate from the state. Private individuals were not subject to direct taxation or regulation by either state or federal government. No Socialist Security Numbers and no government surveillance of private commerce by individuals. Women stayed home and out of the workforce. Men dominated the political and commercial landscape and also defended their family from encroachments by government. Children were home-schooled and worked on the farm. They inherited the republican values of their parents. Morality was taught by the churches and there was an emphasis on personal responsibility, modesty, manners, respect, and humility.	Using income taxes, mom was removed from the home to enter the workforce so she could replace the income stolen from dad by the IRS through illegal enforcement of the Internal Revenue Code. Conflict over money breaks families down and divorce rate reaches epidemic proportions. Children are neglected by their parents because parents both have to work full-time and duke it out with each other in divorce court. Majority of children raised in single parent homes. Television and a liberal media dominates and distorts the thoughts and minds of the children. Public schools filled with homosexuals and liberals, many of whom have no children of their own, teach our children to be selfish, rebellious, sexually promiscuous, homosexual drug-abusers. Pornography invades the home through the internet, cable-TV, and video rentals, creating a negative fixation on sex. Television interferes with family communication so that children are alienated from their parents so that they do not inherit good morals or respect for authority from their parents.. Crime rate and prison population reaches unprecedented levels. Citizens therefore lose their ability to govern themselves and the legal field and government come in and take over their lives.

10	Separation of Charity and State	Churches and families were responsible for charity. When a person was old or became unemployed, members of the church or family would take them. Personal responsibility and morality within churches and families would encourage them to improve their lives.	Monolithic, huge, and terribly inefficient government bureaucracies replace families and churches as major source of charity. These bureaucracies have no idea what personal responsibility is and are not allowed to talk about morality because they are not allowed to talk about God. Generations of people grow up under this welfare umbrella without ever having to take responsibility for themselves, and these people abuse their voting power to perpetuate it. Supremacy of families and churches is eliminated and government becomes the new "god" for everyone to worship. See Jeremiah 2:26-28.

3 6.2 General Evolution

4 If the average American is not legally liable to pay taxes on his earned income, then how did we evolve to the point where
5 we have to pay income taxes in violation of our constitutional rights? We've scoured every tax book and government
6 publication we could find totaling thousands of pages to compile a chronological sequence for how the fraud was
7 perpetrated over the last century. Because this process involves essentially criminal activity, there has been a concerted
8 effort by the government to cover it up, which we will describe in detail later. The most glaring evidence of that cover-up
9 is found in the testimony of Shelley Davis, the IRS' only historian, who testified in front of Congress during the IRS
10 Restructuring hearings in 1998 and whose testimony we captured for you to read later in section 6.6.9.1. She also wrote a
11 book documenting the secret culture within the IRS entitled Unbridled Power which we highly recommend. Criminals,
12 you will recall, don't want any historical information maintained about their misdeeds, and the IRS is one of the few
13 organizations associated with the federal government that has no historical records, no current historian, and a concerted
14 effort to provide as little information about their activities in their FOIA responses as possible. In most cases, you actually
15 have to litigate against the IRS in federal court to get the information you want because they are so tight-lipped in their 16 cover-up of their wrongdoing.

17 The most fruitful single source for information about the history of the Internal Revenue Service is found in a publication
18 written by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue in 1948 entitled The Work and Jurisdiction of the Bureau of Internal
19 Revenue, 1948, which we have published electronically and made freely available on our website at the below address:

20 <http://famguardian.org/PublishedAuthors/Govt/IRS/WorkAndJurisOfTheBIR1948s.pdf>

21 You will DEFINITELY want to download this large book (10.8 Mbytes) and read the history of the IRS right out of the 22 horse's mouth. Below is a brief chronology of w the fraud was perpetrated over the years, as compiled from the many 23 government publications at our disposal:

- 24 1. 1776: Declaration of Independence Signed.
- 25 2. 1818: U.S. v. Bevens, 16 U.S. 336 (1818)

26 The U.S. supreme Court ruled that there are two separate and distinct jurisdictions within the United States of America:

27 "The exclusive jurisdiction which the United States have in forts and dock-yards ceded to them, is derived from 28 the express assent of the states by whom the cessions are made. It could be derived in no other manner; because 29 without it, the authority of the state would be supreme and exclusive therein," 3 Wheat., at 350, 351.
30 [U.S. v. Bevens, 16 U.S. 336 (1818)]

31 This case is very significant, because it has never been overruled and when we read laws in the U.S. Codes, it is very 32 important for us to establish which of these two jurisdictions apply. If it is the latter jurisdiction, the 50 union states,
33 then the law applies to us. If it is the former jurisdiction, also called the "federal zone", then the law doesn't apply to the vast majority of citizens domiciled in the 50 union states. The Internal Revenue Code, incidentally , ONLY applies to the “federal zone”...not to you!

3. 1861-1865: Civil War

4. January 1, 1863: Emancipation Proclamation signed by President Lincoln

5. 1862: The Nation’s First Income Tax

- 5.1 President Lincoln introduced the first income tax to pay for the Civil War. Congress eliminated the tax in 1872.
- 5.2 The Tax Act of 1862 was passed and signed by President Lincoln July 1 1862. The rates were 3% on income above $600 and 5% on income above $10,000. The rent or rental value of your home could be deducted from income in determining the tax liability. The Commissioner of Revenue stated "The people of this country have accepted it with cheerfulness, to meet a temporary exigency, and it has excited no serious complaint in its administration." This acceptance was primarily due to the need for revenue to finance the Civil War.
- 5.3 Although the people cheerfully accepted the tax, compliance was not high. Figures released after the Civil War indicated that 276,661 people actually filed tax returns in 1870 (the year of the highest returns filed) when the country's population was approximately 38 million.
- 5.4 With the end of the Civil War the public's accepted cheerfulness waned. The Tax Act of 1864 was modified after the war. The rates were changed to a flat 5 percent with the exemption amount raised to $1,000. Several attempts to make the tax permanent were tried but by 1869 "no businessman could pass the day without suffering from those burdens" From 1870 to 1872 the rate was a flat 2.5 percent and the exemption amount was raised to $2,000.

6. 1868: States Ratify the 14th Amendment

- 6.1 Citizenship was extended to Blacks. This was done in order to protect blacks, because southern states would give them no citizenship or rights under state law.
- 6.2 Legislatures of the Southern States under gun point were forced to ratify the 14th Amendment.
- 6.3 Just before the passage of the 14th Amendment, Congress passed a revision to the Statutes at Large which gave people a way out of being constitutional “citizens of the United States”, 15 Stat. 223-224 (1868), R.S. § 1999, which stated that:

"the right of expatriation is a natural and inherent right of all people, indispensable to the enjoyment of the rights of life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness," and decreed that "any declaration, instruction, opinion, order, or decision of any officers of this government which denies, restricts, impairs, or questions the right of expatriation, is hereby declared inconsistent with the fundamental principles of this government."

7. 1871: U.S. Inc. Federal Corporation Established

District of Columbia Organic Act of 1871, 16 Stat. 419-429 created a “municipal corporation” to govern the District of Columbia. Considering the fact that the municipal corporation itself was incorporated in 1801, an “Organic Act” (first Act) using the term “municipal corporation” in 1871 can only mean a private corporation owned by the municipality. Hereinafter we will call that private corporation, “Corp. U.S.” By consistent usage, Corp. U.S. trademarked the name, “United States Government” referring to themselves. The District of Columbia Organic Act of 1871, 16 Stat. 419-429 places Congress in control (like a corporate board) and gives the purpose of the act to form a governing body over the municipality; this allowed Congress to direct the business needs of the government under the existent martial law and provided them with corporate abilities they would not otherwise have. This was done under the constitutional authority for Congress to pass any law within the ten mile square of the District of Columbia..

8. 1872: Nation’s First Income Tax was Repealed

The Internal Revenue Act of 1862 was repealed, ending the nation’s first income tax. The civil war was over and paid for and there was no longer any reason for the tax.

9. 1872: Office of the Assessor of Internal Revenue Eliminated

Functions of Assessor delegated to the Collector of Internal Revenue. See: 17 Statutes at Large, p. 401, 42nd Congress, Session III Chapter XIII (December 24, 1872).

10. 1875: U.S. v. Cruikshank, 92 U.S. 542 (1875). Supreme Court Confirms that there are Two Types of Citizens: federal and state

"We have in our political system a Government of the United States and a government of each of the several States. Each of these governments is distinct from the others, and each has citizens of its own

1 ...
 2 "Both before and after the Fourteenth Amendment to the federal Constitution, it has not been necessary for a
 3 person to be a citizen of the United States in order to be a citizen of his state."
 4 [Citing U.S. v. Cruikshank, 92 U.S. 542 (1875)]

5 11. 1894: Caha v. United States, 152 U.S. 211 (1894)

6 The U.S. supreme Court ruled that Congress can only make laws that apply to areas over which it has exclusive
 7 jurisdiction, which is the "federal zone", including the District of Columbia and other federal territories. It cannot
 8 make laws affecting activity within the states unless the Constitution explicitly grants that authority:

9 "The law of Congress in respect to those matters do not extend into the territorial limits of the states, but have 10 force only in the District of Columbia, and other places that are within the exclusive jurisdiction of the national 11 government."
 12 [Caha v. United States, 152 U.S. 211 (1894)]

13 12. 1895: Pollock v. Farmers' Loan & Trust Co., 157 U.S. 429, 158 U.S. 601 (1895)

14 12.1 U.S. Supreme court ruled that direct taxes on the income of individuals are unconstitutional and are forbidden.
 15 12.2 Here was the court's ruling:

16 "Nothing can be clearer than that what the constitution intended to guard against was the exercise by the 17 general government of the power of directly taxing persons and property within any state through a majority
 18 made up from the other states. It is true that the effect of requiring direct taxes to be apportioned among the 19 states in proportion to their population is necessarily that the amount of taxes on the individual [157 U.S. 429,
 20 583] taxpayer in a state having the taxable subject-matter to a larger extent in proportion to its population than 21 another state has, would be less than in such other state; but this inequality must be held to have been 22 contemplated, and was manifestly designed to operate to restrain the exercise of the power of direct taxation to 23 extraordinary emergencies, and to prevent an attack upon accumulated property by mere force of numbers.

 25 It is the duty of the court in this case simply to determine whether the income tax now before it does or does not
 26 belong to the class of direct taxes, and if it does, to decide the constitutional question which follows . . .

27 First. That the law in question, in imposing a tax on the income or rents of real estate, imposes a tax upon the 28 real estate itself; and in imposing a tax on the interest or other income of bonds or other personal property,
 29 held for the purposes of income or ordinarily yielding income, imposes a tax upon the personal estate itself;
 30 that such tax is a direct tax, and void because imposed without regard to the rule of apportionment; and that by 31 reason thereof the whole law is invalidated.

32 Second. That the law is invalid, because imposing indirect taxes in violation of the constitutional requirement of 33 uniformity, and therein also in violation of the implied limitation upon taxation that all tax laws must apply
 34 equally, impartially, and uniformly to all similarly situated. Under the second head, it is contended that the rule
 35 of uniformity is violated, in that the law taxes the income of certain corporations, companies, and associations,
 36 no matter how created or organized, at a higher rate than the incomes of individuals or partnerships derived
 37 from precisely similar property or business; in that it exempts from the operation of the act and from the burden
 38 of taxation numerous corporations, companies, and associations having similar property and carrying on 39 similar business to those expressly taxed; in that it denies to individuals deriving their income from shares in 40 certain corporations, companies, and associations the benefit of the exemption of $ 4,000 granted to other
 41 persons interested in similar property and business; in the exemption of $4,000; in the exemption of building
 42 and loan associations, savings banks, mutual life, fire, marine, and accident insurance companies, existing 43 solely for the pecuniary profit of their members,-these and other exemptions being alleged to be purely 44 arbitrary and capricious, justified by no public purpose, and of such magnitude as to invalidate the entire 45 enactment; and in other particulars. "
 46 [Pollock v. Farmers' Loan & Trust Co., 157 U.S. 429, 158 U.S. 601 (1895)]

47 13. 1900: Knowlton v. Moore, 178 U.S. 41 (1900)

48 The U.S. supreme Court defined the difference between direct taxes [income taxes on persons] and excise taxes:

49 "Direct taxes bear immediately upon persons, upon the possession and enjoyment of rights; indirect taxes are 50 levied upon the happening of an event as an exchange."

52 14. 1901: Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 (1901): Corruption of our Tax System

14.1 The U.S. Supreme Court ruled that people domiciled in federal territories such as Puerto Rico, Guam, the District of Columbia, and the Virgin Islands, are NOT protected by the U.S. Constitution. Therefore, these people could be subjected to direct taxes on income because they were classified as citizens of the U.S.

14.2 Below is an excerpt from that ruling:

"CONSTITUTIONAL RESTRICTIONS AND LIMITATIONS [Bill of Rights] WERE NOT APPLICABLE to the areas of lands, enclaves, territories, and possessions over which Congress had EXCLUSIVE LEGISLATIVE JURISDICTION"

[Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 (1901)]

14.3 This led subsequently to the imposition of direct taxes on the income of individuals who were U.S. Citizens following the fraudulent ratification of the 16th Amendment in 1913.

14.4 This ruling was also behind why income tax returns after this case ask you: "Are you a U.S. Citizen?". Once you answer yes, you give up your constitutional rights! See sections 4.6 and 4.8 for further details on this.

15. 1909: Congress proposed the 16th Amendment and sent to states for ratification

15.1 The Senate approved it by an astounding vote of 77 to zero and the House followed suit with a roll call of 318 to 14.

15.2 The measure then went to the states for ratification.

16. 1909: Corporate Excise Tax of 1909 was passed, 36 Stat 112.

16.1 This was the country's first income tax, where "income" was defined as corporate profit.

16.2 All subsequent income tax laws and the Internal Revenue Code itself were based on this.

16.3 The Supreme Court ruled in Bowers v. Kerbaugh-Empire Co., 271 U.S. 170, 174 (1926) that:

"Income has been taken to mean the same thing as used in the Corporation Excise Tax Act of 1909 (36 Stat. 112) in the 16th Amendment, and in the various revenue acts subsequently passed."

17. 1911: Judicial Code of 1911:

This act abolished the existing circuit courts and replaced them with Circuit Courts of Appeals. The District Courts of the United States became "United States District Courts". This left no Article III courts to hear cases involving constitutional rights. All district and circuit courts became, at that point, Article II courts which may only have jurisdiction within territories of the United States Government. These courts are part of the executive branch, not the judicial branch, of the U.S. government. The judges in these Art. II courts are civil service employees of the Office of Personnel Management, which is part of the Executive Branch. The judges are not judicial officers as required under Art. III of the Constitution, but federal employees.

18. Feb. 12, 1913: 42nd state "allegedly" voted for approval of 16th Amendment, and the following words became a part of the United States Constitution:

"The Congress shall have power to lay and collect taxes on incomes, from whatever source derived, without apportionment among the several States, and without regard to any census or enumeration."

Of course, we all know that the claim that the 16th amendment was ratified by the then secretary of state Philander Knox this was indeed one of the biggest "frauds" in history that has not to this day ever been questioned or investigated by a Congress that wants YOUR money. It ought to be quite obvious why the Supreme court won't touch this and the Congress has refused to investigate this fraud from the beginning. You can read about this fraud in a book called "Law That Never Was" by ordering the book from the following website:

19. Oct. 3, 1913: Tariff Act

The Tariff Act of October 3, 1913, IIE, 38 Stat. 170 was passed, and it contained, perhaps somewhat surprisingly, a fairly expansive withholding provision. It was later repealed and replaced with the 1954 Code, 26 U.S.C. §6041 et seq.

20. 1913: Congress creates the Federal Reserve System with the Federal Reserve Act of 1913

20.1 Congress creates the FRS; permits the emission of FRNs, redeemable in "lawful money"; and declares FRNs to be "obligations of the United States", but not "legal tender". In practice, the Federal Reserve Banks and the United States Treasury redeem FRNs for gold coin on demand. FRNs are a fiduciary currency.

20.2 Note that the Federal Reserve and the income tax were enacted at the same time because they cannot function without each other. If we are going to put our money supply in the hands of private bankers, then we need a way to sop up excess printed dollars with an income tax, or the economy will go out of control and inflation will spiral. Since both the income tax and the Federal Reserve are evil, we must eliminate both of them at the same time as well.

21. 1913-1917: Media heralded coming of the 16th Amendment

21.1 Announced after its alleged ratification that it was the basis for the new income tax which only the wealthy would pay. The camel now had its nose under the tent and all Congress had to do was raise the tax rates over time and let the camel all the way in.

21.2 Who controlled the printed media in 1913? John D. Rockefeller and his bankers, through stock ownership.

21.3 Most of the papers parroted what they were instructed to tell the people.

21.4 To this day, a nationwide chorus of politicians, TV economists and Law school professors alike all repeat that the 16th Amendment authorized the imposition of an income tax on U.S. citizens. They are all mistaken.

22. 1916: Stanton v. Baltic Mining Co., 240 U.S. 103 (1916)

22.1 The U.S. Supreme Court ruled that the 16th Amendment conferred "no new powers of taxation"!

22.2 Here are some excerpts. The 16th Amendment...:

"...prohibited the ... power of income taxation possessed by Congress from the beginning from being taken out of the category of indirect taxation to which it inherently belonged..."
[Stanton v. Baltic Mining Co., 240 U.S. 103 (1916)]

22.3 This was a big blow to the IRS. Shortly after that case Treasury Decision 2313 was issued as a form of "damage control".

23. March 21, 1916: Treasury Decision 2313

23.1 Thwarted by the Brushaber and Stanton decisions, the Department of Treasury issued Treasury Decision Number 2313. Here are a few excerpted quotes from T.D. 2313 in reference to the Brushaber decision:

"...it is hereby held that income accruing to nonresident aliens in the form of interest...and dividends...is subject to the income tax imposed by the act of October 3, 1913. The responsible heads, agents, or representatives of nonresident aliens...shall make a full and complete return of the income therefrom on ...Form 1040..."

23.2 So there you have it. The Treasury Department has stated that you are to file Form 1040 on behalf of your "nonresident alien principal." So don't forget to do that next April 15th! Of course, since you'll be signing Form 1040 under penalties of perjury and stating that every material fact is 100% correct to the best of your knowledge, and since the commission of perjury is a felony that attaches criminal fines and penalties, be sure you really are filing Form 1040 on behalf of your "nonresident alien principal"!

23.3 By reading Internal Revenue Code section 871(a), we see that it imposes a tax of 30% on the amount received by non-resident aliens from sources within the United States. Code section 871(b) states that the nonresident alien shall be taxable under code section 1, thus authorizing the use of the charts in section 1 to compute and reduce his tax, so he can get a tax refund from the 30% which is withheld under the provisions of section 1441.

23.4 Also, under section 874(a), the nonresident alien is entitled to the benefit of deductions and credits filing or having his agent file, a 1040, as stated in TD 2313.

23.5 *Of course, this whole fiasco has nothing whatsoever to do with most Americans, who aren't liable for federal income taxes at all unless they make themselves liable by "volunteering"!

24. 1920: Evans v. Gore, 253 U.S. 245 (1920); Supreme Court Declares Direct Taxes on Federal Judges to Not be Authorized by the 16th Amendment and Unconstitutional

24.1 In this case, the Supreme Court addressed the issue of whether a tax on salary was authorized:

"After further consideration, we adhere to that view and accordingly hold that the Sixteenth Amendment does not authorize or support the tax in question. " [A direct tax on salary income of a federal judge]

[Evans v. Gore, 253 U.S. 245 (1920)]

24.2 This case has a very thorough treatment of the 16th Amendment taxing issues, and discusses nearly all of the issues critical to the income tax, and by the way, fully supports the entire position advocated in this document with regards to the 26 U.S.C. §861 issues and taxable source issues.

25. 1922: Supreme Court Rules Against Socialism in the Case of Bailey v. Drexel Furniture Co., 259 U.S. 20 (1922)

25.1 This case was about the validity of Child Labor Tax law imposed by Congress. The Drexel Furniture Company filed suit because it didn't want to be forced to pay the Child Labor Tax to the IRS. The Supreme Court ruled that the Child Labor Tax Law was unconstitutional because it amounted to social engineering and exceeded the powers conferred by the Constitution on the federal government. In effect, they called it socialism and an abuse of the taxing and legal authority of Congress conferred by the Constitution and amounted to legislating socialism by legislatively plundering the employer profits for the benefit of the employees. The findings in this case are similar to the case of Railroad Retirement Board v. Alton Railroad Co., 295 U.S. 330 (1935). The arguments used here apply equally well to the federal income tax, as we pointed out in the preface to this document.

“Out of a proper respect for the acts of a co-ordinate branch of the government, this court has gone far to sustain taxing acts as such, even though there has been ground for suspecting, from the weight of the tax, it was intended to destroy its subject. But in the act before [259 U.S. 20, 38] us the presumption of validity cannot prevail, because the proof of the contrary is found on the very face of its provisions. Grant the validity of this law, and all that Congress would need to do, hereafter, in seeking to take over to its control any one of the great number of subjects of public interest, jurisdiction of which the states have never parted with, and which are reserved to them by the Tenth Amendment, would be to enact a detailed measure of complete regulation of the subject and enforce it by a so-called tax upon departures from it. To give such magic to the word 'tax' would be to break down all constitutional limitation of the powers of Congress and completely wipe out the sovereignty of the states.”

[Bailey v. Drexel Furniture Co., 259 U.S. 20 (1922)]

25.2 Keep in mind the historical context of this ruling. The Federal Reserve had just been created by Congress AND the 16th Amendment had just been claimed fraudulently to have been ratified by Philander Knox, also in 1913. The tax code of 1921 had just been passed by 1922, which was a major rewrite of the code designed to conceal the unconstitutionality of income taxes on individuals. Now Congress was trying to expand its power even further by abusing its legislative authority to force employers to increase benefits to their workers!

26. 1925: Certiorari Act of 1925 Passed

26.1 Former President William Howard Taft, then acting as Chief Justice of the U.S. Supreme Court, helped author a bill called the Certiorari Act of 1925. Recall that William Taft had been the President who introduced the Sixteenth Amendment to the U.S. Congress in 1909 (see section 3.11.11.1 for further details on this). This Act authorized the U.S. Supreme Court to have discretion to deny the hearing of appeals from lower federal appeal courts. By refusing to hear an appeal, the Supreme Court in effect had the right to deny Constitutional rights of the appellants from the circuit courts if such rights had been violated by the lower courts or the then Bureau of Internal Revenue (now called the IRS). Justices of the Supreme Court take an oath to support and defend the Constitution against all enemies, foreign and domestic, and by denying appeals, they could in effect violate their oath and condone extortion by the BIR. This kind of scandal is called a sin of omission and its commonplace in the Supreme Court now.

26.2 When you think about it, the Certiorari Act of 1925 violates the separation of powers doctrine because the Judiciary and the Congress are supposed to be separate and sovereign powers within the federal government. How can one branch of government, the Congress in this case, authorize another supposedly independent branch of federal government, the Supreme Court in this Case, to violate the Constitutional rights of Americans by denying their appeals? They can't, because if the appeal involves constitutional issues, then they would not be upholding the constitution as their oath of office requires them to do!

26.3 As we explain subsequently in section 6.4.1, this bill was an important new tool that our corrupt government could use to uphold the federal income tax, because it allows the federal district and circuit courts to uphold and expand federal income taxes while allowing the U.S. Supreme Court to deny appeals from such cases, even if the findings of the lower court disagreed with numerous precedents set on previous Supreme Court cases that invalidate direct federal income taxes. It creates a schizophrenic, split personality federal government which, out of one side of its mouth, the Supreme Court, says income taxes are indirect excise taxes that are not authorized on natural persons as direct taxes, but then out of the other side of its mouth in the federal district and circuit courts, says direct income taxes are authorized by the Sixteenth Amendment. This represents not only hypocrisy of the highest order but also a violation of our fundamental right to due process under the Fourth, Fifth, and Seventh Amendments! How can you know what the Internal Revenue Code requires of you if the Supreme Court and the

1 federal circuit courts can't even consistently agree and the Supreme Court refuses to hear appeals that contradict
2 its own precedents?

3 27. 1933: FDR Amends the Trading With The Enemy Act of 1917 to Confiscate all Gold and Declare Emergency

4 27.1 Trading With The Enemy Act invoked to criminalize holding of gold. Penalty was $10,000 and imprisonment for
5 10 years. Act only applied on federal territories and possessions but not inside nonfederal areas of the 50 union
6 states. However, FDR make it "appear" that it applied to EVERYONE.

7 27.2 Congress repudiates redemption of FRNs in gold for United States citizens, and declares that FRNs shall be "legal
8 tender". The government continues to redeem FRNs in gold for foreigners; and United States citizens can redeem
9 FRNs for "lawful money" (such as United States Treasury Notes and silver certificates), which is redeemable in 10 silver coins. Therefore, FRNs remain a fiduciary currency, redeemable directly in gold internationally and 11 indirectly in silver domestically.

12 28. 1935: FDR Proposes and Congress Passes the Social Security Act of 1935

13 28.1 FDR gave a pep talk to congress on January 17, 1935 trying to sell Social Security.

14 28.2 Congress passed FDR's Social Security Act of 1935 on August 14, 1935.

15 28.3 Once passed, socialism is officially "institutionalized" within our republican government. This marks the 16 beginning of the end of "rugged individualism" in America. The tumor is planted and begins to grow.
17 Eventually, this cancer will destroy the country.

18 28.4 Voluntary Social Security tax deductions begin.

19 29. 1935: Supreme Court Rules Against Socialism AGAIN in the Case of Railroad Retirement Board v. Alton
20 Railroad Co., 295 U.S. 330 (1935)

21 29.1 After the Great Wall Street Crash in 1929, daily newspaper photographs of mile-long soup and bread lines
22 persuaded a frightened public to eagerly embrace the introduction of the European style socialism in the form of 23 Social Security, written and contrived in smoke-filled rooms by the same politician-puppets of the bankers who 24 had engineered both the crash and the depression.

25 29.2 A public eager to exchange liberty for benefits would vote for those politicians who would promise to provide
26 them with the greatest "fair share" of the public trough. Congress made its first attempt at socialist wealth
27 redistribution when it passed legislation in 1934 to provide for the retirement of railroad workers. Here's what the 28 Supreme Court had to say when they shot this act down as unconstitutional in their decision in Railroad
29 Retirement Board v. Alton Railroad Company decided May 6, 1935:

30 "The catalog of means and actions which might be imposed upon an employer in any business, tending to the 31 comfort and satisfaction of his employees, seems endless.

32 Provisions for free medical attendance and nursing, for clothing, for food, for housing, for the education of 33 children, and a hundred other matters might with equal propriety be proposed as tending to relieve the 34 employee of mental strain and worry.

35 Can it fairly be said that the power of Congress to regulate interstate commerce extends to the prescription of 36 any or all of these things?

37 Is it not apparent that they are really and essentially related solely to social welfare of the worker, and
38 therefore remote from any regulation of commerce as such? We think the answer is plain. These matters
39 obviously lie outside the orbit of Congressional power."

40 [Railroad Retirement Board v. Alton Railroad Co., 295 U.S. 330 (1935)]

41 29.3 There you have it--the high court informing Congress that it has no constitutional authority whatsoever to 42 legislate for the social welfare of the worker. The result was that when Social Security was instituted, it had to be 43 treated as strictly voluntary.

44 30. 1937: President Franklin D. Roosevelt "Stacks" the Supreme Court to Ramrod His Socialist Programs Down
45 Our Throats!!!

46 Thwarted by resistance to his socialist programs, including Social Security, in 1937, President Franklin D. Roosevelt
47 announced he was going to "stack" the Supreme Court (see <http://www.hpol.org/fdr/chat/>). This was called "the court
48 packing plan". The Supreme court originally had 6 justices, and he doubled its size by adding several of his own
49 "cronies" who would uphold and defend his socialist programs, including Social Security and the Victory Tax. He also 50 proposed to replace all the justices over 70, which included 5 of the 6 justices then in office.

1 31. 1939: Congress Obfuscates the Tax Code by Removing References to Nonresident Aliens from the Definition of
 2 “Gross Income”

3 31.1 In particular, they removed the phrase “in the case of a nonresident alien individual or of a citizen entitled to the
 4 benefits of section 262” from the 1921 code, which was the predecessor to 26 U.S.C. §861 we have today. There
 5 was not fundamental change in the constitution or the law. They made these changes to further conceal the truth.

6 31.2 See section 6.3.7 “Cover-Up of 1939: Removed References to Nonresident Aliens from the Definition of ‘Gross

8 32. Victory Tax Act of 1942, imposed by the Revenue Act of 1942, 172, 56 Stat. 884. Part of the 1939 Tax Code.

9 32.1 This act was a voluntary employer payroll deduction of income taxes required in order to fight World War II. It
 10 represented the start of employer withholding, but note that it was entirely voluntary.

11 32.2 As a part of the Victory Tax Act, President Franklin Delano Roosevelt created the Voluntary W-4 Withholding
 12 System, making income tax withholding mandatory for all citizens of the Union. This was a two year tax, and as 13 expected, both the Victory Tax and the Voluntary W-4 Withholding were repealed by Congress in 1944.
 14 Unfortunately, they forgot to tell America.

15 32.3 Under the disguise of the 1913 Internal Income tax, the machinery of the Victory tax remained in operation.
 16 Voluntary compliance with the Federal internal income tax jumped from an anemic 5 percent to a robust 60
 17 percent in a matter of a couple years via the repealed Victory tax system of tax collection. By using two 18 illegitimate tax systems, Congress created the beast we have today, taxing us under rates and conditions
 19 exceeding those which prompted the Boston Tea Party and the Declaration of Independence.

20 32.4 The Victory Tax was replaced by the Current Tax Payment Act of 1943, 57 Stat. 126, and was repealed by the 21 Individual Income Tax Act of 1944, 6 (a), 58 Stat. 234.

22 33. 1943: President Franklin Delano Roosevelt’s Executive Order 9397 made Social Security Numbers a standard
 23 tracking mechanism across all federal agencies. Bye-bye privacy and Fourth Amendment!

24 33.1 Read Presidential Executive Order 9397 at:

26 34. 1947: U.S. v. Silk, 331 U.S. 704 (1947) Declares Social Security Taxes are Legitimate Excise Taxes On 27 Businesses

28 34.1 FDR’s stacking of the Supreme Court finally pays off!

29 34.2 The cancer of socialism begins to spread further with encouragement by the state.

30 34.3 Thomas Jefferson’s warnings and predictions are realized:

31 “In every government on earth is some trace of human weakness, some germ of corruption and degeneracy, 32 which cunning will discover, and wickedness insensibly open, cultivate and improve.”
 33 [Thomas Jefferson: Notes on Virginia Q.XIV, 1782. ME 2:207]

34 35. 1952: IRS Reorganization and elimination of the Office of Collector of Internal Revenue

35 35.1 Office of Collector of Internal Revenue abolished. See Reorganization Plans No. 26 of 1950 and No. 1 of 1952,

38 35.2 As part of this reorganization, the government manufactured a scandal concerning the collectors. The real reason,
 39 however, was to make the code voluntary.

40 35.3 This office of the Collector of Internal Revenue made possible to protest a tax. Without a Collector of Internal 41 Revenue, it is impossible to protest a tax because it has to be voluntary without a collector. If you don't make a
 42 demand in the law, then no one has to do anything. This reorganization made the process of tax collection into an 43 administrative process, which allowed all U.S. District courts into administrative courts in regards to federal 44 taxes. The only people who should go to these courts at this point are "taxpayers", which are people who 45 volunteered to pay the tax.

46 35.4 Section 29 of the 1894 Revenue Act was the last federal law that imposed a legal duty to pay upon citizens and 47 residents of the United States. The duty to pay the tax was subsequently eliminated by Pollock v. Farmers’ Loan
 48 & Trust Co., 157 U.S. 429 (1895) and does not appear in any Revenue Law after that date.

49 36. 1954: Congress Rewrites the Tax Code Again to Hide Constitutional Limitations on The Right To Tax

- 1 36.1 Deleted any phrases referring to income that is, under the Constitution or fundamental law, not taxable by the
 2 government. This was done by changing the definition of gross income from “unless exempt from tax by law” to
 3 “unless excluded by law”. There were no changes to the law or the Constitution that would necessitate deleting
 4 the reference to the Constitution; it was done for no other credible reason than to obscure the Constitutionally-
 5 limited application of the income tax, but without making the regulation technically incorrect - only deceiving
 6 and misleading.
- 7 36.2 They obfuscated locating taxable sources by adding double-negatives “list of sources that are NOT considered tax 8 exempt”. Why not just state what IS taxable, which is foreign income?
- 9 36.3 Removed from the regulations the phrase “in the case of nonresident alien individuals and foreign corporations
 10 engaged in trade or business within the United States” from the regulations in section 1.861-8. This made it
 11 appear that the applicability of the income tax was expanded. As Congress stated, the application of the law did 12 not change in 1954, but some key phrases in the regulations were removed so as to make the truth less obvious.
- 13 36.4 The admission of the limited application vanished from the regulations defining “gross income,” but remained in 14 the regulations under 26 U.S.C. §861, and (to maintain literal accuracy) the regulations began to say that 861 and
 15 following and related regulations “determine the sources of income for purposes of the income tax.” This
 16 change removed any chance of the regulations under Section 61 raising suspicions.
- 17 36.5 See section 6.5.12 “Cover-Up of 1954: Hiding Constitutional Limitations on the Right To Tax” for details of 18 how Congress obfuscated the tax code in this case.

19 37. 1968: Congress Repudiates Redemption of All Forms of “lawful money” in silver

20 37.1 This turned FRNs into a fiat currency domestically for the first time.

21 38. 1971: President Nixon Repudiates Redemption of FRNs in Gold

22 38.1 This turned FRNs into a fiat currency internationally for the first time.

23 39. 1978: Congress Rewrites the Tax Code Again to Confuse the IRS Regulations on “Sources”

24 39.1 In 1978, the wording of 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8 was changed significantly, and the title was changed from 25 “Computation of Taxable Income from Sources Within the United States” to “Computation of taxable income
 26 from sources within the United States and from other sources and activities.” Some have suggested that the
 27 current title implies that one should not be using this section unless he has income both from within the United 28 States and from “other sources and activities.” The older title, as well as the text of the current regulations, shows
 29 that this is not the case.

30 39.2 See section 6.5.11 “Cover-Up of 1978: Confused IRS Regulations on ‘Sources’” for details of how Congress
 31 obfuscated the tax code in this case.

32 40. 1979: The Zaritsky Report

33 40.1 Congressional Research Service report #79-131, written in 1979 by Howard Zaritsky and titled Some 34 Constitutional Questions Regarding the Income Tax Laws agreed in stating:

35 “...therefore it is clear that the income tax is an ‘indirect’ tax...subject to the rule of uniformity, rather than the 36 rule of apportionment.”

37 40.2 So the so-called “income tax amendment” that everybody and their uncle believe authorized the income tax and
 38 that many patriotic Americans object to since there is overwhelming evidence that it was never properly ratified
 39 by the States...changed absolutely nothing!

40 40.3 The 16th Amendment was constitutional window dressing and might as well have never been written. Why? In
 41 the original draft of the 16th Amendment, Senate Joint Resolution 39, as per page 3138 of the June 11, 1909
 42 Congressional Record, included the word “direct.” Fearing that the Supreme Court would again strike it down,
 43 Senator Nelson Aldrich, Chairman of the powerful Senate Finance Committee, and as you will recall, the host of 44 the Jekyll Island conference, presented Senate Joint Resolution No. 40, entered on page 3900 of the 45 Congressional Record of June 28, 1909, in which the word “direct” is omitted.

46 40.4 By deliberately omitting the word “direct” and then ending with the phrase, “...without apportionment among the 47 several States”, the language of the 16th was cleverly crafted to create the illusion that some new type of 48 presumably direct, yet unapportioned tax was being imposed on “income.”

49 40.5 But here's the problem. Article 1, Section 2, Clause 3, and Article 1, Section 9, Clause 4 requiring the 50 apportionment of direct taxes, and Article 1, Section 8, Clause 1 requiring that indirect taxes be uniform had 51 never been repealed and, at the time the 16th was drafted, they were still standing law. As the Supreme Court ruled in the famous Marbury v. Madison case in 1803, the Constitution cannot conflict with itself! An unapportioned income tax, as the 16th called for, would by very definition, have to be an indirect tax, because direct taxes still had to be apportioned.

40.6 The Supreme Court was alert to this ruse and chided Congress by deciding in Stanton that the inclusion of the phrase "without apportionment" could only mean that Congress intended to clarify that the income tax is indeed an indirect tax. The 16th Amendment to the United States Constitution did not repeal or alter Congress' power, or obligation, to impose the emergency direct tax should a deficit arise.

40.7 The power of Congress to impose a direct tax still exists, and direct taxes are still required to be apportioned among the states.

The fact that the 16th Amendment did not change one word or phrase in the Constitution has, for years, been one of the U.S. government's best kept secrets!

Many college professors in our country's most prestigious institutions still teach that the income tax is neither a direct nor an indirect tax, but is a hybrid tax that falls somewhere between the two. Such a gross lack of understanding by those charged with teaching the Law to future lawyers is, in my opinion, unpardonable. It also explains many of the unexplained controversies and inconsistencies in the application of the Internal Revenue Code in the various circuit and district courts in section 3.20.1.

41. 1982: Congress Rewrites 26 U.S.C. to Remove Footnotes from IRC Section 61 Pointing to Section 861

41.1 The Code contains many footnotes and references to allow readers to search back and trace the origins and evolution of laws and regulations, since this often clarifies intent. IRC 61(a) on gross income used to have a footnote informing readers that it came from Section 22(a) of the 1939 Code and that the law hadn't been changed. The footnote said, "Source: Sec. 22(a), 1939 Code, substantially unchanged." That footnote was in the 1954 version of the Internal Revenue Code at least up to the 1982 edition, but then it vanished, making it difficult for tax professionals to understand how the wording has been deceptively altered, leading to misapplication of the law. Constitutional limitations discussed above were thus hidden.

41.2 Deletion of the footnote has also made it much more difficult to notice and understand the close connection between IRC 61 and IRC 861 (or 26 C.F.R. § 1.61 and 26 C.F.R. §1.861), especially as 26 C.F.R. §1.861 is now thousands of pages distant from C.F.R. 1.61, and in the earlier versions, the section was not numbered 861, but 119.

41.3 See section 6.5.10 "Cover-Up of 1982: Footnotes Removed from IRC Section 61 Pointing to Section 861" for details of how Congress obfuscated the tax code.

42. 1986: U.S. v. Stahl, 792 F.2d. 1438 (1986), Federal District Court Refused to Hear Arguments on the Fraudulent Passage of the 16th Amendment, which Allegedly Authorized Income Taxes

This case was a major scandal for the Federal appellate court. The defendant Stahl presented credible evidence that the 16th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution was fraudulently claimed to have been ratified by the Secretary of State, Philander Knox, in 1913. The court refused to deal with the issue and ignored all the evidence presented. Instead, they said it wasn't their business to deal with the issue. Congress said the same thing. This leads to the conclusion that there is a federal judicial (as well as a Congressional) conspiracy to protect the income tax!

"[Defendant] Stahl's claim that ratification of the 16th Amendment was fraudulently certified constitutes a political question because we could not undertake independent resolution of this issue without expressing lack of respect due coordinate branches of government...."

43. 1988: Congress Obfuscates the 26 U.S.C./IRC Further to Change the title of Part I, Subchapter N to Make it Refer Only to Foreign Income

43.1 Prior to 1988, the title of Part I of Subchapter N (which begins with Section 861) was "Determination of sources of income" (which is still the heading of the related regulations). In 1988, this title was changed to "Source rules and other general rules relating to foreign income."

43.2 It should be mentioned that while the titles of parts may give an indication of what the part is about, the title has no effect on the actual legal application.

 2                   relating to the contents of this title be given any legal effect.”
 3                   [26 U.S.C. §7806(b)]

- 4           43.3 So when the title was changed (but the text of the law was not), the application of the law did not change. What
 5           changed was the appearance of the table of contents.
 6           43.4 When the title of Part I was changed, and the new title stated that the part was about “foreign income,” it no
 7           longer appeared to be an obvious place for most people to look when determining their taxable income. This
 8           would certainly have the effect of drawing attention away from Section 861.
 9           43.5 See section 6.5.8 “Cover-Up of 1988: Changed Title of Part I, Subchapter N to Make it Refer Only to Foreign
 10           Income” for details of how Congress obfuscated the tax code in this case.

11 44. 1993: IRS Removes References in IRS Publication 515 to Citizens Not Being Liable for Income Tax and 12 Confused New Language.

- 13           44.1 Here's what was . Inside Publication 515, there appears a statement the IRS hopes you never see. Under the 14           main heading "Withholding Exemptions and Reductions" and within the paragraph titled "Evidence of 15           Residence", the IRS states in speaking to the payer of income:

16                   "If an individual gives you a written statement stating that he or she is a citizen or resident of the United States,
 17                   and you do not know otherwise, you do not have to withhold tax."

- 18           44.2 The 1994 version of Publication 515 varied somewhat. Instead of ending with "...you do not have to withhold 19           tax", it continues:

 21                   Circular E, Employer's Tax Guide."

- 22           44.3 This change was in response to tax protester groups, who at the time were citing this publication as proof that 23           they weren't liable to pay taxes as citizens of the 50 union states with income from domestic sources!
 24           44.4 See section 6.6.18 “Cover-Up of 1993: IRS Removed References in IRS Publication 515 to Citizens Not Being 25           Liable for Tax and Confused New Language” for details of how IRS obfuscated their publications in this case.

26 45. 1995: IRS Modifies Regulations to Remove Pointers to Form 2555 for IRC Section 1 Liability for Federal 27 Income Tax Under the Paperwork Reduction Act

- 28           45.1 The Paperwork Reduction Act of 1980 requires that every form used by the federal government to collect
 29           information from the public first be approved by the Office of Management and Budget (“OMB”). The 30           regulations at 26 C.F.R. §602.101 contain a table listing the OMB-approved forms for each section of regulations.
 31           The regulations 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1 are entitled “Income tax on individuals,” and correspond to 26 U.S.C. §1
 32           (which imposes the “income tax”). Up until 1995, the first line in this table identified Form 2555, “Foreign 33           Earned Income,” as the only approved form under 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1.
 34           45.2 In 1995, after many “tax resistance” groups had become aware of this, the listing for “1.1-1” was removed from 35           the list, in order to avoid “confusion,” according to the Department of the Treasury. The process of applying for,
 36           and receiving OMB approval for a form makes the possibility of an error extremely remote. The Department of
 37           the Treasury requested that Form 2555 be approved for 1.1-1, and the Office of Management and Budget
 38           approved it. When the entry drew too much attention, it was removed. At present no forms are approved for use
 39           with 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1.
 40           45.3 See section 6.6.17 “Cover-Up of 1995: Modified Regulations to Remove Pointers to Form 2555 for IRC Section
 41           1 Liability for Federal Income Tax” for details of how IRS obfuscated the regulations in this case.

42 46. 1998: IRS Restructuring and Reform Act of 1998

- 43           46.1 Because of widespread abuse of due process rights of Americans, the U.S. Congress passed the IRS Restructuring
 44           and Reform Act of 1998 (<http://www.irs.gov/irs/display/0..i1%3D46%26genericId%3D23294.00.html>). It was 45           designed to remedy many of the abuses of the IRS, including:
 46           46.1.1 A shifting of the burden of proof from the Citizen to the IRS for certain circumstances. This eliminated
 47           the widespread perception by citizens that with regard to tax matters, citizens were “guilty until proven 48           innocent”.
 49           46.1.2 Illegal liens, levies, and seizures of the property of citizens.
 50           46.1.3 The labeling of Citizens as “illegal tax protesters”.

- 1 46.1.4 Creation of the Taxpayer Advocate office to resolve complaints of citizens.
 2 46.1.5 Prohibition of the IRS contacting third parties of the citizen without prior notice.
 3 46.1.6 Refunds of overpayments prior to final determination.
 4 46.1.7 Allowance for accountant-client privilege.
 5 46.1.8 Prohibition of threat of audit to coerce TRAC agreements.
 6 46.1.9 Severe penalties ranging between $100,000 and $1,000,000 for wrongful collection of taxes by revenue
 7 agents.
 8 46.1.10 Citizens allowed to quash 3rd party summons by IRS.
 9 46.2 During the hearings prior to the enactment of this legislation, there was unbelievable publicized testimony of 10 many different individuals who had been abused illegally by the IRS. The witnesses were so afraid of the IRS
 11 that they had to have their voices and identities concealed to avoid retribution. This was a clear indication that 12 the IRS had way too much power.
 13 46.3 You will note by examining the statistics in section 2.12 of the Tax Fraud Prevention Manual, Form #06.008 that
 14 IRS abusive behavior toward citizens was significantly curbed following the passage of this act. This act did
 15 exactly what it was supposed to do, which points to the fact that if we want real reforms of the tax system and the 16 IRS, then ultimately it is up to us as citizens to vote and to be politically involved enough to make sure that our 17 elected representatives know what we expect from them and from our tax system.

18 6.3 The Laws of Tyranny

19 This section contains a description of what is called The Laws of Tyranny. These laws describe the major techniques by 20 which governments are systematically corrupted. As you read through the rest of this chapter, try to deduce for yourself
 21 how these laws apply to the specific instance of corruption described in each section. Nearly every section within this 22 chapter can be associated with one of these laws.

23 The Laws of Tyranny

- 24 1. Any power that can be abused will be abused.
 25 1.1. The main mechanism for abusing law is through obfuscation of the law to turn it into a mechanism for terrorizing
 26 the ignorant and uninformed.
 27 1.2. Any law the electorate sees as being open to being perverted from its original intent will be perverted in a manner
 28 that exceeds the manner of perversion seen at the time.
 29 1.3. Any law that is so difficult to pass it requires the citizens be assured it will not be a stepping stone to worse laws,
 30 will in fact be a stepping stone to worse laws.
 31 1.4. Any law that requires the citizens be assured the law does not mean what the citizens fear, means exactly what the 32 citizens fear.
 33 1.5. Any law passed in a good cause will be interpreted to apply to causes against the wishes of the people.
 34 1.6. Any law enacted to help any one group will be applied to harm people not in that group.
 35 1.7. Everything the government says will never happen, will happen.
 36 1.8. What the government says it could not foresee, the government has planned for.
 37 1.9. When there is a budget shortfall to cover non-essential government services, the citizens will be given the choice
 38 between higher taxes or the loss of essential government services.
 39 1.10. Should the citizens mount a successful effort to stop a piece of legislation, the same legislation will be passed
 40 under a different name or as a rider to a more popular measure.
 41 2. All deprivations of freedom and choice will be increased rather than reversed. Abuse and tyranny will always expand
 42 to fill the limits of resistance to them.
 43 3. If people don't resist the abuses of others, they will have no one to resist the abuses of themselves, and tyranny will 44 prevail.

45 Frederick Douglas, an early American Civil Rights advocate, summed up these laws with the following statement:

46 Find out just what the people will submit to and you have found out the exact amount of injustice and wrong
 47 which will be imposed upon them; and these will continue until they are resisted with either words or blows, or 48 with both. The limits of tyrants are prescribed by the endurance of those whom they oppress.
 49 [Frederick Douglass, civil rights activist, Aug. 4, 1857]

6.4 Presidential Scandals Related to Income Taxes and Socialism

"The illegal we do immediately. The unconstitutional takes a bit longer."
[Henry Kissinger]

"Politicians are the same all over. They promise to build a bridge where there is no river."
[Nikita Khrushchev]

"The current income tax code is the chief source of political corruption in the nation's capitol. Tax reform is not for the timid."
[Rep. Richard K. Arney, R-Texas]

6.4.1 1925: William H. Taft's Certiorari Act of 1925

As we have stated repeatedly throughout this book, there is a judicial conspiracy to protect the income tax (see sections 6.9 and 1.7). The basic problem is that the federal district and circuit courts are acting as a protection racket for the IRS while the U.S. Supreme Court has been looking the other way by denying appeals to correct such abuses. How did we arrive at the point where the Supreme Court even had the discretion to deny such appeals? That is a scandal all by itself, as you will find out.

President Howard Taft is the single person most responsible for the federal income tax that we have today. He was a brilliant man and the only person who had all the qualifications necessary to engineer an overthrow of our de jure government and the replacement of it with the de facto criminal government we have today. For instance, he is the only person who ever did all of the following:

1. Served as the President of the United States
2. Served as the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court
3. Served as a Collector of Internal Revenue in Michigan
4. Was able to get the Sixteenth Amendment into the hands of the states for ratification in 1909.
5. Was still in office when the Sixteenth Amendment was declared ratified and the Federal Reserve Act was passed.

Let's examine item 2 above in more detail. President Taft was the ONLY President who ever served as a Collector of Internal Revenue. Even as President of the United States and later as a Chief Justice of the U.S. Supreme Court, he apparently continued in that role. Here is what Wikipedia says on this subject:

Nearly all the financial corruption that exists in our country's money and tax systems was introduced during his tour of office as President and this corruption was later perfected and expanded during his nine year tenure as Chief Justice of the Supreme Court starting in 1921. If you would like to learn more about this man, we recommend The Complete Book of U.S. Presidents, by William A Degregorio, ISBN 0-517-18353-6.

In section 3.11.11.1 we revealed the legislative intent of the Sixteenth Amendment by showing you the Presidential Speech that introduced the Sixteenth Amendment for the first time, given by William H. Taft before Congress in 1909. That speech showed clearly that then President Taft understood that federal income taxes were excise taxes that could not be instituted against other than federal corporations. He introduced the Sixteenth Amendment to Congress in 1909 as a way to circumvent this restriction and broaden the application of federal income taxes to authorize a supposed direct income tax on private persons. Subsequent to the introduction of the Sixteenth Amendment for state ratification in 1909, Secretary of State Philander Knox committed fraud in 1913 by claiming that the Sixteenth Amendment had been properly ratified by  $\frac{3}{4}$  of the states. Knox was Taft's hand-picked Secretary of State.

During his presidency, Taft made six appointments to the Supreme Court -- more than any other one-term President. Many think that when Taft named Edward White Chief Justice rather than the other obvious choice, Charles Evans Hughes, there was a political agenda to pave a way for his own later appointment as Chief Justice. Taft appointed White because White was twelve years older than Hughes. Naming White gave Taft a better shot at being Chief Justice one day himself -- in spite of Thomas Jefferson's famous complaint that "few [Justices] die and none resign.". You can read more about Taft's history from the speech given by Chief Justice Rehnquist on April 13, 2002, and which is posted on the Supreme Court website at:

We know by reading excerpts from Stanton v. Baltic Mining, 240 U.S. 103 (1916) in section 3.17.11, that the Supreme Court, subsequent to the ratification of the Sixteenth Amendment in 1913, disagreed with President Taft about the effect of the Sixteenth Amendment by saying that it conferred "no new power of taxation" upon Congress. Here is what the U.S. Supreme Court said in 1916, three years after the ratification of the Sixteenth Amendment:

"..by the previous ruling it was settled that the provisions of the Sixteenth Amendment conferred no new power of taxation but simply prohibited the previous complete and plenary power of income taxation possessed by Congress from the beginning from being taken out of the category of indirect taxation to which it inherently belonged and being placed in the category of direct taxation subject to apportionment by a consideration of the sources from which the income was derived, that is by testing the tax not by what it was -- a tax on income, but by a mistaken theory deduced from the origin or source of the income taxed. "

President Taft, who would later leave office in 1913 to be appointed by President Harding to become Chief Justice of the Supreme Court in 1921, must have known this was going to happen when he introduced the Sixteenth Amendment in 1909. So how did he skirt this declaration by the Supreme Court that nullified the 16th Amendment to allow the fraud of federal income taxes to perpetuate anyway? The answer is quite interesting.

As Chief Justice of the U.S. Supreme Court, President Taft sponsored a bill called the Certiorari Act of 1925. In the year that Taft was appointed Chief Justice of the Supreme Court in 1921, the docket of the Supreme Court was reportedly 5 years behind, according to Chief Justice Rehnquist, so when Taft became Chief Justice, he complained to Congress and the President that the Supreme Court was hopelessly backed up in hearing appeals from lower courts and that the court needed the discretion to be able to deny appeals from lower courts. What sort of appeals might those be? How about federal income tax trials to begin with! Here is the way Chief Justice Rehnquist described this situation:

"When he was appointed Chief Justice in 1921, the Court had fallen nearly five years behind in its docket. He resolved this caseload congestion in the Court by convincing Congress to pass the Judiciary Act of 1925 -- also known as the Certiorari Act -- which gave the Court discretion as to which cases to hear. Some members of Congress were doubtful -- why shouldn't every litigant have a right to get a decision on his case from the Supreme Court? Taft responded that in each case, there had already been one trial and one appeal. "Two courts are enough for justice," he said. To obtain still a third hearing in the Supreme Court, there should be some question involved more important than just who wins this lawsuit."

He must have figured that if the appeals courts below the Supreme Court would uphold the income tax and if the Supreme Court could deny appeals, then in spite of the Supreme Court precedents established earlier which nullified the Sixteenth Amendment, we could have a schizophrenic and split personality federal judicial system that on the one hand, would declare at the Supreme Court level that direct income taxes were unconstitutional, but at courts below the Supreme Court would declare them constitutional. As long as the Supreme Court under the Certiorari Act of 1925 could deny appeals, it wouldn't have to correct the abuses of the lower courts and the split personalities could continue. This sin of omission by the Supreme court which was authorized and even encouraged by Taft's unconstitutional Certiorari Act would then serve to perpetuate the income tax fraud. This would open the doors for the U.S. Congress to perpetuate the myth of income tax liability by lying to their constituents and telling them that they "must pay federal income taxes because the Sixteenth Amendment authorizes it". This, in a nutshell, is exactly the legacy and the heritage that we live with to this day, and we have President Taft in large part, to thank for it. The obscenely dishonest people in Congress who know the truth and yet continue to perpetuate this fraud are simply maintaining the system that Taft setup through his skullduggery.

Former President Taft served only four years as Chief Justice after the passage of the Certiorari Act of 1925, resigning from office in February 1930 because of illness and dying a month later. He must have figured he had accomplished the job he set out to do. E.B. White, his predecessor Chief Justice, served almost 10 years and Justice Fuller before him served 21 years.

To summarize the big picture, Chief Justice Taft must have known that the federal income tax fraud could not continue if the Supreme Court lacked the discretion to deny appeals, or Writs of Certiorari as they are called, from lower courts. If the Bureau of Internal Revenue, or BIR (now called the IRS) kept trying at the time to extort money from people and the Supreme Court consistently was saying that the Sixteenth Amendment didn't authorize them to do this, then people could eventually appeal all the way up to the Supreme Court and stop the unlawful assessment and collection, which would destroy federal revenues and keep the BIR in check. Allow the Supreme Court to deny appeals, however, and the situation would be very different. With his Certiorari Act passed by Congress in 1925 in place, President William Howard Taft had all the pieces in place needed to perpetuate and enlarge the federal income tax fraud:

1. A Supreme Court stacked with six of his own hand-picked justices during his term as President from 1909-1913.
2. The Sixteenth Amendment that Taft himself had introduced in 1909.
3. A fraudulent ratification of the Sixteenth Amendment by Philander Knox in 1913. Philander Knox was his own hand-picked Secretary of State.
4. The Federal Reserve Act of 1913, scandalously passed by just four members of Congress during a Christmas recess immediately after the Sixteenth Amendment was ratified and during Taft's administration.
5. The Certiorari Act of 1925 that authorized the Supreme Court to deny justice to people who had been defrauded of federal income taxes they didn't owe by the then Bureau of Internal Revenue (BIR).
6. Control of the Supreme Court for five years following the passage of the Certiorari Act, so he could get in place several circuit court rulings favorable to the income tax that the Supreme Court would deny writs to. Taft served as Chief Justice from 1921 to 1929 until his death in 1930.
7. At the end of Taft's term as Chief Justice, our country plunged into the Great Depression, which most knowledgeable people say was caused by a deliberate and systematic contraction of the money supply by the Federal Reserve in order to engineer the socialist reforms that FDR would later propose in the form of Socialist Security. Our purely capitalist economic system had to be made to look like it was failing by the bankers before most rugged individualist Americans would willingly accept anything as radical as Socialist Security or a government handout.

1 The fundamental defect in the Certiorari Act was the fact that the Supreme Court could:

- 2 1. Deny appeals without explaining why (and evade accountability for its decision). If the people are the sovereigns and
- 3 the government is their servant, what gives the servant the right to tell the sovereign what to do with its appeal?
- 4 2. Deny appeals even though decisions of lower courts clearly conflicted with its precedents. This amounts to condoning
- 5 government wrongs.
- 6 3. Deny appeals of parties whose constitutional rights were claimed to be injured. The ability to deny justice to parties
- 7 whose constitutional rights had been violated clearly violates the oath that the justices take to “support and defend the
- 8 Constitution against all enemies, foreign and domestic”.

9 If the above three defects in the unconstitutional Certiorari Act of 1925 were remedied, we wouldn't have the split

10 personality Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde court system we have today and the fraud of the income tax, because they would be

11 impossible to maintain with an accountable Supreme Court that was obligated to:

- 12 1. Correct rulings below it that violated or contradicted its precedents.
- 13 2. Correct rulings which violated constitutional rights without exception.
- 14 3. Explain why it would not hear the case or defend the constitutional rights of the injured party (be accountable).

15 The necessity of doing all the above has been described by the U.S. Supreme Court as “The Rule of Necessity” as follows:

"If an action is sued in the bench against all the Judges there, then by necessity they shall be their own Judges." 2 H. Rolle, An Abridgment of Many Cases and Resolutions at Common Law 93 (1668) (translation).

<sup>227</sup> For example, in Mooers v. White, 6 Johns. Ch. 360 (N. O'Donoghue v. United States, 289 U.S. 516 (1933); Evans v. Gore, 253 U.S. 245 (1920). In Evans, however, an action brought by an individual judge in his own behalf, the Court by clear implication dealt with the Rule:

"Because of the individual relation of the members of this court to the question . . . , we cannot but regret that its solution falls to us . . . . But jurisdiction of the present case cannot be declined or renounced. The plaintiff was entitled by law to invoke our decision on the question as respects his own compensation, in which no other judge can have any direct personal interest; and there was no other appellate tribunal to which under the law he could go." Id., at 247-248.<sup>230</sup>

216*216 It would appear, therefore, that this Court so took for granted the continuing validity of the Rule of Necessity that no express reference to it or extended discussion of it was needed.<sup>231</sup>

Now do you see how the pieces of the puzzle were cleverly and invisibly weaved together by conspiracies involving all three branches of the federal government over several years to create the totally unjust and extortionary slavery tax system we have now? Now do you understand why Thomas Jefferson said:

"Single acts of tyranny may be ascribed to the accidental opinion of a day. But a series of oppressions, pursued unalterably through every change of ministers, too plainly proves a deliberate systematic plan of reducing us to slavery".
[Thomas Jefferson]

Do you also now understand why Franklin Delano Roosevelt said?:

"In politics, nothing happens by accident. If it happens, it was planned that way."
[Franklin D. Roosevelt]

6.4.2 1933: FDR's Great American Gold Robbery

6.4.2.1 Money Background

Genuine money must have the following three qualities:

1. It must be a storehouse of intrinsic value.
2. It must be a universal, portable medium of exchange.
3. It must have a common unit of account.
4. It must be immune to attempts by the government to lower its value by printing more and thereby use inflationary forces to "tax" all money in circulation. This ensures what we called earlier in section 2.8.9.2 "separation of money and state".

Black's Law Dictionary, 5th Edition, defines "money" as:

"In its usual and ordinary explanation it means coins and paper currency used as circulating medium of exchange, and does not embrace notes, bonds, evidences of debt or other personal or real estate."

Gold and silver coins and the previous gold and silver certificates were a storehouse of "intrinsic" value. They actually increased in value with inflation. Therefore, they were a hedge against inflation.

LAWFUL MONEY is defined in Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd Ed., as:

"Money which is legal tender in payment of debts; e.g. gold and silver coined at the mint."

<sup>231</sup> In another, not unrelated context, Chief Justice Marshall's exposition in Cohens v. Virginia, 6 Wheat. 264 (1821) could well have been the explanation of the Rule of Necessity; he wrote that a court "must take jurisdiction if it should. The judiciary cannot, as the legislature may, avoid a measure because it approaches the confines of the constitution. We cannot pass it by, because it is doubtful. With whatever doubts, with whatever difficulties, a case may be attended, we must decide it, if it be brought before us. We have no more right to decline the exercise of jurisdiction which is given, than to usurp that which is not given. The one or the other would be treason to the constitution. Questions may occur which we would gladly avoid; but we cannot avoid them." Id., at 404 (emphasis added).

1 The responsibility of coining gold and silver money was ceded to Congress in our Constitution; Article I, Section 8, Clause

3 "The Congress shall have the power...To coin money and regulate the value thereof..."

4 Because the Constitution is the Supreme Law of the Land, nothing but gold or silver coin is "lawful" money for the 50
5 union states. Because of heaviness of gold and silver coins, "Gold and Silver Certificates" were created by the Department
6 of Treasury of the United States. These certificates were representative of actual gold and silver coins which were owned
7 by the People holding the Certificates and maintained in the vaults of the banks and Fort Knox. These Gold and Silver
8 Certificates were convertible to gold and silver coin, "PAYABLE ON DEMAND." It is important to understand that this
9 gold and silver, represented by the Certificates, belonged to the People or Certificate Holders and NOT the banks or the 10 government.

11 At one time, reference to the laws that made money "lawful" were printed directly on the face of our currency. The laws
12 printed on the bills were enacted on March 14, 1900 and December 24, 1919.

13 66th Congress Sess. II Chapter 15, (December 24, 1919)-Public Law No. 103

14 CHAP. 15-An Act to make gold certificates of the United States payable to bearer on demand legal tender.

15 "Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, that
16 gold certificates of the United States payable to bearer on demand shall be and are hereby made legal tender in payment of 17 all debts and dues, public and private.

18 §2 That all acts or parts of Acts which are inconsistent with this Act are hereby repealed."

19 Approved, December 24, 1919

20 The above law has NEVER been and CANNOT be repealed, as it is applicable to the 50 sovereign states, without amending
21 the Constitution. Note that the Act, says "gold certificates payable to the bearer on demand "shall be and are." This means 22 not only when the Act was passed, but also into the future!

23 §2 of the Act, repealing Acts or parts of Acts inconsistent with the above Public Law 103, would, therefore, not only be
24 applicable to past Acts which were inconsistent with its intent but also future inconsistent Acts. It also says to be legal 25 tender, the certificates MUST be payable to bearer on demand. Our current 'Federal Reserve Notes' do not meet either
26 of these lawful requirements for legal tender for the Citizens of the several states.

27 Perhaps Federal Reserve Notes are "legal tender" for the Territorial (federal zone) United States, under the EXCLUSIVE
28 jurisdiction and not under Constitutional restrictions and protections. However, both the Constitution and the Law lead 29 only to one inescapable conclusion, which is that:

30 Federal Reserve Notes certainly are NOT Constitutional tender or lawful money for the Citizens of the 50
31 sovereign states in these united states of America!

32 Because the Constitution prohibited the states from coining gold and silver (which would logically extend to the gold and 33 silver certificates which were representative of the ownership of these coins) and because We the People specifically
34 delegated monetary powers to Congress, it was not within the Congressional authority to transfer the issuing of gold and 35 silver certificates and ultimately federal reserve notes to the private Federal Reserve.

36 Remember:

37 "Congress may not abdicate [to give up.. renounce or relinquish...authorities, duties...powers, or 38 responsibility] to transfer to others its legitimate [delegated] functions"
39 [Schechter Poultry v. U.S., 29 U.S., 495 U.S. 837, 842 (1935)]

40 Gold Reserve Act of March 14, 1900. "Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of 41 America in Congress assembled, that the dollar consisting of twenty-five and eight tenths grains of gold, nine-tenths fine as

1 established by section thirty-five hundred and eleven [§3511] of the Revised Statutes of the United States, shall be the
 2 standard unit of value, and all forms of money issued or coined by the United States, shall be the standard unit of value, and
 3 all forms of money issued or coined by the United States, shall be the standard unit of value, and all forms of money issued
 4 or coined by the United States shall be maintained at the parity of value with this standard, and it shall be the duty of the 5 Secretary of the Treasury to maintain such parity.

6 Sec. 2. That United States notes, and Treasury notes issued under the Act of July 14, 1890, when presented to the Treasury
 7 for redemption, shall be redeemed in gold coin of the standard fixed in the first section of this Act..."

8 So where is our gold?...you ask. Where's our gold certificates?

9 Gold certificates were originally the idea of goldsmiths who would hold the gold of Citizens and issue much less bulky
 10 certificates as evidence of gold on deposit. The Certificate Holders could redeem their Certificates for their gold at any 11 time. Greedy goldsmiths soon began to realize that the majority of the gold in their vaults just sat there because the 12 Certificate Holders were using their certificates as a medium of exchange instead of the gold. Realizing this, the goldsmiths
 13 made up extra gold certificates and starting making loans, at interest, using OTHER Citizen's gold as backing. These loans
 14 were then repaid to the goldsmith in GOLD COIN! As long as all the gold owners didn't show up at once, the goldsmiths
 15 got away with their scheme. When the lawful owners of the gold got wise and demanded their gold back, the goldsmiths
 16 who couldn't produce it were hung from the nearest tree!

 22 Dr. Schroder's research exposes Government corruption of insidious magnitude.

23 Senate Report 93-549 (1973) states:

24 "Since March 9, 1933, the United States has been in a state of national emergency. A majority of the people of the United
 25 States have lived their lives under emergency rule. For 40 years freedoms and government procedures, guaranteed by the 26 constitution have, in varying degrees, been abridged by laws brought forth by states of national emergency..."

27 "These hundreds of statutes delegate to the President extraordinary powers, ordinarily exercised by Congress, which affect
 28 the lives of American Citizens in a host of all-encompassing manners. This vast range of powers, taken together, confer
 29 enough authority to rule this country without reference to normal constitutional process."

30 "Under the powers delegated by these statutes the President may: seize property, organize and control the means of
 31 production; seize commodities [i.e. the People's gold, silver, and currency] assign military forces abroad; institute martial
 32 law; seize and control all transportation and communication; regulate the operation of private enterprise, restrict travel; and,
 33 in a plethora of ways, control the lives of all American citizens."

34 Franklin D. Roosevelt was a shrewd banker, himself. In the 1920's, he made a considerable amount of money by floating
 35 millions of dollars in worthless German bonds. The artificially engineered Great Depression and a desperate country,
 36 paved the way for acceptance of the new unconstitutional socialistically oriented governmental policies of FDR. Families,
 37 desperate to survive, lost touch with the Constitution.

38 This section will provide powerful and irrefutable evidence that on March 9, 1933, the United States declared war on its 39 own citizen subjects through Franklin D. Roosevelt, by amending the war powers, "Trading With The Enemy Act" of 40 December 6, 1917, to include, as an enemy of the United States:

41 "any person within the United States or any place subject to the jurisdiction thereof"!!! [This was the 42 Territorial United States or the federal zone, but the People were not told this.]

1 The above trick is exactly the same trick our government is STILL playing on us with the whole of Subtitle A income
 2 taxes...fooling us into believing that the jurisdiction of the Subtitle A income tax extends into the borders of the sovereign
 3 50 union states when it actually does NOT, according to 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)9-(a)10!

4 The purpose of this unconscionable and treasonous Act was to justify the theft and seizure of the People's gold by the
 5 Government and to cancel the contractual obligation of the bankers to redeem the People's Gold Certificates! This Act, if
 6 applicable to the Citizens of these united States, would have been a direct violation of Public Law 103 of Dec. 24, 1919,
 7 previously quoted, which stated, that only

8 "gold certificates of the United States payable to bearer on demand shall be and are legal tender in payment of 9 all debts and dues, public and private."

10 The amended Act also blatantly violated the Constitutional prohibition against making anything other than gold and silver
 11 legal tender for the payment of debts in the several states!

12 The Trading With The Enemy Act, called upon the extraordinary dictatorial war powers. These powers were only to be 13 used in life-threatening circumstances and ONLY against the declared enemy of the United States. Obviously, the intent of 14 the law was NEVER to seize the assets of American Citizens in the time of peace or war! These powers have been grossly
 15 abused to turn America from a free constitutional Republic into an enslaved statutory presidential dictatorship! We warned
 16 you this kind of scam would be used to rob you of your liberty in section 2.8.12 entitled "Surrendering Freedoms in the 17 Name of 'Government Induced Crises'.

18 In other countries, emergency powers can suspend the Constitution. Adolf Hitler used the Emergency Powers to
 19 suspend the German Constitution and institute an unfathomable dictatorial reign of terror! The German Emergency
 20 Power Law was merely titled Article 48 and stated:

21 "If the public safety and order in the German Reich are seriously disturbed or endangered, the President of the 22 Reich may...suspend in whole or in part the fundamental rights established [including] inviolability of person,
 23 inviolability of domicile, freedom of opinion and expression, freedom of assembly and association, secrecy in 24 communication and inviolability of property."

25 Even with the broad war powers, in America, where the Constitution is the supreme law of the land and ANY law contrary
 26 to it NULL and VOID, it is not within the power of the President, the Congress or the Judiciary to create a law or an 27 emergency which suspends the Constitution and unalienable rights of the Sovereign People! Not even war can alienate the 28 rights of the People in relationship to the government!

4 Contrary to what the People were fraudulently misled into believing, the Trading With the Enemy Act could not be, and
 5 therefore was not, applicable to the Citizens of the several states. In fact, in a section of the Trading With the Enemy Act,
 6 that was never amended, or repealed, the Citizens of these United States were specifically and logically exempted from
 7 being defined as the enemy. Therefore, the regulations and punishments of the Trading With the Enemy Act were not and 8 could not later become applicable to the Citizens of the United States.

