 33 new powers of taxation", and they wouldn't have said it and repeated it if they didn't mean it. We'll explain this fact more
 34 thoroughly later in the chapter, starting in section 5.2.11. Whether or not the Sixteenth Amendment was properly ratified is 35 inconsequential and a nullity, because of the limited applicability of Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A primarily to persons 36 domiciled in the federal zone no matter where resident. The Sixteenth Amendment authorized that:

37 Sixteenth Amendment

38 The Congress shall have power to lay and collect taxes on incomes, from whatever source derived, without 39 apportionment among the several States, and without regard to any census or enumeration.

40 And in fact, the above described amendment is exactly what an income tax under Subtitle A that only operates against 41 persons domiciled within the federal zone does: collect taxes on incomes without apportionment. Furthermore, because the 42 federal zone is not protected by the Constitution or the Bill of Rights (see Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 (1901)), then
 43 there can be no violation of constitutional rights from the enforcement of the I.R.C. there. As a matter of fact, since due
 44 process of law is a requirement only of the Bill of Rights, and the Bill of Rights doesn't apply in the federal zone, then
 45 technically, Congress doesn't even need a law to legitimately collect taxes in these areas! The federal zone, recall, is a 46 totalitarian socialist democracy, not a republic, and the legislature and the courts can do anything they like there without 47 violating the Bill of Rights or our Constitutional rights.

48 The question of whether the federal government has lawful authority to institute direct taxes inside the Union states is a
 49 rather simple one. Every power that it claims in respect to the internal affairs of states must have a Constitutional origin:

50 "The Government of the United States, therefore, can claim no powers which are not [explicitly] granted to it
 51 by the Constitution, and the powers actually granted must be such as are expressly given, or given by necessary
 52 implication."

1 Buffington v. Day, 11 Wall. 113, [78 U.S. 122 (1871)]

2 Under what circumstances the federal government can collect Subtitle A income taxes is a simple question of where, in the
3 Constitution is the power explicitly granted to institute indirect excise taxes on natural “persons” domiciled inside the 50
4 union states who are not domiciled in federal enclaves? All excise taxes are taxes on privileges and ordinarily can only be
5 enforced against artificial corporations and not natural persons. All such taxes against natural persons must be voluntary
6 because consent is required in a free country and all just powers derive from consent. The Sixteenth Amendment, by the
7 repeated admission of the Supreme court, didn't authorize enforcement actions against other than corporations and before
8 we had a Sixteenth Amendment, the Supreme Court said that the federal government didn't have that authority in the case
9 of Pollock v. Farmers' Loan & Trust Co., 157 U.S. 429 (1895) to enforce income taxes on natural persons. It's a simple
10 question of where in the Constitution does the authority come from if the Supreme Court said it didn't come from the 11 Sixteenth Amendment? Absent an answer, any act by the federal government to collect an indirect excise tax is unlawful 12 and illegal, because not explicitly authorized by the Constitution:

13 Unlawful. That which is contrary to, prohibited, or unauthorized by law. That which is not lawful. The acting
14 contrary to, or in defiance of the law; disobeying or disregarding the law. Term is equivalent to “without 15 excuse or justification.” State v. Noble, 90 N.M. 360, 563 P.2d. 1153, 1157. While necessarily not implying the
17 [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1536]

18 “Illegal. Against or not authorized by law.”
19 [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 747]

20 Without constitutional authority directly from the states somewhere in the Constitution, it cannot be claimed that taxes laid
21 on activities or individuals inside the union states are consensual or voluntary, and if they aren't consensual, then the
22 people in the states are a conquered people and the federal government is at war with them by means of financial terrorism
23 instituted at the hands of the IRS. In that scenario, the District of Columbia becomes a haven for financial terrorists and a
24 “federal mafia”, who are protected from legal accountability for their abuses by sovereign immunity and the complicity of a
25 corrupted and treasonous federal judiciary!

26 Let's summarize what we have learned so far by breaking down all the various taxes by state and federal sovereignties and 27 allocating them between internal and external classifications. A picture is worth a thousand words to reveal our research:

Table 5-17: Apportionment of various taxes between state and federal jurisdictions

#	Tax	Legal Authority	States: Internal	Federal government: Internal	Federal government: External
1	Excise taxes on foreign commerce	Const. 1:8:1 Const. 1:8:3 Sixteenth Amend. 26 U.S.C. Subtitle D, Chapt. 38, Subchapter A. 26 U.S.C. §4612(a)(4) 26 U.S.C. Subtitle A (Personal income taxes)	No authority	On corporations involved in foreign commerce anywhere in the country. Currently only includes petroleum products under 26 U.S.C. §§4611-4612. All other "persons" and activities are "voluntary" and not mandatory.	On corporations involved in foreign commerce anywhere in the country. Currently only includes petroleum products under 26 U.S.C. §§4611-4612 and on Foreign Sales Corporations (FSC's) and Domestic International Sales Corporations (DISC's) under Subtitle A of 26 U.S.C.
2	Excise taxes on interstate commerce	Const 1:8:1 Const. 1:8:3 Sixteenth Amend. 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10)	No authority	None instituted, but have authority.	Not applicable
3	Excise taxes on intrastate commerce (NOTE: "the STATE in INTRASTATE in this case means federal State and not states of the union.)	Const. 1:8:17 26 U.S.C. Subtitle E 26 U.S.C. Subtitle C, Chapt. 21	On privileged activities involving state-chartered corporations.	1. Misc. excise taxes under 26 U.S.C. Subtitle D inside of federal United States only and not in union states. 2. Alcohol, tobacco, and firearms under 26 U.S.C. Subtitle E inside of federal United States only and not in union states. 3. FICA taxes inside of federal U.S. only and not in union states.	No authority
4	Direct income taxes	Const. 1:2:3 Const. 1:9:4 26 U.S.C. Subtitle A Buck Act, 4 U.S.C. §§ 105-114 Cook v. Tait , 265 U.S. 47 (1924) Loughborough v. Blake , 18 U.S. 317, 5 Wheat. 317, 5 L.Ed. 98 (1820)	State statutes. Most state income tax statutes rely entirely on the Buck Act. For their authority and only apply in federal enclaves within the state.	Federal United States only and not union states. Voluntary (no liability statute). None currently implemented, since Subtitle A income taxes are indirect excise taxes.	U.S. citizens (but not "nationals" or "state nationals") living abroad.
5	Inheritance taxes	26 U.S.C. Subtitle B Knowlton v. Moore , 178 U.S. 41 (1900) 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10)	State statutes.	In federal U.S. and U.S. territories, but not union states.	On federal/"U.S. citizens" (but not "nationals" or "state nationals") living abroad who have estates in the federal U.S. and U.S. territories, but not union states.

The location where a crime is committed controls. If it is committed on state property, then the state prosecutes. When a crime is committed inside a federal area within a Union state, however, the crime can be tried under either state or federal jurisdiction in many cases because of a thing called the Assimilated Crimes Act found in 18 U.S.C. §13. You cannot be tried under both jurisdictions because that would be double-jeopardy, which is prohibited by the Constitution. However, if the federal government fails to convict you in a federal court for a crime in a federal area situated inside a state, then sometimes the state will then try to prosecute you under federal law in a state court instead.

With all the above in mind, let's return to the original Supreme Court cites we referred to at the beginning of the section. The Constitution and the Bill of Rights, which are the "laws" of the United States, apply equally to both the union states AND the federal government, as the cites explain. That is why either state or federal officers both have to take an oath to support and defend the Constitution before they take office. However, the statutes or legislation passed by Congress, which

1 are called "Acts of Congress" have much more limited jurisdiction inside the Union states, and in most cases, do not apply
2 at all. For example:

3 TITLE 18 > PART III > CHAPTER 301 > Sec. 4001.
4 Sec. 4001. - Limitation on detention; control of prisons

5 (a) No citizen shall be imprisoned or otherwise detained by the United States except pursuant to an Act of 6 Congress.

7 The reason for the above is because the federal government has no police powers inside the states because these are 8 reserved by the Tenth Amendment to the state governments. Likewise, the feds have no territorial jurisdiction for most 9 subject matters inside the states either. See U.S. v. Bevans, 16 U.S. 336 (1818).

10 Now if we look at the meaning of "Act of Congress", we find such a definition in Rule 54\(c\) of the Federal Rules of
11 Criminal Procedure prior to Dec. 2002, wherein is defined "Act of Congress." Rule 54(c) states:

12 Federal Rule of Criminal Procedure 54(c) prior to Dec. 2002

13 "Act of Congress" includes any act of Congress locally applicable to and in force in the District of Columbia, in 14 Puerto Rico, in a territory or in an insular possession."

15 Keep in mind, the Internal Revenue Code is an "Act of Congress." The reason such "Acts of Congress" cannot apply
16 within the sovereign states is because the federal government lacks what is called "police powers" inside the union states,
17 and the Internal Revenue Code requires police powers to implement and enforce. THEREFORE, THE QUESTION IS, ON
18 WHICH OF THE FOUR LOCATIONS NAMED IN RULE 54(c) IS THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
19 ASSERTING JURISDICTION WHEN THE U.S. ATTORNEY HAULS YOUR ASS IN COURT ON AN INCOME TAX
20 CRIME? Hint, everyone knows what and where the District of Columbia is, and everyone knows where Puerto Rico is, and 21 territories and insular possessions are defined in Title 48 of the U.S. Code, happy hunting!

22 The preceding discussion within this section is also confirmed by the content of 4 U.S.C. §72. Subtitle A is primarily a
23 "privilege" tax upon a "trade or business", as you will learn later starting in section 5.6.12 and following. A "trade or 24 business" is defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701\(a\)\(26\) as "the functions of a public office":

26 § 7701. Definitions

27 (a) Definitions

28 (26) Trade or business

29 "The term 'trade or business' includes the performance of the functions of a public office."

30 Title 4 of the U.S. Code then says that all "public offices" MUST exist ONLY in the District of Columbia and no place
31 else, except as expressly provided by law:

32 TITLE 4 > CHAPTER 3 > § 72
33 § 72. Public offices; at seat of Government

34 All offices attached to the seat of government shall be exercised in the District of Columbia, and not elsewhere,
35 except as otherwise expressly provided by law.

36 If the we then search all the titles of the U.S. Code electronically, we find only one instance where "public offices" are 37 "expressly provided" by law to a place other than the seat of government in connection with the Internal Revenue Code.
38 That reference is found in 48 U.S.C. §1612, which expressly provides that public offices for the U.S. Attorney are extended
39 to the Virgin Islands to enforce the provisions of the Internal Revenue Code.

40 Moving on, we find in 26 U.S.C. §7601 that the IRS has enforcement authority for the Internal Revenue Code only within 41 what is called "internal revenue districts". 26 U.S.C. §7621 authorizes the President to establish these districts. Under 42 Executive Order 10289, the President delegated the authority to define these districts to the Secretary of the Treasury in

1 1952. We then search the Treasury Department website for Treasury Orders documenting the establishment of these 2 internal revenue districts:

3 <http://www.ustreas.gov/regs/>

4 The only orders documenting the existence of “internal revenue districts” is Treasury Orders 150-01 and 150-02. Treasury
5 Order 150-01 established internal revenue districts that included federal land within states of the Union, but it was repealed
6 in 1998 as an aftermath of the IRS Restructuring and Reform Act and replaced with Treasury Order 150-02. Treasury
7 Order 150-02 says that all IRS administration must be conducted in the District of Columbia. Therefore, pursuant to 26
8 U.S.C. §7601, the IRS is only authorized to enforce the I.R.C. within the District of Columbia, which is the only remaining 9 internal revenue district. This leads us full circle right back to our initial premise, which is:

- 10 1. The definition of the term “United States” found in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10), which is defined as the District
11 of Columbia, means what it says and says what it means.
- 12 2. Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A may only be enforced within the only remaining internal revenue district, which is 13 the District of Columbia.
- 14 3. There is no provision of law which “expressly extends” the enforcement of the Internal Revenue Code to any land 15 under exclusive state jurisdiction.
- 16 4. The Separation of Powers Doctrine therefore does not allow anyone in a state of the Union to partake of the federal 17 “privilege” known as a “trade or business”, which is the main subject of tax under I.R.C., Subtitle A This must be so 18 because it involves a public office and all public offices must exist ONLY in the District of Columbia.
- 19 5. The only source of federal jurisdiction to tax is foreign commerce because the Constitution does not authorize any 20 other type of tax internal to a state of the Union other than a direct, apportioned tax. Since the I.R.C., Subtitle A tax is 21 not apportioned and since it is upon a privileged “trade or business” activity, then it is indirect and therefore need not 22 be apportioned.

23 Q.E.D.-Quod Erod Demonstrandum (proven beyond a shadow of a doubt)

24 We will now provide an all-inclusive list of subject matters for which the federal government definitely does have 25 jurisdiction within a state, and the Constitutional origin of that power:

- 26 1. Foreign commerce pursuant to Article 1, Section 8, Clause 3 of the United States Constitution. This jurisdiction is 27 described within 9 U.S.C. §1 et seq.
- 28 2. Counterfeiting pursuant to Article 1, Section 8, Clause 5 of the United States Constitution.
- 29 3. Postal matters pursuant to Article 1, Section 8, Clause 7 of the United States Constitution.
- 30 4. Treason pursuant to Article 4, Section 2, Clause 2 of the United States Constitution.
- 31 5. Federal contracts, franchises, and property pursuant to Article 4, Section 3, Clause 2 of the United States Constitution.
32 This includes federal employment, which is a type of contract or franchise, wherever conducted, including in a state of 33 the Union.

34 In relation to that last item above, which is federal contracts and franchises, Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A fits into that 35 category, because it is a franchise and not a “tax”, which relates primarily to federal employment and contracts. The 36 alleged “tax” in fact is a kickback scheme that can only lawfully affect federal contractors and employers, but not private
37 persons. Those who are party to this contract or franchise are called “effectively connected with a trade or business”.
38 Saying a person is “effectively connected” really means that they consented to the contract explicitly in writing or 39 implicitly by their conduct. To enforce the “trade or business” franchise as a contract in a place where the federal 40 government has no territorial jurisdiction requires informed, voluntary consent in some form from the party who is the 41 object of the enforcement of the contract. The courts call this kind of consent “comity”. To wit:

42 “Judge Story, in his treatise on the Conflicts of Laws, lays down, as the basis upon which all reasonings on the
43 law of comity must necessarily rest, the following maxims: First 'that every nation possesses an exclusive
44 sovereignty and jurisdiction within its own territory'; secondly, 'that no state or nation can by its laws directly
45 affect or bind property out of its own territory, or bind persons not resident therein, whether they are natural
46 born subjects or others.' The learned judge then adds: 'From these two maxims or propositions there follows a
47 third, and that is that whatever force and obligation the laws of one country have in another depend solely upon
48 the laws and municipal regulation of the latter; that is to say, upon its own proper jurisdiction and polity, and
49 upon its own express or tacit consent.” Story on Conflict of Laws §23.”
50 [Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Co. v. Chambers, 73 Ohio.St. 16, 76 N.E. 91, 11 L.R.A., N.S., 1012 (1905)]

1 When the federal government wishes to enforce one of its contracts or franchises in a place where it has no territorial
 2 jurisdiction, such as in China, it would need to litigate in the courts in China just like a private person. However, if the
 3 contract is within a state of the Union, the Separation of Powers Doctrine requires that all “federal questions”, including
 4 federal contracts, which are “property” of the United States, must be litigated in a federal court. This requirement was
 5 eloquently explained by the U.S. Supreme Court in Alden v. Maine, 527 U.S. 706 (1999). Consequently, even though the
 6 federal government enjoys no territorial jurisdiction within a state of the Union for other than the above subject matters
 7 explicitly authorized by the Constitution itself, it still has subject matter jurisdiction within federal court over federal
 8 property, contracts and franchises, which are synonymous. Since the Internal Revenue Code is a federal contract or 9 franchise, then the federal courts have jurisdiction over this issue with persons who participate in the “trade or business”
 10 franchise. This concept is further explained later in sections 5.4 and 5.4.6.6.

11 Finally, below is a very enlightening U.S. Supreme Court case that concisely explains the constitutional relationship
 12 between the exclusive and plenary internal sovereignty of the states or the Union and the exclusive external sovereignty of 13 the federal government:

14 “It will contribute to the elucidation of the question if we first consider the differences between the powers of 15 the federal government in respect of foreign or external affairs and those in respect of domestic or internal 16 affairs. That there are differences between them, and that these differences are fundamental, may not be 17 doubted.

18 The two classes of powers are different, both in respect of their origin and their nature. The broad statement
 19 that the federal government can exercise no powers except [299 U.S. 304, 316] those specifically
 20 enumerated in the Constitution, and such implied powers as are necessary and proper to carry into effect the 21 enumerated powers, is categorically true only in respect of our internal affairs. In that field, the primary
 22 purpose of the Constitution was to carve from the general mass of legislative powers then possessed by the 23 states such portions as it was thought desirable to vest in the federal government, leaving those not included
 24 in the enumeration still in the states. Carter v. Carter Coal Co., 298 U.S. 238, 294, 56 S.Ct. 855, 865. That 25 this doctrine applies only to powers which the states had is self-evident. And since the states severally never 26 possessed international powers, such powers could not have been carved from the mass of state powers but 27 obviously were transmitted to the United States from some other source. During the Colonial period, those 28 powers were possessed exclusively by and were entirely under the control of the Crown. By the Declaration of 29 Independence, ‘the Representatives of the United States of America’ declared the United (not the several)
 30 Colonies to be free and independent states, and as such to have ‘full Power to levy War, conclude Peace, 31 contract Alliances, establish Commerce and to do all other Acts and Things which Independent States may of 32 right do.’

33 As a result of the separation from Great Britain by the colonies, acting as a unit, the powers of external
 34 sovereignty passed from the Crown not to the colonies severally, but to the colonies in their collective and 35 corporate capacity as the United States of America. Even before the Declaration, the colonies were a unit in 36 foreign affairs, acting through a common agency-namely, the Continental Congress, composed of delegates
 37 from the thirteen colonies. That agency exercised the powers of war and peace, raised an army, created a
 38 navy, and finally adopted the Declaration of Independence. Rulers come and go; governments end and forms of 39 government change; but sovereignty survives. A political society cannot endure [299 U.S. 304, 317] without a
 40 supreme will somewhere. Sovereignty is never held in suspense. When, therefore, the external sovereignty of 41 Great Britain in respect of the colonies ceased, it immediately passed to the Union. See Penhallow v. Doane, 3
 42 Dall. 54, 80, 81, Fed.Cas. No. 10925. That fact was given practical application almost at once. The treaty of 43 peace, made on September 3, 1783, was concluded between his Britannic Majesty and the ‘United States of 44 America.’ 8 Stat., European Treaties, 80.

45 The Union existed before the Constitution, which was ordained and established among other things to form ‘a
 46 more perfect Union.’ Prior to that event, it is clear that the Union, declared by the Articles of Confederation to 47 be ‘perpetual,’ was the sole possessor of external sovereignty, and in the Union it remained without change
 48 save in so far as the Constitution in express terms qualified its exercise. The Framers’ Convention was called 49 and exerted its powers upon the irrefutable postulate that though the states were several their people in
 50 respect of foreign affairs were one. Compare The Chinese Exclusion Case, 130 U.S. 581, 604, 606 S., 9 S.Ct.
 51 623. In that convention, the entire absence of state power to deal with those affairs was thus forcefully stated by 52 Rufus King:

53 ‘The states were not ‘sovereigns’ in the sense contended for by some. They did not possess the 54 peculiar features of [external] sovereignty,-they could not make war, nor peace, nor alliances, 55 nor treaties. Considering them as political beings, they were dumb, for they could not speak to 56 any foreign sovereign whatever. They were deaf, for they could not hear any propositions from 57 such sovereign. They had not even the organs or faculties of defence or offence, for they could 58 not of themselves raise troops, or equip vessels, for war.’ 5 Elliot’s Debates, 212.1 [299 U.S.
 59 304, 318] It results that the investment of the federal government with the powers of external
 60 sovereignty did not depend upon the affirmative grants of the Constitution. The powers to 61 declare and wage war, to conclude peace, to make treaties, to maintain diplomatic relations with other sovereignties, if they had never been mentioned in the Constitution, would have vested in the federal government as necessary concomitants of nationality. Neither the Constitution nor the laws passed in pursuance of it have any force in foreign territory unless in respect of our own citizens (see American Banana Co. v. United Fruit Co., 213 U.S. 347, 356, 29 S.Ct. 511, 16 Ann.Cas. 1047); and operations of the nation in such territory must be governed by treaties, international understandings and compacts, and the principles of international law. As a member of the family of nations, the right and power of the United States in that field are equal to the right and power of the other members of the international family. Otherwise, the United States is not completely sovereign. The power to acquire territory by discovery and occupation (Jones v. United States, 137 U.S. 202, 212, 11 S.Ct. 80), the power to expel undesirable aliens (Fong Yue Ting v. United States, 149 U.S. 698, 705 et seq., 13 S.Ct. 1016), the power to make such international agreements as do not constitute treaties in the constitutional sense (Altman & Co. v. United States, 224 U.S. 583, 600, 601 S., 32 S.Ct. 593; Crandall, Treaties, Their Making and Enforcement (2d Ed.) p. 102 and note 1), none of which is expressly affirmed by the Constitution, nevertheless exist as inherently inseparable from the conception of nationality. This the court recognized, and in each of the cases cited found the warrant for its conclusions not in the provisions of the Constitution, but in the law of nations.

In Burnet v. Brooks, 288 U.S. 378, 396, 53 S.Ct. 457, 461, 86 A.L.R. 747, we said, 'As a nation with all the attributes of sovereignty, the United States is vested with all the powers of government necessary to maintain an effective control of international relations.' Cf. Carter v. Carter Coal Co., supra, 298 U.S. 238, at page 295, 56 S.Ct. 855, 865. [299 U.S. 304, 319] Not only, as we have shown, is the federal power over external affairs in origin and essential character different from that over internal affairs, but participation in the exercise of the power is significantly limited. In this vast external realm, with its important, complicated, delicate and manifold problems, the President alone has the power to speak or listen as a representative of the nation. He makes treaties with the advice and consent of the Senate; but he alone negotiates. Into the field of negotiation the Senate cannot intrude; and Congress itself is powerless to invade it. As Marshall said in his great argument of March 7, 1800, in the House of Representatives, 'The President is the sole organ of the nation in its external relations, and its sole representative with foreign nations.' Annals, 6th Cong., col. 613. The Senate Committee on Foreign Relations at a very early day in our history (February 15, 1816), reported to the Senate, among other things, as follows:

'The President is the constitutional representative of the United States with regard to foreign nations. He manages our concerns with foreign nations and must necessarily be most competent to determine when, how, and upon what subjects negotiation may be urged with the greatest prospect of success. For his conduct he is responsible to the Constitution. The committee considers this responsibility the surest pledge for the faithful discharge of his duty. They think the interference of the Senate in the direction of foreign negotiations calculated to diminish that responsibility and thereby to impair the best security for the national safety. The nature of transactions with foreign nations, moreover, requires caution and unity of design, and their success frequently depends on secrecy and dispatch.' 8 U.S.Sen.Reports Comm. on Foreign Relations, p. 24.

It is important to bear in mind that we are here dealing not alone with an authority vested in the President by an [299 U.S. 304, 320] exertion of legislative power, but with such an authority plus the very delicate, plenary and exclusive power of the President as the sole organ of the federal government in the field of international relations—a power which does not require as a basis for its exercise an act of Congress, but which, of course, like every other governmental power, must be exercised in subordination to the applicable provisions of the Constitution. It is quite apparent that if, in the maintenance of our international relations, embarrassment—perhaps serious embarrassment—is to be avoided and success for our aims achieved, congressional legislation which is to be made effective through negotiation and inquiry within the international field must often accord to the President a degree of discretion and freedom from statutory restriction which would not be admissible were domestic affairs alone involved. Moreover, he, not Congress, has the better opportunity of knowing the conditions which prevail in foreign countries, and especially is this true in time of war. He has his confidential sources of information. He has his agents in the form of diplomatic, consular and other officials. Secrecy in respect of information gathered by them may be highly necessary, and the premature disclosure of it productive of harmful results. Indeed, so clearly is this true that the first President refused to accede to a request to lay before the House of Representatives the instructions, correspondence and documents relating to the negotiation of the Jay Treaty—a refusal the wisdom of which was recognized by the House itself and has never since been doubted. In his reply to the request, President Washington said:

'The nature of foreign negotiations requires caution, and their success must often depend on secrecy; and even when brought to a conclusion a full disclosure of all the measures, demands, or eventual concessions which may have been proposed or contemplated would be extremely [299 U.S. 304, 321] impolitic; for this might have a pernicious influence on future negotiations, or produce immediate inconveniences, perhaps danger and mischief, in relation to other powers. The necessity of such caution and secrecy was one cogent reason for vesting the power of making treaties in the President, with the advice and consent of the Senate, the principle on which that body was formed confining it to a small number of members. To admit, then, a right in the House of Representatives to demand and to have as a matter of course all

2 precedent.' 1 Messages and Papers of the Presidents, p. 194.

3                   The marked difference between foreign affairs and domestic affairs in this respect is recognized by both
4 houses of Congress in the very form of their requisitions for information from the executive departments. In
5 the case of every department except the Department of State, the resolution directs the official to furnish the 6 information. In the case of the State Department, dealing with foreign affairs, the President is requested to
7 furnish the information 'if not incompatible with the public interest.' A statement that to furnish the information
8 is not compatible with the public interest rarely, if ever, is questioned. "

12 5.2.6 The TWO Sources of Federal Civil Jurisdiction: "Domicile" and "Contract"

13 An often misunderstood subject by freedom advocates is federal jurisdiction. None of the freedom advocates we have 14 talked to completely or accurately understand federal jurisdiction, which is why many of them lose when litigating in
15 defense of their rights in federal court. This section will reveal some very important, fundamental, and often overlooked
16 facts about federal jurisdiction that will allow many of you to be successful in court when litigating to protect your 17 Constitutional rights.

18 The Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 17(b) describes the two sources of federal civil jurisdiction for all subject matters,
19 which are "domicile" and "Contracts/Agency". Here is that section:

20 IV. PARTIES > Rule 17.
21 Rule 17. Parties Plaintiff and Defendant; Capacity

22 (b) Capacity to Sue or be Sued.

23 Capacity to sue or be sued is determined as follows:

- 24 (1) for an individual who is not acting in a representative capacity, by the law of the individual's domicile;
25 (2) for a corporation[the "United States", in this case, or its officers on official duty representing the
26 corporation], by the law under which it was organized; and
27 (3) for all other parties, by the law of the state where the court is located, except that:
28 (A) a partnership or other unincorporated association with no such capacity under that state's law may sue
29 or be sued in its common name to enforce a substantive right existing under the United States Constitution
30 or laws; and
31 (B) 28 U.S.C. §§754 and 959(a) govern the capacity of a receiver appointed by a United States court to sue
32 or be sued in a United States court.

33 Notice the first sentence, which we emphasized. It basically says that civil liability can only be created by either a
34 "domicile" within the general/exclusive jurisdiction of the state in question, or by the existence of "agency" or 35 "employment" of some kind. When one acts in a "representative capacity" as identified above, they are exercising
36 "agency" through the authority of a consensual contract of some kind. An example of such agency might be that of a
37 "Trustee" within a trust indenture, or a "corporate officer", who is an officer of a legal fiction called a corporation. You 38 will learn later starting in section 5.4 through 5.4.6.6 that all "agency" is created mainly through the operation of "private 39 law", which in turn is created through the operation of your private right to contract.

40 "Private law. That portion of the law which defines, regulates, enforces, and administers relationships among
41 individuals, associations, and corporations. As used in contradistinction to public law, the term means all that
42 part of the law which is administered between citizen and citizen, or which is concerned with the definition,
43 regulation, and enforcement of rights in cases where both the person in whom the right inheres and the person
44 upon whom the obligation is incident are private individuals. See also Private bill; Special law. Compare
45 Public Law."
46 [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1196]

47 Therefore, there are only two sources of federal jurisdiction, which are:

1. Domicile in the exclusive legislative jurisdiction of the forum state. When the source of jurisdiction is “domicile”, the domicile must occur within the exclusive, general jurisdiction of the forum state and must derive only from “positive law” that is applicable within that jurisdiction. Domicile is based on “allegiance”:

“Thus, the Court has frequently held that domicile or residence, more substantial than mere presence in transit or sojourn, is an adequate basis for taxation, including income, property, and death taxes. Since the Fourteenth Amendment makes one a citizen of the state wherein he resides, the fact of residence creates universally reciprocal duties of protection by the state and of allegiance and support by the citizen. The latter obviously includes a duty to pay taxes, and their nature and measure is largely a political matter. Of course, the situs of property may tax it regardless of the citizenship, domicile, or residence of the owner, the most obvious illustration being a tax on realty laid by the state in which the realty is located.”

Since domicile is based on “allegiance” and all “allegiance” is territorial in nature, then the operation of this type of jurisdiction is exclusively territorial in nature and usually has as its goal the only legitimate purpose of government, which is public protection and the police powers that implement it.

“Yet, it is to be remembered, and that whether in its real origin, or in its artificial state, allegiance, as well as fealty, rests upon lands, and it is due to persons. Not so, with respect to Citizenship, which has arisen from the dissolution of the feudal system and is a substitute for allegiance, corresponding with the new order of things. Allegiance and citizenship, differ, indeed, in almost every characteristic. Citizenship is the effect of compact [contract]; allegiance is the offspring of power and necessity. Citizenship is a political tie; allegiance is a territorial tenure. [ . . . ] The doctrine is, that allegiance cannot be due to two sovereigns; and taking an oath of allegiance to a new, is the strongest evidence of withdrawing allegiance from a previous, sovereign....”

A state may not enforce its positive or public laws outside of its own plenary/exclusive territorial jurisdiction. Below is how the U.S. Supreme Court describes it:

“Judge Story, in his treatise on the Conflicts of Laws, lays down, as the basis upon which all reasonings on the law of comity must necessarily rest, the following maxims: First ‘that every nation possesses an exclusive sovereignty and jurisdiction within its own territory’; secondly, ‘that no state or nation can by its laws directly affect or bind property out of its own territory, or bind persons not resident therein, whether they are natural born subjects or others.’ The learned judge then adds: ‘From these two maxims or propositions there follows a third, and that is that whatever force and obligation the laws of one country have in another depend solely upon the laws and municipal regulation of the latter; that is to say, upon its own proper jurisdiction and polity, and upon its own express or tacit consent.’”

Therefore, laws based on domicile may not be enforced outside of the territory to which they apply. Below is a definition of “territory” from the Corpus Juris Secundum legal encyclopedia to make our meaning perfectly clear. Note that a state of the Union is NOT “territory” of the federal government, and therefore federal laws may not be enforced there:

86 Corpus Juris Secundum (C.J.S.), Territories, §1 (2003)

“§1. Definitions, Nature, and Distinctions

“The word ‘territory,’ when used to designate a political organization has a distinctive, fixed, and legal meaning under the political institutions of the United States, and does not necessarily include all the territorial possessions of the United States, but may include only the portions thereof which are organized and exercise governmental functions under act of congress.”

“While the term ‘territory’ is often loosely used, and has even been construed to include municipal subdivisions of a territory, and ‘territories of the’ United States is sometimes used to refer to the entire domain over which the United States exercises dominion, the word ‘territory,’ when used to designate a political organization, has a distinctive, fixed, and legal meaning under the political institutions of the United States, and the term ‘territory’ or ‘territories’ does not necessarily include only a portion or the portions thereof which are organized and exercise government functions under acts of congress. The term ‘territories’ has been defined to be political subdivisions of the outlying dominion of the United States, and in this sense the term ‘territory’ is not a description of a definite area of land but of a political unit governing and being governed as such. The question whether a particular subdivision or entity is a territory is not determined by the particular form of government with which it is, more or less temporarily, invested.

"Territories' or 'territory' as including 'state' or 'states.'" While the term 'territories of the' United States may, under certain circumstances, include the states of the Union, as used in the federal Constitution and in ordinary acts of congress "territory" does not include a foreign state.

"As used in this title, the term 'territories' generally refers to the political subdivisions created by congress, and not within the boundaries of any of the several states."

2. Private contract, which creates “agency” and liability of specific individuals through their voluntary, usually written, uncoerced, and informed consent. This type of jurisdiction requires the individual, informed, usually written but sometimes implied consent of all those affected by it. It is a different type of jurisdiction from “domicile” because it is not primarily territorial in nature. In fact, your right to contract knows no geographical boundaries:

Debt and contract are of no particular place.”*

[Bouvier's Maxims of Law, 1856;

SOURCE: <http://famguardian.org/Publications/BouvierMaximsOfLaw/BouviereMaxims.htm>]

For instance, the government can contract with anyone, including people in foreign countries. How these private contracts are “arbitrated” or “litigated” is determined by the contract itself. An example would be government employment, which creates agency and a “contract” and “fiduciary duty” between the government and its “employees”. The terms of this contract are documented in Title 5 of the U.S. Code entitled “Government Organization and Employees” and Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A. Even though federal employment essentially is a “private contract” and “private law” that could theoretically be enforced in any court, Title 5 says that all federal “employees” engaged in a dispute with their contracted “employer” have to use the federal courts only and cannot use a state court. This approach is dictated by the Constitution itself, which says that state and federal governments enjoy “sovereign immunity” with respect to each other because of what is called the “Separation of Powers Doctrine”. See Alden v. Maine, 527 U.S. 706 (1999). The implications of this separation of powers are that:

2.1. The federal government may not be sued in a state court.

2.2. A state government may not be sued in any federal District or Circuit court and can ONLY be sued in the U.S. Supreme Court. See the Eleventh Amendment to the U.S. Constitution.

Of the two distinct sources of federal civil jurisdiction documented above, the second one is completely and almost universally overlooked and misunderstood by nearly every freedom fighter we have met. We assert that this supreme oversight, in fact, is the main “loophole” in the income tax deception that has kept it alive all these years since the Sixteenth Amendment was fraudulently ratified in 1913. It is quite common for people like Irwin Schiff, Larry Becraft, Jeffrey Dickstein, and other famous freedom fighter personalities who litigate often in federal court to over-emphasize the lack of federal territorial jurisdiction in item 1 above and to falsely presume that it is the ONLY source of federal jurisdiction. The result of this false “presumption” is that when they decry the lack of territorial jurisdiction and claim that the federal government has no jurisdiction to impose an income tax upon them or their clients, the federal courts rightly label their arguments as “frivolous and without merit”. The only way we will ever get anywhere in federal courts over freedom and sovereignty and taxation issues, folks, is to have a much better understanding of federal jurisdiction than what has been demonstrated in federal courts to date by well-intentioned but misinformed freedom advocates. This is not intended as a personal criticism of any specific individual by any means, but simply a statement of fact intended to help us to collectively focus on more fruitful approaches to litigation so as to end the illegal enforcement of the Internal Revenue Code by the IRS once and for all during our lifetime.

Most of the rest of section 5.2 will focus on item 1 above, which is “domicile”, and so we won't beat a dead horse further by expanding upon that treatment here. Instead, we will focus the rest of this section upon the latter source of jurisdiction, which is item 2 above, or “private contract” as the source of federal jurisdiction because treatment of this subject is so sparse elsewhere on the Internet.

First of all, the foundation of our sovereignty as Americans is our right to contract. The United States Constitution, in fact, is a contract, and its purpose is to protect our right to contract. The U.S. Supreme Court calls it a “compact”.

“The people of the United States erected their Constitutions, or forms of government, to establish justice, to promote the general welfare, to secure the blessings of liberty; and to protect their persons and property from violence. The purposes for which men enter into society will determine the nature and terms of the social compact; and as they are the foundation of the legislative power, they will decide what are the proper objects of it: The nature, and ends of legislative power will limit the exercise of it.”

1           "In Europe, the executive is synonymous with the sovereign power of a state...where it is too commonly
 2 acquired by force or fraud, or both...In America, however the case is widely different. Our government is
 3 founded upon compact [consent expressed in a written contract called a Constitution or in positive law].
 4 Sovereignty was, and is, in the people [as individuals: that's you!]."
 5 [Glass v. The Sloop Betsey, 3 (U.S.) Dall 6]

6 A "compact" is a contract or agreement:

7           "Compact, n. An agreement or contract between persons, nations, or states. Commonly applied to working
 8 agreements between and among states concerning matters of mutual concern. A contract between parties,
 9 which creates obligations and rights capable of being enforced and contemplated as such between the parties,
 10 in their distinct and independent characters. A mutual consent of parties concerned respecting some property
 11 or right that is the object of the stipulation, or something that is to be done or forborne. See also Compact
 12 clause; Confederacy; Interstate compact; Treaty."
 13 [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 281]

14 This right to contract is an extension of the whole notion of the system of government described in the Declaration of 15 Independence:

16           "That to secure these rights, governments are instituted among men, deriving their just powers from the consent
 17 of the governed."
 18 [Declaration of Independence]

19 Our system of government is based on "consent of the governed". In a society populated by sovereigns, the only way a 20 person can lose their rights is to voluntarily contract them away. In that respect, America is what we call "the land of the 21 kings":

22           "...at the Revolution, the sovereignty devolved on the people; and they are truly the sovereigns of the country,
 23 but they are sovereigns without subjects...with none to govern but themselves; the citizens of America are equal 24 as fellow citizens, and as joint tenants in the sovereignty."
 25 [Chisholm v. Georgia, 2 Dall. (U.S.) 419, 454, 1 L.Ed. 440, 455 @DALL 1793 pp. 471-472]

26           "Sovereignty itself is, of course, not subject to law, for it is the author and source of law; but in our system,
 27 while sovereign powers are delegated to the agencies of government, sovereignty itself remains with the people
 28 [WE THE PEOPLE!], by whom and for whom all government exists and acts."
 29 [Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U.S. 356, 6 S.Ct. 1064 (1886)]

30           "In common usage, the term 'person' does not include the sovereign, and statutes employing the word are 31 ordinarily construed to exclude it."
 32 [Wilson v. Omaha Indian Tribe, 442 U.S. 653, 667 (1979)]

33           "Since in common usage the term 'person' does not include the sovereign, statutes employing that term are 34 ordinarily construed to exclude it."
 35 [U.S. v. Cooper, 312 U.S. 600, 604, 61 S.Ct. 742 (1941)]

36           "In common usage, the term 'person' does not include the sovereign and statutes employing it will ordinarily 37 not be construed to do so."
 38 [U.S. v. United Mine Workers of America, 330 U.S. 258, 67 S.Ct. 677 (1947)]

39 What the government has done to undermine our sovereignty and thereby plunder our assets is learned how to very 40 deviously and secretly cause us to contract away our rights by:

- 41 1. Creating government application forms that are actually "agreements" and "contracts" but which do not identify 42 themselves as such. Some examples:
  - 43 1.1. IRS Form W-4: This form is identified in the regulations at 26 C.F.R. §31.3402(p)-1 and 26 C.F.R. §31.3401(a)-
 44 3(a) as a "voluntary withholding agreement". Your public servants didn't tell you that this was a contract and the 45 form doesn't say it either. The reason they commit this "sin of omission" is because they simply don't want you
 46 to know that they need your consent in some form to take your money. That is how they keep the plunder
 47 flowing into their checking account and bilk you.
  - 48 1.2. Bank account applications. These applications state that you will be subject to the Federal Reserve regulations.
 49 These regulations, in turn, make you into a statutory "U.S. citizen" subject to federal jurisdiction. When you ask
 50 the bank for a copy of the REST of what you are agreeing to, the Federal Reserve regulations, they won't help 51 you because they simply don't want you knowing what you are agreeing to.

2. Making and enforcing invisible and undocumented false “presumptions” relating to citizenship and domicile within federal courts. These presumptions create what is called “quasi-contracts” or “constructive contracts” that are invisible and undocumented. See section 5.4.4 later, which shows how income taxes are a form of “quasi-contract”, which is a contract enforced without explicit written consent of the “victim”.
3. Using “words of art” that lead us to misunderstand our sovereign status so as to cause us to believe that we have no rights to give up to begin with. We covered this earlier starting in section 3.12.1. For instance, if everyone domiciled in states of the Union falsely believes that they are statutory “U.S. citizens” under 8 U.S.C. §1401 who are instead domiciled in the federal zone where the Constitution and the Bill of Rights does not apply, then they will gladly and willingly give away our sovereignty on every government form we prepare if it asks us whether we are a statutory “U.S. citizen” or “resident”. When they do this, they won't even realize that they will be giving away for absolutely nothing the very reason for which the Constitution was written in the first place.

If you would like to learn more about the many “invisible contracts” that your public servants have concocted over the years to essentially STEAL your sovereignty, we refer you to George Mercier's wonderful series below available for free on our website at:

Invisible Contracts, George Mercier

<http://famguardian.org/PublishedAuthors/Indiv/MercierGeorge/GeorgeMercier.htm>

Now let's look at how “contracts” and “private law” are implemented in the U.S. Code so as to make them falsely appear to be “mandatory”. The U.S. Supreme Court has admitted that federal income taxation is a type of “quasi-contract”, which means they admit that it is implemented through private law:

“Even if the judgment is deemed to be colored by the nature of the obligation whose validity it establishes, and we are free to re-examine it, and, if we find it to be based on an obligation penal in character, to refuse to enforce it outside the state where rendered, see Wisconsin v. Pelican Insurance Co., 127 U.S. 265, 292, et seq.

8 S.Ct. 1370, compare Fautleroy v. Lum, 210 U.S. 230, 28 S.Ct. 641, still the obligation to pay taxes is not penal. It is a statutory liability, quasi contractual in nature, enforceable, if there is no exclusive statutory remedy, in the civil courts by the common-law action of debt or indebitatus assumpsit. United States v. Chamberlin, 219 U.S. 250, 31 S.Ct. 155; Price v. United States, 269 U.S. 492, 46 S.Ct. 180; Dollar Savings Bank v. United States, 19 Wall. 227; and see Stockwell v. United States, 13 Wall. 531, 542; Meredith v. United States, 13 Pet. 486, 493. This was the rule established in the English courts before the Declaration of Independence. Attorney General v. Weeks, Bunbury's Exch. Rep. 223; Attorney General v. Jewers and Batty, Bunbury's Exch. Rep. 225; Attorney General v. Hatton, Bunbury's Exch. Rep. [296 U.S. 268, 272] 262; Attorney General v. —, 2 Ans.Rep. 558; see Comyn's Digest (Title 'Dett,' A, 9); 1 Chitty on Pleading, 123; cf. Attorney General v. Sewell, 4 M.&W. 77. “ [Milwaukee v. White, 296 U.S. 268 (1935)]

As you will learn later in section 5.4.2.1, contracts and even some codes (notice we didn't says “laws”) passed by Congress are a type of proposed “private law”. When a law is formally enacted by a legislative body, it is called a “statute”:

“Statute. A formal written enactment of a legislative body, whether federal, state, city, or county. An act of the legislature declaring, commanding, or prohibiting something; a particular law enacted and established by the will of the legislative department of government; the written will of the legislature, solemnly expressed according to the forms necessary to constitute it the law of the state. Such may be public or private, declaratory, mandatory, directory, or enabling, in nature. For mandatory and directory statutes, see Directory; Mandatory statutes.”

Statutes can be of two main types: “mandatory” and “directory”, as shown above. A “directory” statute is “voluntary” whereas a “mandatory” statute is not and does not require consent of the subject:

Mandatory statutes. Generic term describing statutes which require and not merely permit a course of action. They are characterized by such directives as “shall” and not “may.”

A “mandatory” provision in a statute is one the omission to follow which renders the proceedings to which it relates void, while a “directory” provision is one the observance of which is not necessarily to validity of the proceeding. It is also said that when the provision of a statute is the essence of the thing required to be done, it

1 is mandatory, Kavanaugh v. Fash, C.C.A.Okl., 74 F.2d. 435, 437; otherwise, when it relates to form and 2 manner, and where an act is incident, or after jurisdiction acquired, it is directory merely.

3 Mandatory provision is one which must be observed, as distinguished from "directory" provision, which leaves
4 it optional with department or officer to which addressed to obey it or not. State ex rel Dworken v. Court of
5 Common Pleas of Cuyahoga County, 131 Ohio.St. 23, 1 N.E.2d. 138, 139, 5 O.O. 291

7 Compare "mandatory statutes" above with their opposite, which is "directory":

8 Directory, adj. A provision in a statute, rule of procedure, or the like, which is a mere direction or instruction of 9 no obligatory force, and involving no invalidating consequence for its disregard, as opposed to an imperative
10 or mandatory provision, which must be followed. The general rule is that the prescriptions of a statute relating 11 to the performance of a public duty are so far directory that, though neglect of them may be punishable, yet it
12 does not affect the validity of the acts done under them, as in the case of a statute requiring an officer to 13 prepare and deliver a document to another officer on or before certain day.

14 A "directory" provision in a statute is one, the observance of which is not necessary to the validity of the 15 proceeding to which it relates; one which leaves it optional with the department or officer to which it is 16 addressed to obey or not as he may see fit. Generally, statutory provisions which do not relate to essence of 17 thing to be done, and as to which compliance is a matter of convenience rather than substance are "directory," 18 while provisions which relate to essence of thing to be done, that is, matters of substance, are "mandatory."
19 Rodgers v. Meredith, 274 Ala. 179, 146 So.2d. 308, 310.

20 Under general classification, statutes are either "mandatory" or "directory," and, if mandatory, they 21 prescribe, in addition to requiring the doing of the things specified, the result that will follow if they are not
22 done, whereas, if directory, their terms are limited to what is required to be done. A statute is mandatory when 23 the provision of the statute is the essence of the thing required to be done; otherwise, when it relates to form 24 and manner, and where an act is incident, or after jurisdiction acquired, it is directory merely.
25 [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 460]

26 In order to deceive a sovereign American into signing what amounts to an "invisible contract", all that a legislator or 27 lawmaker has to do is to deceive the reader by the following devious means:

- 28 1. Making a "directory" statute "appear" as a "mandatory" statute.
- 29 2. By using "words of art" to disguise who the true audience is for the statute. For instance:
  - 30 2.1. Using the phrase "all persons" to refer to the audience and then defining "person" as a federal "employee".
  - 31 2.2. Using the word "United States" and either not defining it. Title 42 of the U.S. Code uses this word in the context
32 of Social Security, but its definition does not appear in Title 42. It is in the original Social Security Act, which 33 most Americans do not have access or skills to locate. The "United States" they are referring to in the act is the 34 federal United States, consisting of the territory and possessions of the United States and excluding states of the 35 Union.
- 36 3. By adding indirection to the statute so that two or three places in the code must be examined and simultaneously
37 applied in order to understand the true audience. This makes it more difficult to discern who the proper subject is for 38 the statute.
- 39 4. By persecuting and terrorizing all those who point out that the provision of law in question are "voluntary" without 40 entertaining or explaining why these people are wrong. Instead, they are simply and conveniently labeled as 41 "frivolous" without a thoughtful, public rebuttal to what they are saying.
- 42 5. When questioned about whether a "directory" statute is "mandatory" or "directory", refusing to answer the question or 43 lying by telling the questioner that it is "mandatory".
- 44 6. By telling the truth about the distinctions but then warning people that the courts don't agree with that view. This 45 scares people who are inclined to avoid risk into obeying the statute anyway.
- 46 7. By gagging judges from making declaratory judgments about the meaning of words in statutes relating to taxes. The 47 Declaratory Judgments Act, 28 U.S.C. §2201(a) prohibits federal judges from making declaratory judgments in 48 relation to "taxes":

49 United States Code
50 TITLE 28 - JUDICIARY AND JUDICIAL PROCEDURE
51 PART VI - PARTICULAR PROCEEDINGS
52 CHAPTER 151 - DECLARATORY JUDGMENTS
53 Sec. 2201. Creation of remedy

(a) In a case of actual controversy within its jurisdiction, except with respect to Federal taxes other than actions brought under section 7428 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, a proceeding under section 505 or 1146 of title 11, or in any civil action involving an antidumping or countervailing duty proceeding regarding a class or kind of merchandise of a free trade area country (as defined in section 516A(f)(10) of the Tariff Act of 1930), as determined by the administering authority, any court of the United States, upon the filing of an appropriate pleading, may declare the rights and other legal relations of any interested party seeking such declaration, whether or not further relief is or could be sought. Any such declaration shall have the force and effect of a final judgment or decree and shall be reviewable as such.

Specifically, Rowen seeks a declaratory judgment against the United States of America with respect to "whether or not the plaintiff is a taxpayer pursuant to, and/or under 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(14)." (See Compl. at 2.) This Court lacks jurisdiction to issue a declaratory judgment "with respect to Federal taxes other than actions brought under section 7428 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986," a code section that is not at issue in the instant action. See 28 U.S.C. §2201; see also Hughes v. United States, 953 F.2d. 531, 536-537 (9th Cir. 1991) (affirming dismissal of claim for declaratory relief under § 2201 where claim concerned question of tax liability). Accordingly, defendant's motion to dismiss is hereby GRANTED, and the instant action is hereby DISMISSED.

8. By publishing government forms and publications which:

- 8.1. Use vague or ambiguous words that are not defined on the form or even in the statutes such as "U.S. citizen", "United States", "State", "employee", "income", "citizen".
- 8.2. Do not reveal the voluntary nature of the law in question and portray it instead as "mandatory". An example is the IRS publications. The federal courts positively refuse to hold the IRS for anything the IRS publishes or writes, and even the IRS' own Internal Revenue Manual (I.R.M.), Section 4.10.7.2.9.8 admits that IRS publications cannot be relied upon to sustain a position. The above mechanisms constitute legal terrorism. Their goal is to enslave those who do not know or read the law. They accomplish the purpose opposite that of the purpose for organized government and law, which is to protect. The Code of Federal Regulations proves this:

Title 28: Judicial Administration
PART 0—ORGANIZATION OF THE DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE
§0.85 General functions.

(l) Exercise Lead Agency responsibility in investigating all crimes for which it has primary or concurrent jurisdiction and which involve terrorist activities or acts in preparation of terrorist activities within the statutory jurisdiction of the United States. Within the United States, this would include the collection, coordination, analysis, management and dissemination of intelligence and criminal information as appropriate. If another Federal agency identifies an individual who is engaged in terrorist activities or in acts in preparation of terrorist activities, that agency is requested to promptly notify the FBI. Terrorism includes the unlawful use of force and violence against persons or property to intimidate or coerce a government, the civilian population, or any segment thereof, in furtherance of political or social objectives.

[Emphasis added]

We might add that the main purpose of this book is to fight such legal and government terrorism. The Bible also describes this type of terrorism. Notice the phrase "...which devises evil by law...". There is only one organization or group that can "devise evil by law", and that is lawmakers, politicians, and government employees:

"Shall the throne of iniquity, which devises evil by law, have fellowship with You? They gather together against the life of the righteous, and condemn innocent blood. But the Lord has been my defense, and my God the rock of my refuge. He has brought on them their own iniquity, and shall cut them off in their own wickedness; the Lord our God shall cut them off."
 [Psalm 94:20-23, Bible, NKJV]

After being victimized by the above types of state-sponsored terrorism, violation of due process, and propaganda, few Americans are likely to go any further in challenging the legality of illegal IRS enforcement actions. This happens mainly because they are deliberately under-informed about legal subjects in public school so they will make docile sheep for the wolves who run our government to devour. Law, in fact, is one of the few subjects that you simply CAN'T and AREN'T

1 allowed to study in public grammar and high school, leading to dysfunctional citizens who make easy prey for the legal
2 profession and government later in life.

3 Now that we understand how “directory” statutes are misrepresented by the government to maliciously expand their
4 jurisdiction over sovereign Americans, let us now state some hypotheses that the rest of this chapter will forcefully prove 5 beyond a shadow of any doubt:

- 6 1. I.R.C., Subtitles A and C is “private”/contract law that only applies to those who individually consent in some way.
- 7 2. For those who do not explicitly and individually consent, I.R.C., Subtitles A and C are merely “directory” in nature.
- 8 3. The method of providing consent for the above taxable activities is a combination of the following:
  - 9 3.1. Specifying a “domicile” within the “United States”, which is defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10) as the 10 District of Columbia, on a government form. Since declaring a legal domicile is a voluntary act requiring 11 individual consent, then it essentially creates a contract between the individual and the government. The purpose
12 of that contract is essentially to procure “police protection” and public services:

“This right to protect persons having a domicile, though not native-born or naturalized citizens, rests on the firm foundation of justice, and the claim to be protected is earned by considerations which the protecting power is not at liberty to disregard. Such domiciled citizen pays the same price for his protection as native-born or naturalized citizens pay for theirs. He is under the bonds of allegiance to the country of his residence, and, if he breaks them, incurs the same penalties. He owes the same obedience to the civil laws. His property is, in the same way and to the same extent as theirs, liable to contribute to the support of the Government. In nearly all respects, his and their condition as to the duties and burdens of Government are undistinguishable.”