15 "... (c ) Such other individuals or body or class of individuals, as may be natives, citizens, or subjects of any
 16 nation with which the United States is at war, other than citizens of the United States..."

17 Again, it was the "persons" born in Territories over which the United States is exclusively sovereign and NOT the 18 Citizens of the Sovereign states, who were the purported "Enemy" targets of the Trading With The Enemy Act. Even 19 though the Citizens were specifically excluded from the Emergency War Powers Act, in the most heinous act of 20 Government and Banker Fraud ever perpetrated, American Citizens were coerced by fear and defrauded into turning over 21 all of their gold to the banks. They were threatened [coerced by fear] through the national media, with a $10,000 fine and 22 10 years in prison, if they refused to comply.

23 It is important to remember that the gold in the banks was the property of the Citizens, holding the gold certificates. The 24 gold did NOT belong to the Government or the Banks. The Federal Reserve is a PRIVATE CORPORATION and 25 gold certificates represented a legitimate contractual obligation to convert the certificates to an equivalent amount of 26 gold, payable on demand of the bearer, whenever that demand might be! The Federal Reserve was required by law to 27 maintain a 40% gold reserve and enough other liquid assets to meet the demands of all citizens who wanted to convert their 28 certificates into gold.

29 Under normal circumstances, only a small percentage of Citizens would exchange their certificates for their gold.
 30 However, because of the depression, and well-founded rumors circulating that the private Federal Reserve was taking large
 31 amounts of gold belonging to the Citizens out of the country, people lined up at the bank to redeem their gold certificates
 32 for gold. This was the lawful prerogative of the People. The Citizens were merely demanding what was lawfully theirs.
 33 They had lawfully earned the gold certificates and gold which they represented and it was not within the power of the 34 Government or the Bankers to take the sovereign American's property and substance, emergency or no emergency!

35 When FDR took office, he declared a national emergency. In Proclamation 2039, using the very words the Federal Reserve
 36 had written for him, He stated:

37 "Whereas there have been heavy and unwarranted withdrawals of gold and currency from our banking 38 institutions for the purposes of hoarding..."

39 "Hoarding???" Doesn't that mean "saving?" It was the People's gold and not the bankers and, of course, it was their
 40 absolute prerogative to spend it or save it. Most were spending it on SURVIVAL during a time of depression, which 41 incidentally some informed economists blame as the cause a money supply that was deliberately contracted by the Federal 42 Reserve! The President was certainly not delegated the power to ORDER the People not to "save" their own gold! When 43 the smoke screen was removed, the real emergency was that the private federal reserve had breached its contract with 44 American Citizens. They were repudiating their contractual obligation to redeem the People's gold Certificates and were removing the People's gold from the country. The Bankers were like the goldsmiths who had their corrupt scheme exposed. The emergency was that the People were ready to hang the bankers from the nearest tree! Demanding the return of the People's gold to the bankrupt private bankers was like having Americans return their cars if General Motors went bankrupt!

6.4.2.3 FDR Defends the Federal Damn Reserve

As representatives of the Citizens, the President's first duty was to the People who were the victims of banking fraud. Emergency legislation should have been passed, demanding an immediate and complete audit of the federal reserve (which has NEVER been audited). The 40% gold reserve should have been turned over to the People holding the gold Certificates and all of the bankers remaining assets should have been liquidated and converted to gold. This gold should have been returned to the holders of the gold certificates. If the audit found evidence of self-dealing and embezzlement of the People's gold, those involved should have been criminally prosecuted and their assets should have been seized. If an emergency currency needed to be issued, it should have been debt free currency, issued by the Treasury of these United States and People should have been compensated for their loss of gold. This is how a good President would have protected the People. Instead, FDR was in the pocket of the Bankers!

Let's go back to March 6-9, 1933 and find out what FDR did do. Instead of formulating a plan demanding that the Federal Reserve honor their contractual obligations to the People he instead consulted the Federal Reserve as to how they believed the crisis should be solved! Remember the REAL emergency was that the bankers did not want to honor their contractual obligation to convert the People's gold certificates to gold. The cats were consulted about what their punishment should be for eating mice. Of course, the cats ruled that they should be fed more mice! What did the private federal reserve conclude that their punishment should be for embezzling the People's gold and dishonoring their fiduciary responsibilities and legitimate contractual obligations? The cats at the FED decided that they should be fed more mice and the President was instructed to pass a law demanding that the People return ALL of their gold to the bankers or be subjected to a stiff fine and jail time. Roosevelt's Proclamations were taken word for word from the Resolution adopted by Federal Reserve.

Resolution Adopted by the Federal Reserve Board of New York.

"Whereas, in the opinion of the Board of Directors of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, the continued and increasing withdrawal of currency and gold from the banks of the country has now created a national emergency..."

Remember, the controllers of the Federal Reserve were extremely well educated in law. History has shown them to be the brains behind all major Wars throughout the world. They create a conflict and then fund all sides. War is big business for banks. The fed understood how Congress can legislate for its Territorial subject "persons" through Art. I, Sec, 8, Clause 17, without regards to the Constitution (see also Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 (1901)). These same scoundrels probably created the loophole! They also knew the difference between CONSTITUTIONAL citizens and STATUTORY citizens and they were well aware of the War Powers. Following is the original October 6, 1917 combined with the Amendments of March 9, 1933:

Note: Bold faced and single underlines are added by the author for emphasis and understanding. Double underlines and ~~strike through deletions~~ are Amendments to the original "Trading With the Enemy Act" made in the Act of March 9, 1933.

The supreme Court decision of Stoehr v. Wallace, 255 U.S. 239 (1921) declared:

“The Trading With the Enemy Act, originally and as amended is strictly a war measure, and finds its sanction in the provision empowering Congress ‘to declare war, grant letters of marque and reprisal and make rules concerning captures on land and water.’ Const. Art. I, Sec. 8, Cl. 11

How did FDR and the Federal Reserve get away with this treasonous robbery of the American People’s substance? Probably for the same reason Congress is currently passing a multitude of un-American bills and Acts. Congress just does not read them! In the words of Congressman McFadden:

Congressman McFadden: “Mr. Speaker, I regret that the membership of the House has had no opportunity to consider or even read this bill. The first opportunity I had to know what this legislation is, was when it was read from the clerk’s desk. It is an important banking bill. It is a dictatorship over finance in the United States, it is complete control over the banking system in the United States...It is difficult under the circumstances to discuss this bill. The first section of the bill, as I grasped it is the War Powers that were given back in 1917.”

In spite of warnings of McFadden, the amended Trading With the Enemy Act was immediately passed by a trusting, uneducated and ignorant Congress.

What were the banking institutions as defined by the President?

TITLE II

Sec. 202. As used in this title, the term “bank” means (1) any national bank. [Because this is federal legislation this would mean a U.S. national ie. U.S. Territorial bank, not a sovereign state bank.] (2) any bank

3 What is the collateral for federal reserve notes? To add insult to injury, it became the People's own property!

At this time, I recommend the following types of legislation looking to economic security:

1. Unemployment compensation.
2. Old-age benefits, including compulsory and voluntary annuities.
3. Federal aid to dependent children through grants to States for the support of existing mothers' pension systems and for services for the protection and care of homeless, neglected, dependent, and crippled children.
4. Additional Federal aid to State and local public-health agencies and the strengthening of the Federal Public Health Service. I am not at this time recommending the adoption of so-called "health insurance," although groups representing the medical profession are cooperating with the Federal Government in the further study of the subject and definite progress is being made.

With respect to unemployment compensation, I have concluded that the most practical proposal is the levy of a uniform Federal payroll tax, 90 percent of which should be allowed as an offset to employers contributing under a compulsory State unemployment compensation act. The purpose of this is to afford a requirement of a reasonably uniform character for all States cooperating with the Federal Government and to promote and encourage the passage of unemployment compensation laws in the States. The 10 percent not thus offset should be used to cover the costs of Federal and State administration of this broad system. Thus, States will largely administer unemployment compensation, assisted and guided by the Federal Government. An unemployment compensation system should be constructed in such a way as to afford every practicable aid and incentive toward the larger purpose of employment stabilization. This can be helped by the intelligent planning of both public and private employment. It also can be helped by correlating the system with public employment so that a person who has exhausted his benefits may be eligible for some form of public work as is recommended in this report. Moreover, in order to encourage the stabilization of private employment, Federal legislation should not foreclose the States from establishing means for inducing industries to afford an even greater stabilization of employment.

In the important field of security for our old people, it seems necessary to adopt three principles: First, noncontributory old-age pensions for those who are now too old to build up their own insurance. It is, of course, clear that for perhaps 30 years to come funds will have to be provided by the States and the Federal Government to meet these pensions. Second, compulsory contributory annuities which in time will establish a self-supporting system for those now young and for future generations. Third, voluntary contributory annuities by which individual initiative can increase the annual amounts received in old age. It is proposed that the Federal Government assume one-half of the cost of the old-age pension plan, which ought ultimately to be supplanted by self-supporting annuity plans.

The amount necessary at this time for the initiation of unemployment compensation, old-age security, children's aid, and the promotion of public health, as outlined in the report of the Committee on Economic Security, is approximately $100,000,000.

The establishment of sound means toward a greater future economic security of the American people is dictated by a prudent consideration of the hazards involved in our national life. No one can guarantee this country against the dangers of future depressions but we can reduce these dangers. We can eliminate many of the factors that cause economic depressions, and we can provide the means of mitigating their results. This plan for economic security is at once a measure of prevention and a method of alleviation.

We pay now for the dreadful consequence of economic insecurity - and dearly. This plan presents a more equitable and infinitely less expensive means of meeting these costs. We cannot afford to neglect the plain duty before us. I strongly recommend action to attain the objectives sought in this report.

A revolution was made when Social Security was enacted in 1935 and it radically changed our country. After remarkably little public and Congressional debate, Franklin Delano Roosevelt signed the Social Security Act into law on August 14, 1935. FDR knew that the welfare state wouldn't end with Social Security. Many of his disappointed allies had wanted much more. But FDR assured them this was just the beginning.<sup>238</sup>

<sup>238</sup> Although the Social Security system initially covered a relatively small part of the working force, FDR assured his allies it was just the beginning: "I see no reason why everybody in the United States should not be covered," FDR privately told Francis Perkins. "Cradle to the grave - from the cradle to the grave they ought to be in a social insurance system." See Arthur Schlesinger, Jr.'s The Coming of the New Deal, p. 308, (Houghton Mifflin Company, Boston, 1959).

1 FDR said, on signing the bill into law, that Social Security "represents a cornerstone in a structure which is being built but
2 is by no means complete."<sup>239</sup> The federal government through programs such as Social Security would create its own
3 business cycle, it would "flatten out the peaks and valleys of deflation and inflation,"<sup>240</sup> Roosevelt promised. Social
4 Security was representative of national planning schemes – some of which had been tried during World War I – and which
5 became popular again with intellectuals. Many of them believed that the government could wage war on poverty; that, by
6 using the techniques of wartime planning so popular with progressives during World War I, the government could generate
7 and control the business cycle.<sup>241</sup>

8 Social Security was a Keynesian device to ensure that buying power would remain strong in times of high unemployment.
9 By Keynesian, I mean a kind of thinking that pre-dated Keynes by centuries, which held that injecting inflation into a weak
10 economy would work miracles. Keynes, in the 1920s, 30s and 40s, was merely one member of this inflationist school. But 11 his thought was influential in America in the 1930s. One of the founding fathers of Social Security has said that the 12 contribution of Keynes was not appreciated.<sup>242</sup> Keynes' philosophy helped justify a massive welfare state.

13 The original Social Security package, for instance, was a lot more than so-called old age insurance. The program initially
14 contained 10 programs and included 11 titles. Besides, pensions, the federal government was initiating vocational 15 rehabilitation, unemployment insurance, aid to dependent children and public health programs, among others. Myriad 16 additional programs would follow over the years because of the initial triumph of Social Security. It would help bring about 17 a signal change in American culture and government: The federal government would take on many new powers and 18 radically change our economy.<sup>243</sup>

19 But, most important of all, Social Security changed our culture in ways the authors of the original Social Security Act may 20 or may not have realized: It would, among other things, also discourage savings, expand the state's reach into the family,
21 redistribute income in ways no one imagined (quite often from the working poor and the lower middle-class to the upper
22 middle-class because the latter group tended to have more political clout as exercised through organizations such as the 23 AARP) and create a huge unprecedented peacetime bureaucracy, a bureaucracy that frequently pushed for more expansion
24 under the guise of serving the people.<sup>244</sup>

25 The program also had a much more profound effect on American life: It invented the concept of a passive retirement in 26 which individuals would stop working, stop making more than a few dollars a year, or what a Social Security advocate
27 called "pin money"<sup>245</sup>. To make more than pin money would mean Social Security penalties, an idea added to the original
28 bill by the labor unions.

29 Social Security advocates implicitly convinced tens of millions of Americans that their golden years meant "taking it easy,"
30 withdrawing from the most challenging parts of their lives. That would free up millions of jobs, an important consideration
31 in the midst of the Great Depression, an economic calamity in which FDR's policies failed even after six years of huge

<sup>241</sup> Some socialists said FDR was going in the direction of planning and economic nationalism. Said Stuart Chase: "National Planning and economic nationalism must go together or not at all. President Roosevelt has accepted the general philosophy of planning." He added that the nation could confidently move toward autarchy. Also see George Soule's comments in Walter Lippmann's The Good Society, p 91, (Grosset & Dunlap, New York, 1936). "It is nonsense to say that there is any physical impossibility of doing for peace purposes the sort of thing we did for war purposes."

<sup>245</sup> Barbara Armstrong, executive director of the Committee on Economic Security (CES), which wrote the Social Security plan said that retirement would mean "that you've stopped working for pay." 1 spending.<sup>246</sup> By 1940, an FDR historian would implicitly concede that the New Deal had failed to restore a strong
 2 economy. "The America over which Roosevelt presided in 1940 was in its eleventh year of depression. No decline in
 3 American history had been so deep, so lasting, so far reaching."<sup>247</sup> Clearly, America's recovery from the Great Depression
 4 did not begin until the buildup for World War II and the war itself. That's when FDR discovered his affinity for a military
 5 Keynesianism.<sup>248</sup>

6 Many changes triggered by Social Security. The changes triggered debates over basic social and economic issues such as
 7 personal responsibility vs. the general welfare, and who defines the nature of retirement, the individual or the government,
 8 as well as who should control the retirement assets of millions of people.

 10 individualism."<sup>249</sup>

11 6.4.3.2 FDR and the Birth of Social Security: Destroying Rugged Individuality

12 Social Security has become the crown jewel of a welfare state, which is why its defenders are today so ardent in fighting
 13 any move to privatize any part of it. The welfare state will always be safe as long as Social Security survives. Social
 14 Security has continued to expand in good times and bad, under Democrats and Republicans, even though a few of the latter
 15 actually claimed that they would bring Social Security under control. Those who thought they would tame this huge
 16 program lost time and again. These politicians who once criticized Social Security, usually ended up praising it<sup>250</sup> or kept
 17 their criticisms to themselves.<sup>251</sup> And this was FDR's goal in designing the program: Insuring that no succeeding group of 18 politicians could ever undo his work.<sup>252</sup>

19 Today those who would privatize or even reform Social Security<sup>253</sup> face a formidable task, a task as difficult as dismantling
 20 the military-industrial complex or selling off Amtrak. That's because decrepit government bureaucracies – as opposed to 21 rotten private bureaucracies – have the power to tax and to preserve their existence. And the first rule of any bureaucracy is 22 survival at any cost. The second rule is always try to expand.

23 The welfare state took much longer to take hold in the United States than in Europe, where socialism had a better name and 24 a longer tradition.

<sup>246</sup> By 1938, in the midst of a brutal recession, it was clear to many of FDR's advisers that the New Deal was failing. One of his political advisers, vice president John Nance Garner said that "I don't think the Boss has any definite programs to meet the business. I don't think much of the spending program. You can't keep spending forever. Some day you have to meet the bills." See Jim Farley's Story: The Roosevelt Years, P138, (McGraw Hill, New York, 1948). Roosevelt also complained when Secretary of Commerce Dan Roper told him that the economy was slipping into recession. "Dan, you've got to stop issuing these Hooverish statements all the time." Ibid, p101.

<sup>250</sup> For instance Ronald Reagan, who had been a great critic of Social Security, would say, toward the end of his presidential years, that "Social Security has proven to be one of the most successful and popular [federal] programs." See Social Security After 50: Successes and Failures. Edward Berkowitz, editor, (Greenwood Press, New York, 1987).

<sup>253</sup> The problem of privatizers is what are they to do with the huge unfunded liabilities of this system. It would cost billions, maybe trillions of dollars just for the transition costs to a private system. Meantime, according to economist Milton Friedman and observers such as Marshall Carter and William Shipman, the unfunded liabilities of the system are about $7 trillion. For more see my "Insecure Promise" in the November 1999 issue of Financial Planning magazine. Also, a former Social Security official likes to brag that the program is so entrenched that it would be also impossible to destroy. "Where does an 800-pound gorilla sit? Answer: anywhere it wants to. And where does the most popular government program sit? You got it." From Andy Landis's Social Security, the Inside Story, p3, (Crisp Publications, Menlo Park, California, 1997).

1 By the early 1930s, Germany had a Social Security program for nearly a half century. Britain had a government pension
 2 scheme since before the World War I, when the Liberal/Labour government of Herbert Henry Asquith in 1911<sup>254</sup> laid the
 3 foundations of a welfare state that would be later carried out by the Labor and Conservative parties over the next two
 4 generations. Germany under Bismarck had passed a Social Security plan as part of an alliance with Social Democrats.
 5 Bismarck was ready for socialism<sup>255</sup>. Dozens of European countries had put Social Security schemes by the outbreak of 6 World War I.

7 But in America, there was a tradition of "rugged individualism" that resisted most forms of collectivism. Even labor leaders
 8 like Samuel Gompers,<sup>256</sup> who had called for many other government initiatives, opposed a mandatory social insurance
 9 program, a concept that stressed an insurance that was not for profit, but was run for the benefit of society. But Gompers
 10 was wary of that idea. To him, it smacked of German socialism. "Compulsory social insurance," he complained, "is in 11 essence undemocratic."<sup>257</sup> Foreshadowing the objections of those who would later complain that the government would
 12 mismanage the assets of a program, Gompers wanted workers to depend on themselves, private institutions, their unions –
 13 anything but the government.

14 The opposition to social insurance was owing to an American individualist tradition whose adherents held that individuals,
 15 families and community groups should take care of people in old age, not the government. And, most importantly, it was a
 16 voluntaryist tradition that resisted compulsory government programs.<sup>258</sup>

17 FDR, who was credited as the first major American politician to support a social security system, nevertheless had
 18 campaigned in 1932 in favor of limited government. He bitterly criticized Herbert Hoover's huge deficits. On the campaign
 19 trail he promised to roll back, not expand, the size of the federal government. "For three long years I have been going up
 20 and down this country preaching that government – federal government, state and local – costs too much. I shall not stop 21 that preaching."<sup>259</sup>

22 FDR gave not the slightest indication that was he committed to a massive expansion of the power of the federal 23 government. Later, as we will see, FDR would say that circumstances had changed. His supporters would argue that the 24 Great Depression, and the more radical social insurance proposals of men like Huey Long, Upton Sinclair and Frances 25 Townsend,<sup>260</sup> had led him to back this "moderate" program called Social Security.

26 Yet even before he took office, FDR was quietly committed to a social insurance program<sup>261</sup> as part of a program of 27 counter-cyclical measures he believed would cure the problems of the business cycle. These initiatives were failures if one
 28 is to measure by unemployment numbers and traditional economic indices<sup>262</sup>. They did not restore prosperity, FDR was told
 29 by advisers six years into the New Deal.<sup>263</sup>

30 Social Security was a key part of his revolutionary corporatist economic policies. It was a revolution that shifted the 31 responsibility for income maintenance from the private to the public sector, from the family to the state and from voluntary
 32 organizations to public bureaucracies. And it was a revolution carried out by elite groups of welfare workers, Social

Two historians have written that "The resulting downturn began in August 1937 and continued through the winter and spring of 1938. It was nothing short of catastrophic." See FDR, Russell D. Buhite and David W. Levy, editors, p111 (Penguin Books, New York, 1992)

<sup>263</sup> FDR conceded there were problems in talks with Farley but blamed a conspiracy against him: "I know that the present situation is the result of a concerted effort by big business and concentrated wealth to drive the market down and just to create a situation unfavorable to me." See Jim Farley's Story, p101.

1 Democrats and other who believed European socialism could be imported to the United States on a step-by-step basis.<sup>264</sup>
 2 They believed in a "new liberalism." Classical liberalism would die in the United States in the 1930s through programs
 3 such as Social Security just as it had died in Britain some four decades before. A new liberalism celebrated the expanded
 4 powers of the federal government. The old American individualist tradition was distrustful of distant central governments
 5 and the bureaucracies they spawned.

6 "Americans assumed that their country was unique in assigning to private voluntary institutions a wide range of 7 responsibilities which in other nations were relegated to governments or elite groups," writes one historian of Social 8 Security.<sup>265</sup>

9 Almost everyone, FDR critics as well as admirers, agree that Social Security was a watershed event in our history. FDR
 10 said of the legislation that, if it was the only bill passed in the 1935-36 congressional session, Congress would have 11 accomplished a lot.<sup>266</sup> Why was it so important to those such as FDR who scorned the individualist tradition? Social 12 Security was the centerpiece of a revolution that one historian has said meant that "big government, modern government"
 13 was here to stay.<sup>267</sup>

14 When Social Security survived – and, in its earlier years, it was a dicey question if it would or not, requiring the most
 15 effective political skills that FDR and his allies could summon – Americans implicitly accepted the most essential part of a
 16 new social policy. Washington, not individuals, would now have huge powers over the individual citizen's retirement
 17 planning, unemployment insurance and welfare payments. When FDR signed the Social Security Act, the United States, for 18 the first time in her history, would have "a significant, permanent social welfare bureaucracy."<sup>268</sup>

19 FDR assured his social democratic allies that the Social Security was just the beginning of an expanded role for the federal 20 government. But it wasn't until toward the end of his life, in the Economic Bill of Rights speech that so "thrilled" his social 21 democratic supporters<sup>269</sup>, that he was ready to publicly walk away from the campaign promises of 1932 and the American
 22 individualist tradition.

23 Some four years after its creation, the structure of this landmark program was expanding. Some 12,000 employees would
 24 be working in the Social Security administration, which would become bigger and bigger . Once in place, there were calls
 25 for sister bureaucracies. American Socialists were disappointed that more people were not included in the 1935 act (such as 26 servants and farm workers); that disability insurance wasn't initially covered, that health insurance had not been included.
 27 But many of those leftist critics, who had at the time claimed that it was too little, later would concede that Social Security's
 28 establishment, no matter how modest, opened the door for the government to do many other things.<sup>270</sup> All the measures left
 29 out of the original bill would be included within 30 years.

30 That is why even many of those socialists who scorned FDR, who said that he was a bumbling savior of capitalism, could
 31 still summon up some grudging praise for FDR. Socialism would be quietly achieved over generations as part of a mixed
 32 economy that seemed, on the surface, to be a traditional laissez-faire American economy.

<sup>264</sup> "The vast expansion of public assistance functions and expenditures beginning in the 1930s was superimposed upon a long tradition of disdain totally incongruous with the political and economic power assumed by the public welfare sector." See The Professional Altruist: The Emergence of Social Work as a Career, 1880-1930, p54, (New York, Atheneum, 1969)

<sup>266</sup> FDR understood that Social Security's passage represented radical change: "If the Senate and the House of Representatives in this long and arduous session had nothing more than pass this Bill, the session would have been regarded as historic for all time." See The New Deal: A Documentary History, William E. Leuchtenburg, p 80, (Harper and Row, New York, 1968)

1 Social Security, whether it was called social insurance or government pensions, was the first vital step on the road to the
 2 welfare state. How it finally happened in the United States, after decades of frustrating unsuccessful efforts by social
 3 democrats and professional bureaucrats, is a fascinating story. FDR went around Congress, which was too unpredictable
 4 and whose review process might not have given him what he wanted. FDR found his own experts that he knew would give
 5 him what he wanted, then would unveil a Social Security proposal that he expected to be adopted whole. Congress,
 6 generally intimidated by the experts, went along with few objections.

7 This process, this masterful strategy of building a welfare state in a country with a historic commitment to individualism,
 8 will be discussed in the next report.

9 6.4.4 1937: FDR's Stacking of the Supreme Court

10 President Franklin D. Roosevelt, during his long 12-year tenure in office in the 1930's, tried to ram his socialist programs
 11 down our throat. To name a few of these programs he tried to institute:

- 12 1. Social Security (1935).
- 13 2. Outlawing of the holding of gold by private individuals and forcing citizens to use paper currency.
- 14 3. Direct income taxes on individuals. These taxes were struck down by the following Supreme Court rulings:
  - 15 3.1. 1920: *Evans v. Gore, 253 U.S. 245 (1920) (struck down direct income taxes on federal judges).
  - 16 3.2. 1922: *Bailey v. Drexel Furniture Co., 259 U.S. 20 (1922). The Supreme Court ruled that a federal income tax 17 on child labor was unconstitutional.
  - 18 3.3. 1924: *Cook v. Tait, 265 U.S. 47 (1924) (ruled that direct taxes on individuals cannot be sustained based on 19 income).
  - 20 3.4. 1938: *Hassett v. Welch, 303 U.S. 303 (1938). The Supreme Court ruled that all doubts about the construction of 21 tax statutes, codes, and laws should be resolved in favor of taxpayers, not the government.
- 22 4. Social security numbers.
- 23 5. Railroad retirement (struck down in 1935 in the Supreme Court Case of Railroad Retirement Board v. Alton Railroad 24 Co., 295 U.S. 330 (1935)).

25 Because of these rulings against his socialist programs, FDR was feeling thwarted by the Supreme Court. Therefore, on 26 March 9, 1937, he announced his intention via radio to the entire country that he was going to "stack" the Supreme Court
 27 (see <http://www.hpol.org/fdr/chat/>). This was called "the court packing plan". The Supreme court originally had 6 justices,
 28 and he doubled its size by adding several of his own "cronies" who would uphold and defend his socialist programs,
 29 including Social Security and the Victory Tax. He also proposed to replace all the justices over 70, which included 5 of the 30 6 justices then in office. Here are some of FDR's own words, given during a radio address on March 9, 1937:

31 "But since the rise of the modern movement for social and economic progress through legislation, the Court
 32 has more and more often and more and more boldly asserted a power to veto laws passed by the Congress and 33 by state legislatures in complete disregard of this original limitation which I have just read.

34 [...]

35 The Court in addition to the proper use of its judicial functions has improperly set itself up as a third house of 36 the Congress - a super-legislature, as one of the justices has called it - reading into the Constitution words and 37 implications which are not there, and which were never intended to be there.

38 We have, therefore, reached the point as a nation where we must take action to save the Constitution from the 39 Court and the Court from itself. We must find a way to take an appeal from the Supreme Court to the 40 Constitution itself. We want a Supreme Court which will do justice under the Constitution and not over it. In 41 our courts we want a government of laws and not of men.

42 [...]

43 What is my proposal? It is simply this: whenever a judge or justice of any federal court has reached the age of 44 seventy and does not avail himself of the opportunity to retire on a pension, a new member shall be appointed
 45 by the president then in office, with the approval, as required by the Constitution, of the Senate of the United 46 States.

47 That plan has two chief purposes. By bringing into the judicial system a steady and continuing stream of new
 48 and younger blood, I hope, first, to make the administration of all federal justice, from the bottom to the top,
 49 speedier and, therefore, less costly; secondly, to bring to the decision of social and economic problems younger

1 men who have had personal experience and contact with modern facts and circumstances under which average
2 men have to live and work. This plan will save our national Constitution from hardening of the judicial arteries.

3 [...]

4 Those opposing this plan have sought to arouse prejudice and fear by crying that I am seeking to "pack" the 5 Supreme Court and that a baneful precedent will be established.

6 What do they mean by the words "packing the Supreme Court?" Let me answer this question with a bluntness
7 that will end all honest misunderstanding of my purposes.

8 If by that phrase "packing the Court" it is charged that I wish to place on the bench spineless puppets who
9 would disregard the law and would decide specific cases as I wished them to be decided, I make this answer:
10 that no president fit for his office would appoint, and no Senate of honorable men fit for their office would
11 confirm, that kind of appointees to the Supreme Court.

12 [...]

13 But if by that phrase the charge is made that I would appoint and the Senate would confirm justices worthy to 14 sit beside present members of the Court, who understand modern conditions, that I will appoint justices who 15 will not undertake to override the judgment of the Congress on legislative policy, that I will appoint justices
16 who will act as justices and not as legislators - if the appointment of such justices can be called "packing the 17 Courts," then I say that I and with me the vast majority of the American people favor doing just that thing -
18 now.

19 Is it a dangerous precedent for the Congress to change the number of the justices? The Congress has always 20 had, and will have, that power. The number of justices has been changed several times before, in the 21 administrations of John Adams and Thomas Jefferson - both of them signers of the Declaration of Independence
22 - in the administrations of Andrew Jackson, Abraham Lincoln, and Ulysses S. Grant.

23 [...]

24 Like all lawyers, like all Americans, I regret the necessity of this controversy. But the welfare of the United
25 States, and indeed of the Constitution itself, is what we all must think about first. Our difficulty with the Court
26 today rises not from the Court as an institution but from human beings within it. But we cannot yield our 27 constitutional destiny to the personal judgment of a few men who, being fearful of the future, would deny us the 28 necessary means of dealing with the present.

29 Could it be any clearer, after reading this and looking at the history of the Supreme Court rulings at that time following his 30 "packing plan" that he was trying to stack the deck and ramrod his socialist programs down our throats?

31 Below is what the U.S. Senate Report 711 said about the packing plan, which they had a very dim view of:

34 6.4.5 1943: FDR's Executive Order 9397: Bye-Bye Privacy and Fourth Amendment!

35 Below is a presidential Executive Order issued by our socialist President, Franklin Delano Roosevelt, in which the 36 infamous Social Security Number became the standard number for monitoring all transactions of every citizen. This was 37 the day we lost our privacy and gutted the Fourth Amendment. This infamous day marked the start of socialism in America
38 and it was accomplished in a time of national crisis (World War II) and in the name of the public "good".

39 EXECUTIVE ORDER 9397

40 WHEREAS certain Federal agencies from time to time require in the administration of their activities a system
41 of numerical identification of accounts of individual persons; and

42 WHEREAS some seventy million persons have heretofore been assigned account numbers pursuant to the 43 Social Security Act; and

44 WHEREAS a large percentage of Federal employees have already been assigned account numbers pursuant to 45 the Social Security Act; and

1 WHEREAS it is desirable in the interest of economy and orderly administration that the Federal Government
 2 move towards the use of a single unduplicated numerical identification system of accounts and avoid the 3 unnecessary establishment of additional systems:

4 NOW THEREFORE, by virtue of the authority vested in me as President of the United States, it is hereby 5 ordered as follows:

6 1. Hereafter any Federal department establishment, or agency shall, whenever the head thereof finds it
 7 advisable to establish a new system of permanent account numbers pertaining to individual persons, utilize
 8 exclusively the Social Security Act account numbers assigned pursuant to Title 26, section 402.502 of the 1940
 9 Supplement to the Code of Federal Regulations and pursuant to paragraph 2 of this order.

10 2. The Social Security Board shall provide for the assignment of an account number to each person who is 11 required by any Federal agency to have such a number but who has not previously been assigned such number
 12 by the Board. The Board may accomplish this purpose by

13 (a) assigning such numbers to individual persons,

14 (b) assigning blocks of numbers to Federal agencies for reassignment to individual persons, or 15 (c) making such other arrangements for the assignment of numbers as it may deem appropriate.

16 3. The Social Security Board shall furnish, upon request of any Federal agency utilizing the numerical 17 identification system of accounts provided for in this order, the account number pertaining to any person with 18 whom such agency has an account or the name and other identifying data pertaining to any account number of 19 any such person.

20 4. The Social Security Board and each Federal agency shall maintain the confidential character of information
 21 relating to individual persons obtained pursuant to the provisions of this order.

22 5. There shall be transferred to the Social Security Board, from time to time, such amounts as the Director of 23 the Bureau of the Budget shall determine to be required for reimbursement by any Federal agency for the 24 services rendered by the Board pursuant to the provisions of this order.

25 6. This order shall be published in the Federal Register.

33 6.5 Congressional Cover-Ups, Scandals, and Tax Code Obfuscation

34 "I, _____, do solemnly swear (or affirm) that I will support and defend the Constitution of the United States
 35 against all enemies, foreign and domestic; that I will bear true faith and allegiance to the same; that I take this
 36 obligation freely, without any mental reservation or purpose of evasion; and that I will well and faithfully
 37 discharge the duties of the office on which I am about to enter. So help me God."
 38 [Congressional Oath of Office]
 39

40 "Suppose you were an idiot, and suppose you were in Congress, But I repeat myself."
 41 [Mark Twain]
 42

43 "If 'pro' is the opposite of 'con', a wise man once said, then 'progress' must be the antonym of 'Congress'."
 44

45 Late one night in the capitol city a mugger wearing a ski mask jumped into the path of a well-dressed man and 46 stuck a gun in his ribs. "Give me your money!" he demanded.

2 "In that case," replied the robber, "give me MY money!"

3 This section shall show conclusively the history of increasing obfuscation, confusion, and deception of our income tax laws
4 from 1921 to the present. We will show that Congress has, with each successive revision of the U.S. Code and the Code of 5 Federal Regulations, deliberately tried to make the law more confusing and deceptive by:

- 6 1. Removing focus of the law on "sources" or "taxable activities", by removing pointers to legitimate "sources" whenever 7 discussing income in the Internal Revenue Code. This can lead to the mistaken assumption by the Citizen that all
8 sources of income are taxable instead of just specific sources. But we know that Congress doesn't have the authority to 9 tax people in China, so wherever there is an income, there must be an associated source.
- 10 2. Remove references to the fact that "foreign corporations" and only withholding agents for "nonresident aliens" are 11 liable for income taxes and replace "foreigners" with "taxpayers". Thus, if American citizens (most of whom are NOT 12 "U.S. citizens") can erroneously be convinced that they are "taxpayers", then they will think that the section applies to 13 them.
- 14 3. Add more indirection by using new terms whose definition is not referred to where they are used. These terms include:
15 3.1. "items of income"
16 3.2. "statutory groupings"
17 3.3. "operative sections"
- 18 4. Adding double negatives (in 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8T, for instance) instead of just referring to the positive of what can and 19 cannot be taxed.
- 20 5. Changing the definitions of certain words to make them appear universal and yet in actuality they aren't. For instance,
21 below are some confusing words in the tax code and their REAL definitions:
22 5.1. "Employer": The Federal government as an employer of federal workers. There are repeated references to how
23 employers are liable for taxes they don't withhold but little is said about the fact that the only people by the code
24 who are liable for the deductions are Federal government agencies!
25 5.2. "Taxpayer": A nonresident alien domiciled in the U.S. or a citizen living overseas.
26 5.3. "The States": The District of Columbia and all federal States but not one of the Union states or several states.
27 5.4. "trade or business in the United States": functions involving the holding of public office with the United States
28 government (e.g. congressional office or presidential appointment).

29 We will argue that such an obfuscating evolution of the tax code as directed by lawyers (does anyone like lawyers?) in 30 Congress would point to the fact that there is a conspiracy by the lawyers in Congress to defraud the citizens (notice we 31 didn't say "taxpayers") illegally of their come by abusing the law and the tax code. This also points to the fact that we need
32 better configuration management of the laws so that there is traceability for each modification of the law to a specific
33 individual in Congress so that person can be prosecuted (and defamed and fired from office) appropriately when they either
34 demonstrate a conflict of interest or try to obfuscate the code. We believe that a petition (under the First Amendment) and
35 conviction of the government for the following crimes is inevitable based on current law and that it is only a matter of time
36 before this issue ends up in front of the Supreme Court. Below are just a few of the crimes you will likely see the IRS and 37 members of Congress convicted of based on the evidence presented here:

- 38 1. "Conspiracy against rights" (18 U.S.C. §241).
- 39 2. "Federally protected rights being violated" (18 U.S.C. §245).
- 40 3. "Illegally taking more money than is required by law" (26 U.S.C. §7214).
- 41 4. "Illegal extortion of taxes" (18 U.S.C. §872).
- 42 5. "Receiving the proceeds of extortion" (18 U.S.C. §880).
- 43 6. "Mailing threatening communications" (18 U.S.C. §876).
- 44 7. "Blackmail" (18 U.S.C. §873).
- 45 8. "Retaliating against a witness, victim, or an informant" (18 U.S.C. §1513).
- 46 9. "False writings" (18 U.S.C. §1018).
- 47 10. "Taking of property that is not based on law" (26 C.F.R. §601.106(f)(1)
- 48 11. "Retaliating against or harassing taxpayer" (Section 1203, IRS Restructuring and Reform Act of 1998).
- 49 12. "Unauthorized collection actions" (26 U.S.C. §7433).
- 50 13. "Fraud" (18 U.S.C. §1018).
- 51 14. "Fraud and swindling" (18 U.S.C. §1341).
- 52 15. "Sale or receipt of stolen goods" (18 U.S.C. §2315).

- 1 16. Running of a “continuing financial crimes enterprise” (18 U.S.C. §225).
 2 17. “Engaging in monetary transactions in property derived from specified unlawful activity” (18 U.S.C. §1957).

3 6.5.1 No taxation without representation!

4 No taxation without representation!

5 This was one of the rallying cries before the American revolution. We have all heard it in high school and read it in the 6 history books, and perhaps felt some sense of pride in it. But do we REALLY know what it means and if we still have it?
 7 The answer is, unfortunately, probably not. Because the Constitution SPECIFICALLY STATES that if anyone imposes a
 8 tax and tries to collect it, it must be Congress!!

9 This is what REPRESENTATION with TAXATION means. If you don't like a tax, you can vote against the people who
 10 passed it and who enforce it . When was the last time you voted for an agent of the Internal Revenue Service? Instead, our 11 corrupt Congress as created a new executive agency, given it no delegated authority in the Internal Revenue Code, allowed
 12 it to write its own regulations to enforce the tax (a conflict of interest, I might add) and then hypocritically and habitually
 13 complained that it has overstepped its bounds, as if they had no responsibility for its existence! Here is the way Irwin
 14 Schiff insightfully describes this situation:

15 The government has done a masterful job at subterfuge. The same Congress that created the IRS is the one that 16 complains about it. They complain about it like it is some evil and independent agency of the federal 17 government with a life of its own and as though they have no control over it because it is outside the legislative
 18 branch, but it was created through the legislation of Congress in 26 U.S.C. §7805! Congress complaining
 19 about the abuses of the IRS is like people saying about me:

20 “You know Irwin Schiff is a really nice guy, but Oh....HIS FIST. It really hurts and it’s such an evil 21 thing when it goes around hitting people all the time!”

22 Don’t let your Congressman suck you into his pity party! Tell him to get off his ass and fix the lawless behavior
 23 of the IRS!

24 Congress and the Courts have, by allowing the current situation with the IRS to exist, failed to live up to their oath of office
 25 to support and defend the Constitution, and thereby abdicated their powers to another branch of government. Congress has 26 abdicated their responsibility to collect taxes by delegating it to another branch of the government: The Department of the 27 Treasury and the IRS are in the EXECUTIVE BRANCH! The Constitution does not allow the Congress to delegate or 28 abdicate their duty to collect taxes! Punish the bastards by penalizing them for 2/3 of their salary until they fix this 29 problem! Or better yet, cancel their retirement until they fix it. If we had a national referendum process, this would have 30 happened hundreds of years ago!

31 “The accumulation of all powers, legislative, executive and judiciary, in the same hands ... may justly be 32 pronounced the very definition of tyranny.” - James Madison (1751-1863)

33 “Taxation WITH representation ain’t so hot either.” -- Gerald Barzan

34 6.5.2 The Corruption of Our Tax System by the Courts and the Congress: Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 (1901)

35 Recall that the Supreme Court in Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 (1901) fracturing the United States into the equivalent
 36 of two countries: One with constitutional protections in the 50 union states, and the other one in the federal zone with no
 37 constitutional protections. We describe these two countries as:

38 “One nation [the 50 union states] under God. The other nation [the federal zone] under fraud.”

39 In discussing the supreme Court case of Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 (1901), Judge Harlan, in the most eloquently
 40 expressed dissenting opinion, supported equal Constitutional protections for all territories and possessions of the United 41 States, in the same manner that the 50 union states are protected. Following are excerpts from that opinion, along with 42 Harlan’s accurate predictions of the consequences of that decision:

43 “The idea prevails with some, indeed it has found expression in arguments at the bar, that we have in this
 44 country substantially two national governments; one to be maintained under the Constitution, with all of its

1                    restrictions; the other to be maintained by Congress outside the independently of that instrument, by exercising
 2                    such powers [of absolutism] as other nations of the earth are accustomed to.. I take leave to say that, if the
 3                    principles thus announced should ever receive the sanction of a majority of this court, a radical and
 4                    mischievous change in our system of government will result. We will, in that event, pass from the era of
 5                    constitutional liberty guarded and protected by a written constitution into an era of legislative absolutism.. It
 6                    will be an evil day for American liberty if the theory of a government outside the supreme law of the land finds
 7                    lodgment in our constitutional jurisprudence. No higher duty rests upon this court than to exert its full
 8                    authority to prevent all violation of the principles of the Constitution.”
 9                    [Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 (1901)]

10 Judge Harlan’s extremely prudent advice was ignored and his prediction of a “radical and mischievous change in our 11 system” because of this ruling was right on target! This dual United States ruling is the root of the evil of the Internal
 12 Revenue Service, the Federal Reserve System, with its subsequent robbery of our gold and silver, and the many other unjust
 13 federal agencies that have abused American Right, confiscated their property, and strangled them with red-tape. A
 14 government established to protect the happiness of American people has become the root of their misery and the worst
 15 abusers of the Rights it was established to protect! Because of this ruling, Congress has been able to circumvent the 16 Constitution for the united States of America, as follows:

- 17 1. The United States Government legally creates legislation, which may be unconstitutional for the 50 union states,
 18 under the authority and guise of legislating for the citizens and residents of the territories and possessions
 19 “belonging to” the United States, over which the United States has exclusive authority.
- 20 2. Such federal legislation is made applicable only to the citizens born and residing in Territories, possessions,
 21 instrumentalities and enclaves under the exclusive jurisdiction of the United States. These “individuals” are called
 22 “U.S. citizens” or “citizens of the United states, subject to its jurisdiction” in such legislation. The average
 23 American, of course, believes he or she is such a citizen (because it was never disclosed to them that our Congress
 24 legislates for two different types of citizens). Because that American has respect for the law, he or she voluntarily
 25 consents to obey this legislation that is contrary to the Constitution.

26 6.5.3 The Anti-Injunction Act statute, 26 U.S.C. §7421

27 This statute states:

28 Sec. 7421. Prohibition of suits to restrain assessment or collection

29 (a) Tax

30 Except as provided in sections 6015(e), 6212(a) and (c), 6213(a), 6225(b), 6246(b), 6331(i), 6672(b), 6694(c),
 31 and 7426(a) and (b)(1), 7429(b), and 7436, no suit for the purpose of restraining the assessment or collection of 32 any tax shall be maintained in any court by any person, whether or not such person is the person against whom 33 such tax was assessed.

34 (b) Liability of transferee or fiduciary

35 No suit shall be maintained in any court for the purpose of restraining the assessment or collection (pursuant to 36 the provisions of chapter 71) of -

37 (1) the amount of the liability, at law or in equity, of a transferee of property of a taxpayer in respect of any
 38 internal revenue tax, or

39 (2) the amount of the liability of a fiduciary under section 3713(b) of title 31, United States Code [1] in respect 40 of any such tax.

41 The problem with this statute is that it is also commonly used as an excuse by our federal courts to NOT stop illegal
 42 assessment and collection of taxes for the government, which means that the IRS can act lawlessly and violate due process
 43 of Americans without a court order and cannot be restrained from illegally assessing and collecting the tax. The only
 44 recourse in any court above U.S. Tax Court is to pay the illegally assessed or collected tax and then sue the federal 45 government. By that time, the plundered Citizen usually has so little property and cash left that he can’t afford to defend 46 his rights and an expensive lawyer will try to victimize and extort unreasonable fees from him to get him out of the 47 predicament that this unconstitutional law put him in to begin with.

48 If you would like to know what the federal courts think about the Anti-Injunction Act, read the following cases:

- 1 • Willits v. Richardson, 497 F.2d. 240, 5th Circuit, (1974)
- 2 • Laing v. U.S., 423 U.S. 161 \(1976\): Upheld the Anti-Injunction Act.
- 3 • Enochs v. Williams Packing, 370 U.S. 1 \(1961\): Upheld the Anti-Injunction Act.

4 The state of California has enacted two laws that are similar to the Federal Anti-Injunction Act as follows:

- 5 • California Constitution: Section 32.

6 No legal or equitable process shall issue in any proceeding in any court against this State or any officer thereof
 7 to prevent or enjoin the collection of any tax. After payment of a tax claimed to be illegal, an action may be
 8 maintained to recover the tax paid, with interest, in such a manner as may be provided by the Legislature.
 9 [New section adopted November 5, 1974].

- 10 • California Revenue and Taxation Code, Section 19081: Legal or equitable processes to enjoin assessment or 11 collection of tax prohibited; Exception in residence cases.

12 No injunction or writ of mandate or other legal or equitable process shall issue in any suit, action, or
 13 proceeding in any court against this State or against any officer of this State to prevent or enjoin the assessment
 14 or collection of any tax under this part; provided, however, that any individual after protesting a notice or 15 notices of deficiency assessment issues because of his alleged residence in this State and after appealing from
 16 the action of the Franchise Tax Board to the State Board of Equalization becomes final commence an action, on
 17 the grounds set forth in his protest, in the Superior Court of the County of Sacramento, in the County of Los
 18 Angeles or in the City and County of San Francisco against the Franchise Tax Board to determine the fact of 19 his residence in this State during the year or years set forth in the notice or notices of deficiency assessment.
 20 No tax under this part based solely upon the residence of such an individual shall be collected from such 21 individual until 60 days after the action of the State Board of Equalization becomes final and, if he commences
 22 an action pursuant to this section, during the pendency of such action, other than by way of or under the 23 jeopardy assessment provisions of this part.

37 The thing to notice about the California version of the Anti-Injunction Act is the use of the term “this State” repeatedly
 38 throughout both the California Constitution and R&TC §19081. The important thing to remember is the meaning of the 39 term “this State”, which means federal enclaves within California. Recall that we said in section 5.2.6 that “State” is really 40 just the federal enclaves within California as per California Revenue and Taxation Code Section 17018:

41 17018. "State" includes the District of Columbia, and the possessions of the United States.
 42 [which don't include the 50 sovereign states but do include federal areas within those states]

43 Also recall that California Revenue and Taxation Code, Section 6017 further defines the term “this State” explicitly to 44 mean:

45 6017. "In this State" or "in the State" means within the exterior [outside] limits of the [Sovereign] state of 46 California and includes [only] all territory within these limits owned by or ceded to the United States

47 So what they are saying here is that California’s version of the Anti-Injunction act only applies in federal enclaves that are 48 within California.

49 With respect to the comments in this section, the provisions of the Anti-Injunction Act may be easily circumvented if you
 50 know what you are doing. We describe how to do this in section 1.4.1 of the following:

6.5.4 Why the Lawyers in Congress Just Love the Tax Code

"All the Congress, all the accountants and tax lawyers, all the judges, and a convention of wizards all cannot tell for sure what the income tax law says." -- Walter B. Wriston

Merriam Webster's New International Dictionary (unabridged, 2d ed.), defines the term "sentence" as follows:

"sentence: 5. A series of connected words extending from one period or full stop to another. See sense 8, below."

"8. Gram. According to the degrees of complication in their structure, sentences are described as simple, complex, compound, and compound-complex."

A full, completed sentence ends with a period. The entire text of section 3121(b) of the federal Internal Revenue Code (IRC) contains only two completed sentences that end with a period. Printed below is the full text of section 3121(b) of the IRC. Inspection of the 1994, CCH Incorporated edition (volume 2) of the IRC reveals that the entire text of section 3121(b) required five pages to print in size 10 font. (This does not include the five additional pages that reference the "amendments" to section 3121(b).) A computer count of the entire text of section 3121(b) totaled some 19,098 characters, comprising some 3,834 words. The first completed sentence alone contained 18,880 characters or 3,788 words. According to Merriam Webster's ranking of the various degrees of complication that a sentence may take, those 3,788 words must surely classify that first sentence in section 3121(b) as a compound-complex sentence.

Below is printed the entire text of section 3121(b) comprised of 3,834 words which, properly and grammatically speaking, comprise only two completed sentences. Who said you can't have fun with the tax code!

"(b) Employment For purposes of this chapter, the term "employment" means any service, of whatever nature, performed (A) by an employee for the person employing him, irrespective of the citizenship or residence of either, (i) within the United States, or (ii) on or in connection with an American vessel or American aircraft under a contract of service which is entered into within the United States or during the performance of which and while the employee is employed on the vessel or aircraft it touches at a port in the United States, if the employee is employed on and in connection with such vessel or aircraft when outside the United States, or (B) outside the United States by a citizen or resident of the United States as an employee for an American employer (as defined in subsection (h)), or (C) if it is service, regardless of where or by whom performed, which is designated as employment or recognized as equivalent to employment under an agreement entered into under section 233 of the Social Security Act; except that such term shall not include - (1) service performed by foreign agricultural workers lawfully admitted to the United States from the Bahamas, Jamaica, and the other British West Indies, or from any other foreign country or possession thereof, on a temporary basis to perform agricultural labor; (2) domestic service performed in a local college club, or local chapter of a college fraternity or sorority, by a student who is enrolled and is regularly attending classes at a school, college, or university; (3)(A) service performed by a child under the age of 18 in the employ of his father or mother; (B) service not in the course of the employer's trade or business, or domestic service in a private home of the employer, performed by an individual under the age of 21 in the employ of his father or mother, or performed by an individual in the employ of his spouse or son or daughter; except that the provisions of this subparagraph shall not be applicable to such domestic service performed by an individual in the employ of his son or daughter if - (i) the employer is a surviving spouse or a divorced individual and has not remarried, or has a spouse living in the home who has a mental or physical condition which results in such spouse's being incapable of caring for a son, daughter, stepson, or stepdaughter (referred to in clause (ii)) for at least 4 continuous weeks in the calendar quarter in which the service is rendered, and (ii) a son, daughter, stepson, or stepdaughter of such employer is living in the home, and (iii) the son, daughter, stepson, or stepdaughter (referred to in clause (ii)) has not attained age 18 or has a mental or physical condition which requires the personal care and supervision of an adult for at least 4 continuous weeks in the calendar quarter in which the service is rendered; (4) service performed by an individual on or in connection with a vessel not an American vessel, or on or in connection with an aircraft not an American aircraft, if (A) the individual is employed on and in connection with such vessel or aircraft, when outside the United States and (B)(i) such individual is not a citizen of the United States or (ii) the employer is not an American employer; (5) service performed in the employ of the United States or any instrumentality of the United States, if such service - (A) would be excluded from the term "employment" for purposes of this title if the provisions of paragraphs (5) and (6) of this subsection as in effect in January 1983 had remained in effect, and (B) is performed by an individual who - (i) has been continuously performing service described in subparagraph (A) since December 31, 1983, and for purposes of this clause - (I) if an individual performing service described in subparagraph (A) returns to the performance of such service after being separated therefrom for a period of less than 366 consecutive days, regardless of whether the period began before, on, or after December 31, 1983, then such service shall be considered continuous, (II) if an individual performing service described in subparagraph (A) returns to the

1 performance of such service after being detailed or transferred to an international organization as described
2 under section 3343 of subchapter III of chapter 33 of title 5, United States Code, or under section 3581 of 3 chapter 35 of such title, then the service performed for that organization shall be considered service described
4 in subparagraph (A), (III) if an individual performing service described in subparagraph (A) is reemployed or
5 reinstated after being separated from such service for the purpose of accepting employment with the American
6 Institute in Taiwan as provided under section 3310 of chapter 48 of title 22, United States Code, then the 7 service performed for that Institute shall be considered service described in subparagraph (A), (IV) if an
8 individual performing service described in subparagraph (A) returns to the performance of such service after 9 performing service as a member of a uniformed service (including, for purposes of this clause, service in the 10 National Guard and temporary service in the Coast Guard Reserve) and after exercising restoration or
11 reemployment rights as provided under chapter 43 of title 38, United States Code, then the service so performed
12 as a member of a uniformed service shall be considered service described in subparagraph (A), and (V) if an
13 individual performing service described in subparagraph (A) returns to the performance of such service after
14 employment (by a tribal organization) to which section 105(e)(2) of the Indian Self-Determination Act applies,
15 then the service performed for that tribal organization shall be considered service described in subparagraph
16 (A); or (ii) is receiving an annuity from the Civil Service Retirement and Disability Fund, or benefits (for 17 service as an employee) under another retirement system established by a law of the United States for 18 employees of the Federal Government (other than for members of the uniformed service); except that this
19 paragraph shall not apply with respect to any such service performed on or after any date on which such
20 individual performs - (C) service performed as the President or Vice President of the United States, (D) service
21 performed - (i) in a position placed in the Executive Schedule under sections 5312 through 5317 of title 5,

24 designee) or the Vice President under section 105(a)(1), 106(a)(1), or 107 (a)(1) or (b)(1) of title 3, United
25 States Code, if the maximum rate of basic pay for such position is at or above the rate for level V of the 26 Executive Schedule, (E) service performed as the Chief Justice of the United States, an Associate Justice of the 27 Supreme Court, a judge of a United States court of appeals, a judge of a United States district court (including 28 the district court of a territory), a judge of the United States Court of Federal Claims, a judge of the United
29 States Court of International Trade, a judge of the United States Tax Court, a United States magistrate, or a
30 referee in bankruptcy or United States bankruptcy judge, (F) service performed as a Member, Delegate, or 31 Resident Commissioner of or to the Congress, (G) any other service in the legislative branch of the Federal

33 83 of title 5, United States Code, or to another retirement system established by a law of the United States for 34 employees of the Federal Government (other than for members of the uniformed services), on December 31,
35 1983, or (ii) is performed by an individual who has, at any time after December 31, 1983, received a lump-sum
36 payment under section 8342(a) of title 5, United States Code, or under the corresponding provision of the law
37 establishing the other retirement system described in clause (i), or (iii) is performed by an individual after such
38 individual has otherwise ceased to be subject to subchapter III of chapter 83 of title 5, United States Code
39 (without having an application pending for coverage under such subchapter), while performing service in the 40 legislative branch (determined without regard to the provisions of subparagraph (B) relating to continuity of 41 employment), for any period of time after December 31, 1983, and for purposes of this subparagraph (G) an 42 individual is subject to such subchapter III or to any such other retirement system at any time only if (a) such 43 individual's pay is subject to deductions, contributions, or similar payments (concurrent with the service being 44 performed at that time) under section 8334(a) of such title 5 or the corresponding provision of the law
45 establishing such other system, or (in a case to which section 8332(k)(1) of such title applies) such individual is 46 making payments of amounts equivalent to such deductions, contributions, or similar payments while on leave
47 without pay, or (b) such individual is receiving an annuity from the Civil Service Retirement and Disability
48 Fund, or is receiving benefits (for service as an employee) under another retirement system established by a law
49 of the United States for employees of the Federal Government (other than for members of the uniformed
50 services), or (H) service performed by an individual - (i) on or after the effective date of an election by such

65 (j), constitutes covered transportation service, (B) service in the employ of the Government of Guam or the 66 Government of American Samoa or any political subdivision thereof, or of any instrumentality of any one or 67 more of the foregoing which is wholly owned thereby, performed by an officer or employee thereof (including a 68 member of the legislature of any such Government or political subdivision), and, for purposes of this title with 69 respect to the taxes imposed by this chapter - (i) any person whose service as such an officer or employee is not

71 be regarded as an employee of the United States or any agency or instrumentality thereof, and (ii) the 72 remuneration for service described in clause (i) (including fees paid to a public official) shall be deemed to

7 performed - (i) in a hospital or penal institution by a patient or inmate thereof; (ii) by any individual as an

14 is wholly owned by such Government) by an employee properly classified as a temporary or intermittent
15 employee, if such service is not covered by a retirement system established by a law of Guam; except that (i) the 16 provisions of this subparagraph shall not be applicable to services performed by an elected official or a
17 member of the legislature or in a hospital or penal institution by a patient or inmate thereof, and (ii) for

69 (16) service performed by an individual under an arrangement with the owner or tenant of land pursuant to 70 which - (A) such individual undertakes to produce agricultural or horticultural commodities (including 71 livestock, bees, poultry, and fur-bearing animals and wildlife) on such land, (B) the agricultural or horticultural 72 commodities produced by such individual, or the proceeds therefrom, are to be divided between such individual

1 and such owner or tenant, and (C) the amount of such individual's share depends on the amount of the 2 agricultural or horticultural commodities produced; (17) service in the employ of any organization which is
 3 performed (A) in any year during any part of which such organization is registered, or there is in effect a final
 4 order of the Subversive Activities Control Board requiring such organization to register, under the Internal
 5 Security Act of 1950, as amended, as a Communist-action organization, a Communist-front organization, or a
 6 Communist-infiltrated organization, and (B) after June 30, 1956; (18) service performed in Guam by a resident
 7 of the Republic of the Philippines while in Guam on a temporary basis as a nonimmigrant alien admitted to

 15 individual does not receive any cash remuneration other than as provided in subparagraph (B) and other than 16 cash remuneration - (i) which does not exceed $100 per trip; (ii) which is contingent on a minimum catch; and
 17 (iii) which is paid solely for additional duties (such as mate, engineer, or cook) for which additional cash
 18 remuneration is traditional in the industry, (B) such individual receives a share of the boat's (or the boats' in 19 the case of a fishing operation involving more than one boat) catch of fish or other forms of aquatic animal life
 20 or a share of the proceeds from the sale of such catch, and (C) the amount of such individual's share depends
 21 on the amount of the boat's (or the boats' in the case of a fishing operation involving more than one boat) catch 22 of fish or other forms of aquatic animal life, but only if the operating crew of such boat (or each boat from 23 which the individual receives a share in the case of a fishing operation involving more than one boat) is 24 normally made up of fewer than 10 individuals; or (21) domestic service in a private home of the employer

 26 (B) is not the principal occupation of such employee. For purposes of paragraph (20), the operating crew of a
 27 boat shall be treated as normally made up of fewer than 10 individuals if the average size of the operating crew
 28 on trips made during the preceding 4 calendar quarters consisted of fewer than 10 individuals."

29 The ridiculous, complex text of section 3121(b) leaves small wonder why Philadelphian, Orwellian type lawyers are able to 30 spend their lifetimes arguing the federal tax code at the expense of "We the people."

31 It's no wonder they call it "code"...because like the lawyers in Congress and like the safes in most banks, you need to be a
 32 thief to crack it and thereby extract the truth! Doesn't this kind of ruse amount to a violation of the Sixth Amendment
 33 right to due process of law?

34 Isn't it one of the first and foremost principles of due process that the law must be written simply and clearly enough that
 35 the defendant can read and understand it himself/herself without the aid of a lawyer and thereby know what behavior is
 36 prohibited by the law? However, who but some judge or lawyer with four or more years of college and three years of law
 37 school and several years practicing law can understand the above? We believe the lawyers in Congress have deliberately 38 used legalese to hide the truth and thereby create a new (upper) class of society and an order of "priests and priestcraft" (in 39 this case witchcraft!) that is the only one within our society qualified or allowed by law to read and interpret the laws. This 40 is how they stole our birthright, our freedoms, and have systematically violated our fundamental due process rights!
 41 This is how they have nullified the value of serving as a juror...by ensuring that people like you and I serving on jury
 42 duty can't read and understand the law for ourselves and have to rely on the judge, who is a government employee and
 43 has the government's best interests in mind whenever he rules on cases or advises jurors. Jesus warned about this kind
 44 of insidious "lawyer abuse" and evil at the beginning of chapter 3, where we quoted from Luke 11:52 in the Bible. We also 45 talk about this in section 6.9, where we discuss the judicial conspiracy to protect the income tax.

46 It's time for Citizens everywhere to remove this kind of pernicious evil trash and the unscrupulous lawyers who peddle it
 47 from our society once and for all, starting with throwing out every one of the bastards in Congress every election until they
 48 start paying attention to this issue. We should communicate this intent to them consistently and repeatedly and prevalently
 49 until they simplify the laws to give us our right to due process back.

- 50 1. I suggest that every person reading this document forward a web pointer to it (by snail mail) to his or her two senators 51 and representative in the Congress and ask if they understand this tax statute, viz., 3121(b).
- 52 2. Ask them to explain to you what it means - if they know what it means.
- 53 3. If they admit that they don't know what it means, ask them to please rewrite it and all other laws that they don't know 54 the meaning of until they themselves - the legislators - know the meanings of the laws they vote on.

6.5.5 Congressional Propaganda and Lies

"When Congress talks about simplification, taxpayers may well be reminded of Emerson's comments regarding an acquaintance, 'the louder he talked of his honor, the faster we counted our spoons'."
 [Michael J. Graetz]

Congressmen frequently get correspondence from constituents about the illegality of the income tax. In response to these requests, they commissioned the Congressional Research Service to prepare a report entitled "Frequently Asked Questions Concerning the Federal Income Tax", CRS Report number 97-59A. The report is 29 pages and you can buy a copy of it for yourself from <http://pennyhill.com> for $29.95. Another way you can get this report is to write you Congressman with a question or an issue about income taxes. Oftentimes, they will write a short, one-page letter and attach the report. This document was recently updated on May 7, 2001. It is filled with lies, obfuscation, and deception. We got a copy of it, scanned it in and converted it to text, and then proceeded to write a rebuttal as part of the document itself. The rebutted version is a whopping 75 pages, more than twice the size of the original report. You can read this document yourself at:

Rebutted Version of Congressional Research Service Report 97-59A: Frequently Asked Questions Concerning the Federal Income Tax
<http://famguardian.org/PublishedAuthors/Govt/CRS/CRS-97-59A-rebuts.pdf>

We encourage you to download the complete version and look at it. We have posted it on the Taxes area of our website at:

<http://famguardian.org/Subjects/Taxes/taxes.htm>

under the Main heading of "False Government Propaganda With Rebuttal", and the subheading "Congressional Research Report 97-59A: Frequently Asked Questions Concerning the Federal Income Tax." Reading the rebutted version of this report is very enlightening in explaining how Congressmen like to deceive their constituents. It is also useful in preparing for a confrontation with the IRS, for instance, during a summons or deposition. We strongly encourage you to download and read this report, and to send it to your Congressman to ask him to rebut any part of it. You probably won't get an answer. It's just too hot to touch! ### 6.5.6 Whistleblower Retaliation, Indifference, and Censorship

6.5.6.1 We The People Truth In Taxation Hearing, February 27-28, 2002

On February 27 and 28, 2002, the We the People Foundation for Constitutional Education held a Truth In Taxation Hearing. The hearing was a result of a hunger strike staged back in July 2001 by its founder, Bob Schulz, who indicated that he would starve himself to death on the steps of the U.S. Capitol unless Congress would have the Department of Justice and the IRS appear in a public hearing to answer questions they were legally obligated to answer under the petition clause of the First Amendment. Congressman Roscoe Bartlett of Maryland came to the aid of Bob Schulz a couple weeks into the fast and by July 20, had negotiated an agreement in writing with the DOJ and IRS to appear to answer the questions proposed by Bob Schulz. The hearing would be scheduled for September 27, 2001.

Bob Schulz then went immediately off his fast and assembled a group of tax researchers to put together the questions he was going to ask. They met initially in Las Vegas in August 2001 to coordinate and organize their research into questions that could be asked. At least 40 of the top researchers from around the country appeared at that meeting. The group began assembling their evidence and questions and had a complete package. However, because of the terrorist attack on September 11, 2001, the hearings were postponed until February 27-28 at the request of Bob Schulz. Subsequent to the postponement, Congressman Bartlett was contacted in November 2001 by the DOJ and IRS and told that the DOJ and IRS would not be participating in the hearing rescheduled for 27-28 Feb. 2002. Congressman Bartlett did not relay this fact to Bob Schulz until late January 2002. Apparently, he was waiting for Bob to commit some kind of faux pas that would justify the government pulling out without losing face.

Bob Schulz then launched his campaign called "Operation Wait and File Until The Trial" on January 12, 2002, where he encouraged Americans to wait to file their tax returns until after the Truth in Taxation Hearing on 27-28 Feb. This, he believed, would put pressure on the government to appear at the hearings. He posted a flyer on his website about it and

1 sent that article to his mailing list. The article included the flyer to be published in newspapers and a letter to be direct
2 mailed to about 300,000 individuals. Then he mailed or faxed the flier to:

- 3 • Members of the American Judges Association
- 4 • Judges of The Federal Circuit
- 5 • Mayors of Largest U.S. Cities
- 6 • Federal Tax Court Judges
- 7 • Supreme Court Justices
- 8 • Radio Station General Managers
- 9 • Radio Talk Show Hosts
- 10 • 550 Partners of the Big Five Accounting Firms
- 11 • Executive Cabinet Members and Cabinet Legal Advisors
- 12 • Members of the Association of Copy Editors

13 Subsequently on January 17, 2002, Congressman Roscoe Bartlett notified Bob that the government had pulled out of the 14 hearings. Congressman Roscoe Bartlett's assistant Lisa Wright stated that the Congressman was "canceling the forum,"
15 and that he was "dismayed" by the "rhetoric" of the "Wait to File" ad and that he would not be party to any movement that 16 tells people not to pay their federal income taxes. This, of course, was not what Bob Schulz was advocating. He never told 17 people not to PAY income taxes, only to delay filing their returns until after the hearing, which they were perfectly and 18 legally entitled to do. Bob tried to reason with her, but it was late and she was in no mood to listen.

19 Bob then decided to go ahead with the hearing anyway. He invited several expert witnesses to appear as a substitute for the 20 government's witnesses. Subsequently, on February 10, 2002, he put a full page add in the New York Times regarding a
21 Constitutional Crisis. Here is an excerpt from the add off his website at <http://www.givemeliberty.org>:

(BEGINNING OF ADD)

IRS & Department of Justice: Why Won't You Answer Our Questions?

On July 20, 2001, IRS Commissioner Charles Rossotti and U.S. Assistant Attorney General Dan Bryant formally agreed to have IRS and DOJ participate in a recorded, public hearing on Capitol Hill to officially answer questions under oath in response to a Petition For Redress Of Grievances from the American People. Our Citizen's Petition directly challenges:

- The jurisdiction and legal authority for the IRS
- The unlawful enforcement of the Internal Revenue Code against American citizens
- The pervasive abuse of the People's constitutional rights in the daily operations of the IRS

After agreeing in writing to publicly answer questions related to the unconstitutional origin of the IRS, and the devastating harm caused by the income tax system to the working men and women of our country, The Department of Justice and IRS on January 17, 2002, without explanation, canceled the hearing.

WE NOW HAVE A CONSTITUTIONAL CRISIS

What must a free People do when their government repeatedly refuses to honor its legal and moral obligation to respond to a proper Petition for Redress of Grievance as guaranteed by the 1st Amendment to the United States Constitution?

We ask the People: Is Alan Dershowitz Correct?

- We have NO unalienable rights?
- The Constitution is merely a piece of paper?
- Government should not be restrained because it can do good things for people? 9/27/00 debate at Franklin & Marshall

Can We The People simply accept that our Constitution has become a dead letter?

Must we resort to the same desperate measures that our Founders did to defend their unalienable rights to life, liberty and justice?

Do We Have a Constitution or Not?

For decades, the government has steadfastly refused to honor the petitions of a growing number of honorable, well-educated, professional legal researchers whose work has raised significant and legitimate questions about the Constitutional and statutory authority of the income tax system. These issues are of the utmost importance to the American People and to our Republic.

Our respectful petitions to our servant government have fallen on deaf ears, have been arbitrarily and unjustly thrown out of the courts, and have been used as grounds for criminal prosecution, asset seizure and other unlawful abuse by the IRS and DOJ.

Three years ago, We The People Foundation began a series of formal, public initiatives to convince the U.S. government to answer our questions regarding the jurisdiction and legal authority of the IRS and the personal income tax system. As the chronology of events outlined below demonstrates, we have worked diligently to show the American People the truth about the unconstitutional origin, abusive history and criminal conduct of the IRS, and the un-American nature of the personal income tax system.

1 Bob Schulz then held the hearings and webcasted the event to 2,100 Americans throughout the country. There were about
 2 100 people in the live audience as well. Although the mainstream media was informed of the event, only one
 3 representative, David Kay Johnston, appeared from the New York Times, and even he ducked out after the morning of the 4 first day because he couldn't find anything to slander We The People with! There were two solid days of hearings, and
 5 representatives from around the country from various groups appeared in the audience, including J.A.I.L. For Judges, the
 6 Fully Informed Jury Association, the Libertarian party, and several other activists groups. The tax researcher group he had 7 assembled had put together 540 questions to ask the government. 440 of these questions were asked at the hearings, which
 8 included about 130 questions assembled by the author relating to the Fourth Amendment and the First Amendment. All of 9 the questions and the evidence used at the hearings and those that were not asked are posted on our website at:

10 <http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/Forms/Discovery/Deposition/Deposition.htm>

11 Each question included the evidence to back it up, and as each question was asked, the evidence was displayed on two large
 12 projection panels on either side of the meeting room. The evidence and complete text of the questions were also made
 13 available via the live webcast to the large audience so they could browse and examine it for themselves in digital form. It
 14 was a watershed and unprecedented event. Bob Schulz and the author, Family Guardian Fellowship, took turns asking the 15 questions of a panel of various experts. These questions and the answers provided by experts stunned the audience and 16 provided irrefutable proof of government fraud, extortion, and conspiracy to deprive sovereign Americans of their rights.
 17 Among the experts testifying included (some names not listed):

- 18 • Paul Rooney, a tax attorney with over 30 years' experience and who served as a U.S. Tax Court clerk for several 19 years before going into private practice.
- 20 • Bill Benson, the person who investigated the Sixteenth Amendment and gathered overwhelming evidence
 21 supporting the conclusion that it was fraudulently ratified by a lame duck Secretary of State, Philander Knox.
 22 (<http://www.thelawthatneverwas.com/>)
- 23 • Joe Banister, X IRS agent from the IRS' Criminal Investigation Division (CID), who served there 5 years before 24 resigning after finding out the truth (<http://www.freedomabovefortune.com/>).
- 25 • John Turner, former IRS Collection agent with 8 years experience.
- 26 • Sherry Jackson, former IRS Examiner with three years experience.
- 27 • Irwin Schiff, America's most famous de-taxing expert. (<http://www.paynoincometax.com/>)
- 28 • Larry Becraft, famous patriot Constitutional Attorney. (<http://fly.hiwaay.net/~becraft/>)
- 29 • Noel Spade, San Diego tax attorney.
- 30 • Vicky Osborne, a forensic CPA who had uncovered evidence of massive fraud in the administration of taxpayer
 31 IMF files

32 Subsequent to the event in March 2002, the IRS delivered a threatening CP-518 notice (Willful Failure to File) to the 33 person who had handled the webcasting of the event, who shall remain nameless to protect his identity. This person was 34 responsible for making the videotapes and CD's containing the evidence available for sale to the public. Apparently, they 35 were trying to get some legal leverage on that person so they could blackmail him to suppress the release of the questions
 36 and evidence. Can you believe the kind of games the government played to suppress the truth from being heard?!

37 6.5.6.2 We The People Efforts: April 5, 2001 Senate Finance Committee Hearing

38 During the month of March 2001, We The People Foundation (<http://www.givemeliberty.org/>), a tax freedom and liberty
 39 advocacy, placed full page anti-income-tax ads in the USA Today Newspaper on March 2, and March 23, of 2001. The 40 March 2, 2001 add featured a pointer to this book on our website. It talked about five employers who had stopped
 41 withholding federal income taxes from the pay of their employees. The March 23, 2001 add featured information about 42 how income taxes violated the constitution. Subsequent to these adds, 60 Minutes (CBS) decided to do a story on the anti-
 43 income tax movement on April 3, 2001, and featured a 20 minute segment on the activities of the employers featured in the 44 March 2, 2001 add. The story was rather skewed, because they put a lot of credible people on the show from the opposing
 45 side, but wouldn't let spokespeople from We The People talk. They opened the story with a picture of a We The People
 46 meeting and even showed a picture of the We The People add, but didn't allow anyone from We The People to talk.

47 Shortly after the 60 Minutes story, our website started going crazy. In the following two days, we had about 500
 48 downloads of this book. Then the U.S. Senate Finance Committee announced that it was going to have a hearing on April

1 5, 2001 at 10am. The subject of the hearing was "Tax Scams". We The People was one of the organizations they were
 2 going to talk about, and yet they denied a request by that organization to speak at the session! Bob Schulz, the leader of We
 3 The People, had the following to say about this situation:

4 A New York Times reporter, David Cay Johnston, telephoned us after 5 p.m. on Friday, March 30, 2001, to 5 inform us of the fact that the Senate Finance Committee has scheduled a formal hearing for 10 a.m. on
 6 Thursday, April 5, 2001. Mr. Johnston said the subject of the hearing would be the full-page ads we have
 7 published in USA TODAY and that the Committee intended to have the ads on display during the hearing.
 8 Johnston said that our side of the story needs to be told, that we should try to get on the witness list and that all
 9 the major media outlets would attend any press conference we were to hold in the hallway outside the hearing
 10 room, if we were not allowed to testify before the Committee.

11 Early Monday morning, April 2, 2001, we telephoned the Senate Finance Committee to request that we be 12 added to the witness list. We were told that the witness list was closed before the Committee scheduled and 13 publicly announced the hearing, but that we could fax a letter to the Committee Chairman to request that we be 14 added to the list.

15 On Monday morning we faxed our letter to Senator Grassley, requesting to be added to the witness list.

16 Late Monday afternoon we received by fax a letter from Senator Grassley which reads: "Dear Mr. Schulz:
 17 Thank you for your letter requesting to be added to the witness list for the Senate Finance Committee Hearing
 18 on April 5, 2001. We will be unable to add you to our witness list. However, should your organization chose to 19 submit a written statement regarding our hearing, 'Taxpayer Beware: Schemes, Scams and Fraud,' we will
 20 consider including it in the hearing record. Sincerely, Charles E. Grassley, Chairman Senate Finance
 21 Committee."

22 It seems incongruous that the Senate would hold a hearing featuring our full-page ads and not invite us to
 23 testify. They apparently have a message that they want to convey, which is inapposite to our message. They
 24 apparently want to divert attention away from questions of whether the IRS is collecting taxes without legal
 25 authority by trying to portray those who raise such questions as scammers. In fact, those in the tax honesty
 26 movement see the IRS as the scammers! The question is not who is putting their money in an offshore trust, or 27 who is not filing their tax return or which employers have stopped withholding from the paychecks of their
 28 employees. The primary question is: "What legal authority requires most Americans to file an income tax return
 29 and pay the income tax? There ought to be a moratorium on the IRS' enforcement activities, and all those 30 people who are sitting in prison for not paying the income tax should be released, pending the determination of 31 this fundamental question.

32 Our government leaders apparently want to label anyone and everyone, including this Foundation, who are
 33 questioning the legal authority of the IRS to collect the individual income tax as schemers, scammers and
 34 frauds, while they continue to conduct their tax enforcement activities as usual, without addressing the 35 compelling allegations of fraud and the illegal operations of the income tax system and without justifying their 36 behavior.

37 We have decided that we will hold a press conference in the hallway outside the Senate hearing room at 9:30
 38 a.m. on Thursday. We will have press kits available which will include copies of letters inviting Commissioner
 39 Rossotti and the leaders of the executive and legislative branches of the government to identify their most
 40 knowledgeable people and have them participate with the experts in the tax honesty movement in the four 41 symposiums and conferences we sponsored at the National Press Club to debate and discuss the issues. We will
 42 highlight the major allegations regarding the fraudulent ratification of the 16th Amendment, the demonstrable
 43 lack of evidence of any law that requires most citizens to file or pay the income tax, and the problems relating to 44 routine violations by the IRS of the People's rights under the 4th, 5th, 6th and 13th Amendments in their day-to-
 45 day administrative procedures. We will point out that the government chose to evade the public forums and
 46 chose not to even acknowledge receipt of the invitations! We will also include a copy of the video tape of the 47 April 13, 2000 meetings in the White House and in the Capitol with President Clinton's economic advisor Jason
 48 Furman, Speaker Hastert's policy advisor, Dr. William Koetzle and the Senate Majority Leader's policy
 49 director, Keith Hennessey. The tape shows these gentlemen meeting with Joe Banister and Bob Schulz and
 50 accepting a REMONSTRANCE for Clinton, Hastert and Lott. The tapes also show these men promising to have 51 their experts review the research reports authored by Bill Benson, Joe Banister and William Conklin and to 52 participate in our fourth attempt to get the two sides to meet on June 29, 2000, in a public forum, to debate the 53 allegations of the fraudulent and illegal operations of the income tax system -- promises which were broken on 54 June 2, 2000, when Jason Furman told Schulz; "The legality of the income tax is not a high priority matter for 55 the White House and we will not be participating in any conference on the subject." The press kits will also 56 include a copy of each ad we decided to publish in the wake of the government's reversal of its decision to 57 review and then meet to discuss the research reports by Benson, Banister and Conklin.

58 Our message will be a simple one: We want the government to answer the serious questions that have been
 59 raised by numerous tax researchers who say that the IRS is collecting the individual income tax without legal
 60 authority and that the IRS operates illegally when it tries to force citizens to pay taxes they do not owe. Instead
 61 of the Senate and House encouraging the IRS to increase enforcement of laws that apparently do not exist,

1                    wouldn't it be easier and better for them to have their experts meet with the tax researchers in a public forum,
2                    show them where they are wrong, embarrass them, and put it all to rest? Why is the government so averse to
3                    doing so? Are they worried that they can't show the researchers to be in error? When does evasion become 4                    admission?

5                    The government's dual actions of evading the public discussion of the issues while strengthening its steel-fisted,
6                    heavy-handed enforcement campaign of fear and terror only serves to strengthen the resolve and determination
7                    of a People who see themselves as free and sovereign, and who see all of government limited by a written
8                    constitution.

9    6.5.6.3        Cover-Up of Jan. 20, 2002: Congress/DOJ/IRS/ Renege on a Written Agreement to Hold a Truth in 10 Taxation Hearing with We The People Under First Amendment

11    The We the People foundation (<http://www.givemeliberty.org/>), which was founded to fight government corruption, has 12    been protesting the federal income tax for years. During July 2001, the leader of that organization, Bob Schulz, went on a 13    21 day hunger strike, telling the press and the government that he would die of starvation if the government would not grant
14    him a hearing under the First Amendment to the U.S. Constitution to Petition the U.S. Government for Redress of 15    Grievances related to the illegal enforcement of the federal income tax. On July 20, 2001, Congressman Rosco Bartlett
16    negotiated a signed written agreement between the Department of Justice, the IRS, and Mr. Schulz to hold the requested
17    hearing to address his concerns and questions. Prior to signing the written agreement, the DOJ and IRS insisted that the 18    hearings be private (do you smell a cover-up here?), but Mr. Schulz said that this was a public matter of great concern to 19    millions of Americans and that it must be open and the press must also be able to attend. The press was also invited. The 20    hearing were to be in late Sept. 2001, but the terrorist attacks disrupted the meeting and it was postponed until Feb. 27,
21    2002 by Mr. Schulz.

22    Subsequent to the new hearing being scheduled, on January 20, 2002, Mr. Schulz launched a media campaign called "Wait
23    and File Until the Trial", informing Americans that they should wait to file their tax returns until the Truth in Taxation
24    hearing was over, because the income tax was on trial. He mailed out hundreds of thousands of fliers and emails to federal 25    judges, congressmen, the IRS, and citizens. Immediately after the fliers went out, our website went crazy and we had five
26    times the normal daily volume we usually have. Immediately after the start of the "Wait and File Until the Trial"
27    campaign, Roscoe Bartlett cancelled the hearings, saying that he could not sponsor or support them because they were
28    "encouraging Americans to not pay their income taxes", which was clearly not the case, as explained in Mr. Schulz' letter
29    shown below. Later investigation by We the People revealed that in Nov. 2001, the IRS and DOJ both told Congressman
30    Bartlett that they would not attend the hearings ever. Congressman Bartlett withheld this information, hoping that Bob 31    Schulz would unilaterally cancel the hearings himself or commit a political faux pas that would eliminate the need to have
32    them. When the Wait and File campaign started in earnest, Congressman Bartlett apparently thought he had enough excuse
33    to terminate the meeting, but as Mr. Schulz' letter clearly explains, he was not justified in doing so and the comments about
34    the Wait and File campaign were really just more deceptive and fraudulent government propaganda to discredit Mr. Schulz
35    and further expand the government cover-up of the illegal operations of the IRS. Read the letter yourself below for 36    enlightening information. Keep in mind that all Mr. Schulz has ever expected was for the government to honor his 37    Constitutional, First Amendment right to a Petition for Redress of Grievance with the federal government.

Hon. Roscoe G. Bartlett
Member of Congress
2412 Rayburn Building
Washington, DC 20515

Dear Congressman Bartlett:

On behalf of myself and the We The People Foundation for Constitutional Education, I want to thank you for all that you have done to support the People's Petition for Redress of our grievances related to the fraudulent origin of the IRS and unlawful operations of the income tax system. I thank you for your wisdom, your courage and your independence. Your steadfast and heroic efforts in defense of the American People's guaranteed constitutional right to have our government answer this historic petition are deeply appreciated by all of us who placed our trust in your integrity and leadership.

I know that you have tried your best in our behalf, and for that I am most thankful. I continue to hold you in high esteem. No matter what the future may hold, I will always remember your courageous defense of our Constitution.

Neither of us has shared with the general public the details of your actions and what happened behind the scenes in the days leading up to July 20, 2001. This was the day Assistant Attorney General Dan Bryant and IRS Commissioner Rossotti, as a result of your personal intervention and persuasion, contracted with the American people to have experts from their departments appear in a recorded, congressional-style, public meeting to answer the people's questions regarding the federal income tax system.

We also have not shared with the public the details of what has been happening behind the scenes since July 20, 2001. Under the present circumstances, it is appropriate that these details be made available to the American people. Following is a chronology of the facts related to our Petition for Redress of Grievances.

- On June 11, 2001, I personally delivered a letter to President Bush at the White House. Copies of the letter were also hand-delivered to Speaker of the House Hastert and Senate Majority Leader Daschle at the Capitol. The letter recited the numerous requests made by We The People Foundation For Constitutional Education to the Executive and Legislative Branches since May 1999 to answer our Petition For Redress of Grievances related to the income tax system. The letter also provided a factual account of the government's evasive and unresponsive behavior, which ultimately led to my decision to embark on a hunger strike until either I died or the federal government agreed to meet in a public forum to answer the people's questions regarding the fraudulent origin of the IRS and the unlawful operations of the income tax system.
- On July 1, 2001, I delivered a follow-up letter to President Bush, with copies to Speaker Hastert and Senator Daschle.
- On July 18, 2001, Lawrence B. Lindsey, Assistant to the President for Economic Policy and head of the National Economic Council, sent a letter to me which read, "The President has asked me to thank you for your letters of June 11 and July 1 regarding the income tax system. I understand your concerns and the arguments you make. Your letter of June 11 outlines extensively the concerns of the We The People Foundation for Constitutional Education, Inc. with regard to the efficacy of the current income tax system. While I believe the best way to address your concerns is through the court system, I have taken the liberty of sharing your letters with the Internal Revenue Service for their review. A more substantive response will be forthcoming from this office once the IRS has had the opportunity to assess your grievances. I would be remiss if I did not suggest that you end your fast. Whether or not federal tax experts attend a meeting your organization

1 has scheduled for September 18 will be determined based upon their substantive assessment of your
2 arguments. While your personal commitment to the cause of tax reform is dramatic, I hope that you will not
3 endanger yourself physically in this cause. Please be assured that your letters will receive careful attention
4 at the IRS.

6 Note: In reviewing my file and the events of last summer, I must now assume that when Commissioner Rossotti
7 spoke with you by telephone on July 19th, and agreed to have his experts meet with our experts in a recorded
8 public forum to answer our questions, he was responding to Mr. Lindsey's directive.

- 9 • On July 9, 2001, I delivered an updated version of the People's Petition for Redress of Grievances to one of 10 President Bush's aides at the White House. I also met with you and three members of your staff, where we first
11 discussed the issues related to the fraudulent origin and unlawful operations of the IRS, and you made the 12 decision to help the American People in their quest for a response to this historic Petition.
- 13
14 • On July 17, 2001, you held a press conference on the House Triangle to announce the fact that you had placed top
15 priority on getting the appropriate people in the government to agree to respond to our Petition. Rep. Ron Paul
16 also strongly supported the fundamental right to be answered.
- 17 • It is now known that between July 9th and July 18th, 2001, management level personnel at DOJ and IRS were 18 steadfast in their refusal to have their experts meet with representatives of the American People in a recorded
19 public forum. For instance, Floyd Williams, the IRS Director of the Office of Congressional Affairs, stated the IRS
20 would only agree to a private, unrecorded meeting between myself and the IRS Chief Counsel. Karen Wilson (Mr.
21 Williams' counterpart at DOJ) suggested we submit our questions to DOJ and IRS in writing and wait for a
22 response. She said she was otherwise in support of IRS' proposal for a private, unrecorded meeting. You replied
23 that the proposal for a private, unrecorded meeting was totally unacceptable and that the questions had to be
24 answered in a public forum. You emphasized the importance of allowing the public to see and hear the people
25 asking the questions and those answering them. You strongly and effectively argued that to submit the questions in 26 writing to DOJ and IRS would allow for delay, obfuscation and confusion, and would bring to ruin what you
27 considered to be a proper, Constitutional Petition For a Redress of Grievances.
- 28 • From July 18th through July 20th you negotiated on the People's behalf, by telephone, with IRS Commissioner
29 Rossotti and with DOJ's Assistant Attorney General Daniel Bryant. They expressed concerns about the security of 30 a public meeting and wanted to know who would be "on the gavel" to control the meeting and keep it professional 31 and orderly. After speaking with me about their concerns, you contacted Dan Bryant and Charles Rossotti and 32 offered to hold the meeting on Capitol Hill and to personally gavel the meeting if Henry Hyde was not available.
- 33 • On or about July 19th, in a telephone conversation between you and Commissioner Rossotti, Rossotti agreed to 34 have his experts participate in a recorded, public, congressional-style hearing on Capitol Hill, with appropriate
35 controls. You telephoned me and asked to see me in your office. When I arrived, you told me of Commissioner 36 Rossotti's agreement.
- 37 • On July 20th, Assistant Attorney General Dan Bryant also agreed, but told you he needed a formal request from 38 you. He asked that you put your request for the meeting in writing. You telephoned me and asked to see me in 39 your office. When I arrived, you prepared a hand-written letter to Dan Bryant. You then telephoned Mr. Bryant to 40 tell him you had the formal request in hand and asked how soon he could meet with us. Bryant said he would see
41 us right away in his office at the Department of Justice building. We met with Dan Bryant that afternoon. We fully 42 discussed our written Petition for Redress of Grievances (he had previously received a copy of the Petition that 43 was hand-delivered to the White House on April 13, 2000 and again on July 9, 2001). We also reviewed the terms
44 and conditions of your offer to preside over the proposed congressional-style hearing on Capitol Hill. He penned a 45 note at the bottom of your written request, agreeing to "do everything within my power to ensure that the Dept.
46 of Justice will provide appropriate representatives to participate in a congressional briefing hosted by 47 Congressman Bartlett in connection with the above referenced matter." Roland Croteau and Burr Deitz (a 48 Director of the WTP Foundation) were also in attendance.
- 49 • Later that day, Friday, July 20, 2001, my office issued a press release and posted it on our web site, announcing 50 the details of the agreement. Apparently, the news quickly found its way around the Internet.

- 1 • Between Friday, July 20th and Monday, July 23rd, as I would later learn from you, Dan Bryant apparently received
2 a phone call or two from “higher ups,” protesting his July 20th commitment to have DOJ answer our questions in a
3 public forum.
- 4 • On July 23, 2001, I received an e-mail from your aide, Lisa Wright, which read: {“Congressman Bartlett asked me
5 to contact you to inform you must take URGENT action in order to preserve the agreement as a result of your 7/20
6 meeting with Dan Bryant at USDOJ.1) Immediately pull down from the website the previous presentation of the 7 meeting that begins with the subject – “The fast is over”. 2) Replace it with a corrected version ASAP and
8 distribute this to your list. Reference to Bryant must be limited explicitly to quoting only his handwritten
9 comments. "I will do everything within my power. . ."Reference to Hyde -- that he will be invited -- NOT 10 EXPECTED. Reference to a date -- to be determined, hopefully in mid to late September. 3) You must call Dan
11 Bryant ASAP and apologize for the inaccuracies in the e-mail. This is his personal number -- 202-514-2141.”}

12 NOTE: On or about July 25th, I placed a call to Dan Bryant. He did not return the call.

- 13 • On July 30th, I issued a revised press release and posted it on our web site.
- 14 • On July 30th Lisa Wright of your office sent an e-mail to Dan Bryant at DOJ and Floyd Williams at IRS. It read:
15 “Mr. Bryant and Mr. Williams: Attached is a 7/30/01 news release from We the People Foundation for 16 Constitutional Education which follows up a meeting Congressman Bartlett had on July 20 at DOJ w/ Asst.
17 Atty. Gen. Dan Bryant and Bob Schulz concerning Mr. Schulz’s Petition for Redress concerning the tax
18 code and IRS enforcement of the tax code. Congressman Bartlett personally affirmed that this release is an 19 accurate reflection of the July 20 meeting. Congressman Bartlett discussed the request for a public forum at 20 which appropriate IRS representatives would participate in an earlier meeting with Floyd Williams of IRS
21 and Karen Wilson of DOJ and subsequently in a phone conversation with IRS Commissioner Rossotti.
22 Congressman Bartlett hopes that DOJ and IRS officials will contact Mr. Schulz directly concerning
23 coordinating and ironing out the details for the public forum on Capitol Hill. Please feel free to contact
24 Congressman Bartlett if you have any questions and so that we may procure the necessary space for the 25 meeting.”
- 26 • On July 30th Lisa Wright forwarded to me a message from IRS’ Floyd Williams. It read: “Treasury/IRS has not 27 agreed (either verbally or in writing) to participate in a public forum with Bob Schulz.”
- 28 • On August 13, 2001, Tax Notes published an article under the heading, “Backroom Deals, Fleeting Promises Put 29 Income Tax Hearing in Jeopardy,” by Warren Rojas. In the article, IRS spokesman Frank Keith is quoted as 30 saying, “As of right now, no final agreements have been made.”
- 31 • On August 29, 2001, your office issued the following statement; “Congressman Bartlett is continuing to actively 32 pursue and secure participation by representatives of both the Department of Justice and the Internal Revenue
33 Service at the September 25-26 forum organized by We the People,” said Lisa Wright, a spokesman for 34 Congressman Roscoe Bartlett. “He expects Dan Bryant, Assistant Attorney General for the Office of Legislative 35 Affairs at the Department of Justice, and IRS Chairman Charles Rossotti to fulfill their personal commitments to 36 him.”(my emphasis).
- 37 • In early September, I met in your office with you and three of your aides, including Sallie Taylor and Lisa Wright.
38 You said DOJ and IRS were trying to “wiggle off the hook” and that Sallie and Lisa had an “alternative proposal.”
39 Sallie and Lisa proceeded to describe their alternative proposal, which, instead of having the agree-upon public
40 forum, would have me submit the Peoples’ questions to you in writing. You would then post the questions on your 41 web site and send them to DOJ and IRS for an answer. The answers would also be posted on your web site. I told
42 Sallie and Lisa that their proposal was unacceptable to me and that you had already argued with DOJ and IRS
43 (successfully) the futility of such an approach. Upon hearing my response you turned to an aide and asked him to 44 call Dick Armey, the House Majority Leader, to request an immediate meeting with him. We were told to proceed
45 to Mr. Armey’s office. You, I, Sallie Taylor, and another of your aides (I don’t remember his name) met with Dick 46 Armey and one of his aides, who took extensive notes during the meeting. You told Mr. Armey that DOJ and
47 IRS were trying to wiggle off the hook and break their commitment to answer the People’s questions in a
48 public forum. Mr. Armey said it was important to have the hearing proceed as planned and that DOJ and 49 IRS had to be “locked down.” Armey said the way to do that would be to show DOJ and IRS that they were 50 running the risk of offending many more Congressman than you if they broke their commitment. Mr.
51 Armey then suggested that you prepare a letter to Attorney General Ashcroft and to Treasury Secretary
52 O’Neil, which would thank them for their commitment to have the appropriate personnel from their 53 departments participate in the income tax hearing and which would be signed by numerous members of the 54

1 House of Representatives. Mr. Arney and you discussed a list of House members that both of you believed
2 would sign the letter.

- 3 • On September 12, 2001, I communicated my request to you that the tax hearing be postponed due to the events of 4 September 11th. I posted that message on our web site.
- 5 • On October 12, 2001, you delivered a letter and video message to me in which you announced that the event had 6 been rescheduled for February 27 and 28, 2002. Your letter stated “A letter of support and confirmation signed
7 by myself and other members of Congress has been drafted, circulated, and will be sent to officials at the 8 Department of Justice, Treasury and the IRS, informing them of the dates and times and requiring their
9 attendance. I will personally chair the event and have invited other members of Congress to attend and sit
10 on the panel...You have my word as an elected member of the United States Congress that I will do all
11 within my power that this event go forward, the IRS and DOJ attend as they have promised to do, and are 12 compelled to do by the Constitution.”(My emphasis).
- 13 • On January 7, 2002, Tax Notes published an article under the heading, “Schulz Hopes to Bury Tax Code at 14 February Hearing,” by Warren Rojas. In the article, Mr. Rojas wrote, “While the IRS has yet to officially confirm
15 or deny its participation in the hearing, a Bartlett press aide acknowledged receiving a letter from Justice
16 around Thanksgiving stating plainly that the DOJ would not attend any Schulz-related events.” (my 17 emphasis). Note: I was never told about the “Thanksgiving letter.” This was the first time any of the three 18 government officials who were parties to the July 20th contract with the American People had put in writing that 19 they were reneging on their agreement.
- 20 • On or about January 8, 2002, I telephoned Lisa Wright to tell her that I had read the Tax Notes article and was 21 very concerned about the Thanksgiving letter from DOJ which informed you that DOJ would not attend the 22 income tax hearing. I called to inform Ms. Wright that it was my intention to bring the February hearing to the 23 attention of tens of millions of Americans, and ask them to wait to file their tax returns until they heard all of the 24 questions and answers at the February hearing. I felt it was now time, as Mr. Arney had previously suggested, to 25 do all I could to “lock the DOJ and IRS down” and demand that they keep their commitment to the American
26 People. It was time to demand that they respond to our questions regarding the fraudulent origin of the IRS and 27 the unlawful operation of the personal income tax system. I informed Ms. Wright that many thousands of 28 Americans were already aware of the February hearing and were waiting for the answers to the questions before
29 deciding how to file their tax returns. I explained that if DOJ and IRS were going to renege on their commitments,
30 they were going to have to answer to a very large number of Americans. My call was passed through to Lisa’s
31 voice message system where I left a message. I asked her to call me.
- 32 • On January 11, 2002, Lisa returned my call. We discussed “Operation Wait to File Until the Trial.” After we 33 completed the call Lisa called back to say that if your name was mentioned in the “Wait to File” flyer/ad, she
34 would like to approve the wording. I told her your name, together with those of Dan Bryant and IRS
35 Commissioner Rossotti were mentioned in the first paragraph, which I then read to her. She said my use of the 36 phrase “public hearing” was wrong, that the word “hearing” had a technical meaning on the Hill and that I should 37 use the phrase “public forum.” She also said that you did not have the power to force DOJ and IRS to attend the 38 meeting. I replied that I understood that you had no more power at that time than you did on July 20, 2001, when 39 you merely requested that Commissioner Rossotti and Assistant Attorney General Dan Bryant have appropriate 40 personnel from their departments participate in the “public, recorded congressional-style briefing- hearing” on
41 Capitol Hill to answer questions “concerning the legal jurisdiction and authority of the IRS.” At the July 20
42 meeting both Mr. Rossotti and Mr. Bryant agreed to your request and formally entered into a contract with 43 the American people to have their “appropriate representatives participate in a congressional briefing
44 hosted by Congressman Bartlett.”
- 45 • On January 12, 2002, in response to Lisa’s one concern, I changed the phrase “public hearing” in the first 46 paragraph of the Wait to File flyer/ad to “congressional-style hearing”. We then launched “Operation Wait to File
47 Until the Trial” by posting an article on our web site and by sending that article to our mailing list. The article 48 included the flyer to be published in newspapers and a letter to be direct mailed to about 300,000 individuals.
- 49 • On Monday, January 14th I was in Milwaukee working with one of our attorneys on the questions for the hearing. I
50 received word that Lisa had called my office and asked me to return the call. I tried several times on Monday and 51 Tuesday to reach her by phone. I left voice messages on her machine, informing her that I would be returning to 52 my office that afternoon at approximately 3 p.m. While en route from Milwaukee to Albany on Tuesday, January
53 15th I tried unsuccessfully to reach you by phone. I did manage to speak to Sallie Taylor. I told her to let Lisa and 54 you know that I would be back in my office at 3 p.m. should either of you need to speak to me. I would not hear
55 from anyone in your office until 8:20 p.m. Thursday evening, January 17th.

- On Monday, January 14th, Kim Herb, Legislative Assistant to Congressman John Linder sent an e-mail to “District Directors” which read,

“Recently, it has been stated that there will be a Congressional hearing on the IRS. I wanted to dispel this rumor. There will be NO hearing. I repeat, there will be no Congressional hearing on the IRS in February. In response to a hunger strike by Mr. Robert Schulz, Congressman Roscoe Bartlett agreed to facilitate a meeting on IRS and tax topics. Accordingly, Mr. Bartlett arranged for "We the People" to have a public forum on the IRS, at which time "We the People" will debate such questions as the legality of the Sixteenth Amendment and the ratification process. However, no officials from the IRS or Justice Department will attend. Again, for emphasis, NO officials from either the IRS or Justice Department will be in attendance. The administration believes that these questions have been sufficiently addressed, and there is a fair amount of judicial precedence on this issue to confirm that assertion. Congressman Bartlett will likely give an opening statement, however, I understand that his comments will be limited to acknowledging that the "We the People" organization has a right to free speech and to voice their opinion. I recognize and support the Bush Administration's position. We have no interest in pursuing the ratification of the Sixteenth Amendment as a viable and legitimate argument in the fundamental tax reform movement. As such, I do not anticipate that Congressman Linder, as the official sponsor of the FairTax, will have any role in the February public forum organized by "We the People."

- At 3 p.m. Thursday, January 17th, as part of Operation Wait to File Until the Trial, I delivered several thousand letters and flyers to the personal fax machines of the following individuals:

- Members of the American Judges Association
- Judges of The Federal Circuit
- Mayors of Largest U.S. Cities
- Federal Tax Court Judges
- Supreme Court Justices
- Radio Station General Managers
- Radio Talk Show Hosts
- 550 Partners of the Big Five Accounting Firms
- Executive Cabinet Members and Cabinet Legal Advisors
- Members of the Association of Copy Editors

- At 8:20 p.m. on Thursday, January 17th I received a call from Lisa Wright. She stated that she had just forwarded via FedEx your letter informing me that you were “canceling the forum,” and that you were “dismayed” by the “rhetoric” of the “Wait to File” ad and that you would not be party to any movement that tells people not to pay their federal income taxes. I tried to reason with her, but it was late and she was in no mood to listen.

I hope that you can understand how very disappointed I am with your actions. From the beginning of our discussions, I expected you to encounter great difficulty in holding both Mr. Rossotti and Mr. Bryant to their word regarding the February hearing. At this point, it is clear that neither DOJ nor IRS ever intended to keep their commitment to you or the American People. Their refusal to answer these substantive questions regarding the fraudulent origin of the IRS and unlawful operation of the income tax system demonstrates the federal government’s pervasive and arrogant disregard for the constitutional rights of the American People. It is now clear, that on July 20, 2001, their objective was to stop the hunger strike and temporarily mollify the outrage of thousands of Americans who were demanding that our government agree to publicly answer the People’s Petition For Redress of Grievances.

However, I shared your faith in our Constitution and your belief that at the top of our government were trustworthy men and women of moral integrity. Like you, I believed that no matter the practical difficulty, there were enough people of honor at the highest levels of our government, that the People’s Constitutional Petition For Redress of Grievances would be heard. I did not believe that those who we have trusted to lead our country would turn their backs on the American People, disregard our Constitution and Bill of Rights, and hold in such low esteem the personal liberty so many of our countrymen have sacrificed and died to defend over the past 225 years. I believed that our highest government officials would honor their oaths of office to defend the United States Constitution, and its guarantee of every American’s right to petition our government for a redress of grievances.

1 Congressman Bartlett, I wish you had told me sooner about the Thanksgiving letter from DOJ, and your apparent decision
2 (if Kim Herb is to be believed) to merely give an opening statement at the February hearing, “limited to acknowledging that
3 the ‘We the People’ organization has a right to free speech and to voice their opinion.” I wish that you had told me then that
4 our Petition was not going to be publicly and officially answered by the government.

5 You say in your letter to me dated January 17 that the newspaper ad is “misleading” and “has made it impossible for the 6 forum to take place because the Internal Revenue Service (IRS) and the Department of Justice (DOJ) will not participate.”

7 This is most offensive to me. There was no need to misrepresent the facts. As the paragraphs above demonstrate, the ad had
8 nothing to do with the reluctance of DOJ and IRS to participate in the February income tax hearing. We now know that
9 their decision not to participate was put in writing to you last Thanksgiving, nearly two months before the “Wait to File”
10 campaign idea occurred to us. In fact, the Wait to File campaign is a direct result of learning from the January 7th edition of 11 Tax Notes that you had received DOJ’s Thanksgiving letter of withdrawal.

12 In your press release you say, “I will not be a party to advocating the non-payment of federal income taxes.” This statement
13 is also highly offensive, for it is nothing more than an unjustifiable, aggressive attack on my reputation and character. Your 14 statement is also a misrepresentation of the facts and reflects a deliberate attempt to paint me and the Foundation as 15 irresponsible law-breakers. In fact, the ad does not advocate the non-payment of federal income taxes. It suggests people do
16 what the law allows them to do-- wait until February 27th to file their tax returns.

17 Neither I nor the Foundation have ever advocated, supported or encouraged anyone not to pay a tax they lawfully owe or 18 not to file any tax return documents they are required by law to file. Ever. As we both know, the purpose of these important
19 hearings is to have the government show us the law so that all Americans may be guided by specific requirements for filing.

20 In your letter and press release you say that you “remain[s] committed to ensuring the right of Bob Schulz and other
21 citizens to exercise their constitutional rights under the First Amendment to get answers about federal tax policy from the 22 government,” and you propose, as an alternative to the public forum, that you deliver our questions to DOJ and IRS and
23 that you post our questions and the answers on your web site. In fact, as you yourself argued so effectively last July, this 24 would be tantamount to our agreeing not to have our questions answered. To use your own words, this approach “would 25 allow for delay, obfuscation, confusion and to otherwise bring to ruin” what we have so patiently, intelligently,
26 professionally and rationally developed into a proper petition for a remedy of the people’s grievances.

27 I now fear for the future of our Constitutional Republic. A constitutional crisis has now developed. Whether we have a
28 written Constitution that protects our unalienable rights as Americans is now a question. Whether the Constitution is any 29 more than a piece of paper is now a question. Whether we have a federal government limited by a Constitution and Bill of 30 Rights is now a question.

31 Here is what I have decided must now be done in response to the decision by DOJ and IRS not to participate in the public,
32 recorded truth-in-taxation hearing on February 27-28, and also your decision last Thursday to withdraw your commitment
33 to support this public forum.

34 First: Last week I spoke to your aide, Sallie Taylor, to request a meeting with you as soon as possible. She said your 35 calendar would not allow such a meeting before Wednesday, January 23rd, and that she would have to speak with you to see 36 if that is what you wanted to do. My purpose is to respectfully request that you reconsider your decision to cancel the 37 February meeting.

38 Second: We plan to proceed with a recorded, public forum on February 27 and 28 in Washington DC. Because of the
39 importance of this issue to the American People, we hope that you will decide to help us hold this event as planned in the 40 secure location of the Science and Technology Committee Hearing Room. However, in the alternative, we have booked the 41 Marriott Hotel for the two days.

42 Third: I am attaching to this letter our initial set of questions relating to the fraudulent origin of the IRS and the unlawful
43 operation of the income tax system. These are the preliminary questions that we intend to present to the IRS and DOJ at 44 the February meeting. We are releasing these questions several weeks earlier than planned. We have a number of additional 45 questions currently being prepared that will be released upon completion. By copy of this letter to Attorney General
46 Ashcroft, Treasury Secretary O’Neil and Mr. Lawrence B. Lindsey, we are demanding that experts from DOJ and IRS be

1 present on February 27 and 28 to answer the questions in a public forum. As you previously stated, the written exchange of 2 questions and answers with DOJ and IRS would be utterly futile.

3 Fourth: We are posting the questions on our web site along with an invitation for all learned persons to answer these
4 questions and participate in the February 27 and 28 hearing. We will request that interested parties contact us by e-mail
5 using a prepared form.

6 Fifth: We will extend an invitation to the February 27 and 28 event to every organization, large or small, that is concerned
7 about the protection, preservation and enhancement of human liberty in America, and that is interested in limiting the size,
8 scope and costs of the federal government to the enumerated powers of the Constitution.

9 It is now imperative to summon all patriots in this cause for liberty and justice. It is time to ask all right thinking
10 Americans to stand united and put a collective foot down against this arrogant disregard for our liberties, rights and
11 freedoms, whether it be an erosion of our right to petition the government for a redress of grievances, our right to
12 privacy, our right to property, our right to firearms, our right to fully-informed juries, our right to honest
13 representation and voting, our right to a truly independent judiciary, our freedom from the influence of the “same
14 hands” in all three branches, our right to honest checks and balances, our right to the fruits of our labor, our right
15 not to have the government waste the fruits of our labor under the pretense of caring for us, our right to laws that
16 do not favor public over private education, our right to home school our children, our right to have the war powers
17 clauses adhered to, our right to have all treaties approved by the Senate, et al.

18 If the DOJ and the IRS do attend the event and provide honest, forthright answers to the people’s questions relating to the
19 authority of the IRS to force employers to withhold the income tax from the paychecks of their employees and to force
20 most Americans to file a tax return and to pay the tax, we believe the probable outcome will be a more limited federal 21 government, a cleansing of our political system and a restoration of power to the states and the people.

22 Sixth: We are calling on all patriotic Americans to help reveal the truth regarding the true limits to the federal taxing
23 powers by standing up for our Country and its founding principles. In light of the decision by DOJ and IRS to ignore the 24 People’s fundamental, Constitutional right to petition our government for a redress of these grievances, we are respectfully
25 requesting all Americans to:

- 26 1) Demand that the IRS and DOJ attend the February hearing and publicly answer the questions, as they 27 committed to do last July.
- 28 2) Wait to file their tax returns at least until February 27th. If IRS and DOJ fail to appear at the citizens’
29 hearing to answer the People’s questions, we will then respectfully request every American citizen and 30 business to defer filing of their tax returns and suspend employee withholding. The American People
31 should not be obligated to pay a tax that the federal government will not, and cannot, publicly defend on 32 lawful or moral grounds.
- 33 3) Stand together on the mall in Washington DC on Sunday, ~~March 31~~ April 14, 2002, and peacefully 34 protest the unlawful income tax by filing their blank 1040 forms in metal waste drums.

35 Congressman Bartlett, do we still have a written Constitution in America? Do we still have a Bill of Rights? Do those 36 documents still memorialize in writing what we believe most deeply in our hearts as Americans? Or have they become 37 mere abstract concepts that have no real bearing on our moral conduct as country? What good is our Constitution and Bill
38 of Rights if we do not treasure them and protect them?

39 It has been said that the limits of tyrants are prescribed by the tolerance of those whom they oppress.

40 I, for one, will not accept the decision by the DOJ and the IRS (our servant government) not to answer the People’s
41 questions in a recorded public forum---a decision that continues a longstanding history of unlawful, abusive and 42 unaccountable conduct by our government. The refusal of DOJ and IRS to answer these questions in a public forum can 43 only be interpreted as a glaring admission of guilt.

44 Congressman Bartlett, you gave your word to the American People. I respectfully ask that you keep your word to protect 45 and defend our Constitution at this critical moment in America’s history.

46 Wholeheartedly,

6.5.7 Cover-Up of 2002: 40 U.S.C. §255 obfuscated

For over three years, this book made frequent reference to the original 40 U.S.C §255 to point out that there is no federal jurisdiction inside states of the Union. This section of the codes had remained intact and unchanged for over 62 years. Eventually, the Congress caught onto the fact that this section of code plainly showed the limits on their jurisdiction so in August 2002, they tried to hide the truth by splitting the section into two sections found in 40 U.S.C. §3111 and §3112 and by complicating the language in these two sections.

When the statute was broken up and restated, the notes section had the relevant quotes from the Supreme Court removed so that the implications of no federal jurisdiction within states of the Union would be less obvious and harder to find.

6.5.8 Cover-Up of 1988: Changed Title of Part I, Subchapter N to Make it Refer Only to Foreign Income

Prior to 1988, the title of Part I of Subchapter N (which begins with Section 861) was “Determination of sources of income” (which is still the heading of the related regulations). In 1988, this title was changed to “Source rules and other general rules relating to foreign income.” It should be mentioned that while titles of parts may give an indication of what the part is about, the title has no effect on the actual legal application.

“...nor shall any table of contents, table of cross references, or similar outline, analysis, or descriptive matter relating to the contents of this title be given any legal effect.”
[26 U.S.C. §7806(b)]

So when the title was changed (but the text of the law was not), the application of the law did not change. What changed was the appearance of the table of contents. Prior to the change, in light of the fact that the income tax applies to “income from whatever source derived,” the table of contents made the relevance of 26 U.S.C. §861 obvious:

Subtitle A, “Income taxes”
Chapter 1, “Normal taxes and surtaxes”
Subchapter N, “Tax based on income from sources within or without the United States”
Part I, “Determination of sources of income”
Section 861, “Income from sources within the United States”
(a) “Gross income from sources within the United States”
(b) “Taxable income from sources within the United States”

When the title of Part I was changed, and the new title stated that the part was about “foreign income,” it no longer appeared to be an obvious place for most people to look when determining their taxable income. This would certainly have the effect of drawing attention away from Section 861. Many tax professionals concede that Section 861 and the related regulations show income to be taxable only when it comes from certain activities related to international and foreign commerce. The new title gives the appearance that the part has no relevance to most people, and should not even be examined.

But this change resulted in a curious situation: a part whose title says it is about “foreign income” is identified as the part which (along with the related regulations) “determine[s] the sources of income for purposes of the income tax.”

6.5.9 Cover-Up of 1986: Obfuscation of IRC Section 931

Since 26 U.S.C. §61 does not indicate the fact that “gross income” is restricted to specific property the I.R. Code had to detail this fact elsewhere. This is accomplished in section 931.

Prior to 1986, section 931 of the 1954 I.R. Code provided the exact terms as to what income is deemed to be “gross income” in the I.R. Code in this manner:

Sec. 931. INCOME FROM SOURCES WITHIN POSSESSIONS OF THE UNITED STATES [provided in part]

(a) General rule.

In the case of individual citizens of the United States, gross income means only gross income from sources within the United States if the conditions of both paragraph (1) and paragraph (2) are satisfied:

(1) 3-year period. If 80 percent or more of the gross income of such citizen...was derived from sources within a possession of the United States; and

(2) Trade or business. If 50 percent or more of his gross income was derived from the active conduct of a trade or business within a possession of the United States either on his own account or as an employee or agent of another.

(h) Employees of the United States

For purposes of this section, amounts paid for services performed by a citizen of the United States as an employee of the United States or any agency thereof shall be deemed to be derived from sources within the United States.

Chapters 4 and 5 laid the foundation for understanding that "within" and "without" in conjunction with the "United States" means within or without the United States Government. This section 931 confirms this by saying that "gross income" MEANS ONLY gross income from sources within a possession of the United States and from the active conduct of a trade or business within a possession of the United States. The 50 States of the United States of America are not possessions of the United States. But, Federal areas within the 50 States are deemed to be possessions (definition in chapter 14). The U.S. Congress can only pass laws for United States possessions and laws with regard to income only when the U.S. Government is the source of the income within its possession. This is the reason for having to state that the pay of employees of the United States is deemed to be derived from sources within the United States.

The old section 931 is provided to demonstrate the difference between it and the current section 931. In the 1954 I.R. Code, the source was emphasized, whereas in the 1986 I.R. Code the place is emphasized and the source of one's income is concealed. By adding vagueness, the intent could only be to mislead. This is part of the IRS humbug.

The 1986 I.R. Code section 931 reads in part:

Sec. 931. INCOME FROM SOURCES WITHIN GUAM, AMERICAN SAMOA, OR THE NORTHERN MARIANA ISLANDS

(a) GENERAL RULE.--In the case of an individual who is a bona fide resident of a specified possession during the entire taxable year, gross income shall not include--

(1) income derived from sources within any specified possession, and

(2) income effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business by such individual within any specified possession.

(c) SPECIFIC POSSESSIONS.--For purposes of this section, the term "specific possession" means Guam, American Samoa, and the Northern Mariana Islands.

(d) SPECIAL RULES.--For purposes of this section--

(1) EMPLOYEE OF THE UNITED STATES.--Amounts paid for services performed as an employee of the United States (or any agency thereof) shall be treated as not described in paragraph (1) or (2) of subsection (a).

Inverse construction similar to that used in section 6012 is used here. Unlike the old section 931 (which made a definite statement restricting the meaning of gross income) section 931 in the 1986 I.R. Code excludes certain income from "gross income" and then, pursuant to section 931(d), excludes amounts paid to Federal Government employees from the exclusion. This accomplished the same result as section 931(h) of the 1954 I.R. Code where amounts paid to anyone for performance of personal services as an employee of the United States was deemed to be "gross income" without regard to any formulas put forth in section 931(a) of the 1954 I.R. Code for "individuals" employed by the U.S. Government by virtue of a trade or business effectively connected within the United States. Again showing that the term "within the United States" means within the U.S. Government and that income from sources other than the U.S. Treasury is foreign to the jurisdiction of the IRS.<sup>271</sup>

1 With section 931(a) and (d) of the 1986 I.R. Code, Congress is saying that "gross income" does not include income
 2 received by an individual (Federal Government employee) who is a bona fide resident of a specified possession when that
 3 income was derived from sources within the specified possession or if the income was effectively connected with the
 4 conduct of a trade or business by such individual (Federal Government employee) within any specified possession unless
 5 the U.S. Government was the source of the income. Since there is equal treatment under the laws of the United States of
 6 America, this cannot be limited to persons who are bona fide residents of these specified possessions. The fact that "gross
 7 income" does not include what anyone receives from a source other than the U.S. Government applies to anyone. But, by
 8 emphasizing specified possessions, there is enough vagueness injected to cloud the fact the source of the income, not the 9 place, is the controlling factor. The fact that the term "gross income" in the I.R. Code includes only income derived from 10 the U.S. Government as compensation "for services performed as an employee of the United States or any agency thereof"
 11 is demonstrated here (also see section 3401(a) in chapter 6). You cannot enter into an employment agreement with a place,
 12 the employer must be the source. Again confirming it is legal kickback pursuant to employment agreements which control
 13 whether income is "gross income" subject to the I.R. Code laws.

14 6.5.10 Cover-Up of 1982: Footnotes Removed from IRC Section 61 Pointing to Section 861

15 The Code contains many footnotes and references to allow readers to search back and trace the origins and evolution of 16 laws and regulations, since this often clarifies intent. IRC 61(a) on gross income used to have a footnote informing readers
 17 that it came from Section 22(a) of the 1939 Code and that the law hadn't been changed. The footnote said, "Source: Sec.
 18 22(a), 1939 Code, substantially unchanged." That footnote was in the 1954 version of the Internal Revenue Code at least 19 up to the 1982 edition, but then it vanished, making it difficult for tax professionals to understand how the wording has 20 been deceptively altered, leading to misapplication of the law. Constitutional limitations discussed above were thus 21 hidden.

22 Deletion of the footnote has also made it much more difficult to notice and understand the close connection between IRC
 23 61 and IRC 861 (or C.F.R. 1.61 and C.F.R. 1.861), especially as 26 C.F.R. §1.861 is now thousands of pages distant from 24 26 C.F.R. § 1.61, and in the earlier versions, the section was not numbered 861, but 119. In pre-1954 versions, the "gross
 25 income" regulations under Section 22(a) mentioned the taxable sources as income of nonresident aliens and foreign
 26 corporations doing business in the U.S. and its possessions and profits of citizens, residents, and domestic corporations
 27 derived from foreign commerce. The same sources were described in the regulations under IRC 119 "Income from sources
 28 within the United States."

29 The 1921 version was even more clear (and the law hasn't materially changed since then). It said explicitly "that in the case
 30 of a nonresident alien individual or of a citizen entitled to the benefits of section 262, the following items of gross income
 31 shall be treated as income from sources within the United States." (IRC 262 applied if at least 80% of a citizen's gross
 32 income was from a U.S. possession.)

33 In 1954, while the law still hadn't materially changed, the regulations were changed so that the "foreign" sources were 34 omitted from the "gross income" description in C.F.R. 1.61(a), but remained in the regulations as C.F.R. 1.861 (renumbered
 35 from the regulations previously under IRC 119). Wording was put in those regulations stating that they "determine the 36 sources of income for purposes of the income tax," and they stated that it was the foreign sources noted below that were the 37 sources. These sources today are the ones listed in 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(f)(1).

38 6.5.11 Cover-Up of 1978: Confused IRS Regulations on "Sources"

39 In 1978, the wording of 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8 was changed significantly, and the title was changed from "Computation of 40 Taxable Income from Sources Within the United States" to "Computation of taxable income from sources within the 41 United States and from other sources and activities." Some have suggested that the current title implies that one should 42 not be using this section unless he has income both from within the United States and from "other sources and activities."
 43 The older title, as well as the text of the current regulations, shows that this is not the case.

44 Another change regarding 26 C.F.R. §1.861 that can only be seen as an intent to deceive occurred in 1978. 26 C.F.R.
 45 §1.861-8, which contains the key list of sources, went from less than one page before 1978 to more than forty pages. There
 46 was no underlying change in the law or even in the substance of the regulation, but the regulation became a maze of new
 47 phrases, such as "statutory groupings," or "operative sections," or "specific sources" that require much more effort to sort
 48 out, but lead to the same conclusion as before. There can no other explanation for such a masterpiece of regulatory 49 obfuscation but the intent to confuse, obscure, deceive and defraud. Those who claim that IRC 861 is not relevant to

1 citizens should explain why officials would go to such great lengths to obfuscate what would otherwise be a relatively
 2 little-used part of the Code. If it didn't apply to most citizens, such a masterful job of creating confusion would be a waste
 3 of lawyerly talent.

4 It's well worth the government's while to have the cleverest lawyers and officials try to keep playing with the wording of
 5 the income tax Code and regulations to further disguise the true meaning of the law without actually changing it, in order to
 6 make it appear that most citizens are required to file and pay even if they aren't. The payoff to the government is enormous
 7 - several hundred billion dollars a year.

8 6.5.12 Cover-Up of 1954: Hiding of Constitutional Limitations in IRC On Congress' Right To Tax

9 Here is a brief summary of what we will discuss in this section below, as far as what congress changed in the law:

- 10 1. Deleted any phrases referring to income that is, under the Constitution or fundamental law, not taxable by the 11 government. This was done by changing the definition of gross income from "unless exempt from tax by law" to
 12 "unless excluded by law". There were no changes to the law or the Constitution that would necessitate deleting the
 13 reference to the Constitution; it was done for no other credible reason than to obscure the Constitutionally-limited
 14 application of the income tax, but without making the regulation technically incorrect - only deceiving and misleading.
- 15 2. Obfuscated locating taxable sources by adding double-negatives "list of sources that are NOT considered tax exempt".
 16 Why not just state what IS taxable, which is foreign income?
- 17 3. Removed from the regulations the phrase "in the case of nonresident alien individuals and foreign corporations
 18 engaged in trade or business within the United States" from the regulations in section 1.861-8. This made it appear that 19 the applicability of the income tax was expanded. ." As Congress stated, the application of the law did not change in 20 1954, but some key phrases in the regulations were removed so as to make the truth less obvious.
- 21 4. The admission of the limited application vanished from the regulations defining "gross income," but remained in the 22 regulations under 26 U.S.C. §861, and (to maintain literal accuracy) the regulations began to say that 861 and
 23 following and related regulations "determine the sources of income for purposes of the income tax." This change
 24 removed any chance of the regulations under Section 61 raising suspicions.

25 In 1954, the Code underwent a major rearranging and renumbering (and to some extent, rewording). This change-over did
 26 not substantially change the law itself, but simply rearranged it. While there have been several amendments, the current
 27 Code retains the same general structure, numbering and content of the 1954 Code. At the time of the 1954
 28 "transformation" of the Code, several changes helped to conceal the truth about the limited application of the federal 29 income tax.

30 As shown above, the regulations in 1945 specifically stated (twice) that some income not exempt by statute was 31 nonetheless exempt from federal taxation because of the Constitution. The 1945 regulations under the definition of "gross 32 income" began as follows:

33 "Sec. 29.22(a)-1. What included in gross income.
 34 Gross income includes in general [items of income listed] derived from any source whatever, unless exempt
 35 from tax by law." [1945 regulations]

36 Those regulations then went on to explain that this refers to income exempt by statute or "fundamental law," meaning the 37 Constitution. The current corresponding regulations begin in a similar manner:

38 "Sec. 1.61-1 Gross income. (a) General definition. Gross income means all income from whatever source 39 derived, unless excluded by law."
 40 [26 C.F.R. §1.61-1]

41 However, no mention of the Constitution remains. The phrase "unless excluded by law" is now read as being synonymous
 42 with "unless excluded by statute." The Constitutional limitations still apply (there have been no subsequent constitutional 43 amendments relative to the taxing power), but the present regulations under 26 U.S.C. §61 do not explicitly say that this is 44 part of the "law" which exempts certain income. Instead, they use the general wording that leaves the reader free to assume 45 that only income specifically exempted by statute is exempt from taxation.

46 But this was only one part of a major shift in the structure of the Great Deception that occurred in 1954. Prior to 1954, the 47 regulations stated that "gross income" included everything not exempt, and then made clear that some types of income were

1 not taxable by the federal government because of the Constitution. The regulations regarding “What included in gross
2 income” then went on to say the following:

3 “Profits of citizens, residents, or domestic corporations derived from sales in foreign commerce must be
4 included in their gross income; but special provisions are made for nonresident aliens and foreign
5 corporations... and, in certain cases... for citizens and domestic corporations deriving income from sources
6 within possessions of the United States.”

7 This list of taxable activities is absent from the current regulations under 26 U.S.C. §61. However, something very similar
8 is found in the current regulations under Section 861. The regulations under Section 861 twice define the term “class of 9 gross income,” saying that a “class of gross income” “may consist of one or more items... of gross income enumerated in
10 section 61.” The regulations then refer the reader to “paragraph (d)(2) of this section which provides that a class of gross
11 income may include excluded income.” In other words, the “items” of income listed in Section 61 are not necessarily 12 taxable, but may be “exempt” or “excluded” from the federal income tax. Paragraph (d)(2) states only “[Reserved]”
13 (meaning there is no current regulation) but refers the reader to paragraph (d)(2) of the temporary regulations at 26 C.F.R.
14 §1.861-8T. This section describes what is meant by exempt income.

15 “(ii) Exempt income and exempt asset defined--(A) In general. For purposes of this section, the term exempt
16 income means any income that is, in whole or in part, exempt, excluded, or eliminated for federal income tax
17 purposes.”
18 [26 C.F.R. §1.861-8T(d)(2)(ii)]

19 The section then goes on to specify what is not exempt. The following should be read carefully, since it starts with a 20 double negative. If a certain kind of income is not exempt, it means it is subject to the federal income tax. Therefore, after 21 being told that “items” of income (which make up “classes of gross income”) may not be taxable, a list is given of the types
22 of income which are subject to the federal income tax:

23 “(iii) Income that is not considered tax exempt. The following items are not considered to be exempt, 24 eliminated, or excluded income and, thus, may have expenses, losses, or other deductions allocated and 25 apportioned to them:
26 (A) In the case of a foreign taxpayer...
27 (B) In computing the combined taxable income of a DISC or FSC...
28 (C) For all purposes under subchapter N of the Code... the gross income of a possessions corporation...
29 (D) Foreign earned income as defined in section 911 and the regulations thereunder...”
30 [26 C.F.R. §1.861-8T(d)(2)(iii)]

31 This is the entire list of non-exempt (taxable) income. The idea that other types of income are also taxable (not exempt),
32 despite not being listed, is contradicted by the regulations stating that paragraph (d)(2) “provides that a class of gross
33 income [consisting of the “items” of income listed in 26 U.S.C. §61] may include excluded income.” Unless those types of 34 income not listed are exempt, paragraph (d)(2) does not show that the “items” of income listed in Section 61 may be 35 exempt. (A basic principle of law is that such a list is assumed to be exclusive and complete, unless a phrase such as 36 “including, but not limited to...” is used.)

37 While it is arranged and worded differently, this list of non-exempt income is essentially the same as the regulations under 38 the old statute defining “gross income.” It lists foreign earned income of citizens, income from within possessions, and 39 income of foreigners. But while the 1945 regulations listed these “non-exempt” activities under the regulations defining 40 “gross income,” they are currently buried in dozens of pages of less prominent regulations under 26 U.S.C. §861. So while
41 the 1945 statute and regulation defining “gross income” by themselves indicated the limited application of the law, the trail
42 to find the truth in the current law is more involved (though the end conclusion is the same).

43 The basic shift in the Great Deception (in 1954) can be summed up as this: While the older version showed the limitations
44 of the law in “step one” (the definition of “gross income”), the current statute and regulation defining “gross income” use
45 the word “source” without further explanation, and additional steps must be followed to discover that the meaning of that
46 term (“source”) is determined by 26 U.S.C. §861 and following, and related regulations.

47 Prior to 1954, the regulations did not say that Section 119 (predecessor to the current 861) and its regulations “determined
48 the sources of income for purposes of the income tax.” Instead, the regulations under 22(a) (defining “gross income”) list
49 the exact same activities as Section 119 when discussing income from within the United States. In effect, both the 50 regulations defining “gross income,” and Section 119 and related regulations “determined the sources of income for 51 purposes of the income tax.”

(The regulations defining “gross income” mention “nonresident aliens and foreign corporations by sections 211 to 237, inclusive, and, in certain cases, by section 251 for citizens and domestic corporations deriving income from sources within possessions of the United States.” At the same time the regulations under 119 mention “nonresident alien individuals, foreign corporations, and citizens of the United States or domestic corporations entitled to the benefits of section 251.”)

In 1954, the admission of the limited application vanished from the regulations defining “gross income,” but remained in the regulations under 26 U.S.C. §861, and (to maintain literal accuracy) the regulations began to say that 861 and following and related regulations “determine the sources of income for purposes of the income tax.” This change removed any chance of the regulations under Section 61 raising suspicions.

(The way federal law works, there is no requirement that a section which uses a term point to where the definition or explanation of that term can be found. As ludicrous as it seems, it would be perfectly legal for Section 1 of some law to impose a tax “on the transfer of each automobile,” and then have Section 14523(g)(4)(iii) say that “for the purposes of Section 1, the term ‘automobile’ means a blue Corvette owned by a foreigner.” That is in essence how the Great Deception has been structured since 1954.)

While this makes the truth more difficult (but certainly not impossible) to demonstrate with the current statutes and regulations alone, in retrospect it strongly confirms the limited nature of the tax, by showing that while the structure of deception has changed, the conclusion remains the same.

But the regulations defining “gross income” were not the only place where the truth became less clear during the 1954 “transformation.” When the statutes were being rearranged and renumbered, Section 119 of the 1939 Code became all of Part I of Subchapter N. The Senate report on the 1954 Code states the following:

“SUBCHAPTER N - TAX BASED ON INCOME FROM SOURCES
WITHIN OR WITHOUT THE UNITED STATES

PART I - Determination of Sources of Income

§ 861. Income from sources within the United States
§ 862. Income from sources without the United States
§ 863. Items not specified in section 861 or 862
§ 864. Definitions

These sections, which are identical with sections 861-864 of the House bill, correspond to section 119 of the 1939 Code. No substantive change is made, except that section 861(a)(3) would extend the existing 90-day $3,000 rule in the case of a nonresident alien employee of a foreign employer to a nonresident alien employee of a foreign branch of a domestic employer.”

Congress here states that the application of the law did not change (except for the specific detail mentioned). As would be expected, the statutes are nearly identical.

Sec. 119. [1939 Code] Income from sources within the United States
(a) Gross Income from Sources in United States.
The following items of gross income shall be treated as income from sources within the United States:...

Sec. 861 [current Code]. Income from sources within the United States
(a) Gross income from sources within United States
The following items of gross income shall be treated as income from sources within the United States:...

Section 119 of the old statutes and Section 861 of the current statutes use general terms that could easily be misread as applying to any income from within the United States. But while the statutes did not change, the honesty of the regulations corresponding to these sections changed dramatically. The older regulations admitted the truth so plainly and so often that no step-by-step explanation is needed. The following is the equivalent of the current 26 C.F.R. §1.861-1, in its entirety.

“Sec. 29.119-1. Income from sources within the United States.
Nonresident alien individuals, foreign corporations, and citizens of the United States or domestic corporations entitled to the benefits of section 251 [this applies only to those who receive a large percentage of their income from within federal possessions] are taxable only upon income from sources within the United States. Citizens of the United States and domestic corporations entitled to the benefits of section 251 are, however, taxable upon

1 income received within the United States, whether derived from sources within or without the United States.
2 (See sections 212(a), 231(c), and 251.)

3 The Internal Revenue Code divides the income of such taxpayers into three classes:

- 4 (1) Income which is derived in full from sources within the United States;
5 (2) Income which is derived in full from sources without the United States;
6 (3) Income which is derived partly from sources within and partly from sources without the United States.

7 The taxable income from sources within the United States includes that derived in full from sources within the 8 United States and that portion of the income which is derived partly from sources within and partly from 9 sources without the United States which is allocated or apportioned to sources within the United States.”

10 Note that the second paragraph in the old regulations under Section 119 states that the Code (specifically Section 119) is for 11 determining taxable income of “such taxpayers,” meaning those deriving income from specific taxable activities or 12 sources. The general language of the statutes is applicable only to those involved in certain types of international and 13 foreign commerce.

14 The subsequent sections of the older regulations (like the current regulations) then deal with specific “items” of income.
15 The sections of regulations following that (which correspond to the current 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8) then deal with determining 16 taxable income from sources within the United States. Again, the regulations clearly show the limited application of the 17 law.

18 “Sec. 29.119-9. Deductions in general.

19 The deductions provided for in chapter 1 shall be allowed to nonresident alien individuals and foreign
20 corporations engaged in trade or business within the United States, and to citizens of the United States and 21 domestic corporations entitled to the benefits of section 251, only if and to the extent provided in sections 213,
22 215, 232, 233, and 251.

23 Sec. 29.119-10. Apportionment of deductions.

24 From the items specified in sections 29.119-1 to 29.119-6, inclusive, as being derived specifically from sources
25 within the United States there shall, in the case of nonresident alien individuals and foreign corporations
26 engaged in trade or business within the United States, be deducted [allowable deductions]. The remainder
27 shall be included in full as net income from sources within the United States ...”

28 Regarding income from within the United States, the older regulations defining “gross income” describe the exact same
29 taxable activities as the regulations of that time related to “income from sources within the United States” (namely,
30 nonresident aliens and foreign corporations getting income from within the United States, and citizens and domestic 31 corporations who receive much of their income from within federal possessions). “No substantive change” was made when 32 Section 119 became Sections 861 and following, which implies that Section 119 and its regulations “determine[d] the 33 sources of income for purposes of the income tax” (as the current regulations state). The older regulations did not need to 34 say this, since the regulations defining “gross income” also specifically listed what activities could generate taxable income.
35 So in 1945, the regulations defining “gross income” and the regulations under the old Section 119 “determine[d] the 36 sources of income for purposes of the income tax.” Today only the regulations under Section 861 list the taxable activities.

37 (There is a chart in section 3.15.5 of this document showing the outline and excerpts from Part I of Subchapter N and 38 related regulations, and another chart showing the outline and excerpts from the corresponding statutes and regulations
39 from before 1954.)

41 citizens living and working within the 50 union states as taxable?

42 Can it be considered an accident that the current regulations are so overly-complex and confusing, while the older
43 regulations blurted out the truth in plain English in the very first sentence? The fact that the statutes apply only to income
44 from certain “specific sources” (relating to international and foreign commerce) is still stated in the current regulations, but 45 rather than being in first sentence, it is buried deep in the jumbled mess:

46 “(ii) Relationship of sections 861, 862, 863(a), and 863(b). Sections 861, 862, 863(a), and 863(b) are the four
48 [26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(f)(3)(ii)]

In fact, even here it does not specify to which “specific sources” it is referring; the meaning of that term has to be discovered by searching elsewhere in the regulations. (Three other sections of the regulations say that “specific sources” means the taxable activities described in the “operative sections” throughout Subchapter N.) The regulations prior to 1954 were short, plain, and very clear about who they applied to. (While many tax professionals are now aware of the correct application of Section 861 and its regulations, it certainly is not evident at first glance.)

When the regulations changed in 1954, they did not change directly into what the regulations are today. The current maze of “statutory groupings,” “specific sources,” “operative sections,” etc. did not come about until 1978. Of particular note is how the regulations in 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8 appeared just after the change in 1954, and how the corresponding regulations appeared prior to 1954. The wording was only very slightly changed, but gives one of the most obvious examples of intent to deceive.

The wording is nearly identical, except for two changes. The phrase stating that the whole section applies only to nonresident aliens and foreign corporations simply vanished! In addition, while the specifics of the example in the regulation remained identical, the phrase “a nonresident alien individual” was replaced with “a taxpayer.” As Congress stated, the application of the law did not change in 1954, but some key phrases in the regulations were removed so as to make the truth less obvious. A similar disappearance of a phrase occurred at the same time in the section of regulations dealing with the “item” of interest. The wording remained identical except for the disappearing phrase.

4 6.5.13 1952: Office of Collector of Internal Revenue Eliminated

5 The Office of the Collector of Internal Revenue abolished. See Reorganization Plans No. 26 of 1950 and No. 1 of 1952,
6 and Notes under 26 U.S.C. §7804, “Amendments” at:

7 <http://www4.law.cornell.edu/uscode/26/7804.notes.html>

8 As part of this reorganization, the government manufactured a scandal concerning the collectors. The real reason, however,
9 was to make the code voluntary.

10 This office of the Collector of Internal Revenue made it possible to protest a tax. Without a Collector of Internal Revenue,
11 it is impossible to protest a tax because it has to be voluntary without a collector. Recall that earlier in section 5.4.6.6, we 12 pointed out that a free people can only be free if they consent to their taxation. There are two ways to consent:

- 13 1. Indirectly consent by electing a Collector of Internal Revenue or have him appointed by a person who was elected.
- 14 2. Directly consent by sending a donation form called a “tax return”, which gives the authority to the government to 15 take your money by virtue of the liability that you assessed against yourself.

16 If you don't make a liability to pay a tax in the law, then no one has an obligation to do anything. This reorganization of the 17 IRS made the process of tax collection into an administrative process which could only touch “volunteers” called
18 “taxpayers”. This made the U.S. District courts into administrative courts in regards to federal taxes. Administrative courts
19 are “non-judicial” and are only there to hear cases where all parties appear by consent and confer jurisdiction on the court to
20 resolve the matter by virtue of them appearing. The only people who should go to these courts are “taxpayers”, which are 21 people who volunteered to pay the tax. If you are a “nontaxpayer” or choose not to participate in income taxation, then you
22 shouldn't appear in these courts and if you don't appear or are forced to appear involuntarily because you were extradited,
23 simply refuse to plead and refuse to accept a public defender. That ends the jurisdiction of the court and they will
24 eventually have to let you go because of the requirement for habeas corpus.

25 Recall that the original office of the Collector was in the House of Representatives, which is part of the Legislative Branch.
26 The office of the Collector was created at 1 Stat. 65 of the Statutes at Large, before the Treasury Department even existed,
27 so he was in the Legislative branch. From the founding of this country, tax Collectors were private parties who were
28 bonded and who had to put their house up for surety with a federal lien while they were Collectors. If they collected

1 unlawfully, then they could lose their house and would have to forfeit their bond in order to compensate those they hurt.
2 The Collector was moved from the Legislative Branch to the Executive Branch in 1862, when the income tax was
3 restructured during the Civil War and without explanation or fanfare. This was a violation of the legislative intent of the 4 Constitution, which requires that taxation and representation must coexist with the same person, which could only be your
5 Representative in the House of Representatives: Taxation WITH representation. Once the taxation and representation
6 functions were separated to two separate branches of the government, then all of the corruption began because the 7 separation of powers doctrine had been violated.

8 Section 29 of the Revenue Act of 1894 was the last federal law that imposed a legal duty to pay upon citizens and residents
9 of the United States. The duty to pay the tax was subsequently eliminated by Pollock v. Farmers' Loan & Trust Co., 157
10 U.S. 429 (1895) and does not appear in any Revenue Law after that date.

11 6.5.14 Cover-Up of 1939: Removed References to Nonresident Aliens from the Definition of "Gross Income"

12 As shown above, some very telling phrases simply vanished from the regulations in 1954. But it was not only the 13 regulations that lost some honesty along the way. The statutes found in the Revenue Act of 1921 show why the regulations
14 said what they said up until 1954. But just as happened with the regulations, a telling phrase that existed in 1921 is no
15 longer found in the statutes. The current Section 861 and its predecessors have remained basically the same for more than 16 70 years. The text begins "The following items of gross income shall be treated as income from sources within the United 17 States:" The section then lists "items" of income (interest, dividends, compensation for labor, rents and royalties, etc.). In 18 1921 the section was very similar, but it began "That in the case of a nonresident alien individual or of a citizen entitled 19 to the benefits of section 262, the following items of gross income shall be treated as income from sources within the
20 United States:..."

21 (While Section 217 itself mentions only individuals, Section 232 of the Act states that "[i]n the case of a foreign
22 corporation or of a corporation entitled to the benefits of section 262 the computation shall also be made in the manner
23 provided in section 217." As the current regulations and historical regulations state, the section is applicable to nonresident 24 aliens, foreign corporations, and citizen or domestic corporations which receive much of their income from within federal 25 possessions.)

1 Although it is obvious to whom this section applied in 1921, some may question whether this is at all relevant to current
2 law. Treasury Decision 8687, in discussing what the regulations under the current 26 U.S.C. §863 should say (regarding
3 sales of natural resources), specifically refer to Section 217 of the 1921 Code in trying to determine the “legislative intent”
4 of Congress.