[Fong Yue Ting v. United States, 149 U.S. 698 (1893)]

- 22 3.2. Making an application for any kind of government benefit, such as Medicare, Social Security, FICA, etc. This 23 makes the applicant into a federal “employee” exercising agency on behalf of the federal government. I.R.C.,
24 Subtitle A is part of the employment agreement for that position. This is proved in the pamphlet:

Why Your Government is Either a Thief or You are a “Public Officer” for Income Tax Purposes, Form #05.008
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

- 25 3.3. Engaging in an excise taxable activity called a “trade or business”, which is defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26) as 26 “the functions of a public office”. A “public office” is then defined as a position of authority and sovereignty
27 within the federal government as an “employee”. That makes you subject to federal jurisdiction, and payment of 28 I.R.C., Subtitle A then becomes a part of your implied employment agreement.

29 The implication we are trying to convey here is that if you want to be “sovereign” and not subject in any way to federal 30 jurisdiction, then you cannot engage in any of the contracts with the government that are documented in item 3 above. That 31 means:

- 32 1. You can’t declare a “domicile” within the jurisdiction of any earthly government.
  - 33 1.1. You cannot file the IRS Form 1040, because IRS Document 7130, the IRS Published Products Catalog, under the 34 description of form 1040 says that only “citizens” and “residents” can use the form. What these two groups have 35 in common is a “domicile” in the “United States”, which is defined as the District of Columbia in 26 U.S.C.
36 §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10). All earnings from within the District of Columbia are “effectively connected with a 37 trade or business in the United States”, as revealed by 26 U.S.C. §864(c)(3) .
  - 38 1.2. On any government form that requires you to declare a “permanent address” or “domicile” or “residence”, you
39 must fill in “None.” This includes IRS Form W-8BEN, all driver’s license applications, the passport application, 40 and all voter registration forms, for instance.
- 41 2. You can’t sign up for or participate in any social insurance program of any kind and must completely support yourself.
42 Doing so makes you into an “employee” who comes
- 43 3. You cannot use an SSN or any other government issued or controlled number on any government form for any 44 purpose. 20 C.F.R. §422.103 says that Social Security Numbers are government property. The only people who can 45 use government/public property are those involved in an official government function, which is called a “public
46 purpose”. When you are using public property, you are presumed to be exercising the agency of the federal 47 government as an “employee”. You cannot lawfully abuse public property for private or personal use. It is a CRIME
48 and you are a THIEF and a CRIMINAL if you do otherwise.

“Public purpose. In the law of taxation, eminent domain, etc., this is a term of classification to distinguish the objects for which, according to settled usage, the government is to provide, from those which, by the like usage,

are left to private interest, inclination, or liberality. The constitutional requirement that the purpose of any tax, police regulation, or particular exertion of the power of eminent domain shall be the convenience, safety, or welfare of the entire community and not the welfare of a specific individual or class of persons [such as, for instance, federal benefit recipients as individuals]. "Public purpose" that will justify expenditure of public money generally means such an activity as will serve as benefit to community as a body and which at same time is directly related function of government. Pack v. Southwestern Bell Tel. & Tel. Co., 215 Tenn. 503, 387 S.W.2d. 789, 794.

The term is synonymous with governmental purpose. As employed to denote the objects for which taxes may be levied, it has no relation to the urgency of the public need or to the extent of the public benefit which is to follow; the essential requisite being that a public service or use shall affect the inhabitants as a community, and not merely as individuals. A public purpose or public business has for its objective the promotion of the public health, safety, morals, general welfare, security, prosperity, and contentment of all the inhabitants or residents within a given political division, as, for example, a state, the sovereign powers of which are exercised to promote such public purpose or public business."

The last nagging question we must deal with is how can we identify the existence of these invisible contracts designed to destroy and undermine our sovereignty by making "directory statutes" look like "mandatory statutes"? The answer is:

1. Read the law frequently and carefully, looking for subtle use of words that might confuse the distinctions between "mandatory" and "directory" statutes. For instance
  - 1.1. Look at the definition of key words, such as "tax", "person", "United States", "State", "employee", "includes", "income", "taxpayer", and "trade or business". Nearly all the deceit is usually hidden in the definitions, which are usually at the end in hopes that you won't read them.
  - 1.2. Search for the word "consent". Anything requiring either "consent" or "intent" is voluntary. "Domicile", for instance, has as a prerequisite "intent", which is simply a synonym for "consent".

"domicile. A person's legal home. That place where a man has his true, fixed, and permanent home and principal establishment, and to which whenever he is absent he has the intention of returning. Smith v. Smith, 206 Pa.Super. 310, 213 A.2d. 94. Generally, physical presence within a state and the intention to make it one's home are the requisites of establishing a "domicile" therein. The permanent residence of a person or the place to which he intends to return even though he may actually reside elsewhere. A person may have more than one residence but only one domicile. The legal domicile of a person is important since it, rather than the actual residence, often controls the jurisdiction of the taxing authorities and determines where a person may exercise the privilege of voting and other legal rights and privileges."
[Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 485]

- 1.3. Look for the words "agreement" or "contract" and find out what the implications of signing such an agreement are.
- 1.4. Looking for the word "liable" in a statutes. If it is not to be found, then the code containing it is a "directory" statute and requires consent usually procured by some other means to be enforceable.
2. Look at the enforcement provisions of the law and who they apply to. This will reveal who the real audience is for the statute.
3. Read the document from George Mercier above entitled "Invisible Contracts" and thoroughly understand what you should be on the lookout for available at:
<http://famguardian.org/PublishedAuthors/Indiv/MercierGeorge/GeorgeMercier.htm>
4. Look at what happens to those who refuse to sign any agreements or forms with the government, such as W-4, SS-5 applications, or tax returns. Are they left alone? If they are, then you know it's voluntary.
5. Ask the authorities that be why your signature is necessary on a government form in order to comply, if in fact the tax or desired behavior is "mandatory" and not "voluntary". How come they don't just compute the tax for you and send you a bill, rather than requiring you to sign something under penalty of perjury signifying consent and then mail it in?

On the subject of the first item in the list above, allow us to present a table that shows a few examples of exactly what you are looking for in your reading of the Internal Revenue Code (26 U.S.C.) and Treasury Regulations (26 C.F.R.) in order to prove that it is "directory" rather than "mandatory" statute in relation to a person who has no contracts or agency, constructive or otherwise, with the federal government:

#	Statute/regulation	Text of "Directory" statute found in the I.R.C. or regulations	What the statute/regulation would say if it were a "Mandatory" statute	Important Notes
1	26 U.S.C. §6001, Notice or regulations requiring records, statements, and special returns	"Every person liable for any tax imposed by this title, or for the collection thereof, shall keep such records, render such statements, make such returns, and comply with such rules and regulations as the Secretary may from time to time prescribe."	"All persons shall keep such records, render such statements, make such returns, and comply with such rules and regulations as the Secretary may from time to time prescribe."	There is only one person in the entire I.R.C., Subtitle A who is made "liable", which is found in 26 U.S.C. §1461 and relates to withholding on nonresident aliens. Why didn't they just spell it out here? The reason is because then lazy people would not be deceived or misled by the law and only those with the persistence to check the entire code would know the real truth.
2	26 C.F.R. §31.3401(a)-3(a), Amounts deemed wages under voluntary withholding agreements.	"(a) In general. Notwithstanding the exceptions to the definition of wages specified in section 3401(a) and the regulations thereunder, the term "wages" includes the amounts described in paragraph (b)(1) of this section with respect to which there is a voluntary withholding agreement in effect under section 3402(p). References in this chapter to the definition of wages contained in section 3401(a) shall be deemed to refer also to this section (§31.3401(a)-3)."	"(a) In general. Notwithstanding the exceptions to the definition of wages specified in section 3401(a) and the regulations thereunder, the term "wages" includes the amounts described in paragraph (b)(1) of this section with respect to which there is earned income of any kind. References in this chapter to the definition of wages contained in section 3401(a) shall be deemed to refer also to this section (§31.3401(a)-3)."	The only parties who can earn reportable "wages" on a W-2 are those who voluntarily consent by signing and submitting an IRS Form W-4. Even if the private employer is ordered by the IRS to deduct and withhold at single-zero because the party refuses to submit a W-4, the withholding can only occur on "wages" earned, which would be zero for such a person. Notice also that they supersede the definition of "wages" found in 26 U.S.C. §3401 but don't put a pointer to that in that statute to the superseding regulation. The reason they did this was to make it more difficult for you to learn the truth by adding extra levels of "indirection".
3	26 U.S.C. §6671(b), Definitions	"(b) Person defined The term "person", as used in this subchapter, includes an officer or employee of a corporation, or a member or employee of a partnership, who as such officer, employee, or member is under a duty to perform the act in respect of which the violation occurs."	"(b) Person defined The term "person", as used in this subchapter, includes anyone who earns taxable income."	This is the definition of "person" for the purposes of every single assessable IRS penalty. Note that it only includes officers or employees of corporations or employees of partnerships. Observe the qualifier "who as such an officer, employee, or member is under a duty to perform the act in respect of which the violation occurs." They are referring to a person who has fiduciary duty or agency with the federal government, and the only way that agency can be created is through a private, consensual contract. That contract is the federal employment contract called the SS-4 or W-4, which identifies the signator as a "public officer" engaged in a business partnership with the federal government called a "trade or business".

4	26 U.S.C. §7343, Definitions	“The term “person” as used in this chapter [Chapter 75] includes an officer or employee of a corporation, or a member or employee of a partnership, who as such officer, employee, or member is under a duty to perform the act in respect of which the violation occurs”	“The term “person” as used in this chapter [Chapter 75] includes anyone who earns “income.””	This is the definition of “person” for the purposes of every criminal provision found in the Internal Revenue Code. Note that it only includes officers or employees of corporations or employees of partnerships. Observe the qualifier “who as such an officer, employee, or member is under a duty to perform the act in respect of which the violation occurs.” They are referring to a person who has fiduciary duty or agency with the federal government, and the only way that agency can be created is through a private, consensual contract. That contract is the federal employment contract called the SS-4 or W-4, which identifies the signator as a “public officer” engaged in a business partnership with the federal government called a “trade or business”.
5	26 U.S.C. §6331(a), Levy and Distraint (enforcement)	“(a) Authority of Secretary  If any person liable to pay any tax neglects or refuses to pay the same within 10 days after notice and demand, it shall be lawful for the Secretary to collect such tax (and such further sum as shall be sufficient to cover the expenses of the levy) by levy upon all property and rights to property (except such property as is exempt under section 6334) belonging to such person or on which there is a lien provided in this chapter for the payment of such tax. Levy may be made upon the accrued salary or wages of any officer, employee, or elected official of the United States, the District of Columbia, or any agency or instrumentality of the United States or the District of Columbia, by serving a notice of levy on the employer (as defined in section 3401(d)) of such officer, employee, or elected official.”	“(a) Authority of Secretary  If any person liable to pay any tax neglects or refuses to pay the same within 10 days after notice and demand, it shall be lawful for the Secretary to collect such tax (and such further sum as shall be sufficient to cover the expenses of the levy) by levy upon all property and rights to property (except such property as is exempt under section 6334) belonging to such person or on which there is a lien provided in this chapter for the payment of such tax. Levy may be made upon the accrued earnings (not “salary” or “wages”, but “earnings”) of any person by serving a notice of levy on the employer (as defined in section 3401(d)) of such officer, employee, or elected official.”	Observe the use of the term “wages” in the statute, which are earnings in connection with a voluntarily submitted W-4 as shown above in 26 C.F.R. §31.3401(a)-3(a). Earnings that are not legally classified as “wages” because not subject to a voluntarily signed W-4 agreement may not be levied at all! The term “salary” is also defined in the Classification Act of 1923 as earnings in connection with a public office. See section 6.5.16 later.

1 The last very important thing we must do in this section is to show you how the government and legal profession use propoganda and lies to disguise the voluntary,
 2 consensual nature of Subtitle A federal income taxes from the American public. Below is a table containing government and legal profession propoganda relating to
 3 taxation along with an explanation of the deliberate deception the reveal:

4 Table 5-19: Various propoganda designed to conceal the Contractual nature of I.R.C., Subtitle A taxes

Source	Quote from source	Clarification/explanation
--------	-------------------	---------------------------

Welch v. Henry, 305 U.S. 134, 146 (1938)	“Taxation is neither a penalty imposed on the taxpayer nor a liability which he assumes by contract. It is but a way of apportioning the cost of government among those who in some measure are privileged to enjoy its benefits and must bear its burdens. [305 U.S. 134, 147] Since no citizen enjoys immunity from that burden, its retroactive imposition does not necessarily infringe due process, and to challenge the present tax it is not enough to point out that the taxable event, the receipt of income, antedated the statute.”	They are absolutely right because a taxpayer is already party to and subject to the “directory statute” called Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A, but what about the person who is not? For instance, the following statement is similar but would be untrue because it uses a different choice of words and a different subject: “Taxation is neither a penalty imposed on the nontaxpayer nor a liability which he assumes by contract.” In fact, it IS a penalty for a “nontaxpayer” because he doesn’t owe the tax to begin with and is not subject to that law. To force him to pay a tax he doesn’t owe is not only a penalty, but organized extortion. The only way to make a “nontaxpayer” into a “taxpayer” is for him to voluntarily choose a domicile within the forum state and to voluntarily engage in excise taxable activities such as a “trade or business” that would make him liable. In that sense, for the “nontaxpayer”, some type of voluntary and therefore consensual action is required in order to change his status to that of a “taxpayer.” The consent required to institute those voluntary activities is the essence of the “contract” required to change his status into that of a “taxpayer”. A “citizen” is a person who maintains a “domicile” within the forum or jurisdiction in question. The coincidence of legal domicile and the excise taxable activities one engages in within that jurisdiction are the two main factors that make a person a “taxpayer”. “Thus, the Court has frequently held that domicile or residence, more substantial than mere presence in transit or sojourn, is an adequate basis for taxation, including income, property, and death taxes. Since the Fourteenth Amendment makes one a citizen of the state wherein he resides, the fact of residence creates universally reciprocal duties of protection by the state and of allegiance and support by the citizen. The latter obviously includes a duty to pay taxes, and their nature and measure is largely a political matter. Of course, the situs of property may tax it regardless of the citizenship, domicile, or residence of the owner, the most obvious illustration being a tax on realty laid by the state in which the realty is located.”          [Miller Brothers Co. v. Maryland, 347 U.S. 340 (1954)] The fact of being a “citizen” is the condition of voluntarily declaring a domicile and thereby becoming liable to taxation. A person who started out as a “citizen” and chooses not to either have no earthly domicile or to have a permanent domicile in a foreign country outside of the state in question becomes a “national” but not a “citizen” and also a “nontaxpayer”. In that sense, income taxes for him are voluntary and result from his choice of domicile. Since the decision to declare a domicile is voluntary, then income taxes are voluntary. One who does not want to participate in the tax system simply becomes a “transient foreigner” which is a person with no legal domicile anywhere.

Cooley, Law of Taxation, Fourth Edition, pgs 88-89	"A tax is not regarded as a debt in the ordinary sense of that term, for the reason that a tax does not depend upon the consent of the taxpayer and there is no express or implied contract to pay taxes. Taxes are not contracts between party and party, either express or implied; but they are the positive acts of the government, through its various agents, binding upon the inhabitants, and to the making and enforcing of which their personal consent individually is not required."	As we said in the previous explanation, taxes result from "domicile". Selecting a "domicile" within the country in which a person was born changes their status from that of simply a "national" to that of a "citizen". The Supreme Court defines "citizenship" as a type of contract called a "compact": "Allegiance and citizenship, differ, indeed, in almost every characteristic. Citizenship is the effect of compact [contract]; allegiance is the offspring of power and necessity. Citizenship is a political tie; allegiance is a territorial tenure."  [Talbot v. Janson, 3 U.S. 133 (1795); From the syllabus but not the opinion; SOURCE: http://www.law.cornell.edu/supct/search/display.html?terms=choice%20or%20conflict%20and%20law&amp;url=/supct/html/historics/USSC_CR_0003_0133_ZS.html] A "citizen", which is simply a "national" who owes allegiance to a political community, becomes a "citizen" when he selects a domicile within the exclusive legislative jurisdiction of that community. The court uses the word "inhabitant", which is legally defined as follows: "Inhabitant. One who reside actually and permanently in a given place, and has his domicile there. Ex parte Shaw, 145 U.S. 444, 12 S.Ct. 935, 36 L.Ed. 768."  [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 782] Note the key word "resides actually and permanently". That means they are once again talking about a person who has a "domicile" in the exclusive jurisdiction of the state. Notice the use of the word "permanent" in the definition of "domicile": "domicile. A person's legal home. That place where a man has his true, fixed, and permanent home and principal establishment, and to which whenever he is absent he has the intention of returning. Smith v. Smith, 206 Pa.Super. 310, 213 A.2d. 94. Generally, physical presence within a state and the intention to make it one's home are the requisites of establishing a "domicile" therein. The permanent residence of a person or the place to which he intends to return even though he may actually reside elsewhere. A person may have more than one residence but only one domicile. The legal domicile of a person is important since it, rather than the actual residence, often controls the jurisdiction of the taxing authorities and determines where a person may exercise the privilege of voting and other legal rights and privileges."  [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 485] Once again, a person cannot be a "taxpayer" without voluntarily choosing a domicile within the forum state. By choosing a domicile within that state, one is making a choice of political association in which the person nominates a "protector" and in essence contracts with that government sovereign to provide protection. In return, he owes allegiance and the duty to support the cost of providing the protection. In that sense, taxation absolutely and unequivocally are "contractual" and the contract is between the individual, and the government that has jurisdiction over the physical place that he voluntarily identifies and consents to make into his "domicile".

Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1457	“Tax: A charge by the government on the income of an individual, corporation, or trust, as well as the value of an estate or gift. The objective in assessing the tax is to generate revenue to be used for the needs of the public. A pecuniary [relating to money] burden laid upon individuals or property to support the government, and is a payment exacted by legislative authority. In re Mytinger, D.C.Tex. 31 F.Supp. 977,978,979. Essential characteristics of a tax are that it is NOT A VOLUNTARY PAYMENT OR DONATION, BUT AN ENFORCED CONTRIBUTION, EXACTED PURSUANT TO LEGISLATIVE AUTHORITY. Michigan Employment Sec. Commission v. Patt, 4 Mich.App. 228, 144 N.W.2d. 663, 665. ...”	This is a play on words. Yes, a “tax” is an enforced contribution to those who are “taxpayers”, but it may not be enforced against those who are “nontaxpayers”. Not everyone is a “taxpayer”, and whether they are is determined by whether they either chose a domicile within the jurisdiction of the state in question, or whether they voluntarily engaged in excise taxable, privileged activities that are subject to government regulation.

1 You will note that the key means of deception in the preceding tabular list of government and legal profession propaganda
2 are the following:

- 3 1. Use of the word “taxpayer” instead of “every American” or “every person”. A “taxpayer” is, by definition found in 26
4 U.S.C. §7701(a)(14), a person who is “subject to” and “liable for” tax.

5 26 U.S.C. Sec. 7701:Definitions

6 (a)(14) Taxpayer

7 The term “taxpayer” means any person subject to any internal revenue tax.

8 A “taxpayer” therefore is already party to the Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A by virtue of consenting to it and
9 consenting to act and be treated as a “taxpayer”. Consenting to be a “taxpayer” even though no liability statute makes
10 him one is how he becomes subject to it to begin with! He is a “taxpayer” usually because he ALREADY signed a W-
11 4 or 1040 or SSA Form SS-5. To say that

12 “Taxation is neither a penalty imposed on the taxpayer nor a liability which he assumes by contract.”

13 is deceptive, because he already has the liability based on the status of being a “taxpayer”. A “taxpayer” incapable of 14 assuming more than that liability in regards to the tax in question than he already has. On the other hand, the following
15 statement would be completely false, and all we did was add three letters!:

16 “Taxation is neither a penalty imposed on the NONtaxpayer [or “transient foreigner”] nor a liability which he 17 assumes by contract.”

18 Forcing a “nontaxpayer” to pay anything is a penalty and extortion, and the only way it wouldn't be illegal extortion
19 would be if he had a domicile within the forum state and was engaging in excise taxable activities that made him
20 legally liable to pay.

- 21 2. Use of “citizen”, which is a person with a “domicile” within the forum state and therefore liable to taxation, instead of 22 “person”. For instance, a “transient foreigner”, even if he was born in the forum state and physically present there, is 23 not a “citizen” because he does not have a domicile. Therefore, he is a “nontaxpayer”. We cover this later in section 24 5.4.8.

25 *“Transient foreigner. One who visits the country, without the intention of remaining.”
26 [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1498]*

- 27 3. Avoiding revealing what aspect of voluntary behavior made a person a “taxpayer”. For instance, none of the above 28 cites mention the true behaviors that make one into a “taxpayer”, such as “domicile” or excise taxable activities.
29 Instead, they refer to the party liable simply as a “taxpayer”, “inhabitant”, or “citizen”, all three of which are 30 synonymous with a person who maintain a “domicile” within the jurisdiction in question and therefore are “liable”:
31 Here is the proof:

32 *“This right to protect persons having a domicile, though not native-born or naturalized citizens, rests on the
33 firm foundation of justice, and the claim to be protected is earned by considerations which the protecting power
34 is not at liberty to disregard. Such domiciled citizen pays the same price for his protection as native-born or
35 naturalized citizens pay for theirs. He is under the bonds of allegiance to the country of his residence, and, if he
36 breaks them, incurs the same penalties. He owes the same obedience to the civil laws. His property is, in the 37 same way and to the same extent as theirs, liable to contribute to the support of the Government. In nearly all 38 respects, his and their condition as to the duties and burdens of Government are undistinguishable.”
39 [Fong Yue Ting v. United States, 149 U.S. 698 (1893)]*

41 *“Inhabitant. One who reside actually and permanently [permanent residence=“domicile”] in a given place, 42 and has his domicile there. Ex parte Shaw, 145 U.S. 444, 12 S.Ct. 935, 36 L.Ed. 768.”
43 [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 782]*

45 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1\(c\): Income Tax on individuals

(c) Who is a citizen. Every person born or naturalized in the [federal] United States and subject to its exclusive federal jurisdiction under [Article I, Section 8, Clause 17 of the Constitution] jurisdiction is a citizen. [you can only become subject to "its" jurisdiction by choosing a domicile in that jurisdiction. Otherwise, you are a "transient foreigner" or a "national" but not a "citizen" under federal law. See section 4.11.2 for a detailed explanation of how this scam works.]

None of the above cases or quotes mention the real voluntary and consensual "activities" that make one a "taxpayer" such as choosing a legal "domicile" or volunteering to engage in privileged, excise taxable activities, because the sources cited simply do not want to give the audience any information about how to avoid the tax in question. If everyone knew that "domicile" and a "trade or business" were the main legal basis for volunteering or consenting to become a taxpayer, for instance, then they would simply change their domicile and quit associating themselves with the activity that they never were involved in to begin with. This would lawfully deprive the government of revenues, and leave them with no lawful means of replacing said revenues. Instead, those authoring the above specious propaganda want you to believe that taxation does not require consent, that it is compelled, that no aspect of it is voluntary, and that they instead of you are the "sovereigns" who must be obeyed. They want tax slaves to govern in their legislatively created federal plantation in the District of Columbia, not sovereigns which law obligates them to respect, obey, and leave alone. Do you see how insidious this deception is?

5.2.7 "Public" v. "Private" employment: You really work for Uncle Sam and not Your Private Employer If You Receive Federal Benefits

"All systems either of preference or of restraint, therefore, being thus completely taken away, the obvious and simple system of natural liberty establishes itself of its own accord. Every man, as long as he does not violate the laws of justice, is left perfectly free to pursue his own interest his own way, and to bring both his industry and capital into competition with those of any other man or order of men. The sovereign is completely discharged from a duty, in the attempting to perform which he must always be exposed to innumerable delusions, and for the proper performance of which no human wisdom or knowledge could ever be sufficient: the duty of superintending the industry of private people."
Adam Smith, [An Inquiry into the Nature and Causes of the Wealth of Nations (1776)]

The U.S. Supreme Court has said many times that the ONLY purpose for lawful, constitutional taxation is to collect revenues to support ONLY the machinery and operations of the government and its "employees". This purpose, it calls a "public use" or "public purpose":

"The power to tax is, therefore, the strongest, the most pervading of all powers of government, reaching directly or indirectly to all classes of the people. It was said by Chief Justice Marshall, in the case of McCulloch v. Md., 4 Wheat. 431, that the power to tax is the power to destroy. A striking instance of the truth of the proposition is seen in the fact that the existing tax of ten per cent, imposed by the United States on the circulation of all other banks than the National Banks, drove out of existence every *state bank of circulation within a year or two after its passage. This power can be readily employed against one class of individuals and in favor of another, so as to ruin the one class and give unlimited wealth and prosperity to the other, if there is no implied limitation of the uses for which the power may be exercised.

To lay, with one hand, the power of the government on the property of the citizen, and with the other to bestow it upon favored individuals to aid private enterprises and build up private fortunes, is none the less a robbery because it is done under the forms of law and is called taxation. This is not legislation. It is a decree under legislative forms.

Nor is it taxation. 'A tax,' says Webster's Dictionary, 'is a rate or sum of money assessed on the person or property of a citizen by government for the use of the nation or State.' 'Taxes are burdens or charges imposed by the Legislature upon persons or property to raise money for public purposes.' Cooley, Const. Lim., 479.

Coulter, J., in Northern Liberties v. St. John's Church, 13 Pa.St., 104 says, very forcibly, 'I think the common mind has everywhere taken in the understanding that taxes are a public imposition, levied by authority of the government for the purposes of carrying on the government in all its machinery and operations—that they are imposed for a public purpose.' See, also Pray v. Northern Liberties, 31 Pa.St., 69; Matter of Mayor of N.Y., 11 Johns., 77; Camden v. Allen, 2 Dutch., 398; Sharpless v. Mayor, supra; Hanson v. Vernon, 27 Ia., 47; Whiting v. Fond du Lac, supra."

"A tax, in the general understanding of the term and as used in the constitution, signifies an exaction for the support of the government. The word has never thought to connote the expropriation of money from one group for the benefit of another."

1 [\[U.S. v. Butler, 297 U.S. 1 \(1936\)\]](#)

2 Black's Law Dictionary defines the word "public purpose" as follows:

3 "Public purpose. In the law of taxation, eminent domain, etc., this is a term of classification to distinguish the
 4 objects for which, according to settled usage, the government is to provide, from those which, by the like usage,
 5 are left to private interest, inclination, or liberality. The constitutional requirement that the purpose of any tax,
 6 police regulation, or particular exertion of the power of eminent domain shall be the convenience, safety, or
 7 welfare of the entire community and not the welfare of a specific individual or class of persons [such as, for
 8 instance, federal benefit recipients as individuals]. "Public purpose" that will justify expenditure of public
 9 money generally means such an activity as will serve as benefit to community as a body and which at same time
 10 *is directly related function of government. Pack v. Southwestern Bell Tel. & Tel. Co., 215 Tenn. 503, 387*
 11 S.W.2d. 789, 794.

12 The term is synonymous with governmental purpose. As employed to denote the objects for which taxes may be
 13 levied, it has no relation to the urgency of the public need or to the extent of the public benefit which is to
 14 follow; the essential requisite being that a public service or use shall affect the inhabitants as a community,
 15 and not merely as individuals. A public purpose or public business has for its objective the promotion of the
 16 public health, safety, morals, general welfare, security, prosperity, and contentment of all the inhabitants or
 17 residents within a given political division, as, for example, a state, the sovereign powers of which are exercised
 18 to promote such public purpose or public business."
 19 [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1231, Emphasis added]

20 A related word defined in Black's Law Dictionary is "public use":

21 "Public use. Eminent domain. The constitutional and statutory basis for taking property by eminent domain.
 22 For condemnation purposes, "public use" is one which confers some benefit or advantage to the public; it is not
 23 confined to actual use by public. It is measured in terms of right of public to use proposed facilities for which 24 condemnation is sought and, as long as public has right of use, whether exercised by one or many members of 25 *public, a "public advantage" or "public benefit" accrues sufficient to constitute a public use. *Montana Power
 26 Co. v. Bokma, Mont., 457 P.2d. 769, 772, 773.

27 Public use, in constitutional provisions restricting the exercise of the right to take property in virtue of eminent
 28 domain, means a use concerning the whole community distinguished from particular individuals. But each and 29 every member of society need not be equally interested in such use, or be personally and directly affected by it;
 30 *if the object is to satisfy a great public want or exigency, that is sufficient. Ringe Co. v. Los Angeles County, 262*
 31 U.S. 700, 43 S.Ct. 689, 692, 67 L.Ed. 1186. The term may be said to mean public usefulness, utility, or 32 advantage, or what is productive of general benefit. It may be limited to the inhabitants of a small or restricted
 33 locality, but must be in common, and not for a particular individual. The use must be a needful one for the 34 public, which cannot be surrendered without obvious general loss and inconvenience. A "public use" for which 35 land may be taken defies absolute definition for it changes with varying conditions of society, new appliances in 36 the sciences, changing conceptions of scope and functions of government, and other differing circumstances
 37 *brought about by an increase in population and new modes of communication and transportation. *Katz v.
 38 Brandon, 156 Conn. 521, 245 A.2d. 579, 586.

39 See also Condemnation; Eminent domain.
 40 [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1232]

41 Black's Law Dictionary also defines the word "tax" as follows:

42 "Tax: A charge by the government on the income of an individual, corporation, or trust, as well as the value
 43 of an estate or gift. The objective in assessing the tax is to generate revenue to be used for the needs of the 44 public.

45 A pecuniary [relating to money] burden laid upon individuals or property to support the government, and is a

 52 [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1457]

1 So in order to be legitimately called a “tax” or “taxation”, the money we pay to the government must fit all of the following
2 criteria:

- 3 1. The money must be used ONLY for the support of government.
- 4 2. The subject of the tax must be “liable”, and responsible to pay for the support of government under the force of law.
- 5 3. The money must go toward a “public purpose” rather than a “private purpose”.
- 6 4. The monies paid cannot be described as wealth transfer between two people or classes of people within society
- 7 5. The monies paid cannot aid one group of private individuals in society at the expense of another group, because this
8 violates the concept of equal protection of law for all citizens found in section 1 of the Fourteenth Amendment.

9 If the monies demanded by government do not fit all of the above requirements, then they are being used for a “private”
10 purpose and cannot be called “taxes” or “taxation”, according to the Supreme Court. Actions by the government to enforce 11 the payment of any monies that do not meet all the above requirements can therefore only be described as:

- 12 1. Theft and robbery by the government in the guise of “taxation”
- 13 2. Government by decree rather than by law
- 14 3. Tyranny
- 15 4. Socialism
- 16 5. Mob rule and a tyranny by the “have-nots” against the “haves”
- 17 6. 18 U.S.C. §241: Conspiracy against rights. The IRS shares tax return information with states of the union, so that both 18 of them can conspire to deprive you of your property.
- 19 7. 18 U.S.C. §242: Deprivation of rights under the color of law. The Fifth Amendment says that people in states of the 20 Union cannot be deprived of their property without due process of law or a court hearing. Yet, the IRS tries to make it
21 appear like they have the authority to just STEAL these people’s property for a fabricated tax debt that they aren’t even 22 legally liable for.
- 23 8. 18 U.S.C. §247: Damage to religious property; obstruction of persons in the free exercise of religious beliefs
- 24 9. 18 U.S.C. §872: Extortion by officers or employees of the United States.
- 25 10. 18 U.S.C. §876: Mailing threatening communications. This includes all the threatening notices regarding levies, liens, 26 and idiotic IRS letters that refuse to justify why government thinks we are “liable”.
- 27 11. 18 U.S.C. §880: Receiving the proceeds of extortion. Any money collected from Americans through illegal
28 enforcement actions and for which the contributors are not "liable" under the law is extorted money, and the IRS is in 29 receipt of the proceeds of illegal extortion.
- 30 12. 18 U.S.C. §1581: Peonage, obstructing enforcement. IRS is obstructing the proper administration of the Internal 31 Revenue Code and the Constitution, which require that they respect those who choose NOT to volunteer to participate
32 in the federal donation program identified under I.R.C., Subtitle A
- 33 13. 18 U.S.C. §1583: Enticement into slavery. IRS tries to enlist “nontaxpayers” to rejoin the ranks of other peons who 34 pay taxes they aren't demonstrably liable for, which amount to slavery.
- 35 14. 18 U.S.C. §1589: Forced labor. Being forced to expend one’s personal time responding to frivolous IRS notices and 36 pay taxes on my labor that I am not liable for.

37 We also cannot assume or suppose that our government has the authority to make “gifts” of monies collected through its 38 taxation powers, and especially not when paid to private individuals or foreign countries because:

- 39 1. The Constitution DOES NOT authorize the government to “gift” money to anyone within states of the Union or in 40 foreign countries, and therefore, this is not a Constitutional use of public funds, nor does unauthorized expenditure of 41 such funds produce a tangible public benefit, but rather an injury, by forcing those who do not approve of the gift to 42 subsidize it and yet not derive any personal benefit whatsoever for it.
- 43 2. The Supreme Court identifies such abuse of taxing powers as “robbery in the name of taxation” above.

44 The U.S. Supreme Court has further characterized all efforts to abuse the tax system in order to accomplish “wealth
45 transfer” as “political heresy” that is a denial of republican principles that form the foundation of our Constitution, when it
46 issued the following strong words of rebuke. Incidentally, the case below also forms the backbone of reasons why the 47 Internal Revenue Code can never be anything more than private law that only applies to those who volunteer into it:

48 “The Legislature may enjoin, permit, forbid, and punish; they may declare new crimes; and establish rules of 49 conduct for all its citizens in future cases; they may command what is right, and prohibit what is wrong; but
50 they [the government] cannot change innocence [a “nontaxpayer”] into guilt [a “taxpayer”]; or punish 51 innocence as a crime [criminally prosecute a “nontaxpayer” for violation of the tax laws]; or violate the right of an antecedent lawful private contract; or the right of private property. To maintain that our Federal, or State, Legislature possesses such powers [of THEFT and FRAUD], if they had not been expressly restrained: would, *389 in my opinion, be a political heresy, altogether inadmissible in our free republican governments.

 [Calder v. Bull, 3 U.S. 386 (1798)]

We also cannot assume or suppose that our government has the authority to make “gifts” of monies collected through its taxation powers, and especially not when paid to private individuals or foreign countries because:

1. The Constitution DOES NOT authorize the government to “gift” money to anyone within states of the Union or in foreign countries, and therefore, this is not a Constitutional use of public funds, nor does unauthorized expenditure of such funds produce a tangible public benefit, but rather an injury, by forcing those who do not approve of the gift to subsidize it and yet not derive any personal benefit whatsoever for it.
2. The Supreme Court identifies such abuse of taxing powers as “robbery in the name of taxation” above.

Based on the foregoing analysis, we are then forced to divide the monies collected by the government through its taxing powers into only two distinct classes. We also emphasize that every tax collected and every expenditure originating from the tax paid MUST fit into one of the two categories below:

Table 5-20: Two methods for taxation

#	Characteristic	Public use/purpose	Private use/purpose
1	Authority for tax	U.S. Constitution	Legislative fiat, tyranny
2	Monies collected described by Supreme Court as	Legitimate taxation	“Robbery in the name of taxation” (see Loan Assoc. v. Topeka , above)
3	Money paid only to following parties	Federal “employees”, contractors, and agents	Private parties with no contractual relationship or agency with the government
4	Government that practices this form of taxation is	A righteous government	A THIEF
5	This type of expenditure of revenues collected is:	Constitutional	Unconstitutional
6	Lawful means of collection	Apportioned direct or indirect taxation	Voluntary donation (cannot be lawfully implemented as a “tax”)
7	Tax system based on this approach is	A lawful means of running a government	A charity and welfare state for private interests, thieves, and criminals
8	Government which identifies payment of such monies as mandatory and enforceable is	A righteous government	A lying, thieving government that is deceiving the people.
9	When enforced, this type of tax leads to	Limited government that sticks to its corporate charter, the Constitution	Socialism Communism Mafia protection racket Organized extortion
10	Lawful subjects of Constitutional, federal taxation	Taxes on imports into states of the Union coming from foreign countries. See Constitution, Article 1, Section 8, Clause 3 (external) taxation.	No subjects of lawful taxation. Whatever unconstitutional judicial fiat and a deceived electorate will tolerate is what will be imposed and enforced at the point of a gun
11	Tax system based on	Private property VOLUNTARILY donated to a public use by its exclusive owner	All property owned by the state, which is FALSELY PRESUMED TO BE EVERYTHING. Tax becomes a means of “renting” what amounts to state property to private individuals for temporary use.

If we give our government the benefit of the doubt by “assuming” or “presuming” that it is operating lawfully and consistent with the model on the left above, then we have no choice but to conclude that everyone who lawfully receives

1 any kind of federal payment MUST be either a federal “employee” or “federal contractor” on official duty, and that the
2 compensation received must be directly connected to the performance of a sovereign or Constitutionally authorized
3 function of government. Any other conclusion or characterization of a lawful tax other than this is irrational, inconsistent
4 with the rulings of the U.S. Supreme Court on this subject, and an attempt to deceive the public about the role of limited
5 Constitutional government based on Republican principles. This means that you cannot participate in any of the following
6 federal social insurance programs WITHOUT being a federal “employee”, and if you refuse to identify yourself as a federal 7 employee, then you are admitting that your government is a thief and a robber that is abusing its taxing powers:

- 8 1. Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A. IRS sections 1, 32, and 162 all confer privileged financial benefits to the 9 participant which constitute federal “employment” compensation.
- 10 2. Social Security.
- 11 3. Unemployment compensation.
- 12 4. Medicare.

14 programs as “federal personnel”, which means federal “employees”. To wit:

15 TITLE 5 > PART I > CHAPTER 5 > SUBCHAPTER II > § 552a
16 § 552a. Records maintained on individuals

17 (a) Definitions.— For purposes of this section—

18 (13) the term “Federal personnel” means officers and employees of the Government of the United States,
19 members of the uniformed services (including members of the Reserve Components), individuals entitled to 20 receive immediate or deferred retirement benefits under any retirement program of the Government of the 21 United States (including survivor benefits).

22 The “individual” they are talking about above is further defined in 5 U.S.C. §552a(a)(2) as follows:

23 TITLE 5 > PART I > CHAPTER 5 > SUBCHAPTER II > § 552a
24 § 552a. Records maintained on individuals

25 (a) Definitions.— For purposes of this section—

26 (2) the term “individual” means a citizen of the United States or an alien lawfully admitted for permanent

28 The “citizen of the United States” they are talking above is based on the statutory rather than constitutional definition of the 29 “United States”, which means it refers to the federal zone and excludes states of the Union. Also, note that both of the two 30 preceding definitions are found within Title 5 of the U.S. Code, which is entitled “Government Organization and 31 Employees”. Therefore, it refers ONLY to government employees and excludes private employees. There is no definition
32 of the term “individual” anywhere in Title 26 (I.R.C.) of the U.S. Code or any other title that refers to private natural 33 persons, because Congress cannot legislate for them. Notice the use of the phrase “private business” in the U.S. Supreme 34 Court ruling below:

35 “The individual may stand upon his constitutional rights as a citizen. He is entitled to carry on his private
36 business in his own way [unregulated by the government]. His power to contract is unlimited. He owes no
37 duty to the State or to his neighbor to divulge his business, or to open his doors to an investigation, so far as 38 it may tend to criminate him. He owes no such duty to the State, since he receives nothing therefrom, beyond
39 the protection of his life and property. His rights are such as existed by the law of the land long antecedent to 40 the organization of the State, and can only be taken from him by due process of law, and in accordance with the 41 Constitution. Among his rights are a refusal to incriminate himself, and the immunity of himself and his 42 property from arrest or seizure except under a warrant of the law. He owes nothing to the public [including 43 so-called “taxes” under I.R.C., Subtitle A] so long as he does not trespass upon their rights.”
44 [Hale v. Henkel, 201 U.S. 43, 74 (1906)]

45 The purpose of the Constitution and the Bill of Rights instead is to REMOVE authority of the Congress to legislate for 46 private persons and thereby protect their sovereignty and dignity. That is why the U.S. Supreme Court ruled the following:

47 “The makers of our Constitution undertook to secure conditions favorable to the pursuit of happiness. They
48 recognized the significance of man's spiritual nature, of his feelings and of his intellect. They knew that only a
49 part of the pain, pleasure and satisfactions of life are to be found in material things. They sought to protect

Americans in their beliefs, their thoughts, their emotions and their sensations. They conferred, as against the Government, the right to be let alone - the most comprehensive of rights and the right most valued by civilized men.
 Olmstead v. United States, [277 U.S. 438, 478 (1928) (Brandeis, J., dissenting); see also Washington v. Harper, 494 U.S. 210 (1990)]

QUESTIONS FOR DOUBTERS: If you aren't a federal "employee" as a person participating in Social Security and the Internal Revenue Code, then why are all of the Social Security Regulations located in Title 20 of the Code of Federal Regulations under parts 400-499, entitled "Employee Benefits"? See for yourself:

Another very important point to make here is that the purpose of nearly all federal law is to regulate "public conduct" rather than "private conduct". Congress must write laws to regulate and control every aspect of the behavior of its employees so that they do not adversely affect the rights of private individuals like you, who they exist exclusively to serve and protect. Most federal statutes, in fact, are exclusively for use by those working in government and simply do not apply to private citizens in the conduct of their private lives. Federal law cannot apply to the private public at large because the Thirteenth Amendment says that involuntary servitude has been abolished. If involuntary servitude is abolished, then they can't use, or in this case "abuse" the authority of law to impose ANY kind of duty against anyone in the private public except possibly the responsibility to avoid hurting their neighbor and thereby depriving him of the equal rights he enjoys.

For the commandments, "You shall not commit adultery," "You shall not murder," "You shall not steal," "You shall not bear false witness," "You shall not covet," and if there is any other commandment, are all summed up in this saying, namely, "You shall love your neighbor as yourself."

Love does no harm to a neighbor; therefore love is the fulfillment of [the ONLY requirement of] the law [which is to avoid hurting your neighbor and thereby love him].
 [Romans 13:9-10, Bible, NKJV]

"Do not strive with a man without cause, if he has done you no harm."
 [Prov. 3:30, Bible, NKJV]

Thomas Jefferson, our most revered founding father, summed up this singular duty of government to LEAVE PEOPLE ALONE and only interfere or impose a "duty" using the authority of law when and only when they are hurting each other in order to protect them and prevent the harm when he said.

"With all [our] blessings, what more is necessary to make us a happy and a prosperous people? Still one thing more, fellow citizens--a wise and frugal Government, which shall restrain men from injuring one another, shall leave them otherwise free to regulate their own pursuits of industry and improvement, and shall not take from the mouth of labor the bread it has earned. This is the sum of good government, and this is necessary to close the circle of our felicities."
 [Thomas Jefferson: 1st Inaugural, 1801. ME 3:320]

The U.S. Supreme Court confirmed this view, when it ruled:

"The power to "legislate generally upon" life, liberty, and property, as opposed to the "power to provide modes of redress" against offensive state action, was "repugnant" to the Constitution. Id., at 15. See also United States v. Reese, 92 U.S. 214, 218 (1876); United States v. Harris, 106 U.S. 629, 639 (1883); James v. Bowman, 190 U.S. 127, 139 (1903). Although the specific holdings of these early cases might have been superseded or modified, see, e.g., Heart of Atlanta Motel, Inc. v. United States, 379 U.S. 241 (1964); United States v. Guest, 383 U.S. 745 (1966), their treatment of Congress' §5 power as corrective or preventive, not definitional, has not been questioned."
 City of Boerne v. Flores, Archbishop of San Antonio, [521 U.S. 507 (1997)]

What the U.S. Supreme Court is saying above is that the government has no authority to tell you how to run your private life. This is contrary to the whole idea of the Internal Revenue Code, whose main purpose is to monitor and control every aspect of those who are subject to it. In fact, it has become the chief means for Congress to implement what we call "social engineering". Just by the deductions they offer, people are incentivized into all kinds of crazy behaviors in pursuit of reductions in a liability that they in fact do not even have. Therefore, the only reasonable thing to conclude is that Internal

1 Revenue Code, Subtitle A, which would “appear” to regulate the private conduct of all human beings in states of the Union,
2 in fact:

- 3 1. Only applies to “public employees”, “public offices”, and federal instrumentalities in the official conduct of their 4 duties on behalf of the municipal corporation located in the District of Columbia, which 4 U.S.C. §72 makes the “seat
5 of government”.
- 6 2. Does not CREATE any new public offices or instrumentalities within the national government, but only regulates the 7 exercise of EXISTING public offices lawfully created through Title 5 of the U.S. Code. The IRS abuses its forms to 8 unlawfully CREATE public offices within the federal government. In payroll terminology, this is called “creating 9 fictitious employees”, and it is not only quite common, but highly illegal and can get private workers FIRED on the 10 spot if discovered.
- 11 3. Regulates PUBLIC and not PRIVATE conduct and therefore does not pertain to private human beings.
- 12 4. Constitutes a franchise and a “benefit” within the meaning of 5 U.S.C. §552a. Tax “refunds” and “deductions”, in fact,
13 are the “benefit”, and 26 U.S.C. §162 says that all those who take deductions MUST, in fact, be engaged in a public
14 office within the government, which is called a “trade or business”:

15 TITLE 5 > PART 1 > CHAPTER 5 > SUBCHAPTER II > § 552a
16 § 552a. Records maintained on individuals

17 (a) Definitions.— For purposes of this section—

18 (12) the term “Federal benefit program” means any program administered or funded by the Federal
19 Government, or by any agent or State on behalf of the Federal Government, providing cash or in-kind
20 assistance in the form of payments, grants, loans, or loan guarantees to individuals:. . .

- 21 5. Has the job of concealing all the above facts in thousands of pages and hundreds of thousands of words so that the 22 average American is not aware of it. That is why they call it the “code” instead of simply “law”: Because it is private
23 law you have to volunteer for and an “encryption” and concealment device for the truth. Now we know why former 24 Treasury Secretary Paul O’Neil called the Internal Revenue Code “9500 pages of gibberish” before he quit his job in 25 disgust and went on a campaign to criticize government.

26 The I.R.C. therefore essentially amounts to a part of the job responsibility and the “employment contract” of EXISTING 27 “public employees”, “public officers”, and federal instrumentalities. This was also confirmed by the House of 28 Representatives, who said that only those who take an oath of “public office” are subject to the requirements of the personal 29 income tax. See:

30 <http://famguardian.org/Subjects/Taxes/Evidence/PublicOrPrivate-Tax-Return.pdf>

31 The total lack of authority of the government to regulate or tax private conduct explains why, for instance:

- 32 1. The vehicle code in your state cannot be enforced on PRIVATE property. It only applies on PUBLIC roads owned by 33 the government
- 34 2. The family court in your state cannot regulate the exercise of unlicensed and therefore PRIVATE CONTRACT
35 marriage. Marriage licenses are a franchise that make those applying into public officers. Family court is a franchise
36 court and the equivalent of binding arbitration that only applies to fellow statutory government “employees”.
- 37 3. City conduct ordinances such as those prohibiting drinking by underage minors only apply to institutions who are 38 licensed, and therefore PUBLIC institutions acting as public officers of the government.

39 Within the Internal Revenue Code, those legal “persons” who work for the government are identified as engaging in a
40 “public office”. A “public office” within the Internal Revenue Code is called a “trade or business”, which is defined below.
41 We emphasize that engaging in a privileged “trade or business” is the main excise taxable activity that in fact and in deed is 42 what REALLY makes a person a “taxpayer” subject to the Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A:

43 26 U.S.C. Sec. 7701\(a\)\(26\)

44 “The term ‘trade or business’ includes the performance of the functions of a public office.”

45 Below is the definition of “public office”:

Public office

"Essential characteristics of a 'public office' are:

- (1) Authority conferred by law,
- (2) Fixed tenure of office, and
- (3) Power to exercise some of the sovereign functions of government.
- (4) Key element of such test is that "officer is carrying out a sovereign function'.
- (5) Essential elements to establish public position as 'public office' are:
  - (a) Position must be created by Constitution, legislature, or through authority conferred by legislature.
  - (b) Portion of sovereign power of government must be delegated to position,
  - (c) Duties and powers must be defined, directly or implied, by legislature or through legislative authority.
  - (d) Duties must be performed independently without control of superior power other than law, and
  - (e) Position must have some permanency."

[Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition]

Those who are fulfilling the "functions of a public office" are under a legal, fiduciary duty as "trustees" of the "public trust", while working as "volunteers" for the "charitable trust" called the "United States Government Corporation", which we affectionately call "U.S. Inc.":

"As expressed otherwise, the powers delegated to a public officer are held in trust for the people and are to be exercised in behalf of the government or of all citizens who may need the intervention of the officer.<sup>20</sup>

Furthermore, the view has been expressed that all public officers, within whatever branch and whatever level of government, and whatever be their private vocations, are trustees of the people, and accordingly labor under every disability and prohibition imposed by law upon trustees relative to the making of personal financial gain from a discharge of their trusts.<sup>21</sup> That is, a public officer occupies a fiduciary relationship to the political entity on whose behalf he or she serves.<sup>22</sup> and owes a fiduciary duty to the public.<sup>23</sup> It has been said that the fiduciary responsibilities of a public officer cannot be less than those of a private individual.<sup>24</sup> Furthermore, it has been stated that any enterprise undertaken by the public official which tends to weaken public confidence and undermine the sense of security for individual rights is against public policy.<sup>25</sup>

"Corporations are also of all grades, and made for varied objects; all governments are corporations, created by usage and common consent, or grants and charters which create a body politic for prescribed purposes; but whether they are private, local or general, in their objects, for the enjoyment of property, or the exercise of power, they are all governed by the same rules of law, as to the construction and the obligation of the instrument by which the incorporation is made. One universal rule of law protects persons and property. It is a fundamental principle of the common law of England, that the term freemen of the kingdom, includes 'all persons,' ecclesiastical and temporal, incorporate, politique or natural; it is a part of their magna charta (2 Inst. 4), and is incorporated into our institutions. The persons of the members of corporations are on the same footing of protection as other persons, and their corporate property secured by the same laws which protect that of individuals. 2 Inst. 46-7. 'No man shall be taken,' 'no man shall be disseised,' without due process of law, is a principle taken from magna charta, infused into all our state constitutions, and is made inviolable by the federal government, by the amendments to the constitution."

PART VI - PARTICULAR PROCEEDINGS
CHAPTER 176 - FEDERAL DEBT COLLECTION PROCEDURE
SUBCHAPTER A - DEFINITIONS AND GENERAL PROVISIONS
 Sec. 3002. Definitions

- (15) "United States" means -
 (A) a Federal corporation;
 (B) an agency, department, commission, board, or other entity of the United States; or
 (C) an instrumentality of the United States.

Those who are acting as "public officers" for "U.S. Inc." have essentially donated their formerly private property to a "public use". In effect, they have joined the SOCIALIST collective and become partakers of money STOLEN from people, most of whom, do not wish to participate and who would quit if offered an informed choice to do so.

*"My son, if sinners [socialists, in this case] entice you,
Do not consent [do not abuse your power of choice]
 If they say, "Come with us,
 Let us lie in wait to shed blood [of innocent "nontaxpayers"];
 Let us lurk secretly for the innocent without cause;
 Let us swallow them alive like Sheol,
 And whole, like those who go down to the Pit:
We shall fill our houses with spoil [plunder];
Cast in your lot among us,
Let us all have one purse [share the stolen LOOT]"--

My son, do not walk in the way with them [do not ASSOCIATE with them and don't let the government FORCE you to associate with them either by forcing you to become a "taxpayer"/government whore or a "U.S. citizen"].
 Keep your foot from their path;
 For their feet run to evil,
 And they make haste to shed blood.
 Surely, in vain the net is spread
 In the sight of any bird;
But they lie in wait for their own blood.
They lurk secretly for their own lives.
So are the ways of everyone who is greedy for gain [or unearned government benefits];
It takes away the life of its owners."
 [Proverbs 1:10-19, Bible, NKJV]*

Below is what the U.S. Supreme Court says about those who have donated their private property to a "public use". The ability to volunteer your private property for "public use", by the way, also implies the ability to UNVOLUNTEER at any time, which is the part no government employee we have ever found is willing to talk about. I wonder why....DUHHHH!:

*"Men are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable rights, -life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness;" and to 'secure,' not grant or create, these rights, governments are instituted. That property [or income] which a man has honestly acquired he retains full control of, subject to these limitations: First, that he shall not use it to his neighbor's injury, and that does not mean that he must use it for his neighbor's benefit; second, that if he devotes it to a public use, he gives to the public a right to control that use; and third, that whenever the public needs require, the public may take it upon payment of due compensation.

Any legal person, whether it be a natural person, a corporation, or a trust, may become a "public office" if it volunteers to do so. A subset of those engaging in such a "public office" are federal "employees", but the term "public office" or "trade or business" encompass much more than just government "employees". In law, when a legal "person" volunteers to accept the legal duties of a "public office", it therefore becomes a "trustee", an agent, and fiduciary (as defined in 26 U.S.C. §6903) acting on behalf of the federal government by the operation of private contract law. It becomes essentially a "franchisee" of the federal government carrying out the provisions of the franchise agreement, which is found in:

1. Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A, in the case of the federal income tax.
2. The Social Security Act, which is found in Title 42 of the U.S. Code.

If you would like to learn more about how this "trade or business" scam works, consult the authoritative article below:

The "Trade or Business" Scam, Form #05.001

<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

If you would like to know more about the extreme dangers of participating in all government franchises and why you destroy ALL your Constitutional rights and protections by doing so, see:

1. Government Instituted Slavery Using Franchises, Form #05.030

2. SEDM Liberty University, Section 4:

The IRS Form 1042's Instructions confirm that all those who use Social Security Numbers are engaged in the "trade or business" franchise:

Box 14, Recipient's U.S. Taxpayer Identification Number (TIN)

You must obtain and enter a U.S. taxpayer identification number (TIN) for:

- Any recipient whose income is effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business in the United States.

[IRS Form 1042-S Instructions, p. 14]

Engaging in a "trade or business" therefore implies a "public office", which makes the person using the number into a "public official" who has donated his formerly private time and services to a "public use" and agreed to give the public the right to control and regulate that use through the operation of the franchise agreement, which is the Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A and the Social Security Act found in Title 42 of the U.S. Code. The Social Security Number is therefore the equivalent of a "license number" to act as a "public official" for the federal government, who is a fiduciary or trustee subject to the plenary legislative jurisdiction of the federal government pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §7701\(a\)\(39\), 26 U.S.C. §7408\(d\), and Federal Rule of Civil Procedure Rule 17\(b\), regardless of where he might be found geographically, including within a state of the Union. The franchise agreement governs "choice of law" and where it's terms may be litigated, which is the District of Columbia, based on the agreement itself.

Now let's apply what we have learned to your employment situation. God said you cannot work for two companies at once. You can only serve one company, and that company is the federal government if you are receiving federal benefits:

"No one can serve two masters [two employers, for instance]; for either he will hate the one and love the other, or else he will be loyal to the one and despise the other. You cannot serve God and mammon [government]."

Everything you make while working for your slave master, the federal government, is their property over which you are a fiduciary and "public officer".

"THE" + "IRS" = "THEIRS"

A federal "public official" has no rights in relation to their employer, the federal government:

"The restrictions that the Constitution places upon the government in its capacity as lawmaker, i.e., as the regulator of private conduct, are not the same as the restrictions that it places upon the government in its capacity as employer. We have recognized this in many contexts, with respect to many different constitutional guarantees. Private citizens perhaps cannot be prevented from wearing long hair, but policemen can. Kelley v. Johnson, 425 U.S. 238, 247 (1976). Private citizens cannot have their property searched without probable cause, but in many circumstances government employees can. O'Connor v. Ortega, 480 U.S. 709, 723 (1987) (plurality opinion); id., at 732 (SCALIA, J., concurring in judgment). Private citizens cannot be punished for refusing to provide the government information that may incriminate them, but government employees can be dismissed when the incriminating information that they refuse to provide relates to the performance of their job. Gardner v. Broderick, 392 U.S. 273, 277-278 (1968). With regard to freedom of speech in particular: Private citizens cannot be punished for speech of merely private concern, but government employees can be fired for that reason. Connick v. Myers, 461 U.S. 138, 147 (1983). Private citizens cannot be punished for partisan political activity, but federal and state employees can be dismissed and otherwise punished for that reason.

1 Public Workers v. Mitchell, 330 U.S. 75, 101 (1947); Civil Service Comm'n v. Letter Carriers, 413 U.S. 548,
 3 Rutan v. Republican Party of Illinois, [497 U.S. 62 (1990)]

4 Your existence and your earnings as a federal "public official" are entirely subject to the whim and pleasure of corrupted
 5 lawyers and politicians, and you must beg and grovel if you expect to retain anything:

6 "In the general course of human nature, A POWER OVER A MAN'S SUBSISTENCE AMOUNTS TO A POWER
 7 OVER HIS WILL."
 8 [Alexander Hamilton, Federalist Paper No. 79]

9 You will need an "exemption" from your new slave master specifically spelled out in law to justify anything you want to
 10 keep while working on the federal plantation. The 1040 return is a profit and loss statement for a federal business
 11 corporation called the "United States". You are in partnership with your slave master and they decide what scraps they
 12 want to throw to you in your legal "cage" AFTER they figure out whatever is left in financing their favorite pork barrel
 13 project and paying off interest on an ever-expanding and endless national debt. Do you really want to reward this type of 14 irresponsibility and surety?

15 The W-4 therefore essentially amounts to a federal employment application. It is your badge of dishonor and a tacit
 16 admission that you can't or won't trust God and yourself to provide for yourself. Instead, you need a corrupted "protector"
 17 to steal money from your neighbor or counterfeit (print) it to help you pay your bills and run your life. Furthermore, if your 18 private employer forced you to fill out the W-4 against your will or instituted any duress to get you to fill it out, such as 19 threatening to fire or not hire you unless you fill it out, then he/she is:

- 20 1. Acting as an employment recruiter for the federal government.
- 21 2. Recruiting you into federal slavery in violation of the Thirteenth Amendment, and 42 U.S.C. §1994.
- 22 3. Involved in a conspiracy to commit grand theft by stealing money from you to pay for services and protection you 23 don't want and don't need.
- 24 4. Involved in racketeering and extortion in violation of 18 U.S.C. §1951.
- 25 5. Involved in money laundering for the federal government, by sending in money stolen from you to them, in violation
 26 of 18 U.S.C. §1956.

27 The higher ups at the IRS probably know the above, and they certainly aren't going to tell private employers or their 28 underlings the truth, because they aren't going to look a gift horse in the mouth and don't want to surrender their defense of 29 "plausible deniability". They will NEVER tell a thief who is stealing for them that they are stealing, especially if they
 30 don't have to assume liability for the consequences of the theft. No one who practices this kind of slavery, deceit, and evil
 31 can rightly claim that they are loving their neighbor and once they know they are involved in such deceit, they have a duty
 32 to correct it or become an "accessory after the fact" in violation of 18 U.S.C. §3. This form of deceit is also the sin most 33 hated by God in the Bible. Below is a famous Bible commentary on Prov. 11:1:

34 "As religion towards God is a branch of universal righteousness (he is not an honest man that is not devout), so
 35 righteousness towards men is a branch of true religion, for he is not a godly man that is not honest, nor can 36 he expect that his devotion should be accepted; for, 1. Nothing is more offensive to God than deceit in 37 commerce. A false balance is here put for all manner of unjust and fraudulent practices [of our public dis-
 38 servants] in dealing with any person [within the public], which are all an abomination to the Lord, and 39 render those abominable [hated] to him that allow themselves in the use of such accursed arts of thriving. It
 40 is an affront to justice, which God is the patron of, as well as a wrong to our neighbour, whom God is the 41 protector of. Men [in the IRS and the Congress] make light of such frauds, and think there is no sin in that
 42 which there is money to be got by, and, while it passes undiscovered, they cannot blame themselves for it; a 43 blot is no blot till it is hit, Hos. 12:7, 8. But they are not the less an abomination to God, who will be the 44 avenger of those that are defrauded by their brethren. 2. Nothing is more pleasing to God than fair and
 45 honest dealing, nor more necessary to make us and our devotions acceptable to him: A just weight is his
 46 delight. He himself goes by a just weight, and holds the scale of judgment with an even hand, and therefore is 47 pleased with those that are herein followers of him. A balance cheats, under pretence of doing right most 48 exactly, and therefore is the greater abomination to God."
 49 [Matthew Henry's Commentary on the Whole Bible; Henry, M., 1996, c1991, under Prov. 11:1]

50 The Bible also says that those who participate in this kind of "commerce" with the government are practicing harlotry and 51 idolatry. The Bible book of Revelation describes a woman called "Babylon the Great Harlot".

52 "And I saw a woman sitting on a scarlet beast which was full of names of blasphemy, having seven heads and 53 ten horns. The woman was arrayed in purple and scarlet, and adorned with gold and precious stones and

1 pearls, having in her hand a golden cup full of abominations and the filthiness of her fornication. And on her
2 forehead a name was written:

3 MYSTERY, BABYLON THE GREAT, THE MOTHER OF HARLOTS AND OF THE ABOMINATIONS OF THE 4 EARTH.

5 I saw the woman, drunk with the blood of the saints and with the blood of the martyrs of Jesus. And when I saw
6 her, I marveled with great amazement."
7 [Rev. 17:3-6, Bible, NKJV]

8 This despicable harlot is described below as the “woman who sits on many waters”.

9 “Come, I will show you the judgment of the great harlot [Babylon the Great Harlot] who sits on many waters,
10 with whom the kings of the earth [politicians and rulers] committed fornication, and the inhabitants of the earth
11 were made drunk [indulged] with the wine of her fornication.”
12 [Rev. 17:1-2, Bible, NKJV]

13 These waters are simply symbolic of a democracy controlled by mobs of atheistic people who are fornicating with the Beast
14 and who have made it their false, man-made god and idol:

16 [Rev. 17:15, Bible, NKJV]

17 The Beast is then defined in Rev. 19:19 as “the kings of the earth”, which today would be our political rulers:

18 “And I saw the beast, the kings of the earth, and their armies, gathered together to make war against Him who 19 sat on the horse and against His army.”
20 [Rev. 19:19, Bible, NKJV]

21 Babylon the Great Harlot is “fornicating” with the government by engaging in commerce with it. Black’s Law Dictionary
22 defines “commerce” as “intercourse”:

23 “Commerce. ...Intercourse by way of trade and traffic between different peoples or states and the citizens or 24 inhabitants thereof, including not only the purchase, sale, and exchange of commodities, but also the 25 instrumentalities [governments] and agencies by which it is promoted and the means and appliances by which it
26 is carried on...”
27 [Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 269]

28 If you want your rights back people, you can’t pursue government employment in the context of your private job. If you
29 do, the Bible, not us, says you are a harlot and that you are CONDEMNED to hell!

30 And I heard another voice from heaven saying, “Come out of her, my people, lest you share in her sins, and lest
31 you receive of her plagues. For her sins have reached to heaven, and God has remembered her iniquities.
32 Render to her just as she rendered to you, and repay her double according to her works; in the cup which she
33 has mixed, mix double for her. In the measure that she glorified herself and lived luxuriously, in the same
34 measure give her torment and sorrow; for she says in her heart, ‘I sit as queen, and am no widow, and will not 35 see sorrow.’ Therefore her plagues will come in one day—death and mourning and famine. And she will be 36 utterly burned with fire, for strong is the Lord God who judges her.
37 [Rev. 18:4-8, Bible, NKJV]

38 In summary, it ought to be very clear from reading this section then, that:

- 39 1. It is an abuse of the government’s taxing power, according to the U.S. Supreme Court, to pay public monies to private 40 persons or to use the government’s taxing power to transfer wealth between groups of private individuals.
- 41 2. Because of these straight jacket constraints of the use of “public funds” by the government, the government can only 42 lawfully make payments or pay “benefits” to persons who have contracted with them to render specific services that 43 are authorized by the Constitution to be rendered.
- 44 3. The government had to create an intermediary called the “straw man” that is a public office or agent within the 45 government and therefore part of the government that they could pay the “benefit” to in order to circumvent the 46 restrictions upon the government from abusing its powers to transfer wealth between private individuals.
- 47 4. The straw man is a “public office” within the U.S. government. It is a creation of Congress and an agent and fiduciary
48 of the government subject to the statutory control of Congress. It is therefore a public entity and not a private entity
49 which the government can therefore lawfully pay public funds to without abusing its taxing powers.

- 1 5. Those who sign up for government contracts, benefits, franchises, or employment agree to become surety for the straw
2 man or public office and agree to act in a representative capacity on behalf of a federal corporation in the context of all
3 the duties of the office pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 17(b).
- 4 6. Because the straw man is a public office, you can't be compelled to occupy the office. You and not the government set
5 the compensation or amount of money you are willing to work for in order to consensually occupy the office. If you
6 don't think the compensation is adequate, you have the right to refuse to occupy the office by refusing to connect your
7 assets to the office using the de facto license number for the office called the Taxpayer Identification Number.

8 If you would like to know more about why Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A only applies to federal instrumentalities and 9 payments to or from the federal government, we refer you to the free memorandum of law below:

10 5.2.8 Social Security: The legal vehicle for extending Federal Jurisdiction outside the federal zone using 11 Private/contract law

12 In previous sections, we have demonstrated the proper very limited application of the Internal Revenue Code using the code
13 itself and showing why its definitions are entirely consistent with the Separation of Powers Doctrine that is the foundation
14 of the United States Constitution. See the link below for details on the Separation of Powers Doctrine:

15 <http://famguardian.org/Subjects/LawAndGovt/Articles/SeparationOfPowersDoctrine.htm>

16 In this section, we will further expand these important legal concepts to show how the reach of the I.R.C. is extended
17 outside the federal zone using the Social Security program, which is private law, and how this is done perfectly legally and 18 constitutionally. The concepts in this section are very important and often go completely overlooked even by the most 19 seasoned freedom researchers. So please read carefully.

20 We must always remember that there are TWO sources of jurisdiction: public law or private law. Public law is confined to 21 the territory of the sovereign while private law may operate "extraterritorially" because it is a product of your right to 22 contract. This is hinted at by Bouvier's Maxims of Law, which say on this subject:

23 "Debitum et contractus non sunt nullius loci.
24 Debt and contract are of no particular place."
25 [Bouvier's Maxims of Law, 1856;
26 SOURCE: <http://famguardian.org/Publications/BouvierMaximsOfLaw/BouvierMaxims.htm>]

27 Congress sometimes enacts special law that is the equivalent of a "proposed private contract" that "activates" when we 28 consent to its provisions. This type of an enactment is called a "special law" or a "private law". Social Security and the 29 Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A are examples of private law. For details, see:

Requirement for Consent, Form #05.003
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

30 A section of the code, such as the Internal Revenue Code or the Social Security Act, which is quoted in court can only be
31 cited as "prima facie" evidence, according to 1 U.S.C. §204 and the legislative notes thereunder. "Prima facie" evidence is 32 presumptive evidence. Below are some important limitations relating to the abuse of "presumption" in federal courts
33 relating to income tax issues.

- 34 1. Based on the Supreme Court in Vlandis v. Kline, 412 U.S. 441 (1973), presumption that prejudices any constitutionally 35 protected right is unconstitutional and may not be used in any court of law against a party protected by the Bill of 36 Rights.
- 37 2. A "statutory presumption", such as that found in 1 U.S.C. §204, relating to admission into evidence of anything that is 38 not positive law, may only be used against a party who is not protected by the Bill of Rights.
- 39 3. Those domiciled inside the federal zone and who therefore are not parties to the Constitution, may not therefore 40 exclude "prima facie" evidence or statutes that are not "positive law" from evidence. Such a person has no
41 Constitutional rights that can be prejudiced. Therefore, he is not entitled to "due process of law".

- 1 4. A person who is protected by the Constitution and the Bill of Rights should have the right to exclude “prima facie” 2 evidence in his or her trial because it prejudices his or her constitutional rights.
- 3 5. A court which allows any statute from the Internal Revenue Code, Title 26, into evidence in any federal court in a trial
4 involving a person who maintains a domicile in an area covered by the Constitution is:
5 5.1. Engaging in kidnapping, by moving the domicile of the party to an area that has no rights, in violation of 18
7 5.2. Engaging in a “conspiracy against rights” in violation of 18 U.S.C. §241.

8 Based on the above, it is VERY important to know which codes within the U.S. Code are positive law and which are not.
9 Those that are not “positive law” may not be cited in a trial involving a person domiciled in a state of the Union and not on 10 federal property, because such a person is covered by the Bill of Rights. The U.S. Code provides a list of Titles of the U.S.
11 Code that are not “positive law” within the legislative notes section of 1 U.S.C. §204. Among the titles of the U.S. Code
12 that are NOT “positive law” include:

- 13 1. Title 26: Internal Revenue Code.
- 14 2. Title 42: Social Security
- 15 3. Title 50: The Military Selective Service Act (military draft)

16 Yes, folks, that’s right: Americans domiciled in states of the Union may not have any sections of the above titles of the 17 U.S. Code cited in any trial involving them in a federal court, because it violates due process. They may also not have any

- 19 1. Provide proof of their domicile within a state of the Union. See:

Affidavit of Citizenship, Domicile, and Tax Status, Form #02.001

<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

- 20 2. Respond to the federal suit using Constitutional Diversity of Citizenship under Article III, Section 2 and NOT statutory 21 diversity under 28 U.S.C. §1332.
- 22 3. Do not implicated themselves as statutory “taxpayers” by citing anything from the Internal Revenue code in their own 23 pleading, which would be an indirect admission that they are subject to it. See:
24 <http://famguardian.org/Subjects/Taxes/Articles/TaxpayerVNontaxpayer.htm>
- 25 4. Have not filled out and sign any government forms that create any employment or agency between them and the 26 federal government, such as the W-4, 1040, or SSA Form SS-5.
- 27 5. Send in and admit into evidence the following:

Resignation of Compelled Social Security Trustee, Form #06.002

28 The most prevalent occasion where the above requirements are violated with most Americans is applying for the Social 29 Security program using the SSA Form SS-5. Completing, signing, and submitting that form creates an agency and 30 employment with the federal government. The submitter becomes a Trustee and a federal “employee” under federal law,
31 and therefore accepts federal jurisdiction from that point forward. We have written an exhaustive free pamphlet that 32 analyzes all the reasons why this is the case, which may be found at:

Resignation of Compelled Social Security Trustee, Form #06.002

33 The above pamphlet also serves the double capacity of an electronically fillable form you can send in to eliminate this one
34 important source of federal jurisdiction and restore your sovereignty so that the Internal Revenue Code may not be cited as 35 authority against you in a court of law.

36 The reason why signing up for Social Security creates a nexus for federal jurisdiction and a means to cite it against a person 37 is that:

- 38 1. Signing up for Social Security makes one into a “Trustee”, agent, and fiduciary of the United States government under 39 26 U.S.C. §6903. The United States government is a foreign corporation with respect to a state of the Union, but it
40 becomes a “domestic” corporation when you are acting as an “employee” and agent.

 3                    [19 Corpus Juris Secundum (C.J.S.), Corporations, §884 (2003)]

- 4    2. The United States Government is defined as a “federal corporation” in 28 U.S.C. §3002(15)(A):

5                    TITLE 28 - JUDICIARY AND JUDICIAL PROCEDURE
 6                    PART VI - PARTICULAR PROCEEDINGS
 7                    CHAPTER 176 - FEDERAL DEBT COLLECTION PROCEDURE
 8                    SUBCHAPTER A - DEFINITIONS AND GENERAL PROVISIONS
 9                    Sec. 3002. Definitions

10                   (15) “United States” means -

11                   (A) a Federal corporation;

12                   (B) an agency, department, commission, board, or other entity of the United States; or

13                   (C) an instrumentality of the United States.

- 14    3. The Trust you are acting as a Trustee for is an “employee” of the United States government within the meaning of the 15    Internal Revenue Code under 26 C.F.R. §31.3401(c)-1.
 16    4. You, when acting as a Trustee, are an “officer or employee” of a federal corporation called the “United States”.
 17    5. The legal “domicile” of the Trust you are acting on behalf of is the “District of Columbia”. This is where the “res” or 18    “corpus” of the Social Security Trust has its only legal existence as a “person”. See:
 19    <http://famguardian.org/Subjects/Taxes/Articles/DomicileBasisForTaxation.htm>
 20    6. The Social Security Number is the “Trustee License Number”. Whenever you write your name anywhere on a piece of 21    paper, and especially in conjunction with your all caps name, such as “JOHN SMITH”, you are indicating that you are
 22    acting in a Trustee capacity. The only way to remove such a presumption is to black out the number or not put it on the 23    form, and then to correct whoever sent you the form or notice to clarify that you are not acting as a Trustee or 24    government employee, but instead are acting as a natural person. See:
 25    <http://sedm.org/Forms/05-MemLaw/AboutSSNsAndTINs.pdf>
 26    7. As an “officer or employee of a corporation”, you are the proper subject of the penalty and criminal provisions of the 27    Internal Revenue Code under:
 28    7.1. 26 U.S.C. §6671\(b\)
 29    7.2. 26 U.S.C. §7343
 30    8. The requirement to file federal income tax returns by the Social Security Trustee originates not from any liability
 31    statute, but from his or her status as a “public officer” and “trustee” of the government:

32                    I: DUTY TO ACCOUNT FOR PUBLIC FUNDS

33                    § 909. In general. It is the duty of the public officer, like any other agent or trustee, although not declared by 34                    express statute, to faithfully account for and pay over to the proper authorities all moneys which may come
 35                    into his hands upon the public account, and the performance of this duty may be' enforced by proper actions
 36                    against the officer himself, or against those who have become sureties for the faithful discharge of his duties.

38                    SOURCE: <http://books.google.com/books?id=g-I9AAAAIAAJ&printsec=titlepage>]

- 39    9. The Internal Revenue Code becomes enforceable against you without the need for implementing regulations. The 40    following statutes say that implementing regulations published in the Federal Register are not required in the case of 41    federal employees, agencies, or contractors:
 42    9.1. 5 U.S.C. §553\(a\)\(1\).
 44    9.3. 44 U.S.C. §1505\(a\)\(1\)
 45    10. As a Trustee over the Social Security Trust, you are a “public officer” engaged in a “trade or business” as defined in 26
 46    U.S.C. §7701\(a\)\(26\). Consequently, the earnings of the federal corporation you preside over as Trustee are taxable
 47    under the Internal Revenue Code. You are exercising the functions of a “public office” because you are exercising
 48    fiduciary duty over payments paid to the Federal Government. You are in business with Uncle Sam and essentially
 49    become a “Kelly Girl”. Income taxes are really just the “profits” of the Social Security trust created when you signed
 50    up for the program, which are “kicked back” to the mother corporation called the “United States”.
 51    11. All items that you take deductions on under 26 U.S.C. §162, earned income credit under 26 U.S.C. §32, or a graduated
 52    rate of tax under 26 U.S.C. §1 become “effectively connected with a trade or business”, which is a code word for saying that they are public property, because a “trade or business” is a “public office”. This “trade or business” then becomes a means of earning you “revenue” or “profit” as a private individual, because it serves to reduce your tax liability as a Trustee filing 1040 returns for the Social Security Trust. What the government won't tell you, however, is that the best way to reduce your federal tax liability is simply to either not sign up for Social Security to begin with, or to quit immediately, nor are they going to show you how to quit! See the following article for more details on “The trade or business scam” for further details:

12. Below is what the Supreme Court said about all property you donated for “public use” by the Trust in acquiring reduced tax liability:

“Surely the matters in which the public has the most interest are the supplies of food and clothing; yet can it be that by reason of this interest the state may fix the price at which the butcher must sell his meat, or the vendor of boots and shoes his goods? Men are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable rights, -life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness; and to 'secure,' not grant or create, these rights, governments are instituted. That property which a man has honestly acquired he retains full control of, subject to these limitations: First, that he shall not use it to his neighbor's injury, and that does not mean that he must use it for his neighbor's benefit; second, that if he devotes it to a public use, he gives to the public a right to control that use; and third, that whenever the public needs require, the public may take it upon payment of due compensation. Budd v. People of State of New York, [143 U.S. 517 (1892)]

Therefore, whatever you take deductions on comes under the jurisdiction of the Internal Revenue Code, which is the vehicle by which the “public” controls the use of your formerly private property. Every benefit has a string attached, and in this case, the string is that you as Trustee, and all property you donate for temporary use by the Trust then comes under the jurisdiction of the Internal Revenue Code and the Social Security Act.

13. Your Trust employer, the “United States” foreign corporation, is your new boss and the beneficiary of the Social Security Trust you work for as an officer. As your new boss, it does not need territorial jurisdiction over you. All it needs is “in rem” jurisdiction over the property you donated to the trust, which includes all your earnings. That jurisdiction derives from Article 4, Section 3, Clause 2 of the Constitution. All this property, while it is donated to a public use, becomes federal property under government management. That is why the Slave Surveillance Number is assigned to all accounts: to track government property, contracts, and employees.
14. Because the property already is government property while you are using it in connection with a “trade or business”, then you implicitly have already given the government permission to repossess that which always was theirs. That is why they can issue a “Notice of Levy” without any judicial process and immediately and conveniently take custody of your bank accounts, personal property, and retirement funds: Because they have the mark of the Beast, the Slave Surveillance Number on them, which means you already gave them to your new benefactor and caretaker, the United States Government.
15. The United States Government does not need territorial jurisdiction over you in order to drag you into federal court while you are acting as one of its Trustees and fiduciaries under 26 U.S.C. §6903. Any matter relating to federal contracts, whether they are federal government franchises, Trust Contracts or federal employment contracts (with the “Trustee”), may ONLY be heard in a federal court. It is a violation of the separation of powers doctrine for a state to hear a matter which might affect the federal government. See Alden v. Maine, 527 U.S. 706 \(1999\). Federal Jurisdiction over Trustees is indeed “subject matter jurisdiction”, but it doesn't derive primarily from the Internal Revenue Code. Instead it derives from the agency and contract you maintain as a “Trustee”:

*American Jurisprudence, 2d
United States
§ 42 Interest on claim [77 Am Jur 2d UNITED STATES]*

The interest to be recovered as damages for the delayed payment of a contractual obligation to the United States is not controlled by state statute or local common law. 75 In the absence of an applicable federal statute, the federal courts must determine according to their own criteria the appropriate measure of damages. 76 State law may, however, be adopted as the federal law of decision in some instances. 77 [American Jurisprudence 2d, United States, §42: Interest on Claim (1999)]

16. The U.S. Supreme Court has always given wide latitude to the Legislative and Executive branches of the government to manage their own “employees” and officers, which includes both its Social Security Trusts and the Trustees who are exercising agency over the Trust and its corpus or property. You better bow down and worship your new boss: Uncle Sam!

A few authorities supporting why the Federal Government may not cite federal statutes or caselaw against those who are not its employees or contractors follows:

1. Federal courts are administrative courts which have jurisdiction only over the following:
  - 1.1. Plenary/General jurisdiction over federal territory: Implemented primarily through “public law” and applies generally to all persons and things. This is a requirement of “equal protection” found in 42 U.S.C. §1981. Operates upon:
    - 1.1.1. The District of Columbia under Article 1, Section 8, Clause 17 of the U.S. Constitution.
    - 1.1.2. Federal territories and possessions under Article 4, Section 3, Clause 3 of the U.S. Constitution.
    - 1.1.3. Special maritime jurisdiction (admiralty) in territorial waters under the exclusive jurisdiction of the general/federal government.
    - 1.1.4. Federal areas within states of the Union ceded to the federal government. Federal judicial districts consist entirely of the federal territory within the exterior boundaries of the district, and do not encompass land not ceded to the federal government as required by 40 U.S.C. §3112. See section 6.4 of the Tax Fraud Prevention Manual, Form #06.008 et seq for further details.
  - 1.2. Subject matter jurisdiction:
    - 1.2.1. “Public laws” which operate throughout the states of the Union upon the following subjects:
      - 1.2.1.1. Postal fraud. See Article 1, Section 8, Clause 7 of the U.S. Constitution..
      - 1.2.1.2. Counterfeiting under Article 1, Section 8, Clause 6 of the U.S. Constitution.
      - 1.2.1.3. Treason under Article 4, Section 2, Clause 3 of the U.S. Constitution.
      - 1.2.1.4. Interstate commercial crimes under Article 1, Section 8, Clause 3 of the U.S. Constitution.
      - 1.2.1.5. Slavery, involuntary servitude, or peonage under the Thirteenth Amendment, 42 U.S.C. §1994, 18 U.S.C. §1581. and 18 U.S.C. §1589(3).

“Other authorities to the same effect might be cited. It is not open to doubt that Congress may enforce the Thirteenth Amendment by direct legislation, punishing the holding of a person in slavery or in involuntary servitude except as a punishment for a crime. In the exercise of that power Congress has enacted these sections denouncing peonage, and punishing one who holds another in that condition of involuntary servitude. This legislation is not limited to the territories or other parts of the strictly national domain, but is operative in the states and wherever the sovereignty of the United States extends. We entertain no doubt of the validity of this legislation, or of its applicability to the case of any person holding another in a state of peonage, and this whether there be municipal ordinance or state law sanctioning such holding. It operates directly on every citizen of the Republic, wherever his residence may be.”
[Clyatt v. U.S., 197 U.S. 207 (1905)]
    - 1.2.2. “Private law” or “special law” pursuant to Article 4, Section 3, Clause 2 of the U.S. Constitution. Applies only to persons and things who individually consent through private agreement or contract. Note that this jurisdiction also includes contracts with states of the Union and private individuals in those states. Includes, but is not limited exclusively to the following:
      - 1.2.2.1. Federal franchises.
      - 1.2.2.2. Federal employees, as described in Title 5 of the U.S. Code.
      - 1.2.2.3. Federal contracts and “public offices”.
      - 1.2.2.4. Federal chattel property.
      - 1.2.2.5. Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A.
2. Social Security, found in 42 U.S.C. Chapter 7.
3. Internal Revenue Manual (I.R.M.), Section 4.10.7.2.9.8 says that the IRS cannot cite rulings below the Supreme Court apply to more than the specific person who litigated:

*Internal Revenue Manual
4.10.7.2.9.8 (05-14-1999)
Importance of Court Decisions*

1. Decisions made at various levels of the court system are considered to be interpretations of tax laws and may be used by either examiners or taxpayers to support a position.

2. Certain court cases lend more weight to a position than others. A case decided by the U.S. Supreme Court becomes the law of the land and takes precedence over decisions of lower courts. The Internal Revenue Service must follow Supreme Court decisions. For examiners, Supreme Court decisions have the same weight as the Code.

3. Decisions made by lower courts, such as Tax Court, District Courts, or Claims Court, are binding on the Service only for the particular taxpayer and the years litigated. Adverse decisions of lower courts do not require the Service to alter its position for other taxpayers.

4. There is no federal common law within states of the Union, according to the Supreme Court in Erie Railroad v. Tompkins, 304 U.S. 64 (1938). Consequently, the rulings of federal district and circuit courts have no relevancy to state citizens domiciled in states of the union who do not declare themselves to be "U.S. citizens" under 8 U.S.C. §1401 and who would litigate under diversity of citizenship, pursuant to Article III, Section 2 of the Constitution but NOT 28 U.S.C. §1332.

"There is no Federal Common Law, and Congress has no power to declare substantive rules of Common Law applicable in a state. Whether they be local or general in their nature, be they commercial law or a part of the Law of Torts"

Erie Railroad v. Tompkins, [304 U.S. 64 (1938)]

Common law. As distinguished from statutory law created by the enactment of legislatures, the common law comprises the body of those principles and rules of action, relating to the government and security of persons and property, which derive their authority solely from usages and customs of immemorial antiquity, or from the judgments and decrees of the courts recognizing, affirming, and enforcing such usages and customs and, in this sense, particularly the ancient unwritten law of England. In general, it is a body of law that develops and derives through judicial decisions, as distinguished from legislative enactments. The "common law" is all the statutory and case law background of England and the American colonies before the American revolution. People v. Rehman, 253 C.A.2d 119, 61 Cal.Rptr. 65, 85. It consists of those principles, usage and rules of action applicable to government and security of persons and property which do not rest for their authority upon any express and positive declaration of the will of the legislature. Bishop v. U.S., D.C.Tex., 334 F.Supp. 415, 418.

"California Civil Code, Section 22.2, provides that the "common law of England, so far as it is not repugnant to or inconsistent with the Constitution of the United States, or the Constitution or laws of this State, is the rule of decision in all the courts of this State."

"In a broad sense, "common law" may designate all that part of the positive law, juristic theory, and ancient custom of any state or nation which is of general and universal application, thus marking off special or local rules or customs.

"For federal common law, see that title.

"As a compound adjective "common-law" is understood as contrasted with or opposed to "statutory," and sometimes also to "equitable" or to "criminal."
[Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 276]

5. The Rules of Decision Act, 28 U.S.C. §1652, requires that the laws of the states of the Union are the only rules of decision in federal courts. This means that federal courts MUST cite state law and not federal law in all tax cases and MAY NOT cite federal caselaw.
6. The Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 17\(b\) say that the capacity to sue or be sued is determined by the law of the individual's domicile. This means that if a person is domiciled in a state and not within an enclave, then state law are the rules of decision rather than federal law. Since state income tax liability in nearly every state is dependent on a federal liability first, this makes an income tax liability impossible for those domiciled outside the federal.

Therefore, the private citizen who has:

1. Provided proof of their domicile within a state of the Union. See: Affidavit of Citizenship, Domicile, and Tax Status, Form #02.001
2. Responded to the federal suit using Diversity of Citizenship under 28 U.S.C. §1332.
3. Not implicated themselves as "taxpayers" by citing anything from the Internal Revenue code in their own pleading, which would be an indirect admission that they are subject to it. See: <http://famguardian.org/Subjects/Taxes/Articles/TaxpayerVNontaxpayer.htm>
4. Not filled out and sign any government forms that create any employment or agency between them and the federal government, such as the W-4, 1040, or SSA Form SS-5.
5. Sent in and admitted into evidence the following:

Resignation of Compelled Social Security Trustee, Form #06.002
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

1 . . . is unconditionally Sovereign and may not lawfully be dragged into a federal court for an income tax matter or any other
 2 federal employment or contract or civil matter. All parties wishing to litigate against them must instead do so in a state, not
 3 federal court. The federal courts may not therefore be used to destroy or undermine their sovereignty without violating the 4 Constitution and the separation of powers doctrine. Below is the reason why, in the context of States of the Union, but the
 5 justification is equally pertinent to the people they were created to serve and protect, at least in the context of their own
 6 right to self-governance and self-determination:

7 Although the Constitution grants broad powers to Congress, our federalism requires that Congress treat the
 8 States in a manner consistent with their status as residuary sovereigns and joint participants in the governance
 9 of the Nation. See, e.g., United States v. Lopez, 514 U. S., at 583 (concurring opinion); Printz, 521 U. S., at 935
 10 ; New York, 505 U. S., at 188. The founding generation thought it "neither becoming nor convenient that the 11 several States of the Union, invested with that large residuum of sovereignty which had not been delegated to 12 the United States, should be summoned as defendants to answer the complaints of private persons." In re Ayers, 13 123 U. S., at 505. The principle of sovereign immunity preserved by constitutional design "thus accords the 14 States the respect owed them as members of the federation." Puerto Rico Aqueduct and Sewer Authority, 506
 15 U. S., at 146 ; accord, Coeur d'Alene Tribe, supra, at 268 (recognizing "the dignity and respect afforded a 16 State, which the immunity is designed to protect").

17 Petitioners contend that immunity from suit in federal court suffices to preserve the dignity of the States. Private
 18 suits against nonconsenting States, however, present "the indignity of subjecting a State to the coercive
 19 process of judicial tribunals at the instance of private parties." In re Ayers, supra, at 505; accord, Seminole
 20 Tribe, 517 U. S., at 58 , regardless of the forum. Not only must a State defend or default but also it must face the 21 prospect of being thrust, by federal fiat and against its will, into the disfavored status of a debtor, subject to 22 the power of private citizens to levy on its treasury or perhaps even government buildings or property which 23 the State administers on the public's behalf.

24 In some ways, of course, a congressional power to authorize private suits against nonconsenting States in 25 their own courts would be even more offensive to state sovereignty than a power to authorize the suits in a
 26 federal forum. Although the immunity of one sovereign in the courts of another has often depended in part on 27 comity or agreement, the immunity of a sovereign in its own courts has always been understood to be within the
 28 sole control of the sovereign itself. See generally Hall, 440 U. S., at 414 -418. A power to press a State's own
 29 courts into federal service to coerce the other branches of the State, furthermore, is the power first to turn the 30 State against itself and ultimately to commandeer the entire political machinery of the State against its will and 31 at the behest of individuals. Cf. Coeur d'Alene Tribe, supra, at 276. Such plenary federal control of state
 32 governmental processes denigrates the separate sovereignty of the States.

33 It is unquestioned that the Federal Government retains its own immunity from suit not only in state tribunals but 34 also in its own courts. In light of our constitutional system recognizing the essential sovereignty of the States,
 35 we are reluctant to conclude that the States are not entitled to a reciprocal privilege.

 37 States--especially suits for money damages--may threaten the financial integrity of the States. It is
 38 indisputable that, at the time of the founding, many of the States could have been forced into insolvency but
 39 for their immunity from private suits for money damages. Even today, an unlimited congressional power to
 40 authorize suits in state court to levy upon the treasuries of the States for compensatory damages, attorney's
 41 fees, and even punitive damages could create staggering burdens, giving Congress a power and a leverage
 42 over the States that is not contemplated by our constitutional design. The potential national power would
 43 pose a severe and notorious danger to the States and their resources.

 45 more subtle risks as well. "The principle of immunity from litigation assures the states and the nation from 46 unanticipated intervention in the processes of government." Great Northern Life Ins. Co. v. Read, 322 U.S., at 47 53 . When the States' immunity from private suits is disregarded, "the course of their public policy and the 48 administration of their public affairs" may become "subject to and controlled by the mandates of judicial
 49 tribunals without their consent, and in favor of individual interests." In re Ayers, supra, at 505. While the States
 50 have relinquished their immunity from suit in some special contexts--at least as a practical matter--see Part III,
 51 infra, this surrender carries with it substantial costs to the autonomy, the decisionmaking ability, and the 52 sovereign capacity of the States.

53 A general federal power to authorize private suits for money damages would place unwarranted strain on the 54 States' ability to govern in accordance with the will of their citizens. Today, as at the time of the founding, the 55 allocation of scarce resources among competing needs and interests lies at the heart of the political process.
 56 While the judgment creditor of the State may have a legitimate claim for compensation, other important needs
 57 and worthwhile ends compete for access to the public fisc. Since all cannot be satisfied in full, it is inevitable

1 that difficult decisions involving the most sensitive and political of judgments must be made. If the principle of
 2 representative government is to be preserved to the States, the balance between competing interests must be
 3 reached after deliberation by the political process established by the citizens of the State, not by judicial 4 decree mandated by the Federal Government and invoked by the private citizen. "It needs no argument to 5 show that the political power cannot be thus ousted of its jurisdiction and the judiciary set in its place."
 6 Louisiana v. Jumel, 107 U.S. 711, 727-728 (1883).

7 By " `split[ting] the atom of sovereignty,'" the founders established " `two orders of government, each with its
 8 own direct relationship, its own privity, its own set of mutual rights and obligations to the people who sustain it
 9 and are governed by it.'" Saenz v. Roe, 526 U.S. ____ , ____ , n. 17 (1999), quoting U.S. Term Limits, Inc. v.
 10 Thornton, 514 U.S. 779, 838 (1995) (concurring opinion). "The Constitution thus contemplates that a State's 11 government will represent and remain accountable [only] to its own citizens [and not to the federal 12 government]." Printz, 521 U. S., at 920. When the Federal Government asserts authority over a State's most 13 fundamental political processes, it strikes at the heart of the political accountability so essential to our liberty
 14 and republican form of government.

15 The asserted authority would blur not only the distinct responsibilities of the State and National Governments
 16 but also the separate duties of the judicial and political branches of the state governments, displacing "state
 17 decisions that `go to the heart of representative government.'" Gregory v. Ashcroft, 501 U.S. 452, 461 (1991).
 18 A State is entitled to order the processes of its own governance, assigning to the political branches, rather 19 than the courts, the responsibility for directing the payment of debts. See id., at 460 ("Through the structure
 20 of its government, and the character of those who exercise government authority, a State defines itself as a
 21 sovereign"). If Congress could displace a State's allocation of governmental power and responsibility, the
 22 judicial branch of the State, whose legitimacy derives from fidelity to the law, would be compelled to assume 23 a role not only foreign to its experience but beyond its competence as defined by the very constitution from 24 which its existence derives.

25 Congress cannot abrogate the States' sovereign immunity in federal court; were the rule to be different here, the 26 National Government would wield greater power in the state courts than in its own judicial instrumentalities.
 27 Cf. Howlett, 496 U.S., at 365 (noting the anomaly that would arise if "a State might be forced to entertain in its 28 own courts suits from which it was immune in federal court"); Hilton, 502 U.S., at 206 (recognizing the 29 "federalism-related concerns that arise when the National Government uses the state courts as the exclusive 30 forum to permit recovery under a congressional statute").
 31 [Alden v. Maine, 527 U.S. 706 (1999)]

32 Furthermore, any government representative, and especially who is from the Dept. of Justice or the IRS, who cites a case
 33 below the Supreme Court or any section from the Internal Revenue Code or Title 42 of the U.S. Code in the case of a
 34 person who is a "national" but not a "citizen" under federal law, who maintains a domicile in a state of the Union and not 35 within federal jurisdiction, and who is not a "Trustee" or federal "employee" or contractor, is:

- 36 1. Abusing caselaw for political purposes, usually with willful intent to deceive the hearer.
- 37 2. Violating Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 17(b), which establishes that the only law and case law that may be cited in 38 any federal civil trial is the law that derives from the domicile of the party

39 Federal courts, incidentally, are NOT allowed to involve themselves in such "political questions", and therefore should not
 40 allow this type of abuse of caselaw, but judges with a conflict of interest and who are fond of increasing their retirement
 41 benefits often will acquiesce if you don't call them on it as an informed American. This kind of bias on the part of federal
 42 judges, incidentally, is highly illegal under 28 U.S.C. §144 and 28 U.S.C. §455. Below is what the Supreme Court said
 43 about the authority of itself, and by implication all other federal courts, to involve itself in strictly political matters:

44 "But, fortunately for our freedom from political excitements in judicial duties, this court [the U.S. Supreme
 45 Court] can never with propriety be called on officially to be the umpire in questions merely political. The
 46 adjustment of these questions belongs to the people and their political representatives, either in the State or
 47 general government. These questions relate to matters not to be settled on strict legal principles. They are 48 adjusted rather by inclination, or prejudice or compromise, often.

50 Another evil, alarming and little foreseen, involved in regarding these as questions for the final arbitrament
 51 of judges would be that, in such an event, all political privileges and rights would, in a dispute among the
 52 people, depend on our decision finally. We would possess the power to decide against, as well as for, them,
 53 and, under a prejudiced or arbitrary judiciary, the public liberties and popular privileges might thus be much
 54 perverted, if not entirely prostrated. But, allowing the people to make constitutions and unmake them, allowing
 55 their representatives to make laws and unmake them, and without our interference as to their principles or
 56 policy in doing it, yet, when constitutions and laws are made and put in force by others, then the courts, as
 57 empowered by the State or the Union, commence their functions and may decide on the rights which conflicting parties can legally set up under them, rather than about their formation itself. Our power begins after theirs [the Sovereign People] ends. Constitutions and laws precede the judiciary, and we act only under and after them, and as to disputed rights beneath them, rather than disputed points in making them. We speak what is the law, jus dicere, we speak or construe what is the constitution, after both are made, but we make, or revise, or control neither. The disputed rights beneath constitutions already made are to be governed by precedents, by sound legal principles, by positive legislation [e.g. "positive law"], clear contracts, moral duties, and fixed rules; they are per se questions of law, and are well suited to the education and habits of the bench. But the other disputed points in making constitutions, depending often, as before shown, on policy, inclination, popular resolves and popular will and arising not in respect to private rights, not what is meum and tuum, but in relation to politics, they belong to politics, and they are settled by political tribunals, and are too dear to a people bred in the school of Sydney and Russel for them ever to intrust their final decision, when disputed, to a class of men who are so far removed from them as the judiciary, a class also who might decide them erroneously, as well as right, and if in the former way, the consequences might not be able to be averted except by a revolution, while a wrong decision by a political forum can often be peacefully corrected by new elections or instructions in a single month; and if the people, in the distribution of powers under the constitution, should ever think of making judges supreme arbiters in political controversies when not selected by nor, frequently, amenable to them nor at liberty to follow such various considerations in their judgments as [48 U.S. 53] belong to mere political questions, they will dethrone themselves and lose one of their own invaluable birthrights; building up in this way -- slowly, but surely -- a new sovereign power in the republic, in most respects irresponsible and unchangeable for life, and one more dangerous, in theory at least, than the worst elective oligarchy in the worst of times. Again, instead of controlling the people in political affairs, the judiciary in our system was designed rather to control individuals, on the one hand, when encroaching, or to defend them, on the other, under the Constitution and the laws, when they are encroached upon. And if the judiciary at times seems to fill the important station of a check in the government, it is rather a check on the legislature, who may attempt to pass laws contrary to the Constitution, or on the executive, who may violate both the laws and Constitution, than on the people themselves in their primary capacity as makers and amenders of constitutions."

Luther v. Borden, [48 U.S. 1 (1849)]

We know that the content of this section may appear strange at first reading, but after you have gone back and read the Resignation of Compelled Social Security Trustee document, there is simply no other logical conclusion that a person can reach based on the overwhelming evidence presented there that so clearly describes how the Social Security program operates from a legal perspective.

A number of tax honesty advocates will attempt to cite 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10) as proof that federal jurisdiction does not extend outside the District of Columbia for the purposes of the Internal Revenue Code.

Sec. 7701. - Definitions

(a) When used in this title, where not otherwise distinctly expressed or manifestly incompatible with the intent thereof—

(9) United States

The term "United States" when used in a geographical sense includes only the States and the District of Columbia.

(10) State

The term "State" shall be construed to include the District of Columbia, where such construction is necessary to carry out provisions of this title.

Federal district and circuit courts have been known to label such arguments based on these definitions in the Internal Revenue Code as "frivolous". Their reasons for doing so have never been completely or truthfully revealed anywhere but here, to the best of our knowledge. Now that we know how the government ropes sovereign Americans into their jurisdiction based on the analysis in this section, we also know that it is indeed "frivolous" to state that federal jurisdiction does not extend outside the District of Columbia in the case of those who are "Trustees" or federal "employees" or federal contractors, such as those who participate in Social Security. Since we know that the legal domicile of the Trust is indeed the District of Columbia, we also know that anyone who litigates in a federal court and does not deny all of the following will essentially be presumed to be a federal "employee" and Trustee acting on behalf of the Social Security Trust:

1. The all caps name in association with him. His proper name is the lower case Christian Name. The all caps name is the name of the Social Security Trust that was created when you completed and submitted the SSA Form SS-5 to sign up for Social Security.
2. The Trustee license number called the Social Security Number associated with him. If you admit the number is yours, then you admit that you are acting as a Social Security Trustee. Only trustees can use the license number. Instead, all uses must be identified as compelled. Responsibility for a compelled act falls on the person instituting the compulsion, and not the actor. See:

Why It is Illegal for Me to Request or Use a "Taxpayer Identification Number", Form #04.205

3. The receipt of income connected to a "trade or business" on form 1099's. All earnings identified on a 1099 are "presumed" to be "effectively connected with a trade or business", which is a "public office" in the United States government as a "Trustee" and fiduciary over federal payments.
4. The receipt of "wage" income in connection with a W-4. Receipt of "wages" are evidence from 26 C.F.R. §31.3401(a)-3(a) that you consented to withhold and participate in Social Security.
5. The existence of consent in signing the SSA Form SS-5. The Trust contract created by this form cannot be lawful so long as it was either signed without your consent or was signed for you by your parents without your informed consent.

A very good way to fulfill all of the above is to avoid filling out government forms and when compelled to do so, to attach the following form:

5.2.9 Oaths of Allegiance: Source of Unjust government jurisdiction over people

*"But above all, my brethren, do not swear, either by heaven or by earth or with any other oath. But let your
 "Yes" be "Yes," and your "No," "No," lest you fall into judgment."
 [James 5:12, Bible, NKJV]*

In all of history there has been but one successful protest against an income tax. It is little understood in that light, primarily because the remnants of protest groups still exist, but no longer wish to appear to be "anti-government." They don't talk much about these roots. Few even know them. We need to go back in time about 400 years to find this success. It succeeded only because the term "jurisdiction" was still well understood at that time as meaning "oath spoken." "Juris," in the original Latin meaning, is "oath." "Diction" as everyone knows, means "spoken." The protest obviously didn't happen here. It occurred in England. Given that the origins of our law are traced there, most of the relevant facts in this matter are still applicable in this country. Here's what happened.

The Bible had just recently been put into print. To that time, only the churches and nobility owned copies, due to the extremely high cost of paper. Contrary to what you've been taught, it was not the invention of movable type that led to printing this and other books. That concept had been around for a very long time. It just had no application. Printing wastes some paper. Until paper prices fell, it was cheaper to write books by hand than to print them with movable type. The handwritten versions were outrageously costly, procurable only by those with extreme wealth: churches, crowns and the nobility. The wealth of the nobility was attributable to feudalism. "Feud" is Old English for "oath." The nobility held the land under the crown. But unimproved land, itself, save to hunter/gatherers, is rather useless. Land is useful to farming. So that's how the nobility made their wealth. No, they didn't push a plow. They had servants to do it. The nobility wouldn't sell their land, nor would they lease it. They rented it.

Ever paid rent without a lease? Then you know that if the landlord raised the rent, you had no legal recourse. You could move out or pay. But what if you couldn't have moved out? Then you'd have a feel for what feudalism was all about.

A tenant wasn't a freeman. He was a servant to the (land)lord, the noble. In order to have access to the land to farm it, the noble required that the tenant kneel before him, hat in hand, swear an oath of fealty and allegiance and kiss his ring (extending that oath in that last act to the heirs of his estate). That oath established a servitude. The tenant then put his plow to the fields. The rent was a variable. In good growing years it was very high, in bad years it fell. The tenant was a subsistence farmer, keeping only enough of the produce of his labors to just sustain him and his family. Rent was actually an "income tax." The nobleman could have demanded 100% of the productivity of his servant except . . . under the common law, a servant was akin to livestock. He had to be fed. Not well fed, just fed, same as a horse or cow. And, like a horse or

1 cow, one usually finds it to his benefit to keep it fed, that so that the critter is productive. Thus, the tenant was allowed to

3 The freemen of the realm, primarily the tradesmen, were unsworn and unallied. They knew it. They taught their sons the
4 trade so they'd also be free when grown. Occasionally they took on an apprentice under a sworn contract of indenture from
5 his father. His parents made a few coins. But the kid was the biggest beneficiary. He'd learn a trade. He'd never need to
6 become a tenant farmer. He'd keep what he earned. He was only apprenticed for a term of years, most typically about
7 seven. The tradesmen didn't need adolescents; they needed someone strong enough to pull his own weight. They did not
8 take on anyone under 13. By age 21 he'd have learned enough to practice the craft. That's when the contract expired. He 9 was then called a "journeyman." Had he made a journey? No. But, if you pronounce that word, it is "Jur-nee-man." He was 10 a "man," formerly ("nee"), bound by oath ("jur").