5 “The legislative history to section 863’s predecessor, section 217(e) of the Revenue Act of 1921, also reflects 6 an intention that...”
7 [Treasury Decision 8687]

8 This Treasury Decision, passed in late 1996, confirms that Section 217 of the Revenue Act of 1921 is the predecessor of the 9 current Part I of Subchapter N, and shows that the IRS still refers to the 1921 Code to determine the proper application of 10 the current Code. The Internal Revenue Manual shows that the courts, as well as the IRS, considers legislative history
11 when determining the correct application of the law.

12 “The courts give great importance to the literal language of the Code but the language does not solve every tax
13 controversy. Courts also consider the history of a particular code section...”
14 [Internal Revenue Manual, (4.2)7.2.1.1]

15 When the phrase disappeared from the statutes after 1921, the application of the law did not change. What changed was 16 how easily the truth could be found.

17 6.5.15 1932: Revenue Act of 1932 imposes first excise income tax on federal judges and public officers

18 Congress knew from past court actions that Federal judges already in office would not permit impairment of their existing 19 contracts. By changes in the wording in the Revenue Act of 1932, c. 209, to read:

20 Sec. 22...In the case of Presidents of the United States and judges of courts of the United States taking office
21 *after June 6, 1932, the compensation received as such shall be included in gross income; and all Acts fixing
22 *the compensation of such Presidents and judges are hereby amended accordingly.

23 Congress managed to get the cooperation of Federal judges taking office after June 6, 1932. Cooperation is evidenced by 24 acceptance of the job.

25 Note that this change in wording accomplished two things. First, by specifying that it applied to judges taking office after 26 June 6, 1932 it did not affect existing employment contracts. Hence existing judges could not say it diminished their
27 compensation. Secondly, the working of "all Acts are hereby amended accordingly" means that new judges are informed
28 up front that their employment contract includes a kickback in the compensation. Just like other Federal Government
29 employees, their compensation for labor was the amount arranged for under law by Congress less the kickback, which
30 varies depending on the deduction benefits available to each judge.<sup>272</sup> Judges could have challenged the lawfulness based
31 on unequal pay for like work, but then that argument would hold true for all other Federal Government employees as well.

32 The effect of this Act upon the compensation of judges who enter into a new employment agreement is brought out by the 33 court cases after 1932. For example, in O’Malley v. Woodrough, 307 U.S. 277 (1939), Judge Woodrough brought action
34 when his compensation as an Appeals Court judge was assessed. He had been a U.S. District Court judge prior to accepting 35 his new position with the Appellate Court in 1933. The Supreme Court Justices decided that judges of courts of the United
36 States taking office after June 6, 1932, had agreed to allow their salary to be deemed "gross income" and subject to a legal 37 kickback. In other words, they agreed that, as a condition of employment, the salary of judges as set by Congress--as with 38 all other Federal Government employees--includes their remuneration for personal service (income) and a kickback (gain)
39 to the U.S. Government.<sup>273</sup> In essence, the Supreme Court said to Judge Woodrough--tough cookies, when you accepted a
40 higher position, you agreed to a new employment contract and accepted the employment condition of kickback that all
41 judges taking office after June 6, 1932 accepted.

"The necessary effect of the Woodrough case seems to us to be that a judge who takes office under an established Congressional policy of taxing his salary becomes entitled only to the salary prescribed by statute less income taxes, and that in consequence his salary is not diminished by the tax.."

As for periodic changes, it is no known if U.S. judges actually do agree and permit Congressional unilateral changes in their employment contracts through the varying rates and deduction benefits. It they do, it certainly is contrary to their tradition. To prove whether or not U.S. judges use current rates and deduction benefits or that which was in existence when they first took office would require review of their "U.S. Individual Income Tax Returns," which is a violation of their personal rights to privacy. So, it is something the public will never know, but the question is there.

This act was passed on March 4, 1923 as H.R. 8928. Chapter 265 created several custom terms and definitions to be used throughout the government from that point on, including in subsequent Revenue Acts as well as the Internal Revenue Code, first codified in the U.S. Code in the Internal Revenue Code of 1939. Among the important terms defined and subsequently used in the I.R.C. include:

1. "department": "the term 'department' means an executive department of the United States Government, a governmental establishment in the executive branch of the United States Government which is not a part of an executive department, the municipal government of the District of Columbia, the Botanic garden, Library of Congress, Library Building and Grounds, Government Printing Office (GPO), and the Smithsonian Institution."
2. "position": "means a specific civilian office or employment, whether occupied or vacant, in a department other than the following: Offices or employments in the Postal Service; teachers, librarians, school attendance officers, and employees of the community center department under the Board of Education of the District of Columbia; officers and members of the Metropolitan police, the fire department of the District of Columbia, and the United States park police; and the commissioned personnel of the Coast Guard, the public Health Service, and the Coast and Geodetic Survey."
3. "employee": "means any person temporarily or permanently in a position."
4. "service": "means the broadest division of related offices and employments."
5. "compensation": "means any salary, wage, fee, allowance, or other emolument paid to an employee for service in a position."

Nearly all of the above definitions would be very carefully used to deceive the American public in subsequent acts of Congress, because they would be misconstrued by the general public to have their common definition, rather than the very specific legal definition above. This act much better concealed the nature of the I.R.C., Subtitle A income tax as an excise tax upon the privileges incident to public office (e.g. "trade or business", see 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26)) by disguising hidden meanings within the terms "compensation" and "services" and "employee", all of which, by the above act, can ONLY be incident to service in the United States government as a public officer, whether elected or appointed.

The effect of this act carried over into the IRC's of 1954 and 1986 insofar as they merely restate relevant elements incorporated in the 1939 version. It is particularly important in the modern I.R.C. Section 61, "Gross Income Defined", wherein "compensation for services" is listed as a specific "item of income" and its misleadingly ambiguous distinction from "income derived", seen in the 1921 Revenue Act, is restored. The restoration was accompanied by a notation to the effect that the reconstruction of the 1928 language (which the 1939 code section duplicated) represented no substantial change in its meaning. Below is the content of 26 U.S.C. §61, "Gross Income Defined" so you can now apply the above definitions properly. We have boldfaced and underlined the words from the above definitions contained in the Classification Act and added bracketed material so you can clearly see the meanings:

TITLE 26 > Subtitle A > CHAPTER 1 > Subchapter B > PART 1 > § 61
§ 61. Gross income defined

(a) General definition Except as otherwise provided in this subtitle, gross income means all income from whatever source derived, including (but not limited to) the following items:

- (1) Compensation for services [as a public official], including fees, commissions, fringe benefits, and similar items;
- (2) Gross income derived from [a trade or] business;
- (3) Gains derived from dealings in property [within the District of Columbia, see 26 U.S.C. 871];
- (4) Interest;
- (5) Rents;
- (6) Royalties;
- (7) Dividends;
- (8) Alimony and separate maintenance payments;
- (9) Annuities;

<sup>274</sup> Adapted from Cracking the Code, Pete Hendrickson, ISBN 0-9743936-0-6, pp. 52-53.

- (10) Income from life insurance and endowment contracts;
- (11) Pensions;
- (12) Income from discharge of indebtedness;
- (13) Distributive share of partnership gross income;
- (14) Income in respect of a decedent; and
- (15) Income from an interest in an estate or trust [in the District of Columbia].

6.5.17 1918: "Gross income" first defined in the Revenue Act of 1918<sup>275</sup>

The Revenue Act of 1918, c. 18, 40 Stat. 1057, enacted by Congress on February 24, 1919, specifically placed the compensation for personal services of Federal judges and the U.S. President under the definition of "gross income" in an attempt to bring them into the existing kickback program. That statute reads:

Sec. 213. That for the purposes of this title...the term "gross income"-

( a) Includes gains, profits, and income derived from salaries, wages, or compensation for personal service (including the case of the President of the United States, the judges of the Supreme and inferior courts of the United States, and all other officers and employees, whether elected or appointed, of the United States, Alaska, Hawaii, or any political subdivision thereof, or the District of Columbia, the compensation received as such), of whatever kind and in whatever form paid, or from professions, vocations, trades, businesses, commerce, or sales, or dealings in property, whether real or personal, growing out of the ownership or use of or interest in such property; also from interest, rent, dividends, securities, or the transaction of any business carried on for gain or profit, or gains or profits and income derived from any source whatever....[emphasis added]

You will note that Congress is making reference to gross income where the U.S. Government is the source of that income. Again making it clear that ONLY the compensation for personal services for the labor of Federal Government employees is includible in "gross income." The compensation of a person working in the private sector or for a state or local government, which includes state judges, is not included. Therefore, the subject matter "gross income" in the I.R. Code only applies to Federal Government employees. Income not derived from the U.S. Government is not subject to the I.R. Code Laws. The sections of the current I.R. Code that provide this notice will be discussed in detail later.

The U.S. Government, like any other employer, can establish the terms of its own employment agreement. Legally the U.S. Government cannot unilaterally impose new conditions or terms to existing employment agreements with Federal Government employees, which is confirmed by the stand the judges have taken and expressed in court opinions. Also, Congress cannot legally establish the terms of an employment agreement in the private sector or make the U.S. Government a party to such agreements.

6.5.18 1911: Judicial Code of 1911

This act abolished the existing circuit courts and replaced them with Circuit Courts of Appeals. The District Courts of the United States became "United States District Courts". This left no Article III courts to hear cases involving constitutional rights. All district and circuit courts became, at that point, Article II courts which may only have jurisdiction within territories of the United States Government. These courts are part of the executive branch, not the judicial branch, of the U.S. government. The judges in these Art. II courts are civil service employees of the Office of Personnel Management, which is part of the Executive Branch. The judges are not judicial officers as required under Art. III of the Constitution, but federal employees.

SEC. 289. The circuit courts of the United States, upon the taking effect of this Act, shall be, and hereby are, abolished; and thereupon, on said date, the clerks of said courts shall deliver to the clerks of the district courts of the United States for their respective districts all the journals, dockets, books, files, records, and other books and papers of or belonging to or in any manner connected with said circuit courts; and shall also on said date deliver to the clerks of said district courts all moneys, from whatever source received, then remaining in their hands or under their control as clerks of said circuit courts, or received by them by virtue of their said offices. The journals, dockets, books, files, records, and other books and papers so delivered to the clerks of the several district courts shall be and remain a part of the official records of said district courts, and copies thereof, when certified under the hand and seal of the clerk of the district court, shall be received as evidence equally with the originals thereof; and the clerks of the several district courts shall have the same authority to exercise all the powers and to perform all the duties with respect thereto as the clerks of the several circuit courts had prior to the taking effect of this Act.

SEC. 290. All suits and proceedings pending in said circuit courts on the date of the taking effect of this Act, whether originally brought therein or certified thereto from the district courts, shall thereupon and thereafter be proceeded with and disposed of in the district courts in the same manner and with the same effect as if originally begun therein, the record thereof being entered in the records of the circuit courts so transferred as above provided.

SEC. 291. Wherever, in any law not embraced within this Act, any reference is made to, or any power or duty is conferred or imposed upon, the circuit courts, such reference shall, upon the taking effect of this Act, be deemed and held to refer to, and to confer such power and impose such duty upon, the district courts.

SEC. 292. Wherever, in any law not contained within this Act, a reference is made to any law revised or embraced herein, such reference, upon the taking effect hereof, shall be construed to refer to the section of this Act into which has been carried or revised the provision of law to which reference is so made.

SEC. 293. The provisions of sections one to five, both inclusive, of the Revised Statutes, shall apply to and govern the construction of the provisions of this Act. The words "this title," wherever they occur herein, shall be construed to mean this Act.

SEC. 294. The provisions of this Act, so far as they are substantially the same as existing statutes, shall be construed as continuations thereof, and not as new enactments, and there shall be no implication of a change of intent by reason of a change of words in such statute, unless such change of intent shall be clearly manifest.

SEC. 295. The arrangement and classification of the several sections of this Act have been made for the purpose of a more convenient and orderly arrangement of the same, and therefore no inference or presumption of a legislative construction is to be drawn by reason of the chapter under which any particular section is placed.

SEC. 296. This Act may be designated and cited as "The Judicial Code."

6.5.19 1909: Corporate Excise Tax of 1909

Country's first income tax. The U.S. Supreme Court would later rule in Eisner v. Macomber, 252 U.S. 189 (1920) that the word "income" may not be defined by Congress, and that it can only be defined by the Constitution. It also ruled in the case of Bowers v. Kerbaugh-Empire Co., 271 U.S. 170, 174 (1926) that:

"Income has been taken to mean the same thing as used in the Corporation Excise Tax Act of 1909 (36 Stat. 112) in the 16th Amendment, and in the various revenue acts subsequently passed."
Bowers v. Kerbaugh-Empire Co., [271 U.S. 170, 174 (1926)]

All income tax acts under Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A are based on the above, and are classified by the Supreme Court in Stanton v. Baltic Mining Co., 240 U.S. 103 (1916) as indirect taxes, which means they can only be excise taxes on privileges and may only fall on businesses and not directly on citizens:

"... [the 16th Amendment] conferred no new power of taxation... [and]... prohibited the ... power of income taxation possessed by Congress from the beginning from being taken out of the category of indirect taxation to which it inherently belonged..."

1 6.5.21 1862: First Tax on “Officers” of the U.S. Government<sup>276</sup>

2 The impairment of the Federal Government employee employment contracts began with the kickback program that
3 Congress promulgated as law in the year 1862. Once the Federal Government kickback program was well established by
4 forced acceptance, employees and employers in the private sector were forced to believe that the terms of the Federal
5 Government employment agreements applied to them. Here is how it all happened.

6 Up until year 1862, Federal Government employees worked under the same kind of employment agreement as anyone who
7 agrees to exchange their time and talent for the personal property of an employer. Then, in 1862, the Thirty-seventh
8 Congress passed Ch. 119, 12 Stat. 472. Section 86 of that Public Law reads as follows:

9 SALARIES AND PAY OF OFFICERS AND PERSONS IN THE SERVICE OF THE UNITED STATES, AND
10 PASSPORTS

11 Sec. 86. And be it further enacted, That on and after the first day of August, eighteen hundred and sixty-two,
12 there shall be levied, collected, and paid on all salaries of officers, or payments to persons in the civil, military,
13 naval, or other employment or service of the United States, including senators and representatives and
14 delegates in Congress, when exceeding the rate of six hundred dollars per annum, a duty of three per centum on 15 the excess above the said six hundred dollars; and it shall be the duty of all paymasters and all disbursing
16 officers, under the government of the United States, or in the employ thereof, when making any payments to
17 officers and persons as aforesaid, or upon settling and adjusting the accounts of such officers and persons, to
18 deduct and withhold the aforesaid duty of three per centum, and shall, at the same time, make a certificate
19 stating the name of the officer or person from whom such deduction was made, and the amount thereof, which 20 shall be transmitted to the office of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, and entered as part of the internal 21 duties; and the pay-roll, receipts, or account of officers or persons paying such duty, as aforesaid, shall be
22 made to exhibit the fact of such payment. ...[Balance of section 86 applied to passports]

23 First, you will note that it only applied to persons who received compensation for their services as an employee of the 24 United States. Secondly, although Congress placed this into a Tax Act, and implies it is an indirect tax by the use of the 25 word "duty," it cannot be a tax. A tax on labor would necessarily fall into the class of a direct tax that needs apportionment
26 to be constitutional.

27 Note also that the only persons required to make an accounting of the kickback in section 86 were the officers who made
28 the deductions and the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, not the Federal Government employee. As you continue to 29 read, you will see that this is also true today.

30 The effect of section 86 identifies what it really is--a kickback of part of the property agreed under contract to be paid for 31 labor of Federal Government employees [see chapter 1, footnote 3]. With this Act, the amount of compensation agreed to 32 be paid was diminished by one party to the agreement (Congress) without the consent of the other (the Federal Government 33 employee). A unilateral change in the employment contract of all persons then employed by the Federal Government was 34 not legal just because Congress promulgated it as a law, and the conduct of U.S. judges proved this. The result of arranging 35 for the withholding of 3 percent of the compensation due Federal Government employees under existing contracts was 36 deprivation of liberty and property without due process of law, which is violative of the Fifth Amendment to the U.S.
37 Constitution.

38 The facts presented above were expressed by the Supreme Court in Pollock v. Farmers' Loan & Trust Co., 157 U.S. 429
39 (1895), where they said:

40 Subsequently, in 1869, and during the administration of President Grant, when Mr. Boutwell was Secretary of 41 the Treasury and Mr. Hoar, of Massachusetts, was Attorney General, there were in several of the statutes of the 42 United States, for the assessment and collection of internal revenue, provisions for taxing the salaries of all
43 civil officers of the United States, which included, in their literal application, the salaries of the President and 44 of the judges of the United States. The question arose whether the law which imposes such a tax upon them was 45 constitutional. The opinion of the Attorney General thereon was requested by the Secretary of the Treasury.
46 *The Attorney General, in reply, gave an elaborate opinion advising the Secretary of the Treasury that no
47 income tax could be lawfully assessed and collected upon the salaries of those officers who were in office
48 at the time the statute imposing the tax was passed, holding on this subject the views expressed by Chief
49 Justice Taney. His opinion is published in volume XIII of the Opinions of the Attorneys General, at page 161. I

1 This "kickback" program illegally forced a 3 percent debt obligation upon Federal Government employees working under
2 an existing employment agreement in 1862. However, the "kickback program" established by section 86 was legal when
3 applied to the salary of persons who took employment with the Federal Government after that Act was passed because they
4 were on notice that a 3 percent kickback was part of their employment agreement. Thus illegal and legal kickbacks existed
5 then and, though they have changed in form, they exist today.

6 "Kickback" is defined in Webster's Dictionary as "a return of a part of a sum received often because of confidential
7 agreement or coercion." Was not a "kickback" coerced from Federal Government employees when Congress promulgated
8 a change in their employment agreement as if it were a tax when, in essence, it was, and is, a kickback program?

9 By presenting the "kickback" program in the form of "law," Congress (the legislative branch of government) provided the 10 implied authority of law needed to get Federal Government employees in the executive branch of government (the IRS) to 11 act illegally in depriving other Federal Government employees of property rightfully due them under existing contracts.

12 U.S. Supreme Court Judges understood this, and were legally and morally obligated to correct any illegal action of 13 Congress or the IRS for all Federal government employees. The primary function of the Supreme Court is to provide 14 opinions of public importance. Instead they chose, by misdirection and silence, to cooperate with Congress in the 15 implementation of this kickback which forced a debt obligation upon all Federal Government employees except U.S. judges
16 and the U.S. President. This was accomplished when Federal judges allowed the contracts of fellow Federal Government
17 employees to be illegally impaired while seeing to it that their employment contracts remained intact. Does not such 18 conduct demonstrate that the U.S. judges were partial to assuring that the illegal kickback scheme was implemented? Does
19 not such indifference and cooperation violate their duty? Does their conduct not raise the question of concealment?<sup>277</sup>

31 As we established in section 5.4.20, the Treasury Secretary, for whom the IRS Commissioner works, has NO lawful
32 delegated authority to collect income taxes in the 50 union states. Below are some examples of illegal and unethical acts of 33 extortion committed in the name of the Treasury Secretary in the absence of any legal authority to impose or enforce such 34 income taxes.

<sup>277</sup> The U.S. Supreme Court said in Boyd v. U.S., 116 U.S. 616 (1885) "...it is the duty of the courts to be watchful for the constitutional rights of the citizens, and against stealthy encroachment thereon."

6.6.1 Elements of the IRS Cover-Up/Conspiracy to Watch For

Here are a few things to watch out for as you see history being made by legislators and the IRS in the future relative to the income tax issue. These are the kinds of things that should clearly evidence to you that the IRS is part of a massive conspiracy to defraud U.S. citizens of their income by fooling them into thinking that income taxes are mandatory for citizens domiciled in the 50 union states with domestic income:

1. IRS will refuse to answer questions about the following:

- 1.1 "What specific statute in either the U.S. Code (Internal Revenue Code), or the Code of Federal Regulations, makes me as a U.S. Citizen domiciled in the 50 union states and receiving nothing but income from within the 50 union states liable for paying taxes on that income?"
- 1.2 "Please define what you mean by voluntary compliance?"
- 1.3 IRS will not respond to invitations by tax freedom groups to discuss the legality of the income tax. This happened recently at a very public meeting where congress, the president, and the IRS were invited to attend. ALL declined! This was documented on the following website of a group called "We the People": <http://www.givemeliberty.org/>
- 1.4 The IRS will refuse to define the term "United States" because then they would have to admit that the Internal Revenue Code doesn't apply in the 50 contiguous states to your average citizen who is by default NOT a federal/U.S.** citizen or government employee.

2. IRS will try to manipulate the litigation of cases involving the issues raised in this document, including the 861/source issue by:

- 2.1 Keeping these cases in the U.S. Tax Court, where there is only one judge and no jury. It is easier to bribe or influence one judge rather than a whole jury.
  - 2.2 Keeping these cases out of Federal Circuit courts where there might be juries, to avoid the risk of losing. They will do this by either fining individuals who raise the issue (violating the First Amendment right to free speech), or by encouraging the court to dismiss the case (motion to dismiss).
  - 2.3 Keeping these cases out of the Supreme Court, because litigating them could shut down income taxes permanently and deprive the government of revenues. They will do this by either fining individuals who raise the issue (violating the First Amendment right to free speech), or by encouraging the court to dismiss the case, or by litigating so fiercely that the average Citizen can't afford the legal fees required to get their case to the Supreme Court level.
  - 2.4 Abusing due process of litigants to the maximum extent possible by depriving them early on in their fight of financial resources needed to litigate the case to the Supreme Court. They will do this by seizing or levying the wages of tax freedom fighters as quickly as possible, rather than waiting till the end of litigation.
  - 2.5 Doing complete tax background checks of any persons who act as jurors in these tax trials, to ensure that they choose only jurors who are ignorant of the Internal Revenue Code, have faithfully paid their "voluntary taxes", and who have contempt for people who don't. They need social security numbers to do this, so if you are acting as a juror in one of these trials, we strongly suggest that you NOT provide your social security number to anyone, because it is strictly voluntary. See section 2.9.19.1 of the Tax Fraud Prevention Manual, Form #06.008 entitled "Stacking the Deck During Jury Selection".
3. Discovery Abuses. Discovery is the process during tax litigation in which information is requested by a party to a legal action from the other side. Here are some of the ways you can expect the IRS to execute discovery abuse to cover up the conspiratorial nature of hiding the truth about the fact that income taxes are voluntary:
    - 3.1 Covering up truths about the voluntary nature of tax cases by requesting "protective orders" to oppress plaintiff citizens as part of the discover process who are serving requests for admissions and interrogatories on the IRS.
    - 3.2 Requesting that evidence related to the voluntary nature of income taxes be sealed and kept secret and only available to the court but not other individuals or citizens. This will prevent the truth from getting out about the voluntary nature of income taxes.
4. IRS will try to get tax freedom organizations and individuals in trouble by:
    - 4.1 Subsidizing "Tax Freedom" organizations to act as their operatives in attracting individuals and then giving them bad advice to get them into trouble. Remember that the IRS collects interest and penalties on back taxes if it can catch people "cheating" on taxes. Of course, we all now know that most citizens don't owe income taxes, but that never stopped the IRS from demagoguery, grand-standing, and avoiding legal issues in the presentation of their case in front of juries. CAVEAT EMPTOR!
    - 4.2 Paying their operative cronies to publish bogus books that tell tax freedom fighters the wrong methods to get out of income taxes as an inexpensive and ineffective way to have more people to make into examples to scare the rest of us into "voluntary compliance".
5. IRS will try to confuse tax freedom groups who are focusing on the issues raised in this document. For example, <http://www.egroups.com/> has a group called "legality-of-income-tax" that is enlightening for people who are looking for tools and information to end their income tax. IRS agents regularly join into these groups anonymously and try to criticize and obfuscate the participants to keep themselves out of trouble.
  6. IRS will subsidize newspapers to slander individuals who legally stop paying income taxes. For instance, read the article in section 9.3.1 by the New York Times. It was completely biased and didn't talk about the law at all. Even if the IRS didn't pay for this add, the secretive bankers at the Federal Reserve have more than enough reason to subsidize this in order to keep their interest payments on the national debt coming in.
  7. They will not maintain a historian position or will fire or retaliate against any historians who become whistleblowers to expose past cover-ups.
  8. They will post confusing, misleading, and incomplete information on their website at <http://www.irs.gov/> about the voluntary nature of income taxes for citizens living and working in the 50 union states. For instance, look up the term "voluntary compliance" if you want some lawyer weasel words to obfuscate yourself with. Below is their definition of "voluntary compliance" from <http://www.irs.gov/prod/taxi/taxterms.html> - V:

"Your mom might order you to clean up your room. Well, the IRS doesn't have time to tell every single taxpayer to file taxes correctly and on time . . . there are millions of taxpayers in this country after all. This system relies on citizens to report their income, calculate tax liability and file tax returns on time. Everyone's gotta grow up sometime. Check out It's Payday!"
  9. There have been cover-ups over the years as the Internal Revenue Codes have been craftily modified to maximize their "confusion factor" and legalese content so that only legislators can understand them. As these laws have been

1 "obfuscated" over the years, the IRS has systematically tried to cover its tracks by concealing the older laws, which are
2 written much more clearly to state that income taxes are voluntary. Consequently, you can be sure that the IRS:

3 9.1 Would not want to keep any records of the old laws that citizens could use to show that they indeed don't owe
4 income tax.

5 9.2 Would not want to make the older laws computer searchable.

6 9.3 Would not want to designate anyone to be a historian for the organization who could compile these old laws and
7 publications. As a matter of fact, the IRS fired the only historian they had! Did she uncover the truth when she
8 was compiling the archives to post on the website and tried to get the word out? Was she regarded as a 9 "whistleblower"?

10 If you have heard of any of the above types of tactics by the IRS, please let us know so we can get the word out
11 immediately and post the information on our website!

12 6.6.2 26 C.F.R. 1.0-1: Publication of Internal Revenue Code WITHOUT Index

13 The Dept. of the Treasury is responsible for writing most implementing regulations relating to federal income taxes. The 14 first thing you notice about the Internal Revenue Code (I.R.C.) in the very first section is the information contained in its 15 implementing regulation in 26 C.F.R. §1.0-1. This implementing regulation describes how the Internal Revenue Code is to 16 be published by the government for consumption by the general public.

19 This Act shall be published as volume 68A of the United States Statutes at Large, with a comprehensive table of 20 contents and an appendix; but without an index or marginal references. The date of enactment, bill number,
21 public law number, and chapter number, shall be printed as a headnote.*

22 The Internal Revenue Code itself is 9,500 pages, and publication of anything that large without an index would
23 deliberately create a situation for the public and the legal profession where it would be very difficult to find anything
24 relevant to any subject of inquiry. This means that you can't order the code from the U.S. government printing office that 25 has an index. How many commercial book vendors do you think would publish ANY book that large without an index?
26 Their book wouldn't sell very many copies! If you want an index, then you have to order the publication from a private 27 third party.

28 We would argue that devious act deliberately obfuscates the tax code and makes it much more difficult for most Americans
29 to either read or understand the law. The lawyers in Congress want it that way because that is how they perpetuate the legal 30 "priesthood" that maintains their power. They want to make it so people need special research tools and published sources
31 for the code available only to legal professionals in order to locate information relevant to their inquiry. That way, ordinary
32 citizens will be encouraged to read third party publications like the IRS' fraudulent publications in order to understand the 33 tax code, and as we point out in section 3.19, these publications contain deliberate fraud. We expose this legal priesthood
34 later in section 6.9 where we talk about the judicial conspiracy to protect the income tax and section 6.10, where we talk
35 about legal profession scandals to protect the income tax.

36 The above regulation, by the way, violates an Act of Congress, which states in the Statutes at Large, 42nd Congress,
37 Volume 17, Ch. 315, p. 258, Section 45. Unless the below act was repealed, the Secretary of the Treasury exceeded his 38 authority to specify that the Internal Revenue Code should be published without an index:

39 *"That the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized and directed to revise and prepare for publication the 40 internal-revenue laws in force after the passage of this act, with amendments incorporated in their proper
41 places, conveniently arranged for reference, and with a proper index..."
42 [Statutes at Large, 42nd Congress, Volume 17, Ch. 315, p. 258, Section 45]*

43 If you want a version of the code that includes an index, you can order a very nice one with an index and colored tabs for 44 use in an audit or due process hearing from Irwin Schiff's website at:

45 <http://www.paynoincometax.com/>:

The cost is $38. Irwin sells the I.R.C. published by:

Research Institute of America (RIA)
800-950-1216
<http://www.riahome.com>

If you buy the latest edition of the above commercial version of the Internal Revenue Code and you examine the extensive index under “liability for tax”, which is almost one page long by itself, you will see LOTS of entries. The January 2001 version of the code has this portion on page 201. Guess what? If you look up “income taxes” or “citizen” or “American”, you will not find a single entry. Now do you understand why the Treasury directed that the I.R.C. not be published with an index? This is a very powerful argument to use in court, and the court and the Treasury sometimes will respond to this argument by making such excuses as:

“Well, this commercial publisher is not a trusted source of information so your evidence isn’t credible. Only government sources are credible.”

And of course, there IS no government source that would ever publish such information because it is simply too incriminating! Wow!

6.6.3 Official/Qualified Immunity and Anonymity

“Counsel for the claimant, ...makes a very ingenious argument... That the maxim of English constitutional law, that the king can do no wrong, is one which the courts must apply to the government of the United States, and that therefore there can be no tort committed by the government....”

It is not easy to see how the first proposition can not have any place in our system of government.

We have no king to whom it can be applied. The President, in the exercise of the executive functions, bears a nearer resemblance to the limited monarch of the English government than any other branch of our government, and is the only individual to whom it could possibly have any relation. It cannot apply to him, because the Constitution admits that he may do wrong, and has provided a means for his trial for wrongdoing,... by the proceeding of impeachment.

It is to be observed that the English maxim does not declare that the government, or those who administer it, can do no wrong; for it is a part of the principle itself that wrong may be done by the government power, for which the ministry, for the time being, is held responsible; and the ministers personally, like our President, may be impeached; or, if the wrong amounts to a crime, they may be indicted and tried at law for the offense.

We do not understand that either in reference to the government of the United States, or to the several States, or of any of their officers, the English maxim has an existence in this country.”
[Langford v. U.S., 101 U.S. 341, 3423 (1879). ]

Why do IRS agents get away with so many violations of due process with immunity? The answer is that they are protected from prosecution by our federal courts under the contemporary doctrine of “sovereign immunity”. As you can tell by the quote above from the U.S. Supreme Court back in 1879, support for sovereign immunity was not always endorsed by the courts. As these courts have become corrupted over the years in the process of expanding and upholding the income very tax that pays their salaries, the corrupt black-robed lawyers in these courts have had to contradict historical precedent by protecting especially those who enforce and administer the income tax from personal liability for criminal wrongdoing and lawlessness. Below is an explanation of how agents of the government are insulated and protected from legal liability for wrongdoing:

1. According to one IRS revenue agent we spoke with IRS agents are told by their management that they are not allowed to reveal their first name, only their employee number. Without the full name and identifying information about the employee, it is more difficult to figure out who to serve with legal papers if you want to prosecute individual agents.
2. The IRS service bureaus for specific regions are usually located outside of the jurisdiction of the state they serve. For instance, Ogden Utah services large parts of California. Why isn’t the service bureau for California inside of California? We would argue it is because that makes it much more difficult to personally serve agents who have broken the law or to prosecute them under the laws of your state, because they don’t live in your state. Citizens who want to sue IRS agents or criminally prosecute them have to go outside of their state to serve the agent, which is much more difficult to coordinate, costly, and expensive.

3. The U.S. supreme Court has upheld the notion that persons acting as agents for the U.S. government have at least a limited immunity from prosecution because of illegal, unethical, or questionable acts they commit while on duty. This is called official immunity. As we talked about in section 5.12 of the Tax Fraud Prevention Manual, Form #06.006 entitled "How the Federal Judiciary Stole the Right to Petition: Judicial Arrogance and Bias Against the Right to Petition", the federal judiciary has also for all intents and purposes destroyed our right to petition the government for redress of grievances and wrongs committed either by agents working for the government or by the government itself. One also cannot sue the U.S. government without their consent, and this is called judicial immunity or sovereign immunity. Why would they give their consent if you sued them for wrongful taking of federal income taxes? All of these factors conspire to make it very difficult if not impossible for the average sovereign American of the several states to protect his/her constitutional rights.

Below is a quote from the U.S. supreme Court on the subject of the types of official immunity in the case of Nevada v. Hicks, No. 99-1994 (U.S. 06/25/2001):

"The doctrines of official immunity, see, e.g., Westfall v. Erwin, 484 U.S. 292, 296-300 (1988), and qualified immunity, see, e.g., Harlow v. Fitzgerald, 457 U.S. 800, 813-819 (1982), are designed to protect state and federal officials from civil liability for conduct that was within the scope of their duties or conduct that did not violate clearly established law. These doctrines short circuit civil litigation for officials who meet these standards so that these officials are not subjected to the costs of trial or the burdens of discovery. 457 U.S., at 817-818. For example, the Federal Employees Liability Reform and Tort Compensation Act of 1988, commonly known as the Westfall Act, allows the United States to substitute itself for a federal employee as defendant upon certifying that the employee was acting within the scope of his duties. 28 U.S.C. §2679(d). Nevada law contains analogous provisions. See Nev. Rev. Stat. §§41.032, 41.0335-41.0339 (1996 and Supp. 1999). The employee who successfully claims official immunity therefore invokes the immunity of the sovereign. When a state or federal official asserts qualified immunity, he claims that his actions were reasonable in light of clearly established law. Anderson v. Creighton, 483 U.S. 635 (1987). In those cases, we allow that official to take an immediate interlocutory appeal from an adverse ruling to ensure that the civil proceedings do not continue if immunity should be granted. Mitchell v. Forsyth, 472 U.S. 511, 524-530 (1985)."

Below is a quote from the U.S. supreme Court on the subject of official immunity in the case of "Westfall Et Al. v. Erwin Et Ux," 484 U.S. 292 (1988):

"In Barr v. Matteo, 360 U.S. 564 (1959), and Howard v. Lyons, 360 U.S. 593 (1959), this Court held that the scope of absolute official immunity afforded federal employees is a matter of federal law, "to be formulated by the courts in the absence of legislative action by Congress." Id., at 597. The purpose of such official immunity is not to protect an erring official, but to insulate the decisionmaking process from the harassment of prospective litigation. The provision of immunity rests on the view that the threat of liability will make federal officials unduly timid in carrying out their official duties, and that effective government will be promoted if officials are freed of the costs of vexatious and often frivolous damages suits. See Barr v. Matteo, supra, at 571; Doe v. McMillan, 412 U.S. 306, 319 (1973). This Court always has recognized, however, that official immunity comes at a great cost. An injured party with an otherwise meritorious tort claim is denied compensation simply because he had the misfortune to be injured by a federal official. Moreover, absolute immunity contravenes the basic tenet that individuals be held accountable for their wrongful conduct. We therefore have held that absolute immunity for federal officials is justified only when "the contributions of immunity to effective government in particular contexts outweigh the perhaps recurring harm to individual citizens." Doe v. McMillan, supra, at 320.

And finally, below is a description of qualified immunity from the u.s. supreme Court in the case of Harlow Et Al. v. Fitzgerald, 457 U.S. 800 (1982):

"Government officials whose special functions or constitutional status requires complete protection from suits for damages -- including certain officials of the Executive Branch, such as prosecutors and similar officials, see Butz v. Economou, 438 U.S. 478, and the President, Nixon v. Fitzgerald, ante, p. 731 -- are entitled to the defense of absolute immunity. However, executive officials in general are usually entitled to only qualified or good-faith immunity. The recognition of a qualified immunity defense for high executives reflects an attempt to balance competing values: not only the importance of a damages remedy to protect the rights of citizens, but also the need to protect officials who are required to exercise discretion and the related public interest in encouraging the vigorous exercise of official authority. Scheuer v. Rhodes, 416 U.S. 232. Federal officials seeking absolute immunity from personal liability for unconstitutional conduct must bear the burden of showing that public policy requires an exemption of that scope. Pp. 806-808."

6.6.4 Church Censorship, Manipulation, and Castration by the IRS

Churches are moral and social organizations. A big component of morality is social responsibility. However, the IRS has twisted the arms of churches by being empowered to pull their 501(c ) tax exemption if they engage in socially responsible activities, such as eliminating bad laws, changing the laws, or advocating or opposing specific candidates for political office. This effectively neutralizes any negative impact churches might have on the IRS, for instance, by advocating elimination of income taxes, like Jesus did (see section 1.10.1 entitled "Jesus Christ, The Son of God, was a Tax Protester!). It also eliminates the possibility that churches will either sponsor or endorse godly men of principle for public office. Is it any wonder then why our politicians are so corrupt? This is a travesty and a disgrace. What good does it do to have free speech if you can't exercise it in the most important realm, which is the political and legislative realm? We would argue that under such circumstances, churches really don't have free speech.

IRS Publication 557, Tax Exempt Status for Your Organization, discusses the conditions under which churches can be tax-exempt. The Internal Revenue Manual (IRM) section 7.25.3, entitled "Religious, Charitable, Educational, Etc. Organizations" discusses how to qualify as an exempt church organization. The website below is where you can read this section:

<http://www.irs.gov/irm/part7/ch10s03.html>

The below excerpt from the IRM establishes a federal tax exemption for religious organizations:

[7.25.3] 3.6 (02-23-1999)
Religion or Advancement of Religion

IRC 501(c)(3) provides for the exemption of organizations organized and operated exclusively for "religious" purposes. Because activities often serve more than one purpose, an organization that is "advancing religion" within the meaning of Reg. 1.501(c)(3)-1(d)(2) may also qualify under IRC 501(c)(3) as charitable or educational organization.

Below is an excerpt from the IRM that determines the conditions under which a church will LOSE its tax exemption:

Internal Revenue Manual
[7.25.3] 3.3.4 (02-23-1999)
Express Powers that Cause Failure of Organizational Test

1. An organization does not meet the organizational test if its articles expressly empower it:
  - A. To devote more than an insubstantial part of its activities to influence legislation by propaganda or otherwise (Reg. 1.501(c)(3)-1(b)(3)(i));
  - B. Directly or indirectly to participate in, or intervene in (including the publishing or distributing of statements), any political campaign on behalf of or in opposition to any candidate for public office (Reg. 1.501(c)(3)-1 (b)(3)(ii));
  - C. To have objectives and to engage in activities which characterize it as an "action" organization (Reg. 1.501(c)(3)-1 (b)(3)(iii));
  - D. To carry on any other activities (unless they are insubstantial) which are not in furtherance of one or more exempt purposes (Reg. 1.501(c)(3)-1(b)(1)(i)(a)).

In the IRS Regulations, 26 C.F.R. §1.501(c)(3)(ii), churches are prohibited from being action organizations:

(3) Action organizations. (i) An organization is not operated exclusively for one or more exempt purposes if it is an action organization as defined in subdivisions (ii), (iii), or (iv) of this subparagraph.

(ii) An organization is an action organization if a substantial part of its activities is attempting to influence legislation by propaganda or otherwise. For this purpose, an organization will be regarded as attempting to influence legislation if the organization:

- (a) Contacts, or urges the public to contact, members of a legislative body for the purpose of proposing, supporting, or opposing legislation; or

(b) Advocates the adoption or rejection of legislation.

The implications of the above amount to silencing the churches in the political and legislative realm. This in effect completely neutralizes them and violates their First Amendment Right of Free speech. The federal courts, according to the IRS in their IRM, said this was not the case, which has made a travesty of justice, as indicated in the below excerpt from the IRM:

[7.25.3] 3.6.2 (02-23-1999)
Compliance with Statutory Requirements

1. Any religious organization, including a church, must satisfy the statutory requirements to be exempt under IRC 501(c)(3). As explained by the court in Christian Echos National Ministry, Inc. v. United States, 470 F.2d. 849 (10th Cir. 1972), cert. den., 414 U.S. 864 (1973), in which the court upheld denial of tax exemption to a religious organization engaged in substantial legislative activity, "[i]n light of the fact that tax exemption is a matter of grace rather than right, we hold that the limitations contained in Section 501(c)(3) withholding exemption from nonprofit corporations [that engage in substantial lobbying] do not deprive Christian Echoes of its constitutionally guaranteed right of free speech. The taxpayer may engage in all such activities without restraint, subject, however, to withholding of the exemption, or, in the alternative, the taxpayer may refrain from such activities and obtain the privilege of exemption."
2. Exemption from state or local taxation is neither conclusive nor relevant to the determination whether an organization is operated exclusively for religious purposes under federal tax law. Universal Life Church v. U.S., 721 U.S.T.C. 9467 (E.D. Cal. 1972).

Did you notice the above statement: "[i]n light of the fact that tax exemption is a matter of grace rather than right, we hold that the limitations contained in Section 501(c)(3) withholding exemption from nonprofit corporations [that engage in substantial lobbying] do not deprive Christian Echoes of its constitutionally guaranteed right of free speech." This is a devious tactic to make First Amendment religious rights into government privileges. They are a privilege if they can be taken away arbitrarily by a government bureaucrat. We discuss this in section 4.3.12 "Government-instituted slavery using 'privileges'." We will repeat what we have said before in section 4.2.2 about rights in the Supreme Court case of Harman v. Forssenius, 380 U.S 528 at 540, 85 S.Ct. 1177, 1185 (1965):

"It has long been established that a State may not impose a penalty upon those who exercise a right guaranteed by the Constitution." Frost & Frost Trucking Co. v. Railroad Comm'n of California, 271 U.S. 583.
"Constitutional rights would be of little value if they could be indirectly denied," Smith v. Allwright, 321 U.S. 649, 644, or manipulated out of existence,' Gomillion v. Lightfoot, 364 U.S. 339, 345."
[Harman v. Forssenius, 380 U.S 528 at 540, 85 S.Ct. 1177, 1185 (1965)]

The above situation also applies to the federal government. We assert that removing a tax exemption as a penalty for exercising exercise a First Amendment right is unconstitutional because transforms freedom of religion from being a right into a government-granted privilege. The supreme Court has in effect legislated making a First Amendment right into a government privilege that can be taken away with their ruling, which courts are not supposed to be doing. Removal of tax exemptions because of political views or activities amounts to political persecution and censorship of the freedom of religious rights and speech of people attending churches and the churches themselves. Is it any wonder why churches have become silent on government abuses and violations of laws and the reforming of our laws? This kind of tyranny must end!

If you have done your homework and read Chapter 5, you know enough to explain how the Supreme Court and the IRS can get away with this kind of tyranny. We concluded in that chapter that Subtitle A income taxes are voluntary for natural persons. The only people who are "taxpayers" liable for tax are those who volunteer. Since they volunteered, then technically, the IRS isn't interfering with the exercise of First Amendment rights because the consequence of volunteering to become "taxpayers" is that they have no rights. It's their own fault for not knowing this, and do you think the Supreme Court would share this subtle fact with anyone? In effect what the Supreme Court said in Christian Echos National Ministry, Inc. v. United States, 470 F.2d. 849 (10th Cir. 1972), cert. den., 414 U.S. 864 (1973) is similar to the following:

"You volunteered to marry your spouse, so don't come whining to us that she is infringing on your First Amendment free speech rights by telling you she wants a divorce because you told her she is fat!"

Funny! Because of the above type of censorship being imposed by the IRS and the Supreme Court against churches and other charitable organizations, if reform is going to come of our income tax system, then it will need to come either from outside the churches and based on volunteer efforts, or it we will need to educate the churches about this book so that they understand that they don't have to pay taxes and therefore need not worry about losing their tax exemption. Those churches

1 who can't be convinced of their nonliability to pay income taxes but who still wish to politically protest income taxes will
2 need to take a different approach as shown below:

3 Church officers should pursue political activity as individuals during their own off-duty time and when they are not acting
4 as an officer or agent of the church.

- 5 1. Church facilities or computers should not be used to do solicitation or political lobbying. Instead, members of the 6 church should donate their own time and computers for the purpose instead.
- 7 2. If officers or agents of the church get up on the pulpit during a meeting, the pastor should say that he has no position on 8 what the party is saying and does not necessarily advocate what he/she is saying, but wanted to offer that person an 9 opportunity to speak about an issue he isn't familiar with.
- 10 3. Churches can offer to their congregations a section in their handouts for public announcements and then disclaim any 11 association or affiliation with the people making the announcements. These announcements can list times to 12 coordinate political activities or educational or fund-raising events to take political action.

13 6.6.5 Illegal Treasury Regulation 26 C.F.R. §301.6331-1

14 Treasury regulation 26 C.F.R. §301.6331 implements 26 U.S.C. §6331. Recall that the scope of a regulation may not 15 exceed that of the statute it implements. Recall that 26 U.S.C. §6331(a) states:

16 (a) Authority of Secretary

17 If any person liable to pay any tax neglects or refuses to pay the same within 10 days after notice and demand,
18 it shall be lawful for the Secretary to collect such tax (and such further sum as shall be sufficient to cover the
19 expenses of the levy) by levy upon all property and rights to property (except such property as is exempt under 20 section 6334) belonging to such person or on which there is a lien provided in this chapter for the payment of 21 such tax. Levy may be made upon the accrued salary or wages of any officer, employee, or elected official, of 22 the United States, the District of Columbia, or any agency or instrumentality of the United States or the 23 District of Columbia, by serving a notice of levy on the employer (as defined in section 3401(d)) of such 24 officer, employee, or elected official. If the Secretary makes a finding that the collection of such tax is in
25 jeopardy, notice and demand for immediate payment of such tax may be made by the Secretary and, upon
26 failure or refusal to pay such tax, collection thereof by levy shall be lawful without regard to the 10-day period
27 provided in this section.

28 The purpose for this regulation is clear. It allows federal government employers to request that the agency employing a
29 federal employee may withhold their wages for nonpayment of income taxes without the need for a court order. This also
30 explains why under 26 U.S.C. §6331(e) allows for continuous levies upon federal wages without a court order even though
31 this would otherwise violate the Fifth Amendment due process rights of the person levied upon. The process described in 32 26 U.S.C. §6331 is usually implemented using the IRS Form 668-A "Notice of Levy". However, the Notice of Levy may
33 not be used against private employers or those who are not federal employers and instead requires a legal action and a
34 corresponding court order before the levy may be instituted. The IRS very commonly and illegally misuses the "Notice of 35 Levy form" against private employers, in part because the implementing regulation illegally expands the scope of the 36 statute in 26 C.F.R. §301.6331-1 as follows:

37 "Levy may be made by serving a notice of levy on any person in possession of, or obligated with respect to,
38 property or rights to property subject to levy, including receivables, bank accounts, evidences of debt,
39 securities, and salaries, wages, commissions, or other compensation."

40 The regulation should say that it only applies to federal employers, since the persons to be levied upon under 26 U.S.C.
41 §6331(a) are only federal employees. Private employers who are not part of the federal government can safely disregard
42 both the IRS Form 668A and 668B forms and only surrender property of their employees when they receive a valid court
43 order. This is confirmed by the Legal Reference Guide for Revenue Officers, [MT 58[10][0]-14, Internal Revenue Service, 44 which states in pertinent part:

45 332 (10-29-79)

46 Constitutional Limitations

47 (1) During the course of administratively collecting a tax, an occasion may arise where service of a levy or 48 notice of levy is not adequate to seize property of the taxpayer. However, it cannot be emphasized too strongly
49 that constitutional guarantees and individual rights must not be violated. Property should not be forcibly
50 removed from the person of a taxpayer. Such conduct may expose a revenue officer to an action in trespass, assault and battery, conversion, etc. Larson v. Domestic and Foreign Commerce Corp., 337 U.S. 682 (1949), rehearing denied, 337 U.S. 682 (1949). Maule Industries v. Tomlinson, 224 F.2d. 897, (5th Cir. 1949). If there is reason to suspect a failure to honor a notice of levy or an interference with levy, the matter should be referred for proper legal action against the offending party. Remedies available to the Government, as contained in the Code and other statutes, are more than adequate to cope with the problem.

The IRS also conveniently removes 26 U.S.C. §6331(a) from the back of the IRS Form 668-A\(c\)DO to hide the fact from private employers that they have no authority to demand property. It is only the ignorance of third party private employers and financial institutions that allows the IRS to seize assets through force using the “Notice of Levy” that they otherwise could not have gotten.

6.6.6 IRS Trickery on the 1040 Form to Get Us Inside the Federal Zone

For the purposes of the federal income tax we can lawfully be treated by the national government as though we were a “resident” (which is an alien) of the federal zone by actually being domiciled in the federal zone or by electing to be treated as though we do as a “person” married to a “U.S. citizen” pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §6013(g) and (h). When we file a 1040 income tax form without attaching an IRS Form 2555, for instance, we are fraudulently telling the federal government that we are an alien domiciled in the federal zone, insofar as the Internal Revenue Code is concerned, because we are claiming to be a “resident” of the U.S., which is to say from 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) that we live in the District of Columbia or some other federal territory or part of the “federal zone” and that we are an “alien” as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(A). Why would we want to elect to be treated as an alien domiciled in the District of Columbia (federal zone) when there is absolutely no advantage to doing so on our tax forms? The only reason is because we have been tricked by our own government because of our own ignorance of the law into using the legally incorrect words and definitions they put in the IRS publications and on the 1040 form itself, which prominently says “U.S. Individual income tax return”, which means we live in the U.S. (the District of Columbia). This fraud is encouraged and allowed to propagate because the IRS in its publications and especially in the 1040 booklet, never clarifies the three definitions of United States (see Hooven & Allison Co. v. Evatt, 324 U.S. 652 (1945), where we learned the three definitions of “United States”) or which of the three we are using when we prepare the tax return.

Technically, as people domiciled outside the federal zone and inside the 50 union states, we live in the U.S.A. but NOT in the [federal] U.S**. for the purposes of the income tax, so we are already committing a fraud when we file the 1040 form and sign it under penalty of perjury. Do you think our own dishonest government would ever point that out when it advantages them financially in such a significant way? Pitman Buck, Jr. has written an entire book about this subject called The Colossal Fraud of “Involuntary Perjury”.

An interesting way to view this fraud is that it is an enticement into (financial) slavery, which violates 18 U.S.C. §1583, entitled “Enticement into slavery”. 18 U.S.C. §1581 also prohibits arresting or apprehending anyone into slavery, which is exactly what the federal marshal does when they arrest someone who is convicted of a federal tax crime for cases in which they technically are not in actuality liable for any tax, but for which the court refuses to apply the law correctly. Such cases might occur, for instance, when the judge knows the accused is not liable for tax and knows the correct application of the Internal Revenue Code but because the accused did not address it or express his understanding of the law correctly, the judge sides with the government so that the tax system would not be undermined and so that his judgeship would not be terminated by the irate President or Congress who appointed him for “bad behavior”.

6.6.7 IRS Form 1040: Irrational Conspiracy to Violate Rights

Many of the same arguments that as we present below in section 6.6.8 about the violations of our Constitutional rights with the IRS Form W-4 apply to the IRS Form 1040 as well. We won’t repeat those arguments here, except to say that being compelled in any way to either submit or to sign a 1040 form violates our First Amendment right to NOT communicate with our government, our Fourth Amendment right to the privacy of our personal papers and effects (of which we could classify our tax returns and financial records as falling into the category of personal papers and effects), and our Fifth Amendment right to due process in the taking of our property and to not incriminate ourselves. All we have to prove in order to justify the conclusion that there are violations of rights is to demonstrate that there is any kind of penalty, compulsion, or punishment by the government for exercising these rights. Below are some of the possible statutory penalties imposed for exercising our right not to file a tax return, and these penalties are imposed as a result of statutes developed by the U.S. Congress and prosecuted by the Department of Justice.

Table 6-3: Unconstitutional IRS/Treasury Regulations Relating to form 1040

Statute	Condition when 5th Amendment is violated	Notes
26 U.S.C. §6702	Frivolous Income Tax Return	If the First and Fifth Amendments say you can't be compelled submit a return or testify against yourself in the return, then why can they criminally prosecute you for filling out a frivolous return, including one with no signature, a modified jurat statement above the signature, or incomplete or inaccurate information?
26 U.S.C. §7203	Willful failure to file return, supply information, or pay tax	If the First and Fifth Amendments say you can't be compelled to submit a return or to testify against yourself in the return, then why can the DOJ criminally prosecute you for not filing one and throw you in jail?
26 U.S.C. §7206	Fraud and false statements	If the First and Fifth Amendments say you can't be compelled submit a return or testify against yourself in the return, then why can they criminally prosecute you for what you do choose to say on the form without compulsion, as long as you don't represent that it is true or accurate by signing it?

1 The fact that the U.S. Congress wrote these statutes and the fact that they were debated, discussed, and voted on before they
 2 were passed makes these statutes a “conspiracy against rights” under 18 U.S.C. Sec. 241, punishable by a fine or 3 imprisonment not more than ten years, or both!

4 Consider the purpose of § 6702 of the Internal Revenue Code as stated by the appellate court in Gary Holder v. Secretary of
 5 the Treasury, 791 F.2d. 68, 72 (7th Cir. 1986), when an individual is penalized $500 under § 6702 for failing or refusing —
 6 based upon his belief that he is not liable for income taxes — to sign the Form 1040 jurat. The jurat reads:

7 "Under penalties of perjury, I declare that I have examined this return and accompanying schedules and 8 statements, and to the best of my knowledge and belief, they are true, correct, and complete."

9 Here is what the court in Holder said was the purpose of imposing a penalty under § 6702:

10 "The purpose of §§ 6673 and 6702, like the purpose of Rules 11 and 38 and of § 1927, is to induce litigants to 11 conform their behavior to the governing rules regardless of their subjective beliefs."

12 But hold on there, your honors! One of the governing rules is §7206 of the Internal Revenue Code, a rule whose purpose is 13 to affect or regulate behavior by prohibiting perjury. Section 7206 reads:

14 "Any person who- ... Willfully makes and subscribes any return, statement, or other document, which contains 15 or is verified by a written declaration that it is made under the penalties of perjury, and which he does not
 16 believe to be true and correct as to every material matter ... shall be guilty of a felony and, upon conviction
 17 thereof, shall be fined not more than $100,000 ($500,000 in the case of a corporation) or imprisoned not more
 18 than 3 years, or both, together with the costs of prosecution." See also 18 U.S.C. § 1621 for definition of 19 perjury.

20 Belief is defined in Black's Law Dictionary (Sixth Edition, p. 155) as:

21 "A conviction of the truth of a proposition, existing subjectively in the mind, and induced by argument,
 22 persuasion, or proof addressed to the judgment."
 23 [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 155]

24 The Holder court's explanation of the purpose of § 6702 is ridiculous when applied to regulate the behavior of individuals
 25 with regard to their decision to sign or not to sign the jurat of Form 1040. The Holder explanation about the purpose of § 26 6702 is not applicable to the purpose of the governing rule § 7206 because the obvious purpose of § 7206 is to induce 27 people to base their behavior upon their subjective belief. Thus, the purpose of § 7206 is the exact opposite of § 6702 as 28 stated in Holder.

1 It must be obvious to all but the most obtuse of minds that an interpretation of law or the application of an interpretation of
2 law that induces people to complete and sign the government's prescribed Form 1040 and its prescribed jurat regardless of
3 their beliefs is absolutely irrational and preposterous! The stated purpose of § 6702 is to induce people to disregard their
4 beliefs whereas § 7206 makes the act (behavior) of signing the Form 1040 jurat dependent upon the potential affiant's
5 knowledge and belief. Under the First Amendment rights to freedom of belief and the expression thereof, no individual
6 who believes he is not liable for income taxes is obligated to intentionally change his belief — if that were possible — so
7 that, with his new belief that he is liable for income taxes, he could honestly fill in the blanks of the prescribed IRS Form
8 1040 and conscientiously sign its prescribed jurat. Plainly, the imposition of a $500 penalty under color of § 6702 in order
9 to induce people to sign the Form 1040 regardless of their beliefs conflicts with the tax code rule that defines and punishes
10 perjury, i.e., § 7206. Any attempt or coercion under color of law to induce individuals to take an oath or sign a jurat that is 11 contrary to their knowledge and/or belief is nothing less than official oppression and intellectual tyranny. Welcome to 12 George Orwell's 1984!

13 The Supreme Court in Cheek v. United States, 498 U.S. 192, 111 S.Ct. 604 (1991), ruled that where one's belief is a relevant
14 question to a situation or case, the question must be judged by a jury using the subjective standard. It is abundantly clear
15 that a person's belief about whether he owes the federal government any income taxes is relevant to his conscientious
16 ability to make and sign, under penalties of perjury, a Form 1040 tax return. By penalizing people under color of § 6702
17 when they fail or refuse to sign the Form 1040 jurat because of their belief (for example, the belief that they are not liable
18 for income taxes), the IRS is presumptively making judgments about individuals' beliefs using the Cheek-discredited
19 objective standard and without benefit of a jury. The signing of the government's prescribed Form 1040 jurat or a decision
20 not to sign it is dependent upon one's knowledge and belief about the Internal Revenue Code. Section 7206 makes it so.

21 Clearly, an individual cannot make an honest and intelligent decision to sign or not to sign a document without recourse to
22 his or her state of mind. The issue of penalizing individuals under 26 U.S.C. §6702 for failing or refusing to sign the Form
23 1040 jurat (based on their belief that they are not liable for income taxes) can never be properly settled as long as the IRS
24 and courts, using twisted logic, rule that individuals must declare their knowledge and belief on the government's
25 prescribed Form 1040 jurat while also ruling that under § 6702 — the statute under color of which individuals are penalized
26 for not signing the jurat — their state of mind and good faith belief are irrelevant.

27 Belief is at once both subjective and a legal fact to be judged by a jury when it is relevant to behavior and in dispute. But
28 the IRS, being the arbitrary, despotic, Gestapo-like agency that it is, and with the indulgence of the lower courts, insists on 29 judging the subjective and factual question of one's belief using the objective standard and has yet to listen to reason. The 30 obvious lesson taught by the IRS and the lower courts in this matter is, to say the least, extraordinary and quite remarkable:
31 in order for individuals to escape the $500 penalty imposed under color of § 6702 for their failure or refusal to sign the jurat
32 based upon their study and conscientious belief that they are not liable for income taxes, they should complete the 33 government's prescribed Form 1040 and sign its prescribed jurat regardless of their beliefs and despite the perjury statutes!

34 6.6.8 IRS Form W-4 Scandals

35 This section discusses the fraud and the illegal or unconstitutional regulations and practices that the IRS and the Treasury
36 have developed and used in the administration of the W-4 income tax forms, which are called the “Withholding Allowance
37 Certificate”. The purpose of these forms is for the Citizen to give permission to their employer to institute “voluntary”
38 withholding of federal income taxes from their paychecks.

39 We'd like to remind you that throughout this book, we have used the 26 U.S.C. §861/source issues and other issues to 40 prove beyond a reasonable doubt that the federal income tax system is truly voluntary for most of us and that citizens
41 domiciled in the 50 union states with domestic rather than foreign income are not liable to pay these taxes. Because of this,
42 the IRS and the Treasury basically has to commit fraud on the W-4 application to trick or deceive citizens into believing
43 that they can be held criminally liable for the payment of income taxes. How do they do it? We'll explain here, and we'll 44 show that they had to violate the law and the constitution to do it.

45 6.6.8.1 Fraud on the W-4 Form

46 The first fraud of the Treasury/IRS is in the naming of the IRS Form W-4 itself. Instead of “Withholding Allowance
47 Certificate” the form really should be called a “Voluntary Monthly Donation Certificate” form, to remind people that the 48 paying of federal income taxes is voluntary and cannot be coerced or compelled. This is in keeping with the Supreme 49 Court Ruling in Flora v. U.S., 362 U.S. 145 (1960):

"Our tax system is based upon voluntary assessment and payment, not upon distraint".

For those of you who don't know, "distraint" means force or coercion. Such a name for the form would also reinforce that the for is NOT for the withholding of TAX, because taxes are something that citizens are assessed or made liable for, and most of us aren't liable for paying ANYTHING in federal income taxes. The few that are have foreign income or are nonresident aliens, and for those people, their permission isn't required, so you don't NEED an allowance form!

The second lie on the form is the definition of "employee", which they conveniently don't tell you on the IRS Form W-4, which we covered in section 3.12.1.4 and which also appears in 26 U.S.C. §3401(c) :

"the term "employee" includes [is limited to] an officer, employee, or elected official of the United States, a State, or any political subdivision thereof, or the District of Columbia, or any agency or instrumentality of any one or more of the foregoing. The term "employee" also includes an officer of a corporation."

Do you think anyone would complete this form if they were familiar with the proper legal definition of the term "employee"? Instead, the IRS publications expand the definition of employee well beyond this definition (see table 3-10 in section 3.5.12) without any constitutional authority whatsoever to do so! Why aren't they being prosecuted for exceeding the constitutional bounds of their authority? Remember that the IRS regulations that expand the definition of "employee" (see 26 C.F.R. §31.3401(d)-1) can be no more expansive than the U.S. Codes they are based on because these definitions must implement the codes!

If you look at the IRS Form W-4 itself, there are a number of questionable and misleading things on the form. Below is the first one we'd like to discuss that appears at the top of the form. You can view this form at:

http://www.irs.gov/forms\_pubs/forms.html

"Routine uses of this form include giving it to the Department of Justice for civil and criminal litigation [AGAINST YOU!!!], to cities and states, and the District of Columbia for use in administering their tax laws".

This statement is there for a reason! They are putting you on notice, rather blandly and innocuously, that you are waiving your 5th Amendment rights to not be compelled to incriminate yourself, which can only be done voluntarily and without coercion! Of course, as a "resident" of the federal zone, you don't have fifth amendment rights, which is why they can make the warning so bland. This warning means that if you are a nonresident of the federal zone, you DON'T have to fill out this form and can't be compelled to do so! Remember that the main purpose of the Department of Justice is to PROSECUTE CRIMES, and the 5th Amendment says you can't be compelled to incriminate yourself. Don't let your employer incriminate you either by filling in any part of the form in for you! There's no law that says your employer has to do anything with the form or fill it out if you won't fill it out! The IRS, however, lies to you or doesn't tell you the whole truth because they don't tell you on the form that you don't have to fill out this form and can't be penalized in any way because of your failure to fill it out or submit it. Instead, they tell you on their website at:

<http://www.irs.gov/faqs/display/0,,i1%3D54%26genericId%3D16275.00.html>

That:

"You should inform your employees of the importance of submitting an accurate Form W-4. An employee may be subject to a $500 penalty if he or she submits, with no reasonable basis, a Form W-4 that results in less tax being withheld than is required. There is no penalty if your employee doesn't claim enough withholding allowances and has too much withheld."

It is obvious that the IRS is trying here to coerce your employer into coercing you to surrender your 5th Amendment rights on your behalf, which is a violation of several laws. Remember that the exercise of rights can't be fined or penalized, or they aren't rights (see section 4.2.2, "Fundamental Rights: Granted by God and Cannot be Regulated by the Government")! Remember the court ruling we quoted in that section for Harman v. Forssenius, 380 U.S 528 at 540, 85 S.Ct. 1177, 1185 (1965):

"It has long been established that a State may not impose a penalty upon those who exercise a right guaranteed by the Constitution." Frost & Frost Trucking Co. v. Railroad Comm'n of California, 271 U.S. 583. "Constitutional rights would be of little value if they could be indirectly denied," Smith v. Allwright, 321 U.S. 649, 644, or manipulated out of existence,' Gomillion v. Lightfoot, 364 U.S. 339, 345."

1 [Harman v. Forssenius, 380 U.S 528 at 540, 85 S.Ct. 1177, 1185 (1965)]

2 And yet, the IRS also coerces you again on the back of the IRS Form W-4 by saying:

3 “Failure to provide a properly completed form will result in your being treated as a single person who claims
4 no withholding allowances; providing fraudulent information may also subject you to penalties.”

5 The “penalty” here for exercising your Fifth Amendment right is being compelled to give away your property against your
6 will and without your consent, which is in effect THEFT! Then because they stole your property, they compel you later to 7 fill out a ton of forms to “qualify” to get tax money back that you were never liable for to begin with, during which time
8 you have to surrender your Fifth Amendment right AGAIN by signing a 1040 form AGAIN under penalty of perjury, and 9 in effect becoming a compelled witness against yourself! The violation of the right the first time lead to a compelled
10 SECOND violation of the same right! And then what about the violation of your 4th Amendment right to privacy because 11 completing the 1040 form coerces you to reveal intimate details not only about your own financial life, but that of your
12 loved ones as well when you complete the form, and the law says the IRS can use your tax form to criminally prosecute
13 your spouse! This kind of tyranny has to stop! It could destroy your marriage and it is compelled!

14 Here are only a few of the laws and rights violated by the IRS during this process:

- 15 1. Your First Amendment Right NOT to speak to your government or to be compelled to speak (or write) to your 16 government. The right of free speech includes the right NOT to speak if you don’t want to!
- 17 2. Violation of your Fourth Amendment right to privacy (which you can petition the government to correct under the First 18 Amendment to the Constitution, called the Petition clause).
- 19 3. Violating you Fifth Amendment rights (which you can petition the government to correct under the First Amendment 20 to the Constitution, called the Petition clause).
- 21 4. 18 USC §242 provides that “whoever, under color of any law, statute, ordinance, regulation, or custom, willfully
22 subjects any person in any State, Territory, Commonwealth, Possession, or District to the deprivation of any rights,
23 privileges, or immunities secured or protected by the Constitution or laws of the United States ... shall be fined under 24 this title or imprisoned not more than one year, or both.”
- 25 5. 18 USC §245 “Violation of rights” provides that “Whoever, whether or not acting under color of law, intimidates or 26 interferes with any person from participating in or enjoying any benefit, service, privilege, program, facility, or activity
27 provided or administered by the United States; [or] applying for or enjoying employment, or any perquisite thereof, by 28 any agency of the United States; shall be fined under this title, or imprisoned not more than one year, or both.”
- 29 6. 42 USC §1983 provides that “every person who, under color of any statute, ordinance, regulation, custom, or usage, of 30 any State or Territory or the District of Columbia, subjects, or causes to be subjected, any citizen of the United States
31 or other person within the jurisdiction thereof to the deprivation of any rights, privileges, or immunities secured by the 32 Constitution and laws, shall be liable to the party injured in an action at law, suit in equity, or other proper proceeding
33 for redress.”

34 6.6.8.2 Unconstitutional IRS/Treasury Regulations Relating to the W-4

35 To keep this corrupt tax system we have alive and well, in addition to committing fraud on the IRS Form W-4 documented
36 above, the IRS/Treasury also have had to pass regulations that are clearly unconstitutional to administer the program. As 37 we have emphasized before in section 3.15, the CFR’s are the official regulations of the Treasury and the Commissioner of 38 the IRS that implement Title 26 of the U.S. Codes. The bounds of authority of the IRS are explicitly and clearly defined in 39 the U.S. Codes, and the implementing regulations in the CFR’s may not exceed the strictly limited definitions and authority
40 granted explicitly in these codes.

41 The right that is violated by the IRS/Treasury implementing regulations in 26 C.F.R. is once again the Fifth Amendment, 42 which says in part:

43 No person shall be held to answer for a capital, or otherwise infamous crime, unless on a presentment or
44 indictment of a Grand Jury, except in cases arising in the land or naval forces, or in the Militia, when in actual
45 service in time of War or public danger; nor shall any person be subject for the same offence to be twice put in
46 jeopardy of life or limb; nor shall be compelled in any criminal case to be a witness against himself, nor be
47 deprived of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law; nor shall private property be taken for public
48 use, without just compensation.

1 Now we will put the IRS implementing regulations to the test. Below are a few regulations that will really get you
2 steaming and which quite clearly penalize the exercise of one's Fifth Amendment right to not incriminate oneself and one's
3 right to not be deprived of property without one's consent or a due process (court hearing). Remember, that in ALL of the 4 IRS/Treasury regulations cited below:

- 5 1. The IRS is NOT required to obtain your consent or even consult or notify you before taking your property.
- 6 2. The IRS has no obligation to demonstrate a liability to pay federal income tax before it STOLE YOUR MONEY!!
- 7 3. The IRS is NOT a part of the federal judiciary, and that no jury trial is being held by the IRS before it orders/tells your 8 employer to extort your property/money and give it to them without a trial.

9 You can read these regulations for yourself at:

1 Table 6-4: Unconstitutional IRS/Treasury Regulations Relating to Form W-4

Regulation	Condition when 5th Amendment is violated
31.3402(f)(2)-1(a)	a) On commencement of employment. On or before the date on which an individual commences employment with an employer, the individual shall furnish the employer with a signed withholding exemption certificate relating to his marital status and the number of withholding exemptions which he claims, which number shall in no event exceed the number to which he is entitled, or, if the statements described in Sec. 31.3402(n)-1 are true with respect to an individual, he may furnish his employer with a signed withholding exemption certificate which contains such statements.
31.3402(f)(2)-1(a)	“The employer is required to request a withholding exemption certificate from each employee, but if the employee fails to furnish such certificate, such employee shall be considered as a single person claiming no withholding exemptions.”
31.3402(f)(2)-1(e)	If an employer receives an invalid withholding exemption certificate, he shall consider it a nullity for purposes of computing withholding; he shall inform the employee who submitted the certificate that it is invalid, and shall request another withholding exemption certificate from the employee. If the employee who submitted the invalid certificate fails to comply with the employer's request, the employer shall withhold from the employee as from a single person claiming no exemptions (see Sec. 31.3402 (f)(2)-1(a))
31.3402(f)(2)-1(g)(v)	(v) The employer shall promptly furnish the employee who filed the defective certificate, if still in his employ, with a copy of the written notice of the Internal Revenue Service with respect to the certificate and may request another withholding exemption certificate from the employee. The employer shall withhold amounts from the employee on the basis of the maximum number specified in the written notice received from the Service.  (vi) If and when the employee does file any new certificate (after an earlier certificate of the employee was considered to be defective), the employer shall withhold on the basis of that new certificate (whenever filed) as currently effective only if the new certificate does not make a claim of exempt status or of a number of withholding exemptions which claim is inconsistent with the advice earlier furnished by the Internal Revenue Service in its written notice to the employer. If any new certificate does make a claim which is inconsistent with the advice contained in the Service's written notice to the employer, then the employer shall disregard the new certificate, shall not submit that new certificate to the Service, and shall continue to withhold amounts from the employee on the basis of the maximum number specified in the written notice received from the Service.
31.3402(f)(2)-1(g)(vii)	(vii) If the employee makes a claim on any new certificate that is inconsistent with the advice in the Service's written notice to the employer, the employee may specify on such new certificate, or by a written statement attached to that certificate, any circumstances of the employee which have changed since the date of the Service's earlier written notice, or any other circumstances or reasons, as justification or support for the claims made by the employee on the new certificate. The employee may then submit that new certificate and written statement either to (A) the Internal Revenue Service office specified in the notice earlier furnished to the employer under this paragraph (g)(5), or to (B) the employer, who must then submit a copy of that new certificate and the employee's written statement (if any) to the Internal Revenue Service office specified in the notice earlier furnished to the employer. The employer shall continue to disregard that new certificate and shall continue to withhold amounts from the employee on the basis of the maximum number specified in the written notice received from the Service unless and until the Internal Revenue Service by written notice (under paragraph (g)(5)(iii) of this section) advises the employer to withhold on the basis of that new certificate and revokes its earlier written notice.