11 He'd then go to work for a "master" (craftsman). The pay was established, but he could ask for more if he felt he was worth
12 more. And he was free to quit. Pretty normal, eh? Yes, in this society that's quite the norm.

13 But 400 some years ago these men were the exceptions, not the rule. At some point, if the journeyman was good at the 14 trade, he'd be recognized by the market as a "master" (craftsman) and people would be begging him to take their children as
15 apprentices, so they might learn from him, become journeymen, and keep what they earned when manumitted at age 21!
16 The oath of the tenant ran for life. The oath of the apprentice's father ran only for a term of years. Still, oaths were 17 important on both sides. In fact, the tradesmen at one point established guilds (means "gold") as a protection against the 18 potential of the government attempting to bind them into servitudes by compelled oaths.

19 When an apprentice became a journeyman, he was allowed a membership in the guild only by swearing a secret oath to the 20 guild. He literally swore to "serve gold." Only gold. He swore he'd only work for pay! Once so sworn, any other oath of 21 servitude would be a perjury of that oath. He bound himself for life to never be a servant, save to the very benevolent
22 master: gold! (Incidentally, the Order of Free and Accepted Masons is a remnant of one of these guilds. Their oath is a
23 secret. They'd love to have you think that the "G" in the middle of their logo stands for "God." The obvious truth is that it
24 stands for "GOLD.")

25 Then the Bible came to print. The market for this tome wasn't the wealthy. They already had a handwritten copy. Nor was 26 it the tenants. They were far too poor to make this purchase. The market was the tradesmen - and the book was still so
27 costly that it took the combined life savings of siblings to buy a family Bible. The other reason that the tradesmen were the 28 market was that they'd also been taught how to read as part of their apprenticeship. As contractors they had to know how to 29 do that! Other than the families of the super-rich (and the priests) nobody else knew how to read.

30 These men were blown away when they read Jesus' command against swearing oaths (Matt 5: 33-37). This was news to 31 them. For well over a millennia they'd been trusting that the church - originally just the Church of Rome, but now also the 32 Church of England - had been telling them everything they needed to know in that book. Then they found out that Jesus
33 said, "Swear no oaths." Talk about an eye-opener.

34 Imagine seeing a conspiracy revealed that went back over 1,000 years. Without oaths there'd have been no tenants,
35 laboring for the nobility, and receiving mere subsistence in return. The whole society was premised on oaths; the whole
36 society CLAIMED it was Christian, yet, it violated a very simple command of Christ! And the tradesmen had done it, too,
37 by demanding sworn contracts of indenture for apprentices and giving their own oaths to the guilds. They had no way of 38 knowing that was prohibited by Jesus! They were angry. "Livid" might be a better term. The governments had seen this 39 coming. What could they do? Ban the book? The printing would have simply moved underground and the millennia long
40 conspiracy would be further evidenced in that banning. They came up with a better scheme. You call it the "Reformation."

41 In an unprecedented display of unanimity, the governments of Europe adopted a treaty. This treaty would allow anyone the 42 State-right of founding a church. It was considered a State right, there and then. The church would be granted a charter. It
43 only had to do one very simple thing to obtain that charter. It had to assent to the terms of the treaty. Buried in those 44 provisions, most of which were totally innocuous, was a statement that the church would never oppose the swearing of 45 lawful oaths. Jesus said, "None." The churches all said (and still say), "None, except . . ." Who do you think was (is) right?

46 The tradesmen got even angrier! They had already left the Church of England. But with every new "reformed" church still 47 opposing the clear words of Christ, there was no church for them to join - or found. They exercised the right of assembly to 48 discuss the Bible. Some of them preached it on the street corners, using their right of freedom of speech. But they couldn't

1 establish a church, which followed Jesus' words, for that would have required assent to that treaty which opposed what
2 Jesus had commanded. To show their absolute displeasure with those who'd kept this secret for so long, they refused to 3 give anyone in church or state any respect. It was the custom to doff one's hat when he encountered a priest or official.
4 They started wearing big, ugly black hats, just so that the most myopic of these claimed "superiors" wouldn't miss the fact
5 that the hat stayed atop their head. Back then the term "you" was formal English, reserved for use when speaking to a
6 superior. "Thee" was the familiar pronoun, used among family and friends. So they called these officials only by the 7 familiar pronoun "thee" or by their Christian names, "George, Peter, Robert, etc." We call these folk "Quakers." That was a
8 nickname given to them by a judge. One of them had told the judge that he'd better "Quake before the Lord, God
9 almighty." The judge, in a display of irreverent disrespect replied, "Thee are the Quaker here." They found that pretty
10 funny, it being such a total misnomer (as you shall soon see), and the nickname stuck. With the huge membership losses
11 from the Anglican Church - especially from men who'd been the more charitable to it in the past - the church was 12 technically bankrupt. It wasn't just the losses from the Quakers. Other people were leaving to join the new "Reformed
13 Churches." Elsewhere in Europe, the Roman Church had amassed sufficient assets to weather this storm. The far newer 14 Anglican Church had not.

15 But the Anglican Church, as an agency of the State, can't go bankrupt. It becomes the duty of the State to support it in hard
16 times. Parliament did so. It enacted a tax to that end. A nice religious tax, and by current standards a very low tax, a tithe
17 (10%). But it made a deadly mistake in that. The Quakers, primarily as tradesmen, recognized this income tax as a tax
18 "without jurisdiction", at least so far as they went. As men unsworn and unallieged, they pointed out that they didn't have 19 to pay it, nor provide a return. Absent their oaths establishing this servitude, there was "no jurisdiction." And they were 20 right. Despite laws making it a crime to willfully refuse to make a return and pay this tax, NONE were charged or arrested.

21 That caused the rest of the society to take notice. Other folk who'd thought the Quakers were "extremists" suddenly began
22 to listen to them. As always, money talks. These guys were keeping all they earned, while the rest of the un-sworn society,
23 thinking this tax applied to them, well; they were out 10%. The Quaker movement expanded significantly, that proof once
24 made in the marketplace. Membership in the Anglican Church fell even further, as did charity to it. The taxes weren't 25 enough to offset these further losses. The tithe (income) tax was actually counterproductive to the goal of supporting the 26 church. The members of the government and the churchmen were scared silly. If this movement continued to expand at 27 the current rate, no one in the next generation would swear an oath. Who'd then farm the lands of the nobility? Oh, surely 28 someone would, but not as a servant working for subsistence. The land would need to be leased under a contract, with the 29 payment for that use established in the market, not on the unilateral whim of the nobleman. The wealth of the nobility,
30 their incomes, was about to be greatly diminished. And the Church of England, what assets it possessed, would need to be
31 sold-off, with what remained of that church greatly reduced in power and wealth. But far worse was the diminishment of 32 the respect demanded by the priests and officials. They'd always held a position of superiority in the society. What would 33 they do when all of society treated them only as equals?

34 They began to use the term "anarchy." But England was a monarchy, not an anarchy. And that was the ultimate solution to 35 the problem, or so those in government thought. There's an aspect of a monarchy that Americans find somewhat
36 incomprehensible, or at least we did two centuries ago. A crown has divine right, or at least it so claims. An expression of 37 the divine right of a crown is the power to rule by demand. A crown can issue commands. The king says, "jump."
38 Everyone jumps. Why do they jump? Simple. It's a crime to NOT jump. To "willfully fail (hey, there's a couple of 39 familiar terms) to obey a crown command" is considered to be a treason, high treason. The British crown issued a Crown
40 Command to end the tax objection movement. Did the crown order that everyone shall pay the income tax? No, that wasn't
41 possible. There really was "no jurisdiction." And that would have done nothing to cure the lack of respect. The crown
42 went one better. It ordered that every man shall swear an oath of allegiance to the crown! Damned Christian thing to do,
43 eh? Literally!

44 A small handful of the tax objectors obeyed. Most refused. It was a simple matter of black and white. Jesus said "swear
45 not at all." They opted to obey Him over the crown. That quickly brought them into court, facing the charge of high
46 treason. An official would take the witness stand, swearing that he had no record of the defendant's oath of allegiance.
47 Then the defendant was called to testify, there being no right to refuse to witness against one's self. He refused to accept
48 the administered oath. That refusal on the record, the court instantly judged him guilty. Took all of 10 minutes. That 49 expedience was essential, for there were another couple hundred defendants waiting to be tried that day for their own
50 treasons against the crown. In short order the jails reached their capacity, plus. But they weren't filled as you'd envision
51 them. The men who'd refused the oaths weren't there. Their children were. There was a "Stand-in" law allowing for that.
52 There was no social welfare system. The wife and children of a married man in prison existed on the charity of church and 53 neighbors, or they ceased to exist, starving to death. It was typical for a man convicted of a petty crime to have one of his

1 kid's stand in for him for 30 or 90 days. That way he could continue to earn a living, keeping bread on the table, without
2 the family having to rely on charity. However, a man convicted of more heinous crimes would usually find it impossible to
3 convince his wife to allow his children to serve his time. The family would prefer to exist on charity rather than see him
4 back in society. But in this case the family had no option. The family was churchless. The neighbors were all in the same
5 situation. Charity was non-existent for them. The family was destined to quick starvation unless one of the children stood-
6 in for the breadwinner. Unfortunately, the rational choice of which child should serve the time was predicated on which 7 child was the least productive to the family earnings.

8 That meant nearly the youngest, usually a daughter. Thus, the prisons of England filled with adolescent females, serving
9 the life sentences for their dads. Those lives would be short. There was no heat in the jails. They were rife with 10 tuberculosis and other deadly diseases. A strong man might last several years. A small girl measured her remaining time
11 on earth in months. It was Christian holocaust, a true sacrifice of the unblemished lambs. (And, we must note, completely 12 ignored in virtually every history text covering this era, lest the crown, government and church be duly embarrassed.)
13 Despite the high mortality rate the jails still overflowed. There was little fear that the daughters would be raped or die at 14 the brutality of other prisoners. The other prisoners, the real felons, had all been released to make room. Early release was 15 premised on the severity of the crime. High treason was the highest crime. The murderers, thieves, arsonists, rapists, etc.,
16 had all been set free. That had a very profound effect on commerce. It stopped. There were highwaymen afoot on every 17 road. Thugs and muggers ruled the city streets. The sworn subjects of the crown sat behind bolted doors, in cold, dark
18 homes, wondering how they'd exist when the food and water ran out. They finally dared to venture out to attend meetings
19 to address the situation. At those meetings they discussed methods to overthrow the crown to which they were sworn! Call
20 that perjury. Call that sedition. Call it by any name, they were going to put their words into actions, and soon, or die from 21 starvation or the blade of a thug. Here we should note that chaos (and nearly anarchy: "no crown") came to be, not as the 22 result of the refusal to swear oaths, but as the direct result of the governmental demand that people swear them! The 23 followers of Jesus' words didn't bring that chaos, those who ignored that command of Christ brought it. The crown soon
24 saw the revolutionary handwriting on the wall and ordered the release of the children and the recapture of the real felons,
25 before the government was removed from office under force of arms. The courts came up with the odd concept of an
26 "affirmation in lieu of oath." The Quakers accepted that as a victory. Given what they'd been through, that was 27 understandable. However, Jesus also prohibited affirmations, calling the practice an oath "by thy head." Funny that He 28 could foresee the legal concept of an affirmation 1600 years before it came to be. Quite a prophecy!

29 When the colonies opened to migration, the Quakers fled Europe in droves, trying to put as much distance as they could
30 between themselves and crowns. They had a very rational fear of a repeat of the situation. That put a lot of them here,
31 enough that they had a very strong influence on politics. They could have blocked the ratification of the Constitution had 32 they opposed it. Some of their demands were incorporated into it, as were some of their concessions, in balance to those 33 demands. Their most obvious influence found in the Constitution is the definition of treason, the only crime defined in that
34 document. Treason here is half of what can be committed under a crown. In the United States treason may only arise out
35 of an (overt) ACTION. A refusal to perform an action at the command of the government is not a treason, hence, NOT A
36 CRIME. You can find that restated in the Bill of Rights, where the territorial jurisdiction of the courts to try a criminal act
37 is limited to the place wherein the crime shall have been COMMITTED. A refusal or failure is not an act "committed" - it's 38 the opposite, an act "omitted." In this country "doing nothing" can't be criminal, even when someone claims the power to 39 command you do something. That concept in place, the new government would have lasted about three years. You see, if 40 it were not a crime to fail to do something, then the officers of that government would have done NOTHING - save to draw
41 their pay. That truth forced the Quakers to a concession.

42 Anyone holding a government job would need be sworn (or affirmed) to support the Constitution. That Constitution
43 enabled the Congress to enact laws necessary and proper to control the powers vested in these people. Those laws would 44 establish their duties. Should such an official "fail" to perform his lawful duties, he'd evidence in that omission that his 45 oath was false. To swear a false oath is an ACTION. Thus, the punishments for failures would exist under the concept of 46 perjury, not treason. But that was only regarding persons under oath of office, who were in office only by their oaths. And 47 that's still the situation. It's just that the government has very cleverly obscured that fact so that the average man will pay it
48 a rent, a tax on income. As you probably know, the first use of income tax here came well in advance of the 16th
49 amendment. That tax was NEARLY abolished by a late 19th century Supreme Court decision (Pollock v. Farmers' Loan
50 & Trust Co., 157 U.S. 429 (1895)). The problem was that the tax wasn't apportioned, and couldn't be apportioned, that 51 because of the fact that it rested on the income of each person earning it, rather than an up-front total, divided and meted out
52 to the several States according to the census. But the income tax wasn't absolutely abolished. The court listed a solitary
53 exception. The incomes of federal officers, derived as a benefit of office, could be so taxed. You could call that a "kick

1 back" or even a "return." Essentially, the court said that what Congress gives, it can demand back. As that wouldn't be
2 income derived within a State, the rule of apportionment didn't apply. Make sense?

3 Now, no court can just make up rulings. The function of a court is to answer the questions posed to it. And in order to pose
4 a question, a person needs standing. The petitioner has to show that an action has occurred which affects him, hence,
5 giving him that standing. For the Supreme Court to address the question of the income of officers demonstrates that the 6 petitioner was such. Otherwise, the question couldn't have come up.

7 Congress was taxing his benefits of office. But Congress was ALSO taxing his outside income, that from sources within a
8 State. Could have been interest, dividends, rent, royalties, and even alimony. If he had a side job, it might have even been 9 commissions or salary. Those forms of income could not be taxed. However, Congress could tax his income from the 10 benefits he derived by being an officer.

11 That Court decision was the end of all income taxation. The reason is pretty obvious. Rather than tax the benefits derived
12 out of office, it's far easier to just reduce the benefits up front! Saves time. Saves paper. The money stays in Treasury
13 rather than going out, then coming back as much as 15 or 16 months later. So, even though the benefits of office could 14 have been taxed, under that Court ruling, that tax was dropped by Congress. There are two ways to overcome a Supreme 15 Court ruling. The first is to have the court reverse itself. That's a very strange concept at law. Actually, it's impossibility at 16 law. The only way a court can change a prior ruling is if the statutes or the Constitution change, thus changing the premises
17 on which its prior conclusion at law was derived. Because it was a Supreme Court ruling nearly abolishing the income tax,
18 the second method, an Amendment to the Constitution, was used to overcome the prior decision. That was the 16th
19 Amendment.

21 Whose incomes? Hey, it doesn't say (nor do the statues enacted under it). The Supreme Court has stated (see Stanton v.
22 Baltic Mining, 240 U.S. 103 (1916))that this Amendment granted Congress "no new powers." That's absolutely true.
23 Congress always had the power to tax incomes, but only the incomes of corporations officers of corporations and only their 24 incomes derived out of a benefit or privilege of elected or corporate office. All the 16th Amendment did was extend that 25 EXISTING POWER to tax officers' incomes (as benefits of office) to their incomes from other sources (from whatever 26 source derived). The 16th Amendment and the statutes enacted thereunder don't have to say whose incomes are subject to 27 this tax. The Supreme Court had already said that: officers. That's logical. If it could be a crime for a freeman to "willfully
28 fail" to file or pay this tax, that crime could only exist as a treason by monarchical definition. In this country a crime of 29 failure may only exist under the broad category of a perjury. Period, no exception.

30 Thus, the trick employed by the government is to get you to claim that you are an officer of that government. Yeah, you're 31 saying, "Man, I'd never be so foolish as to claim that." I'll betcha $100 I can prove that you did it and that you'll be forced to 32 agree. Did you ever sign a tax form, a W-4, a 1040? Then you did it.

33 Look at the fine print at the bottom of the tax forms you once signed. You declared that it was "true" that you were "under 34 penalties of perjury." Are you? Were you? Perjury is a felony. To commit a perjury you have to FIRST be under oath (or 35 affirmation). You know that. It's common knowledge. So, to be punished for a perjury you'd need to be under oath, right?
36 Right. There's no other way, unless you pretend to be under oath. To pretend to be under oath is a perjury automatically.
37 There would be no oath. Hence it's a FALSE oath. Perjury rests on making a false oath. So, to claim to be "under 38 penalties of perjury" is to claim that you're under oath. That claim could be true, could be false. But if false, and you
39 knowingly and willingly made that false claim, then you committed a perjury just by making that claim.

40 You've read the Constitution. How many times can you be tried and penalized for a single criminal act? Once? Did I hear
41 you right? Did you say once; only once? Good for you. You know that you can't even be placed in jeopardy of penalty
42 (trial) a second time. The term "penalties" is plural. More than one. Oops. Didn't you just state that you could only be
43 tried once, penalized once, for a single criminal action? Sure you did. And that would almost always be true. There's a 44 solitary exception. A federal official or employee may be twice tried, twice penalized. The second penalty, resulting out of 45 a conviction of impeachment, is the loss of the benefits of office, for life. Federal officials are under oath, an oath of office.
46 That's why you call them civil servants. That oath establishes jurisdiction (oath spoken), allowing them to be penalized,
47 twice, for a perjury (especially for a perjury of official oath). You have been tricked into signing tax forms under the 48 perjury clause. You aren't under oath enabling the commission of perjury. You can't be twice penalized for a single 49 criminal act, even for a perjury. Still, because you trusted that the government wouldn't try to deceive you, you signed an 50 income tax form, pretending that there was jurisdiction (oath spoken) where there was none.

1 Once you sign the first form, the government will forever believe that you are a civil servant. Stop signing those forms
2 while you continue to have income and you'll be charged with "willful failure to file," a crime of doing nothing when
3 commanded to do something!

4 Initially, the income tax forms were required to be SWORN (or affirmed) before a notary. A criminal by the name of
5 Sullivan (U.S. v. Sullivan, 274 U.S. 259 (1927)) brought that matter all the way to the Supreme Court. He argued that if he
6 listed his income from criminal activities, that information would later be used against him on a criminal charge. If he
7 didn't list it, then swore that the form was "true, correct and complete," he could be charged and convicted of a perjury. He
8 was damned if he did, damned if he didn't. The Supreme Court could only agree. It ruled that a person could refuse to 9 provide any information on that form, taking individual exception to each line, and stating in that space that he refused to
10 provide testimony against himself. That should have been the end of the income tax. In a few years everyone would have 11 been refusing to provide answers on the "gross" and "net income" lines, forcing NO answer on the "tax due" line, as well.
12 Of course, that decision was premised on the use of the notarized oath, causing the answers to have the quality of 13 "testimony."

14 Congress then INSTANTLY ordered the forms be changed. In place of the notarized oath, the forms would contain a
15 statement that they were made and signed "Under penalties of perjury." The prior ruling of the Supreme Court was made
16 obsolete. Congress had changed the premise on which it had reached its conclusion. The verity of the information on the 17 form no longer rested on a notarized oath. It rested on the taxpayer's oath of office. And, as many a tax protestor in the 18 1970s and early 1980s quickly discovered, the Supreme Court ruling for Sullivan had no current relevance.

19 There has never been a criminal trial in any matter under federal income taxation without a SIGNED tax form in evidence
20 before the court. The court takes notice of the signature below the perjury clause and assumes the standing of the defendant
21 is that of a federal official, a person under oath of office who may be twice penalized for a single criminal act of perjury (to 22 his official oath). The court has jurisdiction to try such a person for a "failure." That jurisdiction arises under the concept of 23 perjury, not treason.

24 However, the court is in an odd position here. If the defendant should take the witness stand, under oath or affirmation to
25 tell the truth, and then truthfully state that he is not under oath of office and is not a federal officer or employee, that
26 statement would contradict the signed statement on the tax form, already in evidence and made under claim of oath. That 27 contradiction would give rise to a technical perjury. Under federal statutes, courtroom perjury is committed when a person
28 willfully makes two statements, both under oath, which contradict one another.

29 The perjury clause claims the witness to be a federal person. If he truthfully says the contrary from the witness stand, the 30 judge is then duty bound to charge him with the commission of a perjury! At his ensuing perjury trial, the two contradictory
31 statements "(I'm) under penalties of perjury" and "I'm not a federal official or employee" would be the sole evidence of the 32 commission of the perjury. As federal employment is a matter of public record, the truth of the last statement would be 33 evidenced. That would prove that the perjury clause was a FALSE statement. Can't have that proof on the record, can we?
34 About now you are thinking of some tax protestor trials for "willful failure" where the defendant took the witness stand and 35 testified, in full truth, that he was not a federal person. This writer has studied a few such cases. Those of Irwin Schiff and 36 F. Tupper Saussy come to mind. And you are right; they told the court that they weren't federal persons. Unfortunately,
37 they didn't tell the court that while under oath. A most curious phenomenon occurs at "willful failure" trials where the 38 defendant has published the fact, in books or newsletters, that he isn't a federal person. The judge becomes very absent-
39 minded - at least that's surely what he'd try to claim if the issue were ever raised. He forgets to swear-in the defendant
40 before he takes the witness stand. The defendant tells the truth from the witness stand, but does so without an oath. As he's 41 not under oath, nothing he says can constitute a technical perjury as a contradiction to the "perjury clause" on the tax forms
42 already in evidence. The court will almost always judge him guilty for his failure to file. Clever system. And it all begins
43 when a person who is NOT a federal officer or employee signs his first income tax form, FALSELY claiming that he's 44 under an oath which if perjured may bring him a duality of penalties. It's still a matter of jurisdiction (oath spoken). That 45 hasn't changed in over 400 years. The only difference is that in this country, we have no monarch able to command us to 46 action. In the United States of America, you have to VOLUNTEER to establish jurisdiction. Once you do, then you are 47 subject to commands regarding the duties of your office. Hence the income tax is "voluntary," in the beginning, but
48 "compulsory" once you volunteer. You volunteer when you sign your very first income tax form, probably a Form W-4
49 and probably at about age 15. You voluntarily sign a false statement, a false statement that claims that you are subject to 50 jurisdiction. Gotcha! Oh, and when the prosecutor enters your prior signed income tax forms into evidence at a willful
51 failure to file trial, he will always tell the court that those forms evidence that you knew it was your DUTY to make and file
52 proper returns. DUTY! A free man owes no DUTY. A free man owes nothing to the federal government, as he receives

1 nothing from it. But a federal official owes a duty. He receives something from that government - the benefits of office. In
2 addition to a return of some of those benefits, Congress can also demand that he pay a tax on his other forms of income,
3 now under the 16th Amendment, from whatever source they may be derived. If that were ever to be understood, the ranks
4 of real, sworn federal officers would diminish greatly. And the ranks of the pretended federal officers (including you)
5 would vanish to zero. It's still the same system as it was 400 years ago, with appropriate modifications, so you don't 6 immediately realize it. Yes, it's a jurisdictional matter. An Oath-spoken matter. Quite likely you, as a student of the 7 Constitution, have puzzled over the 14th Amendment. You've wondered who are persons "subject to the jurisdiction" of 8 the United States and in the alternative, who are not. This is easily explained, again in the proper historical perspective.
9 The claimed purpose of the 14th was to vest civil rights to the former slaves. A method was needed to convert them from 10 chattel to full civil beings. The Supreme Court had issued rulings that precluded that from occurring. Hence, an 11 Amendment was necessary. But it took a little more than the amendment. The former slaves would need to perform an act, 12 subjecting themselves to the "jurisdiction" of the United States. You should now realize that an oath is the way that was/is 13 accomplished.

14 After the battles of the rebellion had ceased, the manumitted slaves were free, but rightless. They held no electoral 15 franchise - they couldn't vote. The governments of the Southern States were pretty peeved over what had occurred in the 16 prior several years, and they weren't about to extend electoral franchises to the former slaves. The Federal government 17 found a way to force that.

18 It ordered that voters had to be "registered." And it ordered that to become a registered voter, one had to SWEAR an oath of 19 allegiance to the Constitution. The white folks, by and large, weren't about to do that. They were also peeved that the 20 excuse for all the battles was an unwritten, alleged, Constitutional premise, that a "State had no right to secede." The former 21 slaves had no problem swearing allegiance to the Constitution. The vast majority of them didn't have the slightest idea of 22 what an oath was, nor did they even know what the Constitution was!

23 Great voter registration drives took place. In an odd historical twist, these were largely sponsored by the Quakers who 24 volunteered their assistance. Thus, most of the oaths administered were administered by Quakers! Every former slave was 25 sworn-in, taking what actually was an OATH OF OFFICE. The electoral franchise then existed almost exclusively among 26 the former slaves, with the white folks in the South unanimously refusing that oath and denied their right to vote. For a
27 while many of the Southern State governments were comprised of no one other than the former slaves. The former slaves
28 became de jure (by oath) federal officials, "subject to the jurisdiction of the United States" by that oath. They were non-
29 compensated officials, receiving no benefits of their office, save what was then extended under the 14th Amendment.
30 There was some brief talk of providing compensation in the form of 40 acres and a mule, but that quickly faded.

31 Jurisdiction over a person (called "in personam jurisdiction") exists only by oath. Always has, always will. For a court to 32 have jurisdiction, someone has to bring a charge or petition under an oath. In a criminal matter, the charge is forwarded
33 under the oaths of the grand jurors (indictment) or under the oath of office of a federal officer (information). Even before a
34 warrant may be issued, someone has to swear there is probable cause. Should it later be discovered that there was NOT
35 probable cause, that person should be charged with a perjury. It's all about oaths. And the one crime for which immunity,
36 even "sovereign immunity," cannot be extended is ... perjury.

37 You must understand "jurisdiction." That term is only understandable when one understands the history behind it. Know
38 what "jurisdiction" means. You didn't WILLFULLY claim that you were "Under penalties of perjury" on those tax forms
39 you signed. You may have done it voluntarily, but you surely did it ignorantly! You didn't realize the import and 40 implications of that clause. It was, quite frankly, a MISTAKE. A big one. A dumb one. Still it was only a mistake.
41 Willfulness rests on intent. You had no intent to claim that you were under an oath of office, a perjury of which could bring
42 you dual penalties. You just didn't give those words any thought. What do you do when you discover you've made a
43 mistake? As an honest man, you tell those who may have been affected by your error, apologize to them, and usually you
44 promise to be more careful in the future, that as a demonstration that you, like all of us, learn by your mistakes. You really
45 ought to drop the Secretary of the Treasury of the United States a short letter, cc it to the Commissioner of Internal 46 Revenue. Explain that you never realized that the fine print on the bottom of all income tax forms meant that you were 47 claiming to be "under oath" a perjury of which might be "twice" penalized. Explain that you've never sworn such an oath
48 and that for reasons of conscience, you never will. You made this mistake on every tax form you'd ever signed. But now
49 that you understand the words, you'll most certainly not make that mistake again! That'll be the end of any possibility that
50 you'll ever be charged with "willful failure to file." Too simple? No, it's only as simple as it's supposed to be. Jurisdiction
51 (oath spoken) is a pretty simple matter. Either you are subject to jurisdiction, by having really sworn an oath, or you are
52 not. If you aren't under oath, and abolish all the pretenses, false pretenses you provided, on which the government assumed

1 that you were under oath, then the jurisdiction fails and you become a freeman. A freeman can't be compelled to perform
2 any act and threatened with a penalty, certainly not two penalties, should he fail to do so. That would constitute a treason
3 charge by the part of the definition abolished here.

4 It's a matter of history. European history, American history, and finally, the history of your life. The first two may be
5 hidden from you, making parts of them difficult to discover. But the last history you know. If you know that you've never 6 sworn an oath of office, and now understand how that truth fits the other histories, then you are free. Truth does that.
7 Funny how that works.

8 Jesus was that Truth. His command that His followers "Swear not at all." That was the method by which He set men free.
9 Israel was a feudal society. It had a crown; it had landlords; they had tenant farmers bound by oath to them. Jesus scared
10 them silly. Who'd farm those lands in the next generation, when all of the people refused to swear oaths? Ring a bell? And 11 what did the government do to Jesus? It tried to obtain jurisdiction on the false oath of a witness, charging Him with 12 "sedition" for the out-of-context, allegorical statement that He'd "tear down the temple" (a government building). At that 13 trial, Jesus stood mute, refusing the administered oath. That was unheard of!

14 The judge became so frustrated that he posed a trick question attempting to obtain jurisdiction from Jesus. He said, "I
15 adjure you in the name of the Living God, are you the man (accused of sedition)." An adjuration is a "compelled oath."
16 Jesus then broke his silence, responding, "You have so said."

17 He didn't "take" the adjured oath. He left it with its speaker, the judge! That bound the judge to truth. Had the judge also 18 falsely said that Jesus was the man (guilty of sedition)? No, not out loud, not yet. But in his heart he'd said so. That's what 19 this trial was all about. Jesus tossed that falsehood back where it belonged as well as the oath. In those few words, "You 20 have so said," Jesus put the oath, and the PERJURY of it, back on the judge, where it belonged. The court couldn't get 21 jurisdiction.

22 Israel was occupied by Rome at that time. The court then shipped Jesus off to the martial governor, Pontius Pilate, hoping 23 that martial power might compel him to submit to jurisdiction. But Pilate had no quarrel with Jesus. He correctly saw the 24 charge as a political matter, devoid of any real criminal act. Likely, Pilate offered Jesus the "protection of Rome." Roman 25 law extended only to sworn subjects. All Jesus would need do is swear an oath to Caesar, then Pilate could protect him.
26 Otherwise, Jesus was probably going to turn up dead at the hands of "person or persons unknown" which would really be at 27 the hands of the civil government, under the false charge of sedition. Pilate administered that oath to Caesar. Jesus stood 28 mute, again refusing jurisdiction. Pilate "marveled at that." He'd never before met a man who preferred to live free or die.
29 Under Roman law the unsworn were considered to be unclean - the "great unwashed masses." The elite were sworn to 30 Caesar. When an official errantly extended the law to an unsworn person that "failure of jurisdiction" required that the 31 official perform a symbolic act. To cleanse himself and the law, he would "wash his hands." Pilate did so. Under Roman
32 law, the law to which he was sworn, he had to do so. The law, neither Roman law nor the law of Israel, could obtain
33 jurisdiction over Jesus. The law couldn't kill Him, nor could it prevent that murder. Jesus was turned over to a mob,
34 demanding His death. How's that for chaos? Jesus was put to death because He refused to be sworn. But the law couldn't 35 do that. Only a mob could do so, setting free a true felon in the process. Thus, Jesus proved the one failing of the law - at 36 least the law then and there - the law has no ability to touch a truly free man. A mob can, but the result of that is chaos, not 37 order.

38 In every situation where a government attempts to compel an oath, or fails to protect a man of conscience who refuses it,
39 the result is chaos. That government proves itself incapable of any claimed powers as the result, for the only purpose of 40 any government should be to defend the people establishing it - all of those people - and not because they owe that
41 government any duty or allegiance, but for the opposite reason, because the government owes the people its duty and
42 allegiance under the law. This country came close to that concept for quite a few decades. Then those in federal office
43 realized that they could fool all of the people, some of the time. That "some of the time" regarded oaths and jurisdiction.
44 We were (and still are) a Christian country, at least the vast majority of us claim ourselves to be Christian. But we are led 45 by churchmen who still uphold the terms of that European treaty. They still profess that it is Christian to swear an oath, so
46 long as it's a "lawful oath." We are deceived. As deceived as the tenant in 1300, but more so, for we now have the Words
47 of Jesus to read for ourselves.

48 Jesus said (in Matt. 5:33-37), "Swear no oaths," extending that even to oaths which don't name God. If His followers
49 obeyed that command, the unscrupulous members of the society in that day would have quickly realized that they could file
50 false lawsuits against Jesus' followers, suits that they couldn't answer (under oath). Thus, Jesus issued a secondary

1 command, ordering His followers to sell all they had, making themselves what today we call "judgment proof." They
2 owned only their shirt and a coat. If they were sued for their shirt, they were to offer to settle out-of-court (without oath) by
3 giving the plaintiff their coat. That wasn't a metaphor. Jesus meant those words in the literal sense!

4 It's rather interesting that most income tax protestors are Christian and have already made themselves virtually judgment
5 proof, perhaps inadvertently obeying one of Jesus' commands out of a self-preservation instinct. Do we sense something
6 here? You need to take the final step. You must swear no oaths. That is the penultimate step in self-preservation, and in 7 obedience to the commands of Christ. It's all a matter of "jurisdiction" (oath spoken), which a Christian can't abide.
8 Christians must be freemen. Their faith, duty and allegiance can go to no one on earth. We can't serve two masters. No
9 one can. As Christians our faith and allegiance rests not on an oath. Our faith and allegiance arise naturally. These are 10 duties owed by a child to his father. As Children of God, we must be faithful to Him, our Father, and to our eldest Brother, 11 the Inheritor of the estate. That's certain.

12 As to what sort of a society Jesus intended without oaths or even affirmations, this writer honestly can't envision. Certainly 13 it would have been anarchy (no crown). Would it have also been chaos? My initial instinct is to find that it would lead to 14 chaos. Like the Quakers in 1786, I can't envision a functional government without the use of oaths. Yet, every time a
15 government attempts to use oaths as a device to compel servitudes, the result is CHAOS. History proves that. The Dark
16 Ages were dark, only because the society was feudal, failing to advance to enlightenment because they were sworn into
17 servitudes, unwittingly violating Jesus' command. When the British crown attempted to compel oaths of allegiance, chaos
18 certainly resulted. And Jesus' own death occurred only out of the chaos derived by His refusal to swear a compelled oath
19 and an offered oath.

20 The current Internal Revenue Code is about as close to legislated chaos as could ever be envisioned. No two people
21 beginning with identical premises will reach the same conclusion under the IRC. Is not that chaos? Thus, in every instance
22 where the government attempts to use oaths to bind a people, the result has been chaos.

23 Hence, this writer is forced to the conclusion that Jesus was right. We ought to avoid oaths at all costs, save our own souls,
24 and for precisely that reason. Yet, what system of societal interaction Jesus envisioned, without oaths, escapes me. How 25 would we deal with murderers, thieves, rapists, etc. present in the society without someone bringing a complaint, sworn
26 complaint, before a Jury (a panel of sworn men), to punish them for these criminal actions against the civil members of that 27 society? Perhaps you, the reader, can envision what Jesus had in mind. Even if you can't, you still have to obey His 28 command. That will set you free. As to where we go from there, well, given that there has never been a society, neither
29 civil nor martial, which functioned without oaths, I guess we won't see how it will function until it arrives.

30 Meanwhile, the first step in the process is abolishing your prior FALSE claims of being under oath (of office) on those 31 income tax forms. You claimed "jurisdiction." Only you can reverse that by stating the Truth. It worked 400 years ago.
32 It'll still work. It's the only thing that'll work. History can repeat, but this time without the penalty of treason extended to 33 you (or your daughters). You can cause it. Know and tell this Truth and it will set you free. HONESTLY. Tell the 34 government, then explain it to every Christian you know. Most of them will hate you for that bit of honesty. Be kind to 35 them anyhow. Once they see that you are keeping what you earn, the market will force them to realize that you aren't the 36 extremist they originally thought! If only 2% of the American people understand what is written here, income taxation will 37 be abolished - that out of a fear that the knowledge will expand. The government will be scared silly. What if no one in the 38 next generation would swear an oath? Then there'd be no servants!

39 No, the income tax will be abolished long before that could ever happen. That's only money. Power comes by having an
40 ignorant people to rule. A government will always opt for power. That way, in two or three generations, the knowledge
41 lost to the obscure "between the lines" of history, they can run the same money game. Pass this essay on to your Christian
42 friends. But save a copy. Will it to your grandchildren. Someday, they too will probably need this knowledge. Teach 43 your children well. Be honest; tell the truth. That will set you free - and it'll scare the government silly.

44 5.2.10 How Does the Federal Government Acquire Legislative Jurisdiction Over an Area?

45 How does the Federal Government acquire exclusive legislative jurisdiction or sovereignty over its territories under Article
46 1, Section 8, Clause 17 of the U.S. Constitution? According to the April, 1956, report (Part I), pages 41-47 of the
48

Jurisdiction Over Federal Areas Within the States, Form #11.203

The Supreme Court has recognized three methods by which the federal government may acquire exclusive legislative jurisdiction over real property:

1. Constitutional consent.--Other than the District of Columbia, the Constitution gives express recognition to but one means of Federal acquisition of legislative jurisdiction-- purchase with State consent under article I, section 8, clause 17.

... "and to exercise like authority over all places purchased by the consent of the legislature of the state in which the same shall be, for the creation of forts, magazines, arsenals, dockyards and other needful buildings..."

"The debates in the Constitutional Convention and State ratifying conventions leave little doubt that both the opponents and proponents of Federal exercise of exclusive legislature jurisdiction over the seat of government were of the view that a constitutional provision such as clause 17 was essential if the Federal government was to have such jurisdiction.... While, as has been indicated in the preceding chapter, little attention was given in the course of the debates to Federal exercise of exclusive legislative jurisdiction over areas other than the seat of government, it is reasonable to assume that it was the general view that a special constitution provision was essential to enable the United States to acquire exclusive legislative jurisdiction over any area..."

According to the 1956 report, pages 7-8, "... the provision of the second portion, for transfer of like jurisdiction [as the District of Columbia] to the Federal Government over other areas acquired for Federal purposes, was not uniformly exercised during the first 50 years of the existence of the United States. It was exercised with respect to most, but not all, lighthouse sites, with respect to various forts and arsenals, and with respect to a number of other individual properties. But search of appropriate records indicates that during this period it was often the practice of the Government merely to purchase the lands upon which its installations were to be placed and to enter into occupancy for the purposes intended, without also acquiring legislative jurisdiction over the lands."

2. Federal reservation.--In Fort Leavenworth R.R. v. Lowe, 114 U.S. 525 (1885), the Supreme Court approved a method not specified in the Constitution of securing legislative jurisdiction in the United States. Although the matter was not in issue in the case, the Supreme Court said (p. 526):

*"The land constituting the Reservation was part of the territory acquired in 1803 by cession from France, and until the formation of the State of Kansas, and her admission into the Union, the United States possessed the rights of a proprietor, and had political dominion and sovereignty over it. For many years before that admission it had been reserved from sale by the proper authorities of the United States for military purposes, and occupied by them as a military post. The jurisdiction of the United States over it during this time was necessarily paramount. But in 1861 Kansas was admitted into the Union upon an equal footing with the original States, that is, with the same rights of political dominion and sovereignty, subject like them only to the Constitution of the United States. Congress might undoubtedly, upon such admission, have stipulated for retention of the political authority, dominion and legislative power of the United States over the Reservation so long as it should be used for military purposes by the government; that is, it could have excepted the place from the jurisdiction of Kansas, as one needed for the uses of the general government. But from some cause, inadvertence perhaps, or over-confidence that a recession of such jurisdiction could be had whenever desired, no such stipulation or exception was made." (See also United States v. Gratoit concerning post-statehood reservation of mines, salt licks, salt springs, and mill seats in the (former) Eastern ceded territories.)*

3. State cession.--In the same case, (Fort Leavenworth R.R. v. Lowe.) the United States Supreme Court sustained the validity of an act of Kansas ceding to the United States legislative jurisdiction over the Fort Leavenworth military reservation, but reserving to itself the right to serve criminal and civil process in the reservation and the right to tax railroad, bridge, and other corporations, and their franchises and property on the reservation. In the course of its opinion sustaining the cession of legislative jurisdiction, the Supreme Court said (p. 540):

"... Though the jurisdiction and authority of the general government are essentially different from those of the State, they are not those of a different country; and the two, the State and general government, may deal with each other in any way they may deem best to carry out the purposes of the Constitution. It is for the protection and interests of the States, their people and property, as well as for the protection and interests of the people generally of the United States, that forts, arsenals, and other buildings for public uses are constructed within the States. As instrumentalities for the execution of the powers of the general government, they are, as already said, exempt from such control of the States as would defeat or impair their use for those purposes; and if, to their more effective use, a cession of legislative authority and political jurisdiction by the State would be desirable, we do not perceive any objection to its grant by the Legislature of the State. Such cession is really as much for the benefit of the State as it is for the benefit of the United States."

1 The above list of three sources of jurisdiction, however, is missing one very important additional source of federal
 2 jurisdiction. As a matter of fact, it is THE most important and frequent source. Another way the U.S. government gets
 3 exclusive legislative jurisdiction over sovereign people and property inside the borders of states is to trick sovereign state
 4 citizens (also called Natural Born Persons) into falsely admitting that they are "U.S.** citizens", and then they become 5 federal property...slaves!

6 "The persons declared to be citizens are ALL PERSONS BORN OR NATURALIZED IN THE UNITED STATES
 7 AND SUBJECT TO THE JURISDICTION THEREOF. The evident meaning of these last words is, not merely
 8 *subject in some respect or degree to the jurisdiction of the United States, but COMPLETELY
 9 SUBJECT..."*
 10 [Elk v. Wilkins, 112 U.S. 94 (1884)]

11 "To be 'completely subject' to the political jurisdiction of the United States is to be in no respect or degree 12 subject to the political jurisdiction of any other government [including state governments]."
 13 [United States v. Wong Kim Ark, 169 U.S. 649, 18 S.Ct. 456; 42 L.Ed. 890 (1898)]

14 As a "U.S.** citizen", both you and everything you own comes under the jurisdiction of the federal courts. This is 15 jurisdiction they got from you that they wouldn't have if you knew enough about the law to know that you aren't a "U.S.**
 16 citizen"! Why on earth would anyone want to admit to being a statutory "U.S. citizen", especially since such persons by 17 law must be both born and domiciled on federal property inside the federal zone:

18 3C Am Jur 2d §2689, Who is born in United States and subject to United States jurisdiction

19 "A person is born subject to the jurisdiction of the United States, for purposes of acquiring citizenship at birth,
 20 if his or her birth occurs in territory over which the United States is sovereign, even though another country
 21 provides all governmental services within the territory, and the territory is subsequently ceded to the other 22 country."

25 (b)...The term 'citizen of the United States' includes a citizen of the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico or the Virgin
 26 Islands, and, effective January 1, 1961, a citizen of Guam or American Samoa.

27 By the above definition, most people simply aren't statutory "U.S. citizens" but their own ignorance deceives them into 28 thinking that they are! That is why we emphasize over and over in this book that it is so important to get educated so the 29 exploitation and oppression the government has foisted upon you because of your legal ignorance can be eliminated
 30 immediately. Knowledge is the only way out of financial slavery to the government. Instead, we should always declare
 31 ourselves to be "nationals" or "state nationals" and never statutory "U.S.** citizens" and we should never file 1040 forms,
 32 but instead if we file anything, they should be 1040NR forms.

33 If you would like to learn more about this subject of federal jurisdiction, we refer you to the official government report on

36 5.2.11 Limitations on Federal Taxation Jurisdiction

37 At this point it is reasonable to consider what types of income might be (as the older regulations state) "under the 38 Constitution, not taxable by the Federal Government." While the public seems largely ignorant of this fact, Congress has 39 legal power over only those few matters which the Constitution puts under federal jurisdiction (and the Tenth Amendment
 40 clearly states this). Within the 50 Union states, Congress has legal control over only those matters listed in Article I, 41 Section 8 of the Constitution.

42 The Constitution creates a Federal Government of enumerated powers. See U.S. Const., Art. I, 8. As James 43 Madison wrote, "[t]he powers delegated by the proposed Constitution to the federal government are few and 44 defined. Those which are to remain in the State governments are numerous and indefinite." The Federalist No.

1 45, pp. 292-293 (C. Rossiter ed. 1961). This constitutionally mandated division of authority "was adopted by
 2 the Framers to ensure protection of our fundamental liberties." Gregory v. Ashcroft, 501 U.S. 452, 458 (1991)
 3 (internal quotation marks omitted). "Just as the separation and independence of the coordinate branches of 4 the Federal Government serves to prevent the accumulation of excessive power in any one branch, a healthy
 5 balance of power between the States and the Federal Government will reduce the risk of tyranny and abuse
 6 from either front."
 7 [United States v. Lopez, 514 U.S. 549 (1995)]

8 "The powers not delegated to the United States by the Constitution, nor prohibited by it to the States, are 9 reserved to the States respectively, or to the people."
 10 [Tenth Amendment, U.S. Constitution]

11 In the 1995 case of U.S. v. Lopez cited above, the Supreme Court threw out the "Gun Free School Zone" law (18 U.S.C.
 12 §922(q)) as unconstitutional, on the grounds that it was outside of Congress' enumerated powers described in Article I,
 13 Section 8. Not only did the court say this, but the lawyers on the other side tried to argue that the law was about regulating
 14 "interstate commerce" (which Article I, Section 8 puts under federal jurisdiction), demonstrating that they agreed that the 15 law had to be based on something in Article I, Section 8.

16 Article I, Section 8 of the Constitution authorizes Congress "to lay and collect taxes." And says exactly what may be taxed
 17 by Congress. In addition, the Sixteenth Amendment states: "Congress shall have the power to lay and collect taxes on 18 income, from whatever source derived." So surely Congress has the Constitutional power to tax your income, doesn't it? In 19 most cases, no, it doesn't. Many have argued about the "direct tax" vs. "indirect tax" question (which is not necessary to 20 explain in detail here), but the more important limitation on Congress' taxing power (the one keeping them from actually 21 imposing the tax most people assume exists) is usually overlooked.

22 Article I, Section 8 leaves almost all matters that occur within a single state (e.g. intrastate commerce) to the state
 23 governments. But, as mentioned above, it does grant Congress the "power to lay and collect taxes." While there are rules
 24 for how "direct" and "indirect" taxes must be imposed, the taxing clauses do not say exactly what may or may not be taxed
 25 (there is, however, a clause forbidding taxation on exports from states). Is there then no limit to what Congress can tax, 26 only how they can tax?

27 To answer that, we start with a simple question: Do Article I, Section 8 and the Sixteenth Amendment give Congress the 28 power to tax the incomes of everyone in China? The question is admittedly a bit silly, but why is it silly? If Congress has 29 the power "to lay and collect taxes," and specifically has the power "to lay and collect taxes on income, from whatever
 30 source derived," why can't it tax everyone in China? In this case, we naturally (and correctly) assume that "from whatever
 31 source" only includes things under the jurisdiction of Congress. (It would be difficult to find anyone to make the argument
 32 that the Sixteenth Amendment gave Congress jurisdiction over everyone in China.)

33 So Congress can't tax everyone in China. Big deal. What does that have to do with us Americans? The question about 34 geographical or territorial jurisdiction is fairly simple, but what about jurisdiction within the 50 Union states? This type of 35 jurisdiction, instead of "territorial jurisdiction" or sovereignty, is called "subject matter jurisdiction". Can Congress tax 36 anything it wants there?

37 Article I, Section 8 does include the "power to lay and collect taxes," but does not say what may be taxed by Congress.
 38 This allows for two options. The first option is that there are essentially no limitations on what Congress can tax (though 39 there are certain rules on how "direct" and "indirect" taxes must be imposed). The problem with this option is that it would 40 essentially negate the entire Constitution, as this option would give Congress the jurisdiction and power to control anything
 41 and everything, provided it exerted that control through tax legislation. For example, if this option were true, in response to
 43 to get around the restriction that would otherwise exist.

44 The courts have thrown out many acts of Congress, on the grounds that they were beyond the powers granted to Congress
 45 by Article I, Section 8. For example, the Supreme Court threw out the "Gun Free School Zone" law in the 1995 "Lopez"
 46 decision. The law (18 U.S.C. §922(q)) made it illegal for anyone to possess a gun near a school. Despite attempts by the 47 government lawyers to pass this off as a regulation of interstate commerce (which Article I, Section 8 puts under federal 48 jurisdiction), the court ruled that such a law was not within Congress' constitutional power to make." Here is what they said
 49 in U.S. v. Lopez, 514 U.S. 549 (1995):

To uphold the Government's contentions here, we would have to pile inference upon inference in a manner that would bid fair to convert congressional authority under the Commerce Clause to a general police power of the sort retained by the States. Admittedly, some of our prior cases have taken long steps down that road, giving great deference to congressional action. See supra, at 8. The broad language in these opinions has suggested the possibility of additional expansion, but we decline here to proceed any further. To do so would require us to conclude that the Constitution's enumeration of powers does not presuppose something not enumerated, cf. Gibbons v. Ogden, supra, at 195, and that there never will be a distinction between what is truly national and what is truly local, cf. Jones & Laughlin Steel, supra, at 30. This we are unwilling to do.

Suppose, after that ruling, Congress then imposed a $1,000,000 "tax" on possessing a gun near a school. Would that not get around the restriction? If Congress could control any behavior it wanted, as long as it is done by way of "tax" legislation, then:

"all that Congress would need to do, hereafter, in seeking to take over to its control any one of the great number of subjects of public interest, jurisdiction of which the states have never parted with, and which are reserved to them by the Tenth Amendment, would be to enact a detailed measure of complete regulation of the subject and enforce it by a so-called tax upon departures from it. To give such magic to the word 'tax' would be to break down all constitutional limitation of the powers of Congress and completely wipe out the sovereignty of the states."

Those are the words of the Supreme Court, from the case of Bailey v. Drexel Furniture Co., 259 U.S. 20 (1922). An Act of Congress, designed to regulate by way of a "tax" something not otherwise under federal jurisdiction, "cannot be sustained as an exercise of the taxing power of Congress conferred by section 8, article I." Again, those are the words of the Supreme Court, this time from the case of Hill v. Wallace, 259 U.S. 44 (1922). In other words, the taxing clause in Article I, Section 8, does not give Congress jurisdiction over everything occurring within the 50 Union states.

The next logical question is: Does Congress have any power over those who receive their income from intrastate commerce (commerce within a single state)? Under Article I, Section 8, Congress does not have jurisdiction over intrastate commerce.

"No interference by Congress with the business of citizens transacted within a state is warranted by the Constitution, except such as is strictly incidental to the exercise of powers clearly granted to the legislature."
[License Tax Cases, 72 U.S. 462 (1866)]

During this century, the courts have stretched their reading of the "commerce clause" to the extreme. The courts have upheld many Acts of Congress, on the grounds that the matters regulated, though not interstate commerce themselves, have enough of an "impact" on interstate commerce that Congress may regulate them. We will here limit our criticism of this tendency of the courts to agreeing with Supreme Court Justice, Clarence Thomas, in his concurring opinion in the U.S. v. Lopez, 514 U.S. 549 (1995) case mentioned above, when he said:

"We have said that Congress may regulate not only "Commerce... among the several states," U.S. Const., Art. I, 8, cl. 3, but also anything that has a "substantial effect" on such commerce... [I]t seems to me that the power to regulate "commerce" can by no means encompass authority over mere gun possession, any more than it empowers the Federal Government to regulate marriage, littering, or cruelty to animals, throughout the 50 States. Our Constitution quite properly leaves such matters to the individual States, notwithstanding these activities' effects on interstate commerce. Any interpretation of the Commerce Clause that even suggests that Congress could regulate such matters is in need of reexamination."

Even with the courts' "creative" interpretation of the commerce clause, it would be quite a stretch to say that Congress has the jurisdiction to regulate all income-generating activities within the 50 Union states. If they cannot regulate it, can they tax it?

There has been extensive debate in the courts over the concept that "the power to tax is the power to destroy." Though usually applied to limits on state power, the principle basically says that if a government has no jurisdiction to regulate an activity, then it also cannot tax that activity.

"[N]o state has the right to lay a tax on interstate commerce in any form... and the reason is that such taxation is a burden on that commerce, and amounts to a regulation of it, which belongs solely to congress. This is the result of so many recent cases that citation is hardly necessary."
[Leloup v. Port of Mobile, 127 U.S. 640 (1888)]

1 But the courts have gone back and forth on this issue as well. Could anyone argue that the extensive "social engineering" in
2 the tax Code, rewarding some behaviors with credits and deductions, while penalizing others, does not amount to an
3 attempt to regulate the behavior of those who receive taxable income? Does Congress have the authority to regulate the
4 behavior of 100+ million Americans in that manner, by way of "tax" legislation? Or could it be that such "reward and
5 punishment" tactics could only be imposed on those engaged in some activity otherwise under federal jurisdiction? What
6 might that activity be that makes us "liable"?

7 In discussing the Income Tax Act of 1913, as it related to a company engaged in the business of selling U.S. products in 8 foreign countries, the Supreme Court stated the following:

9 "The Constitution broadly empowers Congress not only 'to lay and collect taxes, duties, imposts, and excises,'
10 but also 'to regulate commerce with foreign nations.' So, if [the clause forbidding taxes on exports from 11 states] be not in the way, Congress undoubtedly has power to lay and collect such a tax as is here in 12 question."
13 [William E. Peck & Co. v. Lowe, 247 U.S. 165 (1918)]

14 Why would the Supreme Court even mention the second clause, unless there was some question about whether the "power 15 to lay and collect taxes" by itself, authorized a tax on any and all income?

16 But what of the Sixteenth Amendment? Didn't that expand Congress' taxing jurisdiction to all Americans? The Supreme 17 Court and the Secretary of the Treasury say it did not. The following Treasury Decision (which expresses the official
19 Baltic Mining Co., 240 U.S. 103 (1916).

20 "The provisions of the sixteenth amendment conferred no new power of taxation, but simply prohibited
21 [Congress' original power to tax incomes] from being taken out of the category of indirect taxation, to which it
22 inherently belonged, and being placed in the category of direct taxation subject to apportionment."
23 [Treasury Decision 2303]

24 In the 1916 case of Brushaber v. Union Pacific Railroad Co., 240 U.S. 1 (1916), the Supreme Court called it an "erroneous
25 assumption" to believe that "the 16th Amendment provides for a hitherto unknown power of taxation; that is, a power to 26 levy an income tax which, although direct, should not be subject to the regulation of apportionment applicable to all other
27 direct taxes."

28 The Sixteenth Amendment was passed in response to the Supreme Court decision in Pollock v. Farmers' Loan & Trust Co.,
29 157 U.S. 429 (1895), which said that a tax on the income derived from owning property was the same as a tax on owning
30 property, which would be a "direct" tax, requiring Congress to go through the complicated process of "apportioning" the tax
31 among the states. (The court's complaint about the tax did not apply to income received in exchange for labor.)

32 Without discussing all the ins and outs of "direct" and "indirect" taxes, the relevant point is that the Sixteenth Amendment
33 simply identified the tax as an "indirect" tax (even when the income comes from property ownership), and therefore a tax
34 which does not require (and has never required) "apportionment." It did nothing to expand Congress' taxing jurisdiction.

35 "The Sixteenth Amendment... has no real bearing and may be put out of view. As pointed out in recent 36 decisions, it does not extend the taxing power to new or excepted subjects..."
37 [William E. Peck & Co. v. Lowe, 247 U.S. 165 (1918)]

38 The Sixteenth Amendment does not at all address Congress' taxing jurisdiction within the 50 union states, in spite of what 39 well-meaning but ignorant Congressmen tell their constituents all the time in regards to their liability to pay income taxes.
40 Saying that Congress can tax incomes "from whatever source derived," without apportionment, obviously did not allow 41 Congress to tax everyone in China. The only issue the amendment is relevant to is the question of "direct" vs. "indirect"
42 taxation (with the amendment stating that the income tax is an "indirect" tax).

43 In fact, in one of the key rulings regarding the meaning of the Sixteenth Amendment, the Supreme Court made some 44 interesting comments that show that the amendment was not about taxing jurisdiction in general. In the case of Stanton v.
45 Baltic Mining Co., 240 U.S. 103 (1916), the Supreme Court stated that the Sixteenth Amendment simply forbids the courts
46 from ruling that the income tax is a "direct" tax, based on "the sources from which the income was derived," as happened in 47 the Pollock case (mentioned above). The Court then said the following:

1                   "Mark, of course, in saying this we are not here considering a tax... entirely beyond the scope of the taxing
 2 power of Congress, and where consequently no authority to impose a burden, either direct or indirect, exists.
 3 In other words, we are here dealing solely with the restriction imposed by the 16th Amendment on the right to
 4 resort to the source whence an income is derived in a case where there is power to tax..."
 5 Stanton v. Baltic Mining Co., [240 U.S. 103 (1916)]

6 If there were no Constitutional restriction on Congress' jurisdiction to tax incomes, this would make no sense. Is the court
 7 here referring merely to Congress' inability to tax foreigners who do no business related to the United States of America?
 8 Would the court feel the need to mention that? Or were they implying that other restrictions exist on Congress' ability to 9 tax income? The Court thought it worth mentioning that they were not implying that the Sixteenth Amendment removed all 10 the limits from Congress' taxing power.

11 Article I, Section 8 of the Constitution does include the "power to lay and collect taxes," but does not say what may be 12 taxed by Congress. This allows for two options. The first option is that there are essentially no limitations on what 13 Congress can tax (though there are certain rules on how "direct" and "indirect" taxes must be imposed). The problem with 14 this option is that it would essentially negate the entire Constitution, as this option would give Congress the jurisdiction and 15 power to control anything and everything, provided it exerted that control through tax legislation. For example, if this 16 option were true, in response to the Lopez decision mentioned above, Congress could simply impose a $1,000,000 tax on 17 carrying a firearm near a school, to get around the restriction that would otherwise exist.

18 The Supreme Court seems to agree that this option cannot be. The court said that they could not allow Congress to control
 19 by tax legislation matters which they have no jurisdiction to regulate. (Congress was attempting, in this case, to control 20 "child labor" within the states through tax legislation.) The Supreme Court said the following:

21                   "Grant the validity of this law, and all that Congress would need to do, hereafter, in seeking to take over to its 22 control any one of the great number of subjects of public interest, jurisdiction of which the states have never
 23 parted with, and which are reserved to them by the Tenth Amendment, would be to enact a detailed measure of 24 complete regulation of the subject and enforce it by a so-called tax upon departures from it. To give such
 25 magic to the word 'tax' would be to break down all constitutional limitation of the powers of Congress and 26 completely wipe out the sovereignty of the states."
 27 Bailey v. Drexel Furniture Co., [259 U.S. 20 (1922)]

28 In the same year, the court also ruled on the Future Trading Act, which imposed a tax "on all contracts for the sale of grain
 29 for future delivery." The court quoted the citation above, and immediately afterward said this:

30                   "This has complete application to the act before us, and requires us to hold that the provisions of the act we 31 have been discussing cannot be sustained as an exercise of the taxing power of Congress conferred by section
 32 8, article 1."
 33 Hill v. Wallace, [259 U.S. 44 (1922)]

34 Clearly the court saw that Congress' power to lay and collect taxes does not grant unlimited jurisdiction over everything
 35 within the states. To ignore the limits of federal jurisdiction when reading the taxation clause would lead to concluding that 36 Congress can control everything by tax legislation. (In fact, this reading would also mean that Congress has the power to 37 tax everyone in China, since the taxing clause does not mention geographical jurisdiction either.)

38 The second option is that "the power to lay and collect taxes" applies only to matters otherwise under federal jurisdiction.
 39 For example, Article I, Section 8 specifically puts international commerce under federal jurisdiction, and Article IV,
 40 Section 3 gives Congress control of federal possessions. However, "intrastate" commerce (commerce that happens entirely 41 within a single state) is not under federal jurisdiction. Here is a quote from the Constitution that prohibits taxing intrastate
 42 commerce:

43                   U.S. Constitution, Article 1, Section 9, Clause 5:

44                   "No Tax or Duty shall be laid on Articles exported from any State."

45 So the power to tax, together with the clauses giving Congress jurisdiction over international/foreign commerce, and 46 commerce within federal possessions, would give Congress the power to tax income from international commerce, and 47 income from federal possessions ONLY.

1 The Supreme Court made an interesting comment in 1918 related to this. The case concerned the income tax act of 1913
 2 (which is the basis of the current tax), and how it applied to a domestic corporation in the business of buying things in the
 3 states and selling them in foreign countries. The corporation was arguing that the tax in this case violated the provision of 4 the Constitution which forbids the federal government from taxing exports from any state.

5 "[T]he act obviously could not impose a tax forbidden by the Constitution... The Constitution broadly
 6 empowers Congress not only 'to lay and collect taxes, duties, imposts, and excises,' but also 'to regulate
 7 commerce with foreign nations.' So, if the prohibitory clause [meaning the clause forbidding taxes on exports
 8 from states] invoked by the plaintiff be not in the way, Congress undoubtedly has power to lay and collect such 9 a tax as is here in question."
 10 [William E. Peck & Co. v. Lowe, 247 U.S. 165 (1918)]

11 In other words, if not for the question about whether this was a tax on state exports, this income would be taxable because 12 Congress is given the general power "to lay and collect taxes," and is given specific jurisdiction over "regular[ing]
 13 commerce with foreign nations." The court obviously thought this second clause was relevant to whether Congress could 14 tax such income.

15 One more very important Supreme Court Case, Gibbons v. Ogden, 22 U.S. 1 (1824) , helps clarify the division of taxing
 16 authority between federal and state governments. The below cite confirms that the state and federal governments may not
 17 tax the same object or activity, and if they do, they are conflicting with the Constitution and with each other. Presently,
 18 exactly this constitutional conflict is found in IRC Subtitle A income taxes within the Union states, where both the federal
 19 and state governments are simultaneously competing for taxes on the same income of the same person and on the same
 20 activity, which is wages and labor. The more that one takes out of the income of the natural person, the less the other has
 21 and this is a clear constitutional conflict that cannot be remedied if we interpret Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A to apply
 22 inside the 50 sovereign Union states. This Constitutional conflict, by the way, is one of many reasons why the federal 23 income tax can never be anything other than entirely voluntary within the Union states:

24 "The grant of the power to lay and collect taxes is, like the power to regulate commerce, made in general
 25 terms, and has never been understood to interfere with the exercise of the same power by the State; and hence
 26 has been drawn an argument which has been applied to the question under consideration. But the two grants
 27 are not, it is conceived, similar in their terms or their nature. Although many of the powers formerly [22 U.S.
 28 1, 199] exercised by the States, are transferred to the government of the Union, yet the State governments
 29 remain, and constitute a most important part of our system. The power of taxation is indispensable to their
 30 existence, and is a power which, in its own nature, is capable of residing in, and being exercised by, different
 31 authorities at the same time. We are accustomed to see it placed, for different purposes, in different hands.
 32 Taxation is the simple operation of taking small portions from a perpetually accumulating mass, susceptible of 33 almost infinite division; and a power in one to take what is necessary for certain purposes, is not, in its nature, 34 incompatible with a power in another to take what is necessary for other purposes. Congress is authorized to 35 lay and collect taxes, &c. to pay the debts, and provide for the common defence and general welfare of the 36 United States. This does not interfere with the power of the States to tax for the support of their own
 37 governments; nor is the exercise of that power by the States, an exercise of any portion of the power that is 38 granted to the United States. In imposing taxes for State purposes, they are not doing what Congress is 39 empowered to do. Congress is not empowered to tax for those purposes which are within the exclusive
 40 province of the States. When, then, each government exercises the power 41 of taxation, neither is exercising the power of the other. But,
 42 when a State proceeds to regulate commerce with foreign 43 nations, or among the several States, it is exercising the very 44 power that is granted to Congress, [22 U.S. 1, 200] and is 45 doing the very thing which Congress is authorized to do. There is 46 no analogy, then, between the power of taxation and the power of regulating commerce."
 47 [Gibbons v. Ogden, 22 U.S. 1 (1824)]

48 As you will see later in this book starting in section 5.6.10, the popular "861 Position" fully realizes exactly the above
 49 described limits on the power of the federal government to tax foreign commerce under Article 1, Section 8, Clause 3 of the 50 U.S. Constitution. It recognizes the income tax as an indirect excise tax on revenue taxable privileges granted to 51 corporations involved in foreign (outside the country) commerce. 26 C.F.R. §1.861 therefore limits taxable sources of 52 income for the federal government to specific taxable activities and entities, which include, the following. Incidentally, the 53 taxable activities listed below are what is called "statutory groupings" in 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(f) :

- 1 • Profit of federally-chartered Foreign Sales Corporations (FSC's) under 26 U.S.C. §994
- 2 • Profit from federally chartered Domestic International Sales Corporations (DISC) under 26 U.S.C. §925
- 3 • Foreign base company income under 26 U.S.C. §954. This type of company is also identified as a federal
- 4 corporation in 26 U.S.C. §952, but is operating inside a military base on federal property.

5 The courts have long argued over the concept that “the power to tax is the power to destroy,” meaning that the ability to tax
6 something implies the ability to regulate it or to forbid it entirely. This conversely implies that if a government has no
7 jurisdiction to regulate or forbid an activity, then it also has no jurisdiction to tax that activity either. There are numerous
8 Supreme Court cases dealing with the concept.

9 “[N]o state has the right to lay a tax on interstate commerce in any form... and the reason is that such taxation
10 is a burden on that commerce, and amounts to a regulation of it, which belongs solely to congress. This is the 11 result of so many recent cases that citation is hardly necessary.”
12 [Leloup v. Port of Mobile, 127 U.S. 640 (1888)]

13 In this case the court is stating the restrictions on what a state can tax, but the underlying logic is clear. Taxing commerce
14 is a burden on that commerce, and amounts to a regulation of commerce. While Congress is authorized to regulate 15 interstate commerce (commerce crossing state lines) and international commerce, it has no jurisdiction over intrastate
16 commerce (commerce occurring entirely within a single state). By the simple logic above, that means Congress cannot tax
17 income from intrastate commerce.

19 Constitution, except such as is strictly incidental to the exercise of powers clearly granted to the legislature.”
20 [License Tax Cases, 72 U.S. 462 (1866)]

21 It is true that the opinions of the courts have fluctuated significantly on this, from saying that the power to tax requires the
22 power to regulate, to saying that Congress may tax things it cannot regulate, provided that taxation does not amount to
23 regulation under the guise of a “tax.” But considering the massively complex “social engineering” in the income tax code
24 (punishing some behaviors and rewarding others) it would be difficult to argue that it would not constitute an attempt to 25 regulate behavior.

26 However, the courts' position on the matter is ultimately irrelevant. Regardless of what the courts think Congress could
27 tax, the statutes and regulations show what Congress did tax. Whether the courts think Congress has the constitutional
28 power to tax the income of all Americans is only relevant if Congress attempts to impose such a tax, which has not 29 occurred. (The courts cannot expand the scope of a tax just by saying that Congress could have taxed more if they had 30 wanted to.)

31 Brief mention should be made of the 16th Amendment to the Constitution, since there is a common but erroneous belief
32 that the 16th Amendment expanded Congress' power to impose direct taxes on incomes. The purpose of the 16th
33 Amendment, according to the Supreme Court in Brushaber v. Union Pacific Railroad Co., 240 U.S. 1 (1916), and again in 34 Stanton v. Baltic Mining Co., 240 U.S. 103 (1916) was to make it clear that the income tax is, and has always been, an 35 indirect “excise” tax, which never required apportionment. The Secretary of the Treasury agreed with the Court in
36 Treasury Decision 2303:

37 “The Sixteenth Amendment. The provisions of the sixteenth amendment conferred no new power of taxation,
38 but simply prohibited [Congress' original power to tax incomes] from being taken out of the category of 39 indirect taxation, to which it inherently belonged, and being placed in the category of direct taxation subject
40 to apportionment.”
41 [Treasury Decision 2303]

42 An in-depth explanation of direct and indirect taxes, and how they must be imposed, is not necessary here. The only 43 relevant point is that Congress' taxing jurisdiction was not expanded by the 16th Amendment.

44 QUESTION FOR DOUBTERS: Under Article I, Section 8 (first clause) of the Constitution, can Congress control
45 anything and everything within the 50 Union states, provided that that control is exerted through tax legislation?

46 But, after all this discussion of what the courts think, in the end that is irrelevant. As the statutes and regulations show, the 47 income tax was not imposed on the income of most Americans, regardless of the "conventional wisdom" on the subject.
48 The above discussion is not an attempt to claim that Congress imposed an unconstitutional tax. (They did not.) It is to

1 explain why Congress did not impose the tax that the American people have been tricked into believing exists. If Congress
2 did not impose the tax, of what relevance is it whether the courts think they could have?

3 Because of the above restrictions, we would like to summarize the extent of Congress' power to lay and collect taxes:

4 *"The Internal Revenue Code is precisely that: Internal to the 'federal zone', which includes the District of
5 Columbia, and federal possessions and territories over which the U.S. Government is sovereign and has
6 exclusive jurisdiction. The IRC therefore is a kind of municipal law for its regional holdings throughout the 7 country and within federal enclaves situated within the borders of the 50 Union states, but does not apply to the 8 states in their entirety. If and when those federal holdings transition to ownership either by the individual
9 states or to citizens within the states of the Union, the federal government cedes or forfeits jurisdiction and 10 control and sovereignty over those areas and they are then permanently covered by the Constitution in 11 perpetuity to the exclusion of direct taxes."*

12 All laws that have applicability only within the federal zone are called "special law" or "private law" as opposed to "public
13 law", which has general applicability to all American Citizens:

14 special law: *One relating to particular persons or things; one made for individual cases or for particular
15 places or districts; one operating upon a selected class, rather than upon the public generally. A private law.
16 A law is "special" when it is different from others of the same general kind or designed for a particular purpose,
17 or limited in range or confined to a prescribed field of action or operation. A "special law" relates to either
18 particular persons, places, or things or to persons, places, or things which, though not particularized, are
19 separated by any method of selection from the whole class to which the law might, but not such legislation, be
20 applied. Utah Farm Bureau Ins. Co. v. Utah Ins. Guaranty Ass'n, Utah, 564 P.2d. 751, 754. A special law
21 applies only to an individual or a number of individuals out of a single class similarly situated and affected, or
22 to a special locality. Board of County Com'rs of Lemhi County v. Swensen, Idaho, 80 Idaho 198, 327 P.2d. 361,
23 362. See also Private bill; Private law. Compare General law; Public law.

25 If you want to know more about the concept of the Internal Revenue Code and the Sixteenth Amendment being special law,
26 refer to the following fascinating article on our website:

28 Throughout the discussion in this section, we have tried and will continue to try to be very careful about the use of the word
29 "State", because it is a "word of art" that has a different meaning in the IRC than in everyday usage, as we will point out
30 later in section 5.6.13.7. That is why we have consistently either said "the 50 Union states" or "federal zone" instead of 31 mixing the two definitions together and loosely calling both of them "States". We encourage you to be just as careful how 32 you use these terms yourself so you don't confuse people and thereby undermine the tax freedom movement.

33 5.2.12 "United States" in the Internal Revenue Code means the federal zone OR the government, and excludes 34 states of the Union

35 Based on sections 4.6 through 4.8 earlier, we'll admit that it is easy to get confused about which of the three United States a
36 particular section of the tax code is referring to. This kind of confusion was intended by the government, we believe,
37 because that is how they get the wiggle room to deny due process and create a society of men rather than law: writing vague
38 laws that can't stand on their own and require a corrupt member of the legal profession (a "man") to interpret before they
39 can be properly applied. It's quite common for people in the tax honesty movement to argue over the definition of the term
40 "United States" and this kind of argument simply helps to point out the incomprehensibility and deliberate vagueness of the 41 tax code.

42 5.2.12.1.1 Statutory geographical definitions

43 The following definitions imply that the United States meant in the Internal Revenue Code is federal territories and the 44 "United States**" mentioned in the previous section:

45 TITLE 26 > Subtitle F > CHAPTER 79 > Sec. 7701. [Internal Revenue Code]
46 Sec. 7701. - Definitions

47 (a) When used in this title, where not otherwise distinctly expressed or manifestly incompatible with the intent
48 thereof—

1 (9) United States

2 The term "United States" when used in a geographical sense includes only the States and the District of
3 Columbia.

4 (10) State

5 The term "State" shall be construed to include the District of Columbia, where such construction is necessary to
6 carry out provisions of this title.

7 You will note that "States" is the plural of "State", and that "State" refers only to the District of Columbia, which is part of 8 the federal zone and is a federal State. This conclusion is further explained in section 5.6.13.7. But wait, there is only one
9 District of Columbia and they used the plural form of "State" in the definition of "United States". What other federal 10 "States" do we have? Here they are below in an excerpt from the Buck Act of 1940:

11 TITLE 4 - FLAG AND SEAL, SEAT OF GOVERNMENT, AND THE STATES

12 CHAPTER 4 - THE STATES

13 Sec. 110. Same; definitions

14 (d) The term "State" includes any Territory or possession of the United States.

16 Notice the title of the Chapter above, which is "The States". These are federal states, and the same "the States" appearing 17 in the definition of the term "United States" found in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) above. These same federal States are also the 18 only States subject to the federal income tax or the territorial jurisdiction of the federal government! The above is from 4
19 U.S.C. Sections 104-113, also called the Buck Act of 1940, which was enacted by the federal government to allow states to 20 institute state income or sales taxes inside of federal enclaves within sovereign states or in federal possessions like the
21 Virgin Islands. An "enclave" is property within a sovereign state that has been ceded to the federal government by a state
22 for use, for instance, as a military base or federal courthouse. As we explained in section 4.17, there are 50 artificial or 23 federal "States" within the borders of the sovereign 50 "states" under the Buck Act. If we took all of the federal property
24 within one of these sovereign "states" and grouped it together, this would be called a "State". The definition of "United 25 States" found in the Treasury Regulations confirms our reasonable conclusions:

26 26 C.F.R. §1.911-2 Qualified Individuals

27 (g) United States.

28 The term "United States" when used in a geographical sense includes any territory under the 29 sovereignty of the United States. It includes the states, the District of Columbia, the possessions and
30 territories of the United States, the territorial waters of the United States, the air space over the United States,
31 and the seabed and subsoil of those submarine areas which are adjacent to the territorial waters of the United
32 States and over which the United States has exclusive rights, in accordance with international law, with respect
33 to the exploration and exploitation of natural resources.

34 The important thing to remember about the above regulation is that they qualify the definition by saying "when used in a
35 geographical sense". Lawyers love to play word games like this to confuse people and hide the truth. This definition
36 implies that there may also be other senses in which the term is used, and it creates doubt and confusion in the reader
37 because it is nearly impossible for the average American to know based on the context in many cases whether the term
38 "United States" as used is indeed being used in its "geographical sense", or whether it is defined in the general sense found
39 in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) to mean the federal zone or the federal corporation found in 28 U.S.C. §3002(15)(A). The focus
40 of the statute, 26 U.S.C. §911, which this regulation was written for is to determine whether one is a citizen who is living
41 "abroad", which in this case means outside of the federal zone AND the states of the Union, which we call the geographical 42 United States. Did you also notice in this regulation that the Secretary of the Treasury who wrote the regulation above
43 didn't capitalize "the states", as if to imply that the Internal Revenue Code subtitle A applies throughout the sovereign 50
44 Union states? A lower case "states" implies a foreign state in legal lingo. Apparently, the Secretary of the Treasury wanted
45 to avoid confusing the term "the States" found in 26 U.S.C. §7701\(a\)\(9\) with the sovereign 50 Union states so he made it
46 lower case to avoid confusion, because he was the one who had to administer the tax code! Since the sovereign 50 Union
47 states are not under the sovereignty of the federal government, then they are not part of the definition of the term "United
49 from Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1473 underscores this point:

1 "Territory: A part of a country separated from the rest, and subject to a particular jurisdiction. Geographical 2 area under the jurisdiction of another country or sovereign power.

3 A portion of the United States not within the limits of any state, which has not yet been admitted as a state of 4 the Union, but is organized with a separate legislature, and with executive and judicial powers appointed by 5 the President."

6 [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1473

7 In the case of the current United States* (the country), therefore, federal territories include Guam, the Virgin Islands, or 8 Puerto Rico. These federal "States" and others are very clearly identified in Title 48 of the U.S. Code. You don't therefore 9 live in the "United States" defined in Subtitles A through C of the tax code and you probably never have! The federal
10 government will pretend like you live in the federal United States if you "volunteer", however, by sending in a 1040 tax
11 return. In that case, 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(39) confirms that when you file a 1040 tax return (not a 1040NR, but a 1040), even 12 if you live in a state of the Union, the IRS and the federal courts will "pretend" like you live in the District of Columbia. In 13 effect, you become a virtual citizen of the District of Criminals for the purpose of judicial jurisdiction:

30 Do you think the slick lawyers in Congress would need a trick like the above to suck you into the federal zone if the 31 Internal Revenue Code already defined the term "United States" as including the entire country? NOT!!!!

32 Going back to the definitions of "United States" and "State" again found in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9)-(10) above, then by the
33 rules of statutory construction, the plural of the word "State" may not have a different meaning or category than the singular
34 of a word. The definition of "United States" also cannot have two different meanings either that depend on the context
35 used, meaning that it can't mean the federal zone for individuals and the geographical United States* (the entire country)
36 for other artificial entities, because Section 7701(a)(9) doesn't provide two definitions or contexts. It can only have one
37 meaning that can consistently be applied throughout the Internal Revenue Code.

38 Do either the definition of "United States" or "State" above express a clear intent to apply to areas outside the federal zone
39 (federal properties coming under Article 1, Section 8, Clause 17 of the U.S. Constitution)? The answer is NO! Therefore,
40 the term "United States" can only mean the "federal zone" within the context of the entire Internal Revenue Code as per 41 U.S. v. Spelar, 338 U.S. 217 at 222 (1949). We have no choice, as per the rulings of the Supreme Court, to reach any other
42 conclusion. We wish to emphasize, however, that there are exceptions to this rule, as found in 26 U.S.C. §3121 and 26
43 U.S.C. §4612. These sections redefine the term "United States" within selected portions of the code and for special
44 purposes related to excise taxes and FICA taxes. We therefore must conclude that the income tax, by default and absent an 45 alternate or substitute definition of "United States", only applies in the District of Columbia and other portions of the 46 federal zone, based on the definitions above. The only exceptions to this conclusion are those portions of the Internal 47 Revenue Code which use another definition of the term "United States". 40 U.S.C. §3112 puts the nail in the coffin on this
48 issue, in defining the extent of criminal jurisdiction of the "United States**" government:

§ 3112. Federal jurisdiction

(a) Exclusive Jurisdiction Not Required.— It is not required that the Federal Government obtain exclusive jurisdiction in the United States over land or an interest in land it acquires.

(b) Acquisition and Acceptance of Jurisdiction.— When the head of a department, agency, or independent establishment of the Government, or other authorized officer of the department, agency, or independent establishment, considers it desirable, that individual may accept or secure, from the State in which land or an interest in land that is under the immediate jurisdiction, custody, or control of the individual is situated, consent to, or cession of, any jurisdiction over the land or interest not previously obtained. The individual shall indicate acceptance of jurisdiction on behalf of the Government by filing a notice of acceptance with the Governor of the State or in another manner prescribed by the laws of the State where the land is situated.

(c) Presumption.— It is conclusively presumed that jurisdiction has not been accepted until the Government accepts jurisdiction over land as provided in this section.

Don't confuse yourself. The above use of the word "State" is different from that in Title 26, the I.R.C. It means the states of the Union and not the federal States. If you electronically search all of Title 40 as we have, you will not find a definition of "State" that applies to the above statute because they simply DO NOT want you knowing what it is and do not want to draw attention to the distinction between "federal States" and "Union states"! However, a definition that helps clarify what it means is found in 40 U.S.C. §1314:

Sec. 1314. - Easements

(3) State.— The term "State" means a State of the United States, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, and the territories and possessions of the United States.

So there you have it right from the deceitful horse's mouth in 40 U.S.C. §3112 above! The United States government admits in its own laws that it does not have territorial jurisdiction over any land within the states of the union not explicitly ceded to it in writing by the state. The territorial jurisdiction we refer to is that relating to "Acts of Congress" and federal statutes, such as the Internal Revenue Code and the Title 18 Criminal code.

"A canon of construction which teaches that of Congress, unless a contrary intent appears, is meant to apply only within the territorial jurisdiction of the United States."
 [U.S. v. Spelar, 338 U.S. 217 at 222 (1949)]

This includes jurisdiction to impose federal income taxes under Subtitles A, B, and C! Note that Subtitles D and E use a different definition of United States because they do apply throughout the country rather than just inside the federal zone or abroad. Why then, based on these conclusions, would the federal government have any jurisdiction over your private property or residence within a state, which also was never ceded to the federal government in writing? Worse yet, why would they have any jurisdiction over you if you weren't a U.S. citizen and were instead a "national"? The answer is the U.S. government's jurisdiction inside the states of the Union on land outside the federal zone doesn't exist, other than to regulate and tax foreign commerce under Subtitles D and E of the Internal Revenue Code! Only the states have territorial jurisdiction there.

Another issue to consider is deciding whether "United States" means the "District of Columbia" or the "federal zone" is the definition of the term "employee" we will talk about later in section 5.2.18. Here's the definition from 26 C.F.R. §31.3401\(c\):

26 C.F.R. §31.3401\(c\) Employee:

"...the term [employee] includes officers and employees, whether elected or appointed, of the United States, a [federal] State, Territory, Puerto Rico or any political subdivision, thereof, or the District of Columbia, or any agency or instrumentality of any one or more of the foregoing. The term 'employee' also includes an officer of a corporation."

Here's what the code says about such officer "employees", and note that they all work only in the District of Columbia:

1 United States Code
 2 TITLE 4 - FLAG AND SEAL, SEAT OF GOVERNMENT, AND THE STATES
 3 CHAPTER 3 - SEAT OF THE GOVERNMENT
 4 § 72. Public offices; at seat of government.

5 All offices attached to the seat of government shall be exercised in the District of Columbia, and not
 6 elsewhere, except as otherwise expressly provided by law.

7 Another reason that the term "United States" found in 26 U.S.C. §7701\(a\)\(9\) cannot mean areas outside the federal zone are 8 the following two portions of the Constitution of the United States of America:

9 Article 1, Section 9, Clause 5:

10 "No Tax or Duty shall be laid on Articles exported from any State."

11 To tax wages earned from interstate commerce or exporting from a State to a foreign country would amount to an indirect
 12 duty on exports in violation of the above clause of the Constitution.

13 Getting back to the Buck Act of 1940 and these federal "States", the question is, are the 50 sovereign "states" possessions
 14 or territories of the "United States**". The answer is emphatically NO. The 50 "states" of the United States of America
 15 are sovereign and are foreign jurisdictions with respect to the federal government and with respect to each other, as shown

17 Foreign States: "Nations outside of the United States...Term may also refer to another state; i.e. a sister state.
 18 The term 'foreign nations', ...should be construed to mean all nations and states other than that in which the
 19 action is brought; and hence, one state of the Union is foreign to another, in that sense."
 20 [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 648]

21 Foreign Laws: "The laws of a foreign country or sister state."
 22 [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 647]

23 As we read the above, we should recognize that what makes the federal and the state governments "foreign" with respect
 24 to each other is that they are mutually exclusive territorial jurisdictions and each have sovereignty within their respective
 25 territories. Because they are mutually exclusive territorial jurisdictions, that is why the U.S. Constitution requires the states
 26 to collect taxes for the federal government through apportionment in 1:9:4 and 1:2:3. Thomas Jefferson confirmed this

27 "With respect to our State and federal governments, I do not think their relations are correctly understood by 28 foreigners. They generally suppose the former subordinate to the latter. But this is not the case. They are co-
 29 ordinate departments of one simple and integral whole. To the State governments are reserved all legislative 30 and administration, in affairs which concern their own citizens only, and to the federal government is given
 31 whatever concerns foreigners, or the citizens of the other States; these functions alone being made federal. The 32 one is domestic, the other the foreign branch of the same government; neither having control over the other,
 33 but within its own department."
 34 [Thomas Jefferson, "Writing of Thomas Jefferson" pub by Taylor & Maury, Washington DC, 1854, quote
 35 number VII 355-61, from correspondence to Major John Cartwright, June 5, 1824.]

36 The above conclusions of Thomas Jefferson are no accident. The U.S. Supreme Court very eloquently described why we 37 have such a separation of powers between the federal and state governments and why they must be foreign with respect to 38 each other in the case of U.S. v. Lopez, 514 U.S. 549 (1995):

39 We start with first principles. The Constitution creates a Federal Government of enumerated powers. See U.S.
 40 Const., Art. I, 8. As James Madison wrote, "[t]he powers delegated by the proposed Constitution to the federal
 41 government are few and defined. Those which are to remain in the State governments are numerous and
 42 indefinite." The Federalist No. 45, pp. 292-293 (C. Rossiter ed. 1961). This constitutionally mandated division
 43 of authority "was adopted by the Framers to ensure protection of our fundamental liberties." Gregory v.
 44 Ashcroft, 501 U.S. 452, 458 (1991) (internal quotation marks omitted). "Just as the separation and
 45 independence of the coordinate branches of the Federal Government serves to prevent the accumulation of 46 excessive power in any one branch, a healthy balance of power between the States and the Federal
 47 Government will reduce the risk of tyranny and abuse from either front." Ibid.
 48 [U.S. v. Lopez, 514 U.S. 549 (1995)]

49 Therefore, the Internal Revenue Code Subtitles A through C DOES NOT apply to you, as these subtitles are a municipal tax
 50 that applies only on federal property and to persons domiciled on federal property but situated outside of federal property.

1 I.R.C., Subtitle A has territorial jurisdiction only within the District of Columbia and other federal possessions, territories,
 2 and federal enclaves within the sovereign states and hereafter referred to as the “federal zone”. This is no accident, but is a
 3 direct result of the restrictions imposed on the U.S. Government in Article 1, Section 8, Clauses 1 and 3 of the U.S.
 4 Constitution. The Federalist Paper No. 36 drafted by the founding fathers confirms the limited ability of the federal
 5 government to tax individuals within the borders of the sovereign states:

6 "The more intelligent adversaries of the new Constitution admit the force of this reasoning; but they qualify
 7 their admission by a distinction between what they call INTERNAL and EXTERNAL taxation. The former they
 8 would reserve to the State governments; the latter, which they explain into commercial imposts, or rather duties
 9 on imported articles, they declare themselves willing to concede to the federal head."
 10 [Alexander Hamilton, Federalist Paper #36]

11 Even if the IRS wants to assert that you are a statutory “citizen of the [federal] United States**” under 8 U.S.C. §1401
 12 (which most people are not because they were not born or naturalized inside the federal zone in an area subject to the 13 exclusive sovereignty of the U.S. government and are not domiciled there), they will still not be able to extend the 14 jurisdiction of the federal courts or their taxing authority under Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A beyond the boundaries of 15 the federal zone and foreign lands for the purposes of the Internal Revenue Code because of the above limitations.
 16 Incidentally, have you ever asked yourself what Subtitles A through C of the Revenue Code is Internal TO? They are
 17 Internal to the federal zone/United States**! This may have something to do with why the Internal Revenue Code was 18 never enacted into positive law and still stands only as prima facie evidence of law or special/municipal/private law..
 19 because it has no effect on persons domiciled in the 50 Union states or outside of the federal zone anyway! Of course, if 20 you receive federal payments as a foreign person, the government can withhold taxes from that, but they can't apply the 21 I.R.C., Subtitle A to nonresident persons. The more correct way to refer to yourself is not as a “resident or citizen of the 22 United States**”, both of whom have domicile in the federal zone, but as an American National or natural born
 23 constitutional (but not statutory) Citizen of a state of the United States of America, which DOES NOT include the District
 24 of Columbia or the federal zone. You are a “non-resident non-persons” with respect to the foreign jurisdiction of the 25 United States Internal Revenue Code!

26 For those of you who STILL don't believe that the “United States**” found in the Internal Revenue Code does NOT
 27 include areas outside of the federal zone, one of our readers (thanks Bob Conlon!) did an exhaustive and scholarly study of

29 <http://www4.law.cornell.edu/uscode/26/ch1.html>

30 Based on his findings, the definition of “United States” (sec.3121) that does not explicitly reference the 50 Union states is 31 used in 29 different sections of the Internal Revenue Code (other than its own definition), however the definition that
 32 DOES explicitly refer as the “United States” to mean the 50 Union states, section 4612, is only used 3 times in the whole
 33 of TITLE 26, and the cases where it is used refer to excise taxes on gasoline!!!

34 It appears that all the sections that have to do with income tax, self-employment tax, etc. refer to 3121 AND NOT 4612.
 35 This is obviously done to obfuscate and confuse and to cause presumption, but the definition is clear as section 4612 will 36 illustrate. It says :

37 Title 26
 38 Subtitle D-Miscellaneous Excise Taxes
 39 Chapter 38-Environmental Taxes
 40 Subchapter A- Tax on Petroleum
 41 26 U.S.C. Sec. 4612\(a\)\(4\) - United States

42 (A) In general

43 The term "United States" means the 50 States, the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, any 44 possession of the United States, the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands, and the Trust Territory of 45 the Pacific Islands

 51 26 U.S.C. Sec. 3121\(e\)\(2\) - United States

The term "United States" when used in a geographical sense includes the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, Guam, and American Samoa. An individual who is a citizen of the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico (but not otherwise a citizen of the United States) shall be considered, for purposes of this section, as a citizen of the United States.

Based on the above two definitions, it ought to be clear that Congress knows exactly how to define the term "United States" to include the 50 Union states when they want to, and that if they really meant the 50 Union states in section 3121, they would have said exactly that and eliminated this section and referred to section 4612 instead, BUT THEY DIDN'T by choice and would rather keep you guessing!

Below are the 'hits' our reader found for both sections 3121 and 4612 of the Internal Revenue Code (Title 26) and each gives the number of times references are made to each of the two definitions in all the code sections where these sections were referenced within the I.R.C. This research has made it very clear that if one doesn't live in a federal area but instead in nonfederal areas of the 50 Union states, no Subtitle A income tax or Subtitle C FICA tax liability exists!

2 Article 1, Section 8, Clauses 1 and 3 of the Constitution, which state:

3 Art. 1, Sect. 8, Clause 1: The Congress shall have Power To lay and collect Taxes, Duties, Imposts and
4 *Excises, to pay the Debts and provide for the common Defence and general Welfare of the United States; but all
5 Duties, Imposts and Excises shall be uniform throughout the United States;

6 Art. 1, Sect. 8, Clause 3: To regulate Commerce with foreign Nations, and among the several States, and with
7 the Indian Tribes;

8 Now if we look at the last sentence in 1:8:1 of the Constitution and then we consider that graduated income taxes are NOT
9 uniform throughout the United States**, but instead are highly non-uniform and most oppressive on the rich, then the 10 graduated income tax instituted on nonresident alien individuals with income "effectively connected with a trade or
11 business in the United States" referenced in 26 U.S.C. §871(b) would be unconstitutional if the definition of "United
12 States" meant the 50 Union states or the nonfederal areas of the states! Remember, however, the meaning of "trade or 13 business" from section 3.12.1.22, which is a "word of art" that really means the holding of "public office" in the U.S.
14 federal government! The only persons who really fit the description of "trade or business" in the U.S. are those who elect
15 or volunteer to be treated that way. No one else really fits that description because Congressmen conveniently excluded
16 their wages from the definition of "wages" found in 26 U.S.C. §3401(a). Hypocrites!

17 Moving our discussion along, 26 U.S.C. §871(a) applies a 30% flat UNIFORM tax on income not connected with a U.S.
18 business that is derived from U.S.** sources (in this case, the federal government). This tax applies to corporations with 19 income originating within the territorial jurisdiction of the federal government, which is only within the federal zone or to 20 persons domiciled in the federal zone but temporarily abroad for Subtitle A taxes as per 40 U.S.C. §3112. Try to explain
21 that one away. The U.S. supreme Court agreed that taxes that were not uniform throughout the "United States" were
22 unconstitutional outside of the federal United States in the landmark case of Pollock v. Farmers' Loan & Trust Co., 157
23 U.S. 429, 158 U.S. 601 (1895):

1                   “...the law is invalid, because imposing indirect taxes in violation of the constitutional requirement of
 2                   uniformity, and therein also in violation of the implied limitation upon taxation that all tax laws must apply
 3                   equally, impartially, and uniformly to all similarly situated. Under the second head, it is contended that the
 4                   rule of uniformity is violated, in that the law taxes the income of certain corporations, companies, and
 5                   associations, no matter how created or organized, at a higher rate than the incomes of individuals or
 6                   partnerships derived from precisely similar property or business; in that it exempts from the operation of the 7                   act and from the burden of taxation numerous corporations, companies, and associations having similar
 8                   property and carrying on similar business to those expressly taxed; in that it denies to individuals deriving their
 9                   income from shares in certain corporations, companies, and associations the benefit of the exemption of $ 4,000
 10                   granted to other persons interested in similar property and business; in the exemption of $4,000; in the 11                   exemption of building and loan associations, savings banks, mutual life, fire, marine, and accident insurance
 12                   companies, existing solely for the pecuniary profit of their members,-these and other exemptions being alleged 13                   to be purely arbitrary and capricious, justified by no public purpose, and of such magnitude as to invalidate the 14                   entire enactment; and in other particulars. ”
 15                   Pollock v. Farmers’ Loan & Trust Co., [157 U.S. 429, 158 U.S. 601 (1895)]

16 Here are a few more examples of constitutional, UNIFORM taxes imposed on people living outside the “United States”
 17 (the federal zone), and ALL of them are exactly 30% and are not graduated:

18                   26 U.S.C. Sec. 881. Tax on income of foreign corporations not connected with United States business

19                   26 U.S.C. Sec. 1441. Withholding of tax on nonresident aliens

20                   26 U.S.C. Sec. 1442. Withholding of tax on foreign corporations

21 The authority to regulate commerce defined in 1:8:1 of the U.S. Constitution implies the authority to tax that commerce, but 22 the only tax authorized on income in that part of the constitution are excise or privilege taxes based on privileges received
 23 from the federal government by public officers of the U.S.** government or U.S.** registered corporations (not state 24 corporations). This excludes the vast majority of Americans and businesses, and the IRS and the Congress are loath to 25 admit this.

26 5.2.12.1.2            Meaning of “resident” within the I.R.C.

27 Most people falsely PRESUME that the word “resident” within the Internal Revenue Code is associated with a geographic 28 place. This presumption is false because:

- 29 1. The word “resident” is nowhere associated with a geographic place within the I.R.C. It is therefore a violation of due 30 process of law to PRESUME that it is.
- 31 2. As we repeatedly point out in the following document, the I.R.C., Subtitles A through C are a franchise, and that all 32 franchises are contracts or agreements:

The “Trade or Business” Scam, Form #05.001
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

- 33 3. There is a maxim of law that debt and contract are independent of place.

42                   A domestic corporation is one organized or created in the United States, including only the States (and during 43                   the periods when not States, the Territories of Alaska and Hawaii), and the District of Columbia, or under the
 44                   law of the United States or of any State or Territory. A foreign corporation is one which is not domestic. A
 45                   domestic corporation is a resident corporation even though it does no business and owns no property in the
 46                   United States. A foreign corporation engaged in trade or business within the United States is referred to in
 47                   the regulations in this chapter as a resident foreign corporation, and a foreign corporation not engaged in
 48                   trade or business within the United States, as a nonresident foreign corporation. A partnership engaged in
 49                   trade or business within the United States is referred to in the regulations in this chapter as a resident

1 partnership, and a partnership not engaged in trade or business within the United States, as a nonresident
 2 partnership. Whether a partnership is to be regarded as resident or nonresident is not determined by the
 3 nationality or residence of its members or by the place in which it was created or organized.

 5 [SOURCE: <http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/CitesByTopic/Resident-26cfr301.7701-5.pdf>]

6 Notice the language above:

7 “Whether a partnership is to be regarded as resident or nonresident is not determined by the nationality or 8 residence of its members or by the place in which it was created or organized.”

9 This is a tacit admission that the status of BEING a “resident” has nothing to do with a geographic place and instead is a
 10 FRANCHISE STATUS which is created by the coincidence of the grant of a “congressionally created right” or “public 11 right” AND your consent to adopt the status and franchise PRIVILEGES associated with that right.

12 Therefore, the ONLY way one can be a statutory “resident” is to be LAWFULLY engaged in a statutory “trade or 13 business”, which is defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26) as “the functions of a public office”.

 15 § 7701. Definitions

16 (a) Definitions

17 (26) Trade or business

18 “The term ‘trade or business’ includes the performance of the functions of a public office.”

19 Why do they do this? Because ALL PUBLIC OFFICES are domiciled in the District of Columbia:

 21 Sec. 72. - Public offices; at seat of Government

22 All offices attached to the seat of government shall be exercised in the District of Columbia, and not elsewhere,
 23 except as otherwise expressly provided by law

24 Hence, by being associated with a public office, your legal identity is legally kidnapped under the authority of Federal Rule
 25 of Civil Procedure 17(b) and transported to the District of Columbia, which in turn is the ONLY place expressly included in 26 the definition of “United States” within the Internal Revenue Code.

27 TITLE 26 > Subtitle F > CHAPTER 79 > Sec. 7701. [Internal Revenue Code]
 28 Sec. 7701. - Definitions

29 (a) When used in this title, where not otherwise distinctly expressed or manifestly incompatible with the intent
 30 thereof—

31 (9) United States

32 The term “United States” when used in a geographical sense includes only the States and the District of 33 Columbia.

34 (10) State

35 The term “State” shall be construed to include the District of Columbia, where such construction is necessary to
 36 carry out provisions of this title.

37 Pursuant to the rules of statutory construction, that which is not EXPRESSLY included must be conclusively presumed to 38 be purposefully excluded. Hence, states of the Union are purposefully excluded from being within the “United States” in a
 39 geographic sense:

40 “Expressio unius est exclusio alterius. A maxim of statutory interpretation meaning that the expression of one
 41 thing is the exclusion of another. Burgin v. Forbes, 293 Ky. 456, 169 S.W.2d. 321, 325; Newblock v. Bowles,
 42 170 Okl. 487, 40 P.2d. 1097, 1100. Mention of one thing implies exclusion of another. When certain persons or things are specified in a law, contract, or will, an intention to exclude all others from its operation may be inferred. Under this maxim, if statute specifies one exception to a general rule or assumes to specify the effects of a certain provision, other exceptions or effects are excluded.”

[Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 581]

Note that all income taxes are based upon domicile, as in the case of the I.R.C., Subtitle A through C “income tax”. However, the domicile is INDIRECT rather than direct. The PUBLIC OFFICE is the thing domiciled in the Federal Zone and not the human being filling it, who can geographically be a “nonresident”.

The other noteworthy thing about this SCAM is that the 26 C.F.R. §301.7701-5 regulation cited above encompasses ALL “persons” within the I.R.C., and NOT just corporations and partnerships. It expressly mentions only corporations and partnerships, but in fact, these ARE the only entities EXPRESSLY included within the definition of “person” for the purposes of BOTH civil AND criminal jurisdiction of the I.R.C., and hence, describes ALL “persons” within the I.R.C.

§ 6671. Rules for application of assessable penalties

(b) Person defined

The term “person”, as used in this subchapter, includes an officer or employee of a corporation, or a member or employee of a partnership, who as such officer, employee, or member is under a duty to perform the act in respect of which the violation occurs.

§ 7343. Definition of term “person”

The term “person” as used in this chapter includes an officer or employee of a corporation, or a member or employee of a partnership, who as such officer, employee, or member is under a duty to perform the act in respect of which the violation occurs.

Why do they mention “partnerships” in the above definition? Because whenever you consent to occupy a public office in the U.S. government, a partnership is formed between the otherwise PRIVATE HUMAN BEING and the PUBLIC OFFICE that the person fills. THAT partnership is how the legal statutory “person” who is the proper subject of the I.R.C. is lawfully created. The problem, however, is that you CANNOT lawfully elect yourself into a public office, even with your consent. In order for a lawful election or appointment must occur, you must take a lawful oath, and only THEN can one become a lawful public office. If there is a deviation from this procedure for creating public offices, a crime has been committed pursuant to 18 U.S.C. §912.

§ 912. Officer or employee of the United States

Whoever falsely assumes or pretends to be an officer or employee acting under the authority of the United States or any department, agency or officer thereof, and acts as such, or in such pretended character demands or obtains any money, paper, document, or thing of value, shall be fined under this title or imprisoned not more than three years, or both.

Another important implication is that anyone who PRESUMES you are a “resident” is effectively “electing” you into a public office. If you don't object to that usually false presumption, then a cage is reserved for you on the federal corporate plantation in the District of Criminals. We call this “theft and kidnapping by presumption”.

Finally, don't go searching for the 26 C.F.R. §301.7701-5 regulation indicated in the CURRENT Code of Federal Regulations. As soon as we pointed it out on our website, it was conveniently HID and replaced with a temporary regulation. Now you know WHY it was hid. You will have to go back to the historical versions of the regulations to find it, so please don't contact us to tell us you can't find it. THEY HID IT to protect their CRIMINAL racketeering enterprise. Would you expect anything less when you create a Babylon corporation in the District of Criminals, turn it into a haven for financial terrorists, and put CRIMINALS in charge of writing laws that only protect them and which are designed to SCREW you?

5.2.12.1.3 How States of the Union are illegally treated as statutory “States” under federal law

1 By default, states of the Union mentioned in the Constitution:

- 2 1. Are sovereign and legislatively foreign in respect to federal legislative jurisdiction.
- 3 2. Are not subject to federal civil or criminal law.
- 4 3. Function in nearly every particular as independent nations under the law of nations.

5 The above facts are covered further in the next section. Like any other legal entity or “person”, however, a state of the 6 Union can make themselves subject to private foreign law by exercising their right to contract with an otherwise foreign
7 entity. This process of contracting operates under equity and in that capacity, the state behaves as the equivalent of a
8 private person contracting with other private persons:

9 When a State engages in ordinary commercial ventures, it acts like a private person, outside the area of its
10 "core" responsibilities, and in a way unlikely to prove essential to the fulfillment of a basic governmental
11 obligation. A Congress that decides to regulate those state commercial activities rather than to exempt the 12 State likely believes that an exemption, by treating the State differently from identically situated private 13 persons, would threaten the objectives of a federal regulatory program aimed primarily at private conduct.
14 Compare, e.g., 12 U.S.C. §1841(b) (1994 ed., Supp. III) (exempting state companies from regulations covering
15 federal bank holding companies); 15 U.S.C. §77c(a)(2) (exempting state-issued securities from federal
16 securities laws); and 29 U.S.C §652(5) (exempting States from the definition of "employer[s]" subject to federal
17 occupational safety and health laws), with 11 U.S.C. §106(a) (subjecting States to federal bankruptcy court
18 judgments); 15 U. S.C. §1122(a) (subjecting States to suit for violation of Lanham Act); 17 U.S.C. §511(a)
19 (subjecting States to suit for copyright infringement); 35 U.S.C. §271(h) (subjecting States to suit for patent 20 infringement). And a Congress that includes the State not only within its substantive regulatory rules but also 21 (expressly) within a related system of private remedies likely believes that a remedial exemption would similarly
22 threaten that program. See Florida Prepaid Postsecondary Ed. Expense Bd. v. College Savings Bank, ante, at 23 ___ (Stevens, J., dissenting). It thereby avoids an enforcement gap which, when allied with the pressures of a
24 competitive marketplace, could place the State's regulated private competitors at a significant disadvantage.

25 These considerations make Congress' need to possess the power to condition entry into the market upon a
26 waiver of sovereign immunity (as "necessary and proper" to the exercise of its commerce power) unusually
27 strong, for to deny Congress that power would deny Congress the power effectively to regulate private conduct.
28 Cf. California v. Taylor, 353 U. S. 553, 566 (1957). At the same time they make a State's need to exercise
29 sovereign immunity unusually weak, for the State is unlikely to have to supply what private firms already
30 supply, nor may it fairly demand special treatment, even to protect the public purse, when it does so. Neither
31 can one easily imagine what the Constitution's founders would have thought about the assertion of sovereign
32 immunity in this special context. These considerations, differing in kind or degree from those that would support
33 a general congressional "abrogation" power, indicate that Parden 's holding is sound, irrespective of this
35 [College Savings Bank v. Florida Prepaid Postsecondary Education Expense, 527 U.S. 666 (1999)]

36 Notice the above statement:

37 These considerations make Congress' need to possess the power to condition entry into the market upon a
38 waiver of sovereign immunity (as "necessary and proper" to the exercise of its commerce power) unusually
40 conduct. Cf. California v. Taylor, 353 U. S. 553, 566 (1957).