We didn't mention above, the hundreds of different types of penalties the IRS assesses against individuals who don't pay their taxes, which in most cases they don't owe anyway based on the 861/source argument. If you factor in these penalties, there are even greater reasons to believe that a massive "conspiracy to deprive of rights" (in this case 5th Amendment Rights) exists, in violation of 18 U.S.C. 241.

With this kind of background, can you see not why our prudent founding fathers prohibited direct taxes on citizens? There are so many constitutional conflicts that result when we violate the prohibition on direct taxes without apportionment specified in Article I, Section 2, Clause 3 of the Constitution!

6.6.8.3 Line 3a of W-4 modifies and obfuscates 26 U.S.C. §3402 (n)

26 U.S.C. §3402(n) is the section that determines the conditions under which persons may declare on their W-4 that they are exempt and have no tax liability. It states:

(n) Employees incurring no income tax liability—Notwithstanding any other provision of this section, an employee shall not be required to deduct and withhold any tax under this chapter upon a payment of wages to an employee if there is in effect with respect to such payment a withholding exemption certificate (in such form and containing such other information as the Secretary may prescribe) furnished to the employer by the employee certifying that the employee—

- (1) incurred no liability for income tax imposed under subtitle A for his preceding taxable year, and
- (2) anticipates that he will incur no liability for income tax imposed under subtitle A for his current taxable year.

The Secretary shall by regulations provide for the coordination of the provisions of this subsection with the provision of subsection (f)

However, on the W-4, it states on line 3:

3 I claim exemption from withholding because (see instructions and check boxes below that apply):

- a.      Last year I did not owe any Federal Income tax and had a right to a full refund of ALL income tax withheld, AND
- b.      This year I do not expect to owe any Federal income tax and expect to have a right to a full refund of ALL income tax withheld. If both a and b apply, enter "EXEMPT" here.

You should notice that a different word is used on line 3a of the W-4 than is used in the code. Why did the IRS deviate from the wording in the statute when there is clearly no need for it? The law says nothing about tax refunds, and it speaks ONLY of tax "liability", not "owing" the tax. There can be no doubt that the W-4 was worded to conflict with the code in order to frustrate its proper application. If the IRS used the word "liable" instead of "owe" on the IRS Form W-4, they would draw attention to that word and people would start looking for it in the tax code and find that it isn't used anywhere in the context of any of the Subtitles A through C income taxes! They would virtually guarantee losing a court case over the use of this word if someone sued them, so they replace the word with "owe" to confuse things and so the word can't be interpreted literally in the code itself. In any case, natural persons who understand that there is not statute within Internal Revenue Code (26 U.S.C.) subtitles A through C making anyone liable for the payment of these voluntary donations (taxes), then they can safely write "EXEMPT" in the box and check boxes 3a and 3b. And since the tax was collected illegally on the basis of fraud and intimidation, all employees certainly have the "right" to a full refund—regardless of whether the federal mafia recognizes that right.

6.6.9 Whistleblower Retaliation

6.6.9.1 1998: IRS Historian Quits-Then Gets Audited<sup>278</sup>

1 Former official historian for the Internal Revenue Service, Shelley Davis, quit her post in protest over how the agency is
2 systematically destroying its historical documents, presumably to break the trail of any possible investigation into the
3 numerous ways that the internal revenue laws are being violated.

4 The IRS has also stated in 1999 (?) that it is abolishing the position of historian. The IRS has announced it wanted to audit
5 Ms. Davis' tax returns, who was a former IRS historian. Yes, the IRS will turn on anyone, including one of its own.

6 In the 1998 senate hearings that resulted in the approval of the IRS Restructuring and Reform Act (RRA) during which IRS
7 abuses were exposed, the IRS agents who were blowing the whistle on the agency repeated over and over that they felt they
8 were doing a service by testifying against the agency, but that their biggest concern was now becoming targets of retaliation
9 by the IRS or Department of Justice.

10 Sure, and if they close their eyes and wish real hard, Tinkerbelle will appear. As you may have surmised, if you've been 11 paying attention, I personally do not have the "highest confidence in the integrity" of the Internal Revenue Service. Yet, in 12 spite of Ms. Richardson's (the former IRS commissioner who quit over compliance issues) heartwarming sentiment and 13 Publication 1's reassuring rhetoric about the "voluntary" nature of the income tax, just like the creature in the movie "Alien"
14 that won't stop until it has located and devoured your property--assuming you own property titled in your own name, of 15 course--and has totally destroyed you, both financially and personally. Remember, like the Alien, the government is 16 hungry. It must eat to survive and it will destroy you to feed itself if it has to, in blatant violation of your constitutionally 17 protected rights as an American.

18 Below is the text of Ms. Davis' prepared testimony in front of the Congressional Committee that investigated the IRS in 19 1998. We downloaded this speech off the About.com website under "Police Conduct: Internal Revenue Service" at

21 PREPARED STATEMENT OF
22 SHELLEY L. DAVIS
23 BEFORE THE SENATE FINANCE COMMITTEE
24 OVERSIGHT HEARING ON THE INTERNAL REVENUE SERVICE
25 TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 23, 1997

26 Mr. Chairman and Members of the Senate Finance Committee, I am pleased to be able to share a few of my
27 thoughts and experiences with you today as you explore specific issues of IRS abuse of those the tax agency
28 likes to call its "customers" -- American taxpayers.

29 For 16 years I worked as an historian for the federal government. Nine of those years were with the Department
30 of Defense and the final seven were spent as the first and unfortunately, the last, official historian for the 31 Internal Revenue Service. At the end of 1995, I resigned from my federal career in protest over the 32 unwillingness of the IRS, or the Treasury Department Inspector General, to investigate my complaint of illegal
33 document destruction by the IRS. I learned that the same federal investigator to whom I originally reported my
34 concerns regarding this, had turned around and opened an investigation of me on unfounded and false charges
35 of "wrongful release of confidential information." Later, I learned that this is a common tactic used against IRS
36 employees who dare to speak up against management. I knew then that I had no alternative but to resign and
37 try to raise awareness of the intransigence, arrogance, and abusive patterns of behavior that I found all too
38 common inside the headquarters of the IRS. I decided to write a book which was published earlier this year
39 entitled, "Unbridled Power."

40 My testimony today will touch briefly on three areas:

- 41 1. ) The cultural climate of the IRS;
- 42 2. ) List keeping at the IRS;
- 43 3. ) The IRS definition of "tax protester."

44 My introduction to the culture of the IRS came during my earliest days with the tax agency, in the fall of 1988.
45 Although I had been hired as the first historian for the IRS, I found little interest or support for my efforts. I
46 found even less history. By history I mean both an awareness of the heritage of the IRS as well as the raw
47 material (the documentation) from which narrative history is distilled. Neither the documents nor the heritage
48 were to be found. Initially, I found this curious. Later, I found it alarming. At the IRS National Headquarters,
49 there seemed little connection between the work of employees and actual tax collection--what I presumed to be
50 the mission of the IRS. Rather than possessing any basic curiosity about the past, the IRS employees I

1 encountered exhibited a wariness, a suspicion--assuming that anyone looking for records must have some
2 definite agenda. An agenda presumed to be negative.

3 This reluctance to think about the past translated into routine day-to-day operations, meaning that all
4 documents were tossed, shredded, whatever, when a program was completed--or shut down, as in the case of 5 many IRS computer projects. No records. No paper trail. No history.

6 As time went on, I realized that this not only made my job as historian virtually impossible, but that it
7 guaranteed that the IRS could never be held accountable for its actions. With a sense of historical development,
8 I came up with my own interpretation of this phenomenon. One could easily pass off the reluctance of the IRS to 9 acknowledge its past as a reaction to a constant barrage of criticism. But the IRS is certainly not the only 10 federal agency subjected to criticism from the press, Congress, or the public.

11 Instead of reflecting on positive actions in response to criticism, the IRS proclaims that any criticism of the 12 agency is "IRS bashing" and "will only lead to more tax protesters." Rather than respond with solid
13 information, historical examples, and analysis, the IRS jumps around skittishly, telling Congress that this 14 reorganization, or that new position, or another new task force will remedy the current problem. The IRS has 15 learned that its most effective response to inquiring questions from Congress, from the press, or from the 16 American people is to hide behind the privacy laws. These are the laws meant to protect taxpayers. But by 17 endlessly citing restrictions on its authority to comment on taxpayer cases, the IRS deflects criticism for any and 18 all actions. In essence, the response of the IRS to question about anything and everything is, "Trust us. We're 19 doing the right thing. We just can't tell you what that is because we're protecting American taxpayers."

20 A corollary to this defensive shield is the penchant of the IRS to destroy its paper trail. There were virtually no
21 records of IRS actions throughout the twentieth century in any of the repositories where one would normally
22 find federal records: the IRS itself, the National Archives (including the permanent archives in Washington, 23 D.C., the 10 records centers around the country, or the Presidential libraries.)

24 In my early years with the IRS, a good question to ask was, "Where are the records?" What I learned was 25 shocking. The records had been destroyed. Gone. Shredded. Tossed. They no longer exist due to a lack of 26 attention to, or concern for, the law which requires all federal agencies to preserve records of what they do. It
27 is as though the IRS assumed that laws which apply to the FBI, to the CIA, to every other part of the federal 28 establishment can be ignored.

29 No other agency of our government could get away with this. I questioned the reason why it had taken so long
30 for anyone to realize that the records were not just missing, but destroyed. I believe the answer is based on fear.
31 As taxpayers, why would we ever question the one agency that can truly bite back? Our fear of suffering a
32 personal attack from the IRS generally keeps most of us in check. Our fear of being audited has allowed the IRS
33 to theoretically eliminate any potential smoking guns by trashing its own records. This ensures that it can never 34 be held accountable for its actions. How can you prove any wrongdoing when the evidence is already 35 destroyed?

36 The IRS has learned that the privacy protections are its best weapon in its war against its "customers." There is 37 an "us against them" mentality which is far too common among IRS employees. I witnessed and experienced
38 this attitude firsthand for over seven years working at the IRS headquarters. When I questioned the lack of 39 record keeping by the IRS, it was made clear to me that I was a "lone ranger," a "loose cannon," and "not a 40 team player." Is it any wonder they investigated me?

41 I'll conclude this section with a stark example from my personal experience. After my protest resignation at the 42 end of 1995, admittedly I was not on the "most favored" list of IRS. But when I went to the IRS National Office
43 on Monday, April 15, 1996, to meet a friend who had invited me for lunch to celebrate my birthday, I did not 44 expect to be threatened with arrest. But that is what happened.

45 While waiting for my friend to meet me at the entrance of the building, I was pulled aside by an IRS internal 46 security agent who told me to leave immediately because I was officially "banned" from the building.

47 I thought this was odd as I was standing in the front entrance, a public space. When I asked for an explanation,
48 I was told that I was "banned" because I "did not turn in my official identification badge when I resigned four 49 months earlier."

50 This was untrue.

51 When the agent detaining me prepared to call for Federal Protective Service agents to carry out her threat to 52 arrest me, I knew I had to make a quick decision: let them carry through with this absurd threat, or turn and 53 leave. I left. To this day, I wish I had stayed and made them carry through with their threat. The IRS brought 54 false charges against me, used government resources to pursue a false investigation of me, and continued to 55 harass me even after I had resigned. With the IRS, as I am sure you will hear from others today, retaliation is 56 prompt, swift and catastrophic.

1                    My years with the IRS were spent exclusively in the National Office, the headquarters of the tax agency.
2                    Throughout my tenure at the IRS, I often heard stories that different types of codes were used to identify
3                    taxpayers and returns.

4                    I have specific knowledge of one type of list maintained inside the IRS. It is a product of a secretive, cloistered
5                    unit of the IRS which existed from 1969 through 1973, known by the name "Special Services Staff," or SSS.

6                    The SSS list had approximately 11,000 individuals and organizations designated as possible audit targets by the
7                    IRS. Who were these people and organizations? Some were names you will recognize: Shirley MacLaine, Joan
8                    Baez, John Lindsay, the Black Panthers, and the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee(SNCC).

9                    But most of those who made it onto the list were not household names but were individuals the SSS determined
10                    were of questionable character as determined by the SSS.

11                    Ten employees of the SSS dutifully clipped newspaper articles each day. The FBI willingly sent over its own
12                    files on political dissidents and protesters, and subscriptions were taken to radical publications which were
13                    perused for names and other leads. All in all, the SSS targeted individuals with no known tax problems for audit
14                    simply because of their political activities.

15                    The commissioner who abolished the SSS, Donald Alexander, actually testified before Congress in 1975 that he
16                    believed the SSS records should be taken "out on the mall and burned."

17                    Yet, despite the fact that the SSS files remain intact at the IRS (at least through my resignation at the end of 18                    1995), the IRS steadfastly refuses to release the files to researchers or even to the National Archives for 19                    safekeeping. Why? Because they contain "taxpayer information." Who is protecting whom, one has to wonder?
20                    What has all this got to do with the present? Today I believe there exist thousands of names of American
21                    taxpayers whose Master Files are coded as TC-148, which brands them as "Illegal Tax Protesters." Whether 22                    this is a list, or compilation of files which bear that designation, is semantics. Just how many Americans bear
23                    this designation?

24                    At the very least, we need to know if we are on that list, We reserve that right. The IRS says we can't know and 25                    don't have a right to know while simultaneously claiming Congress wants it this way.

26                    The only thing being protected in this scenario is the IRS. Just what is a tax protester? Your definition, like 27                    mine, is probably different from the IRS definition. I learned that while inside the IRS.

28                    A tax protester, in my definition, is not someone who may oppose our system of taxation, but pays his taxes
29                    nonetheless. A tax protester is not someone who says that our tax system is broken and must be dismantled, but 30                    still files a Form 1040. A tax protester is not someone who merely criticizes the IRS. A tax protester is not
31                    someone who challenges an IRS assessment. But in the mind of the IRS, all of the above ideas fit the unofficial
32                    IRS profile of a tax protester. In the cloistered environment of the IRS, criticism of the IRS, or the income tax,
33                    equals tax protester. Anyone who has the misfortune of bearing that title is most likely going to witness first 34                    hand just what "taxpayer abuse" really means.

35                    Don't get me wrong. I am not in any way condoning the actions of those who, by one manner or another,
36                    attempt to cheat or not live up to their financial responsibilities as a U.S. citizen. But I do recognize the use of 37                    the label of "Illegal Tax Protestor" as another powerful weapon of the most powerful agency in America. It is
38                    time for Congress to compel the IRS to be more forthcoming about its audit procedures, even though the IRS
39                    would like us to believe that our system of taxation will collapse if the American people know how their tax
40                    collector goes about his or her business.

41                    The IRS gains too much benefit from the privacy laws to come clean on its own. The culture of the IRS, built
42                    over decades of learning to hide behind the privacy laws, will not change on its own. Without intervention from 43                    Congress, it will not happen. Last year, a top career IRS executive testified before Congress that, "There is the 44                    general view that the more mysterious tax enforcement is, the more likely taxpayers will voluntarily comply."
45                    Mystery breeds distrust and contempt. It also breeds fear, which compels many taxpayers to comply with the tax
46                    laws because they are afraid of the consequences, but it does not breed voluntary compliance or trust.

47                    The arrogance of the IRS is outrageous and harmful. We lose more than we gain by allowing the IRS to operate
48                    in this manner. Congress must demand accountability from the IRS. Congress must shine the spotlight on the 49                    IRS and never switch the power off.

50                    Thank you.

1 6.6.9.2 1993: IRS Raided the Save-A-Patriot Fellowship<sup>279</sup>

2 Unlike many so-called "tax groups" which are nothing more than boiler room operations, often moving from State to State
3 to avoid detection, the Save-A-Patriot Fellowship has been at the same physical location at 12 Carroll Street, Westminster,
4 Maryland, and at the same telephone number (410) 857-4441, since opening their doors in 1984.

5 Fellowship Fiduciary, John Kotmair, has employed individuals for thirteen years without applying for an employer
6 identification number, and therefore has not withheld taxes of any kind from those within the employ of the Fellowship in 7 all of this time.

8 The IRS raided the Fellowship in 1993, and one of the allegations was that he had no employer identification number and 9 was not withholding taxes. After requesting the requirement to do so in court, the IRS dropped the allegation.

10 Eventually they were ordered to return the property taken, which they did, and the federal court ruled on December 18,
11 1996, against the IRS's allegation that the Fellowship could not exist without being regulated by the government. Judge
12 Garbis of the United States district Court for the District of Maryland ruled on December 18, 1996 that the Fellowship is in 13 fact:

14 "...an unincorporated association and, as such, is legally capable of owning property",

15 needing no permission to exist and independent of government regulation. This ruling amounts to being given the "Good 16 Housekeeping Seal of Approval" by a federal court.

17 So why does the IRS "allow" the Fellowship to stay in business? Why haven't we been shut down? It wasn't for lack of 18 trying.

19 On December 10, 1993, the Internal Revenue Service conducted a raid on our national offices at 12 Carroll Street,
20 Westminster, Maryland. The Fellowship had suspected for some time that there were many misperceptions within the IRS
21 as to the purpose and goals of the Fellowship, and that under the circumstances it would be appropriate to explain their
22 position in order to ensure that it was not misrepresented either in the public forum or certain branches of the IRS. To
23 accomplish this, the Fellowship wrote to the Acting Commissioner of Internal Revenue, Michael Dolan, on July 19, 1993,
24 expressing their concern. In that letter they extended an invitation to the Commissioner or any of his designates to visit the 25 Fellowship's national headquarters and observe firsthand their activities.

26 The same invitation was extended to all of the federal judges and magistrates in this district, and public notice of the 27 invitation was printed in the Carroll County Times, a local Maryland newspaper, on three consecutive Mondays. The 28 Fellowship was glad to see local Federal Magistrate Paul M. Rosenberg respond to our invitation and comment that we
29 were doing "an admirable job."

30 So on October 27, 1993, the Fellowship wrote to the new Commissioner of Internal Revenue, Margaret Milner Richardson,
31 and repeated their invitation. This time, because of their growth and national prominence, they even suggested a permanent
32 IRS liaison for the office, but instead of any spirit of cooperation, the IRS response was to notify them that the matter was 33 turned over to the Criminal Investigation Division in Baltimore. Magistrate Rosenberg, who was fully aware of the 34 Fellowship's intent, knew of the invitation. Therefore, he also knew that the Fellowship was not "concealing" anything.

35 Nevertheless, on December 8, 1993, Magistrate Rosenberg signed a search warrant stating:

36 "...property is now concealed on the premises.. and if the ...property be found there to seize same."

37 After making every effort to communicate their purpose and extending the above invitation, the Fellowship was accused of 38 "concealing" something, of what they are not sure. The fact is, it is believed that the IRS had ulterior motives.

39 Since the Fellowship documents the systematic denial of due process in the various assessment and collection procedures
40 and the fraudulent practice of various IRS agents, it is entirely possible that the seizure of such documents was intended to 41 thwart the association's investigations into such affairs, in other words, to cover up corruption at the highest levels.

1 The public should call for an investigation by the Justice Department into the circumstances surrounding the warrant and
2 subsequent raid, rather than to tacitly assume that the individuals responsible for this "raid" are above reproach.

3 The events leading up to the raid would further seem to support this hypothesis. They began on December 1, 1993, when
4 John B. Kotmair, Jr. the fiduciary of The Save-A-Patriot Fellowship, was subpoenaed to appear at a grand jury
5 investigation in Sioux Falls, South Dakota. The affidavit supporting the subpoena contained false statements made by an 6 IRS Special Agent, so Mr. Kotmair naturally notified the Court to inform them of the defect.

7 Nevertheless, the Federal District Court of South Dakota insisted that he appear in Sioux Falls on December 9, 1993, to
8 testify. During his testimony, John provided the Grand Jury with copies of the documentation showing the perjurious
9 statements of the IRS Special Agent.

10 The US Attorney conspired with the perjurious Special Agent in an obvious attempt to obtain the indictment against Mr.
11 Kotmair.

12 Also during the proceedings, the U.S. Attorney asked Mr. Kotmair:

13 "..isn't it true that anyone who disagrees with an IRS assessment can pay the tax and then sue for a refund in 14 court?"

15 The implication was that Mr. Kotmair was "selling" the public a false information in the form of a "non-existent legal 16 remedy."

17 Mr. Kotmair responded by explaining to the jury that suing for a refund was only one option. He said:

18 "If the IRS claimed you owed a million dollars, could you afford to pay the tax then sue for a refund?"

19 "What about $25,000?"

20 "Could you afford to pay $25,000 and then sue for a refund?"

21 He then gave them a brief history lesson and explained that during the War Between the States, Congress passed the Anti-
22 Injunction Act that prevented the courts from enjoining (stopping) the collection of a tax. He told them that because of this
23 Anti-Injunction Act, a bureaucrat could literally pluck a figure out of thin air, (like a million dollars), claim you owe it, and 24 there would be no judicial remedy because the courts no longer had jurisdiction over such matters.

25 Then he explained why the U.S. Attorney was wrong and cited "the other option under the IR Code", section 6404, the 26 section that the IRS does not like to talk about! He explained that people with errant assessments have an administrative 27 remedy that the IRS was ignoring and/or denying in violation of due process requirements, and then he explained that he 28 assisted people in pursuing this administrative remedy and in requesting abatements if and when they believed an
29 assessment had been made in error.

30 There was no need to go through the expensive and often prohibitive process of appealing to a tax court. He added that he
31 had helped thousands of people and that at the present time he was helping a 72 year-old man in Alaska who had never 32 even paid him a dime!

33 The grand jury evidently agreed with the information about the Save-A-Patriot Fellowship! Mr. Kotmair was able to take a
34 late flight home and arrived just in time for the scheduled raid at the Fellowship shortly after 9AM the next day, December 35 10, 1993.

36 The whole affair reeks of shame, and the alleged liability of Mr. Kotmair appears to be nothing more than a ploy designed
37 to make the IRS's actions palatable to an increasingly suspicious public. They no doubt hoped to make a public spectacle
38 out of the indictment and subsequent raid.

39 As to what actually happened--one of the Fellowship's caseworkers had already arrived at the office and was busily
40 working at his computer. Hearing a noise from behind, he turned around only to find four 9-millimeter semi-automatic
41 handguns pointed at his head. In a calm, quizzical voice he asked, "What seems to be the problem?"

1 As luck would have it, this particular staff member was a former treasury agent himself, and by the purest of coincidences,
2 he was wearing his personalized "treasury" jacket.

3 The swat team was intimately familiar with the apparel and immediately asked him where he had obtained it. The staff
4 member replied, "I used to be one of you boys until I learned the truth!"

5 He was promptly ordered out of the building with his hands on his head. Federal agents then began to sort through the 6 Fellowship's property and loaded it onto trucks. To show just how ridiculous the raid was, the computers stored only
7 information pertaining to correspondence that had already been sent to the IRS as the Fellowship maintains no membership
8 lists on the premises.

9 Considering that the IRS already had copies of these documents, and considering the costs involved with performing the 10 raid, not a mention how much the subsequent litigation is going to cost the IRS in terms of money and embarrassment, we 11 just cannot fathom why some IRS special agent would be dumb enough to cause the IRS all of the problems that this raid is 12 going to cause for them.

13 It may be that the raid was to be the "icing on the cake" to the indictment that never came down, and that someone forgot to 14 inform the Baltimore IRS to call off the raid. But regardless, it should be pointed out that the warrant only authorized the 15 seizure of property belonging to Mr. Kotmair, and not to the Fellowship. But Mr. Kotmair is only the fiduciary for the 16 association. He does not own the property.

17 Therefore, since the warrant specified only property belonging to John Kotmair, the Save-A-Patriot property that was taken,
18 was taken illegally, regardless of whether the warrant was justified or not.

19 Unfortunately, the travesty of justice doesn't stop there. At the same time as the raid on the office, agents forcibly entered
20 Mr. Kotmair's home with weapons drawn. His wife, Nancy, was in her nightgown and turned to get her bathrobe to open
21 the door after she heard the knocks, but agents immediately smashed the front door in with a sledge hammer before she
22 could get her bathrobe on. His son was asleep and awoke to find a shotgun close to his head.

23 Mrs. Kotmair was not even allowed to change clothes to put on something warmer. Instead, she was confined to a chair
24 near the broken front door with cold winter air coming in on her. After about an hour she was allowed to put on her
25 bathrobe. When she needed to use the bathroom a female agent would go with her and refused to leave for "her own
26 protection" they told her. She observed agents quarreling over what property they would take but was not allowed to be
27 involved in their determination of what was applicable property to be seized pursuant to the warrant.

28 Witnesses reported that the rude, arrogant, confrontation attitude of the fifty gun-waving IRS agents turned to confusion
29 when they were not met with angry or hostile "opponents". They were apparently given false information of what to 30 expect, quite possibly, to provoke an "incident" which could be used to justify the raid in the mind of the public.

31 A few of Mr. Kotmair's perfectly legal handguns were laid out on the ground and photographed as though to suggest that 32 he was some sort of drug king pin. Considering that John spent nearly a decade in the 1950's as a police officer in 33 Baltimore, Maryland, it would not be unusual for him to have a legal gun collection.

34 This was all part of the public spectacle to justify this travesty of justice, resulting from a faulty warrant and subsequent
35 raid that should have been called off, all because the IRS doesn't want John Kotmair helping innocent people whom the IRS
36 wants to destroy.

37 Both "raids" were certainly unnecessary expense that, by the time the matter is litigated, will cost the people of this country
38 millions of dollars. But the saddest part of this story is how innocent people are subjected to the threat of harm or even 39 death at the hands of uniformed bureaucrats whose mercenary employees justify their actions by saying, without any 40 personal conscience, "...we're just following orders."

41 The failure of the IRS to publicly defend their actions establishes the presumption that their activities are either unlawful or
42 that the agency incorrectly believes itself to be above the Law and under no obligation to the public.

43 The people certainly have the right to the truth and the government has the duty to respond to all inquiries regarding the 44 truth, as required in IRS Publication 1.

1 During the raid, the IRS broke federal laws by opening and reading sealed correspondence between the Fellowship and our
2 members, and took numerous computers, copy machines, fax machines, laser printers, file cabinets, etc. The IRS failed
3 completely in their effort to discredit the Fellowship and demoralize the staff.

4 A national alert for help went out and within days, money, new computers and other office equipment streamed into
5 headquarters. Ten days after the raid, the Fellowship was back in full operation, and membership swelled as a result of 6 solidarity on the part of patriotic Americans nationwide.

7 About nine months later, the IRS returned unannounced in a rental truck, dressed in plain clothes, and returned all of the 8 Fellowship's property with the exception of $60,000 stolen from a safe. Needless to say, the Fellowship has filed numerous 9 lawsuits against the IRS which are ongoing. That was in 1993.

10 Since that time enrollment has soared with members pouring in from across the country. One of our member, nationally
11 known talk radio personality Zoh Hieronimus, hosts her own ten-thousand watt radio talk show on Baltimore AM radio
12 station WCBM every weekday morning from 9AM to Noon.

13 Zoh covered the raid live on the air. Among numerous other guests, she has on many occasions interviews Fellowship
14 founder John Kotmair and other staffers on the air, beaming 10,000 watts of truth about the proper limited application of 15 the income and employment sections of the Internal Revenue Code directly into the beltway inside Washington, D.C.

16 We have knowledge that the IRS and other State and federal government officials are tuning in to Zoh. And for good
17 reason! She is ruthless at uncovering the truth about any issue she covers, and is an unusually gifted speaker. The 18 Fellowship has researched and developed legal defenses to protect the liberty and property of its members from those 19 within the government who would ignore the law, violate due process, and rob honest Americans.

20 I hate to use so strong a word as rob when speaking of the actions of a government I was raised to love and respect, but the 21 extortion of property from U.S. citizens through decades of deception and misinformation in clear violation of the written
22 Law can only be called what it really is--robbery.

23 Apparently the Supreme Court aggress. In the 1874 case, Loan Association v. Topeka, 20 Wall. 655 (1874), they said:

24 "To lay with one hand the power of government on the property of the citizen, and with the other to bestow it on 25 favoured individuals.. is none the less robbery because it is.. called taxation."

26 The "bottom line" is that the Save-A-Patriot Fellowship successfully withstood an IRS raid and then prevailed against the 27 IRS in Federal District Court's Judgment to t the United States Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit, Case No. 97-1303,
28 and on March 13th, 1997, filed with that Court a Motion for Dismissal of Appeal--with prejudice.

29 Since the day the Fellowship opened its doors on February 24, 1984, John B. Kotmair, Jr., Founder and Fiduciary, has 30 never withheld a dime in income or employment taxes from any of the approximately two dozen staffers who work at the 31 Fellowship's Maryland headquarters.

32 The IRS knows full well that there is no law that requires the withholding of such taxes from a U.S. citizen working and 33 living within the 50 union states. Furthermore, the IRS has never in nearly fourteen years made any attempt to levy on the 34 pay of any of the above staffers. If you want to be free, you have to live free.

36 6.6.10 IRS has NO Delegated Authority to Impose Penalties or Levies or Seizures for Nonpayment of Subtitle A 37 Personal Income Taxes!

38 6.6.10.1 What Particular Type of Tax is Part 301 of Treasury Regulations?

39 Part 301 of the Regulations (26 C.F.R.) warrants a detailed explanation, because it is these Regulations that the IRS
40 fraudulently misapplies to Citizens of the 50 [nonfederal] states as their purported authority to charge interest and penalties
41 and seize property and levy compensation. All 301 Policies and Procedures cannot be and are not applicable to ALL
42 subject matters of taxes.

Note: A “cross reference” and the word “see,” in statutory construction, are used as a means of clarification only and have no legal applicability.

IMPORTANT!: A Part 301 Regulation, by itself, has no legal force to promulgate or implement Part 1, “Income Tax” provisions. A Part 301 Regulation is merely a cross reference added, in the interest of completeness, not as the lawful “authority.”

The 1939 and 1954 Title 26 Internal Revenue Codes for Income Taxes, which were never repealed and are the basis and nucleus of our current system of taxation , did not contain a Part 301! From 1939 until 1961, there was NO Part 301 “Procedure and Administration” outlining procedures for interest, penalties, property seizures, and levies! The preface to the 54 Regulations (February 16, 1954) states:

“This book [1954 Internal Revenue Code] contains rules and regulations constituting Parts 1 to 79 of Title 26...”

Following is a sample excerpt from the Table of Contents for the 1954 Regulations [26 C.F.R.]:

Table of Contents

Title 26:
Chapter I –Internal Revenue Service, Department of the Treasury
(Parts 1-79).....3

[Note the conspicuous absence of Part 301!]

So where did Part 301 come from? Where was Part 301 in the 1954 Regs? The first time Part 301 mysteriously appeared was in a specially published 1961 edition of C.F.R. Title 26. The Preface to these Regulations solved the mystery of the origin of Part 301, stating:

“Title 27 (Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms), formerly included..Part 300 to the end...”

What Particular Types of Taxes were these “Procedures and Administrations” applicable to? Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms! Part 301 was NOT written for Title 26 Voluntary Income Taxes! These Part 300+ provisions carry severe penalties for noncompliance, because Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms Tax is a “regulated” revenue taxable industry imposing a Mandatory Tax upon which criminal sanctions and property seizures could be imposed!

The “Publisher’s Note,” which was added to the first page of the 1954 microfiche of the CFR, after its publication, makes a reference to this suspicious alteration, stating:

“No Federal Register citation covering this change was discoverable.”

Again, the IRS cannot lawfully impose civil and criminal penalties on a voluntary tax because noncompliance is one of the options! That is why there is nowhere in the Regulations that a Part 1 Voluntary Tax cross references to a 301 Regulation applicable to penalties, interest, levies, seizure, or summons!

Any attempted enforcement by the IRS of a Code relating to voluntary tax, without a Part 1 Implementing Regulation, is a denial of due process for the American Citizen in violation of 26 C.F.R. §601.106!

6.6.10.2 Parallel Table of Authorities 26 C.F.R. to 26 U.S.C

The following is taken from the Parallel Table of Authorities in the back of the Title 26 Code of Federal Regulations [CFR]. It is a list of the ONLY Part 301 Regulations that derive their Authority for implementation from Title 26 USCS or 26 IRC [Income Taxes]. Note the conspicuous absence of any penalty, interest, levy or seizure for the Title 26 Voluntary Income Tax. Again, it is inconceivable that the Congress would legislate penalties for the individual income tax, since the supreme Court and the IRS have both substantiated that such a Tax is voluntary and NOT based upon distraint. It would be absurd to impose penalties for non-compliance, when such an option is what made the tax voluntary to begin with!

5 6.6.11 Service of Illegal Summons

6 It is quite common for the IRS to send out illegal summons in order to go on “fishing expeditions” in trying to uncover mud
7 to sling at a law-abiding Citizen. 26 U.S.C. §7603 governs the issuance of summons. The vast majority of IRS summons 8 are illegal and do not comply with the requirements of this section because:

- 9 • The summons did not identify the code section establishing a tax liability. It MUST do so to be enforceable.
10 Since there is no section in the I.R.C. that established a tax liability for Subtitles A through C, if the summons
11 relates to these taxes, it cannot be validly issued. You might want to ask the agent the following:

12 “In referring to an unspecified and alleged ‘tax liability’, does this refer to the tobacco tax liability contained 13 in Section 5703 (yes or no)?”

14 Ask the same question about sections 5005, 4374, and 4401(c) of the I.R.C. and then if the answer is no, ask:

15 “Then what section of the Internal Revenue Code establishes the liability for which this summons is being 16 issued?”

- 17 • The agent did not personally serve the person being summoned
- 18 • The agent did not specify the precise books and records being requested.

- The agent who issued them does not have a “Delegation Order” which allows him to issue the summons form.
- The wrong form or not form at all was used.
- The summons was not signed by the agent, or in most cases anyone.

If you receive a summons from an IRS that contains any of the above defects, then you have been illegally served and need not appear at the summons, but should notify the IRS of the defect in their notice promptly (usually within 10 days). For more information about summons, see:

6.6.12 IRS Publication 1: Taxpayer rights...Oh really?

IRS Publication 1, entitled Your Rights as a Taxpayer, is supposed to tell you what your rights are, but why doesn't the IRS title it “Your rights as an American regarding taxes?” Have you ever thought of that? Is the implication here that you have to pay money to the government to have rights? Under such circumstances, doesn't the government really just become a big mafia protection racket, where we pay money to keep them off our back and keep IRS computers from sending us automated anonymous and harassing letters? This is what we meant earlier in section 4.3.12 entitled “Government-instituted slavery using privileges”, where we said that the government has illegally tried to turn rights into taxable privileges, and here that very reality is staring you right in the face if you are paying attention!

Think hard about this: If you are a “taxpayer”, then by definition, you are liable for tax and we already know that you don't have any rights under those circumstances! We pointed this out earlier in section 3.12.1.21. The only reason you have any liberties at all as a “taxpayer” is because the government didn't take ALL of your income so you had enough left over after being raped to go out and have some fun. Let's face it: The whole bill of rights goes straight down the toilet when you are liable for any income taxes. The attitude of most passive “taxpayers”, the people we call “sheeple”, is:

“Go ahead and take [steal] whatever money you want, but please don't hit me!”

If the IRS replaced “Taxpayer” with “American” in their Publication 1, however, they would have to explain what law makes the average American liable for income tax and why you owe it to begin with. This question is a question the IRS knows they can't answer because there aren't any statutes in all of Subtitles A and C that make natural persons liable for income taxes. We even have a letter from a Congressman on Congressional letterhead stating this! Click here to view it. So instead the IRS deceptively names their publication using the word “Taxpayer” to keep attention off the real issues, which are jurisdiction and liability! Therefore, the audience this publication is written for are those people who already mistakenly believe they are liable. However, the only way you as a natural person can have rights is to not pay income taxes and not be liable for income taxes. The name of this publication is therefore an oxymoron if we ever saw one. It's like saying any of the following similarly self-contradictory oxymorons:

- Military intelligence
- Government organization
- Honest politician

Next time you call the IRS, ask them if they have a publication that tells people who don't believe they are liable what their rights are. You will probably be discarded like a hot potato by the agent once he finds out what you are up to!

Ironically, the State of California pulls the same trick with the word “taxpayer”. Their Publication 70 “Your Rights as a Taxpayer” uses the same kind of sneaky word play to deceive and evade the truth.

6.6.13 Cover-Up of March 2004: IRS Removed List of Return Types Authorized for SFR from Internal Revenue Manual (I.R.M.), Section 5.1.11.6.8

The We The People Truth in Taxation Hearing held 27-28 February 2002 in Washington, D.C. had an area of inquiry, section 13, entitled: 26 U.S.C. §6020(b) Substitute for Returns. You can view that area of inquiry at:

<http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/Forms/Discovery/Deposition/Section%2013.htm>

1 That area focused on IRS efforts at performing illegal Substitute for Returns against people who technically are not
2 "taxpayers". Prior to that hearing, a group of 40 researchers, including former IRS agents, assembled evidence to be used
3 at the hearing. Among that evidence compiled for the hearing was an excerpt from section 5.1.11.6.8 of the IRS Internal
4 Revenue Manual, which is the manual that describes proper procedures for doing assessments within the IRS. You can 5 view that evidence at:

6 <http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/Forms/Discovery/Deposition/Evidence/Q13.009c.pdf>

7 Below is what that section said, as demonstrated during the hearing:

8 5.1.11.6.8 (05-27-1999)
9 IRC 6020(b) Authority

10 1. The following returns may be prepared, signed and assessed under the authority of IRC 6020(b):

- 11 A. Form 940, Employer's Annual Federal Unemployment Tax Return
- 12 B. Form 941, Employer's Quarterly Federal Tax Return
- 13 C. Form 943, Employer's Annual Tax Return for Agricultural Employees
- 14 D. Form 720, Quarterly Federal Excise Tax Return
- 15 E. Form 2290, Heavy Vehicle Use Tax Return
- 16 F. Form CT-1, Employer's Annual Railroad Retirement Tax Return
- 17 G. Form 1065, U.S. Return of Partnership Income.

18
19
20 2. Pursuant to IRM 1.2.2.97, Delegations of Authority, Order Number 182 (rev. 7), dated 5/5/1997, revenue
21 officers GS-09 and above, and Collection Support Function managers GS-09 and above, have the authority to 22 prepare and execute returns under IRC 6020(b).

23 We showed earlier in section 5.4.15 that the IRS has no legal authority to assess natural persons with a tax liability under 24 Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A. The above section of the Internal Revenue Manual clearly proves that conclusion.
25 Notice that the form 1040 is NOT listed as one of the forms that the IRS can do a Substitute for Return (SFR) on.

26 Following the hearings, the IRS apparently read these materials and starting in March 2004, they removed the above
27 content from section 5.1.11.6.8 of their Internal Revenue Manual. This evidence was so damning that the IRS apparently 28 decided to remove it from their website after we made a big public spectacle about it. Now that section is empty!
29 Apparently, they don't want to be held accountable for obeying 26 U.S.C. §6020(b) and want to encourage their employees
30 to improperly administer that very important part of the Internal Revenue Code that allows the illegal flow of money to 31 continue.

32 6.6.14 Cover-Up of Jan. 2002: IRS Removed the Internal Revenue Manual (IRM) from their Website Search 33 Engine

34 Apparently frustrated by our website and dedicated patriots everywhere who have been reading the law and the IRS
35 publications to defend their legal and Constitutional rights to not pay direct taxes, the IRS completed redesigning their
36 website (<http://www.irs.gov>) to remove key portions from their search engine, thereby making it more difficult for patriots
37 to find help on important subjects and understand their responsibilities using the IRS website.

38 The most valuable portion of their website, the Internal Revenue Manual (IRM), was moved from the Tax Professional's
39 Corner to the FOIA area of their website and conspicuously removed from their search engine. The FOIA area of most 40 government websites is reserved for things the government doesn't want to disclose to people but has to anyway under the 41 Freedom of Information Act (FOIA). The IRM is several thousand pages long and removing it from the website search
42 engine makes it extremely difficult and inconvenient for patriots and freedom advocates to locate relevant information and 43 properly comply with the Internal Revenue Code. We would be willing to bet that their internal intranet accessible only to 44 IRS employees has the document added to their search engine for more convenient use by its own employees. We'd
45 recommend doing an FOIA request to find this out to gather evidence to document this hypocritical scam. Please send us a 46 copy of your FOIA response from the IRS if you do so.

47 The IRS also deleted the area below telling where to file FOIA requests, as though they no longer want any!:

<http://www.irs.gov/prod/preview/foia/offices.html>

1 IRS: Is THIS what you call improving customer service and satisfaction and better meeting your mission statement, which
2 says(?):

3 *"Provide America's taxpayers top quality service by helping them understand and meet their tax
4 responsibilities and by applying the tax law with integrity and fairness to all."*

5 We'd say this strategic move conflicts with your mission statement and makes it more, not less difficult for people to
6 understand and meet their legal tax responsibilities! Instead, it simply makes them more dependent on your fraudulent IRS
7 publications and less able to understand the law.

8 Nice try, IRS, but we were ready for you when you pulled this stunt! Don't fret, patriots! If you want an indexed,
9 searchable version of the IRM as of Sept. 2001, you can go to our site below:

10 <http://famguardian.org/Publications/IRM-020311/0..i1=5&genericId=21023.00.html>

12 our mirror sites.

13 6.6.15 Cover-Up of 2002: W-8 Certificate of Foreign Status Form Removed from the IRS Website December 2000
14 and replaced with W-8BEN

15 The IRS website, up until December of 2000, contained a copy of the form W-8 available for download. The form was 16 simple to use and could exempt you from both employment withholding and tax withholding of banks on accounts. After
17 that date, the form was removed, presumably because so many people were using the simple nonresident alien approach
18 advocated in this book and by other authors. Remember that nonresident aliens have no requirement to pay any income tax
19 or file returns if they have no income from inside the federal United States, which includes the District of Columbia, the 20 federal territories, and federal enclaves within states of the Union. Without a tax liability, nonresident aliens domiciled in 21 the 50 Union states don't have to file a tax return or provide any information about themselves to the IRS! How then does
22 the IRS track these people and find out about them so they can use their computers to harass them and extort money out of 23 them? They deceive them into thinking that they are required to file returns and pay tax, and that they are required to get a
24 Taxpayer ID Number or T.I.N. (as a substitute for a Social Security Number).

25 After December 2000, the IRS replaced the W-8 form with the W-8BEN form, and they did so, it would appear, to once
26 again to create a false presumption in the minds of most Americans, using the form itself, that even nonresident aliens are
27 "liable" to pay income tax and to file a return, which wasn't previously the case with the W-8 form. They did this at a time
28 when there were no changes in the laws that would add this new requirement and when a lot of people were using the W-8
29 forms. Apparently, the IRS wanted to try, without legal authority we might add, to close the nonresident alien loophole
30 being used by so many patriots to exit the income tax system by modifying the IRS Forms. Once again, they did their dirty
31 work using sneaky definitions just like they did with the Internal Revenue Code. The instructions for the form define
32 "beneficial owner" as follows:

33 "Beneficial owner. For payments other than those for which a reduced rate of withholding is claimed under an 34 income tax treaty, the beneficial owner of income is generally the person who is required under U.S. tax 35 principles to include the income in gross income on a tax return..."

36 The W-8BEN form clearly implies that even the nonresident alien in this case:

- 37 1. "Is required" to file a tax return;
38 2. "Is required" to show even foreign income on the tax return

39 We know from section 5.6.13.3 earlier (entitled "Tax Liability and Responsibilities of Nonresident Aliens") that these
40 assertions aren't true and that nonresident aliens with no U.S.**/federal zone source income clearly aren't liable for income
41 tax, nor do they have "gross income", and they also aren't required to file a tax return. This fact is abundantly confirmed
42 by examining 26 U.S.C. §861(a)(3)(C)(i). The insidious and misleading changes in the W-8BEN form, however, creates a
43 false presumption that advantages the IRS! We must continually remember from our discussion in section 3.19 (entitled 44 "IRS Publications and Internal Revenue Manual (IRM)), however, that the IRS publications are NOT to be relied upon to 45 sustain a position and you are wasting your time to rely on them.

1 Not only are the instructions for the W-8 insidious and damaging to the freedoms of nonresident alien Sovereign Natural
2 Born Citizens, but the W-8BEN form itself is also misleading and creates a false presumption. The title is “Certificate of
3 Foreign Status of Beneficial Owner for United States Tax Withholding”. This creates the impression that the withholding
4 is occurring in the “United States”*/federal zone, which clearly isn’t the case in the 50 union states! Also be careful when
5 filling in block 6, because it says “U.S. taxpayer identification number”. If you put ANYTHING in this box, then you are 6 claiming you are a taxpayer, which you are not as a nonresident alien domiciled in the 50 union states.

7 6.6.16 Cover-Up of 1999: IRS CID Agent Joe Banister Terminated by IRS For Discovering The Truth About 8 Voluntary Nature of Income Taxes!

9 The story below was taken from the personal testimony of Joe Banister given to me at the Freedom Rally held April 7,
10 2001 in Irvine hosted by the Freedom Law School (<http://www.livefreenow.com>). Joe also maintains his own website at:

11 <http://freedomabovefortune.com/>

12 Joe Banister has a BS degree in accounting and spent three years at KPMG Peat Marwick on their professional staff as a 13 senior tax specialist and staff auditor. He went to work for the IRS in 1993 and was a licensed Certified Public Accountant.
14 He enforced tax codes for the IRS, and quickly achieved high status and many awards within the government during his 15 five year career with the IRS. Joe was an agent of the IRS Criminal Investigative Division in San Jose, CA for five years.
16 In December 1996, he heard a talk show radio program with Geoff Metcalf in San Jose, and overheard Devvy Kidd being
17 interviewed. She was claiming that the federal income tax was voluntary. Since Joe made his domiciled investigating
18 criminal violations of the taxing statutes, he listened intently to the radio program. His life has never been the same since 19 then!

20 Subsequently, Joe wrote Devvy and asked for some materials. He received a package in January 1997 from Devvy
21 containing two books approximately 50 pages in length. The books were entitled Why a Bankrupt America and Blind
22 Loyalty. The books were filled with very shocking claims about the United Nations, the federal income tax system, and the 23 federal banking and monetary systems, among other topics. He read the books thoroughly and found a more detailed 24 explanation of the allegations she made on the radio. There were three allegations that he found the most profound and 25 unbelievable:

- 26 1. Allegation 1: Due to Limitations Imposed By The U.S. Constitution, Filing of Federal Income Tax Returns and 27 Payment of Federal Income Tax Is Voluntary, Not Mandatory.
- 28 2. Allegation 2: The 16th Amendment To The U.S. Constitution, The Amendment Which Precipitated The Federal 29 Income Tax, Was Never Legally Ratified.
- 30 3. Allegation 3: The U.S. Government Finances Its Operations Form the Unconstitutional Creation of Fiat Money, not 31 with Revenue From Income Taxes.

32 Kidd’s allegations were so shocking to Mr. Banister and contrary to everything he had been taught that he spent many 33 months simply thinking and meditating about what he had read. In the latter part of 1997, he read the book, The Creature
34 From Jekyll Island, authored by G. Edward Griffin. Griffin’s book shared some of the same subject matter as Kidd’s
35 books, which prompted Joe to pick Devvy’s books up a second time. During this second review, he noticed an unusual
36 aspect about Kidd’s books that he had paid little attention to the first time through. Kidd had a practice of including 37 telephone numbers of the people responsible for the evidence she provided. It was at this point that Joe realized he could 38 simply telephone these men and make direct inquiries about the evidence supporting their allegations. In December 1997,
39 Joe decided to contact them personally in order to determine the truth.

40 During the ensuing two years, Joe did his own research on his private time to try to verify the truth of the three allegations.
41 Eventually, he convinced himself that Devvy’s claims were entirely true, and after two years of research, he submitted a
42 preliminary report of his findings to his supervisor at the IRS. That supervisor forwarded the report up the chain. Joe
43 asked his I.R.S. supervisor to help him refute the claims so he could have a clear conscience about continuing to 44 work at the IRS. Instead of helping correct Joe in the error in his findings or set the record straight, his supervisor
45 asked him to either desist or tender his resignation. Joe Banister decided to leave the IRS and quit on the
46 anniversary of the signing of the 16th Amendment, February 25, 1999. He eventually joined the tax freedom
47 movement! He also joined the We The People Foundation (<http://www.givemeliberty.org>) soon after his resignation and 48 supported the efforts of employers to stop withholding. Part of his story was featured on a 60 Minutes II episode aired on
49 CBS on April 2, 2001 in connection with a story entitled “Tax Revolt”. He was described as helping employers to legally

1 stop income tax withholding of their employees. Joe defended the legal position of the employer during the 60 Minutes
2 interview. He was very convincing. He has also been exposed to this book and I have personally met with him and
3 obtained an autographed copy of his book about the illegality of the federal income tax. He is also a frequent speaker with
4 the Freedom Law School and appears at their annual Freedom Rallies, usually held in April of each year in Irvine, CA
5 (contact Peymon Mottahedeh, the President, at <http://www.livefreenow.com/>).

6 We encourage you to read more about Joe Banister's story on his website shown above. You can also get a copy of his
7 report off his website, entitled Investigating the Federal Income Tax: A Preliminary Report. The cost is $20.

8 6.6.17 Cover-Up of 1995: Modified Regulations to Remove Pointers to Form 2555 for IRC Section 1 Liability for
9 Federal Income Tax

10 The Paperwork Reduction Act of 1980 requires that every form used by the federal government to collect information from
11 the public first be approved by the Office of Management and Budget ("OMB"). The regulations at 26 C.F.R. §602.101
12 contain a table listing the OMB-approved forms for each section of regulations. The regulations at 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1 are 13 entitled "Income tax on individuals," and correspond to 26 U.S.C. §1 (which imposes the "income tax"). Up until 1995, the 14 first line in this table identified Form 2555, "Foreign Earned Income," as the only approved form under 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1.
15 In 1995, after many "tax resistance" groups had become aware of this, the listing for "1.1-1" was removed from the list, in 16 order to avoid "confusion," according to the Department of the Treasury. The process of applying for, and receiving OMB
17 approval for a form makes the possibility of an error extremely remote. The Department of the Treasury requested that 18 Form 2555 be approved for 1.1-1, and the Office of Management and Budget approved it. When the entry drew too much
19 attention, it was removed. At present no forms are approved for use with 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1.

20 6.6.18 Cover-Up of 1993--HOT!!: IRS Removed References in IRS Publication 515 to Citizens Not Being Liable
21 for Tax and Confused New Language

22 A key piece of the puzzle that unraveled the IRS' Great Deception was formerly found in 26 C.F.R. §1.1441 and in IRS
23 Publication 515. Recall that we have been saying all along that foreign earned income is the only thing to be counted as 24 "gross income" for the purposes of 26 U.S.C. §861?

25 Call 1-800-TAX-FORM and request a copy of IRS Publication 515, titled "Withholding of Tax on Nonresident Aliens and 26 Foreign Entities". Now, you might look this up and ask yourself, "what on Earth does that have to do with me?"

27 Here's what. Inside Publication 515, there appears a statement the IRS hopes you never see. Under the main heading
28 "Withholding Exemptions and Reductions" and within the paragraph titled "Evidence of Residence", the IRS states in 29 speaking to the payer of income:

30 "If an individual gives you a written statement stating that he or she is a citizen or resident of the United States,
31 and you do not know otherwise, you do not have to withhold tax."

32 The 1994 version of Publication 515 varied somewhat. Instead of ending with "...you do not have to withhold tax", it 33 continues:

34 "...you do not have to withhold tax under the rules discussed in this publication. Instead, get Publication 15,
35 Circular E, Employer's Tax Guide."

36 Of course our friends at the IRS fail to clarify that Circular E, Employer's Tax Guide has to do with employment taxes
37 under subtitle C, and has nothing whatsoever to do with the withholding of income tax under subtitle A, the subject of 38 Publication 515. Isn't that interesting?

39 Considering the deluge of recent requests from Patriotic Americans for a copy of Publication 515, do you suppose that 40 this creative suggestion to go get Circular E instead and read about employment taxes could have been added to 41 misdirect or confuse anyone?

42 Remember, the "S" in IRS stands for "Service"!

1 And what is the statement of citizenship? It's simply an affidavit, notarized and signed under penalties of perjury stating
2 that "I, John Doe, am a Citizen of the United States." It's that simple. So, the bottom line is that, according to the IRS, if
3 you agree a "Citizen or resident of the United States", the payer of your income does not have to withhold tax. Imagine
4 that!

5 Now ask yourself this question: If a United States citizen every really were liable for tax withholding, why would the IRS
6 ever have printed this statement anywhere? Why would it even exist in writing?

7 It exists because the Law behind the Statement of Citizenship is 26 C.F.R. §1.1441-5 "Claiming to be a person not subject
8 to withholding", paragraph (a) of which states:

9 "For purposes of Chapter 3 of the Code, an individual's written statement that he or she is a citizen or resident
10 of the United States may be relied upon by the payer of the income as proof that such individual is a citizen or 11 resident of the United States."

12 And where is Chapter 3 of the Code? In Subtitle A, income tax. 1.1441-5, paragraph (c) states:

13 "The duplicate copy of each statement and form filed pursuant to this section shall be forwarded with a letter of 14 transmittal to Internal Revenue Service Center, Philadelphia PA 19255. The original statement shall be 15 retained by the withholding agent."

16 And why must the Statement of Citizenship be sent to Philadelphia, and not the local IRS office or regional service center?
17 Because Philadelphia is the IRS' international service center--the foreign service center, which makes perfect sense since 18 the income tax is a tax on foreign activity only!

19 The IRS Philadelphia office has never been known to reject a Statement of Citizenship from a withholding agent. It also 20 does not acknowledge receipt of the Statement of Citizenship, which confuses some people. The reason for this is simple.
21 If the statement were inaccurate or off-point, there would be a rebuttal from Philadelphia. Silence, in this case, is 22 acceptance.

23 Because of a deluge of requests and attention focused on IRS Publication 515 and 26 C.F.R.
24 §1.1441-5 by patriotic Americans who didn't want to have to pay or file income taxes legally in 1998, 25 26 C.F.R. §1.1441-5 was rewritten in 1993!!! The cover-up expands! Instead, all we are left with 26 is a confusing pointer back to Circular E, the Employer's Tax Guide, and no mention of how to 27 handle nonresident aliens!! Apparently, the truth got just a little too close for comfort so the Great
28 Deceiver bureaucrat lawyers in Congress and at the IRS had to bury it a little deeper in legalese to 29 confuse the scent for us tax freedom hound dogs!! BARK, BARK!!! Sick-em!

30 6.6.19 Obfuscation of 2004: IRS Publication 519 added deceptive reference to "United States" to deceive and 31 confuse readers

32 IRS Publication 519, Starting in year 2004, introduced the following language to infer that the term "United States" as used
33 in the Internal Revenue Code, includes the 50 states of the Union for the purposes of jurisdiction to tax under Internal 34 Revenue Code, Subtitle A:

35 Substantial Presence Test

36 Example. You were physically present in the United States on 120 days in each of the years 2003, 2004, and 37 2006. To determine if you meet the substantial presence test for 2005, count the full 120 days of presence in 38 2006, 40 days in 2004 (1/3 of 130), and 20 days in 2003 (1/6 of 120). Because the total for the 30 year period is 39 180 days, you are not considered a resident under the substantial presence test for 2005.

40 "The term United States includes the following areas.

- 41 • "All 50 states and the District of Columbia."
- 42 • "The territorial waters of the United States"

43 [...]

"The term does not include U.S. possessions and territories or U.S. airspace."

We have several points to make about the above reference:

1. The above cite was added to the publication in about 2004 in an apparent response to the content of this book, as a way to deceive the readers and stop the spread of the Non-Resident Non-Person Position.
2. The definition comes from an IRS Publication, which the IRS Internal Revenue Manual admits is UNTRUSTWORTHY and not guaranteed to be accurate:

"IRS Publications, issued by the National Office, explain the law in plain language for taxpayers and their advisors... While a good source of general information, publications should not be cited to sustain a position."
[Internal Revenue Manual (I.R.M.), Section 4.10.7.2.8 (05-14-1999)]

3. The text above is an EXAMPLE which does not infer or imply or specify the context in which it may suitably be used. There are actually THREE and not ONE context in which the term "United States" could be referring to or implied and only one of them is used in the above example, which is the third one listed below:
  - 3.1. The meaning of the term "United States" within the Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A.
  - 3.2. The meaning of the term "United States" within ordinary speech, which most people associate with the COUNTRY to include states of the Union.
  - 3.3. The meaning of "United States" in the context of jurisdiction over aliens (not "citizens" or "nationals") temporarily present in the country "United States", which in this context includes all 50 states and the District of Columbia.

In the context of item 3.3 above, the U.S. Supreme Court has repeatedly affirmed the plenary power of Congress over aliens in this country, wherever they are located to include areas within the exclusive jurisdiction of states of the Union:

In accord with ancient principles of the international law of nation-states, the Court in The Chinese Exclusion Case, 130 U.S. 581, 609 (1889), and in Fong Yue Ting v. United States, 149 U.S. 698 (1893), held broadly, as the Government describes it, Brief for Appellants 20, that the power to exclude aliens is "inherent in sovereignty, necessary for maintaining normal international relations and defending the country against foreign encroachments and dangers - a power to be exercised exclusively by the political branches of government . . . ." Since that time, the Court's general reaffirmations of this principle have [408 U.S. 753, 766] been legion. 6 The Court without exception has sustained Congress' "plenary power to make rules for the admission of aliens and to exclude those who possess those characteristics which Congress has forbidden." Boutilier v. Immigration and Naturalization Service, 387 U.S. 118, 123 (1967). "[O]ver no conceivable subject is the legislative power of Congress more complete than it is over" the admission of aliens. Oceanic Navigation Co. v. Stranahan, 214 U.S. 320, 339 (1909). [Kleindienst v. Mandel, 408 U.S. 753 (1972)]

While under our constitution and form of government the great mass of local matters is controlled by local authorities, the United States, in their relation to foreign countries and their subjects or citizens, are one nation, invested with powers which belong to independent nations, the exercise of which can be invoked for the maintenance of its absolute independence and security throughout its entire territory. The powers to declare war, make treaties, suppress insurrection, repel invasion, regulate foreign commerce, secure republican governments to the states, and admit subjects of other nations to citizenship, are all sovereign powers, restricted in their exercise only by the constitution itself and considerations of public policy and justice which control, more or less, the conduct of all civilized nations. As said by this court in the case of Cohens v. Virginia, 6 Wheat. 264, 413, speaking by the same great chief justice: "That the United States form, for many, and for most important purposes, a single nation, has not yet been denied. In war, we are one people. In making peace, we are one people. In all commercial regulations, we are one and the same people. In many other respects, the American people are one; and the government which is alone capable of controlling and managing their interests in all these respects is the government of the Union. It is their government, and in that character they have no other. America has chosen to [130 U.S. 581, 605] be in many respects, and to many purposes, a nation; and for all these purposes her government is complete; to all these objects, it is competent. The people have declared that in the exercise of all powers given for these objects it is supreme. It can, then, in effecting these objects, legitimately control all individuals or governments within the American territory."

3 "The power of exclusion of foreigners being an incident of sovereignty belonging to the government of the 4 United States as a part of those sovereign powers delegated by the constitution, the right to its exercise at any
5 time when, in the judgment of the government, the interests of the country require it, cannot be granted away or
6 restrained on behalf of any one. The powers of government are delegated in trust to the United States, and are
7 incapable of transfer to any other parties. They cannot be abandoned or surrendered. Nor can their exercise
8 be hampered, when needed for the public good, by any considerations of private interest. The exercise of 9 these public trusts is not the subject of barter or contract."
[Chae Chan Ping v. U.S., 130 U.S. 581 (1889)]

10 Therefore, in regard to control over aliens present anywhere within the American confederation, the general government
11 legislates over all the territory of the American Union, including those of the states. Consequently, for the purposes of 12 determining "permanent residence" of aliens ONLY, the term "United States" as used in item 3 above must be interpreted 13 to include the 50 states of the Union as the IRS indicates above. HOWEVER:

- 14 1. The Presence Test indicated does not refer to "citizens" or "nationals". The Presence Test is found in 26 U.S.C.
15 §7701(b)(3) and references ONLY "aliens" as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(A) and not "nonresident aliens"
16 defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(B) or "citizens" defined in 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1(c). Therefore, an alien domiciled in a
17 state of the Union could be a "resident" within the meaning of the presence test while neither a "citizen" nor a
18 "national" would be considered a "resident" under the SAME test when located in the SAME place. Under the I.R.C., 19 one cannot be a "resident" (which is an alien with a domicile) and either a "citizen" or a "national" at the same time.
20 This is confirmed by the Law of Nations, which the Founding Fathers used to write the Constitution:

21 "Residents, as distinguished from citizens, are aliens who are permitted to take up a permanent abode in the 22 country. Being bound to the society by reason of their dwelling in it, they are subject to its law so long as they
23 remain there, and being protected by it, they must defend it, although they do not enjoy all the rights of citizens.
24 They have only certain privileges which the law, or custom, gives them. Permanent residents are those who
25 have been given the right of perpetual residence. They are a sort of citizens of a less privileged character, and 26 are subject to the society without enjoying all its advantages. Their children succeed to their status; for the 27 right of perpetual residence given them by the State passes to their children."
28 [Law of Nations, Vattel, p. 87
29 SOURCE: <http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/CitesByTopic/Resident-LawOfNations.pdf>]

- 30 2. Remember that the only context in which "residence" is defined or described anywhere in the Internal Revenue Code is 31 in the context of "aliens", and not in the context of either "citizens" or "nationals". See 26 C.F.R. §1.871-2 and section 32 4 of the article below:

Why Domicile and Becoming a "Taxpayer" Require Your Consent, Form #05.002
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

33 Therefore, a person who is a "national" but not a "citizen" and a "nonresident alien" can NOT have a "residence" as 34 defined anywhere in the Internal Revenue Code.

- 35 3. For the purposes of determining tax liability and not residency of all persons, we must defer to the definition of 36 "United States" found in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10), which is limited to the District of Columbia and nowhere
37 located in the Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A to include any other place.

38 Based on the foregoing, we must conclude that the IRS' statement above is a deception and a ruse intended to compel false
39 presumption under the influence of CONSTRUCTIVE FRAUD that will maximize the illegal flow of PLUNDER to the 40 federal government. It is provided as an example and cannot mean the legal definition of "United States" used in the 41 Internal Revenue Code. If they wish to imply that ALL THREE of the contexts in which the term "United States" could be 42 used are the same, then they should say so and provide statutory and regulatory authority for saying so. Until then, we must 43 defer to the definition of "United States" found within 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10). This is a consequence of the 44 following doctrine of the Supreme Court:

45 "Keeping in mind the well-settled rule that the citizen is exempt from taxation unless the same is imposed by
46 clear and unequivocal language, and that where the construction of a tax law is doubtful, the doubt is to be
47 resolved in favor of those upon whom the tax is sought to be laid."
48 [Spreckels Sugar Refining Co. v. McClain, 192 U.S. 297 (1904)]

49 6.7 Department of State (DOS) Scandals Related to Income Taxes

50 We say earlier in section 2.8.13 that the federal courts commonly but erroneously "presume" that all people are "U.S.
51 citizens" under 8 U.S.C. §1401 in order to illegally expand federal jurisdiction. Here is an example:

1                   "Unless the defendant can prove he is not a citizen of the United States, the IRS has the right to inquire and
2                   determine a tax liability."
3                   [U.S. v. Slater, 545 Fed.Supp. 179,182 (1982).]

4       Therefore, it is very important to establish proof that you are not a statutory "national and citizen of the United States** at
5       birth" under 8 U.S.C. §1401. Consequently, the Sovereignty Forms and Instructions Manual, Form #10.005 in section
6       2.5.3.13 suggests that readers obtain what is called a "Certificate of non-citizen National Status" as certified proof that they
7       are not "U.S. citizens", and we recommend using this as proof in any judicial proceeding. We also recommend getting
8       certified proof of your "non-citizen national status" into your IRS administrative record long before you involve yourself in 9       any judicial proceeding, so that the judge may not keep it out of evidence or out of view of the jury to prejudice your case.

10       Well, the government is catching on to this and obstructing justice by the following devious means. A number of our
11       readers have contacted us to report that they have attempted to obtain a "Certificate of non-citizen National Status" under 12       the authority of 8 U.S.C. §1452 as suggested in sections 2.5.3.13 and 3.6.12 in the Sovereignty Forms and Instructions
13       Manual, Form #10.005 and that the Secretary of State of the United States positively refuses his duty under this statute to 14       issue the requested certificate. The person we talked to indicated that now the Secretary of the State has posted a notice on 15       their website indicating that they have changed their policy and are no longer issuing such certificates, although they did
16       not explain why. Here is the notice:

17       http://travel.state.gov/noncit\_cert.html

18       There's obviously a cover-up going on here folks. The slaves have figured out how to remove their legal chains and leave
19       the federal plantation, so our crooked government is blocking their exit by depriving them of the evidence needed to prove
20       that they are not "U.S. citizens" under the Internal Revenue Code. There is still a way to force the Secretary of State to do
21       his duty under 8 U.S.C. §1452 by providing the requested certificate, but it takes a separate lawsuit in a federal court to do
22       so, and that lawsuit is called a "writ of mandamus". A writ of mandamus is simply a request that the court compel a public
23       servant to perform his duty under the law. Not only that, but the conspiracy against rights surrounding the citizenship issue
24       gets MUCH worse.

25       If you read the above link to the Department of State website, you will find out that the Department of State recommends
26       that for those people who want a "Certificate of non-Citizen National Status" under 8 U.S.C. §1452, they should get a U.S.
27       Passport instead. There is a big problem with that, because the passport simply says "citizen/national" rather than 28       identifying which of the two types of citizens that you are. That doesn't provide the requisite proof that you are a
29       "national" under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22)(B). It's certified, but it doesn't distinguish in the way you need at a tax trial.

30       To find a way around this political roadblock to emancipation, we applied for a U.S. Passport as they recommended.
31       However, before we did, we amended the DS-11 application form electronically so as to indicate that both of our parents
32       and our spouse are "nationals" rather than "U.S. citizens" in blocks 14, 15, and 16. This removes the incorrect presumption
33       on the form. We also filled out the form without a Slave Surveillance Number and turned it in. The clerk didn't even 34       pause, but processed the application and gave us a passport a few hours later. When we came to pick up the passport, we 35       asked the clerk if we could have a copy of the approved DS-11 application form and we asked to have it certified. We 36       wanted it certified so that we could use it as evidence admissible in court of our true status as a "non-resident on-persons"
37       and "nationals" under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21). Guess what? Here is what the clerk told us, which is more foot dragging and 38       really surprised us:

39                   "It is our policy NOT to provide copies of the application form. If you want a certified copy, then the only way
40                   you can get it is through a Privacy Act request."

41       To make things worse, we asked WHY they have this requirement and from what legal authority it derives, and we got 42       evasive comments back. Therefore, we have written a Privacy Act request that you can reuse which demands a copy of the 43       approved DS-11 Passport Application form from the Department of State, along with several other key documents. You
44       can find that document either in section 3.6.13 of the Sovereignty Forms and Instructions Manual, Form #10.005. That 45       form is also available online below:

46       <http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/Forms/Emancipation/DOSFOIA-Non-CertDS11.htm>

One of our readers who attempted to procure the Certificate of “non-citizen National Status” by mail using the form provided in section 3.6.12 of the Sovereignty Forms and Instructions Manual, Form #10.005 also received the following letter back from the Department of State in response to his correspondence:

<http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/Evidence/Citizenship/dos-AmCitizenResponse.pdf>

Based on the crooked behavior of the Department of State in this instance, the government obviously doesn’t want to cooperate with people in obtaining proof of their true citizenship status. They know that if the word gets out that this works, and everyone does it, we will have a country of “nontaxpayers” and “nonresident aliens” as we clearly show in section 5.6.13 and following! He.. he...he! Scumbags!

6.8 Department of Justice (DOJ) Scandals Related to Income Taxes

*“Evil men do not understand justice,
But those who seek the Lord understand all.”
[Prov. 28:5, Bible, NKJV]*

*“He who justifies the wicked, and he who condemns the just,
Both of them alike are an abomination to the Lord.”
[Prov. 17:15, Bible, NKJV]*

As we established in section 5.4.21, the Department of Justice has NO delegated authority to prosecute IRC Subtitle A Income Tax Crimes. Below are some examples of some of the illegal and unethical things they have done in the absence of that authority.