41 The U.S. Congress has the right to regulate foreign or interstate commerce, regardless of whether it is a constitutional state
42 engaging in the commerce or simply a private human being or business. Therefore, only after a sovereignty such as a
43 Constitutional state government contracts as the equivalent of a private party in commerce can it become a “person” under 44 the contract or franchise that it consented to. That waiver of sovereignty and sovereign immunity is mandated by the 45 Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act (F.S.I.A.), which says in pertinent part:

46 TITLE 28 > PART IV > CHAPTER 97 > § 1605
47 §1605. General exceptions to the jurisdictional immunity of a foreign state

48 (a) A foreign state shall not be immune from the jurisdiction of courts of the United States or of the States in
49 any case—

50 (2) in which the action is based upon a commercial activity carried on in the United States by the foreign
51 state; or upon an act performed in the United States in connection with a commercial activity of the foreign 52 state elsewhere; or upon an act outside the territory of the United States in connection with a commercial
53 activity of the foreign state elsewhere and that act causes a direct effect in the United States;

1 That process of consent can only be in relation to a private party because it cannot lawfully do any of the following without
2 violating the separation of powers doctrine:

- 3 1. Agree to be treated as a federal territory or statutory "State".
- 4 2. Contract away its sovereignty to the national government.

5 No doubt, a state of the Union may procure a formerly private business or create a business of its own that engages in
6 interstate commerce and thereby become subject to federal regulation, but they can do so only indirectly as the equivalent
7 of a private party on the same footing as every other private party engaging in regulated activity. And in that capacity, they 8 are a private person and not a statutory "State" under federal law.

9 Ordinarily, when the federal government is legislating for constitutional states, it uses the phrase "several States" just as it
10 is used in the Constitution itself. Here are some examples:

11 United States Constitution
12 Article IV, Section 2

13 *The Citizens of each State shall be entitled to all Privileges and Immunities of Citizens in the several 14 States.

16 TITLE 1 > CHAPTER 3 > § 204
17 § 204. Codes and Supplements as evidence of the laws of United States and District of Columbia; citation of
18 Codes and Supplements

19 In all courts, tribunals, and public offices of the United States, at home or abroad, of the District of Columbia,
20 and of each State, Territory, or insular possession of the United States—

21 (a) United States Code.— The matter set forth in the edition of the Code of Laws of the United States current at
22 any time shall, together with the then current supplement, if any, establish prima facie the laws of the United
23 States, general and permanent in their nature, in force on the day preceding the commencement of the session
24 following the last session the legislation of which is included: Provided, however, That whenever titles of such
25 Code shall have been enacted into positive law the text thereof shall be legal evidence of the laws therein
26 contained, in all the courts of the United States, the several States, and the Territories and insular
27 possessions of the United States.

28 On the other hand, when the U.S. Congress wants to legislate for federal territories and possessions, it uses the term "the 29 States" rather than "the SEVERAL States":

30 [TITLE 26 > Subtitle F > CHAPTER 79 > Sec. 7701. \[Internal Revenue Code\]](#)
31 Sec. 7701. - Definitions

32 (a) When used in this title, where not otherwise distinctly expressed or manifestly incompatible with the intent

35 The term "United States" when used in a geographical sense includes only the States and the District of

38 20 C.F.R. §422.404.2
39 Social Security

40 (6) United States, when used in a geographical sense, includes, unless otherwise indicated:

- 41 *(i) The States,
- 42 (ii) The Territories of Alaska and Hawaii prior to January 3, 1959, and August 21, 1959, respectively, when
- 43 they acquired statehood,
- 44 (iii) The District of Columbia,

- 1 (iv) The Virgin Islands,
 2 (v) The Commonwealth of Puerto Rico effective January 1, 1951, (vi) Guam and American Samoa, effective
 3 September 13, 1960, generally, and for purposes of sections 210(a) and 211 of the Act, effective after 1960 with 4 respect to service performed after 1960, and effective for taxable years beginning after 1960 with respect to 5 crediting net earnings from self-employment and self-employment income, and
 6 (vii) The Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands effective January 1, 1987.

7 We allege that a violation of due process of law, a violation of the separation of powers, and treason on the part of the judge
 8 has occurred when any Court:

- 9 1. Includes constitutional states of the Union operating in the PUBLIC capacity as GOVERNMENTS within the statutory 10 definition of:
 11 1.1. "State" within any act of Congress.
 12 1.2. "the States" within any act of Congress. See 4 U.S.C. §110(d).
 13 2. Treats a constitutional State as a statutory "State" under federal law under the auspices of the Foreign Sovereign
 14 Immunities Act as indicated above. Instead, they must be treated as a private "person" and NOT a statutory "State", 15 which is the equivalent of a federal territory.
 16 3. Imputes a different meaning or class of things to the plural "States" or "the States" than it does to the definition of the 17 singular version of "State". For instance, 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(10) defines "State" as the District of Columbia and does
 18 not define the plural but includes the plural within the definition of "United States" in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9). It is a 19 rule of statutory construction that the plural cannot have a different meaning than the singular:

20 TITLE 26 > Subtitle F > CHAPTER 79 > Sec. 7701. [Internal Revenue Code]
 21 Sec. 7701. - Definitions

22 (a) When used in this title, where not otherwise distinctly expressed or manifestly incompatible with the intent
 23 thereof—

24 (9) United States

25 The term "United States" when used in a geographical sense includes only the States and the District of 26 Columbia.

27 (10) State

28 The term "State" shall be construed to include the District of Columbia, where such construction is necessary to
 29 carry out provisions of this title.

30 What judges seem to like to do to unconstitutionally expand their jurisdiction is to use the word "includes" as a means to 31 add anything they want to the definition of a term, but this clearly violates the rules of statutory construction, due process of 32 law, and the separation of powers doctrine:

33 "It is apparent that a constitutional prohibition cannot be transgressed indirectly by the creation of a statutory
 34 presumption any more than it can be violated by direct enactment. The power to create presumptions is not a 35 means of escape from constitutional restrictions."
 36 [Bailey v. Alabama, 219 U.S. 219 (1911)]

37 "Expressio unius est exclusio alterius. A maxim of statutory interpretation meaning that the expression of one
 38 thing is the exclusion of another. Burgin v. Forbes, 293 Ky. 456, 169 S.W.2d. 321, 325; Newblock v. Bowles,
 39 170 Okl. 487, 40 P.2d. 1097, 1100. Mention of one thing implies exclusion of another. When certain persons
 40 or things are specified in a law, contract, or will, an intention to exclude all others from its operation may be
 41 inferred. Under this maxim, if statute specifies one exception to a general rule or assumes to specify the effects
 42 of a certain provision, other exceptions or effects are excluded."
 43 [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 581]

44 "When a statute includes an explicit definition, we must follow that definition, even if it varies from that 45 term's ordinary meaning. Meese v. Keene, 481 U.S. 465, 484-485 (1987) ("It is axiomatic that the statutory 46 definition of the term excludes unstated meanings of that term"); Colautti v. Franklin, 439 U.S. at 392-393, n.
 47 10 ("As a rule, a definition which declares what a term "means" . . . excludes any meaning that is not stated");
 48 Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Lenroot, 323 U.S. 490, 502 (1945); Fox v. Standard Oil Co. of N.J., 294 U.S.
 49 87, 95-96 (1935) (Cardozo, J.); see also 2A N. Singer, Sutherland on Statutes and Statutory Construction §
 50 47.07, p. 152, and n. 10 (5th ed. 1992) (collecting cases). That is to say, the statute, read "as a whole," post at 51 998 [530 U.S. 943] (THOMAS, J., dissenting), leads the reader to a definition. That definition does not include

1 the Attorney General's restriction -- "the child up to the head." Its words, "substantial portion," indicate the
 3 [Stenberg v. Carhart, 530 U.S. 914 (2000)]

4 Any judge who violates these rules and tries to include a constitutional state into a statutory State under federal law ought 5 to be called on it, because he/she is clearly:

- 6 1. Exceeding his/her delegated authority.
- 7 2. Legislating from the bench by adding to the definition of words. This violates the separation of powers between the 8 Judicial Branch and the Legislative Branch.
- 9 3. Violating the separation of powers doctrine between the states and the federal government. See:

Government Conspiracy to Destroy the Separation of Powers, Form #05.023
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

- 10 4. Engaging in a conspiracy to destroy your Constitutional rights. The MAIN purpose of the separation of powers is to 11 protect your constitutional rights. Disregarding it is a violation of rights.

12 "We start with first principles. The Constitution creates a Federal Government of enumerated powers. See U.S.
 13 Const., Art. I, 8. As James Madison wrote, "[t]he powers delegated by the proposed Constitution to the federal
 14 government are few and defined. Those which are to remain in the State governments are numerous and 15 indefinite." The Federalist No. 45, pp. 292-293 (C. Rossiter ed. 1961). This constitutionally 16 mandated division of authority "was adopted by the Framers
 17 to ensure protection of our fundamental liberties." Gregory v. Ashcroft, 18 501 U.S. 452, 458 (1991) (internal quotation marks omitted). "Just as the separation and independence of 19 the coordinate branches of the Federal Government serves to prevent the accumulation of excessive power in 20 any one branch, a healthy balance of power between the States and the Federal Government will reduce the 21 risk of tyranny and abuse from either front." Ibid. "
 22 [U.S. v. Lopez, 514 U.S. 549 (1995)]

- 23 5. Violating due process of law by making false presumptions and depriving other litigants of the EQUAL right to 24 presume what IS NOT included in the definition.

25 We end this section with a comparison between STATUTORY states under federal law and CONSTITUTIONAL states

Applying for a federal benefit. 3. Applying for and receiving any kind of state license.

5.2.12.1.4 Meaning of "United States" within IRS Publications: The GOVERNMENT and not a geographical place

Even within federal territories and possessions such as Puerto Rico and American Samoa, IRS Publication 519 describes the following requirements:

"Bona Fide Residents of American Samoa or Puerto Rico

If you are a nonresident alien who is a bona fide resident of American Samoa or Puerto Rico for the entire tax year, you generally are taxed the same as resident aliens. You should file Form 1040 and report all income from sources both in and outside the United States. However, you can exclude the income discussed in the following paragraphs.

For tax purposes other than reporting income, however, you will be treated as a nonresident alien.

[ . . . ]

Residents of Puerto Rico.

If you are a bona fide resident of Puerto Rico for the entire tax year, you can exclude from gross income all income from sources in Puerto Rico (other than amounts for service performed as an employee of the United States or any of its agencies).

Residents of American Samoa.

If you are a bona fide resident of American Samoa for the entire year, you can exclude from gross income all income from sources in American Samoa (other than amounts for services performed as an employee of the U.S. government or any of its agencies).

[IRS Publication 519 (2009), pp. 33-34]

Based on the above, the following conclusions are inevitable and are the ONLY thing that is entirely consistent with the I.R.C., all the court cases we have read, and the I.R.S. publications in their entirety:

1. Those domiciled in Puerto Rico and American Samoa are statutory aliens under 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(A).
2. Puerto Rico and American Samoa do not count as “sources within the United States” per 26 U.S.C. §861 except in the case of:

“ . . . amounts for service performed as an employee of the United States or any of its agencies ”

3. People domiciled in Puerto Rico and American Samoa are treated as:
  - 3.1. “Resident aliens” under 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(A) for the purpose of reporting ONLY
  - 3.2. “Nonresident aliens” under 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(B) for the purposes of tax returns.
 These territories are therefore NOT within the statutory “United States”.
4. Because taxation is limited to services performed as a statutory “employee” of the United States per 5 U.S.C. §2105(a) and 26 U.S.C. §3401(c) and EXCLUDES private earnings, then “sources within the United States” as identified in 26 U.S.C. §861 REALLY can only mean THE GOVERNMENT and not any geographic place. This is also consistent with 26 U.S.C. §864(c)(3):

TITLE 26 > Subtitle A > CHAPTER 1 > Subchapter N > PART I > § 864
§864. Definitions and special rules

(c) Effectively connected income, etc.

(3) Other income from sources within United States

All income, gain, or loss from sources within the United States (other than income, gain, or loss to which paragraph (2) applies) shall be treated as effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business within the United States.

The ONLY place where ALL earnings are connected with a public office and a statutory “trade or business” is the United States Government in the District of Columbia, and more particularly, among statutory “employees”, all of whom are identified in 5 U.S.C. §2105(a) as public officers by being called an “officer and individual”:

TITLE 5 > PART III > Subpart A > CHAPTER 21 > § 2105
§2105. Employee

(a) For the purpose of this title, “employee”, except as otherwise provided by this section or when specifically modified, means an officer and an individual who is—

- 1 5. "United States" is used in TWO senses within the I.R.C.: (1) The GEOGRAPHIC SENSE and (2) The
2 GOVERNMENT SENSE.
3 5.1. Not all senses of the term "United States" are defined in Title 26, but rather only one of the TWO senses, which is 4 the GEOGRAPHIC SENSE. The definitions at 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10) and 4 U.S.C. §110(d) are, in 5 fact, a red herring and define only ONE of the two contexts.

6 TITLE 26 > Subtitle F > CHAPTER 79 > Sec. 7701. [Internal Revenue Code]
7 Sec. 7701. - Definitions

8 (a) When used in this title, where not otherwise distinctly expressed or manifestly incompatible with the intent
9 thereof—

10 (9) United States

11 The term "United States" when used in a geographical sense includes only the States and the District of 12 Columbia.

13 (10) State

14 The term "State" shall be construed to include the District of Columbia, where such construction is necessary to 15 carry out provisions of this title.

- 16 5.2. If they identified exactly which of these two senses was intended for every use, their FRAUD would have to end
17 immediately. So they keep it quiet, leave undue discretion to judges to decide because of incomplete and vague
18 definitions, and abuse presumption and propaganda to expand their jurisdiction unlawfully.
19 5.3. The term "United States" as used within the phrase "sources within the United States" in 26 U.S.C. §861 is NOT
20 used in a GEOGRAPHIC SENSE found in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10) and 4 U.S.C. §110(d), but rather in 21 the "GOVERNMENT" sense ONLY. Why? Because only earnings of government statutory "employees" or 22 instrumentalities acting as public officers are counted as taxable "gross income".
23 6. The term "the States" as used in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) really can only mean federal corporations that are part of the 24 U.S. government and not constitutional states of the Union. This is confirmed by:
25 6.1. The following holding of the U.S. Supreme Court, which confirms that "income" within the meaning of the 26 revenue laws means corporate profit:

27 "Income has been taken to mean the same thing as used in the Corporation Excise Tax Act of 1909 (36 Stat.
28 112) in the 16th Amendment, and in the various revenue acts subsequently passed."
29 [Bowers v. Kerbaugh-Empire Co., 271 U.S. 170, 174, (1926) ]

- 30 6.2. The fact that Congress is forbidden by the U.S. Constitution from creating a state within a state or from enacting
31 civil legislation enforceable within the borders of a Constitutional but not statutory state per Article 4, Section 3, 32 Clause 1, or from treating states of the Union as either federal territories or statutory "States" within the meaning
33 of the I.R.C.

34 United States Constitution
35 Article 4: States Relations
36 Section 3.

37 New States may be admitted by the Congress into this Union; but no new State shall be formed or erected
38 within the Jurisdiction of any other State; nor any State be formed by the Junction of two or more States, or
39 Parts of States, without the Consent of the Legislatures of the States concerned as well as of the Congress.

- 40 6.3. The following holding of the U.S. Supreme Court, which confirms that federal territories and therefore statutory 41 "States" are all corporation franchises. Notice also that they define an "individual" as a "corporation sole", thus 42 implying that the "individual" within the I.R.C. is in fact a corporation sole.

43 At common law, a "corporation" was an "artificial perso[n] endowed with the legal capacity of perpetual 44 succession" consisting either of a single individual (termed a "corporation sole") or of a collection of several 45 individuals (a "corporation aggregate"). 3 H. Stephen, Commentaries on the Laws of England 166, 168 (1st 46 Am. ed. 1845). The sovereign was considered a corporation. See id., at 170; see also 1 W. Blackstone, 47 Commentaries *467. Under the definitions supplied by contemporary law dictionaries, Territories would have 48 been classified as "corporations" (and hence as "persons") at the time that 1983 was enacted and the

Bouvier, A Law Dictionary Adapted to the Constitution and Laws of the United States of America 318-319 (11th ed. 1866) ("In this extensive sense the United States may be termed a corporation"); Van Brocklin v. Tennessee, 117 U.S. 151, 154 (1886) ("The United States is a . . . great corporation . . . ordained and established by the American people") (quoting United [495 U.S. 182, 202] States v. Maurice, 26 F. Cas. 1211, 1216 (No. 15,747) (CC Va. 1823) (Marshall, C. J.)); Cotton v. United States, 11 How. 229, 231 (1851) (United States is "a corporation"). See generally Trustees of Dartmouth College v. Woodward, 4 Wheat. 518, 561-562 (1819) (explaining history of term "corporation").
[Ngiraingas v. Sanchez, 495 U.S. 182 (1990)]

7. The statutory "citizen" or "resident" or "U.S. person" all are synonymous with the GOVERNMENT CORPORATION and NOT a human being. That corporation described in 28 U.S.C. §3002(15)(A) itself is a statutory but not constitutional "U.S. citizen", "U.S. resident", and "U.S. person".

"A corporation is a citizen, resident, or inhabitant of the state or country by or under the laws of which it was created, and of that state or country only."
[19 Corpus Juris Secundum (C.J.S.), Corporations, §886 (2003)]

8. The term "United States" as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10) must by implication be limited to ONLY those DOMICILED in the District of Columbia, WHEREVER physically situated. A person who is a "bona fide resident" of Puerto Rico or American Samoa, for instance, could not ALSO be a resident anywhere else because you can only have a DOMICILE in ONE PLACE at a time. Hence, they would not be domiciled within the statutory "United States".
9. The only real "taxpayer" is a public office in the U.S. government and not state government. It is THIS statutory "taxpayer" who is the REAL "person" and "individual" mentioned in the I.R.C. and NOT the public officer filling the office. The public officer is a "partner" with the public office and he/she/it represents this public office and "taxpayer" as a "transferee" when information returns are filed against the office or against the name of the officer. See 26 U.S.C. §§6901 and 6903.
10. Even in the case of "nonresident aliens" as described in 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(B), a domicile on federal territory is still involved in the case of the statutory "taxpayer". Why? Because the statutory "person" and "individual" being taxed is NOT the nonresident entity or human being, but the PUBLIC OFFICE filled by the entity through the "trade or business" franchise contract.<sup>26</sup> The PUBLIC OFFICE is domiciled on federal territory but the PUBLIC OFFICER is NOT. The PUBLIC OFFICER is surety for the PUBLIC OFFICE through the "trade or business" franchise contract. Hence, the tax is an indirect excise tax as repeatedly held by the U.S. Supreme Court.<sup>27</sup> 26 U.S.C. §6671(b) and 26 U.S.C. §7343 both confirm that the legal definition of "person" for the purpose of the I.R.C. is an "officer or employee of a corporation or partnership" who has a FIDUCIARY DUTY to the public and therefore is a public officer. The "partnership" they are referring to is the franchise partnership between the OFFICE and the OFFICER. The only way that fiduciary duty could be created is through a franchise contract or quasi-contract because it is otherwise illegal to punish someone for NOT doing something. This would be forbidden by the Thirteenth Amendment as "involuntary servitude".
11. Consent of the Human Being is required to turn that PRIVATE human being into a public officer and it is a crime in violation of 18 U.S.C. §912 to unilaterally elect yourself into public office by either signing a tax form or using a Taxpayer Identification Number when NOT actually occupying said public office created under the authority of Title 5 and not Title 26 of the U.S. Code.
12. The reader should also note that it is "nonresident alien INDIVIDUALS" made liable for tax returns in 26 C.F.R. §1.6012-1(b), and NOT "nonresident aliens" who are NOT "individuals". Hence:
- 12.1. "nonresident aliens" who are NOT statutory "Individuals" or "persons" are not engaged in the "trade or business" franchise.
- 12.2. "nonresident alien INDIVIDUALS" as described in 26 C.F.R. §1.6012-1(b) ARE public officers.
13. The word "INTERNAL" within the phrase "INTERNAL Revenue Service" means INTERNAL to the U.S. government corporation, and not INTERNAL to the geographical or statutory "United States".
14. The I.R.C., Subtitles A through C behaves as a public officer kickback program disguised to "look" like a legitimate income tax. The feds have never been able to regulate or tax private conduct and only have the authority to impose duties upon their own statutory "employees" without just compensation. Hence, through "words of art", presumption,

5 an entity “resident” is whether they are engaged in a public office and therefore a statutory “trade or business” under 26
6 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26), and that residency has ABSOLUTELY NOTHING TO DO WITH THE NATIONALITY OR 7 CITIZENSHIP OR EVEN THE DOMICILE of the entity:

8 26 C.F.R. §301.7701-5 Domestic, foreign, resident, and nonresident persons.

9 *A domestic corporation is one organized or created in the United States, including only the States (and during
10 the periods when not States, the Territories of Alaska and Hawaii), and the District of Columbia, or under the
11 law of the United States or of any State or Territory. A foreign corporation is one which is not domestic. A
12 domestic corporation is a resident corporation even though it does no business and owns no property in the
13 United States. A foreign corporation engaged in trade or business within the United States is referred to in
14 the regulations in this chapter as a resident foreign corporation, and a foreign corporation not engaged in
15 trade or business within the United States, as a nonresident foreign corporation. A partnership engaged in
16 trade or business within the United States is referred to in the regulations in this chapter as a resident
17 partnership, and a partnership not engaged in trade or business within the United States, as a nonresident
18 partnership. Whether a partnership is to be regarded as resident or nonresident is not determined by the
19 nationality or residence of its members or by the place in which it was created or organized.

22 Also consistent with the content of this section, IRS Form 1040NR also describes those from American Samoa and Swains
23 Island as “U.S. nationals” (8 U.S.C. §1408) and “nonresident aliens”. The IRS 1040NR Form, block 1 filing status lists the 24 following:

25  Single resident of Canada or Mexico, or a single U.S. national

26 Then, in the IRS Form 1040 Instruction Book for 2009 on p. 8, it says the following:

27 *“U.S. national. A U.S. national is an individual who, although not a U.S. citizen, owes his or her allegiance to 28 the United States. U.S. nationals include American Samoans and Northern Mariana Islanders who chose to

30 [IRS Form 1040NR Instruction Booklet (2009), p. 8]

31 We prove throughout this document that people born within and domiciled within constitutional states of the Union are all 32 of the following, and therefore have the status equivalent to that above and are:

- 33 1. Statutory “non-resident non-persons” if not engaged in a public office.
34 2. “nationals” per 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21).
35 3. NOT “U.S.** nationals” or “nationals but not citizens of the United States** at birth” per 8 U.S.C. §1408.
36 4. NOT “nationals of the United States**” per 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22).

37 By deduction, since IRS describes those domiciled in federal territories and possessions such as Puerto Rico and American
38 Samoa as statutory “aliens” per the Internal Revenue Code, then people domiciled in states of the Union must have at least
39 the same standing, which means they are statutory “aliens” and also “nonresident aliens” for the purposes of filing income
40 tax returns. They don’t become “individuals” or the “nonresident alien individual” mentioned in 26 C.F.R. §1.6012-1(b)
41 who has a liability to file a tax return unless and until they are lawfully engaged in a public office in the U.S. government.
42 This is consistent with 26 C.F.R. §301.6109-1, which says that Taxpayer Identification Numbers are ONLY
43 MANDATORY in the case of those engaged in a statutory “trade or business”, which is defined as “the functions of a 44 public office” in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26).

<sup>28</sup> See: Internal Revenue Manual (I.R.M.), Section 4.10.7.2.8, which says you CANNOT trust or rely upon ANY IRS publication.

NOTE: By saying the above, we are NOT implying ANY of the following:

1. That the jurisdiction of the Internal Revenue Code is limited ONLY to the District of Columbia. Like all income taxes, it attaches to DOMICILE, and you can have a domicile or residence in the District of Columbia WITHOUT a physical presence there. Domicile is not where you ARE, but where you have been in the past AND CONSENT to be civilly protected.

"Thus, the Court has frequently held that domicile or residence, more substantial than mere presence in transit or sojourn, is an adequate basis for taxation, including income, property, and death taxes. Since the Fourteenth Amendment makes one a citizen of the state wherein he resides, the fact of residence creates universally reciprocal duties of protection by the state and of allegiance and support by the citizen. The latter obviously includes a duty to pay taxes, and their nature and measure is largely a political matter. Of course, the situs of property may tax it regardless of the citizenship, domicile, or residence of the owner, the most obvious illustration being a tax on realty laid by the state in which the realty is located."
 [Miller Brothers Co. v. Maryland, 347 U.S. 340 (1954)]

2. That the U.S. government is without authority to tax its own public offices. By "public office", we mean "trade or business", which is defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26) as "the functions of a public office". Instead, they can tax them ANYWHERE they are EXPRESSLY AUTHORIZED by law as required by 4 U.S.C. §72, which at this time is limited EXCLUSIVELY to the District of Columbia and the Virgin Islands. Anyone who asserts authority to tax outside the District of Columbia has the burden of PROVING with evidence that the public office subject to tax was expressly authorized to be executed in the specific place it is sought to be taxed.

TITLE 4 > CHAPTER 3 > § 72
 Sec. 72. - Public offices; at seat of Government

All offices attached to the seat of government shall be exercised in the District of Columbia, and not elsewhere, except as otherwise expressly provided by law

2 5.2.13 "State" in the Internal Revenue Code means a "federal State" and not a Union state

3 5.2.13.1 Contemporary meaning

4 In something as important as a Congressional statute, one would think that key terms like "State" would be defined so
 5 clearly as to leave no doubt about their meaning. Alas, this is not the case in the Internal Revenue Code ("IRC") brought to
 6 you by Congress. The term "State" has been deliberately defined so as to confuse the casual reader into believing that it
 7 means one of the 50 States of the Union, even though it doesn't say "50 Union states" in so many words. Throughout this
 8 section, we make a distinction between the term "United States****", which includes the 50 states of the union. This area
 9 does not include the federal areas, enclaves, or possessions or the District of Columbia, which we call the "federal zone".
 10 We also use the term "United States**", which means the "federal zone" or area encompassing federal enclaves within
 11 states, federal possessions, Guam, Puerto Rico, and the District of Columbia but not the sovereign contiguous 50 Union
 12 states. These two terms are in agreement with the two jurisdictions within the United States of America defined earlier in 13 section 5.2.12.

14 You might want to go to the beginning of this document under "Conventions Used Consistently Throughout This Book"
 15 and review the distinctions between the word "state" and "State" in federal statutes before you proceed further with reading
 16 this section in order to avoid confusion. Remember that the sequence a sovereignty was created defines the capitalization
 17 of words identifying that sovereignty, and the sequence of creation is defined earlier in section 5.1.1.

18 For the sake of comparison, we begin by crafting a definition of "State" which is deliberately designed to create absolutely
 19 no doubt or ambiguity about its meaning:

1 For the sole purpose of establishing a benchmark of clarity, the term "State" means any one of the 50 States of
 2 the Union, the District of Columbia, the territories and possessions belonging to the Congress, and the federal
 3 enclaves lawfully ceded to the Congress by any of the 50 States of the Union.

4 Now, compare this benchmark with the various definitions of the word "State" that are found in Black's Law Dictionary
 5 and in the Internal Revenue Code. Black's is a good place to start, because it clearly defines two different kinds of "states".
 6 The first kind of state defines a member of the Union, i.e., one of the 50 states which are united by and under the U.S.
 7 Constitution:

8 *The section of territory occupied by one of the United States***. One of the component commonwealths or* 9 *states of the United States of America.
 10 [emphasis added]

11 The second kind of state defines a federal "State", which is entirely different from a member of the Union:

12 *Any state of the United States**, the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, and any territory*
 13 or possession subject to the legislative authority of the United States. Uniform Probate Code, Section 1- 14 201(40).

15 [emphasis added]

16 This same definition of a federal "State" also appears elsewhere in the U.S. Codes. For instance, it appears as part of the 17 Buck Act of 1940, which is contained in 4 U.S.C. §§105-113. 4 U.S.C. §110(d) defines "State" as follows:

 19 CHAPTER 4 - THE STATES

20 (d) The term "State" includes any Territory or possession of the United States.

21 Notice carefully that a member of the Union is not defined as being "subject to the legislative authority of the United 22 States". Also, be aware that there are also several different definitions of "State" in the IRC, depending on the context. One
 23 of the most important of these is found in a chapter specifically dedicated to providing definitions, that is, Chapter 79 (not 24 exactly the front of the book). To de-code the Code, read it backwards! In this chapter of definitions, we find the 25 following:

26 When used in this title, where not otherwise distinctly expressed or manifestly incompatible with the intent
 27 thereof -- ...

28 (10) State. -- The term "State" shall be construed to include the District of Columbia, where such 29 construction is necessary to carry out provisions of this title.

30 [I.R.C. §7701(a)(10)]

31 [emphasis added]

32 Already, it is obvious that this definition leaves much to be debated because it is ambiguous and it is not nearly as clear as 33 our "established benchmark of clarity" (which will be engraved in marble a week from Tuesday). Does the definition
 34 restrict the term "State" to mean only the District of Columbia? Or does it expand the term "State" to mean the District of 35 Columbia in addition to the 50 States of the Union? And how do we decide? We would argue the that 36 confusion created by this definition on the part of the authors in Congress is 37 deliberate, because they do NOT want you to know that the correct definition of 38 "State" would clearly demonstrate their lack of jurisdiction to impose income taxes on 39 U.S. Citizens domiciled in the 50 Union states!

40 The following cite confirms that the District of Columbia qualifies as a federal "State", which is part of the federal zone:

41 4 U.S.C.S. §113

42 "(2) the term 'State' includes the District of Columbia."

1 However, the District of Columbia does not qualify as a "state", which is outside the federal zone:

2 "1. The District of Columbia and the territories are not states within the judicial clause of the Constitution
3 giving jurisdiction in cases between citizens of different states."
4 [O'Donoghue v. United States, 289 U.S. 516, 53 S.Ct. 740 (1933)]

5 The California Revenue and Taxation Code (R&TC) has a similar definition of the term "State" that is consistent with the 6 one above but is more clear:

7 17018. "State" includes the District of Columbia, and the possessions of the United States.
8 [which don't include the 50 sovereign states but do include federal areas within those states]]

11 Here's another interesting tidbit for the benefit of the reader that makes the definitions even more clear. In 26 U.S.C. §3121
12 (FICA contributions tax), the definition of "State" does not include the 50 Union states but AFTER a person has submitted
13 or filed an income tax return, described in 26 U.S.C. §6103, the term "State" DOES include the 50 Union states! Once
14 again, more obfuscation and subterfuge to confuse as to when the 50 Union states actually apply to the tax code. AFTER 15 you submit a return they gotcha, and then it's o.k. to give the definition that includes the 50 Union states. So, the tax code
16 even defines specifically what a real state from among the several states is when the authors of the code wanted it to define 17 it clearly.

27 includes the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, _
28 Guam, and American Samoa. An individual who is a citizen of the 29 Commonwealth of Puerto Rico (but not otherwise a citizen of the 30 United States) shall be considered, for purposes of this section, as a 31 citizen of the United States.

33 Sec. 6103. Confidentiality and disclosure of returns and return
34 information

35 The term "State" means -

- 36 (A) any of the 50 States, the District of Columbia, the 37 Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, the Canal
38 Zone, Guam, American Samoa, and the Commonwealth of the 39 Northern Mariana Islands, and _
40 (B) for purposes of subsections (a)(2), (b)(4), (d)(1), 41 (i) any of the 50 States, the District of Columbia, the 42 (i) with a population in excess of 250,000 (as determined
43 under the most recent decennial United States census data
44 available),
45 (ii) which imposes a tax on income or wages, and 46 (iii) with which the Secretary (in his sole discretion) has 47 entered into an agreement regarding disclosure.

48 Now are you convinced that what we say is true about the definition of "United States" within the Internal Revenue Code?
49 Now do you understand why the IRS won't define the term "United States" anywhere on their website or in ANY of their
50 publications or forms relative to Subtitle A Income Taxes? We don't see how you couldn't be convinced, but if you STILL 51 aren't convinced, we refer you to sections 4.6 and 4.9 earlier for further study on this fascinating subject.

52 5.2.13.2 Effect of "includes": Doesn't add to the definition

1 Even some harsh critics of federal income taxation, like Otto Skinner, have argued that ambiguities like this are best
2 resolved by interpreting the word "include" in an expansive sense, rather than in a restrictive sense. Some legal dictionaries
3 define the term "includes" to mean "in addition to" in some instances, for instance. To support his argument, Skinner cites
4 the definitions of "includes" and "including" that are actually found in the Code:

5 Includes and Including. -- The terms "includes" and "including" when used in a definition contained in this title
6 shall not be deemed to exclude other things otherwise within the meaning of the term defined.
7 [I.R.C. §7701(c), emphasis added]

8 Skinner reasons that the Internal Revenue Code provides for an expanded definition of the term "includes" when it is used
9 in other definitions contained in that Code. Using his logic, then, the definition of "State" at IRC Sec. 7701(a)(10) must be
10 interpreted to mean the District of Columbia, in addition to other things. But what other things? Are the 50 Union states to 11 be included also? What about the territories and possessions? And what about the federal enclaves ceded to Congress by 12 the 50 Union states? If the definition itself does not specify any of these things, then where, pray tell, are these other things
13 "distinctly expressed" in the Code? If these other things are distinctly expressed elsewhere in the Code, is their expression
14 in the Code manifestly compatible with the intent of that Code? Should we include also a state of confusion to our 15 understanding of the Code?

16 Quite apart from the meaning of "includes" and "including", defining the term "include" in an expansive sense leads to an
17 absurd result that is manifestly incompatible with the Constitution. If the expansion results in defining the term "State" to 18 mean the District of Columbia in addition to the 50 States of the Union, then these 50 Union states must be situated within
19 the federal zone. Remember, the federal zone is the area of land over which the Congress has unrestricted, exclusive
20 legislative jurisdiction. But, the Congress does not have unrestricted, exclusive legislative jurisdiction over any of the 50
21 Union states. It is bound by the chains of the Constitution in this other zone, to paraphrase Thomas Jefferson. Specifically,
22 Congress is required to apportion direct taxes which it levies inside the 50 Union states. This is a key limitation on the 23 power of Congress; it has never been expressly repealed (as Prohibition was repealed).

24 Other problems arise from Skinner's reasoning. First of all, like so much of the IRC, the definitions of "includes" and 25 "including" are outright deceptions in their own right. A grammatical approach can be used to demonstrate that these 26 definitions are thinly disguised tautologies. Note, in particular, where the Code states that these terms "shall not be deemed 27 to exclude other things". This is a double negative. Two negatives make a positive. This phrase, then, is equivalent to 28 saying that the terms "shall be deemed to include other things". Continuing with this line of reasoning, the definition of 29 "includes" includes "include", resulting in an obvious tautology. (We just couldn't resist.) Forgive them, for they know not 30 what they do.

31 The definitions of "includes" and "including" can now be rewritten so as to "include other things otherwise within the 32 meaning of the term defined". So, what things are otherwise within the meaning of the term "State", if those things
33 are not distinctly expressed in the original definition? You may be dying to put the 50 States of the Union among those 34 things that are "otherwise within the meaning of the term", but you are using common sense. The Internal Revenue Code
35 was not written with common sense in mind; it was written with deception in mind. When the authors want to deliberately
36 confuse and deceive you in order to enlarge their jurisdiction, they will invent a new definition or "term of art" that
37 conflicts with the layman's definition. The rules of statutory construction apply a completely different standard. Author
38 Ralph Whittington has this to say about the specialized definitions that are exploited by lawyers, attorneys, lawmakers, and 39 judges:

40 The Legislature means what it says. If the definition section states that whenever the term "white" is used
41 (within that particular section or the entire code), the term includes "black," it means that "white" is "black"
42 and you are not allowed to make additions or deletions at your convenience. You must follow the directions of
44 [Omnibus, Addendum II, p. 2]

45 Unfortunately for Otto Skinner and others who try valiantly to argue the expansive meaning of "includes" and "including",
46 Treasury Decision No. 3980, Vol. 29, January-December 1927, and some 80 court cases have adopted the restrictive
47 meaning of these terms:

48 The supreme Court of the State ... also considered that the word "including" was used as a word of 49 enlargement, the learned court being of the opinion that such was its ordinary sense. With this we cannot 50 concur. It is its exceptional sense, as the dictionaries and cases indicate.
51 [Montello Salt Co. v. State of Utah, 221 U.S. 452 (1911)]
52 [emphasis added]

Moreover, the "void for vagueness" doctrine is deeply rooted in our right to due process (under the Fifth Amendment) and our right to know the nature and cause of any criminal accusation (under the Sixth Amendment). The latter right goes far beyond the contents of any criminal indictment. The right to know the nature and cause of any accusation starts with the statute which a defendant is accused of violating. A statute must be sufficiently specific and unambiguous in all its terms, in order to define and give adequate notice of the kind of conduct which it forbids.

The essential purpose of the "void for vagueness doctrine" with respect to interpretation of a criminal statute, is to warn individuals of the criminal consequences of their conduct. ... Criminal statutes which fail to give due notice that an act has been made criminal before it is done are unconstitutional deprivations of due process of law.

If it fails to indicate with reasonable certainty just what conduct the legislature prohibits, a statute is necessarily void for uncertainty, or "void for vagueness" as the doctrine is called. In the De Cadena case, the U.S. District Court listed a number of excellent authorities for the origin of this doctrine (see Lanzetta v. New Jersey, 306 U.S. 451) and for the development of the doctrine (see Scrows v. United States, 325 U.S. 91, Williams v. United States, 341 U.S. 97, and Jordan v. De George, 341 U.S. 223). Any prosecution which is based upon a vague statute must fail, together with the statute itself. A vague criminal statute is unconstitutional for violating the 5th and 6th Amendments. The U.S. Supreme Court has emphatically agreed:

[1] That the terms of a penal statute creating a new offense must be sufficiently explicit to inform those who are subject to it what conduct on their part will render them liable to its penalties is a well-recognized requirement, consonant alike with ordinary notions of fair play and the settled rules of law; and a statute which either forbids or requires the doing of an act in terms so vague that men of common intelligence must necessarily guess at its meaning and differ as to its application violates the first essential of due process of law.

The debate that is currently raging over the correct scope and proper application of the IRC is obvious, empirical proof that men of common intelligence are differing with each other. For example, The Informer's conclusions appear to require definitions of "includes" and "including" which are expansive, not restrictive. The matter could be easily decided if the IRC would instead exhibit sound principles of statutory construction, state clearly and directly that "includes" and "including" are meant to be used in the expansive sense, and itemize those specific persons, places, and/or things that are "otherwise within the meaning of the terms defined". If the terms "includes" and "including" must be used in the restrictive sense, the IRC should explain, clearly and directly, that expressions like "includes only" and "including only" must be used, to eliminate vagueness completely.

Alternatively, the IRC could exhibit sound principles of statutory construction by explaining clearly and directly that "includes" and "including" are always meant to be used in the restrictive sense.

Better yet, abandon the word "include" entirely, together with all of its grammatical variations, and use instead the word "means" (which does not suffer from a long history of semantic confusion). It would also help a lot if the 50 Union states were consistently capitalized and the federal states were not. The reverse of this convention can be observed in the regulations for Title 31 (see 31 C.F.R. Sections 51.2 and 52.2).

These, again, are excellent grounds for deciding that the IRC is vague and therefore null and void. Of course, if the real intent is to expand the federal zone in order to subjugate the 50 Union states under the dominion of Federal States (defined along something like ZIP code boundaries a la the Buck Act, codified in Title 4), and to replace the sovereign Republics with a monolithic socialist dictatorship, carved up into arbitrary administrative "districts", that is another problem altogether. Believe it or not, the case law which has interpreted the Buck Act admits to the existence of a "State within a state"! So, which State within a state are you in? Or should we be asking this question: "In the State within which state are you?" (Remember: a preposition is a word you should never end a sentence with!)

The absurd results which obtain from expanding the term "State" to mean the 50 Union states, however, are problems which will not go away, no matter how much we clarify the definitions of "includes" and "including" in the IRC. There are 49 other U.S. Codes which have the exact same problem. Moreover, the mountain of material evidence impugning the ratification of the so-called 16th Amendment should leave no doubt in anybody's mind that Congress must still apportion all direct taxes levied inside the sovereign borders of the 50 Union states. The apportionment restrictions have never been repealed.

5.2.13.3 Historical context

An historical approach yields similar results. Without tracing the myriad of income tax statutes which Congress has enacted over the years, it is instructive to examine the terminology found in a revenue statute from the Civil War era. The definition of "State" is almost identical to the one quoted from the current IRC at the start of this chapter. On June 30, 1864, Congress enacted legislation which contained the following definition:

The word "State," when used in this Title, shall be construed to include the Territories and the District of Columbia, where such construction is necessary to carry out its provisions.

[Title 35, Internal Revenue, Chapter 1, page 601]

*[Revised Statutes of the United States**]*

[43rd Congress, 1st Session, 1873-74]

Aside from adding "the Territories", the two definitions are nearly identical. The Territories at that point in time were Washington, Utah, Dakota, Nebraska, Colorado, New Mexico, and the Indian Territory.

One of the most fruitful and conclusive methods for establishing the meaning of the term "State" in the IRC is to trace the history of changes to the United States Codes which occurred when Alaska and Hawaii were admitted to the Union. Because other authors have already done an exhaustive job on this history, there is no point in re-inventing their wheels here.

It is instructive to illustrate these Code changes as they occurred in the IRC definition of "State" found at the start of this chapter. The first Code amendment became effective on January 3, 1959, when Alaska was admitted to the Union:

Amended 1954 Code Sec. 7701(a)(10) by striking out "Territories", and by substituting "Territory of Hawaii".

[I.R.C. §7701(a)(10)]

The second Code amendment became effective on August 21, 1959, when Hawaii was admitted to the Union:

Amended 1954 Code Sec. 7701(a)(10) by striking out "the Territory of Hawaii and" immediately after the word "include".

[I.R.C. §7701(a)(10)]

Applying these code changes in reverse order, we can reconstruct the IRC definitions of "State" by using any word processor and simple "textual substitution" as follows:

*Time 1: Alaska is a U.S.** Territory*

*Hawaii is a U.S.** Territory*

7701(a)(10): The term "State" shall be construed to include the Territories and the District of Columbia, where such construction is necessary to carry out provisions of this title.

Alaska joins the Union. Strike out "Territories" and substitute "Territory of Hawaii":

Time 2: Alaska is a State of the Union

*Hawaii is a U.S.** Territory*

7701(a)(10): The term "State" shall be construed to include the Territory of Hawaii and the District of Columbia, where such construction is necessary to carry out provisions of this title.

Hawaii joins the Union. Strike out "the Territory of Hawaii and" immediately after the word "include":

Time 3: Alaska is a State of the Union

Hawaii is a State of the Union

1 7701(a)(10): The term "State" shall be construed to include the District of Columbia, where such
2 construction is necessary to carry out provisions of this title.

3 Author Lori Jacques has therefore concluded that the term "State" now includes only the District of Columbia, because the
4 former Territories of Alaska and Hawaii have been admitted to the Union, Puerto Rico has been granted the status of a
5 Commonwealth, and the Philippine Islands have been granted their independence (see United States Citizen versus 6 National of the United States, page 9, paragraph 5). It is easy to see how author Lori Jacques could have overlooked the 7 following reference to Puerto Rico, found near the end of the IRC:

8 Commonwealth of Puerto Rico. -- Where not otherwise distinctly expressed or manifestly incompatible with the 9 *intent thereof, references in this title to possessions of the United States** shall be treated as also referring to* 10 the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico.
11 [I.R.C. §7701(d)]

12 In order to conform to the requirements of the Social Security scheme, a completely different definition of "State" is found
13 in the those sections of the IRC that deal with Social Security. This definition was also amended on separate occasions
14 when Alaska and Hawaii were admitted to the Union. The first Code amendment became effective on January 3, 1959,
15 when Alaska was admitted:

16 Amended 1954 Code Sec. 3121(e)(1), as it appears in the amendment note for P.L. 86-778, by striking out
17 "Alaska," where it appeared following "includes".
18 [I.R.C. §3121(e)(1)]

19 The second Code amendment became effective on August 21, 1959, when Hawaii was admitted:

20 Amended 1954 Code Sec. 3121(e)(1), as it appears in the amendment note for P.L. 86-778, by striking out
21 "Hawaii," where it appeared following "includes".
22 [I.R.C. §3121(e)(1)]

23 Applying these code changes in reverse order, as above, we can reconstruct the definitions of "State" in this section of the 24 IRC as follows:

25 *Time 1: Alaska is a U.S.** Territory*

26 *Hawaii is a U.S.** Territory*

27 3121(e)(1): The term "State" includes Alaska, Hawaii, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, and the 28 Virgin Islands.

29 Alaska joins the Union. Strike out "Alaska," where it appeared following "includes":

30 Time 2: Alaska is a State of the Union

31 *Hawaii is a U.S.** Territory*

32 3121(e)(1): The term "State" includes Hawaii, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, and the Virgin
33 Islands.

35 Time 3: Alaska is a State of the Union

37 3121(e)(1): The term "State" includes the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, and the Virgin Islands.

38 Puerto Rico becomes a Commonwealth. For services performed after 1960, Guam and American Samoa are added to the
39 definition:

40 Time 4: Puerto Rico becomes a Commonwealth

Guam and American Samoa join Social Security

3121(e)(1): The term "State" includes the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, Guam, and American Samoa.

Notice carefully how Alaska and Hawaii only fit these definitions of "State" before they joined the Union. It is most revealing that these Territories became States when they were admitted to the Union, and yet the United States Codes had to be changed because Alaska and Hawaii were defined in those Codes as "States" before admission to the Union, but not afterwards. This apparent anomaly is perfectly clear, once the legal and deliberately misleading definition of "State" is understood. The changes made to the United States Codes when Alaska joined the Union were assembled in the Alaska Omnibus Act. The changes made to the federal Codes when Hawaii joined the Union were assembled in the Hawaii Omnibus Act.

The following table summarizes the sections of the IRC that were affected by these two Acts:

Table 5-23: History of Code Changes for States Joining the Union

IRC Section changed:	Alaska joins:	Hawaii joins:
-----	-----	-----
2202	X	X
3121(e)(1)	X	X
3306(j)	X	X
4221(d)(4)	X	X
4233(b)	X	X
4262(c)(1)	X	X
4502(5)	X	X
4774	X	X
7621(b)	X	<-- Note!
7653(d)	X	X
7701(a)(9)	X	X
7701(a)(10)	X	X

I.R.C. §7621(b) sticks out like a sore thumb when the changes are arrayed in this fashion. The Alaska Omnibus Act modified this section of the IRC, but the Hawaii Omnibus Act did not. Let's take a close look at this section and see if it reveals any important clues:

Sec. 7621. Internal Revenue Districts.

(a) Establishment and Alteration. -- The President shall establish convenient internal revenue districts for the purpose of administering the internal revenue laws. The President may from time to time alter such districts.

Now witness the chronology of amendments to I.R.C. §7621(b), entitled "Boundaries", as follows:

7621(b): Boundaries. -- For the purpose mentioned in subsection (a), the President may subdivide any State, Territory, or the District of Columbia, or may unite two or more States or Territories into one district.

2 1/3/59 Hawaii is a U.S. ** Territory.

3 7621(b): Boundaries. -- For the purpose mentioned in subsection (a), the President may subdivide any State,
4 Territory, or the District of Columbia, or may unite into one District two or more States or a Territory and one
5 or more States.

8 2/1/77 Hawaii is a State of the Union.

9 7621(b): Boundaries. -- For the purpose mentioned in subsection (a), the President may subdivide any State
10 or the District of Columbia, or may unite into one district two or more States.

11 The reason why the Hawaii Omnibus Act did not change section 7621(b) is not apparent from reading the statute, nor has 12 time permitted the research necessary to determine why this section was changed in 1977 and not in 1959. After Alaska
13 joined the Union, Hawaii was technically the only remaining Territory. This may explain why the term "Territories" was 14 changed to "Territory" at Time 2 above. However, this is a relatively minor matter, when compared to the constitutional
15 issue that is involved here. There is an absolute constitutional restriction against subdividing or joining any of the 50
16 Union states, or any parts thereof, without the consent of Congress and of the Legislatures of the States affected. This
17 restriction is very much like the restriction against direct taxes within the 50 Union states without apportionment:

18 New States may be admitted by the Congress into this Union; but no new State shall be formed or erected
19 within the Jurisdiction of any other State; nor any State be formed by the Junction of two or more States, or
21 [Constitution for the United States of America, Article 4, Section 3, Clause 1, emphasis added]

22 This point about new States caught the keen eye of author and scholar Eustace Mullins. In his controversial and heart-
23 breaking book entitled A Writ for Martyrs, Mullins establishes the all-important link between the Internal Revenue Service
24 and the Federal Reserve System, and does so by charging that Internal Revenue Districts are "new states" unlawfully
25 established within the jurisdiction of legal States of the Union, as follows:

26 The income tax amendment and the Federal Reserve Act were passed in the same year, 1913, because they
27 *function as an essential team, and were planned to do so. The Federal Reserve districts and the Internal 28 Revenue Districts are "new states," which have been established within the jurisdiction of legal states of the
29 Union.
30 [emphasis added]

31 Remember, the federal zone is the area of land over which the Congress exercises an unrestricted, exclusive legislative
32 jurisdiction. The Congress does not have unrestricted, exclusive legislative jurisdiction over any of the 50 Union states. It
33 is bound by the chains of the Constitution. This point is so very important, it bears repeating throughout this book.
34 As in the apportionment rule for direct taxes and the uniformity rule for indirect taxes, Congress cannot join or divide any
35 of the 50 Union states without the explicit approval of the Legislatures of the State(s) involved. This means that Congress
36 cannot unilaterally delegate such a power to the President. Congress cannot lawfully exercise (nor delegate) a power which 37 it simply does not have.

38 How, then, is it possible for I.R.C. Section 7621(b) of the IRC to give this power to the President? The answer is very 39 simple: the territorial scope of the Internal Revenue Code is the "federal zone". The IRC only applies to the land that is 40 internal to that zone. Indeed, a leading legal encyclopedia leaves no doubt that the terms "municipal law" and "internal 41 law" are equivalent:

42 International law and Municipal or internal law.

43 ... [P]ositive law is classified as international law, the law which governs the interrelations of sovereign states,
44 and municipal law, which is, when used in contradistinction to international law, the branch of the law which 45 governs the internal affairs of a sovereign state.

1 However, the term "municipal law" has several meanings, and in order to avoid confusing these meanings
 2 authorities have found more satisfactory Bentham's phrase "internal law," this being the equivalent of the 3 French term "droit interne," to express the concept of internal law of a sovereign state.

4 The phrase "municipal law" is derived from the Roman law, and when employed as indicating the internal law
 5 of a sovereign state the word "municipal" has no specific reference to modern municipalities, but rather has
 6 a broader, more extensive meaning, as discussed in the C.J.S. definition Municipal.

7 [52A Corpus Juris Secundum (C.J.S.), Law, Sections 741, 742 ("Law"), emphasis added]

8 If the territorial scope of the IRC were the 50 States of the Union, then section 7621(b) would, all by itself, render the entire
 9 Code unconstitutional for violating clause 4:3:1 of the Constitution (see above). Numerous other constitutional violations
 10 would also occur if the territorial scope of the IRC were the 50 Union states. A clear and unambiguous definition of "State"
 11 must be known before status and jurisdiction can be decided with certainty. The IRC should be nullified for vagueness;
 12 this much is certain.

13 After seeing and verifying all of the evidence discussed above, the editors of a bulletin published by the Monetary Realist
 14 Society wrote the following long comment about the obvious problems it raises:

15 A serious reader could come to the conclusion that Missouri, for example, is not one of the United States
 16 referred to in the code. This conclusion is encouraged by finding that the code refers to Hawaii and Alaska as 17 states of the United States before their admission to the union! Is the IRS telling us that the only states over
 18 which it has jurisdiction are Guam, Washington D.C., Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, etc.? Well, why not 19 write and find out? Don't expect an answer, though. Your editor has asked this question and sought to have 20 both of his Senators and one Congresswoman prod the IRS for a reply when none was forthcoming. Nothing.

21 And isn't that strange? It would be so simple for the service to reply, "Of course Missouri is one of the United 22 States referred to in the code" if that were, indeed, the case. What can one conclude from the government's 23 refusal to deal with this simple question except that the government cannot admit the truth about United States
 24 citizenship? I admit that the question sounds silly. Everybody knows that Missouri is one of the United States,
 25 right? Sure, like everybody knows what a dollar is! But the IRS deals with "silly" questions every day, often at 26 great length. After all, the code occupies many feet of shelf space, and covers almost any conceivable situation.
 27 It just doesn't seem to be able to cope with the simplest questions!

28 ["Some Thoughts on the Income Tax"]

29 [The Bulletin of the Monetary Realist Society, March 1993, Number 152, page 2, emphasis added]

30 Although this book was originally intended to focus on the Internal Revenue Code, the other 49 United States Codes
 31 contain a wealth of additional proof that the term "State" does not always refer to one of the 50 States of the Union. Just to 32 illustrate, the following statutory definition of the term "State" was found in Title 8, the Immigration and Nationality Act,
 33 as late as the year 1987:

34 (36) The term "State" includes (except as used in section 310(a) of title III [8 USCS Section 1421(a)])
 35 the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, Guam, and the Virgin Islands of the United States.
 36 [8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(36), circa 1987, emphasis added]

37 The "exception" cited in this statute tells the whole story here. In section 1421, Congress needed to refer to courts of the 50
 38 Union states, because their own local constitutions and laws have granted to those courts the requisite jurisdiction to 39 naturalize. For this reason, Congress made an explicit exception to the standard, federal definition of "State" quoted above.
 40 The following is the paragraph in section 1421 which contained the exceptional uses of the term "State" (i.e. Union state, 41 not federal state):

42 1421. Jurisdiction to naturalize

43 (a) Exclusive jurisdiction to naturalize persons as citizens of the United States** is hereby conferred
 44 upon the following specified courts: District courts of the United States now existing, or which may hereafter
 45 be established by Congress in any State... also all courts of record in any State or Territory now existing, or 46 which may hereafter be created, having a seal, a clerk, and jurisdiction in actions at law or equity, or law and 47 equity, in which the amount in controversy is unlimited.

48 [8 U.S.C. §1421(a), circa 1987, emphasis added]

49 In a section entitled "State Courts", the interpretive notes and decisions for this statute contain clear proof that the phrase
 50 "in any State" here refers to any state of the Union (e.g. New York):

1 Under 8 USCS Section 1421, jurisdiction to naturalize was conferred upon New York State Supreme Court by
 2 virtue of its being court of record and having jurisdiction in actions at law and equity. Re Reilly (1973) 73
 3 Misc.2d. 1073, 344 N.Y.S.2d. 531.
 4 [8 U.S.C.S. §1421, Interpretive Notes and Decisions, Section II. State Courts, emphasis added]

5 Subsequently, Congress removed the reference to this exception in the amended definition of "State", as follows:

6 (36) The term "State" includes the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, Guam, and the Virgin Islands of the
 8 [8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(36), circa 1992]

9 Two final definitions prove, without any doubt, that the IRC can also define the terms "State" and "United States" to mean
 10 the 50 Union states as well as the other federal states. The very existence of multiple definitions provides convincing
 11 proof that the IRC is intentionally vague, particularly in the section dedicated to general definitions (I.R.C.
 12 §7701(a)). The following definition is taken from Subtitle D, Miscellaneous Excise Taxes, Subchapter A, Tax on 13 Petroleum (which we all pay taxes at the pump to use):

14 (A) In General. -- The term "United States" means the 50 States, the District of Columbia, the 15 Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, any possession of the United States, the Commonwealth of the Northern 16 Mariana Islands, and the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands. [!]
 17 [I.R.C. §4612(a)(4)(A), emphasis added]

18 Notice that this definition uses the term "means". Why is this definition so clear, in stark contrast to other IRC definitions
 19 of the "United States"? Author Ralph Whittington provides the simple, if not obvious, answer:

20 *The preceding is a true Import Tax, as allowed by the Constitution; it contains all the indicia of being Uniform,
 21 and therefore passes the Constitutionality test and can operate within the 50 Sovereign States. The language of 22 this Revenue Act is simple, specific and definitive, and it would be impossible to attach the "Void for Vagueness 23 Doctrine" to it.
 24 [The Omnibus, page 83, emphasis added]*

25 The following definition of "State" is required only for those Code sections that deal with the sharing of tax return
 26 information between the federal government and the 50 States of the Union. In this case, the 50 States need to be 27 mentioned in the definition. So, the lawmakers can do it when they need to (and not do it, in order to put the rest of us into 28 a state of confusion, within a state of the Union):

29 (5) State -- The term "State" means -- [!]

30 (A) any of the 50 States, the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, the 31 Canal Zone, Guam, American Samoa, and the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands ....
 32 [I.R.C. §6103(b)(5), emphasis added]

33 It is noteworthy [!] that these sections of the IRC also utilize the term "means" instead of the terms "includes" and 34 "including", and instead of the phrase "shall be construed to include". It is certainly not impossible to be clear. If it were
 35 impossible to be clear, then just laws would not be possible at all, and the Constitution could never have come into 36 existence anywhere on this planet. Authors like The Informer (as he calls himself) consider the very existence of multiple
 37 definitions of "State" and "United States" to be highly significant proof of fluctuating statutory intent, even though a
 38 definition of "intent" is nowhere to be found in the Code itself. Together with evidence from the Omnibus Acts, these 39 fluctuating definitions also expose perhaps the greatest fiscal fraud that has ever been perpetrated upon any people
 40 at any time in the history of the world.

41 Having researched all facets of the law in depth for more than ten full years, we summarize what we have learned thus far
 42 with a careful precision that was unique for its time:

43 *The term "States" in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) is referring to the federal states of Guam, Virgin Islands, Etc., and 44 NOT the 50 States of the Union. Congress cannot write a municipal law to apply to the human "non-resident
 45 non-persons" (constitutional but not statutory Citizens) domiciled within States of the Union. Yes, the IRS can 46 go into the States of the Union by Treasury Decision Order, to seek out those "taxpayers" who are subject to the 47 tax, be they a class of individuals that are statutory "United States** citizens", or statutory "resident aliens".
 48 They also can go after nonresident aliens that are under the regulatory corporate jurisdiction of the United
 49 States**, but only when they are "effectively connected with a trade or business with the United States**" or 50 have made income from a "source within the United States****"....*

1 [emphasis added]

2 Nevertheless, despite a clarity that was rare, author Lori Jacques has found good reasons to dispute even this statement. In
3 a private communication, she explained that the Office of the Federal Register has issued a statement indicating that
4 Treasury Department Orders ("TDO") 150-10 and 150-37 (regarding taxation) were not published in the Federal Register.
5 Evidently, there are still no published orders from the Secretary of the Treasury giving the Commissioner of 6 Internal Revenue the requisite authority to enforce the Internal Revenue Code within the 50 States of the Union.

7 Furthermore, under Title 3, Section 103, the President of the United States, by means of Presidential Executive Order, has
8 no delegated authority to enforce the IRC within the 50 States of the Union. Treasury Department Order No. 150-10 can be
9 found in Commerce Clearinghouse Publication 6585 (an unofficial publication). Section 5 reads as follows:

10 U.S. Territories and Insular Possessions. The Commissioner shall, to the extent of authority otherwise vested in 11 him, provide for the administration of the United States internal revenue laws in the U.S. Territories and insular 12 possessions and other authorized areas of the world.

13 Thus, the available evidence indicates that the only authority delegated to the Internal Revenue Service is to enforce
14 tax treaties with foreign territories, U.S. territories and possessions, and Puerto Rico. To be consistent with the law,
15 Treasury Department Orders, particularly TDO's 150-10 and 150-37, needed to be published in the Federal Register. Thus,
16 given the absence of published authority delegations within the 50 Union states, the obvious conclusion is that the various
17 Treasury Department orders found at Internal Revenue Manual 1229 have absolutely no legal bearing, force, or effect on 18 those who are Constitutional but not Statutory Citizens domiciled within the 50 Union states. Awesome, yes? Our hats are 19 off, once again, to Lori Jacques for her superb legal research.

20 The astute reader will notice another basic disagreement between authors Lori Jacques and this document. Lori Jacques
21 concludes that the term "State" now includes only the District of Columbia, a conclusion that is supported by IRC Sec.
22 7701(a)(10). We, on the other hand, conclude that the term "States" refers to the federal states of Guam, Virgin Islands, etc.
23 These two conclusions are obviously incompatible, because singular and plural must, by law, refer to the same things. (See 24 Title 1 of the United States Code for rules of federal statutory construction).

25 It is important to realize that both conclusions were reached by people who have invested a great deal of earnest time and
26 energy studying the relevant law, regulations, and court decisions. If these honest Americans can come to such 27 diametrically opposed conclusions, after competent and sincere efforts to find the truth, this is all the more reason
28 why the Code should be declared null and void for vagueness. Actually, this is all the more reason why we should all
29 be pounding nails into its coffin, by every lawful method available to boycott this octopus. The First Amendment
30 guarantees our fundamental right to boycott arbitrary government, by our words and by our deeds.

31 Likewise, Congress is not empowered to delegate unilateral authority to the President to subdivide or to join any of the 50
32 Union states. There are many other constitutional violations which result from expanding the term "State" to mean the 50
33 States of the Union. In this context, the mandates and prohibitions found in the Bill of Rights are immediately obvious,
34 particularly as they apply to Union state Citizens (as distinct from United States** citizens a/k/a federal citizens).
35 Clarifying the definitions of "includes" and "including" in the IRC is one thing; clarifying the exact extent of sovereign
36 jurisdiction is quite another. Congress is just not sovereign within the borders of the 50 Union states.

37 Sorry, all you Senators and Representatives. When you took office, you did not take an oath to uphold and defend the Ten
38 Commandments. You did not take an oath to uphold and defend the Uniform Commercial Code. You did not take an oath
39 to uphold and defend the Communist Manifesto, Karl Marx. You did take an oath to uphold and defend the Constitution
40 for the United States of America.

41 It should be obvious, at this point, that capable authors like Lori Jacques and The Informer do agree that the 50 Union states
42 do not belong in the standard definition of "State" because they are in a class that is different from the class known as 43 federal states. Here's the way Congressman Barbara Kennelly put in a letter received by one reader?

44 Within the borders of the 50 States, the "geographical" extent of exclusive federal jurisdiction is strictly 45 confined to the federal enclaves; this extent does not encompass the 50 States themselves.

46 We cannot blame the average American for failing to appreciate this subtlety. The confusion that results from the 47 vagueness we observe is inherent in the Code and evidently intentional, which raises some very serious questions

1 concerning the real intent of that Code in the first place. Could money have anything to do with it? That question answers
2 itself.

3 For further information about the content of this subsection and the extent of federal jurisdiction, see section 5.4 in the Tax
4 Fraud Prevention Manual, Form #06.008. We also have an exhaustive study into federal jurisdiction found at:

5 <http://famguardian.org/Subjects/LawAndGovt/Articles/FedJurisdiction/FedJuris.htm>

6 5.2.14 Separation of Powers Between State and Federal Governments

7 States of the Union are sovereign over their territories, as is the U.S. Government over its territories and lands. Sovereignty
8 implies exclusive jurisdiction to govern a geographic area. The 50 Union states therefore control everything within their
9 respective borders with very few exceptions, and we identify what those exceptions are in section 6.4.9 of the Tax Fraud
10 Prevention Manual, Form #06.008. The federal government exclusively controls everything within the District of 11 Columbia and all federal territories, possessions and enclaves within the state, collectively called the “federal zone”. The 12 federal zone does NOT include the 50 Union states but does include “the States”. The definition of “State” in IRC section
13 7701(a)(10) and 4 U.S.C. §110(d) and the definition of “United States” found in IRC section 7701(a)(9) all agree with this 14 conclusion that the jurisdictions of the state and Federal Governments are mutually exclusive territorially.

15 TITLE 4 - FLAG AND SEAL, SEAT OF GOVERNMENT, AND THE STATES
16 CHAPTER 4 - THE STATES

17 Sec. 110. Same; definitions

18 (d) The term "State" includes any Territory or possession of the United States.

19 As we pointed out in section 3.12.1.23, the definition of the term “United States” in I.R.C., Subtitle A only includes the 20 federal territories and possessions and the District of Columbia, including Puerto Rico, Guam, etc, which are all part of the 21 “federal zone”. I.R.C., Subtitles A and C can therefore ONLY apply to persons domiciled in the “federal zone” and not to
22 areas such as the 50 Union states where the federal government has only subject matter but not general/exclusive
23 jurisdiction. If one of the 50 Union states wants to tax the federal government or its territories, then the federal government
24 must consent to it, which is exactly what the Buck Act of 1940 found in 4 U.S.C. §§105-113 authorizes. Likewise, if the
25 federal government wants to tax one of the 50 Union states or persons domiciled in one of the 50 Union states, then the 26 state and/or the Citizen in the state must explicitly and individually consent to it because both the states and the Citizens in 27 the states are Sovereign. They manifest this consent by filling out federal forms to misrepresent their domicile as being 28 within the “United States”. There is a longstanding separation between the state and Federal governments or “political 29 units”. That separation is so distinct, that the states and the incomes of the Americans in each state are “foreign” with 30 respect to each other’s jurisdictions. Likewise the income of Americans of the 50 Union states is “foreign” with respect to 31 the jurisdiction of the federal United States** (the federal zone). The below court finding of the Supreme Court helps to 32 justify and clarify this conclusion:

34 [N.Y. re: Merriam, 36 N.E. 505, 141 N.Y. 479, Affirmed 16 S.Ct. 1973, 41 L.Ed. 287]

35 This conclusion is also in agreement with what happened during the Revolutionary war. Britain had to sign treaties
36 separately with each of the 13 colonies to end the war, rather than with the United States Government alone, because each 37 state was sovereign!

38 There are two exceptions to this mutual exclusivity of territorial jurisdiction between state and Federal Governments. The 39 first exception is a product of Article 1, Section 8, Clause 3 of the U.S. Constitution:

40 Article I, Section 8, Clause 3: “To regulate Commerce with foreign Nations, and among the several States, and 41 with the Indian Tribes;”

42 This means the federal government can, for instance, regulate weights and measures, transportation, and communication
43 systems which facilitate commerce among the several states. This is where the authority for establishing the Bureau of 44 Weights and Measures and the Federal Communications Commission (FCC) comes from. The above clause also conveys
45 the authority to tax imports in the form of excises, duties, and imposts. Therefore, within states of the Union, the only type

1 of tax the federal government may impose is a tax on imports. The power over EXTERNAL taxation by the federal
2 government is what is called “plenary” in the legal field, which means it is exclusive. That tax is collected at sea ports, at 3 airports, and at border crossings ONLY. This type of taxing jurisdiction is subject matter jurisdiction, and does not derive
4 from territorial jurisdiction. Every other subject of taxation within states of the Union is under the exclusive and plenary
5 jurisdiction of your state government.

6 The second point of overlap of jurisdiction is the occurrence of federal property within the 50 Union states. This includes
7 such things as military bases, Indian Reservations, Post Offices, National Parks, etc. The Internal Revenue Code, believe it
8 or not, actually refers to these areas as “States” in section 7701(a)(10). All of these areas are described as “enclaves” within 9 states and count as federal territory over which Congress and the U.S. Government have exclusive, plenary jurisdiction and
10 control and which are part of the “federal zone”. If you took all of the federal enclaves within a sovereign state and 11 collected them together, that area would be referred to as a “State” within 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(10) and the Buck Act found
12 in 4 U.S.C. §110(d).

13 Other than these two exceptions, the Federal Government has no Constitutional authority within the borders of the 50
14 Union states outside of the “federal zone”.

15 5.2.15 The 50 Union states are “Foreign Countries” and “foreign states” with Respect to the Federal Government

16 The terms “foreign” and “domestic” are opposites. There are two contexts in which these terms may be used:

- 17 1. Constitutional: The U.S. Constitution is political document, and therefore this context is also sometimes called 18 “political jurisdiction”.
- 19 2. Statutory: Congress writes statutes or “acts of Congress” to manage property dedicated to their care. This context is 20 also called “legislative jurisdiction” or “civil jurisdiction”.

22 Any attempt to avoid discussing which context is intended should be perceived as an attempt to confuse, deceive, and 23 enslave you by corrupt politicians and lawyers:

24 “For where envy and self-seeking exist, confusion and every evil thing are there.”
25 [James 3:16, Bible, NKJV]

26 The separation of powers makes states of the Union STATUTORILY/LEGISLATIVELY FOREIGN and sovereign in
27 relation to the national government but CONSTITUTIONALLY/POLITICALLY DOMESTIC for nearly all subject matters
28 of legislation. Every occasion by any court or legal authority to say that the states and the federal government are not
29 foreign relates to the CONSTITUTIONAL and not STATUTORY context. Below is an example of this phenomenon, 30 where “sovereignty” refers to the CONSTITUTIONAL/POLITICAL context rather than the 31 STATUTORY/LEGISLATIVE context:

32 “The United States is not a foreign sovereignty as regards the several states, but is a concurrent, and, within 33 its jurisdiction, paramount sovereignty.”
34 [Claflin v. Houseman, 93 U.S. 130, 136 (1876)]

35 The several states of the Union of states, collectively referred to as the United States of America or the “freely associated 36 compact states”, are considered to be STATUTORILY/LEGISLATIVELY “foreign countries” and “foreign states” with 37 respect to the federal government. An example of this is found in the Corpus Juris Secundum legal encyclopedia, in which 38 federal territory is described as being a “foreign state” in relation to states of the Union:

39 “§1. Definitions, Nature, and Distinctions

40 “The word 'territory,' when used to designate a political organization has a distinctive, fixed, and legal
41 meaning under the political institutions of the United States, and does not necessarily include all the 42 territorial possessions of the United States, but may include only the portions thereof which are organized 43 and exercise governmental functions under act of congress.”

44 “While the term 'territory' is often loosely used, and has even been construed to include municipal subdivisions
45 of a territory, and 'territories of the' United States is sometimes used to refer to the entire domain over which 46 the United States exercises dominion, the word 'territory,' when used to designate a political organization, has
47 a distinctive, fixed, and legal meaning under the political institutions of the United States, and the term

'territory' or 'territories' does not necessarily include only a portion or the portions thereof which are organized and exercise government functions under acts of congress. The term 'territories' has been defined to be political subdivisions of the outlying dominion of the United States, and in this sense the term 'territory' is not a description of a definite area of land but of a political unit governing and being governed as such. The question whether a particular subdivision or entity is a territory is not determined by the particular form of government with which it is, more or less temporarily, invested.

"Territories' or 'territory' as including 'state' or 'states.'" While the term 'territories of the' United States may, under certain circumstances, include the states of the Union, as used in the federal Constitution and in ordinary acts of congress "territory" does not include a foreign state.

"As used in this title, the term 'territories' generally refers to the political subdivisions created by congress, and not within the boundaries of any of the several states."

26 C.F.R. §1.911-2(h): The term "foreign country" when used in a geographical sense includes any territory under the sovereignty of a government other than that of the United States**. It includes the territorial waters of the foreign country (determined in accordance with the laws of the United States**), the air space over the foreign country, and the seabed and subsoil of those submarine areas which are adjacent to the territorial waters of the foreign country and over which the foreign country has exclusive rights, in accordance with international law, with respect to the exploration and exploitation of natural resources.

Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 498 helps make the distinction clear that the 50 Union states are foreign countries:

Dual citizenship. Citizenship in two different countries. Status of citizens of United States who reside within a state; i.e., person who are born or naturalized in the U.S. are citizens of the U.S. and the state wherein they reside.
[Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 498]

If we examine other U.S. codes, we find the following hints to confirm the above assertion and conclusion:

TITLE 28 > PART 1 > CHAPTER 13 > Sec. 297.
Sec. 297. - Assignment of judges to courts of the freely associated compact states

(a) The Chief Justice or the chief judge of the United States Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit may assign any circuit or district judge of the Ninth Circuit, with the consent of the judge so assigned, to serve temporarily as a judge of any duly constituted court of the freely associated compact states whenever an official duly authorized by the laws of the respective compact state requests such assignment and such assignment is necessary for the proper dispatch of the business of the respective court.

(b) The Congress consents to the acceptance and retention by any judge so authorized of reimbursement from the countries referred to in subsection (a) of all necessary travel expenses, including transportation, and of subsistence, or of a reasonable per diem allowance in lieu of subsistence. The judge shall report to the Administrative Office of the United States Courts any amount received pursuant to this subsection

Note that Congress, in subparagraph (a) above refers to the "freely associated compact states" in subparagraph (b) as "countries". That is because they fit in every respect the description of "foreign country" found above in 26 C.F.R. §1.911-2(h):

"Generally, the states of the Union sustain toward each other the relationship of independent sovereigns or independent foreign states, except in so far as the United States is paramount as the dominating government, and in so far as the states are bound to recognize the fraternity among sovereignties established by the federal Constitution, as by the provision requiring each state to give full faith and credit to the public acts, records, and judicial proceedings of the other states..."

The California Supreme Court agreed with the conclusions of this section when it stated in the case of People ex re. Atty. Gen. v. Naglee, 1 Cal. 234 (1850):

"In determining the boundaries of apparently conflicting powers between states and the general government, the proper question is, not so much what has been, in terms, reserved to the states, as what has been, expressly or by necessary implication, granted by the people to the national government; for each state possess all the powers of an independent and sovereign nation, except so far as they have been ceded away by the constitution. The federal government is but a creature of the people of the states, and, like an agent appointed for definite and specific purposes, must show an express or necessarily implied authority in the charter of its appointment, to give validity to its acts.

The power of taxation in independent nations, is unrestricted as to things, and, with the exception of foreign ambassadors and agents, and their retinue, is unlimited as to persons; and is deemed a power indispensable to their welfare and even their existence. The several states may, therefore, subject to the above restrictions, tax everything within their territorial limits, and every person, whether citizen or foreigner, who resides under the protection of their respective governments."

Title 28, Judiciary and Judicial Procedure, describes the jurisdiction and operation of the federal district and circuit (appellate) courts. Section 1603 contains definitions and includes a very interesting and related definition of the term "foreign state":

TITLE 28 > PART IV >
CHAPTER 97 JURISDICTIONAL IMMUNITIES OF FOREIGN STATES
 Sec. 1603. - Definitions

For purposes of this chapter -

(a) A "foreign state", except as used in section 1608 of this title, includes a political subdivision of a foreign state or an agency or instrumentality of a foreign state as defined in subsection (b).

(b) An "agency or instrumentality of a foreign state" means any entity -

(1) which is a separate legal person, corporate or otherwise, and

(2) which is an organ of a foreign state or political subdivision thereof, or a majority of whose shares or other ownership interest is owned by a foreign state or political subdivision thereof, and

(3) which is neither a citizen of a State of the United States as defined in section 1332 (c) and (d) of this title, nor created under the laws of any third country.

(c) The "United States" includes all territory and waters, continental or insular, subject to the jurisdiction of the United States.

Likewise, the legal encyclopedia, Corpus Juris Secundum (C.J.S.) , says about the subject of "sovereignty":

"Generally, the states of the Union sustain toward each other the relationship of independent sovereigns or independent foreign states, except in so far as the United States is paramount as the dominating government, and in so far as the states are bound to recognize the fraternity among sovereignties established by the federal Constitution, as by the provision requiring each state to give full faith and credit to the public acts, records, and judicial proceedings of the other states..."

[81A Corpus Juris Secundum (C.J.S.), United States, §29 (2003), legal encyclopedia]

The phrase "except in so far as the United States is paramount" refers to subject matters delegated to the national government under the United States Constitution. For all such subject matters ONLY, "acts of Congress" are NOT foreign and therefore are regarded as "domestic". All such subject matters are summarized below. Every other subject matter is legislatively "foreign" and therefore "alien":

- Excise taxes upon imports from foreign countries. See Article 1, Section 8, Clause 1 of the U.S. Constitution. Congress may NOT, however, tax any article exported from a state pursuant to Article 1, Section 9, Clause 5 of the Constitution. Other than these subject matters, NO national taxes are authorized:

"The States, after they formed the Union, continued to have the same range of taxing power which they had before, barring only duties affecting exports, imports, and on tonnage. 2 Congress, on the other hand, to lay taxes in order 'to pay the Debts and provide for the common Defence and general Welfare of the United States', Art. 1, Sec. 8, U.S.C.A.Const., can reach every person and every dollar in the land with due regard to Constitutional limitations as to the method of laying taxes."
 Graves v. People of State of New York, [306 U.S. 466 (1939)]

1 "The difficulties arising out of our dual form of government and the opportunities for differing opinions
 2 concerning the relative rights of state and national governments are many; but for a very long time this court
 3 has steadfastly adhered to the doctrine that the taxing power of Congress does not extend to the states or
 4 their political subdivisions. The same basic reasoning which leads to that conclusion, we think, requires like
 5 limitation upon the power which springs from the bankruptcy clause. United States v. Butler, supra."
 6 [Ashton v. Cameron County Water Improvement District No. 1, 298 U.S. 513; 56 S.Ct. 892 (1936)]

 8 "Thus, Congress having power to regulate commerce with foreign nations, and among the several States, and
 9 with the Indian tribes, may, without doubt, provide for granting coasting licenses, licenses to pilots, licenses to
 10 trade with the Indians, and any other licenses necessary or proper for the exercise of that great and extensive
 11 power; and the same observation is applicable to every other power of Congress, to the exercise of which the
 12 granting of licenses may be incident. All such licenses confer authority, and give rights to the licensee.

13 But very different considerations apply to the internal commerce or domestic trade of the States. Over this
 14 commerce and trade Congress has no power of regulation nor any direct control. This power belongs
 15 exclusively to the States. No interference by Congress with the business of citizens transacted within a State is
 16 warranted by the Constitution, except such as is strictly incidental to the exercise of powers clearly granted to
 17 the legislature. The power to authorize a business within a State is plainly repugnant to the exclusive power of 18 the State over the same subject. It is true that the power of Congress to tax is a very extensive power. It is given
 19 in the Constitution, with only one exception and only two qualifications. Congress cannot tax exports, and it
 20 must impose direct taxes by the rule of apportionment, and indirect taxes by the rule of uniformity. Thus limited,
 21 and thus only, it reaches every subject, and may be exercised at discretion. But, it reaches only existing 22 subjects. Congress cannot authorize a trade or business within a State in order to tax it."

 30 18 U.S.C. §1589(3).

31 "Other authorities to the same effect might be cited. It is not open to doubt that Congress may enforce the 32 Thirteenth Amendment by direct legislation, punishing the holding of a person in slavery or in involuntary
 33 servitude except as a punishment for a crime. In the exercise of that power Congress has enacted these 34 sections denouncing peonage, and punishing one who holds another in that condition of involuntary
 35 servitude. This legislation is not limited to the territories or other parts of the strictly national domain,
 36 but is operative in the states and wherever the sovereignty of the United States extends. We entertain no
 37 doubt of the validity of this legislation, or of its applicability to the case of any person holding another in 38 a state of peonage, and this whether there be municipal ordinance or state law sanctioning such holding.
 39 It operates directly on every citizen of the Republic, wherever his residence may be."
 40 [Clyatt v. U.S., 197 U.S. 207 (1905)]

41 The Courts also agrees with this interpretation:

42 "It is no longer open to question that the general government, unlike the states, *Hammer v. Dagenhart, 247
 43 U.S. 251, 275, 38 S.Ct. 529, 3 A.L.R. 649, Ann.Cas.1918E 724, possesses no inherent power in respect of the 44 internal affairs of the states; and emphatically not with regard to legislation."
 45 [Carter v. Carter Coal Co., 298 U.S. 238, 56 S.Ct. 855 (1936) ]

 47 "The difficulties arising out of our dual form of government and the opportunities for differing opinions
 48 concerning the relative rights of state and national governments are many; but for a very long time this court
 49 has steadfastly adhered to the doctrine that the taxing power of Congress does not extend to the states or
 50 their political subdivisions. The same basic reasoning which leads to that conclusion, we think, requires like
 51 limitation upon the power which springs from the bankruptcy clause. United States v. Butler, supra."
 52 [Ashton v. Cameron County Water Improvement District No. 1, 298 U.S. 513, 56 S.Ct. 892 (1936)]

 54 "The States between each other are sovereign and independent. They are distinct and separate sovereignties,
 55 except so far as they have parted with some of the attributes of sovereignty by the Constitution. They continue

1 to be nations, with all their rights, and under all their national obligations, and with all the rights of nations in
 2 every particular; except in the surrender by each to the common purposes and objects of the Union, under the
 3 Constitution. The rights of each State, when not so yielded up, remain absolute."
 4 [Bank of Augusta v. Earle, 38 U.S. (13 Pet.) 519, 10 L.Ed. 274 (1839)]

 6 "In determining the boundaries of apparently conflicting powers between states and the general government,
 7 the proper question is, not so much what has been, in terms, reserved to the states, as what has been, expressly
 8 or by necessary implication, granted by the people to the national government; for each state possess all the 9 powers of an independent and sovereign nation, except so far as they have been ceded away by the 10 constitution. The federal government is but a creature of the people of the states, and, like an agent appointed 11 for definite and specific purposes, must show an express or necessarily implied authority in the charter of its 12 appointment, to give validity to its acts."
 13 [People ex re. Atty. Gen. v. Naglee, 1 Cal. 234 (1850)]

14 The motivation behind this distinct separation of powers between the state and federal government was described by the 15 Supreme Court. Its ONLY purpose for existence is to protect our precious liberties and freedoms. Hence, anyone who tries
 16 to confuse the CONSTITUTIONAL and STATUTORY contexts for legal terms is trying to STEAL your rights.

17 "We start with first principles. The Constitution creates a Federal Government of enumerated powers. See U.S.
 18 Const., Art. I, 8. As James Madison wrote, "[t]he powers delegated by the proposed Constitution to the federal
 19 government are few and defined. Those which are to remain in the State governments are numerous and
 20 indefinite." The Federalist No. 45, pp. 292-293 (C. Rossiter ed. 1961). This constitutionally mandated division
 21 of authority "was adopted by the Framers to ensure protection of our fundamental liberties." Gregory v.
 22 Ashcroft, 501 U.S. 452, 458 (1991) (internal quotation marks omitted). "Just as the separation and
 23 independence of the coordinate branches of the Federal Government serves to prevent the accumulation of
 24 excessive power in any one branch, a healthy balance of power between the States and the Federal
 25 Government will reduce the risk of tyranny and abuse from either front." Ibid.
 26 [U.S. v. Lopez, 514 U.S. 549 (1995)]

27 We therefore have no choice to conclude, based on the definitions above that the sovereign 50 Union states of the United 28 States of America are considered "foreign states", which means they are outside the legislative jurisdiction of the federal 29 courts in most cases. This conclusion is the inescapable result of the fact that the Tenth Amendment to the U.S.
 30 Constitution reserves what is called "police powers" to the states and these police powers include most criminal laws and
 31 every aspect of public health, morals, and welfare. See section 4.9 for further details. There are exceptions to this general
 32 rule, but most of these exceptions occur when the parties involved reside in two different "foreign states" or in a territory
 33 (referred to as a "State") of the federal United States and wish to voluntarily grant the federal courts jurisdiction over their 34 issues to simplify the litigation. The other interesting outcome of the above analysis is that We the People are 35 "instrumentalities" of those foreign states, because we fit the description above as:

- 36 1. A separate legal person.
- 37 2. An organ of the foreign state, because we:
  - 38 2.1. Fund and sustain its operations with our taxes.
  - 39 2.2. Select and oversee its officers with our votes.
  - 40 2.3. Change its laws through the political process, including petitions and referendums.
  - 41 2.4. Control and limit its power with our jury and grand jury service.
  - 42 2.5. Protect its operation with our military service.

43 The people govern themselves through their elected agents, who are called public servants. Without the involvement of 44 every citizen of every "foreign state" in the above process of self-government, the state governments would disintegrate and
 45 cease to exist, based on the way our system is structured now. The people, are the sovereigns, according to the Supreme
 46 Court: Juilliard v. Greenman, 110 U.S. 421 (1884); Perry v. U.S., 294 U.S. 330 (1935); Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U.S. 356
 47 (1886). Because the people are the sovereigns, then the government is there to serve them and without people to serve, then
 48 we wouldn't need a government! How much more of an "instrumentality" can you be as a natural person of the body
 49 politic of your state? We refer you back to section 4.1 to reread that section to find out just how very important a role you
 50 play in your state government. By the way, here is the definition of "instrumentality" right from Black's Law Dictionary,
 51 Sixth Edition, page 801:

52 Instrumentality: Something by which an end is achieved; a means, medium, agency. Perkins v. State, 61
 53 Wis.2d. 341, 212 N.W.2d. 141, 146.

Another section in that same Chapter 97 above says these foreign states have judicial immunity:

TITLE 28 > PART IV > CHAPTER 97 > Sec. 1602.
Sec. 1602. - Findings and declaration of purpose

The Congress finds that the determination by United States courts of the claims of foreign states to immunity from the jurisdiction of such courts would serve the interests of justice and would protect the rights of both foreign states and litigants in United States courts. Under international law, states are not immune from the jurisdiction of foreign courts insofar as their commercial activities are concerned, and their commercial property may be levied upon for the satisfaction of judgments rendered against them in connection with their commercial activities. Claims of foreign states to immunity should henceforth be decided by courts of the United States and of the States in conformity with the principles set forth in this chapter

Why is this important? Because as you will find out below, your earnings qualify as “foreign income” and you qualify as a “nonresident alien” who lives in a foreign country if you were born outside of the federal zone and inside a state of the Union and are domiciled there and are engaged in a public office. This is important because if you have only earnings not connected with a “trade or business in the United States” and you are a non-resident non-person, then your income is not subject to municipal income taxes for the federal corporation called the “United States”:

26 C.F.R. §1.864-2 Trade or business within the United States.

(b) Performance of personal services for foreign employer--(1) Excepted services. For purposes of paragraph (a) of this section, the term “engaged in trade or business within the United States” does not include the performance of personal services--

(i) For a nonresident alien individual, foreign partnership, or foreign corporation, not engaged in trade or business within the United States at any time during the taxable year, or

26 C.F.R. §1.871-7

Taxation of nonresident alien individuals not engaged in trade or U.S. business.—

Imposition of tax. (1) “...a nonresident alien individual...is NOT subject to the tax imposed by Section 1” [Subtitle A, Chapter 1]

IRS Publication 515 (Nov. 2001), Withholding Tax on Nonresident Aliens and Foreign Entities, confirms the nontaxability of income earned outside of the federal United States (or federal zone) by a Nonresident Alien on page 21:

“Services performed outside the United States. Compensation paid to a nonresident alien (other than a resident of Puerto Rico, discussed later) for services performed outside the [federal] United States is not considered wages and is not subject to graduated withholding or 30% withholding.”

Now can you see why your deceitful government might not want you to know that as a human being domiciled in one of the several states and outside the federal zone with no earnings from a public office, you live in a “foreign country” and are a statutory “non-resident non-person”, and are therefore not liable for municipal income taxes of what Mark Twain called “The District of Criminals”?

5.2.16 “foreign” means outside the federal zone and “foreign income” means outside the country in the context of the Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A

Subtitle A of Title 26, the Internal Revenue Code, frequently uses the term “foreign” but never defines the meaning of the term. The term “foreign corporation” and “domestic corporation” are defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701, but not “foreign” by itself. There is a very good reason for this: The Congress and IRS don’t want you to know that “United States” in the Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A means the District of Columbia. We were so intrigued by this omission that we decided to further investigate and reveal the results of our research in this section. This subject is really interesting and enlightening and clarifies so much about the applicability of the tax code once you understand it. There are two contexts that the word “foreign” is used in: 1. The Internal Revenue Code; 2. The Constitution. The basis for these two contexts is that in the

1 U.S. Constitution, the term “United States” means the federated states of the Union, while in most federal statutes, “United
2 States” means the federal zone only. We’ll cover both and end this section with a summary of our findings.

3 We’ll now try to provide a statutory definition of the word “foreign”. Following is the definition of “foreign” right from 4 the Merriam Webster Dictionary of Law:

5 foreign: not being within the jurisdiction of a political unit (as a state)

6 esp

7 : being from or in a state other than the one in which a matter is being considered

8 Example: a foreign company doing business in South Carolina

9 Example: a foreign executor submitting to the jurisdiction of this court

10 Example: a foreign judgment

11 (compare domestic)<sup>29</sup>

12 Note that the reference in the legal definition of “foreign” is to a political unit, and NOT a country. The U.S. Codes, title 13 26, are written by the government of the “United States”, which term is defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701 as:

14 United States

15 The term "United States" when used in a geographical sense includes only the States and the District of 16 Columbia.

17 And then in 26 U.S.C. §7701 we see the definition of “State” within the internal revenue code:

18 State

19 *The term "State" shall be construed to include the District of Columbia, where such construction is necessary to

22 TITLE 4 - FLAG AND SEAL, SEAT OF GOVERNMENT, AND THE STATES

23 CHAPTER 4 - THE STATES

24 Sec. 110. Same; definitions

25 (d) The term "State" includes any Territory or possession of the United States.

26 Therefore, the real meaning of “United States” is:

27 United States

28 The term "United States" when used in a geographical sense includes federal States and the District of 29 Columbia, all of which are subject to the general sovereignty and exclusive jurisdiction of the United States as 30 described under Article 1, Section 8, Clause 17 of the U.S. Constitution.

31 This definition agrees with that of section 4.8 earlier, entitled “The Federal Zone”. The only thing the U.S. Congress has 32 exclusive jurisdiction over is the “federal zone”, which includes the District of Columbia and the federal enclaves,
33 possessions, and territories and not the sovereign states directly. The reason the “United States” under the tax code has to 34 be limited to the District of Columbia is because of the following two considerations:

- 35
- 36 1. Article 1, Section 8, Clause 17 of the Constitution limits the United States government to the District of Columbia and 37 makes the District the “Seat” of government:

38 Article 1, Section 8, Clause 17

39 *To exercise exclusive Legislation in all Cases whatsoever, over such District (not exceeding ten Miles square)
40 as may, by Cession of Particular States, and the Acceptance of Congress, become the Seat of the Government of*

1 the United States, and to exercise like Authority over all Places purchased by the Consent of the Legislature of
2 the State in which the Same shall be, for the Erection of Forts, Magazines, Arsenals, dock-Yards and other
3 needful Buildings;--

- 4 2. 4 U.S.C. §72, written in pursuance to the authority delegated by Article 1, Section 8, Clause 17 of the Constitution,
5 limits the United States government to the District of Columbia and says it cannot exist elsewhere.

6 TITLE 4 > CHAPTER 3 > Sec. 72.
7 Sec. 72. - Public offices; at seat of Government

8 All offices attached to the seat of government shall be exercised in the District of Columbia, and not elsewhere,
9 except as otherwise expressly provided by law.

10 With the above background out of the way, we are now left to consider the true legal meaning of the term “foreign” in the 11 context of federal statutes and “acts of Congress”. Since foreign means “not being within the jurisdiction of a political 12 unit” and the political unit in question is the seat of government found geographically only in the District of Columbia and
13 called the “United States”, then according to the Internal Revenue Code Subtitle A, all income that originates from outside
14 the District of Columbia (or the federal zone) originates from “without the United States”! The IRS’ own publications
15 confirm this. In IRS Publication 54, on page 12 of the year 2000 version says:

16 A “foreign country” usually is any territory (including the air space and territorial waters) under the 17 sovereignty of a government other than that of the United States.

18 [...]

19 The term “foreign country” does not include Puerto Rico, Guam, the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana
20 Islands, the Virgin Islands, or U.S. possessions such as American Samoa. For purposes of the foreign earned 21 income exclusion, the foreign housing exclusion, and the foreign housing deduction, the terms “foreign,” 22 “abroad,” and “overseas” refer to areas outside the United States, American Samoa, Guam, the 23 Commonwealth of Northern Mariana Islands, Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, and the Antarctic region.

24 The above citation also appears in the regulations at 26 C.F.R. §1.911-2(h):

25 (h) Foreign country.

26 The term “foreign country when used in a geographical sense includes any territory under the sovereignty of a
27 government other than that of the United States. It includes the territorial waters of the foreign country
28 (determined in accordance with the laws of the United States), the air space over the foreign country, and the 29 seabed and subsoil of those submarine areas which are adjacent to the territorial waters of the foreign country
30 and over which the foreign country has exclusive rights, in accordance with international law, with respect to 31 the exploration and exploitation of natural resources.

32 (Sec. 911 (95 Stat. 194; 26 U.S.C. §911) and sec. 7805 (68A Stat. 917; 26 U.S.C. §7805) of the Internal 33 Revenue Code of 1954)
34 [T.D. 8006, 50 FR 2965, Jan. 23, 1985]

35 So in the context of federal statutes and “acts of Congress”, the 50 Union states of the United States of America qualify
36 entirely and completely as foreign countries under the IRS’ own definition above right from their Publication 54 and 26
37 C.F.R. §1.911-2(h)! That is why we can legitimately file as non-resident non-persons. We discuss and explain this 38 completely in section 5.3 entitled “Know Your Proper Filing Status by Citizenship and Residency!” Below are a few
39 definitions from Black’s Law Dictionary which confirm these conclusions:

40 Foreign Laws: “The laws of a foreign country or sister state.”
41 [Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 647]

42 Foreign States: “Nations outside of the United States...Term may also refer to another state; i.e. a sister state.
43 The term ‘foreign nations’, ...should be construed to mean all nations and states other than that in which the
44 action is brought; and hence, one state of the Union is foreign to another, in that sense.”
45 [Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 648]

46 The legal profession has been systematically hiding realities like the above over time. For instance, the Sixth and Seventh
47 editions of Black’s Law Dictionary have the term “Foreign government” removed from their dictionary after they had it in 48 the Fifth edition. Likewise, the Seventh Edition removed the definition for the term “United States”, even though it was in

1 the Sixth edition. Could there be a conspiracy afoot here by the legal profession to extend the jurisdiction of the U.S.
2 government beyond its rightful bounds and to make everyone a slave to the income tax and to federal jurisdiction?

3 Another way of looking at this is that the "United States" is a small geographic area that is a "subcontractor" to the states of
4 the Union, and all the states of the Union are legally "foreign" from the federal government as far as legislative jurisdiction,
5 which includes the Internal Revenue Code. The "contract" that binds the states to the federal government "contractor" is
6 the "U.S. Constitution", the U.S. Codes, and the Uniform Commercial Code (UCC). That's why Congress puts source
7 rules for taxable income under section 861 within the following hierarchy in the tax code:

8 United States Code
9 TITLE 26 - INTERNAL REVENUE CODE
10 Subtitle A - Income Taxes
11 CHAPTER 1 - NORMAL TAXES AND SURTAXES
12 Subchapter N - Tax Based on Income From Sources Within or Without the United States
13 PART I - SOURCE RULES AND OTHER GENERAL RULES RELATING TO FOREIGN INCOME
14 § 861. Income from sources within the United States.

15 Even more interesting is the fact that the title of Part I under versions of the code prior to 1988 was "Determination of 16 sources of income", which we describe in section 6.5.5 as one of Congress' cover-ups. After that, Congress added the word
17 "foreign" to hide the truth better. We are then left to believe with the new title of this section and earlier discussion that
18 "foreign income" is anything that derives from importation by federally registered corporations from sources
19 geographically outside the federal zone and that the "person" who earns it must maintain a domicile within the "federal 20 zone", which is the District of Columbia and federal possessions. We must conclude this because of the definition of the 21 term "United States" in 26 U.S.C. §7701 and the fact that the federal zone is the only area over which the federal 22 government has exclusive jurisdiction and general (not limited) sovereignty. However, most people fall back on the 23 common definition of the term "foreign" found in the layman's (nonlegal) dictionary, which only confuses the average
24 person and deceives them into reaching the wrong conclusion. The layman's definition of "foreign" is:

25 Foreign: 1: situated outside a place or country; esp: situated outside one's own country. 2: born in, belonging
26 to, or characteristic of some place or country other than the one under consideration.
27 [Webster's Ninth New Collegiate Dictionary, 1983, Merriam-Webster, p. 483]

28 Did you notice the BIG difference between the legal definition of "foreign" terms found in Black's Law Dictionary and the 29 everyday, more common definition of "foreign"? Of the two definitions of "foreign", the correct definition is the legal 30 definition and not the layman's definition when we are reading federal statutes. If you have learned anything by now, it
31 should be that you should always use the legal definition and ignore layman's dictionaries when reading the law or the 32 governments "words of art" will deceive you about the jurisdiction of the law. Can you see how the IRS and Congress
33 might want you to use or believe the layman's version of the word instead of the legal version of it? It would certainly 34 benefit them from a tax collection standpoint! If you think like most people mistakenly do that "foreign" is relative to your 35 country instead of relative to the federal United States (District of Columbia), then you will think that Part I of the Internal 36 Revenue Code doesn't apply to you as a "national" of the 50 United States with income from the 50 Union states! You will 37 therefore instead have to refer to section 61 of the IRC which talks about "gross income" as being any type of income and 38 with no definition of the word "source" to go from. And since Congress removed the pointer in section 61 of the IRC back
39 to section 861 in about 1982, you won't even think to look in section 861 to determine taxable sources of income, and you
40 won't believe people who tell you that only foreign income earned from within the District of Columbia and abroad
41 pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §911 but not within states of the Union are taxable under 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(f)!

42 There's a reason why the wording of the Internal Revenue Code hasn't changed significantly since the code was enacted in 43 1921: because the law is very carefully and deceitfully crafted to cover-up and obfuscate the truth about income tax
44 liability. In the following sections and especially in our discussion of "taxable sources" or "sources", keep this definition of 45 "foreign" in the back of your mind so the meaning and significance of IRC Section 861 is clear! We also talk more about 46 this in section 3.12.1.3 "'Domestic' (in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(4))" and section 3.12.1.6: "'Foreign' (in 26 U.S.C.
47 §7701(a)(5))". The below court ruling helps clarify the meaning of the terms "foreign" and "domestic" (derived from 48 section 5.9) and also explains why the Internal Revenue Code had to explicitly define the meaning of the term "foreign 49 corporation" but not define the meaning of the word "foreign":

50 "The United States government is a foreign corporation with respect to a state."
51 [N.Y. re: Merriam, 36 N.E. 505, 141 N.Y. 479, Affirmed 16 S.Ct. 1973, 41 L.Ed. 287]

1 Once again, we'd emphasize that the "void for vagueness" doctrine discussed in section 5.22 (entitled "Why the 'Void for
2 Vagueness Doctrine' should be invoked by the courts to render the Internal Revenue Code Unconstitutional in Total")
3 really applies here, and that the Internal Revenue Code ought to be nullified by the courts because of vagueness, on
4 something as simple as the definition of "foreign income". That term "foreign" needs to be much better defined to prevent
5 unnecessary litigation or misinterpretation, because absent a proper, unambiguous legal definition, the only thing we have
6 to refer to in the code is the definition of "foreign corporation" in 26 U.S.C. §7701. We are then lead to believe based on
7 the above definitions that ALL earnings of "taxpayers" that originates from outside the District of Columbia and other parts
8 of the "federal zone" (foreign to the political unit of the "United States" federal government) is "foreign income". And our 9 interpretation must stick, because according to the U.S. Supreme Court:

10 *"Keeping in mind the well-settled rule that the citizen is exempt from taxation unless the same is imposed by 11 clear and unequivocal language, and that where the construction of a tax law is doubtful, the doubt is to be 12 resolved in favor of those upon whom the tax is sought to be laid."
13 [Spreckels Sugar Refining Co. v. McClain, 192 U.S. 397 (1904)]*

14 The context of "words of art" is very important! We have covered the meaning of the term "foreign" in the context of the 15 Internal Revenue Code, but what about the Constitution? In the Constitution, the term "United States" has a completely
16 different meaning than that of the Internal Revenue Code, and it means the states of the Union collectively, and not the 17 federal zone or federal United States. Article 1, Section 8 of the Constitution and Clause 3 of that section is the main
18 taxing section of the Constitution, and it uses the following emphasized phrase:

19 "The Congress shall have the power.... To regulate Commerce with foreign Nations, and among the several 20 States, and with the Indian Tribes;"

21 Recall that the United States is not a "nation", but a Union or federation according to the Supreme Court in Chisholm v.
22 Georgia, 2 Dall. \(U.S.\) 419, 1 L.Ed. 440 (1793). Therefore, the term "foreign nations" means any nation outside of the 23 confederation of states called the "United States", meaning the country United States. On the surface, this would appear to 24 conflict with the Internal Revenue Code Subtitle A, which we just said uses the word "foreign" to refer to anything outside
25 of the federal zone. In fact, there is no conflict between the I.R.C. and the Constitution because the "person" who is the 26 subject of the tax must first reside within the federal United States before the Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A even 27 applies, and the income must be received and earned from "sources within" the federal United States (meaning the District
28 of Columbia and territories and possessions) under 26 U.S.C. §861 and the implementing regulations at 26 C.F.R. §1.861-
29 8(f) . The "sources within" all relate to Foreign Sales Corporations (FSCs) and Domestic International Sales Corporations
30 (DISCs) registered and licensed with the federal government under 26 U.S.C. §7001. Some people point to 26 U.S.C. §862
31 as a justification for the false conclusion that sources "without the United States" are also taxable, but in fact, this section
32 uses the same regulations as 26 U.S.C. §861 for computing "income from sources within and without the United States",
33 which is 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(f).

34 The original Constitution didn't define whether territories of the United States were to be treated as part of the "United 35 States" for the purposes of "foreign commerce". The Supreme Court would later have to analyze this deficiency around the 36 turn of the century in 1901, leading it to extend the meaning of "United States" to include territories for the purposes of 37 defining "foreign income" within the Constitution and the Internal Revenue Code in the cases of Downes v. Bidwell and De 38 Lima v. Bidwell in 1901. You can also confirm these conclusions by reading the following cases for yourself:

- 39 • De Lima v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 1 (1901): Supreme Court ruled that the new territory of Puerto Rico was no 40 longer a foreign country and imports from this territory could no longer be taxed because no longer foreign 41 income.
- 42 • Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 (1901): Supreme Court ruled that Porto Rico became a part of the United 43 States within the meaning of the Constitution, and therefore, trade with that country was no longer considered 44 "foreign" and no longer subject to taxes on foreign commerce.
- 45 • Eisner v. Macomber, 252 U.S. 189 (1920): defines the term "income" and says that Congress does not have 46 the authority to legislatively define the word "income".
- 47 • Balzac v. Porto Rico, 258 U.S. 298 (1922): Supreme Court explained that the "United States" in the context
48 of the Constitution only includes the Union of states, and not territories of the federal government. Therefore 49 "foreign income" in the context of the Constitution can only mean income earned from other countries.

50 5.2.17 Constitutional Federal Taxes under the I.R.C. apply to imports, Foreign Income of Aliens and 51 Corporations, and domiciliaries Living Abroad

To some, the title of this section may seem ambiguous or misleading. Allow us to clarify our terms. We must always remember that there are two systems of taxation described within the Internal Revenue Code, as explained earlier at the beginning of section 5.1.11:

1. Legitimate, Constitutional "Federal income taxes" described under Subtitles D and E of the Internal Revenue Code. This revenue system operates exclusively within states of the Union on nonfederal land and also within admiralty or maritime jurisdiction.
2. "national" or "municipal" taxes of the District of Columbia described under Subtitles A through C of the I.R.C. This revenue system operates only within exclusive jurisdiction of the federal government and coming under Article 1, Section 8, Clause 17 of the Constitution. It is implemented only within the District of Columbia, federal enclaves within the states, territories and possessions of the United States and it is addressed exclusively by Subtitles A through C of the Internal Revenue Code. We call this a "municipal tax of the District of Columbia", as distinguished from a "federal income tax" applying exclusively within the states of the Union and admiralty jurisdiction.