6.8.1 Prosecution of Dr. Phil Roberts: “Political Tax Prisoner”

In the opening of this book, section 1.9 entitled “Political ‘Tax’ Prisoners” talked about an unfortunate victim of legal abuse by the Department of Justice (DOJ) named Dr. Phil Roberts. Phil is a respected member of the community, a physician, and an intelligent and principled man. We have summarized his case (Federal District Court in Fort Smith, Arkansas, case # 00-20018-001) in that section using information provided by his attorney and relatives. We also have the entire transcript (over 700 pages!) of his criminal tax trial posted on our website for you to read (<http://famguardian.org>, look in Tax Freedom and then under the heading “Case Studies”). The transcript and the Trial Notes are instructive educational aids for you to learn how many different constitutional rights of Dr. Roberts were arrogantly and illegally violated by the Department of Justice conspiring with the judge of that court. It is obvious that many laws were violated, and below are just a few of the violations:

1. Department of Justice:
  - 1.1. Taking of property not based on law (26 C.F.R. §601.106(f)(1).
  - 1.2. Retaliating against a witness, victim, or informant (18 U.S.C. §1513)
  - 1.3. Blackmail (18 U.S.C. §873).
  - 1.4. Extortion (18 U.S.C. §872)
2. Judge:
  - 2.1. Federally protected rights being violated (18 U.S.C. §245)
  - 2.2. Conspiracy against rights (18 U.S.C. §241).
  - 2.3. Conflict of interest (28 U.S.C. §455).

In the year 2000, Dr. Phil Roberts was prosecuted and eventually imprisoned for willful failure to file under 26 U.S.C. §7203, after he took the IRS to court on three different occasions because they kept harassing him about filing his tax return but refused to produce any evidence or a legal basis why they thought he had any tax liability whatsoever. Among the incredible treachery foisted upon him by the judge, we are told, was the following, reported directly to us by his attorney, Oscar Stilley and appearing in the trial transcript itself:

1. Tried to deny Dr. Roberts the right to counsel of his choice because the judge didn’t like his attorney.
2. Would not allow his attorney to cross-examine prospective jurists during voir dire (his attorney told us this on the phone).
3. Slipped three pre-selected jurists into the courtroom at the last minute.
4. Rigged the drawing box for selecting jurists.

- 1 5. Judge kept the instructions he gave to the jury OFF THE RECORD (so he couldn't be prosecuted for jury tampering).
2 See items 69 and 247.
- 3 6. At his arraignment, the court allowed Dr. Roberts to be forced by the DOJ in front of the jury, to sign his tax return
4 (like making Jesus carry his cross before they nailed him to it). All along, they knew he had refused to sign his return,
5 but not to submit it, because he wanted to be made aware what specific law made him liable to pay income tax! How 6 can you prosecute someone for wanting an answer to that question and being stonewalled all the way up to trial by the 7 IRS, who refused to answer the question?
- 8 7. Judge would not allow any laws to be discussed in front of the jury. (item 35).
- 9 8. Would not allow Dr. Roberts to demand or expect the DOJ to produce the law he violated.
- 10 9. Told his attorney that his license would be revoked if he tried to discuss the law because the ability to practice law was 11 a "privilege" granted by the court (see item 232).
- 12 10. Refused to allow Dr. Roberts to discuss the legal basis for his reasonable cause belief that he had no income tax 13 liability. Ignored repeated requests from his counsel throughout the trial to discuss the Internal revenue Code (a 14 violation of his Sixth Amendment rights).
- 15 11. Overruled most of the defense's objections and almost none of the Department of Justice's.
- 16 12. Insisted that the defense tell him the questions he wanted to ask of witnesses in a sidebar BEFORE he actually asked 17 them.
- 18 13. Ignored Dr. Robert's Fifth Amendment right to not incriminate himself by filing a tax return.

19 And the punishment for exercising his First Amendment right to not talk to his government, his Fifth Amendment right to
20 not incriminate himself by not filing a tax return was a prison sentence of about 1 year and a half. Remember that we said
21 that what makes something a right is that the exercise of the right cannot be penalized, regulated, or punished in any way
22 when one freely chooses to exercise the right. Do we really have any rights with such a prejudicial and conspiratorial court
23 system and a Department of Justice that instead of defending criminals, makes us ALL into criminals for exercising our 24 constitutional rights? Below are some of the ridiculous statements made by the judge during the trial, all of which you can
25 read yourself on our website in the actual trial transcript. The following Trial Notes were prepared by Dr. Roberts' brother,
26 Robert Roberts, to summarize the over 700 pages of transcript on the case. This transcript is very effective at showing that
27 there is indeed a judicial conspiracy to protect the income tax, and that the judge was conspiring with the DOJ to make an
28 example out of Dr. Roberts. They wanted to get him into jail so they could use the fear factor to continue intimidating
29 other citizens to continue "volunteering" to pay taxes for which they weren't liable. The numbers in the left margin come

- 3 223. Court states that if it hadn’t ruled previously, with regard to bringing up the lawsuits filed by the defendant, that,
4 “Well, if I didn’t, I am now. I am telling you it is sustained on nothing concerning any civil lawsuits he may
5 have filed. That’s improper. And I’m going to prohibit you from asking any question about it, and your

- 30 237. At sidebar still, the court asks the defense if that is going to be its last question. The defense answers no and the 31 court responds, “Well, it very well could be, unless you tell me what they are. Now, the jury has been waiting
32 over there for about five minutes and they’re getting impatient and so am I, Mr. Stilley.” P699, 19-25
- 33 238. Court continues to deny the defense’s proposed questions at the sidebar stating, “That’s improper. He’s not to do

2 privilege now. It's been waived by the conviction." P756, 7-8

3 251. Court states, "I'm going to continue the bond at present through sentencing. ..." P756, 9-10

4 After reading item 232, I wonder why ANYONE would want to hire an attorney to represent them in a trial in Federal
5 Court! What a farce!! That's why this document places such an emphasis on helping to develop in you the skills to 6 masterfully litigate your own case—so you can tell the tax emperor he has no clothes without having your livelihood and
7 your ability to earn a living threatened by a covetous so-called judge with a criminal conflict of interest in violation of 18
8 U.S.C. §208, 28 U.S.C. §144, and 28 U.S.C. §455!

9 Throughout the trial, the judge emphasized that they couldn't talk about the law. What the hell else are courts and the 10 lawyers in them supposed to talk about...hearsay and what we think the law says?(!) All that's left if the judge manipulates
11 and abuses the jury and the law isn't discussed is a kangaroo court that's on a witch hunt to convict and burn the defendant,
12 which is precisely what they did in this case! What a miscarriage and abuse of justice if I ever saw one! The judge, by 13 refusing to discuss the law, has violated the Sixth Amendment because he has made it impossible for a defendant to clearly
14 know what the law says and what the charges against him are—instead, the court devolved into a subjective exercise of 15 whatever the judge thinks the law says or wants the law to say! We are supposed to be a society of laws and not of men but
16 this judge has made sure it is the other way around. This kind of tyranny MUST be stopped!

17 The court stated in item 240 that the "jury has been abused". That's right, and you know who abused them?... THE JUDGE!
18 And his abuse of them led to an involuntary abuse of Dr. Phil Roberts by the jury! Do we live in a mobocracy, I mean
19 democracy, or a republic? Fire the bastard and strip him of his federal retirement and benefits for plundering the citizenry!
20 THIEF! Now we know why judges wear black robes... because they are the executioner in most federal tax trials. When 21 you go into federal court as the defendant, you have TWO prosecutors: The Judge and the U.S. attorney. The deck is 22 stacked against you.

23 6.8.2 Fraud On The Court: Demjanuk v. Petrovsky, 10 F.3d. 338

24 If any reader doubts that officials of the United States government, even U.S. attorneys in the United States Department of 25 Justice, are capable of perpetrating "fraud on the court" by engaging in "misconduct," the case of Demjanuk v. Petrovsky,
26 10 F.3d. 338 (6th Cir.1993) should remove that doubt. Mr. Demjanuk was wrongly identified as "Ivan the Terrible" and 27 charged with murdering thousands of Jews during WW2. The appellate court found that some U.S. attorneys committed 28 "fraud on the court" and "engaged in prosecutorial misconduct by failing to disclose to the courts and to the petitioner
29 [Demjanuk] exculpatory information in their possession during litigation culminating in extradition proceedings, which led
30 to the petitioner's forced departure from the United States and trial on capital charges in the State of Israel." The record
31 shows that "no fewer than eight government attorneys worked on the Demjanuk denaturalization case..." The "exculpatory
32 information" that U.S. attorneys possessed but failed to reveal to the courts (that heard and ruled on Demjanuk's 33 denaturalization and extradition proceedings) and to Demjanuk's attorneys was reasonable evidence that Demjanuk was 34 not the man that the U.S. attorneys claimed him to be, "Ivan the Terrible."

35 As readers may recall, Mr. Demjanuk was extradited to Israel where he was found guilty of the "mass murder of Jews" and 36 sentenced to hang. But the persistent search for truth and justice by Mr. Demjanuk's attorneys and his son-in-law through 37 discovery requests and Freedom of Information Act requests and litigation finally paid off. Fortunately for Mr. Demjanuk,
38 upon appeal of his death sentence the Supreme Court of Israel learned from the withheld documents and statements of 39 guards at Treblinka that "clearly identified" Ivan Marchenko--not John Demjanuk--as "Ivan the Terrible." It is significant 40 that it was the Supreme Court of Israel and not an American court that ultimately saved the life of John Demjanuk. The 41 Demjanuk case proves that some U.S. attorneys had little interest in learning the true identity of a man they were 42 prosecuting for mass murder or the attainment of justice when Demjanuk's life was assumed to be at risk. Shamefully, such 43 attorneys' apparent, chief interest is in obtaining convictions and "winning" cases. It would be interesting to know if the 44 U.S. attorneys who perpetrated fraud on the court in the Demjanuk case were punished and if the U.S. Department of 45 Justice still employs any of them. With such grave, egregious and unethical misconduct as was practiced in Demjanuk by 46 U.S. attorneys who swore to uphold the law, there is small wonder why so many Americans have come to have so little 47 faith in this country's judiciary system.

25                   to undermine the foundations of our confederated fabric." (1820)

26                   "...the Federal Judiciary; an irresponsible body (for impeachment is scarcely a scarecrow), working like
27                   gravity by night and by day, gaining a little today and a little tomorrow, and advancing its noiseless step like a
28                   thief, over the field of jurisdiction, until all shall be usurped from the States, and the government of all be
29                   consolidated into one....when all government ... in little as in great things, shall be drawn to Washington as the
30                   center of all power, it will render powerless the checks provided of one government on another and will become
31                   as venal and oppressive as the government from which we separated." (1821)

32                   "The opinion which gives to the judges the right to decide what laws are constitutional and what not, not only 33                   for themselves in their own sphere of action, but for the legislative and executive also in their spheres, would
34                   make the judiciary a despotic branch.

35                   "...judges should be withdrawn from the bench whose erroneous biases are leading to dissolution. It may,
36                   indeed, injure them in fame or fortune; but it saves the Republic..."

37   The U.S. Supreme Court described succinctly how the government most often acts unconstitutionally and illegally, and we 38   should heed and learn from their description below:

39                   "It may be that it...is the obnoxious thing in its mildest and least repulsive form; but illegitimate and
40                   unconstitutional practices get their first footing in that way; namely, by silent approaches and slight deviations
41                   from legal modes of procedure. This can only be obviated by adhering to the rule that constitutional provisions
42                   for the security of person and property should be liberally construed. A close and literal construction deprives
43                   them of half their efficacy, and leads to gradual depreciation of the right, as if it consisted more in sound than
44                   in substance. It is the duty of the courts to be watchful for the constitutional rights of the citizens, and against 45                   any stealthy encroachments thereon. Their motto should be obsta principalis." [Mr. Justice Brewer, 46                   *dissenting, quoting Mr. Justice Bradley in Boyd v. United States, 116 U.S. 616, 29 L.Ed. 746, 6 Sup.Ct.Rep.*
47                   524"

48                   [Hale v. Henkel, 201 U.S. 43 (1906) ]

49   It is therefore the job of the courts to be watchful over our liberties and to act as a check and balance against
50   unconstitutional acts by either the Executive or Legislative branches of government. This is a fiduciary duty they have for 51   the citizens and inhabitants they serve within their jurisdiction. We'll let you be the judge in this section of how well they 52   have fulfilled that duty.

1 Whole books have been written just about judicial conspiracy and tyranny. We have tried to narrow the scope of this
2 section to summarize the picture for you only within the context of the income tax. If you would like to dig deeper into this
3 subject of judicial tyranny, the best book we have found is:

7 6.9.1 Abuse of “Case Law”<sup>280</sup>

8 In any court of law, an understanding of the legal relationship between statutory law and case law (i.e. court decisions) is 9 crucial. The following U.S. Supreme Court case of Consumer Products Safety v. GTE Sylvania, 447 U.S. 102, establishes 10 that the statute takes precedence over the case law backing the statute:

11 “We begin with the familiar canon of statutory construction that the starting point for interpreting a statute is 12 the language of the statute itself. Absent a clearly expressed legislative intention to the contrary, the language
13 must ordinarily be regarded as conclusive.

14 So if and only if there is doubt about the meaning of the statute is there a need to refer to case law to resolve the 15 controversy. This is especially true of the Supreme Law of the Land, which is the Constitution. In actual practice,
16 however, corrupt judges and the federal courts where they occupy the bench commonly subvert this requirement in order to
17 expand federal fiscal and monetary power, and in the process, conspire against the rights of Americans in illegally
18 enforcing a voluntary tax, the Subtitles A through C personal income tax. To give you an example, take the case of Griffith
19 v. C.I.R., 598 F. Supp. 405, where one Charles Griffith attempted to prevent the IRS from illegally seizing his assets
20 without due process in order to collect a $500 penalty that had been assessed against him for allegedly filing a false W-4.
21 As stated in that court decision:

22 “According to plaintiff’s complaint, on September 3, 1982, the Internal Revenue Service (IRS) sent plaintiff a
23 letter claiming that his W-4 did not meet the requirements of the Internal Revenue Code Sec. 3402 and
24 informing him that his employer be directed to disregard [notice the court did not say “ordered” to] the W-4
25 form and withhold monies from his paycheck as if he were single and claiming one (1) withholding allowance.
26 By letter dated September 14, 1982, plaintiff informed the IRS of his reasons for completing the W-4 in alleged 27 illegal manner. However, the IRS notified his employer to proceed withholding as if plaintiff were single...and 28 was assessed a penalty of five hundred dollars ($500) under 26 U.S.C. §6682(a).

29 Note that the court suggests that Griffith completed his W-4 in an “allegedly illegal manner.” How exactly does one
30 complete an IRS Form W-4 in an “illegal manner”? Did Griffith hit the personnel clerk over the head with a hammer, strip
31 the clothes off and then complete his W-4 on her naked body? And if it were completed in an “allegedly illegal manner,” 32 why wasn’t he arrested? It is clear that Griffith’s W-4 did “meet the requirements of Section 3402.” Griffith obviously
33 knew (as you also know) that he was not liable for income taxes, and so probably claimed “exempt” in accordance with 26
34 U.S.C. §3402(n). Note that the court states that the “plaintiff informed the IRS of his reasons for completing the form.” So
35 why didn’t the court state those reasons in its decision, since Section 6682 only applies when such reasons are not
36 “reasonable”? But not only did the court refuse to consider whether Griffith’s reasons were “reasonable,” it refused to even 37 mention them! I wonder why? Who, therefore, decided that Griffith “reasons” were not “reasonable”? An IRS cleaning 38 lady?

39 In finding against Griffith the DISHonorable Judge White wrote:

40 Plaintiff’s claim that the manner of collection of the penalty violates his Fifth Amendment rights is without
41 merit. He has attempted to show that the government cannot prevail in the collection of the penalty because to 42 do so prior to a hearing would deprive him of his Fifth Amendment constitutional rights. Case law dictates
43 otherwise...The power of the government to levy is essential to the self assessment tax system because it
44 encourages voluntary compliance.

45 So the court, in deciding to allow the IRS to seize Griffith’s property without any hearing whatsoever, admits that it does so
46 on the basis of what “case law dictates”—never mind what the statute itself “dictates” or what the Constitution “dictates”,

1 which the judge took an oath “to support and defend”! Section 6682 only allows the penalty if there is no “reasonable
2 basis” for the claim, which the court here refuses to even consider!

3 It should also be pointed out in this case that Griffith represented himself against the government as a pro per. He
4 undoubtedly believed he could do so, since he was convinced (and rightly so) that he had several statutes, the Constitution,
5 and logic all on his side. But he learned (as we all do sooner or later), that these often do not count much in federal court
6 because of the massive corruption and outright tyranny that exists there. Incidentally, did you happen to get the feeling
7 when you read the above, that you were reading right out of Alice in Wonderland?

8 Clearly, Griffith’s argument is not only “not without merit”; it is legally correct. But federal judges can easily dispatch
9 such arguments by labeling them “frivolous” or stating they are “without merit” and not explaining the basis for that
10 determination. This leaves the average pro per litigant, not to mention most attorneys, without any recourse except to shake
11 their head and file a lawsuit for breach of fiduciary duty and corruption against the judge.

12 6.9.2 The Federal Mafia Courts Stole Your Seventh Amendment Right to Trial by Jury!

13 The Federal Mafia Courts stole your Seventh Amendment right to trial by jury. Here is what the Seventh Amendment says
14 about the right of trial by jury:

15 *In Suits at common law, where the value in controversy shall exceed twenty dollars, the right of trial by jury
16 shall be preserved, and no fact tried by a jury, shall be otherwise re-examined in any Court of the United*
17 States, than according to the rules of the common law.
18 [Seventh Amendment]

19 And here is what the U.S. Constitution, Article 3, Section 2, Clause 3 says about the right of trial by jury:

20 “The Trial of all Crimes, except in Cases of Impeachment, shall be by Jury; and such Trial shall be held in the 21 State where the said Crimes shall have been committed; but when not committed within any State, the Trial
22 shall be at such Place or Places as the Congress may by Law have directed.”
23 [Article III, Section 2, Clause 3, U.S. Constitution]

24 Here is what the tyrants in the Fifth Circuit court of federal appeals said about your Seventh Amendment right to jury trial
25 in the case of Mathes v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, 576 F.2d. 70 (1978) in relation to a civil tax trial held in U.S.
26 Tax Court:

27 Taxpayers also assert they were denied their Seventh Amendment right to trial by jury before the Tax Court.
28 The Seventh Amendment preserves the right to jury trial "in suits at common law." Since there was no right
29 of action at common law against a sovereign, enforceable by jury trial or otherwise, there is no constitutional
30 right to a jury trial in a suit against the United States. See 9 C. Wright & A. Miller, *Federal Practice &
31 Procedure* § 2314, at 68-69 (1971). Thus, there is a right to a jury trial in actions against the United States only*
32 if a statute so provides. Congress has not so provided when the taxpayer elects not to pay the assessment and 33 sue for a redetermination in the Tax Court. For a taxpayer to obtain a trial by jury, he must pay the tax
34 allegedly owed and sue for a refund in district court. 28 U.S.C. §§ 2402 and 1346(a)(1). The law is therefore
35 clear that a taxpayer who elects to bring his suit in the Tax Court has no right, statutory or constitutional, to a
36 trial by jury. Phillips v. Commissioner, 283 U.S. 589, 599 n. 9, 51 S.Ct. 608, 75 L.Ed. 1289 (1931); Wickwire v.
37 Reinecke, 275 U.S. 101, 105-106, 48 S.Ct. 43, 72 L.Ed. 184 (1927); Dori v. Commissioner, 507 F.2d. 406, 407
38 (2d Cir. 1974) (holding it "elementary that there is no right to a jury trial in the Tax Court.")
39 [Mathes v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, 576 F.2d. 70 (1978)]

40 Therefore, we only get a trial by jury when litigating against the U.S. government for wrongful taking of taxes if
41 Congress gives its permission by statute! Do you think they will ever do that? Fat chance! The Constitution no
42 longer guarantees a trial by jury if the matter being litigated is taxes and the litigant is suing the federal government. We 43 have the wranglings of corrupt judges like the one above to thank for that. Such abuses directly contradict the U.S.
44 Constitution, which states:

45 Article 1, Section 9, Clause 8: “No Title of Nobility shall be granted by the United States: And no Person
46 holding any Office of Profit or Trust under them, shall, without the Consent of the Congress, accept of any 47 present, Emolument, Office, or Title, of any kind whatever, from any King, Prince or foreign State.”

48 In this case, the Title of Nobility is “Sovereign”! Here’s what the definition of Nobility is, right from Black’s Law
49 Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1047:

1                   "In English law, a division of the people, comprehending dukes, marquises, earls, viscounts, and barons. These
2 had anciently duties annexed to their respective honors. They are created either by writ, i.e., by royal
3 summons to attend the house of peers, or by letters patent, i.e., by royal grant of any dignity and degree of 4 peerage; and they enjoy many privileges exclusive of their senatorial capacity. Since 1963 no new hereditary 5 ennoblements have been created."
6 [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1047]

7 In the above case, the "royal decree" creating the "Title of Nobility" is a judgment by the courts, and the "exclusive
8 privilege" granted to the government (by itself, which by the way is a conflict of interest) is that of:

- 9 1. Not being directly accountable to a jury or the people it is elected to represent like everyone else for its wrongdoing
- 10 2. Not being able to be sued by the real sovereigns (the people) without its own consent.

11                   "While sovereign powers are delegated to ... the government, sovereignty itself remains with the people."
12 [Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U.S. 356, page 370]

13 Hypocrisy and lawlessness! With the above startling realizations in mind, do you think it is EVER possible to guarantee a
14 fair trial or a balance of power if you are litigating against the IRS or the federal government in their own federal court?
15 Absolute power corrupts absolutely, and there is no better example of that philosophy in action than in the federal courts.
16 The deck in federal court is obviously stacked, which explains why so many irrational and unconstitutional rulings occur in 17 the context of income tax litigation in the federal courts. Another thing that this section ought to convince you of is that it
18 is more productive in a federal court to go after the individual government officials involved for corruption, fraud, and
19 extortion under the color of office than it is to go after the government. If they violate the law, they can be held personally
20 liable, and because you are not suing a sovereign, the United States Government, you can be assured your right to a Trial
21 by Jury.

22 Do you STILL think we live in a free country? Our government is no different than having a monarch with absolute power
23 to do whatever it wants with sovereign immunity from prosecution for wrongdoing granted by our corrupt federal courts!

24 6.9.3    You Cannot Obtain Declaratory Judgments in Federal Income Tax Trials Held in Federal Courts

25 Your wonderful Congress legislated away your right to obtain a Declaratory judgment in a federal income tax trial. A
26 declaratory judgment is one where there are no disputes over fact and the only relief sought is a declaration of status or
27 rights of the plaintiff under law. No jury trial occurs and the court (judge) makes the declaration of status or right by 28 motion and without a trial. An example might be a declaration of your status by the court as a nonresident alien, a person
29 not liable for federal income tax, etc.

30 Congress knows that people don't like to pay taxes and that they will be likely to litigate to protect their Constitutional
31 rights, so they put a statutory roadblock in front of patriots who use Constitutional rights to avoid paying taxes and who 32 want to litigate to get a declaratory judgment identifying them as persons not liable for income taxes. This roadblock
33 guarantees that those who don't know what they are doing will lose in federal court, especially in cases where issues of 34 status as a nonresident alien or personal liability for tax are asserted. That roadblock is 28 U.S.C. §2201 as follows, and it
35 prevents federal courts from declaring the rights or status of a plaintiff to remedy a wrong related to taxes or illegal taking 36 of taxes by the federal government in a federal court:

37                   United States Code
38                   TITLE 28 - JUDICIARY AND JUDICIAL PROCEDURE
39                   PART VI - PARTICULAR PROCEEDINGS
40                   CHAPTER 151 - DECLARATORY JUDGMENTS
41                   Sec. 2201. Creation of remedy

42                   *(a) In a case of actual controversy within its jurisdiction, except with respect to Federal
43 taxes other than actions brought under section 7428 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, a proceeding*
44 under section 505 or 1146 of title 11, or in any civil action involving an antidumping or countervailing duty
45 proceeding regarding a class or kind of merchandise of a free trade area country (as defined in section 46 516A(f)(10) of the Tariff Act of 1930), as determined by the administering authority, any court of the United
47 States, upon the filing of an appropriate pleading, may declare the rights and other legal relations of any
48 interested party seeking such declaration, whether or not further relief is or could be sought. Any such 49 declaration shall have the force and effect of a final judgment or decree and shall be reviewable as such.

(b) For limitations on actions brought with respect to drug patents see section 505 or 512 of the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act.

What this means is that a federal court can't issue a declaratory judgment relating to federal taxes or declare your rights or status (e.g. the Bill of Rights, and the first ten Amendments to the U.S. Constitution) or the status of its own jurisdiction to hear your case with respect to federal income taxes. So in other words, declaratory judgments based on lack of jurisdiction or based on citizenship or assertion of constitutional rights cannot be decided in federal court solely by a judge! Such cases must be heard in state court or a common law court!

When you think about this statute, it actually makes sense. The statute doesn't allow a federal judge to solely decide rights or jurisdiction or citizenship status on a federal income issue because it would present a conflict of interest that would not serve the interests of justice and would violate 28 U.S.C. 455. Why? Because the judge's paycheck comes from the matter he is deciding on! Do you think he is going to rule in favor of the Citizen by saying he doesn't have to pay income taxes? The Congress therefore required an outside entity, such as a state court, to decide on issues of status. Don't be discouraged by the above, however. There is a way around this statutory trap. Below is the way around the roadblock:

While income tax arguments are barred under this rule - actions proving lack of citizenship, domicile, and residence are specifically allowed. The issue is not income tax but jurisdiction over the person. Lack of jurisdiction is proved by FRCP Rule 44 and 44.1 - You go to the proper jurisdiction to resolve the matter by taking the following steps:

1. Acquire domicile and residence in a common law jurisdiction.
2. File notice in the clerk's office in state and federal courts.
3. Argue this in Federal court using as evidence the filings filed at common law, state court and federal courts.
4. Appeal at common law under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 60 last line "by independent action".

You are then not arguing jurisdiction in front of that court - you are using evidence to prove that jurisdiction already exists in another court. Read 28 U.S.C. §2201 and it states that it must be argued in the proper manner - and that is by not letting the US court decide that issue - go to common law and plead condition precedent under FRCP rule 8.(The citizenship was already decided before the action began).

This argument is in agreement with all of the cites herein and the argument that dual citizenship can exist. State law tells you the procedure for noticing the state courts that you have acquired a new residence and domicile.

6.9.4 The Changing Definition of "Direct, Indirect, and Excise Taxes"

"Dishonest scales are an abomination to the Lord, but a just weight is His delight."
[Prov. 11:1, Bible, NKJV]

"Judicial verbicide is calculated to convert the Constitution into a worthless scrap of paper and to replace our government of laws with a judicial oligarchy."
[Senator Sam Ervin, during Watergate hearing]

"By mercy and truth iniquity is purged: and by the fear of the LORD men depart from evil."
[Prov. 16:6, Bible, NKJV]

"Thus says the Lord: 'Execute judgment in the morning; and deliver him who is plundered illegally by the IRS out of the hand of the oppressor, lest my fury go forth like fire and burn so that no one can quench it, because of the evil of your doings.'
[Jeremiah 21:12, Bible, NKJV]

The purpose of this section is to provide evidence to support the conclusion that there is a conspiracy of massive proportions by the federal judiciary to defend and uphold federal income taxes. We hinted at the existence of this conspiracy in section 5.6.11.9 entitled "Why Hasn't the 861 Issue Been Challenged in Court Already?". Now we will prove the existence of this conspiracy by researching actual cases and by reading from judgments of the federal courts at various levels over the years.

Because the judiciary is authorized by the Constitution to "legislate", federal judges and the legal profession have crafted a different approach to support and expand the operation of the federal income tax. It's called "redefining the meaning of words". Over time, they have redefined such words as "direct tax", "excise tax", and "indirect tax" to expand the

1 applicability of federal taxes and, by implication, the jurisdiction of the federal government to tax its citizens. Our own
2 ignorance of the concept of “stare decisis”, also called “precedent”, and our lack of attentiveness to their transgressions
3 through the political process has allowed them to get away with this devious fraud. We will therefore take a look at how
4 the definitions of these terms have evolved and have been “optimized” over the years by federal judges as a way to
5 maximize illegal government revenues from income taxes. This notion of changing the definition of words is not new.
6 Instead, it is just another devious trick that covetous lawyers use to enslave us by hiding and obfuscating the truth over
7 time. Instead of using language as a way to empower and free people and respect their liberties, lawyers abuse words as a
8 way to trick, enslave, confuse, and control people. We talked about this devious approach in section 2.11.3, entitled “How 9 to Teach Your Child About Politics”, when we said:

10 “When your child has matured sufficiently to understand how the judicial system works, set a bedtime for him
11 and then send him to bed an hour early. When he tearfully accuses you of breaking the rules, explain that you
12 made the rules and you can interpret them in any way that seems appropriate to you, according to changing
13 conditions. This will prepare him for the Supreme Court's concept of the U.S. Constitution as a "living 14 document.”

15 [...]

16 This brings me to the most important child-rearing technique of all: lying. Lie to your child constantly. Teach
17 him that words mean nothing - or rather that the meanings of words are continually 'evolving', and may be 18 tomorrow the opposite of what they are today.

19 Some readers may object that this is a poor way to raise a child. A few may even call it child abuse. But that's 20 the whole point: Child abuse is the best preparation for adult life under our form of GOVERNMENT.”

21 If the above quote doesn't make the judicial conspiracy, I don't know what does! The below humorous anecdote carries 22 this violation of due process to its extreme, and isn't too far from the truth!:

23 NEW RULES FOR LAW

24 SMUCKWAP NEWSSERVICE, Washington: The Supreme Court ruled today that judges can do whatever the
25 hell they want. In a landmark case, Black-Robed Lawyers vs. Everyone Else, the justices handed down their
26 inestimable judgment that since lawyers in general and judges in particular are such fine examples of humanity,
27 not to mention smart enough to get through law school, judges can do whatever they please.

28 “The Rule of Law has ended,” proclaimed Supreme Court Justice Arrogant B. Astart, “and the Rule of Judges
29 begins!”

30 Turning their shiny black backs on the rest of America, the justices decided to toss out two hundred years of
31 Constitutional law and indeed, to rid themselves completely of having to heed the Constitution.

32 “The law is what we say it is,” said Justice Whiney I. Diot. “It has been this way for some time now, but with
33 Black-Robed Lawyers vs. Everyone Else, we are coming out of our judicial closet. No more arguments will be
34 allowed from anyone, and we don't want to hear any more of your complaining about your rights. In fact, any
35 mention of so-called rights will guarantee you 100 years, hard labor.”

36 Justice K. Rupt Assin concurred in his opinion that “judicial oligarchy has now fully come into its place in 37 American history and will be fully enforced by an iron rule of law, and remember, law is whatever we say it is.”

38 The Center for People Who Want to Leave This Country Because It Is Beginning to Look Too Much Like Nazi
39 Germany analyzed the justices' decision.

40 “Judges now legally can put anyone in prison for any reason they want, for as long as they want,” states the
41 analysis. “Judges can also put jurors in prison for 'obstructing justice' and for anything else, including not
42 handing the judge whatever money they may have on them at the time. Jurors who don't behave exactly as the
43 judge desired have been persecuted in the past, but “now they can receive prison terms much longer than their

45 The report also mentioned the justices' decision that anyone who says anything disagreeable in their courtroom
46 can be immediately arrested and jailed, their property confiscated, and their spouses and children taken as

48 The concept of separation of powers was addressed in the Center's report on the decision.

"There is no separation of powers," it reads, "when not only all the justices are lawyers, so are all Congressmen and the President, his wife, his cabinet, the entire Department of Justice, most lobbyists and almost everyone else in Washington, D.C."

When questioned about what effect the decision would have on all Americans, the spokesman for the Center said, "I can't be certain. I suspect that emigration rather than immigration will become a major concern. Those Americans who are lawyers will be fine, for the most part. No one will ever again show up for jury duty. But if we thought we had an overcrowded prison problem before, we're in for a *major* shock!"

Another way the federal judiciary has conspired with Congress to usurp such arbitrary and unconstitutional authority over time has been for Congress to write the laws in a deliberately vague way in order to leave a lot of undue discretion to the courts to interpret and misapply and broaden the applicability of these laws. Here are the two main ways this has deliberately been done in the case of the tax codes:

1. Title 26 of the U.S. Codes, which are written by Congress, don't clearly define "income." Does it mean "profit"? Does it mean "wage"? What about "sources" of income? If it means profit, then we must deduct from our wages the cost of sustaining our life, which includes food, clothing, housing, insurance, etc., since we must view ourselves as producers of labor for sale, which is not free but involves a cost to sustain and maintain the ability to provide that labor.
2. The purpose of the laws is to clearly define or to limit the authority of the government and to define precisely and unambiguously which actions are criminal. Congress has written the tax codes in such a way that they do not satisfy this requirement, but instead expand and enlarge the authority of the federal government to tax in a way that can't be completely defined or even understood by the common man. They have done this by deliberately monkeying with the definition of the word "includes" found in 26 U.S.C. §7701(c). This word in normal usage is a term of limitation, but as we showed in section 3.12.1.8, Congress has used it as a term of enlargement, as if to say:

"The Internal Revenue Code laws aren't a limiting factor and do not bound or define the authority of Congress to tax. Instead, these laws mean whatever the judge says they mean at the time, which can arbitrarily change over time without explanation or justification. Our powers to tax are unlimited and beyond your ability to comprehend or understand and beyond our obligation to explain to you. We don't care if this violates the Fifth, Sixth, and Tenth Amendments and your due process rights. Always remember that WE'RE the government and WE are in complete control and the ONLY ones who are sovereign or empowered or who know what the laws that we write really say! We don't work for you, YOU are OUR financial slaves and YOU will do exactly and only what you are told to do by our chief priests in the federal courts, who are the only ones qualified to interpret the law, who we appoint, and who can only hold office as long as they do exactly what we tell them to do by keeping tax dollars they extort from you under duress flowing into our Treasury.

And by the way, your lawyer can't help you in challenging our sovereign authority to tax because we license him to practice law both in this state and in this court and if he in any way questions or threatens our authority to tax or our jurisdiction, we will simply pull his license and blacklist him with the IRS, and he will therefore cease to be able to earn a living and be subject to the same kind of financial terrorism, harassment, and intimidation that you are undergoing. You can't win this war, my friend, because our power is absolute and we will squash you like a bug if you don't 'voluntarily comply'! Nevertheless, you can do whatever you want because we live in a 'free' country and you are a free man, and we are here to benevolently protect that freedom. The minute you start complaining about losing that freedom, then we'll turn your 'rights' into government 'privileges' and charge you an additional tax to have these privileges upheld and respected in our courts."

You will note that a remedy is suggested for this kind of government arrogance, legal abuse, and terrorism in section 2.5, of the Sovereignty Forms and Instructions Manual, Form #10.005 when we talk about "What would it take for the IRS and the US Congress to 'come clean'" by saying that Congress needs to reform their definition of the word "includes", which even they don't use in a consistent fashion in the case of 26 U.S.C. §61, which says in part:

(a) General definition - ... gross income means all income from whatever source derived, including (but not limited to) the following items:

Isn't that interesting? If 26 U.S.C. §7701 (c) indeed says the word "includes" is not a limiting term, then why do the shyster lawyers in Congress and the IRS need to use the phrase "including (but not limited to)"? I'll tell you why, because they don't want you to understand what the law really means or know what you are expected to do, but would rather see you terrorized into submission to whatever it is their arbitrary whims dictate. This legal terrorism and the fear it generates is foisted upon us with our own extorted tax dollars by lawyers in the Department of (In)Justice and the courts in the

1 process of illegally enforcing (no Delegation of Authority orders to the DOJ to support litigation of voluntary income taxes)
2 laws that are so vague that they violate the “void for vagueness” criteria we described in section 5.12.3, entitled “Why the
3 ‘Void for Vagueness Doctrine’ Should be Invoked By The Courts to Render the Internal Revenue Code Unconstitutional in
4 Total”. This has to be one of the biggest frauds and scams in history and the tyranny won’t end until We The People
5 remedy this most basic violation of our right to due process guaranteed by the Fifth and Sixth Amendments. We must do
6 this first at the ballot box, then the jury box, and finally with the cartridge box (guns) if need be to coerce the government to 7 respect our Constitutional rights!

8 6.9.4.1 Definition of terms and legal framework

9 Recall from Chapters 3 and 5 that we spent a lot of time talking about “direct taxes” and “excise taxes” and the relationship
10 between the two. Another synonym for an excise tax is “privilege tax”. In particular, we compared and contrasted these 11 two types of taxes in section 5.1.2, which we will not repeat here. Understanding the relationship between these two types
12 of taxes is foundational to understanding why income taxes are unconstitutional as they are implemented by the IRS, and 13 why they are upheld by the federal district/circuit courts in some cases. We also talked about the five types of 14 constitutional taxes in section 5.1

15 Much of the deliberately-induced confusion created in the courts results from the rather basic misunderstanding in most 16 people’s minds over the term “United States”. We talked this issue in sections 4.7 entitled “The Three ‘United States’” and
17 section 3.12.1.23 entitled “‘United States’ (in 26 U.S.C. §7701)”. You have to remember that the judicial conspiracy to 18 protect the income tax can only be upheld and spread if the courts avoid discussing the true definition of this term within
19 the meaning of 26 Title U.S.C. and the nature of the limited application of the income tax to federal/U.S.** (federal zone)
20 citizens). Within the I.R.C, the term “United States**” actually means the “federal zone”, which includes the District of 21 Columbia and the federal territories and possessions within the contiguous 50 union states, but not the 50 sovereign states
22 themselves. The courts, however, don’t want your average sovereign natural born Citizen of the 50 union states knowing
23 that the federal income tax only applies within the federal zone to people who claim to be U.S.** citizens, so they have 24 done things in their rulings such as:

- 25 1. Not mention or confuse the U.S. citizenship or residency status of the defendant. The most famous case of this was the 26 case of Brushaber v. Union Pacific Railroad Co., 240 U.S. 1 (1916), in which Frank Brushaber claimed to be a
27 Sovereign naturalized citizen of the New York Republic (state) and NOT a U.S./federal citizen. The government tried
28 to confuse his status as a nonresident alien for tax purposes by claiming that he was a French immigrant who never 29 obtained state citizenship.
- 30 2. Avoid discussing jurisdictional issues. For instance, ignoring claims by a Citizen that the U.S. government lacks 31 jurisdiction to prosecute a Citizen for not paying income taxes.
- 32 3. Make cases won by the Citizen rather than the IRS unpublished so other Citizens don’t find out the most effective 33 tactics to litigate the income tax issues.

34 In this section, we will trace several U.S. supreme and appellate court cases to show that primarily the federal appellate and
35 district the courts have established a new and changing definition for these terms that conflicts both with the original
36 definition of the terms used by the founding fathers, the rulings of the Supreme Court, and with the modern-day definition
37 that the “common man” understands of these terms. We will show how they have done this on their own accord and 38 without any authority derived from the Constitution, congress, the rulings of the supreme Court, or the law itself. We will 39 show that the definitions of the terms “direct” and “excise” taxes over time has been slowly modified by the courts in such
40 a way that revenues from income taxes for the federal government have not only been increased, but MAXIMIZED. We 41 will show that this approach violates the important concept of “stare decisis” that is foundational to our republic and our
42 whole legal system. We will show that this behavior by the courts is consistent with their alleged role as part of the 43 “federal mafia”, whose mission is to expand the plunder and extortion of the property of private citizens in disregard of the 44 U.S. Constitution. Simply by changing the definitions and interpretation of these two terms in their judgments, the federal 45 courts have, in effect, “legislated” by setting new precedents, to uphold and expand the federal income tax system.

46 So let’s start with a definition of the terms “stare decisis” and “precedent”:

47 STARE DECISIS: Lat: to abide by, or adhere to, decided cases. Policy of courts to stand by precedent and*
48 *not to disturb settled point. Neff v. George, 364 Ill. 306, 4 N.E.2d. 388, 390, 391. Doctrine that, when court*
49 has once laid down a principle of law as applicable to a certain state of facts, it will adhere to that principle,
50 and apply it to all future cases, where facts are substantially the same; regardless of whether the parties and
51 *property are the same. Horne v. Moody, Tex.Civ.App., 146 S.W.2d. 505, 509, 510. Under doctrine a deliberate*

1 or solemn decision of court made after argument on question of law fairly arising in the case, and necessary to
 2 its determination, is an authority, or binding precedent in the same court, or in other courts of equal or lower
 3 rank in subsequent cases where the very point is again in controversy. State v. Mellenberger, 163 Or. 233, 95
 4 P.2d. 709, 719, 720. Doctrine is one of policy, grounded on theory that security and certainty require that
 5 accepted and established legal principle, under which rights may accrue, be recognized and followed, though
 6 later found to be not legally sound, but whether previous holding of court shall be adhered to, modified, or
 7 overruled is within court's discretion under circumstances of case before it. Otter Tail Power Co. v. Von Bank,
 8 72 N.D. 497, 8 N.W.2d. 599, 607. Under doctrine, when point of law has been settled by decision, it forms
 9 precedent which is not afterwards to be departed from, and, while it should ordinarily be strictly adhered to,
 10 there are occasions when departure is rendered necessary to vindicate plain, obvious principles of law and
 11 remedy continued injustice. The doctrine is not ordinarily departed from where decision is of long-standing
 12 and rights have been acquired under it, unless considerations of public policy demand it. Colonial Trust Co. v.
 13 Flanagan, 344 Pa. 556, 25 A.2d. 728, 729. The doctrine is limited to actual determinations in respect to 14 litigated and necessarily decided questions, and is not applicable to dicta or obiter dicta. See also Precedent;
 15 Res (Res judicata)
 16 [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1406]

17
 18 PRECEDENT: An adjudged case or decision of a court, considered as furnishing an example or authority for 19 an identical or similar case afterwards arising or a similar question of law. Courts attempt to decide cases on 20 the basis of principles established in prior cases. Prior cases which are close in facts or legal principles to the 21 case under consideration are called precedents. A rule of law established for the first time by a court for a
 22 particular type of case and thereafter referred to in deciding similar cases. See also Stare decisis.

23 A course of conduct once followed which may serve as a guide for future conduct. See Custom and usage;
 24 Habit.
 25 [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1176]

26 From these definitions, we can see that stare decisis and precedent are very important aspects of law that constrain what 27 the federal courts can do. Together, they establish that cases must follow precedents unless there is a compelling reason not
 28 to, and that the reasons for overruling past precedents ought to be clearly explained so that the lower courts will understand
 29 how to apply the new paradigm.

30 Now let's move to the words themselves. We'll start off by examining the definition of "excise tax" found in Merriam
 31 Webster's Dictionary of Law<sup>281</sup>:

32 ['ek-'sɪz, -'sɪs]
 33 1: a tax levied on the manufacture, sale, or consumption of a commodity
 34 (compare income tax, property tax)
 35 2: any of various taxes on privileges often assessed in the form of a license or other fee
 36 (see also Article I of the Constitution)
 37 (compare direct tax)
 38
 39 [emphasis added]

40 Similarly, Barron's Law dictionary defines "excise" as follows:

41 "Broadly, "any kind of tax which is not directly on property or the rents or incomes from real estate." 4A. 2d
 42 861, 862. "An inland impost upon articles of manufacture or sale and also upon licenses to pursue certain
 43 trades, or to deal in certain commodities." 184 U.S. 608, 617. It is imposed directly and without assessment
 44 and is measured by amount of business done and other means. 161 So. 735, 738. See tax [EXCISE TAX]<sup>282</sup>
 45 "a federal tax imposed upon the purchase of certain items. See excise."

46 Excise taxes are commonly referred to as "indirect" taxes within the meaning of the U.S. Constitution (see section 5.1 for 47 further details). From the preceding discussion, it ought to be clear that excise taxes apply to businesses involved in trade
 48 and the amount of tax is to be determined by any measure related to activity that the legislature determines. For instance,
 49 the (fraudulently ratified) 16th Amendment allows excise taxes to be measured by income, but does NOT allow for direct

1 taxes without apportionment as ruled in the case of Stanton v. Baltic Mining (240 U.S. 103), 1916. In particular, the court
2 said in that case that the 16th Amendment merely:

3 "...prohibited the ... power of income taxation possessed by Congress from the beginning from being taken out
4 of the category of indirect taxation to which it inherently belonged..."

5 A good definition of "excise taxes" is found in the Supreme Court case of Flint v. Stone Tracy Co., 220 U.S. 107 (1911):

6 "Excises are taxes laid upon the manufacture, sale or consumption of commodities within the country, upon
7 licenses to pursue certain occupations and upon corporate privileges; the requirement to pay such taxes
8 involves the exercise of the privilege and if business is not done in the manner described no tax is payable...it is 9 the privilege which is the subject of the tax and not the mere buying, selling or handling of goods."
10 [Flint v. Stone Tracy Co., 220 U.S. 107 (1911)]

11 The Supreme Court case of Bromley v. McCaughn, 280 U.S. 124 (1929) provides another good definition of the operation
12 of "excise taxes":

13 "While taxes levied upon or collected from persons because of their general ownership of property may be
14 taken to be direct, Pollock v. Farmers' Loan & Trust Co., 157 U.S. 429, 15 S.Ct. 673; Id., 158 U.S. 601, 15
15 S.Ct. 912, this court has consistently held, almost from the foundation of the government, that a tax imposed
16 upon a particular use of property or the exercise of a single power over property incidental to ownership, is an
17 excise which need not be apportioned, and it is enough for present purposes that this tax is of the latter class.
18 Hylton v. United States, supra; cf. Veazie Bank v. Fenno, 8 Wall. 533; Thomas v. United States, 192 U.S. 363,
19 370, 24 S.Ct. 305; Billings v. United States, 232 U.S. 261, 34 S.Ct. 421; Nicol v. Ames, supra; Patton v. Brady,
20 184 U.S. 608, 22 S.Ct. 493; McCray v. United States, 195 U.S. 27, 24 S.Ct. 769, 1 Ann. Cas. 561; Scholey v.
21 Rew, 23 Wall. 331; Knowlton v. Moore, supra. See, also, Flint v. Stone Tracy Co., 220 U.S. 107, 31 S.Ct. 342,
22 Ann. Cas. 1912B, 1312; Spreckels Sugar Refining Co. v. McClain, 192 U.S. 397, 24 S.Ct. 376; Stratton's
23 Independence v. Howbert, 231 U.S. 399, 34 S.Ct. 136; Doyle v. Mitchell Brothers Co., 247 U.S. 179, 183, 38
24 S.Ct. 467; Stanton v. Baltic Mining Co., 240 U.S. 103, 114, 36 S.Ct. 278.

25 It is a tax laid only upon the exercise of a single one of those powers incidental to ownership, the power to give
26 the property owned to another. Under this statute all the other rights and powers which collectively constitute 27 [280 U.S. 124, 137] property or ownership may be fully enjoyed free of the tax. So far as the constitutional
28 power to tax is concerned, it would be difficult to state any intelligible distinction, founded either in reason or
29 upon practical considerations of weight, between a tax upon the exercise of the power to give property inter
30 vivos and the disposition of it by legacy, upheld in Knowlton v. Moore, supra, the succession tax in Scholey v.
31 Rew, supra, the tax upon the manufacture and sale of colored oleomargarine in McCray v. United States, supra,
32 the tax upon sales of grain upon an exchange in Nicol v. Ames, supra, the tax upon sales of shares of stock in 33 Thomas v. United States, supra, the tax upon the use of foreign built yachts in Billings v. United States, supra,
34 the tax upon the use of carriages in Hylton v. United States, supra; compare Veazie Bank v. Fenno, supra, 545
35 of 8 Wall.; Thomas v. United States, supra, 370 of 192 U. S., 24 S.Ct. 305.

36 It is true that in each of these cases the tax was imposed upon the exercise of one of the numerous rights of 37 property, but each is clearly distinguishable from a tax which falls upon the owner merely because he is owner,
38 regardless of the use of disposition made of his property. See Billings v. United States, supra; cf. Pierce v.
39 United States, 232 U.S. 290, 34 S.Ct. 427. The persistence of this distinction and the justification for it rest upon
40 the historic fact that taxes of this type were not understood to be direct taxes when the Constitution was adopted
41 and, as well, upon the reluctance of this court to enlarge by construction, limitations upon the sovereign power
42 of taxation by article 1, 8, so vital to the maintenance of the national government. Nicol v. Ames, supra, 514,
43 515 of 173 U. S., 19, S.Ct. 522."

44 Merriam Webster's Dictionary of Law defines "direct tax" as follows<sup>283</sup>:

45 "a tax imposed on a taxpayer himself or herself or on his or her property
46 (compare excise)"

47 The Supreme Court did a good job describing "direct taxes" in the case of Veazie Bank v. Fenno, 75 U.S. 533 (1869):

48 "This review shows that personal property, contracts, occupations, and the like, have never been regarded by
49 Congress as proper subjects of direct tax.

1 It may be rightly affirmed, therefore, that in the practical construction of the Constitution by Congress, direct
2 taxes have been limited to taxes on land and appurtenances, and taxes on polls, or capitation taxes."

3 We believe that these are good definitions that are consistent with the wishes of the founding fathers.

4 6.9.4.2 The Early Supreme Court View of Direct vs. Indirect/Excise Taxes Prior to Passage of the 16th 5 Amendment 1913

6 With the legal definitions complete, let's examine the historical background for the subject of direct and indirect/excise
7 taxes by the Supreme Court prior to the (fraudulent) passage of the 16th Amendment. We'll start off with the case of 8 Pacific Ins. Co. v. Soule, 74 U.S. 433 (1868), which is a very good reference on the definition of "direct taxes" and "indirect 9 taxes":

10 The ordinary test of the difference between direct and indirect taxes, is whether the tax falls ultimately on the
11 tax-payer, or whether, through the tax-payer, it falls ultimately on the consumer. If it falls ultimately on the 12 tax-payer, then it is direct in its nature, as in the case of poll taxes and land taxes. If, on the contrary, it falls
13 ultimately on the consumer, then it is an indirect tax.

14 Such is the test, as laid down by all writers on the subject. Adam Smith, who was the great and universally
15 received authority on political economy, in the day when the Federal Constitution was framed, sets forth a tax
16 on a person's revenue to be a direct tax. 5 Mill,6 Say,7 J. R. McCulloch,8 Lieber,9 among political economists,
17 do the same in specific [74 U.S. 433, 438] language. Mr. Justice Bouvier, in his learned Law Dictionary,
18 defines a capitation tax, 'A poll tax; an imposition which is yearly laid on each person according to his estate
19 and ability.'

20 Indeed, it is obvious that an income tax, levied on the profits of any business, does not fall ultimately on the
21 consumer or patron of that business, in any other sense than that in which a poll tax or land tax may be said
22 ultimately to fall, or be charged over by the payer of those taxes upon the persons with whom and for whom
23 they do business, or to whom they rent their lands. The refinement which would argue otherwise, abolishes the 24 whole distinction, and under it all taxes may be regarded as direct or indirect, at pleasure.

25 But, if the distinction is recognized (and it must be, for the Constitution makes it), then it follows, that an
26 income tax is, and always heretofore has been, regarded as being a direct tax, as much so as a poll tax or as 27 a land tax. If it be a direct tax, then the Constitution is imperative that it shall be apportioned.

28 If it be argued that an income tax cannot be apportioned, then, it cannot be levied; for only such direct taxes
29 can be levied as can be apportioned.

30 But an income tax can be apportioned as easily as any other direct tax; first, by determining the amount to be
31 raised from incomes throughout the United States, and then by ascertaining the proportion to be paid by the 32 people of each State. An income tax, in the matter of its apportionment, is not embarrassed by any other 33 difficulties than those which grow out of apportionment, in the admitted cases of poll taxes and land taxes."

34 According to the Supreme Court, there can be only these type types of taxes: direct or indirect/excises:

35 "And although there may have been from time to time intimations that there might be some tax which was not a
36 direct tax nor included under the words "duties, imposts and excises," such a tax has yet remained 37 undiscovered, notwithstanding the stress of particular circumstances has invited thorough investigation into 38 sources of revenue."
39 [Pollock v. Farmers' Loan & Trust Co., 157 U.S. 429, 158 U.S. 601 (1895), 557, Thomas v. United States
40 (1903) 192 u.s. 363, 370]

41 6.9.4.3 Common Manifestations of the Judicial Conspiracy

42 This section summarizes the common elements of the judicial conspiracy to uphold the federal income tax. Below are a list
43 of some of the more common tactics used by the courts following the passage of the 16th Amendment to prejudice any
44 litigation that would undermine the income tax. These are things that you should be watching vigilantly for and loudly
45 blowing the whistle when you see them:

46 1. Political moves:

47 1.1. Congress making federal judgeships into political appointees instead of elected offices. This causes the judges to 48 be more partial toward their political benefactors than they are in favor of citizens or the law.

- 1.2. Congress or presidents appointing judges who will participate actively in the judicial conspiracy to uphold the federal income tax.
- 1.3. Congress or presidents appointing judges who aren't confrontational (YES men) and who are unlikely to make any rulings that would have big political implications, like overthrowing illegal and fraudulent income taxes.

2. Counsel:

- 2.1. Refusing to allow the counsel of the Citizen to represent him in the court because of his views about taxes, but at the same time, pretending like it is due to his lack of a license to practice law in a particular federal court or jurisdiction.
- 2.2. Only granting pro-tem (temporary) judgeships (during the absence of the normal judge, during vacation, for instance) to lawyers who are in favor of the income tax, so that they have more authority and leverage against lawyers who are against in any case.

3. Jury selection:

- 3.1. Including a "mole" or planted individual (perhaps a lawyer who is a tax advocate) on the jury who is outspoken and biased against the Citizen and biased in favor of income taxes. This most often happens when the government or judge "slips" new candidates of the government's choosing into the courtroom at the last minute during jury selection or voir dire. This is what happened to Dr. Phil Roberts failure to file case, for instance, and it biased his case and led to a unfair criminal prosecution. Visit our website if you like, to learn about this despicable miscarriage of justice that happened in his case.
- 3.2. When it comes time to draw names out of a box to select jurists, the box will be populated (rigged) outside the courtroom by the government and the judge will not allow either the defense or prosecution to examine the contents of the box prior to drawing names. For all they know, the unbiased or better-informed jurists or the ones who have been convicted of tax crimes, are removed from the box. Dr. Phil Robert's attorney, Oscar Stilley, thinks this is what happened in Dr. Phil Robert's case.
- 3.3. Not allowing the counsel (threatening with contempt) of the Citizen who is contesting the taxes to interview or question the prospective jurors or the government's lawyers. Cross-examination allows biases to be uncovered. This is what happed in Dr. Phil Robert's case.
- 3.4. Asking the prospective jurists to reveal their social security number prior to jury selection and investigating their tax payment history. Then, only choosing jurists who have a history of paying taxes and who would be more likely to get indignant about people who either don't file or don't pay income taxes, even if they aren't obligated to. Having the jurists social security numbers also affords the IRS an opportunity to harass and audit them if they don't rule in the government's favor.

4. During Trial:

- 4.1. Hiding the nature of the citizenship and residency of the accused. Remember that according to Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 (1901), citizens of the District of Columbia or the Federal Zone have no constitutional rights. The court won't make it clear what the citizenship and residency of the accused is so that they can make it appear that all citizens are liable to pay income taxes on all income. Go back to section 4.11 for a clarification of citizenship issues
- 4.2. Fining or punishing litigants who raise issues about which the court doesn't want to address, such as:
  - 4.2.1. Fraudulent ratification of the 16th Amendment ($5,000 fine currently in some federal courts for filing claims regarding this issue).
  - 4.2.2. Fifth Amendment issues related to taxes (putting litigants in jail for failure to file).
  - 4.2.3. Government conspiracy claims related to taxation filed by citizens.
  - 4.2.4. Claiming a case deals with frivolous issues when in fact it doesn't and then forcing the litigant to pay the attorney fees of the government to defend against this.
  - 4.2.5. Assessing the fines or fees without a due process hearing, which violates the Fifth and 14th Amendments.
- 4.3. Judges granting the IRS' frequent motion in most tax cases to dismiss a valid filing by a tax protester. This has the effect of censoring the litigant and violating his First Amendment rights.
- 4.4. Not allowing (threatening with contempt) the Citizen or his counsel to discuss or reveal the law regarding income taxes. Instead, trying to convince them that they must follow the judge's orders and interpretation of the law, rather than revealing the actual law and letting the jurists decide both the facts and the law for themselves. This gives the judge far more power than he should have.
- 4.5. Holding pro per litigants to the same standards as attorneys, which is illegal.
- 4.6. Delaying the judgment for controversial issues. For instance, in the case of William T. Conklin vs. IRS, case no. 89 N 1514 in the Tenth Circuit, a famous tax protester sued the government because he thought his fifth amendment rights were being violated by being compelled to file and sign a tax return under penalty of perjury and thereby be a witness against himself. The judge (Judge Nottingham) took SEVEN YEARS to reach a decision, because he had such a difficult time reconciling the constitutional issues involved! He was probably hoping he could put it off so he would retire first! The judge deviously chose to censor this judgment by making it unpublished so the truth wouldn't leak out. Nevertheless, the judge also sanctioned Mr. Conklin $6,000 by making him pay the IRS' legal fees, and without the ability to even litigate or challenge the fees. This he may have done to discourage him from litigating further.

5. After trial:

5.1. Making cases dealing with controversial aspects of federal income taxes "unpublished". This means that after there is a judgment on a controversial tax case that exposes fraud or wrongdoing of the government, the federal judge ensures that the findings aren't available in most federal case databases or indexes and copies can only be obtained by writing directly to the clerk of the specific court where the case was heard, and the reproduction is costly and long delays in obtaining the documents are commonplace. This amounts to censorship, in violation of the First Amendment to the U.S. Constitution, which says that we have a right to speak freely and to petition the government for redress of grievances. This would also imply that we have a right not to have our court case regarding income taxes be censored or discriminated against from publication based on our views or the tax issues we are litigating. For instance, a notable tax freedom fighter, William Conklin, filed at least six different federal cases against the IRS and won several of them. The focus of his cases was related to the unconstitutionality of being compelled in the process of filing income tax returns to be a witness against oneself in violation of the 5th amendment. In the majority of his cases, the judges refused to publish his cases. For instance, the case of Conklin vs. United States of America, No. 94-1213 in the Tenth circuit, was unpublished. This kind of censorship is unconscionable!

6.9.4.4 Judicial Conspiracy Following Passage of 16th Amendment in 1913

With the definitions and historical legal background prior to the passage of the 16th Amendment (in 1913) fresh in our minds, we'll now try to start answering some questions:

1. How did taxes on businesses as excise/indirect taxes which fall on the consumer evolve into direct taxes on the labor of individuals (which are property) after the passage of the 16th Amendment?
2. How does the court justify a deviation from precedents already established by the U.S. Supreme Court in a way that is consistent with the U.S. Constitution?
3. How did the courts distort the interpretation of the law to expand the reach of the income tax to become direct taxes on citizens living outside of the federal zone (how did they "get away with it")?

To answer these questions, we have to look at later cases and see how the courts redefined "excise taxes" or "indirect taxes", since the following case firmly established that taxes on income allowed under the 16th Amendment are limited to indirect or excise taxes:

"..[The 16th Amendment] .prohibited the ... power of income taxation possessed by Congress from the beginning from being taken out of the category of indirect taxation to which it inherently belonged..." [in describing Brushaber v. Union Pacific Railroad Co., 240 U.S. 1 (1916), 17-19]

[Stanton v. Baltic Mining, 240 U.S. 103]

Most of error and distortion in the meaning of the Internal Revenue Code, and the judicial conspiracy to protect and expand the income tax, it turns out, comes not from the U.S. Supreme Court, but from the federal appellate/circuit courts immediately below the Supreme Court. Indirectly, the Supreme Court has contributed to the misdirected verdicts of the circuit courts by refusing to hear (not granting a "writ of certiorari") to cases which relate to direct income taxes on individuals. Most of that distortion, we argue, came after the passage of the 16th Amendment, and results from a misapplication and misunderstanding of the Internal Revenue Code by the circuit courts. It also results indirectly from voters adopting the socialist policies instituted by President Franklin D. Roosevelt during his long term in office.

We'll start the exposition by examining the case of Evans v. Gore, 253 U.S. 245 (1920):

"After further consideration, we adhere to that view and accordingly hold that the Sixteenth Amendment does not authorize or support the tax in question. " [A direct tax on salary income of a federal judge]

This case quite clearly shows that a direct tax on the income of a federal judge is unconstitutional. The case was then subsequently overturned by the U.S. Supreme Court in O'Malley v. Woodrough, 307 U.S. 277 (1939). However, the Supreme Court in that case declined to address whether the tax on income of federal judges was a "direct" or an "indirect"

1 tax or the nature of its constitutionality relative to the 16th Amendment, and therefore they skirted entirely the issue of
2 whether taxes on income of citizens could or should be included in "gross income". Instead, by fiat, the justices simply said
3 without any real legal analysis of facts, that the tax was constitutional because everyone regarded it as "unpopular". This,
4 of course was a cop-out and there was a long dissenting opinion that advocated a more rational view that is more consistent
5 with this document. Here's an excerpt from the findings of the court in that O'Malley case:

6 "However, the meaning which Evans v. Gore, supra, imputed to the history which explains Article III, 1 was
7 contrary to the way in which it was read by other English-speaking courts.<sup>284</sup> The decision met wide and
8 steadily growing disfavor from legal scholarship and professional opinion. Evans v. Gore, supra, itself was 9 rejected by most of the courts before whom the matter came after that decision<sup>285</sup>"

10 This decision, it is to be noted, occurred during a period of depression and recovery from depression, in which Franklin
11 Roosevelt was pushing his socialist "Social Security" agenda. President Roosevelt held office for three terms, or 12 years.
12 During that time, FDR wanted to ramrod his socialist agenda (Social Security, the Federal Reserve, Income Taxes, 13 outlawing of ownership of gold coin, forced use of paper money) through Congress and the courts and get it firmly
14 entrenched in our system of government before he left office. Therefore, FDR had to "stack" the Supreme Court by 15 doubling its size from six to twelve justices. We talked about this in section 6.1 and even quoted FDR's own words about 16 the "supreme court packing plan" in our analysis. This was unprecedented in American history and he was able to do it
17 successfully because the Constitution didn't specify the size of the Supreme Court! The court that made the ruling above
18 was therefore a "rigged" court. This ruling was the beginning of a long string of unfavorable rulings at the federal appellate
19 level that would eventually mean the spread of the unconstitutional fraud we know today as the income tax. We'll now
20 examine some of these circuit court cases. If you examine Supreme Court cases following Evans vs. Gore and search for 21 the word "direct tax" and "excise tax", you will find nothing that relates to income taxes on citizens domiciled in the 50
22 union states. Consequently, when the IRS wants to defend the validity of the income tax, it usually cites Brushaber v.
23 Union Pacific Railroad as its precedent.

24 It is very important to note a fact that in the Brushaber decision, the person subject to tax was a nonresident alien principal,
25 who was receiving income from a railroad through a trustee, rather than directly. Treasury decision 2313, which was 26 published just after this decision was rendered, reveals this:

27 "..it is hereby held that income accruing to nonresident aliens in the form of interest...and dividends ..is subject
28 to the income tax imposed by the act of October 3, 1913. The responsible heads, agents, or representatives of 29 nonresident aliens...shall make a full and complete return of the income therefrom on...Form 1040..."

30 So there you have it. The Treasury Department stated that you are to file Form 1040 on behalf of your "nonresident alien 31 principal". So don't forget to do that next April 15th! This is a fact the IRS doesn't like to discuss, for obvious reasons!

32 6.9.4.5 The Federal District/Circuit Court Conspiracy to Protect the Income Tax

33 Recall that the Supreme Court declared in Stanton v. Baltic Mining Co., 240 U.S. 103 (1916) that the only constitutional
34 income taxes were excise taxes. The federal circuit/appellate courts, following the passage of the 16th Amendment in 1913,
35 and the Supreme Court decisions that followed, suddenly got very creative in their definitions of "excise tax" in order to fit
36 a square peg into a round hole made by the 16th Amendment. This was encouraged by the fact that the Supreme Court
37 refused to hear cases involving direct taxes on income (looked the other way). Such cases are referred to as "cert denied".
38 However, it is an important principal of law that the fact that a cert was denied is NOT necessarily an affirmation of a
39 particular federal circuit court ruling by the Supreme Court. This lack of attentiveness by the Supreme Court in not
40 correcting errors by the circuit courts gave the circuit and district courts carte blanche authority to do anything they wanted
41 and to ignore the constitution entirely relative to income taxes. The result was a broadened application of income taxes to 42 what should have been excepted subjects, like Americans living outside the federal United States but inside the United
43 States of America. We'll examine some of these cases to show you how the courts "legislated" the income tax by
44 redefining the word "excise", and in some cases also boldly claiming, quite wrongfully, that the 16th Amendment
45 authorized "direct income taxes without apportionment" (see the case of U.S. v. Collins, 920 F.2d. 619, 1990, mentioned in 46 section 6.4.5). In all cases, we emphasize that the devious tactics mentioned in section 6.9.4.3 "Common Manifestations of 47 the Judicial Conspiracy" apply.

1 The first case we want to look at is Simmons v. United States, 308 F.2d. 160, 8/28/1962:

2 A direct tax is a tax on real or personal property, imposed solely by reason of its being owned by the taxpayer.
 3 A tax on the income from such property, such as a tax on rents or the interest on bonds, is also considered a
 4 direct tax, being basically a tax upon the ownership of property.<sup>286</sup> Yet, from the early days of the Republic, a
 5 tax upon the exercise of only some of the rights adhering to ownership, such as upon the use of property<sup>287</sup> or
 6 upon its transfer,<sup>288</sup> has been considered an indirect tax, not subject to the requirement of apportionment. The 7 present tax falls into this latter category, being a tax upon the receipt of money and not upon its ownership.

8 This tax is similar to others held to be indirect. In the case which on its facts most nearly resembles the present
 9 *one, Scholey v. Rew, 90 U.S. (23 Wall.) 331, 346-348, 23 L.Ed. 99 (1875), the Supreme Court upheld a federal*
 10 death tax, placed upon persons receiving real property from a deceased under a will or by intestate succession,
 11 against the claim that the tax was an unapportioned direct tax on property. In that case, as in the present, the 12 *tax was borne directly by the recipient, but was held to be merely upon the transfer of property. The *Scholey
 13 *case was by name reaffirmed in Knowlton v. Moore, 178 U.S. 41, 78-83, 20 S.Ct. 742, 44 L.Ed. 969 (1900), and* 14 *by implication in New York Trust Co. v. Eisner, 256 U.S. 345, 349, 41 S.Ct. 506, 75 L.Ed. 963 (1921), both*
 15 cases upholding federal estate taxes imposed, not upon the beneficiary but upon the decedent's estate. A tax
 16 *upon the donor of an inter vivos gift was held to be an indirect tax in Bromley v. McCaughn, 280 U.S. 124, 135-*
 17 138, 50 S.Ct. 46, 74 L.Ed. 226 (1929). If a tax on giving property is indirect, so would be a tax on receiving it,
 18 regardless of its source. That no distinction may be drawn between giving and receiving was pointed out in 19 Fernandez v. Wiener*, 326 U.S. 340, 352-355, 361-362, 66 S.Ct. 178, 90 L.Ed. 116 (1945), where the Supreme* 20 Court upheld as an indirect tax the federal estate tax on community property at the death of one spouse: "If the
 21 gift of property may be taxed, we cannot say that there is any want of constitutional power to tax the receipt of
 22 *it, whether as a result of inheritance [citation omitted] or otherwise, whatever name may be given to the tax * **
 23 \. Receipt in possession and enjoyment is as much a taxable occasion within the reach of the federal taxing* 24 power as the enjoyment of any other incident of property."<sup>289</sup>

25 While the distinctions drawn in these cases may seem artificial, the necessity for making them stems from the 26 structure of the Constitution itself, which distinguishes between direct and indirect taxes. The Supreme Court
 27 has restricted the definition of direct taxes to the above-enumerated well-defined categories, and we have no
 28 warrant to expand them to others.

29 *Even if we were to assume that the tax upon Simmons is direct, it comes within the Sixteenth Amendment, which*
 30 relieved direct taxes upon income from the apportionment requirement. We need look no further than the two
 31 *most recent Supreme Court cases in this area. In Commissioner of Internal Revenue v. Glenshaw Glass Co.,*
 32 348 U.S. 426, 75 S.Ct. 473, 99 L.Ed. 483 (1955), the Court upheld the inclusion in gross income of money
 33 received by the taxpayers as punitive damages, stating that "[here] we have instances of undeniable accessions
 34 to wealth, clearly realized, and over which the taxpayers have complete dominion." 348 U.S. at 431, 75 S.Ct. at 35 *477. This test was specifically reaffirmed in James v. United States, 366 U.S. 213, 81 S.Ct. 1052, 6 L.Ed.2d. 246*
 36 (1961), where the Court considered the taxability of embezzled money. The plunder was held to be income
 37 solely because it came into the taxpayer's possession and control and despite the fact that he had no right to it
 38 and indeed was under a legal obligation to return it to its rightful owner. This obligation to repay was deemed 39 irrelevant, for a gain "constitutes taxable income when its recipient has such control over it that, as a practical
 40 matter, he derives readily realizable economic value from it."<sup>290</sup> As is apparent from the quoted statements,
 41 and as illustrated by the diverse factual situations in these cases, it is the status in the recipient's hands of the 42 money being taxed which is the crucial factor, while the source of the money is not relevant.

43 The above case of Simmons v. United States taxed receipt of income (which in this case was a gift) by a citizen not related
 44 to the conduct of a business or trade, as an occasion for an excise/indirect tax. But we know that this violates the definition
 45 of an excise tax in Flint v. Stone Tracy (220 U.S. 107) and the other definitions of excise tax stated earlier. Interestingly,
 46 they didn't label the tax on the gift as an excise tax, but that is the only way it can be classified, based on our discussion in
 47 section 5.1, where we talked about the legal types of federal taxes. Why didn't the court label the tax an excise? Because 48 then they would have to talk about Flint v. Stone Tracy and relate the event being taxed to a business transaction involving
 49 sale and manufacture of commodities. Since this case didn't involve the sale or manufacture of commodities, then the court

1 couldn't uphold the tax! The case also ignores the following other issues and considerations, which are very relevant to the 2 issue of taxation:

- 3 1. Whether the income received was a result of interstate commerce or foreign commerce, as per Article I, Sections
4 8, Clauses 1 and 3 of the Constitution, which constrain Congress' power to taxing foreign and interstate
5 commerce. These are the only taxable "sources" allowed by the Constitution. It would appear that the income in 6 question in this case here didn't cross state boundaries, and yet the issue was never addressed, because if it was,
7 the government's ability to impose the tax would be eliminated.
- 8 2. Whether the tax was on a Citizen of the 50 union states from income earned within the state. If it was, then 26
9 U.S.C. §862 and the source become relevant to whether the income received was taxable. If the court had 10 addressed this issue, then once again the court would not have been able to uphold the tax.
- 11 3. What "privilege" was being taxed that related to the indirect or excise tax upheld by the court. (see Flint v. Stone 12 Tracy Co., 220 U.S. 107 (1911)). According to Flint, "...it is the privilege which is the subject of the tax and not 13 the mere buying, selling or handling of goods". Once again, if this issue was considered, the court would not have 14 been able to uphold the tax.
- 15 4. Whether income beneficially received by Simmons was related to "the manufacture, sale, or consumption of 16 commodities within the country" as per Flint v. Stone Tracy Co., 220 U.S. 107 (1911)). This issue is clearly very
17 relevant to the imposition of an alleged excise tax, and yet it was ignored by the court. If the court had addressed
18 this issue, it also would not be able to sustain the indirect/excise tax being imposed.

19 Next, we look at the case of United States v. Collins, 920 F.2d. 619, (10th Cir. 11/27/1990):

20 Dickstein's motion to dismiss advanced the hackneyed tax protester refrain that federal criminal jurisdiction
21 only extends to the District of Columbia, United States territorial possessions and ceded territories. Dickstein's
22 memorandum blithely ignored 18 U.S.C. § 3231 which explicitly vests federal district courts with jurisdiction
23 over "all offenses against the laws of the United States." Dickstein also conveniently ignored article I, section 8
24 of the United States Constitution which empowers Congress to create, define and punish crimes, irrespective of 25 where they are committed. See United States v. Worrall, 2 U.S. (2 Dall.) 384, 393, 1 L.Ed. 426, 28 F.Cas. 774
26 (1798) (Chase, J.). Article I, section 8 and the sixteenth amendment also empower Congress to create and 27 provide for the administration of an income tax; the statute under which defendant was charged and convicted,
28 28 U.S.C. § 7201, plainly falls within that authority. Efforts to argue that federal jurisdiction does not
29 encompass prosecutions for federal tax evasion have been rejected as either "silly" or "frivolous" by a myriad
30 of courts throughout the nation. See, e.g., United States v. Dawes, 874 F.2d. 746, 750 (10th Cir.), cert. denied,
31 493 U.S. 920, 107 L.Ed.2d. 264, 110 S.Ct. 284 (1989), overruled on other grounds, 895 F.2d. 1581 (10th Cir.
32 1990); United States v. Tedder, 787 F.2d. 540, 542 (10th Cir. 1986); United States v. Amon, 669 F.2d. 1351,
33 1355 (10th Cir. 1981); United States v. Brown, 600 F.2d. 248, 259 (10th Cir.), cert. denied, 444 U.S. 917, 100
34 S.Ct. 233, 62 L.Ed.2d. 172 (1979); Cheek, 882 F.2d. at 1270; United States v. Ward, 833 F.2d. 1538, 1539
35 (11th Cir. 1987), cert. denied, 485 U.S. 1022, 108 S.Ct. 1576, 99 L.Ed.2d. 891 (1988); United States v.
36 Koliboski, 732 F.2d. 1328, 1329-30 (7th Cir. 1984); United States v. Evans, 717 F.2d. 1334, 1334 (11th Cir.
37 1983); United States v. Drefke, 707 F.2d. 978, 981 (8th Cir.), cert. denied, 464 U.S. 942, 78 L.Ed.2d. 321, 104
38 S.Ct. 359 (1983); United States v. Spurgeon, 671 F.2d. 1198, 1199 (8th Cir. 1982); O'Brien v. United States, 51
39 F.2d. 193, 196, 10 A.F.T.R. (P-H) 223 (7th Cir.), cert. denied, 284 U.S. 673, 52 S.Ct. 129, 76 L.Ed. 569 (1931).
40 In the face of this uniform authority, it defies credulity to argue that the district court lacked jurisdiction to 41 adjudicate the government's case against defendant.

42 Dickstein's argument that the sixteenth amendment does not authorize a direct, non-apportioned tax on United 43 States citizens similarly is devoid of any arguable basis in law. Indeed, the Ninth Circuit recently noted "the 44 patent absurdity and frivolity of such a proposition." In re Becraft, 885 F.2d. 547, 548 (9th Cir. 1989). For 45 seventy-five years, the Supreme Court has recognized that the sixteenth amendment authorizes a direct non-
46 apportioned tax upon United States citizens throughout the nation, not just in federal enclaves. see
47 Brushaber v. Union Pac. R.R., 240 U.S. 1, 12-19, 60 L.Ed. 493, 36 S.Ct. 236 (1916); efforts to argue otherwise
48 have been sanctioned as frivolous, see, e.g., Becraft, 885 F.2d. at 549 (Fed. R. App. P. 38 sanctions for raising 49 frivolous sixteenth amendment argument in petition for rehearing); Lovell v. United States, 755 F.2d. 517, 519-
50 20 (7th Cir. 1984) (Fed. R. App. P. 38 sanctions imposed on pro se litigants raising frivolous sixteenth 51 amendment contentions). Dickstein's contention that defendant was not an "individual" under the Internal 52 Revenue Code also is frivolous. See Dawes, 874 F.2d. at 750-51; United States v. Studley, 783 F.2d. 934, 937
53 (9th Cir. 1986); United States v. Rice, 659 F.2d. 524, 528 (5th Cir. Unit A 1981). His disregard of governing 54 legal precedent is further portrayed by his reference to the "alleged ratification" of the sixteenth amendment in 55 the face of uniform contrary authority. See, e.g., Miller v. United States, 868 F.2d. 236, 241 (7th Cir. 1989);
56 United States v. Sitka, 845 F.2d. 43, 46-47 (2d Cir.), cert. denied, 488 U.S. 827, 102 L.Ed.2d. 54, 109 S.Ct. 77
57 (1988); United States v. Stahl, 792 F.2d. 1438, 1440-41 (9th Cir. 1986), cert. denied, 479 U.S. 1036, 93
58 L.Ed.2d. 840, 107 S.Ct. 888 (1987); Sisk v. Commissioner, 791 F.2d. 58, 60-61 (6th Cir. 1986); see generally
59 United States v. Stillhammer, 706 F.2d. 1072, 1077-78 (10th Cir. 1983). Argument reflecting such 60 contemptuous disregard for established legal authority has no place within this circuit.
61 [United States v. Collins, 920 F.2d. 619, (10th Cir. 11/27/1990)]

This case is quoted by the IRS as a reference in our Tax Protester Rebuttal on our website at <http://famguardian.org/>. This ruling has the following MAJOR and BLATANT defects:

1. It ignores the ruling of Stanton v. Baltic Mining, in referring to the Brushaber v. Union Pacific R.R., case, that income taxes are only constitutional as excise taxes, and not direct taxes:

“that the provisions of the Sixteenth Amendment conferred no new power of taxation but simply prohibited the previous complete and plenary power of income taxation possessed by Congress from the beginning from being taken out of the category of indirect taxation to which it inherently belonged and being placed in the category of direct taxation”

Instead, the U.S. v. Collins ruling says that:

“...the Supreme Court has recognized that the sixteenth amendment authorizes a direct non-apportioned tax upon United States citizens throughout the nation, not just in federal enclaves”

and yet only cites ONE Supreme Court case, Brushaber, which clearly doesn't sustain their position. This is a very bad precedent and bad law indeed! Brushaber claims that income taxes are constitutional as “excise taxes” only, not “direct taxes”. Where did the court get such nonsense? I contend that in this case they were just mad at the attorney, Dickstein, and were behaving irrationally. That was why they sanctioned him and dismissed him from the court.

2. Completely ignores the fact that in the Brushaber case, the appellant was acting as an agent for a nonresident alien, and NOT a citizen! But in the case of U.S. v. Collins, the appellant was a citizen, not a nonresident alien. This is a completely different situation.
3. In addition, it ignores all the issues, errors, and omissions we raised in the above case of Simmons v. United States, 308 F.2d. 160, 8/28/1962.

The last case we want to look at is U.S. v. Melton, 86 F.3d. 1153, ruling on May 22, 1996. This case dealt with brothers who owned a painting business and who evaded payment of income taxes by various highly creative means, including use of cash and avoiding banks, using gold coins, and setting up foreign corporations. It's a fascinating case that has just about every major tax evasion and protester element in it. We'd highly recommend reading it. Below is an excerpt from the court's ruling:

*“While courts may have offered differing views of the income tax over time, the United States Supreme Court has consistently interpreted the federal income tax for 80 years. Since 1916, the Court has construed the tax as an indirect tax authorized under Article I, Section 8, Clause 1 of the U.S. Constitution, as amended by the Sixteenth Amendment. See Brushaber v. Union Pacific R.R. Co., 240 U.S. 1, 11, 16-19, 60 L.Ed. 493, 36 S.Ct. 236 (1916). Federal courts have all agreed that wages or compensation for services constitute income and that individuals receiving income are subject to the federal income tax--regardless of its nature. See, e.g., Brushaber, 240 U.S. at 17; United States v. Sloan, 939 F.2d. 499, 500-01 (7th Cir. 1991), cert. denied, 502 U.S. 1060, 117 L.Ed.2d. 110, 112 S.Ct. 940 (1992); Simmons v. United States, 308 F.2d. 160, 167-68 (4th Cir. 1962). In short, the debate over whether the income tax is an excise tax or a direct tax is irrelevant to the obligation of citizens to pay taxes and file returns. Simmons, 308 F.2d. at 166 n.21 (stating that “it has been clearly established that the labels used do not determine the extent of the taxing power”).*

*Furthermore, the duty to file returns and pay income taxes is clear. Section 1 of the Internal Revenue Code imposes a federal tax on the taxable income of every individual. 26 U.S.C. §1. Section 63 defines “taxable income” as gross income minus allowable deductions. 26 U.S.C. §63. Section 61 states that “gross income means all income from whatever source derived,” including compensation for services. 26 U.S.C. §61. Sections 6001 and 6011 provide that a person must keep records and file a tax return for any tax for which he is liable. 26 U.S.C. §§ 6001 & 6011. Finally, section 6012 provides that every individual having gross income that equals or exceeds the exemption amount in a taxable year shall file an income tax return. 26 U.S.C. §6012. The duty to pay federal income taxes therefore is “manifest on the face of the statutes, without any resort to IRS rules, forms or regulations.” United States v. Bowers, 920 F.2d. 220, 222 (4th Cir. 1990). The rarely recognized proposition that, “where the law is vague or highly debatable, a defendant--actually or imputedly--lacks the requisite intent to violate it,” Mallas, 762 F.2d. at 363 (quoting United States v. Critzer, 498 F.2d. 1160, 1162 (4th Cir. 1974)), simply does not apply here.*

Once again, this Appellate court ruling ignores all the same issues referenced earlier in Simmons v. United States. It ignores constitutional issues such as Article I, Section 8, Clauses 1 and 3, which constrain the Congress' taxing power to foreign and interstate commerce, and their relation to 26 U.S.C. §861 and the 26 C.F.R. §1.861-1 through 26 C.F.R. §1.861-14. It does not attempt to identify whether the income derives from a taxable “source”. It doesn't relate the income to an occasion that is appropriate to an excise, such as the sale or manufacture of commodities involving interstate or foreign commerce. This is clearly a glaring error in logic and legal analysis, and yet it is allowed to stand because of a federal judicial conspiracy to uphold the income tax!

There are many, many other cases we could discuss, but they all follow the same pattern of the two indicated above. In the interest of conserving space, we won't show any others here.

Following the expansion of the definition of "excise taxes" by the circuit courts documented above, a number of cases were heard by the federal appellate courts dealing directly with the constitutionality of the income taxes and the nature of being a "direct tax". In each case, the court unfavorably "rubber stamped" the result without dealing with the constitutional issues of direct vs. indirect taxes. They also failed to address the nature of the parties allegedly subject to the tax, such as whether they were citizens domiciled in the 50 union states, nonresident aliens, or citizens living overseas. This simply clouded the application of the income taxes even further for the average Citizen, which we believe was clearly their intent. Here are two examples of such abuse by the federal appellate courts:

1. Ficalora v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, 751 F.2d. 85 (12/13/1984).
2. Charczuk v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, 771 F.2d. 471 (8/29/1985).

We'll first provide the ruling in the case of Charczuk v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue (771 F.2d. 471), because the arguments of the "taxpayer" not only were rejected by the court, but the court also sanctioned attorney fees against the appellant. Below is an excerpt from that case:

Paul E. Charczuk and Victoria Charczuk jointly filed a Form 1040 for the taxable year 1977 reflecting income of $4,763.00. This amount was entered on the line for "business income" rather than on the line for "wages, salaries, tips and other employee compensation." Attached to the taxpayers' return were seven Form W-2 Wage and Tax Statements showing that the taxpayers received wages during 1977 totaling $12,276.00. Also attached was a Schedule C for each taxpayer claiming a "net profit" of $2,668.00 for Paul Charczuk and $2,095.00 for Victoria Charczuk.<sup>291</sup> On June 9, 1980, the Commissioner sent taxpayers a notice of deficiency informing them that they owed $1,148.00 in taxes for 1977 based on disallowance of all expenses claimed on Schedule C for lack of verification. Subsequently, the taxpayers petitioned the Tax Court for a redetermination of the deficiency. In those proceedings the taxpayers did not attempt to challenge the Commissioner's determination by presenting evidence in support of their claimed deductions, but rather argued that the income tax itself was invalid as a matter of law. The Tax Court granted summary judgment in favor of the Commissioner. T.C. Memo. 1983-433. Taxpayers appeal from this judgment claiming the Tax Court misconstrued their arguments against the income tax and that its decision was contrary to law and "illogical." We affirm.

[...]

*It takes little consideration to determine that the arguments presented by taxpayers with respect to these issues are meritless and unreasonable. However, to forestall taxpayers' patently false claim that "the issues in this case have never been addressed and answered by any Federal Article III Court" we will quote at length from the opinion of the United States Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit in Ficalora v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, 751 F.2d. 85 (1984), cert. denied 471 U.S. 1005, 105 S.Ct. 1869, 85 L.Ed.2d. 162 (1985), which involved taxpayers who were represented by the same Thomas J. Carley who represents the taxpayers in the instant appeal. The quoted text which follows reveals that the Second Circuit in Ficalora was responding to arguments substantially identical to those taxpayers advance in this case.*

I. Constitutional Authority to Impose An Income Tax on Individuals

We first address ourselves to the appellant's contention that neither the United States Congress nor the United States Tax Court possess the constitutional authority to impose on him an income tax for the taxable year 1980. Appellant argues that an income tax is a "direct" tax and that Congress does not possess the constitutional authority to impose a "direct" tax on him, since such a tax has not been apportioned among the several States of the Union. In support of his argument, appellant cites Article 1, Section 9, clause 4 of the United States Constitution which provides that:

"No Capitation, or other direct, Tax shall be laid, unless in Proportion to the Census or Enumeration herein before directed to be taken."

<sup>291</sup> Each Schedule C (entitled Profit or (Loss) from Business or Profession (Sole Proprietorship)) gave the taxpayers' name, address, social security number and the amount claimed as "net profit." To the right of the area for deductions on both schedules was the instruction "See Form-21." A "Form-21" was attached for Paul Charczuk which detailed various "subtractions" for taxes, rent, subsistence, interest, auto, telephone, utilities, supplies, dues and subscriptions from "receipts" of $6,676.00. No "Form-21" or similar explanation of calculations was attached for Victoria Charczuk.

He also relies on the case of Pollock v. Farmers' Loan and Trust Co., 157 U.S. 429, 15 S.Ct. 673, 39 L.Ed. 759 (initial decision), 158 U.S. 601, 15 S.Ct. 912, 39 L.Ed. 1108 (decision on rehearing) (1895), wherein the United States Supreme Court held that a tax upon income from real and personal property is invalid in the absence of apportionment.

In making his argument that Congress lacks constitutional authority to impose a tax on wages without apportionment among the States, the appellant has chosen to ignore the precise holding of the Court in Pollock, as well as the development of constitutional law in this area over the last ninety years. While ruling that a tax upon income from real and personal property is invalid in the absence of apportionment, the Supreme Court explicitly stated that taxes on income from one's employment are not direct taxes and are not subject to the necessity of apportionment. Pollock v. Farmers' Loan and Trust Co., 158 U.S. at 635, 15 S.Ct. at 919. Furthermore, the Sixteenth Amendment to the United States Constitution, enacted in 1913, provides that:

"The Congress shall have the power to lay and collect taxes on income, from whatever source derived, without apportionment among the several States, and without regard to any census or enumeration."

Finally, in the case of New York, ex rel. Cohn v. Graves, 300 U.S. 308, 57 S.Ct. 466, 81 L.Ed. 666 (1937), the Supreme Court in effect overruled Pollock, and in so doing rendered the Sixteenth Amendment unnecessary, when it sustained New York's income tax on income derived from real property :n New Jersey. Id. at 314-15, 57 S.Ct. at 468-69. Hence, there is no question but that Congress has the constitutional authority to impose an income tax upon the appellant.

II. Statutory Authority to Impose an Income Tax on Individuals and Definition of Taxable Income

The appellant contends that "[n]owhere in any of the Statutes of the United States is there any section of law making any individual liable to pay a tax or excise on 'taxable income.'" . . . The essence of the appellant's argument is that 26 U.S.C. §1 does not impose a tax on any individual for any stated period of time; rather, it imposes a tax on an undefined: "taxable income".

Section 1 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (26 U.S.C.) (hereinafter the Code) provides in plain, clear and precise language that "there is hereby imposed on the taxable income of every individual . . . a tax determined in accordance with" tables set-out later in the statute. In equally clear language, Section 63 of the Code defines taxable income as "gross income, minus the deductions allowed by this chapter . . .", gross income, in turn, is defined in Section 61 of the Code as "all income from whatever source derived, including (but not limited to) . . . : (1) Compensation for services . . .". Despite the appellant's attempted contorted construction of the statutory scheme, we find that it coherently and forthrightly imposes upon the appellant a tax upon his income for the year 1980.

This appeal is frivolous. Pursuant to Rule 38 of the Federal Rules of Appellate Procedure, we impose on the appellants double the costs of the Commissioner.

[...]

When the costs incurred by this Court and respondent are taken into consideration, the maximum damages authorized by the statute ($500) do not begin to indemnify the United States for the expenses which petitioner's frivolous action has occasioned. Considering the waste of limited judicial and administrative resources caused by petitioner's action, even the maximum damages authorized by Congress are wholly inadequate to compensate the United States and its other taxpayers. These costs must eventually be borne by all of the citizens who honestly and fairly participate in our tax collection system. * * * (Sydnes v. Commissioner, [74 T.C. 864, 872-873 (1980), aff'd. 647 F.2d. 813 (8th Cir. 1981)].)

Courts are in no way obligated to tolerate arguments that thoroughly defy common sense. Such conduct is permissible in our society for the very young, those attempting to make a joke or, occasionally, philosophers, but it cannot be allowed of one engaged in the serious work of a practicing attorney appearing before a court of law. Mr. Carley's conduct in this suit has been a paradigm of unreasonable behavior, and it has been exceedingly vexatious as that term is understood by the Supreme Court. See Christiansburg Garment Co. v. EEOC, 434 U.S. 412, 421, 54 L.Ed.2d. 648, 98 S.Ct. 694 (1978). (In a case arising under Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, the Court stipulated that "the term 'vexatious' in no way implies that the plaintiff's subjective bad faith is a necessary prerequisite to a fee award against him."). Given the continued character of Mr. Carley's intransigence, justice requires that he and his clients bear the full weight of the sanctions allowed by law so that the government, and ultimately all law abiding taxpayers, will not be taxed with the expense of opposing meritless contentions such as his.

Accordingly, the decision of the Tax Court is affirmed and Paul E. Charczuk and Victoria Charczuk are ordered to pay the government double its costs on appeal. In addition, the government is ordered to submit within twenty (20) days to the court clerk, and to Thomas J. Carley, an appropriate accounting of all expenses (other than costs of the appeal) and attorneys' fees it has reasonably incurred as a result of this appeal. Thomas J. Carley may file with the court clerk a challenge to the government's accounting within ten (10) days of the government's filing only with regard to whether the expenses and fees were in fact incurred on this appeal. Upon approval of the government's accounting or any part of it by the court, Thomas J. Carley will be ordered to personally pay to the government the entire amount approved.<sup>292</sup>

You will note that the court ignored all of the same issues we raised with the cases of Simmons v. United States, 308 F.2d. 160, and U.S. v. Melton, 86 F.3d. 1153. They readily identified the receipt of income as other than a "direct tax", which means that it must be an "indirect tax". The only legitimate and constitutional type of indirect tax that it could be, as authorized by the 16th Amendment, is an "excise tax". But guess what, the court didn't mention a word about excise taxes or their applicability only to businesses. The subject of this case, however, was not a business, but a natural person. We refer you again to section 5.1 and following entitled "Introduction to Federal Taxation".

We hope that this section has served to emphasize the basic problem with the Internal Revenue Code that Congress is not willing to address:

1. The laws are unnecessarily complex, mainly because they have to be so carefully crafted to conceal the real truth that most citizens domiciled in the 50 union states with only domestic income DON'T owe tax.
2. Even most judges don't really understand the Internal Revenue Code and don't agree with each other on their interpretation. See section 3.20.1 "Uncertainty of the Federal Tax Laws" for more interesting reading on this subject.
3. The complexity and uncertainty of the Internal Revenue Code contributes significantly to a violation of "due process" discussed in this and section 3.20.1 "Uncertainty of the Federal Tax Laws". The first principle of due process is that the laws are written to be clear and unambiguous enough that they can consistently be interpreted and applied by citizens and the courts. An unclear law also violates the Sixth Amendment to the Constitution.

6.9.4.6 State Court Rulings

The State courts have held that the income tax is a direct property tax. This is revealed by the following cases:

See Eliasberg Bros. Mercantile Co. v. Grimes, 204 Ala. 492, 86 So. 56, 58 (1920); State v. Pinder, 108 A. 43, 45 (Del. 1919); Bachrach v. Nelson, 349 Ill. 579, 182 N.E. 909 (1932); Opinion of the Justices, 220 Mass. 613, 108 N.E. 570 (1915); Trefry v. Putnam, 227 Mass. 522, 116 N.E. 904 (1917); Maguire v. Tax Comm. of Commonwealth, 230 Mass. 503, 120 N.E. 162, 166 (1918); Hart v. Tax Comm., 240 Mass. 37, 132 N.E. 621 (1921); In re Ponzi, 6 F.2d. 324 (D.Mass. 1925); Kennedy v. Comm. of Corps. & Taxation, 256 Mass. 426, 152 N.E. 747 (1926); In re Opinion of the Justices, 266 Mass. 583, 165 N.E. 900, 902 (1929); Hutchins v. Comm. of Corps. & Taxation, 272 Mass. 422, 172 N.E. 605, 608 (1930); Bryant v. Comm. of Corps. & Tax'n., 291 Mass. 498, 197 N.E. 509 (1935); Culliton v. Chase, 174 Wash. 363, 25 P.2d. 81, 82 (1933); Jensen v. Henneford, 185 Wash. 209, 53 P.2d. 607 (1936); State ex rel Manitowoc Gas Co. v. Wisconsin Tax Comm., 161 Wis. 111, 152 N.W. 848, 850 (1915); and State ex rel Sallie F. Moon Co. v. Wisconsin Tax Comm., 166 Wis. 287, 163 N.W. 639, 640 (1917).

There appears to be no dispute about the plain requirements of the Constitution that direct taxes must be apportioned and that indirect/excise taxes must be uniform. Likewise as shown above, there is a line of decisional authority regarding the generally accepted proposition that income is property.

6.9.5 2003: Federal Court Bans Irwin Schiff's Federal Mafia Tax Book

Below is an article about a ban on the this country's most famous anti-tax book published by the most famous tax protester at the time, Irwin Schiff. The article was published by the We the People Foundation for Constitutional Education and distributed via email on June 30, 2003.

<sup>292</sup> Courts imposing sanctions on an attorney under § 1927 must "afford the attorney all appropriate protections of due process available under the law." House Conf. Rep. No. 96-1234, 96th Cong., 2d Sess. 8, reprinted in 1980 U.S. Code Cong. & Ad. News 2781, 2783. At oral argument in this case, Mr. Carley was offered an opportunity to explain why sanctions should not be imposed against him personally. This satisfies any right he may have had to a hearing on the matter. Cf. McConnell v. Crichtlow, 661 F.2d. 116, 119 (9th Cir. 1981).

Judge Bans Schiff Book on Income Tax

1st Amendment Thrashed to Buy the Tax More Time New York Times: More Deception

On Monday, June 16, Federal District Court Judge Lloyd D. George issued a preliminary injunction banning the sale and distribution of Irwin Schiff's book about the income tax titled, "The Federal Mafia: How The Government Illegally Imposes And Unlawfully Collects Income Taxes And How Americans Can Fight Back."

Schiff's book, which is a personal and legal examination of the income tax fraud, and includes extensive, and specific quotations and analyses of Internal Revenue Code and Supreme Court rulings on the tax, was banned even though the Department of Justice (which bears the burden of proof) presented no evidence and no witnesses at the April 11th preliminary injunction hearing. Click Here to read the first portion of the censored book (.pdf).

In short, Judge George banned Schiff's book as "false commercial speech" without any specific analysis or any in-court evidentiary examination establishing the "falsity" of Schiff's actual speech and by blithely ignoring the substantial body of established Supreme Court constitutional law protecting free expression and publication.

With only an unsubstantiated claim of criminal speech asserted by a government witness (via a written declaration), Judge George summarily dismissed the content of Schiff's book as "largely autobiographical, containing in large part Schiff's anti-tax and anti-government diatribes and theories." Of course, it appears to be lost on the court that this is the exact type of speech protected by the First Amendment and -- even when intertwined with "commercial" speech -- requires the highest level of examination and legal justification to censor.

Allen Lichtenstein, general counsel of the American Civil Liberties Union in Nevada, said he looked forward to arguing the case before the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals. Schiff said he had done nothing wrong and would appeal. "We argued that the book is not commercial speech, cannot be banned as false commercial speech and does not meet any other criteria for censorship," Lichtenstein said.

On Tuesday June 17, The New York Times ran an article authored by David Cay Johnston about the Schiff injunction. According to Schiff, Johnston makes two knowingly false statements distorting the perceived nature of the proceedings. Schiff has demanded a formal retraction from the New York Times.

Johnston wrote, "At the court hearing, Mr. Schiff fired his lawyer after she said that she could not argue his tax claims because they lacked merit." In his demand letter to the Times, Schiff points out that the transcript from the hearing makes it explicitly clear that Schiff's attorney was not characterizing Schiff's legal assertions as false or lacking in any way, but instead that she was effectively prohibited by the court from even raising the issues in defense of Schiff under fear and threat of court sanction.

Analysis of the Order

To reach his contorted legal conclusions and to issue the preliminary injunction in favor of the IRS, Judge George ruled, without any evidentiary examination or cross-examination, to conclude that Schiff's speech is false.

1 With this in mind, please note on page 4 of the Order there are five distinct, separate legal elements listed for the
2 government to successfully assert a claim for an injunction related to an "abusive tax shelter."

3 In his order however, the judge conveniently "combines" his analysis of the critical second and third statutory elements,
4 (i.e., relating to making actual "false and fraudulent statements" and the defendant's "reason to know" about their falsity)
5 together within section "B" of the Order, thereby clouding the court's grossly inadequate treatment in establishing the truth
6 or falsity of Schiff's actual speech.

7 While Section "B" contains much ado concerning Irwin's past criminal tax convictions, his failed federal appeals and
8 Schiff's extensive knowledge and expertise in Internal revenue Code, precious few words are wasted establishing the actual
9 falsity of Schiff's speech. In fact, most of the relevant language concerning the court's finding of falsity merely lists District
10 Court decisions of other victims of the IRS's nationwide attack on speech. The Court is in effect stating, "All these other 11 people had false speech concerning abusive tax shelters so Schiff's speech is too."

12 In short, to enable the government's full and unfettered dismissal of the very significant First Amendment issues raised
13 subsequently by the ACLU, Judge George quickly reaches the judicial conclusion of the "falsity" of Schiff's speech
14 (relative to abusive tax shelters) by grossly mischaracterizing Schiff's legal assertions within the context of several Supreme
15 Court cases cited that are only tangentially related to the core legal issues raised in Schiff's actual speech.

16 Example: The Court cites the 1916 Brushaber case which addressed the "right of Congress to impose income tax" [sic]. In 17 fact, Brushaber was acting as a withholding agent for a foreign corporate entity operating inside the US and was in fact,
18 under US law, liable in that capacity. This issue is not the issue raised by Schiff in the Federal Mafia.

19 According to Schiff's Federal Mafia material - if Brushaber was a natural citizen of living and working in the 50 states, his
20 personal wages would in fact be non-taxable because they don't meet the constitutional definition of "income" as defined by 21 the Supreme Court (i.e., a corporate profit or gain). It is Supreme Court decisions such as these cited in Schiff's Mafia (and 22 therefore, his alleged tax "scheme") that the Court has blindly ignored in its legal analysis.

23 The bottom line: Nowhere is there a direct rebuttal or examination of the specific legal assertions advanced by Schiff
24 in either his speech or his book. Every subsequent aspect contained in the Court's injunction is rationalized, and squarely
25 erected, upon this defective judicial premise.

26 In reality, Schiff's "abusive tax scam" is merely a detailed discussion and analysis of Internal Revenue Code, the 27 Constitution, and US Supreme Court decisions, coupled with detailed instructions on how average Americans can 28 implement the logical conclusions and reasonable inferences of those legal facts to protect their property and their rights.

29 The IRS, DOJ and now the US District Court, have failed to provide ANY specific, substantive rebuttal to ANY of the 30 specific elements of Schiff's speech - even though these elements contain the nexus of the falsity or truth of his speech, and 31 thereby are at the heart of determining the legality or criminality of the alleged "abusive tax scheme". To fail to directly
32 address the content and alleged falsity of the speech is a clear violation of due process.

33 Armed with this defective and patently self-serving judicial conclusion, the Court then begins to rebut the 1st Amendment
34 free speech issues raised in the ACLU's amicus briefs.

35 (Note: The 1st Amendment discussion begins on page 13 of the order)

36 Commercial Speech

37 Judge George summarily concludes not only that The Federal Mafia is non-protected "false" commercial speech because 38 the book is sold for money and it contains false information that might be of "selfish" economic benefit to the audience (or 39 Schiff) -- but that it should be banned because it advertises other Schiff products that naturally lead to the same alleged tax
40 "scam." I.e., as false commercial advertising, the book should be banned.

41 The judge, citing the 9th Circuit Estate Preservation case, makes the implicit point that Schiff, outside this injunction, is free
42 to continue to give tax planning advice as long as it is "legitimate" as (quote) "every honest and qualified tax consultant 43 knows."

1 Judge George, having concluded that the book constitutes "core commercial speech," (i.e. "advertising, plain and simple")
2 dismisses the tightly interwoven political content and far reaching political implications of Schiff's work and instead
3 focuses on establishing that Schiff's book is simply a contrived "soup" of false advertising and an embedded "abusive tax
4 scheme," which, of course, enjoy no protection.

5 Incitement of Imminent Lawless Acts

6 At the beginning of the section dealing with the "Incitement of Imminent Lawless Acts" (page 26) Judge George cites the 7 Brandenburg v. Ohio Supreme Court case where the court upheld that even speech advocating the violation of law was 8 protected, as long as the speech did not "incite imminent unlawful acts".

9 The Brandenburg case is the modern day constitutional litmus test for the legal banning of speech. Below is the definition
10 of the word "imminent".

11 Imminent \Im"mi*nent\, Imminent: it is the strongest -- it denotes that something is ready to fall or happen on 12 the instant; as, in imminent danger of one's life.

13 1. Threatening to occur immediately; near at hand; impending; -- said especially of misfortune or peril. ``In 14 danger imminent." (Source: Webster's Revised Unabridged Dictionary, © 1996, 1998 MICRA, 15 Inc.)

16 Having already sidestepped the issue of whether filing a "zero return" constitutes an unlawful act, Judge George
17 haphazardly, and improperly, dismisses the crucial Brandenburg "test" as inappropriate in Schiff's case because the speech
18 in Schiff's book "incorporates the (tax) scheme" thereby implying that Schiff's speech is the actual crime and therefore that 19 this test need not be applied.

20 The entire nature of the Supreme Court's Brandenburg litmus test revolves around the direct incitement of "imminent"
21 lawless behavior - i.e., in the case of Brandenburg (and its supporting case citations) imminent VIOLENT behavior.
22 (Brandenburg was a Klansman engaged in inflammatory, racist speech. His speech was upheld as constitutional because he 23 merely advocated the breaking of the law.)

24 Judge George takes license in citing several sympathetic Court decisions, while choosing to ignore the direct guidance of 25 the Supreme Court regarding this crucial legal test necessary to ban speech.

26 In short, the Court makes no attempt to establish how reading a book containing a legal analysis and instructions on how to 27 file a tax return could result in anything resembling "imminent" activity of ANY type - whether lawful or not. The judge
28 seems content - as the other District tax case judges seem to be - of tolerating a mere logical relationship between this
29 "unlawful" speech and a subsequent "criminal act." With that linkage established, the "imminence" element to banning 30 speech is cleanly dismissed out of hand.

31 By this court's logic, anyone who wrote a "how-to" book containing any information that was subsequently used in a crime
32 - no matter how far removed from the alleged proximate cause -- and regardless of whether the speech was false or not -
33 could be held liable for his/her speech or writings.

34 Illegal Acts

35 In the last section of the injunction order, the judge cements his previous conclusion of the false, (and thereby criminal),
36 nature of Schiff's speech by citing a handful of free speech cases involving bomb makers, illegal drug manufacturers and 37 "hit-men" that purport to, by example and association, show how speech that leads directly to and induces specific criminal 38 conduct is not protected.

39 Of course unlike exploding a bomb or killing another human being -- which are reasonably understood to be plainly
40 criminal acts - the filing of a tax return per instructions and legal advice of a court-acknowledged tax expert that
41 specifically and plainly cites decisions of the Supreme Court and the Internal Revenue Code itself is much harder to 42 comprehend as an overt criminal act.

43 Conclusion

1 The legal arguments and carefully selected lower level court cases cited by Judge George throughout the Order clearly
2 appear strained in their effort to support a justifiable ban of Schiff's book and appear to set the stage for the Ninth Circuit to
3 deny an appeal from Schiff. The clearly protected political content of the book is outright ignored. It is obvious that the
4 government has found Schiff's speech (and many other tax "protestors") intolerable simply because the speech conveys
5 details of the income tax fraud and that they have provided methods on how to effectively contravene its effects.

6 To be sure, the banning of speech through restraining orders and like vehicles are extraordinary remedies that can be
7 implemented without a trial by jury, were designed to temporarily protect rights, property and the public tranquility at risk
8 until other legal remedies could be effected. They were never intended for the purposes of suppressing, or otherwise
9 circumventing, rightful, lawful public debates and discussions about the tax codes or the abuses of government power.

10 The extraordinary remedy of enjoining speech was never intended to replace the proper processes of due process and the 11 enforcement of laws as executed via indictments, prosecution and the judicial appeal process. The delegated and strictly 12 limited legal authority of our government to collect taxes DOES NOT, and CANNOT, ever trump the sovereign People's 13 right to free speech.

14 That the judiciary would openly sanction the use of these extraordinary legal remedies and affirmatively deny Schiff his
15 constitutionally protected right to speech while the government - for 13 years - has had the ability and resources to openly
16 pursue Schiff with full, public criminal charges for his allegedly unlawful acts - AND HAS NOT -- should not be tolerated.
17 That our media would ignore -- and even unquestioningly facilitate -- this carnage on our Constitution is deplorable.

18 In the pivotal case New York Times Co. v. Sullivan (1964), Justice Brandeis, is cited from his concurring opinion in 19 Whitney v. California, 274 U.S. 357, 375-376 restating the rationale behind free speech:

20 "Those who won our independence believed . . . that public discussion is a political duty, and that this should be
21 a fundamental principle of the American government. They recognized the risks to which all human institutions
22 are subject. But they knew that order cannot be secured merely through fear of punishment for its infraction;
23 that it is hazardous to discourage thought, hope and imagination; that fear breeds repression; that repression
24 breeds hate; that hate menaces stable government; that the path of safety lies in the opportunity to discuss
25 freely supposed grievances and proposed remedies, and that the fitting remedy for evil counsels is good ones.
26 Believing in the power of reason as applied through public discussion, they eschewed silence coerced by law--
27 the argument of force in its worst form. Recognizing the occasional tyrannies of governing majorities, they
28 amended the Constitution so that free speech and assembly should be guaranteed." [emphasis added]

29 Will the People silently endure these abuses? We shall see.

30 "The liberties of a people never were, nor ever will be, secure, when the transactions of their rulers may be 31 concealed from them."
32 [Patrick Henry]

33 "We are not afraid to entrust the American people with unpleasant facts, foreign ideas, alien philosophies, and
34 competitive values. For a nation that is afraid to let its people judge the truth and falsehood in an open market
35 is a nation that is afraid of its people."

37 6.9.6 2002: Definition for "Acts of Congress" removed from Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure

38 The definition of the term "acts of Congress" was formerly an especially good means to demonstrate the very limited
39 territorial jurisdiction of the United States Courts. One place to look for that definition was in Rule 54(c) of the Federal 40 Rules of Criminal Procedure. We quoted this rule in chapters 4 and 11 of this book as a means to demonstrate the very 41 limited jurisdiction of the federal government starting in mid 2002.

42 Rule 54(c) of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure (prior to Dec. 2002)

43 "Act of Congress" includes any act of Congress locally applicable to and in force in the District of 44 Columbia, in Puerto Rico, in a territory or in an insular possession."

45 Subsequently in Dec. 2002, the Federal Judiciary rewrote the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure and took the contents of 46 Rule 54 and moved it to Rule 1 of the Rules. They then removed the definition of "acts of Congress" from the definitions.
47 Below is the explanation of what they did, from the notes under Rule 1:

NOTES OF ADVISORY COMMITTEE ON RULES - 2002 AMENDMENT

Rule 1 is entirely revised and expanded to incorporate Rule 54, which deals with the application of the rules. Consistent with the title of the existing rule, the Committee believed that a statement of the scope of the rules should be placed at the beginning to show readers which proceedings are governed by these rules. The Committee also revised the rule to incorporate the definitions found in Rule 54(c) as a new Rule 1(b).

Rule 1(b) is composed of material currently located in Rule 54(c), with several exceptions. First, the reference to an "Act of Congress" has been deleted from the restyled rules; instead the rules use the self-explanatory term "federal statute." Second, the language concerning demurrers, pleas in abatement, etc., has been deleted as being anachronistic. Third, the definitions of "civil action" and "district court" have been deleted. Fourth, the term "attorney for the government" has been expanded to include reference to those attorneys who may serve as special or independent counsel under applicable federal statutes. The term "attorney for the government" contemplates an attorney of record in the case.

[See <http://www.law.cornell.edu/rules/frcrmp/NRule1.htm>]

Black's Law Dictionary doesn't define the term nor could we find any other definition that was as clear as the one above, but now, like all the other good leads that freedom fighters have discovered, the truth has once again been covered up and obscured by your deceitful public "servants" in order to perpetuate the illusion that they have more authority than the Constitution gives them. 6.9.7 1992: William Conklin v. United States

In this section, we'll discuss some of the incredible chicanery and legal trickery that was pulled by the federal courts in conspiring with the IRS in misapplying the Internal Revenue Code to extort and oppress of the rights of a specific Citizen, William Conklin. Bill is a famous tax resistance advocate who wrote a fascinating book called Why No One is Required to File Tax Returns: Reforming Tax Laws Using Our Fifth Amendment Rights.<sup>293</sup> He runs a great website found at:

<http://www.anti-irs.com/>

Bill used his Fifth Amendment rights exclusively to litigate not having to file federal income tax returns. On his website and in his book, he largely ignores the 861/source issue that is one of the two themes of this document. He has a lot of very good and persuasive arguments about the Fifth Amendment, and he deadlocked the federal district courts on the income tax issue for over five years because of some of the very serious constitutional questions he raised that the courts refused to deal with and delayed ruling on! On his website, he states that he has won against the IRS seven times! Here are some of his cases:

1. Church of World Peace, Inc. v IRS, 715 F.2d. 492
2. United States v. Church of World Peace, 775 F.2d. 265
3. United States v Church of World Peace, 878 F.2d. 1281
4. Conklin v. United States, 812 F.2d. 1318
5. Conklin v. C.I.R., 897 F.2d. 1032
6. Tavery v. United States, 897 F.2d. 1027
7. Tavery v. United States, 897 F.2d. 1027, Civ. No. 87-Z-180 (1987), USDC Colorado

For at least the past ten years, Bill has challenged everyone by offering at least $50,000 to the first person who can show him how he can file an income tax return without violating his Fifth Amendment right to not incriminate himself! Every time he publishes a new version of his book, he ups the ante! To date, no one, including famous Hollywood criminal lawyers like Melvin Belli, has been able to satisfy his challenge! He has more than adequately made his point that direct income taxes violate the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution on this basis alone! But this wasn't enough, he took the issue all the way up to the Supreme Court. It was a hot potato for the Supreme Court so they denied his right to litigate the issue

1 there (violation of the First Amendment right of free speech and of ability to petition the government for redress of
2 grievances), which was another way of saying:

3 "We don't want to argue with you and we know you are right, and if people hear the truth about, we're in 4 trouble!"

5 He had to appeal to the Supreme Court because the federal district court, after a 5-year delay reaching a verdict (!), ruled
6 against him on the surface, but proved his point indirectly!

7 We don't have room here to discuss all of his cases, but here is a quote from Judge Nottingham in Bill's case of Conklin v.
8 United States, 812 F.2d. 1318, which he said in open court on August 27, 1992. Remember, the issue was Bill Conklin
9 litigating to defend his right not to be compelled to incriminate himself by filing or signing an income tax return, and he
10 filed a tax return he wouldn't sign and then litigated his right not to have to pay the $500 frivolous return penalty assessed
11 by the IRS:

12 "And one of the fatal things that I—or things that you are overlooking—I will not say it is fatal, although it
13 appears to me it may be fatal—is when you do not sign a return, the reason that the tax collection system is 14 frustrated is because you are not signing under the penalty of perjury. I mean, if everybody could do what you
15 did, the tax collection system would collapse, which you know I am sure some people would argue is not a bad
16 result. But it is not one that I am in a position to bring about."<sup>294</sup>

17 Are you starting to see the picture? Judge Nottingham knows it is unconstitutional but his bigger concern is that he doesn't
18 want to undermine the tax system because his job would be threatened! According to 28 U.S.C. §134(a), federal judges
19 must be on "good behavior" in order to hold office, and can be removed from office on bad behavior. Could it be that in 20 this case, declaring income taxes unconstitutional might be described by the Congress, who would impeach him, as being 21 "bad behavior"? WE THINK SO!!!

22 We'd also like to repeat some of Bill's own words from his book:

23 Notice that the judge basically told me that I could not possibly win because I would overturn the federal tax
24 system. Of course, that was the point of my lawsuit to begin with!

25 After thinking about the case for five years(!), he decided to rule against me. He took the position that the Fifth
26 Amendment does not apply to tax returns because the Fifth Amendment applies only to "compelled testimony."
27 In other words, the Fifth Amendment only applies to information that individuals are required to give to the 28 government.

29 Since I had argued that the Fifth Amendment applies to tax returns because I felt that their filing was compelled
30 by the penal provisions of the law, it is clear that Judge Nottingham took the position that individuals are not 31 required to give information to the government on the 1040 returns (or, in other words, he was talking like the 32 IRS talks by saying that filing is "voluntary"), and that is why the Fifth Amendment cannot be applied.

33 The Court Rules in Opposition to the U.S. Supreme Court

34 Judge Nottingham had to rule directly against the position of the Supreme Court in Garner vs. U.S., supra.
35 Remember, the Garner Court took the position that information on tax returns is "compelled testimony" for 36 purposes of the Fifth Amendment.

37 Furthermore, Judge Nottingham also accused me of taking a blanket Fifth Amendment position, even though I
38 certainly had not done that. In fact, I had completely filled out the return and provided supporting 39 documentation and paid the tax that I voluntarily self-assessed. The Supreme Court took the position that if an
40 individual so much as even admits to having books and records, he waives the Fifth Amendment protections of 41 his rights because the Fifth Amendment does not apply to documents, it only applies to testimony.<sup>295</sup> Judge
42 Nottingham also ruled that "Plaintiff has wholly failed to persuade me that truthful completion of the IRS Form 43 1040 or any related forms would tend to incriminate him."

44 The Judge Answers a Question I Did Not Ask

The judge answered a question that I did not ask. How could the judge know if a piece of information would incriminate me? There is no way either of us could know that! But I was not arguing that I might incriminate myself. I was arguing that I could not be required to waive my Fifth Amendment protections of my rights. As a layman, there is no way I could be presumed to know if a piece of information would be incriminating or not. His opinion duly impressed me again as to how tricky the courts can be in their "Alice in Wonderland" language.

I appealed the case to the Tenth Circuit Court of Appeals. The Tenth Circuit upheld the lower Court and thus also took a position exactly opposite to the position taken by the Supreme Court in the Garner case. The circuit court judges held that information on a tax return is not compelled, and the judges also accused me of taking a blanket Fifth Amendment position even though I had answered all the questions.

I could not believe it! It was as if the court had not even looked at my return! Then the Tenth Circuit Court sent the case back to the lower court for any further recommendations by Judge Nottingham. The government seized the opportunity to ask Judge Nottingham to order me to pay the amount it estimated it had cost the IRS in attorney time to respond so my complaint. I was amazed when the attorneys for the IRS submitted a $6,000 bill for their time! I was really flabbergasted when Judge Nottingham assessed me the entire amount—this for raising the "frivolous" argument of law that individuals are required to waive their Fifth Amendment rights when they file tax returns!

For me, the judge's actions underscored the unfair bias of the courts against someone who is challenging the incongruities of our income tax laws. Think about the contradictions in this scenario: The judge was saying that this was an obviously frivolous issue—an issue that even I, a layman, would immediately realize could quickly be defeated. Yet when the government submitted a $6,000 bill for the time that it required for two professional attorneys to defeat my position, the judge accepted their bill and the many hours it represented without question, and considered it appropriate to pass it along to me in its entirety!

I Appeal to the Supreme Court

I guess I should have been grateful that the judge did not add his time to my bill, too. It took him five years to evaluate my "easily understood as frivolous even by the layman" argument! Of course, I appealed once again, this time on the issue of the newly-imposed $6,000 worth of sanctions. Unfortunately, the Supreme Court was too busy with other far more important issues. It decided to not even consider my objection to the $6,000 sanction.

Putting aside my outrageous $6,000 fine, do you now understand why the IRS continually refers to the filing of tax returns as voluntary? The IRS knows that if it stated that an individual is required to file tax returns, a Fifth Amendment confrontation would be created, so the IRS enforces the idea that tax returns are indirectly required. The IRS requires you to volunteer, and then punishes you if you chose not to volunteer. (Did I just hear you say that you feel like Alice in Wonderland, trying to tie the Queen down to fixed definitions of words?)

His book is really fascinating and we highly recommend it! You can order it from his website. After you read his book, you will probably be as mad as I was at the IRS. Reading his book was one of many reasons I became so committed to writing this book! His book didn't tell enough of the story and I felt people needed to hear "the rest of the story", as Paul Harvey likes to say.

Among some of the many unethical, immoral, and frivolous tactics the IRS and the courts used against Bill in litigating his case were:

1. The judge hearing the case had a conflict of interest with eliminating the income tax and refused to recuse himself or address the issue of recusing himself for cause.
2. The IRS requested and the court agreed to sanction Mr. Conklin with significant legal fees for defending his rights (a violation of his First Amendment right of free speech and his right to petition the government for redress of grievances). This, in effect, amounts to penalizing someone for the exercise of a right, which we said and the Supreme Court has also said, is unconstitutional.
3. The federal court refused to publish his cases, which is to say that they wouldn't allow his cases to go into the case law databases so other people could read about them. This is another First Amendment violation.
4. The court delayed ruling on the case for five years without explanation!
5. They accused Mr. Conklin of litigating frivolous issues. Unbelievable!
6. They overruled the Supreme Court!
7. The Supreme Court refused to hear the appeal (denied his writ), which was a death sentence for him.

1 Now do you understand the “judicial conspiracy to protect the income tax” that we are talking about? It’s pathetic and
2 disgusting!! Judge Nottingham should have been criminally prosecuted for his conduct (and his obvious conflict of
3 interest) in this case with all the claims listed in section 5.8 of the Tax Fraud Prevention Manual, Form #06.008 (entitled 4 “Basis for Claims/Redress Against the Government Involving Wrongful Taking of Taxes”)!

5 6.9.8 1986: 16th Amendment: U.S. v. Stahl, 792 F.2d. 1438 (1986)

6 "[Defendant] Stahl's claim that ratification of the 16th Amendment was fraudulently certified constitutes a
7 political question because we could not undertake independent resolution of this issue without expressing lack 8 of respect due coordinate branches of government...."
9 [U.S. v. Stahl, 792 F.2d. 1438 (1986)]

10 This case was a major scandal for the Federal appellate court. The defendant Stahl presented credible evidence that the 16th
11 Amendment to the U.S. Constitution was fraudulently claimed to have been ratified by the Secretary of State, Philander
12 Knox, in 1913. The court refused to deal with the issue and ignored all the evidence presented. Instead, they said it wasn't 13 their business to deal with the issue. Congress said the same thing. This leads to the conclusion that there is a federal 14 judicial (as well as a Congressional) conspiracy to protect the income tax.

15 6.9.9 1938: O'Malley v. Woodrough, 307 U.S. 277<sup>296</sup>

16 The judges' actions with regard to their own salaries provide the evidence that they cooperated with those in the legislative 17 and executive branches of government. Their conduct is evidence of concealing the illegal kickback program. The 18 executive and legislative branches of government must now depend on Federal judges to keep the illegal kickback
19 programs as a source of income to the U.S. Treasury.

20 Had the Federal judges fought the legal issue of their basic rights as an employee the Act of 1862 would have fallen and the 21 "individual income tax" as enforced today would not exist. There is no lawful way it can be deemed that a Federal 22 Government employee agrees in advance to an employment agreement where the conditions of the kickback changes at the 23 discretion of Congress or anyone else. Treaties cannot be broken. This results in the kickback being legal in part, and in 24 part illegal. The kickback a Federal Government employee agrees to when he/she first takes a job with the Federal 25 Government is legal, but, when changes unilaterally made by Congress create a higher kickback the portion which 26 constitutes the change is illegal. The illegal portion is a debt obligation which the Federal Government employee is forced 27 to discharge. Being forced to pay a debt obligation constitutes involuntary servitude. You cannot agree in advance to 28 involuntarily serve the Federal Government (or anyone else). To force someone to do so is to ignore the laws under the 29 First, Fifth, and Thirteenth Amendments to the U.S. Constitution.

30 To show that the Federal Supreme Court Justices actually cooperated with the legislative and executive branches of 31 government in bringing the President and judges taking office after June 6, 1932, under the Federal kickback program, even
32 though they avoided impairment of their own employment contracts, let's look at what they said in 1938 when they used
33 Supreme Court Chief Justice Taney's 1863 letter to the Secretary of the Treasury. Following are several excerpts from the 34 Taney letter as used in O'Malley v. Woodrough, 307 U.S. 277 (1939):

35 At page 288. The Act in question, as you interpret it, diminishes the compensation of every judge three percent,
36 and if it can be diminished to that extent by the name of a tax, it may in the same way be reduced from time to 37 time at the pleasure of the legislature.

38 The justices know the law requires equal treatment. They know the U.S. Constitution prohibits the diminishment of 39 everyone's compensation for services by any means other than an agreement entered into on a voluntary basis prior to
40 employment. They also know Art. III, Sec. 1, which prohibits the diminishment of compensation of Federal judges, was 41 placed into the Constitution of the United States to keep the employment agreements of Federal judges separate from other
42 Federal Government employment agreements so that all Federal judges could answer any legal question regarding labor
43 contracts other than their own with objectivity in mind. They are no longer capable of reviewing violations of Federal 44 employment agreements or any issue with regard to the Federal kickback program as a disinterested third party, making
45 their participation divisive and their opinions, extended as case law, oppressive upon persons who are not Federal 46 Government employees.

1 Though those who constructed the U.S. Constitution probably did not anticipate a Federal kickback program, the Supreme
2 Court Justices in 1862 understood section 86 for what it was and chose to act only to prevent their own employment
3 agreement from being impaired. They could have made their contracts "from time to time at the pleasure of the 4 legislation." BY the statement of Justice Taney in 1863, it also can be assumed justifiably that the Justices knew of the plan
5 of Congress to force it on the balance of society by belief. For this belief to be established and sustained, the cooperation of 6 Federal judges was required and gained. This is documented by their conduct and recorded opinions.

7 The "income" kickback program changes at the pleasure of Congress. And, as we now know, all persons (whether working 8 in the private sector or for a government entity) have been forced into the Federal Government's illegal kickback program.

9 O'Mally opinion at pg. 288:

10 The Judiciary is one of the three great departments of the government created and established by the 11 Constitution. Its duties and powers are specifically set forth, and are of a character that requires it to be 12 perfectly independent of the two other departments, and in order to place it beyond the reach and above even 13 the suspicion of any such influence, the power to reduce their compensation is expressly withheld from 14 Congress, and excepted from their powers of legislation.

15 Note that they avoided using the term "powers of taxation." The justices knew the legislation they were discussing was not 16 a "tax" (direct or indirect).

17 The Judiciary's independence would have been secured had they objected to the law on the legal issue of civil rights that
18 apply to all in society, namely the violation of the Fifth Amendment by illegal, unilateral impairment of existing 19 employment contracts through a forced debt obligation which results in the deprivation of property without due process of 20 law. Also, the Fifth Amendment to the U.S. Constitution is violated when no choice is provided--when a person is deprived 21 of freedom of expression as to the changes in his employment agreement.

22 Congressmen, most being lawyers, knew they had no lawful right to use the power of their elected position to arrange for
23 the deprivation of property under the pretense of law; and the IRS and all other Federal Government employees are on 24 notice as to what is includible and what is not includible in "gross income" by the I.R. Code and Regulations. To control
25 the property of natural persons not includible in "gross income" through the force of undue influence not only violates the 26 Constitution and laws of the United States but those of the states as well. The enforcement of the debt obligation created in 27 this fashion is prohibited by civil rights laws and brings up questions of conspiracy with intent to defraud (subjects that will 28 be discussed later). For now, back to Justice Taney's letter discussed in the O'Malley opinion.

29 At pg. 288. "Language could not be more plain than that used in the Constitution. It is moreover one of its 30 most important and essential provisions. For the articles which limit the powers of the legislative and executive
31 branches of the government, and those which provide safeguards for the protection of the citizen in his person
32 and property would be of little value without a judiciary to uphold and maintain them, which was free from 33 every influence, direct or indirect, that might be possibility in times of political excitement warp their 34 judgments."

35 Here the Chief Justice Taney admitted, and subsequent Justices concur, that they knew their duty was to protect the citizen
36 in his person and property. Still, they chose to ignore that duty and protect only their own person and property. By choice,
37 they indirectly stated that they person and property of all other Federal Government employees was not entitled to 38 protection from such deprivation.

39 When the Justices did not fight the 1862 law on the primary civil rights legal issue, they permitted illegal impairment of all
40 other Federal Government employment contracts and permitted debt obligations to be forced upon all Federal Government
41 employees but themselves. These Supreme Court Justices proved their judgment could be influenced and controlled by 42 people in the other branches of government, and they paved the way for the cooperation between all Federal judges and 43 employees of the IRS, the Justice Department, and members of Congress. By the continued conduct of cooperation in 44 concealing the illegal nature of the kickback program, U.S. judges provide evidence that they chose NOT to uphold their 45 duty as the branch of government created as a check and balance on the executive and legislative branches of government.
46 Their duty is to assume that government under the law exists.

47 Getting back to the O'Malley opinion, pages 288-289, we see Justice Taney's letter said:

1 Having been honored with the highest judicial station under the Constitution, I feel it to be more especially
2 my duty to uphold and maintain the constitutional rights of that department of the government, and not
3 by any act or word of mine, leave it to be supposed that I acquiesce in a measure that displaces it from the
4 independent position assigned it by the statesmen who framed the Constitution; and in order to guard against
5 any such inference, I present to you this respectful but firm and decided remonstrance against the authority you
6 have exercised under this act of Congress, and requires you to place this protest upon the public files of your
7 office as the evidence that I have done everything in my power to preserve and maintain the Judicial
8 Department in the position and rank in the government which the Constitution has assigned to it.
9 [emphasis added]

10 Here the Federal Judges state they are concerned with upholding the Constitutional "rights" of the Judicial Department. A
11 government entity does not have rights--it has duties. Hence, to protect such rights is a subjective position which violates 12 the judges' duty to be objective.

13 Those who accept jobs with the government have the duty to uphold the rights of all under the laws of the Constitution of 14 the United States. Federal judges would have complied with their duty if they had fought for their contractual rights on the 15 general civil rights that all persons have, rather than claim a special privilege status, they would have upheld their personal
16 rights and secured the rights of all others at the same time. Hence, they did not do everything in their power to maintain the 17 independence of the Judicial branch of government. Indeed, they did everything in their power to ultimately make the other 18 branches of government dependent on them.

19 These Justices set the standard for all Federal judges. To this day Federal judges compromise their independence when 20 they permit the use of U.S. courtrooms for the illegal enforcement of the IRS service (the imposition of illegal kickback 21 programs upon persons in society).

22 Continuing with what the O'Malley Court said at pg. 289:

23 The letter of the Chief Justice was not answered and, at his request, the Court, May 10, 1863, ordered the letter
24 entered on its records. In 1869, the Secretary of the Treasury requested the opinion of Attorney General
25 Ebenezer Rockwood Hoar as to the constitutionality of the Act construed to extend to judges' salaries. He
26 rendered an opinion in substantial accord with the views expressed in Chief Justice Taney's protest. 13
27 Op.A.G. 161. Accordingly, the tax on the compensation of the President and or judges was discontinued and 28 the amounts therefore collected from them were refunded--some through administrative channels; others
29 through action of the court of claims and ensuing appropriations of Congress. See Wayne v. U.S., 26 C.Cls.
30 274, 290; 27 Stat. 306.

31 The U.S. judges' compensation for the performance of personal services, just like all other employees, is not subject to a
32 law which impairs the obligation of the agreement of employment. However, as a result of Justice Taney's letter, you can 33 see that the U.S. judges were placed in a class, among citizens, above all others. Their right not to be forced to accept an 34 obligation that does not exist in law, or by employment agreement, was observed. Violation of the civil rights of all other 35 Federal Government employees was permitted to stand, and the U.S. judges actively participated in these violations by 36 concealment.

37 By claiming and receiving special status, Federal judges provided power that was implied and used by the IRS that does not
38 exist under law. The limit of IRS power is to administer to the return of income disbursed to Federal Government
39 employees as a result of their employment agreement.

40 Only through false belief can IRS employees continue to force their will upon all natural persons (Federal Government 41 employees as well as persons working in the private sector and for other governmental entities) by imposing conditions
42 based upon vague laws passed by Congress. Vague laws are enacted because lawyers in our society permit their use by not 43 challenging them.

44 At pages 289, 290 the O'Malley court went on to say:

45 In 1889, Mr. Justice Miller, a member of the Court since 1862 said:

46 "The constitution of the United States has placed several limitations upon the general power [of taxation],
47 and...some of them are implied. One of its provisions is that neither the President of the United States (Art. II, 48 Sec. 1), nor a judge of the Supreme or inferior courts (Art. III, Sec. 1), shall have his salary diminished during 49 the period for which he shall have been elected, or during his continuance in office. It is very clear that when
50 Congress, during the late [Civil] war, levied an income tax, and placed it as well upon the salaries of the

1 President and the judges of the courts as those of other people, that it was a diminution of them to just
2 that extent." [emphasis added]

3 These judges had a duty to declare the law unconstitutional instead of arranging for special privileges. Constitutional
4 restrictions made it equally unlawful for the compensation of all Federal Government employees to be diminished under the
5 pretense of law when it was in fact a unilateral employment agreement change. The conduct of the Federal judges was
6 taken by Congress and the IRS to imply they had power to pave the way for the illegal Federal kickback programs
7 manifested through the filing of a "U.S. Individual Income Tax Returns." The O'Malley case was decided by the Supreme
8 Court in 1938, four years before the enactment of the Victory Tax which was used to infer that an "income tax" had been 9 imposed upon the compensation everyone receives in exchange for their labor.

10 The intent of the Federal judges to cooperate with the legislative and executive branches of government in 1862 to start the 11 Federal kickback programs was just as clear by their conduct as is the conduct of Federal judges today. Today, the intent of 12 the Federal judges is to cooperate in perpetuating the false belief that the IRS has uninhibited power over a person's liberty
13 and property. Though maliciously unlawful, the results of that power is real. The evidence is in the fear of the IRS which 14 exists among the U.S. public.

15 The I.R. Code provides the full extent of the IRS power. It is notice to IRS employees and judges of just what is and what
16 is not includible in "gross income" under Subtitle A of the I.R. Code, and will be revealed to you. While most IRS
17 employees hold jobs so limited in scope they would not be cognizant of their illegal activities, Federal judges and lawyers
18 have no excuse. U.S. judges have placed themselves in a "Catch 22" situation. If they allow a Federal Court to be misused
19 in order to force an illegal kickback on property not includible in "gross income" or aid in depriving persons of their liberty
20 by misuse of laws, they are acting illegally. If they claim ignorance of who is subject to the I.R. Code laws and what 21 property is includible in "gross income," they are admitting they do not know the law. Either way they confess they are not 22 competent to retain their jobs.

23 6.9.10 1924: Miles v. Graham, 268 U.S. 501<sup>297</sup>

24 When Congress passed section 213 of the Revenue Act of 1918, Federal judges were not willing to be made a party to the 25 Federal Government's kickback schemes and avoided impairment of their employment contracts by using their judicial 26 power see Evans v. Gore, [253 U.S. 245 (1920) and Miles v. Graham, 268 U.S. 501 (1924)], expressed in opinions. In the 27 Miles v. Graham, at page 509, the Justices said of the 1918 Act:

28 ...No judge is required to pay a definite percentage of his salary, but all are commanded to return, as a part
29 of "gross income", the compensation received as such" from the United States. From the "gross income"
30 various deductions and credits are allowed, as for interest paid, contributions or gifts made, personal
31 exemptions varying with family relations, etc., and upon the net result assessment is made. The plain purpose
32 was to require all judges to return their compensation as an item of "gross income," and to tax this as
33 other salaries. This is forbidden by the Constitution.

34 In this opinion, the Justices were describing the return of income, or kickback, and its enforcement with regard to existing
35 employment agreements. The statement made that this is forbidden by the Constitution was certainly correct, the Justices
36 just neglected to say in positive, direct and clear language that it actually applied to all Federal government employees.
37 Treating all salaries in this manner, including that of the judges, is "forbidden by the Constitution."

38 The Justices again claimed only the exemption of their salaries from this statute because of special status during their term
39 of office. In stating the kickback is not a fixed amount, but an amount that depends upon the deductions and credits
40 allowed, they confirmed the prediction of Justice Taney in his letter of 1863 that the compensation agreed to "may in the 41 same way" [under the pretence of law] "be reduced from time to time at the pleasure of the legislature..."

42 6.9.11 1915: Brushaber v. Union Pacific Railroad, 240 U.S. 1<sup>298</sup>

43 The power of the IRS is restricted to the U.S. Government's income that is from within the employment agreement between 44 the Federal Government and its employee. People NOT employed by the Federal Government are not required to include
45 the gross income they earn for personal services in "gross income" under the I.R. Code. Doing so on a "U.S. Individual

1 Income Tax Return" does not make income not includible in gross income under subtitle A of the I.R. Code includible in
2 the legal kickback program. The U.S. Government is powerless to lawfully lay and collect a kickback on such income in
3 the name of "tax." You have the right to surrender control of your personal income, but no IRS scheme can lawfully collect
4 it without your cooperation.

5 By section 7701\(a\)\(31\), Congress placed the burden upon the IRS, the Justice Department, and the U.S. judges not to
6 include income that is not includible in gross income under subtitle "A". All Federal Government employees are on notice
7 that property which is foreign to the U.S. Government is not includible in "gross income" under the I.R. Code. This notice
8 places a duty on the Federal Government employees to be certain only income belonging to the U.S. Government is 9 returned.

10 Sec. 7701\(a\)\(31\). Foreign estate or trust. The terms "foreign estate" and "foreign trust" mean an estate or
11 trust, as the case may be, the income of which from sources without the United States which is not effectively
12 connected with the conduct of a trade or business within the United States, is not includible in gross income
13 under subtitle A." [emphasis added]

14 One's conduct produces income when employed with a source of income. The material element is the identity of the 15 employer. In the U.S. Codes the term, "without the United States" means without the U.S. Government, and "within 16 United States" means within the U.S. Government. One's conduct cannot be effectively connected with the performance of 17 personal services with a place, only a source of income can pay one. The place or geography is immaterial. The U.S.
18 Codes identify geographical boundaries with the term "outside" or "inside" the United States. Congress shows intent to 19 control us by use of vagueness when such similar phrases are used to express entirely different meanings.

20 By virtue of the definition of "foreign estate or trust," the burden, the duty, is upon Federal Government employees not to 21 include income that is not includible. However, the conduct of the Federal Government employees causes the burden to be 22 switched to each person to defend life, liberty, and property (including labor). Only with knowledge can one place the 23 burden where it belongs--on the Federal Government employees.

24 The point being made now is that only when one has entered into an employment agreement within the U.S. Government is
25 remuneration for personal services "effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business within the United States."

26 Any income not effectively connected with a trade or business within the U.S. Government contains no kickback due to the 27 U.S. Government because it is not includible in "gross income" under subtitle A of the I.R. Code. To force a kickback on 28 income that is not includible in "gross income" is to tax such income directly, making it mandatory for the U.S.
29 Government to observe the constitutional restrictions on direct taxation.

30 In 1915 the Supreme Court recognized the effect enforcement would have in converting what is called "income tax" into a
31 direct tax when they said:

32 Brushaber v. Union Pacific Railroad Co., 240 U.S. 1, 16, 17 (1915)

33 Moreover, in addition, the conclusion reached in the Pollock Case did not in any degree involve holding that
34 income taxes generically and necessarily came within the class of direct taxes on property, but, on the contrary,
35 *recognized the fact that taxation on income was in its nature an excise entitled to be enforced as such unless 36 and until it was concluded that to enforce it would amount to accomplishing the result which the 37 requirement as to apportionment of direct taxation was adopted to prevent, in which case the duty would 38 arise to disregard form and consider substance alone,...." [emphasis added]

39 The justices in the Brushaber case basically agreed with the justices in the 1895 Pollock case that generically the "taxation
40 on income was in its nature an excise," meaning all excise taxes are in their nature a tax on income. This is exactly what I
41 was getting at earlier when describing the power of everyone to tax income and that a tax is only direct when there is no
42 choice with regard to becoming effected by it. The justices of both the Pollock and Brushaber cases knew taxation was not
43 the true issue of the "income tax" enacted by Congress. The true issue being the effect on a person's labor when to enforce 44 income tax on property "would amount to accomplishing the result which the requirement as to apportionment of direct
45 taxation was adopted to prevent, in which case the duty would arise to disregard the form and consider substance." This
46 statement indicates that if the issue were properly presented, the U.S. Courts would have to acknowledge that the kickback
47 in the name of Federal "income tax" is legally enforceable only on income received as a result of an employment agreement
48 within the U.S. Government as the U.S. Government has the right to enforce the return of its own income. All other
49 income is NOT INCLUDIBLE IN GROSS INCOME UNDER SUBTITLE A OF THE I.R. CODE and the IRS has no

jurisdiction over such property. With the IRS jurisdiction restricted to U.S. Government property it is legally impossible for them to sustain any action in court (civil or criminal) with regard to any other property.

6.9.12 Conclusions

For all the above reasons and using the examples cited in this section, it is clear that there has been a significant contribution of the judiciary to protecting and expanding the operation of the income tax and make it apply to subjects it was never intended, in violation of the U.S. Constitution and of the several rights of citizens. That makes federal judges who participate candidates for prosecution under the following criminal laws, all of which carry heavy penalties:

1. They are part of a “continuing financial crimes enterprise” (18 U.S.C. §225)
2. Extortionists who “entice citizens into peonage” to the IRS (see 18 U.S.C. §1581; Thirteenth Amendment; 197 U.S. 207, 215 (slavery for indebtedness).
3. Are the subject of a massive conflict of interest (see 28 U.S.C. §455).
4. Are perpetrators of fraud (see 18 U.S.C. §1018).
5. Are committing blackmail by threatening prison time and fines (see 18 U.S.C. §873).
6. Are criminally encouraging the IRS to mail threatening communications (see 18 U.S.C. §876).
7. Are involved in extortion (see 18 U.S.C. §872)
8. Are encroaching on federally and constitutionally protected rights to property and liberty and the pursuit of happiness (see 18 U.S.C. §245)
9. Are involved in “a conspiracy against rights” (see 18 U.S.C. §241)
10. Are “Engaging in monetary transactions in property derived from specified unlawful activity” (see 18 U.S.C. §1957)

6.10 Legal Profession Scandals

“[T]he tax code is the single greatest source of lobbying activity in Washington.” -- Rep. Richard K. Armey, R-Texas

“An old preacher was dying. He sent a message for his IRS agent and his Lawyer (both church members), to come to his home. When they arrived, they were ushered up to his bedroom. As they entered the room, the preacher held out his hands and motioned for them to sit on each side of the bed. The preacher grasped their hands, sighed contentedly, smiled and stared at the ceiling. For a time, no one said anything. Both the IRS agent and Lawyer were touched and flattered that the old preacher would ask them to be with him during his final moment. They were also puzzled because the preacher had never given any indication that he particularly liked either one of them.

Finally, the Lawyer asked, “Preacher, why did you ask the two of us to come?”

The old preacher mustered up some strength, then said weakly, “Jesus died between two thieves, and that’s how I want to go, too.”

6.10.1 Legal Dictionary Definitions for “United States”

We looked at five different legal dictionaries and a Collegiate dictionary for the term “United States”. Here is a list of the legal dictionaries we examined:

1. Bouvier’s Law Dictionary, Revised Sixth Edition, 1856.
2. Law Dictionary, Barron’s, Copyright 1996, ISBN 0-8120-3096-6.
3. Merriam-Webster’s Dictionary of Law, Copyright 1996. (<http://dictionary.lp.findlaw.com/>)
4. Black’s Law Dictionary, Seventh Edition, Copyright 1999, ISBN 0-314-24130-2.
5. Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, Copyright 1990, ISBN 0-314-76271-X.

Interestingly, only ONE of these dictionaries identified the definition of the legal term “United States”, and this edition was out of print after 1999! Recall that we said in section 3.12.1.23 that the definition of “United States” is a very important key to understanding the trick that Congress has played on the American people with the income tax. Even more interesting is that the Sixth Edition of Black’s Law Dictionary was the only one of the above which properly and

1 completely defined the term “United States”, and even that definition was removed from the Seventh Edition of the same
2 dictionary by the publisher, in an apparent effort to further conceal the truth about the limited jurisdiction of our federal
3 government. If the average American understood that there are actually THREE independent definitions for the term
4 “United States” as ruled by the united states supreme Court in Hooven & Allison Co. v. Evatt, 324 U.S. 652 (1945), then a
5 lot more people we believe would better understand the very limited application of the federal and state income tax statutes.
6 If they understood that the term used in the Internal Revenue Code for “United States” actually means the District of
7 Columbia, then they would understand that they are NOT residents of the [federal] United States**, but instead are
8 residents of the United States of America. This is the foundation of the idea that the IRC is “special law”. As we pointed
9 out in section 1.11.3 entitled “How Come my Accountant or Tax Attorney Doesn’t Know This”, it seems quite clear to us
10 that there are very good reasons why your attorney would claim he didn’t know this. Here is a summary of just a few of 11 those reasons:

- 12 1. Lawyers make money by litigating rather than settling.
- 13 2. The way to encourage litigation is to put the most assets and property possible at legal risk, or at least to fool people 14 into thinking they are at risk.
- 15 3. There are two main ways to get the average person to put their assets at legal risk:
  - 16 3.1. Getting a marriage license from the state. Notice we didn’t say getting married, because you can get married 17 without a marriage license from the state, and instead have a prenuptial agreement and a private wedding where 18 the priest doesn’t sign any kind of marriage license.
  - 19 3.2. Owing taxes to the government, who incidentally own the courts and love to use their own home turf to steal and 20 extort tax money out of the average citizen.
- 21 4. Lawyers therefore have a financial interest to make you believe that your assets are at risk by making you think that 22 you owe income taxes.
- 23 5. If no one owed income taxes, we would need probably 1/2 as many lawyers (and accountants) as we have now and the 24 few that remained would charge less for their services because they would be in far less demand. The following fields
25 of law would see drastic cuts:
  - 26 5.1. Probate attorneys.
  - 27 5.2. Tax attorneys.
  - 28 5.3. Legislators and legislative analysts.
- 29 6. Can you see why the American Bar Association and most lawyers wouldn’t want to put the definition of “United 30 States” in any of the legal dictionaries?

31 We would venture to say that probably 70% of attorneys, after you tell them the correct definition of “United States”,
32 would claim that they didn’t know the proper legal definition or even what the supreme Court said was the definition.
33 Lawyers are just as fallible as the rest of us. We would also venture to say that even the ones who do know the correct
34 definition and who are familiar with the supreme Court’s definition of the term would never admit to it because it would 35 undermine their profession! Furthermore, about the same percentage of attorneys don’t know that most Americans actually 36 have dual citizenship (federal and state), and what the rights are of each type of citizen.

37 After we examined four contemporary legal dictionaries in vain for a definition of the term “United States”, then we went
38 to Webster’s Ninth New Collegiate Dictionary, 1983, Merriam-Webster, p. 1291 and found the following definition:

39 “United States (1617) a federation of states esp. when forming a nation in a usu. specified territory (advocating 40 a United States of Europe).”

41 Even the non-legal college dictionary doesn’t properly define the term “United States”! Is it any wonder that most 42 Americans don’t even know what it means and are deceived into paying income taxes because of their ignorance(?) ...they 43 couldn’t look up the definition of the term even if they really wanted to know, which most of them don’t anyway! The only
44 way to eliminate this kind of ignorance is to either read this book or to look up the definition on the Internet by reading 26
45 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9). We encourage you to do both, or you will be victimized because of your own ignorance.

46 6.10.2 The Taxability of Wages and Income Derived from “Labor” Rather than “Profit” as Described in CLE 47 Materials

48 We looked through ten different student manuals and reference books addressing Federal Taxation at several law
49 bookstores and a law university bookstore for clarification and explanation of the taxability of the following:

- 1 1. Wages.
- 2 2. Labor.
- 3 3. Compensation for “personal services.”
- 4 4. Salaries.

5 Interestingly, NONE of the over ten federal taxation books and dictionaries and other Continuing Legal Education (CLE)
6 materials addressed ANY of the following:

- 7 1. Wages as “property”.
- 8 2. Income taxes only applying to “profit” and the nature of profit in the context of exchanging labor for wages.
- 9 3. The right to labor as a “common right” that cannot be infringed, regulated, or penalized by the government.
- 10 4. The relationship between graduated taxes on wages and slavery, or how such taxes might infringe on rights.

11 Several of the books had examples of how to apply the Internal Revenue Code to specific situations, but NONE of the 12 examples used receipt of wages as a taxable event. We can only conclude that this omission was a deliberate decision by 13 educators in the legal profession to conceal the dastardly truth about income taxes. We also have to assume that the most 14 popular way to conceal the truth is to NOT mention what is NOT taxable, and only to mention what IS taxable. Is it any 15 surprise then that we have a whole generation of tax attorneys out there who haven’t heard the truth because the very
16 curricula they rely on for their legal education excludes the whole truth? In such an environment, does the oath a lawyer
17 would take if he went on the witness stand mean anything?:

18 “I promise to tell the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, so help me God.”

19 If you researched the background of most lawyers, you’d find that they, like most doctors, overwhelmingly got into the 20 profession because of greed and that disproportionately few of them believe in “God”. They are too egotistical and self-
21 sufficient to believe in God or to have to depend on Him for anything. How can a lawyer tell the “whole truth” and not lie
22 taking the oath if he was never taught the “whole truth” to begin with and doesn’t believe in God anyway? Let’s face it,
23 like Satan, a majority of the members of the legal profession have misused the gifts that a Creator they don’t believe in has
24 given them, and never bothered to question the laws beyond what they were taught because it was so profitable to not
25 question authority. Perhaps this explains why early law schools in the late 17th Century in this country required a strong
26 theological background as a prerequisite to studying law. Very few, if any, universities have the same requirements for the 27 study of law these days.

28 6.11 Social Security Chronology<sup>299</sup>

29 When the Social Security Administration first began assigning social security numbers in 1935, SSN cards included the 30 statement "NOT FOR IDENTIFICATION" printed upon their face.

31 The card issued in 1964 contained that very statement while all cards issued today no longer do. Over the years a multitude
32 of new, unintended uses for SSNs have evolved. The result is that SSNs are now widely and routinely demanded for 33 purposes of routine identification. As a result, the SSN has now become a de facto National Identification Number.

34 The following will give you some idea of what the free Citizen who never applied for and therefore never received a social 35 security number is up against when dealing with state and federal bureaucrats.

36 It is obtained from a table prepared on January 13, 1998 by Sandy Cerato of the Social Security Administration's Office of 37 Legislation And Congressional Affairs and chronicles the implementation of the social security number for identification 38 purposes, although it was never originally intended as such.

39 Nowhere within the report does it breathe mention of the fact that an SSN is not required by law of a Citizen because 40 nowhere does any law require the Citizen to apply.

41 Table prepared (1/13/98) by Sandy Cerato of SSA's Office of Legislation &
42 Congressional Affairs

1 1935 The Social Security Act (P.L. 74-271) is enacted. It did not expressly mention the
2 use of SSNs, but it authorized the creation of some type of record keeping scheme.
3 Treasury Decision 4704, a Treasury regulation in 1936 which required the issuance of an
4 account number to each employee covered by the Social Security program. The Social
5 Security Board considered various numbering systems and ways (such as metal tags, etc.)
6 by which employees could indicate they had been issued a number

7 1936-1937 Approximately 30 million applications for SSNs were processed between 8 November 1936 and June 30, 1937.

9 1943 Executive Order 9397 (3 C.F.R. (1943-1948 Comp.) 283-284) required: All Federal 10 components to use the SSN "exclusively" whenever the component found it advisable to 11 set up a new identification system for individuals. The Social Security Board to cooperate 12 with Federal uses of the number by issuing and verifying numbers for other Federal 13 agencies

14 1961 The Civil Service Commission adopted the SSN as an official Federal employee
15 identifier. Internal Revenue Code Amendments (P.L. 87-397) required each taxpayer to 16 furnish identifying number for tax reporting.

17 1962 The Internal Revenue Service adopted the SSN as its official taxpayer identification 18 number.

19 1964 Treasury Department, via internal policy, required buyers of Series H savings bonds
20 to provide their SSNs.

21 1965 Internal Revenue Amendments (P.L. 89-384) enacted Medicare. It became 22 necessary for most individuals age 65 and older to have an SSN.

23 1966 The Veterans Administration began to use the SSN as the hospital admissions
24 number and for patient record keeping.

25 1967 The Department of Defense adopted the SSN in lieu of the military service number
26 for identifying Armed Forces personnel.

27 1970 Bank Records and Foreign Transactions Act (P.L. 91-508) required all banks, 28 savings and loan associations, credit unions and brokers/dealers in securities to obtain the 29 SSNs of all of their customers. Also, financial institutions were required to file a report
30 with the IRS, including the SSN of the customer, for any transaction involving more than 31 $10,000.

32 1971 SSA task force report published which proposed that SSA take a "cautious and 33 conservative" position toward SSN use and do nothing to promote the use of the SSN as 34 an identifier. The report recommended that SSA use mass SSN enumeration in schools as 35 a long-range, cost-effective approach to tightening up the SSN system, and consider 36 cooperating with specific health, education and welfare uses of the SSN by State, local,
37 and other nonprofit organizations.

38 1972 Social Security Amendments of 1972 (P.L. 92-603): Required SSA to issue SSNs to 39 all legally admitted aliens at entry and of anyone receiving or applying for any benefit
40 paid for by Federal funds; Required SSA to obtain evidence to establish age, citizenship, 41 or alien status and identity. Authorized SSA to enumerate children at the time they first 42 entered school.

43 1973 Buyers of series E savings bonds are required by the Treasury Department to 44 provide their SSNs. Report of the HEW Secretary's Advisory Committee on Automated
45 Personal Data System concluded that the adoption of a universal identifier by this country

1 was not desirable; also found that the SSN was not suitable for such a purpose as it does
2 not meet the criteria of a universal identifier that distinguishes a person from all others.

3 1974 Privacy Act (P.L. 93-579) enacted effective September 27, 1975 to limit
4 governmental use of the SSN: Provided that no State or local government agency may 5 withhold a benefit from a person simply because the individual refuses to furnish his or 6 her SSN. Required that Federal, State and local agencies which request an individual to 7 disclose his/her SSN inform the individual if disclosure was mandatory or voluntary.
8 (This was the first mention of SSN use by local governments.)

9 1975 Social Services Amendments of 1974 (P.L. 93-647) provided that: disclosure of an
10 individual's SSN is a condition of eligibility for AFDC benefits; and Office of Child
11 Support enforcement Parent Locator Service may require disclosure of limited
12 information (including SSN and whereabouts) contained in SSA records.

13 1976 Tax Reform Act of 1976 (P.L. 94-455) included the following amendments to the 14 Social Security Act: To allow use by the States of the SSN in the administration of any 15 tax, general public assistance, driver's license or motor vehicle registration law within 16 their jurisdiction and to authorize the States to require individuals affected by such laws
17 to furnish their SSNs to the States; To make misuse of the SSN for any purpose a 18 violation of the Social Security Act; To make disclosure or compelling disclosure of the 19 SSN of any person a violation of the Social Security Act. To amend section 6109 of the 20 Internal Revenue Code to provide that the SSN be used as the tax identification number
21 (TIN) for all tax purposes. While the Treasury Department had been using the SSN as the 22 TIN by regulation since 1962, this law codified that requirement. Federal Advisory 23 Committee on False Identification recommended that penalties for misuse should be 24 increased and evidence requirements tightened; rejected the idea of national identifier and 25 did not even consider the SSN for such a purpose.

26 1977 Food Stamp Act of 1977 (P.L. 96-58) required disclosure of SSNs of all household
27 members as a condition of eligibility for participation in the food stamp program. Privacy
28 Protection Study Commission recommended that: No steps be taken towards developing 29 standard, universal label for individuals until safeguards and policies regarding 30 permissible uses and disclosures were proven effective; and Executive Order 9397 be 31 amended so that Federal agencies could no longer use it as legal authority to require
32 disclosure of an individual's SSN. (No action taken.) The Carter Administration proposed
33 that the Social Security card be one of the authorized documents by which an employer 34 could be assured that a job applicant could work in this country but also stated that the 35 SSN card should not become a national identity document.

36 1978 SSA required evidence of age, citizenship, and identity of all SSN applicants.

37 1981 Reagan Administration stated that it "is explicitly opposed to the creation of a 38 national identity card" but recognized the need for a means for employers to comply with 39 the employer sanctions provisions of its immigration reform legislation. Omnibus Budget
40 Reconciliation Act of 1981 (P.L. 97-35) required the disclosure of the SSNs of all adult
41 members in the household of children applying to the school lunch program. Social 42 Security Benefits Act (P.L. 97-123) Section 4 added alteration and forgery of a Social 43 Security card to the list of prohibited acts and increased the penalties for such acts.
44 Section 6 required any Federal, State or local government agency to furnish the name and 45 SSN of prisoners convicted of a felony to the Secretary of HHS, to enforce suspension of 46 disability benefits to certain imprisoned felons. Department of Defense Authorization Act
47 (P.L. 97-86) required disclosure of the SSNs to the Selective Service System of all 48 individuals required to register for the draft.

49 1982 Debt Collection Act (P.L. 97-365) required that all applicants for loans under any 50 Federal loan program furnish their SSNs to the agency supplying the loan. All Social

1 Security cards issued to legal aliens not authorized to work within the United States were 2 annotated "NOT VALID FOR EMPLOYMENT" beginning in May.

3 1983 The Social Security Amendments of 1983 (P.L. 98-21) required that new and
4 replacement Social Security cards issued after October 30 be made of banknote paper and
5 (to the maximum extent practicable) not be subject to counterfeiting. The Interest and 6 Dividend Tax Compliance Act (P.L. 98-67) requires SSNs for all interest-bearing
7 accounts and provides a penalty of $50 for all individuals who fail to furnish a correct
8 TIN (usually the SSN).

9 1984 Deficit Reduction Act of 1984 (P.L. 98-369) Amended the Social Security Act to 10 establish an income and eligibility verification system involving State agencies
11 administering the AFDC, Medicaid, unemployment compensation, the food stamp
12 programs, and State programs under a plan approved under title I, X, XIV, or XVI of the 13 Act. States were permitted to require the SSN as a condition of eligibility for benefits
14 under any of these programs. Amended Section 6050I of the IRC to require that persons
15 engaged in a trade or business file a report (including SSNs) with the IRS for cash
16 transactions over $10,000. Amended Section 215 of the IRC to authorize the Secretary of 17 HHS to publish regulations that require a spouse paying alimony to furnish IRS with the 18 taxpayer identification number (i.e., the SSN) of the spouse receiving alimony payments.

19 1986 The Immigration Reform and Control Act of 1986 (P.L. 99-603): Required the 20 Comptroller General to investigate technological changes that could reduce the potential
21 for counterfeiting Social Security cards; Provides that the Social Security card may be
22 used to establish the eligibility of a prospective employee for employment; and Required
23 the Secretary of HHS to undertake a study of the feasibility and costs of establishing an
24 SSN verification system Tax Reform Act of 1986 (P.L. 99-514) requires individuals
25 filing a tax return due after December 31, 1987, to include the taxpayer identification
26 number--usually the SSN--of each dependent age 5 or older. Commercial Motor Vehicle
27 Safety Act of 1986 (P.L. 99-750) authorized the Secretary of Transportation to require
28 the use of the SSN on commercial motor vehicle operators' licenses. Higher Education
29 Amendments of 1986 (P.L. 99-498) required that student loan applicants submit their 30 SSN as a condition of eligibility.

31 1987 SSA initiated a demonstration project on August 17 in the state of New Mexico
32 enabling parents to obtain Social Security numbers for their newborn infants
33 automatically when the infant's birth is registered by the State. The program was 34 expanded nationwide in 1989. Currently, all 50 union states participate in the program, as 35 well as New York City, Washington, D.C., and Puerto Rico.

36 1988 Housing and Community Development Act of 1987 (P.L. 100-242) authorized the 37 Secretary of HUD to require disclosure of a person's SSN as a condition of eligibility for 38 any HUD program. The Family Support Act of 1988 (P.L. 100-485): Section 125
39 required, beginning November 1, 1990, a State to obtain the SSNs of the parents when 40 issuing a birth certificate. Section 704(a) required individuals filing a tax return due after 41 December 31, 1989, to include the taxpayer identification number--usually the SSN--of 42 each dependent age 2 or older. The Technical and Miscellaneous Revenue Act of 1988
43 (P.L. 100-647): Authorized a State and/or any blood donation facility to use SSNs to 44 identify blood donors (205(c)(2)(F)). Required that all title II beneficiaries either have or 45 have applied for an SSN in order to receive benefits. This provision became effective
46 with dates of initial entitlement of June 1989 or later. Beneficiaries who refused 47 enumeration were entitled but placed in suspense. Anti-Drug Abuse Act of 1988 (P.L.
48 100-690) deleted the $5,000 and $25,000 upper limits on fines that can be imposed for 49 violations of section 208 of the Social Security Act. The general limit of $250,000 for 50 felonies in the U.S. Code now applied to SSN violations under section 208 of the Social 51 Security Act. Also, penalties for misuse of SSNs apply as well in cases where the number 52 is referred to by any other name (e.g., taxpayer identification number (TIN)).

1 1989 Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1989 (P.L. 101-239) required that the 2 National Student Loan Data System include, among other things, the names and SSNs of 3 borrowers. Child Nutrition and WIC Reauthorization Act of 1989 (P.L. 101-147) requires 4 the member of the household who applies for the school lunch program to provide the 5 SSN of the parent of the child for whom the application is made.

6 1990 Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1990 (P.L. 101-508): Section 7201
7 (Computer Matching and Privacy Protection Amendments of 1990) provided that no
8 adverse action may be taken against an individual receiving benefits as a result of a
9 matching program without verification of the information or notification of the individual
10 regarding the findings with time to contest. Section 8053, required an SSN for eligibility
11 for benefits from the Department of Veterans Affairs (DVA). Section 11112, required
12 that individuals filing a tax return due after December 31, 1991, include the taxpayer
13 identification number--usually the SSN--of each dependent age 1 or older. Food and 14 Agricultural Resources Act of 1990 (P.L. 101-624), Section 1735: Required an SSN for 15 the officers of food and retail stores that redeem Food Stamps. Provided that SSNs
16 maintained as a result of any law enacted on or after October 1, 1990, will be confidential
17 and may not be disclosed.

18 1994 Social Security Independence and Program Improvements Act of 1994 (P.L. 103-
19 296): Section 304, authorized the use of the SSN for jury selection. Section 314, 20 authorized cross-matching of SSNs and Employer Identification Numbers maintained by 21 the Department of Agriculture with other Federal agencies for the purpose of 22 investigating both food stamp fraud and violations of other Federal laws. Section 318,
23 authorized the use of the SSN by the Department of Labor in administration of Federal 24 workers' compensation laws.

25 1996 Personal Responsibility and Work Opportunity Reconciliation Act of 1996 (P.L.
26 104-193) (Welfare Reform ): Section 111 required the Commissioner of Social Security
27 to develop and submit to Congress a prototype of a counterfeit-resistant Social Security 28 card that: is made of durable, tamper-resistant material (e.g., plastic); employs 29 technologies that provide security features (e.g., magnetic stripe); and provides 30 individuals with reliable proof of citizenship or legal resident alien status. Section 111
31 also required the Commissioner of Social Security to study and report to Congress on 32 different methods of improving the Social Security card application process, including 33 evaluation of the cost and workload implications of issuing a counterfeit-resistant Social 34 Security card for all individuals and evaluation of the feasibility and cost implications of 35 imposing a user fee for replacement cards. Section 316 required HHS to transmit to SSA,
36 for verification purposes, certain information about individuals and employers maintained
37 under the Federal Parent Locator Service in an automated directory. SSA is required to 38 verify the accuracy of, correct, or supply to the extent possible, and report to HHS the 39 name, SSN, and birth date of individuals and the employer identification number of 40 employers. SSA is to be reimbursed by HHS for the cost of this verification service. This
41 section also required all Federal agencies (including SSA) to report quarterly the name
42 and SSN of each employee and the wages paid to the employee during the previous 43 quarter. Section 317 provides that State child support enforcement procedures require the 44 SSN of any applicant for a professional license, commercial driver's license, occupational 45 license, or marriage license be recorded on the application. The SSN of any person 46 subject to a divorce decree, support order, or paternity determination or 47 acknowledgement would have to be placed in the pertinent records. SSNs are required on 48 death certificates. Section 451 provides that, in order to be eligible for the Earned Income
49 Tax Credit, an individual must include on his or her tax return an SSN which was not
50 assigned solely for non-work purposes. Department of Defense Appropriations Act, 1997
51 (P.L. 104-208) ( Division C (Illegal Immigration Reform and Immigrant Responsibility
52 Act of 1996) (Immigration Reform): Sections 401-404 provide for 3 specific employment
53 verification pilot programs in which employers would voluntarily participate. In general,
54 the pilot programs would allow an employer to confirm the identity and employment

1 eligibility of the individual. SSA and the Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS)
2 would provide a secondary verification process to confirm the validity of the information
3 provided. SSA would compare the name and SSN provided and advise whether the name
4 and number match SSA records and whether the SSN is valid for employment. Section
5 414 requires the Commissioner to report to Congress every year, the aggregate number of 6 SSNs issued to non-citizens not authorized to work, but under which earnings were 7 reported. Also requires the Commissioner to transmit to the Attorney General a report on 8 the extent to which SSNs and Social Security cards are used by non-citizens for 9 fraudulent purposes. Section 415 authorizes the Attorney General to require any non-
10 citizen to provide his or her SSN for purposes of inclusion in any record maintained by 11 the Attorney General or INS. Section 656 provide for improvements in identification-
12 related documents; i.e., birth certificates and driver's licenses. These sections require
13 publication of regulations which set standards, including security features and, in the case
14 of driver's licenses, require that an SSN appear on the license. Federal agencies are 15 precluded from accepting as proof of identity, documents which do not meet the 16 regulatory standards. Section 657 provides for the development of a prototype Social 17 Security card. The requirements are the same as in Section 111 of the Welfare reform
18 legislation (described above) with the exception that the Comptroller General is also to 19 study and report to Congress on different methods of improving the Social Security card
20 application process.

21 1997 Department of Defense Appropriations Act, 1997 (P.L. 104-208) (Division C--
22 Illegal Immigration Reform and Immigrant Responsibility Act of 1996) (Immigration
23 Reform): Sections 401-404 provide for 3 specific employment verification pilot programs
24 in which employers would voluntarily participate. In general, the pilot programs would 25 allow an employer to confirm the identity and employment eligibility of the individual.
26 SSA and INS would provide a secondary verification process to confirm the validity of 27 the information provided. SSA would compare the name and SSN provided and advise 28 whether the name and number match SSA records and whether the SSN is valid for 29 employment. Section 414 required the Commissioner of Social Security to report to 30 Congress every year the aggregate number of SSNs issued to non-citizens not authorized 31 to work, but under which earnings were reported. Also required the Commissioner of 32 Social Security to transmit to the Attorney General a report on the extent to which SSNs
33 and Social Security cards are used by non-citizens for fraudulent purposes. Section 415
34 authorized the Attorney General to require any non-citizen to provide his or her SSN for 35 purposes of inclusion in any record maintained by the Attorney General or INS. Section
36 656 provided for improvements in identification-related documents; i.e., birth certificates
37 and drivers licenses. These sections require publication of regulations which set uniform 38 standards, including security features, and, in the case of drivers licenses, require that an 39 SSN appear on the license. Federal agencies are precluded from accepting as proof of 40 identity documents which do not meet the regulatory standards. Section 657 provided for 41 the development of a prototype Social Security card. The requirements are the same as in 42 Section 111 of the Welfare reform legislation (described above) with the exception that 43 the Comptroller General is also to study and report to Congress on different methods of 44 improving the Social Security card application process. 1997 Taxpayer Relief Act of 45 1997 (P.L. 105-34) Section 1090 requires an applicant for an SSN under age 18 to 46 provide evidence of his or her parents' names and SSNs in addition to required evidence
47 of age, identity, and citizenship. Report to Congress on "Options for Enhancing the 48 Social Security Card" released on September 22, 1997.

49 Keep in mind that there is no authority under the Constitution for the government to require that a free Citizen number
50 himself or withhold services if he does not. Certainly the Citizen who chooses not to obtain and use a number or who later
51 revokes the application for the number as some have done faces a future of self-reliance and individual responsibility, with 52 no help from Uncle Sam.

53 6.12 Conclusion: The Duck Test

1 What can one make of this pattern of alterations that disguise the truth behind the law and this pattern of behavior
2 throughout the U.S. Government, including the Congress, the courts, the Treasury, and the IRS to misrepresent it? Is the
3 income tax operating as a hoax? Let's apply the "duck test":

4 "If it looks like a duck, waddles like a duck, and quacks like a duck, it must BE a duck!"

5 Thomas Jefferson said it better:

6 "Single acts of tyranny may be ascribed to the accidental opinion of a day; but a series of oppressions, begun at 7 a distinguished period, and pursued unalterably through every change in ministers [administrations], too
8 plainly proves a deliberate systematic plan of reducing us to slavery."

9 We assert that the evidence presented in this document is more than adequate proof that the income tax does not apply not 10 only to most Americans, but it doesn't apply to most "U.S. citizens" either! Has our detailed exposition raised doubt in 11 your mind about what the law says? Here is what the Supreme Court has said about doubt.

12 "In the interpretation of statutes levying taxes it is the established rule not to...enlarge their operations so as to 13 embrace matters not specifically pointed out. In case of doubt they are construed most strongly against the 14 government, and in favor of the citizen."
15 [Gould v. Gould, 245 U.S. 151 (1917)]

16 "Keeping in mind the well-settled rule that the citizen is exempt from taxation unless the same is imposed by
17 clear and unequivocal language, and that where the construction of a tax law is doubtful, the doubt is to be
18 resolved in favor of those upon whom the tax is sought to be laid."
19 [Spreckels Sugar Refining Co. v. McClain, 192 U.S. 397 (1904)]

20 Shouldn't these court rulings be applied to the income tax?

21 Because of Article 1, Section 8 of the Constitution, Congress could not impose a tax on all income earned in the United 22 States of America. What Congress did instead was to impose a municipal tax within only the District of Columbia on 23 matters which they could tax (international and foreign commerce), and write the law in such a way that it would give the 24 impression that it also applied to the income of most Americans outside that jurisdiction and in the 50 union states. The 25 Secretary of the Treasury wrote corresponding regulations with a similar goal: to tell a truth while implying a lie. Despite a
26 longstanding and ongoing effort by some in government to confuse and obfuscate, the literal truth has remained in the law.
27 Though it is a complex process, the current statutes and regulations by themselves do reveal the limited application of the 28 Internal Revenue Code. The older statutes and regulations then add extensive reinforcement and clarity to the conclusions
29 reached by deciphering the current law. The historical documents also give ample evidence to justify an accusation, against 30 the legislators in Congress and the authors of the regulations at the Department of the Treasury, of intent to defraud the 31 American people of money not legally owed.

32 Aside from arguments about specific details, there is one giant hurdle for those who would still insist that most Americans
33 receive taxable income: what is the alternate conclusion that accounts for every citation in this document? There is 34 extensive documentation, not only in the current statutes and regulations, but throughout 87 years of statutory and
35 regulatory history, which supports the conclusions of this document. It would be absurd to claim that a tax was imposed on 36 the income of most Americans, and that by mistake or coincidence Congress and the Secretary put into the statutes and
37 regulations such an enormous amount of information, spanning nearly a century, which indicates that the tax applies only to 38 those engaged in international or foreign commerce. Quite simply, there is no conclusion other than the conclusion of this 39 document which explains all of the evidence.

40 QUESTION FOR DOUBTERS: Is there some other "interpretation" of the statutes and regulations which would show
41 domestic income of United States citizens as taxable, and also explain the meaning of all of the citations in this document?

8. DEFINITIONS

alien: A person born in a foreign country, who owes his allegiance to that country; one not a citizen or national of the country in which he is living. A RESIDENT ALIEN is a person admitted to permanent resident status in the country by the immigration authorities but who has not been granted citizenship.

An alien is a “person” within the meaning of the due process clause of the Fourteenth Amendment. 347 U.S. 522, 530. And alienage is treated as a “suspect” classification for purposes of equal protection analysis. For example, the Supreme Court has invalidated statuses that prevent aliens from entering a state’s civil service and from receiving educational benefits. But where a job is “bound up with the operation of the State as a governmental entity”—policemen and public school teachers, for example—states may exclude aliens. 441 U.S. 68, 73.<sup>1</sup>

burden of proof: A rule of evidence that makes a person prove a certain thing or the contrary will be assumed by the court. For example, in criminal trials, the prosecution has the burden of proving the accused guilty because innocence is presumed.

citizen of the United States: — defined in 8 U.S.C. §1401. In the context of federal statutes: Means a person born or naturalized in the federal United States (federal zone) and a subject citizen of Congress. Typically, the U.S. government allows “nationals”, who are persons born outside the federal zone and inside the 50 states to declare that they are “U.S. citizens” so that they can volunteer to become completely subject to the jurisdiction of the federal courts and become the proper subjects of the Internal Revenue Code, but technically, they are not “U.S. citizens” in the context of federal statutes as legally defined. “U.S. citizens” are possessors of statutory ‘civil’ rights and privileges granted by Congress and stipulated by statute, code or regulation, found mostly in 48 U.S.C. §1421b. In the context of the Constitution and the rulings of the U.S. Supreme Court: A “national of the United States” born in any one of the states of the Union and not on federal territory and defined under 8 U.S.C. §1408 .

claim: the assertion of a right to money or property; the aggregate of operative facts giving rise to a right enforceable in the courts. A claim must show the existence of a right, an injury, and a prayer for damages. In tax cases, this means that the petitioner who is litigating against wrongful taking of taxes must show a law or Constitutional right that has been violated in the process of illegally taking taxes, a harm or injury that is quantifiable because of that taking, such that the court can award damages against the IRS. Otherwise, the tax case will be dismissed without prejudice because it lacks merit. Naïve and inexperienced tax freedom advocates who represent themselves in court as pro se litigants quite commonly do not specify a claim upon which they can base their case and usually end up being assessed attorney fees and having their case dismissed by the courts.

coercion: “Compulsion; constraint; compelling by force or arms or threat. General Motors v. Belvins, D.C.Colo., 144 F.Supp. 381, 384. It may be actual, direct, or positive, as where physical force is used to compel act against one’s will, or implied, legal or constructive, as where one party is constrained by subjugation to another to do what his free will would refuse. As used in testamentary law, any pressure by which testator’s action is restrained against his free will in the execution of his testament. “Coercion” that vitiates confession can be mental as well as physical, and question is whether accused was deprived of his free choice to admit, deny, or refuse to answer. Garrity v. State of N.J., U.S.N.J., 385 U.S. 493, 87 S.Ct. 616, 618, 17 L.Ed.2d 562.

A person is guilty of criminal coercion if, with purpose to unlawfully restrict another’s freedom of action to his detriment, he threatens to: (a) commit any criminal offense; or (b) accuse anyone of a criminal offense; or (c) expose any secret tending to subject any person to hatred, contempt or ridicule, or to impair his credit or business repute; or (d) take or withhold action as an official, or cause an official to take or withhold action. Model Penal Code, §212.5.

See also Duress; Extortion; Threat; Undue influence.” [Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 258]

color: “Pretense of official right to do an act made by one who has no such right. An act under color of office is an act of any officer who claims authority to do the act by reason of his own office when the office does not confer on him any such authority.” [Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition]

color of office: “A claim or assumption of right to do an act by virtue of an office, made by a person who is legally destitute of such right.” Feller v. Gates, 40 Or. 543, 67 P. 416, 56 L.R.S. 630, 91 Am.St.Rep. 492. [Black’s Law Dictionary, 4th Edition]

common right: Right derivative from common law. Strother v. Lucas, 37 U.S. (12 Pet.) 410, 437, 9 L.Ed. 1137. Right peculiar to certain people is not a common right. Perdue v. Zoning Bd. Of Appeals of the City of Norwalk, 118 Conn. 174, 171 A. 26, 28. [Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition]

compel: The following definitions are offered for the word compel. These definitions bear directly on any arguments having to do with the exercise of 5th Amendment rights as it pertains to the filing of income tax returns :

Black’s Law Dictionary defines the word “compel” as follows:

“To urge forcefully, under extreme pressure. The word ‘compel’ as used in constitutional right to be free from being compelled in a criminal case to be a witness against one’s self means to be subjected to some coercion, fear, terror, inducement, trickery or threat—either physically or psychologically, blatantly or subtly; the hallmark of compulsion is the presence of some operative force producing an involuntary response. U.S. v. Escandar, C.A. Fla., 465 F.2d. 438, 442”

The Random House Dictionary of the English Language defines “compel” as follows:

“1. To force, drive, esp. to a course of action. 2. To secure or bring about by force. 3. To force to submit; subdue. 4. To overpower.”

definition: A description of a thing by its properties; an explanation of the meaning of a word or term. The process of stating the exact meaning of a word by means of other words. Such a description of the thing defined, including all essential elements and excluding all nonessential, as to distinguish it from all other things and classes.” [Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, page 423]

discovery: The term used to describe various methods for obtaining evidence in advance of trial, including such things as interrogatories, depositions and various motions to permit the inspection of documents etc.

distrain: the act or process of distraint, whereby a person (the DISTRAINOR), without prior court approval, seizes the personal property of another located upon the distrainer’s land in satisfaction of a claim, as a pledge for the performance of a duty, or in reparation of an injury. Where goods are seized in satisfaction of a claim, the distrainer can hold the goods until the claim is paid and, failing payment, may sell them in satisfaction. Originally, distress was a landlord’s remedy (see lien [LANDORD’S LIEN], 324 A.2d. 102, 104) and was distinguishable from attachment, which is a court-ordered seizure of goods or property. The persons whose goods are distrained upon has recourse against the wrongful distrainer in replevin.

Distrain has been superseded in most states of the United States by statutory provisions for debt collection, the enforcement of security interests, and landlord-tenant relations.

donation: A gift. A transfer of the title of property to one who receives it without paying for it. The act by which the owner of a thing voluntarily transfers the title and possession of the same from himself to another person, without any consideration. [Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, page 487]

due process: administering of law through courts of justice in accordance with established and sanctioned legal principles and procedures, and with safeguards for the protection of individual rights. As determined by custom and law, due process has become a guarantee of civil as well as criminal rights. In the United States, the phrase due process first appears in the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, ratified in 1791. Because

1 the amendment refers specifically to federal and not state actions, another amendment was necessary to include
 2 the states. This was accomplished by the 14th Amendment, ratified in 1868. Thus was established at both federal
 3 and state levels that no person "shall be deprived of life, liberty, or property without due process of law." The 4 guarantee of due process requires that no person be deprived of life, liberty, or property without a fair and
 5 adequate process. In criminal proceedings this guarantee includes the fundamental aspects of a fair trial, including 6 the right to adequate notice in advance of the trial, the right to counsel, the right to confront and cross-examine
 7 witnesses, the right to refuse self-incriminating testimony, and the right to have all elements of the crime proven
 8 beyond a reasonable doubt.

9 duress: "Any unlawful threat or coercion used by a person to induce another to act (or to refrain from acting) in a manner
 10 he or she otherwise would not (or would). Subjecting person to improper pressure which overcomes his will and 11 coerces him to comply with demand to which he would not yield if acting as free agent. Head v. Gadsden Civil
 12 Service Bd., Ala.Civ.App., 389 So.2d. 516, 519. Application of such pressure or constraint as compels man to go
 13 against his will, and takes away his free agency, destroying power of refusing to comply with unjust demands of 14 another. Haumont v. Security State Bank, 220 Neb. 809, 374 N.W.2d. 2,6.

15 ...

16 A contract entered into under duress by physical compulsion is void. Also, if a party's manifestation of assent to 17 a contract is induced by an improper threat by the other party that leaves the victim no reasonable alternative, the 18 contract is voidable by the victim. Restatement, Second, Contracts §§174, 175.

19 As a defense to a civil action, it must be pleaded affirmatively. Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 8(c).

20 As an affirmative defense in criminal law, one who, under the pressure of an unlawful threat from another human
 21 being to harm him (or to harm a third person), commits what would otherwise be a crime may, under some 22 circumstances, be justified in doing what he did and thus not be guilty of the crime in question. See Model Penal 23 Code §2.09. See also Coercion; Economic duress; Extortion; Undue influence."
 24 [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 504]
 25
 26

27 employee: (see 26 U.S.C. §3401(c)) For purposes of this chapter, the term "employee" includes an officer, employee, or
 28 elected official of the United States, a State, or any political subdivision thereof, or the District of Columbia, or
 29 any agency or instrumentality of any one or more of the foregoing. The term "employee" also includes an officer
 30 of a corporation. Refer to section 3.6.1.1 for further explanation.

31 employer: (see 26 U.S.C. §3401(d)). For purposes of this chapter, the term "employer" means the person for whom an 32 individual performs or performed any service, of whatever nature, as the employee of such person, except that -

33 (1) if the person for whom the individual performs or performed the services does not have control of the 34 payment of the wages for such services, the term "employer" (except for purposes of subsection (a)) means the 35 person having control of the payment of such wages, and

36 (2) in the case of a person paying wages on behalf of a nonresident alien individual, foreign partnership, or 37 foreign corporation, not engaged in trade or business within the United States, the term "employer" (except for 38 purposes of subsection (a)) means such person.

39 extortion under the color of office:

40 "...Unlawful taking by any officer by color of his office, of any money or thing of value, that is not due to him, or more
 41 than is due or before it is due." 4 Bla.Comm. 141; Com. v. Saulsbury, 152 Pa. 554, 25 A. 610; U.S. v. Denver, D.C.N.C.
 42 14 F. 595; Bush v. State, 19 Ariz. 195, 168 P. 508, 509..."Obtaining property from another, induced by wrongful use of 43 force or fear, OR under color of official right." See State v. Logan, 104 La. 760, 29 So. 336; In re Rempfer, 51 S.D. 393,
 44 216 N.W. 355, 359, 55 A.L.R. 1346; Lee v. State, 16 Ariz. 291, 145 P. 244, 246, Ann.Cas. 1917B, 131.
 45 [Black's Law Dictionary, Revised 4th Edition]

46 FOIA: The Freedom Of Information Act. FOIA is the secret key to unlock a vast amount of information, especially 47 information about you. Thanks to this act, everyday citizens have access to records, files, and other information
 48 just for the asking. Of course you are required to use the proper format in your request, but extremely valuable
 49 information can be obtained by using this simple procedure that very few use. The IRS, for instance, keeps
 50 literally countless secret files on citizens (law-abiding or not) of the United States. Most folks would be interested

1 in knowing what kind of information is being kept on them by the government. By using FOIA, you can find out
2 what they know what they don't..... in addition to protecting yourself and building your case against them.

3 foreign country: IRS Publication 54 (2000), p. 12, defines this term as follows:

4 "A foreign country usually is any territory (including the air space and territorial waters) under the sovereignty
5 of a government other than that of the United States.... The term 'foreign country' does not include Puerto Rico,
6 Guam, the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands, the Virgin Islands, or U.S. possessions such as 7 American Samoa."

8 You will note that this definition is consistent with 26 U.S.C. §7701, which defines "United States" as the District
9 of Columbia and the States" and "State" as the District of Columbia. Another way of stating this is that the 10 "U.S." includes only the "federal zone" as used in the tax code and as described in section 4.7. With this
11 definition in mind, the 50 states of the United States of America are considered as foreign countries while any 12 federal possession or territory is considered part of the "federal zone".

13 Foreign government: "The government of the United States of America, as distinguished from the government of the 14 several states." (Black's Law Dictionary, 5th Edition; removed from the Sixth and Seventh Editions by a legal 15 profession that wants to hide the truth and sell you into slavery to the U.S. government by unlawfully extending 16 the jurisdiction for personal income taxes outside the federal zone.)

17 Foreign Laws: "The laws of a foreign country or sister state." (Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition)

18 Foreign States: "Nations outside of the United States...Term may also refer to another state; i.e. a sister state. The term
19 'foreign nations', ...should be construed to mean all nations and states other than that in which the action is 20 brought; and hence, one state of the Union is foreign to another, in that sense." (Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth
21 Edition)

22 forum: Lat. A court of justice, or judicial tribunal; a place of jurisdiction; a place of litigation; an administrative body.
23 Particular place where judicial or administrative remedy is pursued. See also Venue. (Black's Law Dictionary, 24 Sixth Edition). The federal district, circuit, and Supreme courts and the "federal zone" constitute the forum
25 within which the government of the United States operates and exercises exclusive jurisdiction. In more limited
26 cases, it also has jurisdiction in criminal matters that involve multiple states.

27 income: Below is the definition, taken from the Supreme Court case of Eisner v. Macomber, 252 U.S. 189 (1920) and the 28 definition found in Bouvier's Law Dictionary:

29 'Income may be defined as the gain derived from capital, from labor, or from both combined,' provided it be

In reference to taxation, the word may mean the legislative function and declaration of the subject and rate or amount of taxation. People v. Mahoney, 13 Cal.2d. 729, 91 P.2d. 1029; or the rate of taxation rather than the physical act of applying the rate to the property, Lowden v. Texas County Excise Board, 187 Okl. 365 103 P.2d. 98, 100; or the formal order, by proper authority declaring property subject to taxation at fixed rate at its assessed valuation, *State v. lien: A claim, encumbrance, or charge on property for payment of some debt, obligation or duty. Sullins v. Sullins, 6 Wash.2d 283, 396 P.2d. 886, 888. Qualified right of property which a creditor has in or over specific property of his debtor, as security for the debt or charge or for performance of some act. The word "lien" is a generic term and, standing alone, includes liens acquired by contract or by operation of law. Egyptian Supply Co. v. Boyd, C.C.A.Ky., 117 F.2d. 608, 612.

A charge against or interest in property to secure payment of a debt or performance of an obligation. Bankruptcy Code §101.

Lien by operation of law. Where the law itself, without the stipulation of the parties, raises a lien, as an implication or legal consequence from the relation of the parties or the circumstances of their dealings. Liens of this species may arise either under the rules of common law or of equity or under a statute. In the first case they are called "common-law liens;" in the second, "equitable liens;" in the third, "statutory liens."

national: means a person born or naturalized outside the federal United States (federal zone) but inside the country United States and who is subject to the political but not legislative jurisdiction of the federal government at the time of birth as the Fourteenth Amendment (illegally ratified) requires. Synonymous with "American Citizen", "American National", "Natural Born Sovereign Citizen", or "nonresident alien". Typically, the U.S. government allows and even encourages "nationals" to incorrectly declare that they are "U.S. citizens" so that they can volunteer to become completely subject to the exclusive jurisdiction of the federal courts and become the proper subjects of the Internal Revenue Code, but technically, they are not "U.S. citizens" as legally defined. 8 U.S.C. §1452, and 8 U.S.C. §1101\(a\)\(22\)\(B\) define who are "nationals". The following code section from 8 U.S.C. §1101\(a\)\(22\)\(B\) defines the type of "national" that most Americans born in the 50 union states outside of the federal zone qualify as. It is highlighted to bring attention to it:

TITLE 8 > CHAPTER 12 > SUBCHAPTER I > Sec. 1101.
Sec. 1101. - Definitions

(a) As used in this chapter -

(22) The term "national of the United States" means

(A) a citizen of the United States, or

(B) a person who, though not a citizen of the United States, owes permanent allegiance to the United States.

Note that the "United States" term as used in the above section refers to the federal United States, also called the "federal zone". 8 U.S.C. §1401 indicates that all "citizens and nationals of the United States" are also "nationals of the United States". 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22) indicates that not all "nationals" are also "U.S. citizens". Throughout this book, when we use the term "national", we mean either a "citizen, but not a national, of the United States" as described in 8 U.S.C. §1452 and 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22)(B).

occupations of "common right": Any profession you can choose to do or undertake in private industry in any field or trade (even if its for the government) and which do not depend on the authority granted you as part of a political office, being either elected or appointed. Occupations that are not of common right are things you can only do as an officer or politician working for a government agency by virtue of the rights and privileges granted to you as a consequence of your election or appointment to that political office and the authority delegated to you by the law itself. See the case of Simms. v. Ahrens (271 SW 720) for further details.

prima facie: On its face; not requiring further support to establish existence, validity, credibility, etc. An example of this would be an allegation or assertion made by the IRS against a citizen that is never refuted. Therefore, when any kind of assertion or allegation is made that is incorrect, it is important to deny the assertion or it will often be accepted as undisputed fact by the court.

illegal tax protester: A person who resists illegally the paying of appropriate taxes. As of January 1, 1999, the U.S. Congress has eliminated the ability of the IRS to designate a taxpayer as an "illegal tax protester". Here is a part of the IRS Restructuring and Reform Act of 1998 that talks about this (form the website at <http://www.irs.gov/>):

Background: The IRS designates individuals who meet certain criteria as "illegal tax protesters" in the IRS Master File. Congress was concerned that taxpayers may be unfairly stigmatized by a designation as an illegal tax protester.

C. Change(s):

1. The IRS shall not designate any more taxpayers as "illegal tax protesters." Removal of existing "illegal tax protester" designations from the individual master file is not required to begin before January 1, 1999.
2. IRS personnel must disregard any designation in a taxpayer's file ( i.e., revenue agents report or other paper records) as of the date of enactment.
3. As of the date of enactment, IRS personnel should not describe taxpayers in written documents as "illegal tax protesters."
4. The IRS may designate appropriate taxpayers as nonfilers. The IRS must remove the nonfiler designation once the taxpayer has filed valid tax returns for two consecutive years and paid all taxes shown on these returns.

Law: that which is laid down, ordained, or established. A rule or method according to which phenomenon or actions co-exist or follow each other. Law, in its generic sense, is a body of rules of action or conduct prescribed by the sovereign within a jurisdiction, and having binding legal force. United States Fidelity and Guaranty Co. v. Guenther, 281 U.S. 34, 50 S.Ct. 165, 74 L.Ed. 683. That which must be obeyed and followed by citizens subject to sanctions or legal consequences is a law. Law is a solemn expression of the will of the supreme power, which is the ultimate "sovereign", of the State. Calif.Civil Code, §22. The "law" of a state is to be found in its statutory and constitutional enactments, as interpreted by its courts, and, in absence of statute law, in rulings of its courts. Dauer's Estate v. Zabel, 9 Mich.App. 176, 156 N.W.2d. 34, 37.

In the United States of America, the People, both collectively and individually are the "sovereigns" , according to the Supreme Court:

- Chisholm, Ex'r. v. Georgia, 2 Dall. (U.S.) 419, 1 L.ed. 454, 457, 471, 472) (1794): "From the differences existing between feudal sovereignties and Government founded on compacts, it necessarily follows that their respective prerogatives must differ. Sovereignty is the right to govern; a nation or State-sovereign

1 is the person or persons in whom that resides. In Europe the sovereignty is generally ascribed to the 2 Prince; here it rests with the people; there, the sovereign actually administers the Government; here,
 3 never in a single instance; our Governors are the agents of the people, and at most stand in the same
 4 relation to their sovereign, in which regents in Europe stand to their sovereigns. Their Princes have 5 personal powers, dignities, and pre-eminences, our rulers have none but official; nor do they partake in 6 the sovereignty otherwise, or in any other capacity, than as private citizens."

- 7 • Juilliard v. Greenman, 110 U.S. 421 (1884): "There is no such thing as a power of inherent sovereignty in 8 the government of the United States...In this country sovereignty resides in the people, and Congress can 9 exercise no power which they have not, by their Constitution entrusted [delegated] to it. All else is 10 withheld."
- 11 • Perry v. U.S., 294 U.S. 330 (1935): "In the United States, sovereignty resides in the people...the Congress 12 cannot invoke sovereign power of the People to override their will as thus declared."
- 13 • Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U.S. 356 (1886): "Sovereignty itself is, of course, not subject to law, for it is the 14 author and source of law...While sovereign powers are delegated to...the government, sovereignty itself
 15 remains with the people."

16 Therefore, the People are the authors of the law as the "sovereign" or supreme power of the state. The law
 17 constitutes essentially a binding written legal agreement or contract among the sovereigns to conduct their affairs
 18 according to some standard of conduct. The sovereign is never the proper subject or object of most laws, unless he 19 violates the contract and thereby injures the equal rights of other fellow sovereigns. Instead, the servants of the 20 sovereign People working in government are the main object and subject of most civil laws, and laws are enacted
 21 mainly with the purpose to delegate and confine the authority of public servants so that they do not injure or 22 undermine the rights of the true sovereigns, the People. Furthermore, only statutes which have been enacted into
 23 "positive law" are considered binding upon all persons within the jurisdiction of the law. The legislative notes
 24 under 1 U.S.C. §204 indicate that the Internal Revenue Code is not "positive law", and therefore it can only be
 25 described as "special law" or "private international law" (contractual law) applying to specific persons. Subtitle A
 26 of the I.R.C., in fact, is limited mainly to those engaged in a "trade or business" and who work for the U.S.
 27 government as Trustees. The Internal Revenue Code cannot be described either as "law" or "positive law" unless 28 and until:

- 29 1. The IRC is first enacted into "positive law" by a majority of the representatives of the sovereign People.
 30 This provides evidence that they voluntarily consented to enforcement actions required to implement the 31 law. Without such consent, no enforcement actions may be attempted, because according to the 32 Declaration of Independence, all just powers of government derive from the consent of the governed.
- 33 2. Regulations must be written by the Treasury for the enforcement provisions of the enacted positive law, 34 and these regulations must be published in the Federal Register. This puts the public on notice of the 35 enforcement actions that will be attempted against them in enforcing the law, as required by the Fifth 36 Amendment due process clauses.
- 37 3. The enforcement regulations are then incorporated into the Code of Federal Regulations, Title 26.
- 38 4. Delegation of authority orders are written for all the enforcement agents within the Internal Revenue 39 Service authorizing them to conduct enforcement actions.
- 40 5. The enforcement agents must be designated as enforcement agents by receiving a black enforcement
 41 Pocket Commission and being specially trained and commissioned as "public trust" employees.

42 Unless and until all of the above have occurred, the Internal Revenue Code, according to 1 U.S.C. §204 cannot be
 43 described as "law" and can only be described as "prima facie evidence of law", which is simply "presumptive"
 44 evidence of law. That means that it may be rebutted. Since "presumption" causes prejudice and prejudice is 45 anathema to any legal proceeding and violates due process of law, then the Internal Revenue Code is not
 46 admissible as evidence of "law", which means that it does not furnish any evidence that the people ever consented
 47 to its enforcement against them. Consequently, it is unenforceable. Until it becomes "positive law", it can only be 48 described as a "code", or a "statute", but not as "law".

49 pseudotaxes — a term identifying revenues to the U.S. government derived from Subtitles A and C of the Internal Revenue
 50 Code and collected from nonresident aliens who are not in fact and indeed: 1. Engaged in the excise taxable
 51 activity called a "trade or business", which is defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26) as "the functions of a public
 52 office"; 2. Have no income from the District of Columbia; 3. Do not have a domicile in the District of Columbia.

For everyone meeting this criteria, the revenues collected under the authority of I.R.C. Subtitles A and C are not “taxes” as legally defined, but an unconstitutional abuse of federal taxing power. Public servants in the government love to call such revenues “taxes” in order to deceive the people and lend undeserved dignity to the THEFT that enforcing such as system against improper parties amounts to. This is covered in Great IRS Hoax sections 5.1.2 earlier.

resident: under the Internal Revenue Code, an “alien” who is domiciled within either the District of Columbia or the territories of the United States. This “individual” has a “res” that is “identified” within federal jurisdiction, which is limited under the Internal Revenue Code to the District of Columbia and territories or possessions of the United States identified in Title 48 of the U.S. Code. Federal territories are generally identified with the term “State” in the U.S. Code, while states of the Union are identified with a lower case “state” in the U.S. Code and are treated as “foreign states”. “Residents” live exclusively in federal “States” but not in “states” of the Union and therefore are not protected by the Bill of Rights within the Constitution as per Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 (1901). Pursuant to 26 C.F.R. §1.1441(c)(3)(i), an alien can be neither a “citizen” nor a “national” of the United States. The terms “alien”, “resident”, and “resident alien” are all synonymous in the Internal Revenue Code, as confirmed by 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1(a)(2)(ii) and 26 C.F.R. §1.1441-1(c)(3). “citizens of the United States” under 8 U.S.C. §1401 cannot legally be classified as “residents” under the Internal Revenue Code and are not authorized by the code to “elect” to be treated as one either. The reason is because the purpose of law is to protect, and a person cannot elect to lose their constitutional rights and protection, even if they want to! However, by filing an IRS form 1040 or 1040A, they in effect make this illegal election anyway, and the IRS looks the other way and does not prosecute such unintentional fraud because they benefit financially from it. The only way to avoid this election is to instead either file nothing or to file a 1040NR form instead of a 1040 or 1040A form. The rules for electing to be treated as a resident are found in IRS Publication 54: Tax Guide for U.S. Citizens and Resident Aliens Abroad. See Great IRS Hoax, Section 4.10 for further definition of this term and the following sections for amplification: 5.5.2, 5.5.3, and 5.4.12.

“One relating to particular persons or things; one made for individual cases or for particular places or districts; one operating upon a selected class, rather than upon the public generally. A private law. A law is “special” when it is different from others of the same general kind or designed for a particular purpose, or limited in range or confined to a prescribed field of action or operation. A “special law” relates to either particular persons, places, or things or to persons, places, or things which, though not particularized, are separated by any method of selection from the whole class to which the law might, but not such legislation, be applied. Utah Farm Bureau Ins. Co. v. Utah Ins. Guaranty Ass’n, Utah, 564 P.2d. 751, 754. A special law applies only to an individual or a number of individuals out of a single class similarly situated and affected, or to a special locality. Board of County Comm’rs of Lemhi County v. Swensen, Idaho, 80 Idaho 198, 327 P.2d. 361, 362. See also Private bill; Private law. Compare General law; Public Law.”
[Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1398]

The Internal Revenue Code, 26 U.S.C., Subtitle A, Income Taxes, for instance, is special law that applies ONLY to the District of Columbia and federal territories over which the United States government exercises exclusive legislative jurisdiction, but not including nonfederal areas within the borders of the several states.
The U.S. Government, however, has done a fine job making the tax code LOOK like it is general law. Most Congressmen know this, of course, and if you write them to ask if the I.R.C. is special law, they have been known to try to avoid answering or have given weasel-worded answers. See <http://www.supremelaw.org> and the case of People v. Boxer for more details on an example of this.

source of income: “Place where, or circumstances from which, income at issue is produced. Union Electric Co. v. Coale, 347 Mo. 175, 146 S.W.2d 631, 635.” [Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, page 1395]

State: in the context of federal statutes, federal court rulings, and this book means a federal State of the United States, the District of Columbia, Guam, Puerto Rico, Virgin Islands, Northern Marina Islands, and includes areas within the external boundaries of a state owned by or ceded to the United States of America. Federal “States” are defined in 4 U.S.C. §110(d) and 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(10). In the context of the U.S. Constitution only, “State” means a sovereign “state” as indicated below. The reason the constitution is different is because of who wrote it. The states wrote it so they are capitalized. Federal statutes are not written by the sovereign states so they use the lower case “state” to describe the sovereign 50 states, which are foreign and outside the territorial jurisdiction of the U.S. government.

“It is to be noted that the statute differentiates between States of the United States and foreign states by the use of a capital S for the word when applied to a State of the United States”
[Eisenberg v. Commercial Union Assurance Company, 189 F.Supp. 500 (1960)]

state: in the context of federal statutes, federal court rulings, and this book means a sovereign state of the Union of America under the Constitution for the United States of America 1789-1791. In the context of the U.S. Constitution only, “State” means a sovereign “state” as defined here. Below is a further clarification of the meaning of “states” as defined by the U.S. Supreme Court in the case of O’Donoghue v. United States, 289 U.S. 516 (1933), where they define what is not a “state”:

After an exhaustive review of the prior decisions of this court relating to the matter, the following propositions, among others, were stated as being established:

‘1. That the District of Columbia and the territories are not states within the judicial clause of the Constitution giving jurisdiction in cases between citizens of different states;

‘2. That territories are not states within the meaning of Rev. St. 709, permitting writs of error from this court in cases where the validity of a state statute is drawn in question;

‘3. That the District of Columbia and the territories are states as that word is used in treaties with foreign powers, with respect to the ownership, disposition, and inheritance of property;

‘4. That the territories are not within the clause of the Constitution providing for the creation of a supreme court and such inferior courts as Congress may see fit to establish.’

Below is a summary of the meanings of “state” and “State” in the context of both federal and state laws:

Table 8-1: Summary of meaning of "state" and "State"

Law	Federal constitution	Federal statutes	Federal regulations	State constitutions	State statutes	State regulations
Author	Union States/ "We The People"	Federal Government		"We The People"	State Government
"state"	Foreign country	Union state	Union state	Other Union state or federal government	Other Union state or federal government	Other Union state or federal government
"State"	Union state	Federal state	Federal state	Union state	Union state	Union state
"in this State" or "in the State" <sup>2</sup>	NA	NA	NA	NA	Federal enclave within state	Federal enclave within state
"State" <sup>3</sup> (State Revenue and taxation code only)	NA	NA	NA	NA	Federal enclave within state	Federal enclave within state

So what the above table clearly shows is that the word “State” in the context of federal statutes and regulations means (not includes!) federal States only under Title 48 of the U.S. Code<sup>4</sup>, and these areas do not include any of the 50 Union States. The word “state” in the context of federal statutes and regulations means one of the 50 union states, which are “foreign sovereigns”, “foreign states”, and “foreign countries” with respect to the federal government as clearly explained later in section 5.2.11 of this book. In the context of the above, a “Union State” means one of the 50 states of the United States* (the country, not the federal United States**).

State Citizen/National: A biological person who was born in the country United States and who is treated as a citizen of every state of the Union under Article IV, Section 2, Clause 1 of the United States Constitution. This person owes allegiance to his state and obedience to its laws. In exchange for this allegiance, he is entitled to demand protection from the government and the laws and that state. A person need not

State national: A biological person who was born in any state of the Union and who is treated as a citizen of every state of the Union under Article IV, Section 2, Clause 1 of the United States Constitution. This person owes allegiance to his state and obedience to its laws. In exchange for this allegiance, he is entitled to demand protection from the government and the laws and that state. He is also treated as a “national of the United States” or a “non-citizen U.S. national”. “State nationals” are defined in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21), 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22)(B), 8 U.S.C. §1452, 8 U.S.C. §1408(2), and are indirectly referenced under The Law of Nations, Book I, Section 215.

Tax: A charge by the government on the income of an individual, corporation, or trust, as well as the value of an estate or gift. The objective in assessing the tax is to generate revenue to be used for the needs of the public.

A pecuniary [relating to money] burden laid upon individuals or property to support the government, and is a payment exacted by legislative authority. In re Mytinger, D.C.Tex. 31 F.Supp. 977,978,979. Essential characteristics of a tax are that it is not a voluntary payment or donation, but an enforced contribution, exacted pursuant to legislative authority. Michigan Employment Sec. Commission v. Patt, 4 Mich.App. 228, 144 N.W.2d. 663, 665. Annual compensation paid to government for annual protection and for current support of government. Alabama Power Co. v. Federal Power Commission, C.C.A.5, 134 F.2d. 602, 608. A ratable portion of the produce of the property and labor of the individual citizens, taken by the nation, in the exercise of its sovereign rights, for the support of government, for the administration of the laws, and as the means of continuing in operation the various legitimate functions of the state. An enforced contribution of money or other property, assessed in accordance with some reasonable rule or apportionment by authority of a sovereign state on persons or property within its jurisdiction for the purposes of defraying the public expenses.

In a general sense, any contribution imposed by government upon individuals, for the use and service of the state, whether under the name of toll, tribute, tallage, gabel, impost, duty, custom, excise, subsidy, aid, supply, or other name. And in its essential characteristics is not a debt. City of Neward v. Jos. Hollander, Inc., 136 N.J.Eq. 539, 42 A.2d. 872, 875. [Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1457]

“taxes”, as legally defined, are a mandatory payment to the government exacted by operation of law which is not voluntary and which support only the government. If the monies paid can be used for wealth transfer or supporting private persons or organizations, then they do not qualify as “taxes”, according to the U.S. Supreme Court

To lay, with one hand, the power of the government on the property of the citizen, and with the other to bestow it upon favored individuals to aid private enterprises and build up private fortunes, is none the less a robbery because it is done under the forms of law and is called taxation. This is not legislation. It is a decree under legislative forms.

Nor is it taxation. ‘A tax,’ says Webster’s Dictionary, ‘is a rate or sum of money assessed on the person or property of a citizen by government for the use of the nation or State.’ ‘Taxes are burdens or charges imposed by the Legislature upon persons or property to raise money for public purposes.’ Cooley, Const. Lim., 479.

Coulter, J., in Northern Liberties v. St. John's Church, 13 Pa.St., 104 says, very forcibly, 'I think the common mind has everywhere taken in the understanding that taxes are a public imposition, levied by authority of the government for the purposes of carrying on the government in all its machinery and operations—that they are imposed for a public purpose.' See, also Pray v. Northern Liberties, 31 Pa.St., 69; Matter of Mayor of N.Y., 11 Johns., 77; Camden v. Allen, 2 Dutch., 398; Sharpless v. Mayor, supra; Hanson v. Vernon, 27 Ia., 47; Whiting v. Fond du Lac, supra."
 [Loan Association v. Topeka, 20 Wall. 655 (1874)]

"Taxes" which are paid voluntarily and/or which are spent on wealth transfer or to support private purposes are referred to as "donations", and when their payment is enforced, they are called "extortion".

Tax Class: A one digit number indicating the type of tax that a tax falls under. This number appears in the Individual Master File (IMF) maintained by the taxpayer. This number or digit is the third digit of the DLN, or Document Locator Number, assigned to each document that is entered in an Individual Master File. The Tax Class codes are as follows:

0 = IRAF
 1 = Withholding and Social Security
 2 = Individual Income Tax
 3 = Corporate Income Tax
 4 = Excise Tax
 5 = Estate and Gift Tax
 7 = CT-1
 8 = FUTA

This number appears throughout the IRS' IMF file maintained on each individual, and it is also associated with specific forms of the Internal Revenue Service. Use of this code within the individual's IMF is described in IRS Publication 6209. Section 2 of Publication 6209 describes the association of specific IRS forms with Tax Class codes. You can order a copy of IRS Pub. 6209 from Freedom Law School at <http://www.livefreenow.com/>. Interestingly, NOWHERE in Publication 6209 are the simple Tax Class codes defined, even though they are used extensively in that document, and furthermore, at the bottom of every page, it says "FOR OFFICIAL USE ONLY". This is double speak that really says the IRS doesn't want this book getting into the hands of tax freedom fighters, which is why they keep the "secret decoder ring" (the Tax Class Codes) separated from the code listing and in other innocuous publications no one seems to be able to get ahold of!

Below is a summary of the Tax Class codes for specific forms, derived directly from Section 2 of IRS Publication 6209. It ought to be clear examining the codes below that your employment tax authorized by the W-4 form is actually a gift or estate tax, and NOT an income tax, because it uses Tax Class 5!

Form	Title	Tax Class
W-2	Wage and Tax Statement	5
W-4	Employee's Withholding Certificate	5
W-4E	Exemption from Withholding Allowance Certificate	5
W-4V	Voluntary Withholding Request	5
706	United States Estate Tax Return	5, *6
1040	U.S. Individual Income Tax Return	2, *6
1041	U.S. Fiduciary Income Tax Return (for Estates and Trusts)	2, *6
1099-INT	Statement for Receipts of Interest Income	5
1099-MISC	Statement for Receipts of Miscellaneous Income	5
1120	U.S. Corporation Income Tax Return	3, *6

Taxpayer: The term "taxpayer" means any person who is either liable to pay an any internal revenue tax or who isn't liable but "volunteers" to pay anyway. Read section 3.6.1.15 for further explanation.

United States:

1 “This term has several meanings. It may be merely the name of a sovereign occupying the position analogous to
 2 that of other sovereigns in family of nations, it may designate territory over which sovereignty of the United
 3 States extends, or it may be collective name of the states which are united by and under the Constitution. Hooven
 4 & Allison Co. v. Evatt, U.S. v. Ohio, 324 U.S. 652, 65 S.Ct. 870, 880, 89 L.Ed. 1252.”
 5 [Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1533]

6 The term was conveniently removed from Black’s Law Dictionary Seventh Edition by a legal profession that
 7 wants to hide the truth and sell you into slavery to the U.S. government by unlawfully extending the jurisdiction
 8 for personal income taxes outside the federal zone. Look on the IRS website for this definition...you won’t find 9 it because they don’t want you to know.)

62 [Code of Federal Regulations]

1 TITLE 26--INTERNAL REVENUE
 2 CHAPTER 1--INTERNAL REVENUE SERVICE, DEPARTMENT OF THE TREASURY
 3 Sec. 1.911-2 Qualified individuals.
 4 (g) United States. The term "United States" when used in a geographical sense includes any territory under
 5 the sovereignty of the United States. It includes the states, the District of Columbia, the possessions and
 6 territories of the United States, the territorial waters of the United States, the air space over the United States,
 7 and the
 8 seabed and subsoil of those submarine areas which are adjacent to the territorial waters of the United States
 9 and over which the United States has exclusive rights, in accordance with international law, with respect to the 10 exploration and exploitation of natural resources.

11 U.S. citizen: defined in 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1 and 8 U.S.C. §1401. In the context of federal statutes: Means a person born or 12 naturalized in the federal United States (federal zone) and a subject citizen of Congress. Typically, the U.S.
 13 government allows "U.S. nationals", who are persons born outside the federal zone and inside the 50 states to 14 declare that they are "U.S. citizens" so that they can volunteer to become completely subject to the jurisdiction of 15 the federal courts and become the proper subjects of the Internal Revenue Code, but technically, they are not
 16 "U.S. citizens" as legally defined within nearly all federal legislation and statutes. "U.S. citizens" are possessors
 17 of statutory 'civil' rights and privileges granted by Congress and stipulated by statute, code or regulation, found
 18 mostly in 48 U.S.C. §1421b.

19 U.S. person: this term is defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(30) as follows:

20 TITLE 26 > Subtitle F > CHAPTER 79 > Sec. 7701.

21 Sec. 7701. - Definitions

22 (a)(30) United States person

23 The term "United States person" means -

24 (A) a citizen or resident of the United States,

25 (B) a domestic partnership,

26 (C) a domestic corporation,

27 (D) any estate (other than a foreign estate, within the meaning of paragraph (31)), and

28 (E) any trust if -

29 (i) a court within the United States is able to exercise primary supervision over the administration of the trust,
 30 and

31 (ii) one or more United States persons have the authority to control all substantial decisions of the trust.

32 voluntary:

33 "Unconstrained by interference; unimpelled by another's influence; spontaneous; acting of oneself. Coker v.
 34 State, 199 Ga. 20, 33 S.E.2d 171, 174. Done by design or intention. Proceeding from the free and unrestrained
 35 will of the person. Produced in or by an act of choice. Resulting from free choice, without compulsion or 36 solicitation. The word, especially in statutes, often implies knowledge of essential facts. Without valuable
 37 consideration; gratuitous, as a voluntary conveyance. Also, having a merely nominal consideration; as, a 38 voluntary deed."

39 [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1575]

40 voluntary compliance: An oxymoron meant to confuse taxpayers. Voluntary implies that it is not compelled and that there
 41 is no punishment for not doing it. They add the word compliance as a way to confuse the citizens into thinking
 42 that they have to do it and will be punished for not doing it. However, when used in the context of income taxes,
 43 what it means is that you don't have to comply and don't have to volunteer to pay income taxes.