All of the above aside, we can now delve into taxation exclusively within states of the Union on nonfederal land. The taxing approach of the federal government within states of the Union has always had is:

"Citizens abroad and foreigners at home."

In the context of municipal income taxes, "home" means the federal zone and "abroad" means outside the country "United States". This is the same taxing scheme advocated by Jesus in the Bible. Jesus Christ first addressed the tax issue in Matthew 17:24-27, which says:

After Jesus and his disciples arrived in Capernaum, the collectors of the two-drachma tax came to Peter and asked, "Doesn't your teacher pay the temple tax?"

"Yes, he does," he replied.

*When Peter came into the house, Jesus was the first to speak. "What do you think, Simon?" he asked. "From whom do the kings of the earth collect duty and taxes--from their own sons or from others?"

"From others," Peter answered.

"Then the sons [citizens/nationals, who are non-resident anon-persons] are EXEMPT."

The Founders understood because of their Christian faith that "the sons [nationals] are exempt" and, in their wisdom, designed our Constitutional Republic so that the sovereign People domiciled in states of the Union would be free from direct taxation by the government; so that the day-to-day operations of the federal government would be funded through indirect excise taxes in the form of duties and tariffs to be paid by foreigners wishing to sell into our vast markets. Below is confirmation of this fact by the supreme Court of the United States:

"Now, the Federal Government can no more regulate the commerce of a State than a State can regulate the commerce of the Federal government; and domestic bills or promissory notes are as necessary to the commerce of a State as foreign bills to the commerce of the Union. And if a tax on the exchange broker who deals in foreign bills be a regulation of foreign commerce, or commerce among the States, much more would a tax upon state paper, by Congress, be a tax on the commerce of a State."
[Paul v. Virginia, 8 Wall (U.S.) 168, 19 L.Ed. 357 (1868)]

"No interference by Congress with the business of citizens transacted within a state is warranted by the Constitution, except such as is strictly incidental to the exercise of powers clearly granted to the legislature."
[License Tax Cases, 72 U.S. 462 (1866)]

The Internal Revenue Code implementing regulations also confirm the conclusion that federal taxation is limited to foreign commerce and aliens as well. For instance, 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1(a)(2)(ii) indicates that married and unmarried "individuals" are all defined as aliens and the definition does not include "citizens":

1                   NORMAL TAXES AND SURTAXES
2                   DETERMINATION OF TAX LIABILITY
3                   Tax on Individuals
4                   Sec. 1.1-1 Income tax on individuals.

5                   (a)(2)(ii) For taxable years beginning after December 31, 1970, the tax imposed by section 1(d), as amended by
6                   the Tax Reform Act of 1969, shall apply to the income effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or 7                   business in the United States by a married alien individual who is a nonresident of the United States for all or
8                   part of the taxable year or by a foreign estate or trust. For such years the tax imposed by section 1(c), as 9                   amended by such Act, shall apply to the income effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business in 10                  the United States by an unmarried alien individual (other than a surviving spouse) who is a nonresident of 11                  the United States for all or part of the taxable year. See paragraph (b)(2) of section 1.871-8." [26 C.F.R. §1.1-12                  1(a)(2)(ii)]

13                  The above definition of "individual" is also confirmed elsewhere in the regulations at 26 C.F.R. §1.1441-1(c):

14                   WITHHOLDING OF TAX ON NONRESIDENT ALIENS AND FOREIGN CORPORATIONS AND TAX-FREE
15                   COVENANT BONDS
16                   Nonresident Aliens And Foreign Corporations
17                   Sec. 1.1441-1 Requirement for the deduction and withholding of tax on payments to foreign persons.

18                   (c) Definitions

19                   (3) Individual.

20                   (i) Alien individual.

21                   The term alien individual means an individual who is not a citizen or a national of the United States. See
22                   Sec. 1.1-1(c).

24                   The term nonresident alien individual means a person described in section 7701(b)(1)(B), an alien
25                   individual who is a resident of a foreign country under the residence article of an income tax treaty and 26                   Sec. 301.7701(b)-7(a)(1) of this chapter, or an alien individual who is a resident of Puerto Rico, Guam,
27                   the Commonwealth of Northern Mariana Islands, the U.S. Virgin Islands, or American Samoa as
28                   determined under Sec. 301.7701(b)-1(d) of this chapter. An alien individual who has made an election
29                   under section 6013 (g) or (h) to be treated as a resident of the United States is nevertheless treated as a
30                   nonresident alien individual for purposes of withholding under chapter 3 of the Code and the regulations
31                   thereunder.

32                  Do you see "citizen" or "national" listed anywhere in the above definition of "individual"? Not only this, but if you look at 33                  the regulations at 26 C.F.R. §301.6109-1(d)(3) which govern the assignment of "Taxpayer Identification Numbers (TINs)",
34                  the only people who can be assigned these numbers are "residents", which we will prove later in section 5.5.2 means a
35                  ONLY a "resident alien"!

36                   26 C.F.R. §301.6109-1\(d\)\(3\): Identifying Numbers

37                   (3) IRS individual taxpayer identification number –

38                   (i) Definition. The term IRS individual taxpayer identification number means a taxpayer identifying
39                   number issued to an alien individual by the Internal Revenue Service, upon application, for use in connection
40                   with filing requirements under this title. The term IRS individual taxpayer identification number does not
41                   refer to a social security number or an account number for use in employment for wages. For purposes of 42                   this section, the term alien individual means an individual who is not a citizen or national of the United States.

43                  In the tax code, people born in or domiciled within states of the Union are "nationals" and "non-resident non-persons".
44                  They only earn "gross income" if they are holding a public office in the United States government or receive payments
45                  from the federal government, as confirmed by the following statutes and implementing regulations:

- 46                  1. 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(B) defines "nonresident aliens" as persons who are neither "citizens" or "residents" and that is 47                  exactly what a "national" born in a state of the Union is. 26 C.F.R. §1.1441-1(c)(3)(i) also shows that "nationals" are 48                  not "aliens".

2. 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26) defines “trade or business” as the functions of a public office. See section 5.6.12 and following later entitled “The Trade or Business Scam”.
3. 26 U.S.C. §864(c)(3) excludes the earnings of “nonresident aliens” who work for nonresident aliens from the definition of “gross income” under 26 U.S.C. §61.
4. “Gross income” for nonresident aliens is defined under 26 U.S.C. §871, and is limited to income originating from the District of Columbia that is:
  - 4.1. Connected directly to a “trade or business” under 26 U.S.C. §871(b) or
  - 4.2. Connected indirectly to a “trade or business” under 26 U.S.C. §871(a).
5. 26 U.S.C. §861(a)(3)(C), 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(f)(1)(iv), and 26 C.F.R. §31.3401(a)(6)-1(b) all limit “gross income” to earnings derived from conduct “effectively connected with a trade or business in the United States government”.

Consequently, you can only be a compelled “taxpayer” under I.R.C., Subtitle A if you are:

1. Domiciliaries of the federal zone who are temporarily abroad for no more than nine months per year under 26 U.S.C. §911, including:
  - 1.1. “residents” and “resident aliens”.
  - 1.2. Statutory “U.S. citizens” under 8 U.S.C. §1401 domiciled abroad.
  - 1.3. Statutory “U.S. persons” defined under 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(30).
2. A “nonresident alien” lawfully occupying a public office in the national government with earnings from the office originating within the District of Columbia coming under 8 U.S.C. §871.

The term “statutory U.S. citizens” above, by the way also includes federal “corporations” incorporated in the District of Columbia but excludes state chartered corporations under the Internal Revenue Code. This is what the I.R.C. refers to as “domestic corporations”. Any other type of “corporation” is a “foreign corporation” under 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(5). Here is a quote from the legal encyclopedia Corpus Juris Secundum confirming this conclusion:

“19 Corpus Juris Secundum (C.J.S.), Corporations, §886 (2003)

“A corporation is a citizen, resident, or inhabitant of the state or country by or under the laws of which it was created, and of that state or country only.”

We assert that these corporate “citizens” and statutory “U.S. citizens” (under 8 U.S.C. §1401) residing temporarily abroad but domiciled in the federal “United States” are technically the only types of “citizens” that are the proper subject of Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A because the definition of “income” can only mean “corporate profit” derived only from foreign commerce according to the Supreme Court, as we will point out later in section 5.6.5. Even the IRS 1040 Instruction Booklet for 2001 confirms on page 20 that the only “income” that should be reported on form 1040 is “Foreign-Source Income”, which is profit derived from commerce with countries outside of ours:

Income

Foreign-Source Income

You must report unearned income, such as interest, dividends, and pensions, from sources outside the United States unless exempt by law or tax treaty. You must also report earned income, such as wages and tips, from sources outside the United States.

If you worked abroad, you may be able to exclude part of all of your earned income. For details, see Pub. 54 and Form 2555 or 2555-EZ.

While the general power to “lay and collect taxes” (U.S. Constitution, Article I, Section 8, Clause 1) combined with the power to “regulate commerce with foreign nations” (U.S. Constitution, Article I, Section 8, Clause 3) undoubtedly gives Congress the power to impose an income tax on income derived from foreign commerce (William E. Peck & Co. v. Lowe, 247 U.S. 165 (1918)), mere receipt of income from intrastate commerce cannot be a proper subject of a federal excise tax. This restriction exists because of Article 1, Section 9, Clause 5 of the U.S. Constitution, which states:

Both the Supreme Court (Stanton v. Baltic Mining, 240 U.S. 103 (1916)) and the Secretary of the Treasury (Treasury Decision 2303) agree that the income tax is in fact an "indirect" excise. Indirect taxes are taxes only on artificial entities such as corporations and partnerships and not on natural persons.

The preceding discussion so far which describes the Constitutional limits of federal taxing jurisdiction by showing that it is limited ONLY to foreign commerce. This limits also happen to be entirely consistent with the stated legislative intent of the Constitution revealed in the Federalist Papers. Here is an excerpt from Federalist Paper #45 backing that up:

"The powers delegated by the proposed Constitution to the Federal Government, are few and defined. Those which are to remain in the State Governments are numerous and indefinite. The former will be exercised principally on external objects, as war, peace, negotiation and foreign commerce; with which last the power of taxation will for the most part be connected. The powers reserved to the several States will extend to all the objects, which, in the ordinary course of affairs, concern the lives, liberties and properties of the people; and the internal order, improvement, and prosperity of the State."
[Federalist Paper #45, James Madison]

"The States, after they formed the Union, continued to have the same range of taxing power which they had before, barring only duties affecting exports, imports, and on tonnage. 2 Congress, on the other hand, to lay taxes in order 'to pay the Debts and provide for the common Defence and general Welfare of the United States', Art. 1, Sec. 8, U.S.C.A.Const., can reach every person and every dollar in the land with due regard to Constitutional limitations as to the method of laying taxes."
[Graves v. People of State of New York, 306 U.S. 466 (1939)]

The status of being a statutory "U.S. citizen" under "acts of Congress" (that is, a person born or naturalized in the District of Columbia or other federal territory) creates a means or nexus for the U.S. government to obtain jurisdiction over us that it will abuse to illegally compel payment of income taxes citizen regardless of where they live, including in a state of the Union or abroad. The reason we have to pay the tax when we are abroad in a foreign country is to pay the cost of "defending" and "protecting" us while we are abroad. Even in that scenario though, this only applies to those who legitimately are 8 U.S.C. §1401 statutory federal "U.S.** citizens" under "acts of Congress", which people born in states of the Union are not. Most persons born on nonfederal land in the 50 states of the Union are, in fact, "nationals" under federal law, as defined in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) through 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22). In the U.S. Constitution Annotated, under the Fifth Amendment (see <http://caselaw.lp.findlaw.com/data/constitution/amendment05/13.html> - 6), here is what it says about this subject:

"In laying taxes, the Federal Government is less narrowly restricted by the Fifth Amendment than are the States by the Fourteenth. The Federal Government may tax property belonging to its [domiciled, statutory but not constitutional] citizens, even if such property is never situated within the jurisdiction of the United States,<sup>30</sup> and it may tax the income of a citizen resident abroad, which is derived from property located at his residence.<sup>31</sup> The difference is explained by the fact that protection of the Federal Government follows the citizen wherever he goes, whereas the benefits of state government accrue only to persons and property within the State's borders. "

However, the above findings do not translate into a power by Congress to tax natural persons inside the 50 states of the Union on nonfederal land, because of the limitations on direct taxes found in Article 1, Section 9, Clause 4, and Article 1, Section 2, Clause 3 of the U.S. Constitution. This is in spite of the fact that for the purposes of police powers and legislative jurisdiction (e.g. "acts of Congress"), the states of the Union are "foreign countries" and "foreign states" with respect to the federal government. This means that no federal territorial jurisdiction for direct taxes are authorized in the 50 Union states for natural persons.

"In the states, there reposes the sovereignty to manage their own affairs except only as the requirements of the Constitution otherwise provide. Within these constitutional limits the power of the state over taxation is plenary."

In case you don't know what "plenary" means, it means unrestrained, absolute, exclusive rights NOT shared with the federal government. Likewise, even though the U.S. government has jurisdiction for direct taxes overseas, the income must

1 still derive from taxable sources identified in 26 U.S.C. §862, which then points to 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(f) as the
 2 implementing regulation for determining taxable sources of income. That section of regulations, in turn, only defines as
 3 "gross income" those profits associated with privileged Domestic International Sales Corporations (DISCs) or Foreign
 4 Sales Corporations (FSCs), both of whom are involved directly and only in foreign commerce with other countries.

5 In fact, not only is the income tax under Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A only imposed on foreign commerce external to
 6 the country as required under Art. 1, Section 8, Clause 3 of the Constitution, but the people participating in such commerce
 7 are licensed "individuals" in receipt of federal privileges and residing within the federal zone under 26 U.S.C. §7001:

8 TITLE 26 > Subtitle F > CHAPTER 72 > Subchapter A > Sec. 7001.
 9 Sec. 7001. - Collection of foreign items

10 (a) License

11 All persons undertaking as a matter of business or for profit the collection of foreign payments of interest or 12 dividends by means of coupons, checks, or bills of exchange shall obtain a license from the Secretary and 13 shall be subject to such regulations enabling the Government to obtain the information required under subtitle
 14 A (relating to income taxes) as the Secretary shall prescribe.

15 (b) Penalty for failure to obtain license

16 For penalty for failure to obtain the license provided for in this section, see section 7231

17 The Code of Federal Regulations, when published in the Federal Register, are the official notification to the public of what
 18 the law requires of them (44 USC). These regulations must give specifics. For decades, the regulations defining "gross 19 income" specifically stated that income of "persons" (artificial entities such as corporations and partnerships) derived from 20 "foreign commerce" must be included in their "gross income," and also described income of foreigners, and income of 21 those who receive most of their income from federal possessions (Regulations 62, Article 31 (1922), 26 C.F.R. §39.22(a)-1 22 (1956)).

23 Congress cannot gain jurisdiction over an event, or regulate an event not otherwise constitutionally under federal 24 jurisdiction (such as intrastate commerce), simply by exerting such control via taxation legislation. "To give such magic to 25 the word 'tax' would be to break down all constitutional limitation of the powers of Congress" (Bailey v. Drexel Furniture
 26 Co., 259 U.S. 20 (1922)), and such a law "cannot be sustained as an exercise of the taxing power of Congress conferred by 27 section 8, article 1" (Hill v. Wallace, 259 U.S. 44 (1922)). This is not to say that the income tax is in any way invalid; it is 28 merely to show why the income tax statutes and regulations themselves limit the tax to those engaged in international or 29 foreign commerce only.

30 When it comes to taxation, the truth can sometimes be stranger than fiction! For further study on the right of Congress to 31 tax federal/U.S.** citizens living abroad, who are called "nonresident citizens", we refer you to the Supreme Court case of 32 Cook v. Tait, 265 U.S. 47 (1924) and to IRS Publication 54.

33 5.2.18 "Employee" in the Internal Revenue Code means ONLY public officers and instrumentalities of the federal 34 government

35 Most people are shocked to learn that they are not considered "employees" as defined in the Internal Revenue Code. IRC
 36 section 3401(c) provides the following definition of "employee" within the context of income tax withholding:

37 26 U.S.C. §3401(c) Employee

38
 39 For purposes of this chapter, the term "employee" includes [is limited to] an officer, employee, or elected
 40 official of the United States, a [federal] State, or any political subdivision thereof, or the District of 41 Columbia, or any agency or instrumentality of any one or more of the foregoing. The term "employee" also 42 includes an officer of a corporation.

43 8 Federal Register, Tuesday, September 7, 1943, §404.104, pg. 12267

44 Employee: "The term employee specifically includes officers and employees whether elected or appointed, of 45 the United States, a state, territory, or political subdivision thereof or the District of Columbia or any agency or 46 instrumentality of any one or more of the foregoing."

1 26 C.F.R. §31.3401(c) Employee: "...the term [employee] includes officers and employees, whether elected or
 2 appointed, of the United States, a [federal] State, Territory, Puerto Rico or any political subdivision, thereof,
 3 or the District of Columbia, or any agency or instrumentality of any one or more of the foregoing. The term
 4 'employee' also includes an officer of a corporation."

5 Now isn't that interesting? You aren't considered an "employee" as far as payroll deductions unless you are an officer, an
 6 appointee, or elected official of the United States who is in direct receipt of government privileges! This is because the 7 income tax is an excise/privilege tax according to the U.S. Supreme Court and the Congressional Research Service. But
 8 then the IRS will deny adamantly that the income tax is an excise/privilege tax if you ask them. Self-serving hypocrites!
 9 That means the U.S. Government has no authority whatsoever to be telling private employers to withhold pay or hold them
 10 liable for not withholding! Likewise, if you aren't an "employee", then the person you work for also isn't an "employer",
 11 as defined in section 3401(d) of the IRC, because an "employer" is defined as someone with "employees".

12 Even more interesting is the definition of "employee" found in 5 U.S.C. §2105:

13 2105. DEFINITIONS

14 (a) For the purpose of this title, "employee", except as otherwise provided by this section 15 or when specifically modified, means an officer and an individual who is -
 16 (1) appointed in the civil service by one of the following acting in an official capacity -
 17 (A) the President;
 18 (B) a Member or Members of Congress, or the Congress;
 19 (C) a member of a uniformed service;
 20 (D) an individual who is an employee under this section;
 21 (E) the head of a Government controlled corporation; or 22 (F) an adjutant general designated by the Secretary concerned under section 709(c) of 23 title 32;
 24 (2) engaged in the performance of a Federal function under authority of law or an 25 Executive act; and
 26 (3) subject to the supervision of an individual named by paragraph (1) of this subsection
 27 while engaged in the performance of the duties of his position.

28 [...skipped a few entries since irrelevant...]

29 (d) A Reserve of the armed forces who is not on active duty or who is on active duty for training is deemed not 30 an employee or an individual holding an office of trust or profit or discharging an official function under or in
 31 connection with the United States because of his appointment, oath, or status, or any duties or functions
 32 performed or pay or allowances received in that capacity.

33 Another very interesting insight comes from 26 C.F.R. §31.3401(c)-1, which states:

34 (c) Generally, physicians, lawyers, dentists, veterinarians, contractors, subcontractors, public stenographers,
 35 auctioneers, and others who follow an independent trade, business, or profession, in which they offer their
 36 services to the public, are not employees.

37 Basically then, you aren't a "federal employee" unless you work in the District of Columbia (the proper United States) and 38 were directly appointed by the delegated authority of an elected official or elected by the public. Any other situation
 39 implies that you are practicing a business trade or profession that does not depend on the taxable privileges incident to
 40 political "public office". Further confirmation of this fact is found in the definition of the term "trade or business", which is 41 defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26) as being associated with the performance of the functions of a public office. All "gross
 42 income" and "taxable income" which is associated with a "trade or business in the [federal] United States" must meet this 43 test for natural persons. Once again, the key to understanding this situation is to recognize that the jurisdiction by the 44 government to tax results from the acceptance of government privileges in exchange for consent to waive one's rights to
 45 not pay taxes. The key to staying tax free is to be never accept any government privileges.

46 The subject of the definition of "employee" above is something that some academics indicate does not include everyone
 47 covered by the internal revenue code. They say that the word "includes" as far as the IRC is not meant to be inclusive, but 48 rather "expansive" and that there may be other things the words mean that aren't in the code. This is nonsense, as we
 49 explain in 3.12.1.8 "Includes" and is just meant to in effect deceive people and convince them that they can't trust the law
 50 and English language to explicitly define the taxes they owe. The courts have struck this approach down many times over,
 51 and conflict of interest and downright greed on the part of federal judges is the only reason they wouldn't strike it down.
 52 See 28 U.S.C. 455, which makes such conflict of interest a crime.

5.2.19 You're not a STATUTORY "citizen" under the Internal Revenue Code

As we proved exhaustively earlier in Chapter 4 starting with section 4.11, there are TWO contexts in which one may be a "citizen", and these two contexts are mutually exclusive and not overlapping:

1. Statutory: Relies on statutory definitions of "United States", which mean federal territory that is no part of any state of the Union.
2. Constitutional: Relies on the Constitutional meaning of "United States", which means states of the Union and excludes federal territory.

Within the field of citizenship, CONTEXT is everything in discerning the meaning of geographical terms. By "context", we mean ONE of the two contexts as indicated above:

"Citizenship of the United States is defined by the Fourteenth Amendment and federal statutes, but the requirements for citizenship of a state generally depend not upon definition but the constitutional or statutory context in which the term is used. Risewick v. Davis, 19 Md. 82, 93 (1862); Halaby v. Board of Directors of University of Cincinnati, 162 Ohio St. 290, 293, 123 N.E.2d 3 (1954) and authorities therein cited.

The decisions illustrate the diversity of the term's usage. In Field v. Adreon, 7 Md. 209 (1854), our predecessors held that an unnaturalized foreigner, residing and doing business in this State, was a citizen of Maryland within the meaning of the attachment laws. The Court held that the absconding debtor was a citizen of the State for commercial or business purposes, although not necessarily for political purposes. Dorsey v. Kyle, 30 Md. 512, 518 (1869), is to the same effect. Judge Alvey, for the Court, said in that case, that 'the term citizen, used in the formula of the affidavit prescribed by the 4th section of the Article of the Code referred to, is to be taken as synonymous with inhabitant or permanent resident.'

Other jurisdictions have equated residence with citizenship of the state for political and other non-commercial purposes. In re Wehlitz, 16 Wis. 443, 446 (1863), held that the Wisconsin statute designating 'all able-bodied, white, male citizens' as subject to enrollment in the militia included an unnaturalized citizen who was a resident of the state. 'Under our complex system of government,' the court said, 'there may be a citizen of a state, who is not a citizen of the United States in the full sense of the term.' McKenzie v. Murphy, 24 Ark. 155, 159 (1863), held that an alien, domiciled in the state for over ten years, was entitled to the homestead exemptions provided by the Arkansas statute to 'every free white citizen of this state, male or female, being a householder or head of a family * * *'. The court said: 'The word 'citizen' is often used in common conversation and writing, as meaning only an inhabitant, a resident of a town, state, or county, without any implication of political or civil privileges; and we think it is so used in our constitution.' Halaby v. Board of Directors of University, supra, involved the application of a statute which provided free university instruction to citizens of the municipality in which the university is located. The court held that the plaintiff, an alien minor whose parents were residents of and conducted a business in the city, was entitled to the benefits of that statute, saying: 'It is to be observed that the term, 'citizen,' is often used in legislation where 'domicile' is meant and where United States citizenship has no reasonable relationship to the subject matter and purpose of the legislation in question.'

Closely in point to the interpretation of the constitutional provision here involved is a report of the Committee of Elections of the House of Representatives, made in 1823. A petitioner had objected to the right of a Delegate to retain his seat from what was then the Michigan Territory. One of the objections was that the Delegate had not resided in the Territory one year previous to the election in the status of a citizen of the United States. An act of Congress passed in 1819, 3 Stat. 483 provided that 'every free white male citizen of said Territory, above the age of twenty-one years, who shall have resided therein one year next preceding' an election shall be entitled to vote at such election for a delegate to Congress. An act of 1823, 3 Stat. 769 provided that all citizens of the United States having the qualifications set forth in the former act shall be eligible to any office in the Territory. The Committee held that the statutory requirement of citizenship of the Territory for a year before the election did not mean that the aspirant for office must also have been a United States citizen during that period. The report said: 'It is the person, the individual, the man, who is [221 A.2d 435] spoken of, and who is to possess the qualifications of residence, age, freedom, &c. at the time he offers to vote, or is to be voted for * * *'. Upon the filing of the report, and the submission of a resolution that the Delegate was entitled to his seat, the contestant of the Delegate's election withdrew his protest, and the sitting Delegate was confirmed. Biddle v. Richard, Clarke and Hall, Cases of Contested Elections in Congress (1834) 407, 410.

There is no express requirement in the Maryland Constitution that sheriffs be United States citizens. Voters must be, under Article I, Section 1, but Article IV, Section 44 does not require that sheriffs be voters. A person does not have to be a voter to be a citizen of either the United States or of a state, as in the case of native-born

1 minors. In Maryland, from 1776 to 1802, the Constitution contained requirements of property ownership for the 2 exercise of the franchise; there was no exception as to native-born citizens of the State. Steiner, Citizenship and
 3 Suffrage in Maryland (1895) 27, 31.

4 The Maryland Constitution provides that the Governor, Judges and the Attorney General shall be qualified
 5 voters, and therefore, by necessary implication, citizens of the United States. Article II, Section 5, Article IV,
 6 Section 2, and Article V, Section 4. The absence of a similar requirement as to the qualifications of sheriffs is 7 significant. So also, in our opinion, is the absence of any period of residence for a sheriff except that he shall
 8 have been a citizen of the State for five years. The Governor, Judges and Attorney General in addition to being 9 citizens of the State and qualified voters, must have been a resident of the State for various periods. The 10 conjunction of the requisite period of residence with state citizenship in the qualifications for sheriff strongly
 11 indicates that, as in the authorities above referred to, state citizenship, as used in the constitutional
 12 qualifications for this office, was meant to be synonymous with domicile, and that citizenship of the United
 13 States is not required, even by implication, as a qualification for this office. The office of sheriff, under our 14 Constitution, is ministerial in nature; a sheriff's function and province is to execute duties prescribed by law.
 15 See Buckeye Dev. Corp. v. Brown & Schilling, Inc., Md., 220 A.2d. 922, filed June 23, 1966 and the concurring
 16 opinion of Le Grand, C. J. in Mayor & City Council of Baltimore v. State, ex rel. Bd. of Police, 15 Md. 376, 17 470, 488-490 (1860).

18 It may well be that the phrase, 'a citizen of the State,' as used in the constitutional provisions as to 19 qualifications, implies that a sheriff cannot owe allegiance to another nation. By the naturalization act of 1779,
 20 the Legislature provided that, to become a citizen of Maryland, an alien must swear allegiance to the State. The 21 oath or affirmation provided that the applicant renounced allegiance 'to any king or prince, or any other State
 22 or Government.' Act of July, 1779, Ch. VI; Steiner, op. cit. 15. In this case, on the admitted facts, there can be 23 no question of the appellant's undivided allegiance.

24 The court below rested its decision on its conclusion that, under the Fourteenth Amendment, no state may 25 confer state citizenship upon a resident alien until such resident alien becomes a naturalized citizen of the 26 United States. The court relied, as does not Board in this appeal, upon City of Minneapolis v. Reum, 56 F. 576,
 27 581 (8th Cir. 1893). In that case, an alien resident of Minnesota, who had declared his intention to become a
 28 citizen of the United States but had not been naturalized, brought a suit, based on diversity of citizenship,
 29 against the city in the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Minnesota under Article III, Section
 30 2 of the United States Constitution which provides that the federal judicial power shall extend to 'Controversies
 31 between * * * a State, or the Citizens thereof, and foreign States, Citizens or Subjects.' At the close of the 32 evidence, the defendant moved to dismiss the action for want of jurisdiction, on the [221 A.2d 436] ground that 33 the evidence failed to establish the allegation that the plaintiff was an alien. The court denied the motion,
 34 the plaintiff recovered judgment, and the defendant claimed error in the ruling on jurisdiction. The Circuit Court of 35 Appeals affirmed. Judge Sanborn, for the court, stated that even though the plaintiff were a citizen of the state,
 36 that fact could not enlarge or restrict the jurisdiction of the federal courts over controversies between aliens
 37 and citizens of the state. The court said: 'It is not in the power of a state to denationalize a foreign subject who 38 has not complied with the federal naturalization laws, and constitute him a citizen of the United States or of a
 39 state, so as to deprive the federal courts of jurisdiction * * *.'

40 Reum dealt only with the question of jurisdiction of federal courts under the diversity of citizenship clause of the 41 federal Constitution. That a state cannot affect that jurisdiction by granting state citizenship to an unnaturalized
 42 alien does not mean it cannot make an alien a state citizen for other purposes. Under the Fourteenth
 43 Amendment all persons born or naturalized in the United States are citizens of the United States and of the state
 44 in which they reside, but we find nothing in Reum of any other case which requires that a citizen of a state must 45 also be a citizen of the United States, if no question of federal rights or jurisdictions is involved. As the 46 authorities referred to in the first portion of this opinion evidence, the law is to the contrary.

47 Absent any unconstitutional discrimination, a state has the right to extend qualification for state office to its
 48 citizens, even though they are not citizens of the United States. This, we have found, is what Maryland has done
 49 in fixing the constitutional qualifications for the office of sheriff. The appellant meets the qualifications which 50 our Constitution provides."

51 [Crosse v. Board of Sup'rs of Elections of Baltimore City, 221 A.2d. 431, 243 Md. 555 (Md., 1966) ]

52 The confusion over citizenship prevalent today is caused by a deliberate confusion of the above two contexts with each
 53 other so as to make every American appear to be a statutory citizen and therefore an public officer of the "United States
 54 Inc" government corporation. This fact was first identified by the U.S. Supreme Court as follows:

55 "Under our own systems of polity, the term 'citizen', implying the same or similar relations to the government
 56 and to society which appertain to the term, 'subject' in England, is familiar to all. Under either system, the term
 57 used is designed to apply to man in his individual character and to his natural capacities -- to a being or agent
 58 [PUBLIC OFFICER!] possessing social and political rights and sustaining social, political, and moral 59 obligations. It is in this acceptance only, therefore, that the term 'citizen', in the article of the Constitution,
 60 can be received and understood. When distributing the judicial power, that article extends it to controversies
 61 between 'citizens' of different states. This must mean the natural physical beings composing those separate communities, and can by no violence of interpretation be made to signify artificial, incorporeal, theoretical, and invisible creations. A corporation, therefore, being not a natural person, but a mere creature of the mind, invisible and intangible, cannot be a citizen of a state, or of the United States, and cannot fall within the terms or the power of the above mentioned article, and can therefore neither plead nor be impleaded in the courts of the United States."

"Sir Edward Coke has declared, that a corporation cannot commit treason, felony, or other crime; neither is it capable of suffering a traitor's or felon's punishment, for it is not liable to corporeal penalties -- that it can perform no personal duties, for it cannot take an oath for the due execution of an office; neither can it be arrested or committed to prison, for its existence being ideal, no man can arrest it; neither can it be excommunicated, for it has no soul. But these doctrines of Lord Coke were founded upon an apprehension of the law now treated as antiquated and obsolete. His lordship did not anticipate an improvement by which a corporation could be transformed into a citizen, and by that transformation be given a physical existence, and endowed with soul and body too. The incongruities here attempted to be shown as necessarily deducible from the decisions of the cases of Bank of the United States v. Deveaux and of Cincinnati & Louisville Railroad Company v. Letson afford some illustration of the effects which must ever follow a departure from the settled principles of the law. These principles are always traceable to a wise and deeply founded experience; they are therefore ever consentaneous and in harmony with themselves and with reason, and whenever abandoned as guides to the judicial course, the aberration must lead to bewildering uncertainty and confusion."

[Rundle v. Delaware & Raritan Canal Company 55 U.S. 80, 99 (1852) from dissenting opinion by Justice Daniel]

The U.S. Supreme Court has held in Hooven & Allison Co. v. Evatt, 324 U.S. 652 \(1945\) that there are THREE different meanings and contexts for the word "United States". Hence, there are THREE different types of "citizens of the United States" as used in federal statutes and the Constitution. All three types of citizens are called "citizens of the United States", but each relies on a different meaning of the "United States". The meaning that applies depends on the context. For instance, the meaning of "United States" as used in the Constitution implies states of the Union and excludes federal territory, while the term "United States" within federal statutory law means federal territory and excludes states of the Union. Here is an example demonstrating the Constitutional context. Note that they use "part of the United States within the meaning of the Constitution", and the word "the" and the use of the singular form of "meaning" implies only ONE meaning, which means states of the Union and excludes federal territory:

"As the only judicial power vested in Congress is to create courts whose judges shall hold their offices during good behavior, it necessarily follows that, if Congress authorizes the creation of courts and the appointment of judges for limited time, it must act independently of the Constitution upon territory which is not part of the United States within the meaning of the Constitution."

[O'Donoghue v. United States, 289 U.S. 516, 53 S.Ct. 740 (1933)]

The U.S. Supreme Court and lower courts have also held specifically that:

1. The statutes conferring citizenship in Title 8 of the U.S. Code are a PRIVILEGE and not a CONSTITUTIONAL RIGHT, and are therefore not even necessary in the case of state citizens.

"Finally, this Court is mindful of the years of past practice in which territorial citizenship has been treated as a statutory [PRIVILEGE!], and not a constitutional, right."

[Tuana v. U.S.A., Case No. 12-01143 (D.D.C., 2013)]

2. A citizen of the District of Columbia is NOT equivalent to a constitutional citizen. Note also that the "United States" as defined in the Internal Revenue Code, for instance, includes the "District of Columbia" and nowhere expressly includes states of the Union in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10). We therefore conclude that the statutory term "citizen of the United States" as used in 8 U.S.C. §1401 includes District of Columbia citizens and all those domiciled on federal territory "statutory citizens" and EXCLUDES those domiciled within states of the Union:

1           “The 1st section of the 14th article [Fourteenth Amendment], to which our attention is more specifically invited,
2 opens with a definition of citizenship—not only citizenship of the United States[***], but citizenship of the
3 states. No such definition was previously found in the Constitution, nor had any attempt been made to define
4 it by act of Congress. It had been the occasion of much discussion in the courts, by the executive departments
5 and in the public journals. It had been said by eminent judges that no man was a citizen of the United
6 States[***] except as he was a citizen of one of the states composing the Union. Those therefore, who had
7 been born and resided always in the District of Columbia or in the territories, though within the United
8 States[*], were not citizens.”

9 [Slaughter-House Cases, 83 U.S. (16 Wall.) 36, 21 L.Ed. 394 (1873)]

- 10 3. An the 8 U.S.C. §1401 "national and citizen of the United States** at birth" born on federal territory is NOT a 11 CONSTITUTIONAL citizen mentioned in the Fourteenth Amendment when it said:

12           “The Court today holds that Congress can indeed rob a citizen of his citizenship just so long as five members
13 of this Court can satisfy themselves that the congressional action was not 'unreasonable, arbitrary,' ante, at 14 831; 'misplaced or arbitrary,' ante, at 832; or 'irrational or arbitrary or unfair,' ante, at 833. My first 15 comment is that not one of these 'tests' appears in the Constitution. Moreover, it seems a little strange to find
16 such 'tests' as these announced in an opinion which condemns the earlier decisions it overrules for their resort
17 to clichés, which it describes as 'too handy and too easy, and, like most clichés, can be misleading'. Ante, at 18 835. That description precisely fits those words and clauses which the majority uses, but which the Constitution 19 does not.

20           The Constitution, written for the ages, cannot rise and fall with this Court's passing notions of what is 'fair,' or 21 'reasonable,' or 'arbitrary.' [ . . . ]

22           The Court today holds that the Citizenship Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment has no application to 23 Bellei. The Court first notes that Afroyim was essentially a case construing the Citizenship Clause of the 24 Fourteenth Amendment. Since the Citizenship Clause declares that: 'All persons born or naturalized in the 25 United States * * * are citizens of the United States * * *,' the Court reasons that the protections against 26 involuntary expatriation declared in Afroyim do not protect all American citizens, but only those 'born or 27 naturalized in the United States.' Afroyim, the argument runs, was naturalized in this country so he was 28 protected by the Citizenship Clause, but Bellei, since he acquired his American citizenship at birth in Italy as a
29 foreignborn child of an American citizen, was neither born nor naturalized in the United States and, hence, falls
30 outside the scope of the Fourteenth Amendment guarantees declared in Afroyim. One could hardly call this a
31 generous reading of the great purposes the Fourteenth Amendment was adopted to bring about. While 32 conceding that Bellei is an American citizen, the majority states: 'He simply is not a Fourteenth-Amendment-
33 first-sentence citizen.' Therefore, the majority reasons, the congressional revocation of his citizenship is not 34 barred by the Constitution. I cannot accept the Court's conclusion that the Fourteenth Amendment protects
35 the citizenship of some Americans and not others. [ . . . ]

36           The Court today puts aside the Fourteenth Amendment as a standard by which to measure congressional 37 action with respect to citizenship, and substitutes in its place the majority's own vague notions of 'fairness.'
38 The majority takes a new step with the recurring theme that the test of constitutionality is the Court's own
39 view of what is 'fair, reasonable, and right.' Despite the concession that Bellei was admittedly an American 40 citizen, and despite the holding in Afroyim that the Fourteenth Amendment has put citizenship, once
41 conferred, beyond the power of Congress to revoke, the majority today upholds the revocation of Bellei's
42 citizenship on the ground that the congressional action was not 'irrational or arbitrary or unfair.' The 43 majority applies the 'shock-the-conscience' test to uphold, rather than strike, a federal statute. It is a 44 dangerous concept of constitutional law that allows the majority to conclude that, because it cannot say the 45 statute is 'irrational or arbitrary or unfair,' the statute must be constitutional.

46 [ . . . ]

47           Since the Court this Term has already downgraded citizens receiving public welfare, Wyman v. James, 400 U.S.
48 309, 91 S.Ct. 381, 27 L.Ed.2d. 408 (1971), and citizens having the misfortune to be illegitimate, Labine v.
49 Vincent, 401 U.S. 532, 91 S.Ct. 1917, 28 L.Ed.2d. 288, I suppose today's decision downgrading citizens born
50 outside the United States should have been expected. Once again, as in James and Labine, the Court's opinion
51 makes evident that its holding is contrary to earlier decisions. Concededly, petitioner was a citizen at birth, not 52 by constitutional right, but only through operation of a federal statute.
53 [Rogers v. Bellei, 401 U.S. 815 (1971)]

54 The Internal Revenue Code relies on the statutory definition of "United States", which means federal territory. The term
55 “citizen” is nowhere defined within the Internal Revenue Code and is defined twice within the implementing regulations at 56 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1 and 26 C.F.R. §31.3121(e)-1 . Below is the first of these two definitions:

57 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1 Income tax on individuals

58 (c) Who is a citizen.

Every person born or naturalized in the United States and subject to its jurisdiction is a citizen. For other rules governing the acquisition of citizenship, see chapters 1 and 2 of title III of the Immigration and Nationality Act (8 U.S.C. 1401-1459). For rules governing loss of citizenship, see sections 349 to 357, inclusive, of such Act (8 U.S.C. 1481-1489), Schneider v. Rusk, (1964) 377 U.S. 163, and Rev. Rul. 70-506, C.B. 1970-2, 1. For rules pertaining to persons who are nationals but not citizens at birth, e.g., a person born in American Samoa, see section 308 of such Act (8 U.S.C. 1408). For special rules applicable to certain expatriates who have lost citizenship with a principal purpose of avoiding certain taxes, see section 877. A foreigner who has filed his declaration of intention of becoming a citizen but who has not yet been admitted to citizenship by a final order of a naturalization court is an alien.

Notice the term “born or naturalized in the United States and subject to its jurisdiction”, which means the exclusive legislative jurisdiction of the federal government within the District of Columbia and its territories and possessions under Article 1, Section 8, Clause 17 of the Constitution and Title 48 of the U.S. Code. If they meant to include states of the Union, they would have used “their jurisdiction” or “the jurisdiction” as used in section 1 of the Fourteenth Amendment instead of “its jurisdiction”.

“The 13th Amendment to the Constitution, prohibiting slavery and involuntary servitude ‘within the United States, or in any place subject to their jurisdiction,’ is also significant as showing that there may be places within the jurisdiction of the United States that are no part of the Union. To say that the phraseology of this amendment was due to the fact that it was intended to prohibit slavery in the seceded states, under a possible interpretation that those states were no longer a part of the Union, is to confess the very point in issue, since it involves an admission that, if these states were not a part of the Union, they were still subject to the jurisdiction of the United States.

*Upon the other hand, the 14th Amendment, upon the subject of citizenship, declares only that ‘all persons born or naturalized in the United States, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the United States, and of the state wherein they reside.’ Here there is a limitation to persons born or naturalized in the United States, which is not extended to persons born in any place ‘subject to their jurisdiction.’”
[Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 (1901)]*

The above definition of “citizen” applying exclusively to the Internal Revenue Code reveals that it depends on 8 U.S.C. §1401, which we said earlier in section 4.11.3 and its subsections means a human being and NOT artificial person born anywhere in the country but domiciled in the federal United States**/federal zone, which includes territories or possessions and excludes states of the Union. These people possess a special "non-constitutional" class of citizenship that is not covered by the Fourteenth Amendment or any other part of the Constitution.

We also showed in section 4.11.4 that people born in states of the Union are technically not STATUTORY “citizens and nationals of the United States” under 8 U.S.C. §1401, but instead are STATUTORY “non-resident non-persons” with a legislatively but not constitutionally foreign domicile under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21). The term "national" is defined in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) as follows:

(a) (21) The term "national" means a person owing permanent allegiance to a state.

In the case of "nationals" who are also statutory “non-resident non-persons” under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21), these are people who owe their permanent allegiance to the confederation of states in the Union called the "United States of America***" and NOT the "United States****", which is the government and legal person they created to preside ONLY over community property of states of the Union and foreign affairs but NOT internal affairs within the states..

The definition of “citizen of the United States” found in 26 C.F.R. §31.3121(e)-1 corroborates the above conclusions, keeping in mind that “United States” within that definition means the federal zone instead of the states of the Union. Remember: “United States” or “United States of America” in the Constitution means the states of the Union while “United States” in federal statutes means the federal zone only and excludes states of the Union.

26 C.F.R. §31.3121(e)-1 State, United States, and citizen

(e)...The term 'citizen of the United States' includes a citizen of the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico or the Virgin Islands, and, effective January 1, 1961, a citizen of Guam or American Samoa.

Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, Guam, and American Samoa are all U.S. territories and federal “States” that are within the federal zone. They are not “states” under the Internal Revenue Code. The proper subjects of Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A are only the people who are born in these federal “States”, and these people are the only people who are in fact “citizens and nationals of the United States” under 8 U.S.C. §1401 and under 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1(c).

1 The basis of citizenship in the United States is the English doctrine under which nationality meant “birth within allegiance
3 649 (1898) :

4 “The supreme court of North Carolina, speaking by Mr. Justice Gaston, said: 'Before our Revolution, all free
5 persons born within the dominions of the king of Great Britain, whatever their color or complexion, were
6 native-born British subjects; those born out of his allegiance were aliens.' 'Upon the Revolution, no other
7 change took place in the law of North Carolina than was consequent upon the transition from a colony
8 dependent on an European king to a free and sovereign [169 U.S. 649, 664] state. 'British subjects in
9 North Carolina became North Carolina freemen;' 'and all free persons born within the state are born citizens of 10 the state.' The term 'citizen,' as understood in our law, is precisely analogous to the term 'subject' in the 11 common law, and the change of phrase has entirely resulted from the change of government. The 12 sovereignty has been transferred from the man to the collective body of the people; and he who before was a
13 'subject of the king' is now 'a citizen of the state.' ” State v. Manuel (1838) 4 Dev. & b. 20, 24-26. “
14 [U.S. v. Wong Kim Ark, 169 U.S. 649 (1898)]

15 In our country following the victorious Revolution of 1776, the “king” was therefore replaced by “the people”, who are 16 collectively and individually the “sovereigns” within our republican form of government. The group of people within 17 whatever “body politic” one is referring to who live within the territorial limits of that “body politic” are the thing that you
18 claim allegiance to when you claim “nationality” to any one of the following three distinctive political bodies:

- 19 1. A state the Union.
- 20 2. The country “United States”, as defined in our Constitution.
- 21 3. The municipal government of the federal zone called the “District of Columbia”, which was chartered as a federal 22 corporation under 16 Stat. 419 §1 and 28 U.S.C. §3002(15)(A).

23 Each of the three above political bodies have “citizens” who are distinctively their own. When you claim to be a “citizen”
24 of any one of the three, you aren't claiming allegiance to the government of that “body politic”, but to the people (the 25 sovereigns) that the government serves. If that government is rebellious to the will of the people, and is outside the 26 boundaries of the Constitution that defines its authority so that it becomes a “de facto” government rather than the original
27 “de jure” government it was intended to be, then your allegiance to the people must be superior to that of the government
28 that serves the people. In the words of Jesus Himself in John 15:20:

29 “Remember the word that I said to you, 'A servant is not greater than his master.'”
30 [John 15:20, Bible, NKJV]

31 The “master” or “sovereign” in this case, is the people, who have expressed their sovereign will through a written and 32 unchangeable Constitution.

33 “The glory of our American system of government is that it was created by a written constitution which protects 34 the people against the exercise of arbitrary, unlimited power, and the limits of which instrument may not be 35 passed by the government it created, or by any branch of it, or even by the people who ordained it, except by 36 amendment or change of its provisions.”
37 [Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244, 21 S.Ct. 770 (1901)]

38 This is a crucial distinction you must understand in order to fully comprehend the foundations of our republican system of 39 government. Let's look at the definition of “citizen” according to the U.S. Supreme Court in order to clarify the points we 40 have made so far on what it means to be a “citizen” of our glorious republic:

41 “There cannot be a nation without a people. The very idea of a political community, such as a nation is,
42 implies an [88 U.S. 162, 166] association of persons for the promotion of their general welfare. Each one of 43 the persons associated becomes a member of the nation formed by the association. He owes it allegiance and is 44 entitled to its protection. Allegiance and protection are, in this connection, reciprocal obligations. The one is 45 a compensation for the other; allegiance for protection and protection for allegiance.

46 “For convenience it has been found necessary to give a name to this membership. The object is to designate by 47 a title the person and the relation he bears to the nation. For this purpose the words 'subject,' 'inhabitant,' and 48 'citizen' have been used, and the choice between them is sometimes made to depend upon the form of the
49 government. Citizen is now more commonly employed, however, and as it has been considered better suited to
50 the description of one living under a republican government, it was adopted by nearly all of the States upon
51 their separation from Great Britain, and was afterwards adopted in the Articles of Confederation and in the 52 Constitution of the United States. When used in this sense it is understood as conveying the idea of 53 membership of a nation, and nothing more.”

"To determine, then, who were citizens of the United States before the adoption of the amendment it is necessary to ascertain what persons originally associated themselves together to form the nation, and what were afterwards admitted to membership."

"Looking at the Constitution itself we find that it was ordained and established by 'the people of the United States,'<sup>3</sup> and then going further back, we find that these were the people of the several States that had before dissolved the political bands which connected them with Great Britain, and assumed a separate and equal station among the powers of the earth,<sup>4</sup> and that had by Articles of Confederation and Perpetual Union, in which they took the name of 'the United States of America,' entered into a firm league of [88 U.S. 162, 167] friendship with each other for their common defence, the security of their liberties and their mutual and general welfare, binding themselves to assist each other against all force offered to or attack made upon them, or any of them, on account of religion, sovereignty, trade, or any other pretence whatever. 5

"Whoever, then, was one of the people of either of these States when the Constitution of the United States was adopted, became ipso facto a citizen-a member of the nation created by its adoption. He was one of the persons associating together to form the nation, and was, consequently, one of its original citizens. As to this there has never been a doubt. Disputes have arisen as to whether or not certain persons or certain classes of persons were part of the people at the time, but never as to their citizenship if they were."

The thing to focus on in the above is the phrase "he owes allegiance and is entitled to its protection". People domiciled in states of the Union have dual allegiance and dual nationality: They owe allegiance to two governments not one, so they are "dual-nationals". They are "dual nationals" because the states of the Union are independent nations<sup>32</sup>:

Dual citizenship. Citizenship in two different countries. Status of citizens of United States who reside within a state; i.e., person who are born or naturalized in the U.S. are citizens of the U.S. and the state wherein they reside.
 [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 498]

Likewise, those people who live in a federal "State" like Puerto Rico also owe dual allegiance: one to the District of Columbia, which is their municipal government and which possesses the police powers that protect them, and the other allegiance to the government of the United States of America, which is the general government for the whole country. As we said before, Congress wears two hats and operates in two capacities or jurisdictions simultaneously, each of which covers a different and mutually exclusive geographical area:

1. As the municipal government for the District of Columbia and all U.S. territories. All "acts of Congress" or federal statutes passed in this capacity are referred to as "private international law". This political community is called the "National Government".
2. As the general government for the states of the Union. All "acts of Congress" or federal statutes passed in this capacity are called "public international law". This political community is called the "Federal Government."

Each of the two capacities above has different types of "citizens" within it and each is a unique and separate "body politic". Most laws that Congress writes pertain to the first jurisdiction above only. Below is a summary of these two classes of "citizens":

Table 5-24: Types of citizens

#	Jurisdiction	Land area	Name of "citizens"
1	Municipal government of the District of Columbia and all U.S. territories. Also called the "National Government"	"Federal zone" (District of Columbia + federal "States")	"Statutory citizens" or "citizens and nationals of the United States" as defined in 8 U.S.C. §1401
2	General government for the states of the Union. Also called the "Federal Government"	"United States of America " ( 50 Union "states" )	"Constitutional citizens", "nationals but not citizens of the United States" as defined in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21), "non-resident non-persons" under federal law

<sup>32</sup> See Bank of Augusta v. Earle, 38 U.S. (13 Pet.) 519, 10 L.Ed. 274 (1839), in which the Supreme Court ruled:

"The States between each other are sovereign and independent. They are distinct and separate sovereignties, except so far as they have parted with some of the attributes of sovereignty by the Constitution. They continue to be nations, with all their rights, and under all their national obligations, and with all the rights of nations in every particular; except in the surrender by each to the common purposes and objects of the Union, under the Constitution. The rights of each State, when not so yielded up, remain absolute."

1 The U.S. Supreme Court recognized the above two separate political and legislative jurisdictions and their respective
2 separate types of "citizens" when it held the following:

4 *opens with a definition of citizenship—not only citizenship of the United States[***], but citizenship of the*
5 states. No such definition was previously found in the Constitution, nor had any attempt been made to define
6 it by act of Congress. It had been the occasion of much discussion in the courts, by the executive departments
7 and in the public journals. It had been said by eminent judges that no man was a citizen of the United
8 *States[***] except as he was a citizen of one of the states composing the Union. Those therefore, who had*
9 been born and resided always in the District of Columbia or in the territories, though within the United
10 *States[*], were not citizens. Whether this proposition was sound or not had never been judicially decided."*
11 [Slaughter-House Cases, 83 U.S. (16 Wall.) 36, 21 L.Ed. 394 (1873)]

12 As we pointed out earlier in section 4.11.4, federal statutes and "acts of Congress" do not and cannot prescribe the 13 STATUTORY citizenship status of human beings born in and domiciled in states of the Union and outside of the exclusive
14 or general legislative jurisdiction of Congress. 8 U.S.C. §1408(2) comes the closest to defining their citizenship status, but 15 even that definition doesn't address most persons born in states of the Union neither of whose parents ever resided in the 16 federal zone. No federal statute or "act of Congress" directly can or does prescribe the citizenship status of people born in 17 states of the Union because state law, and not federal law, prescribes their status under the Law of Nations.<sup>33</sup> The reason is 18 because no government may write civil laws that apply outside of their subject matter or exclusive territorial jurisdiction,
19 and states of the Union are STATUTORILY but not CONSTITUTIONALLY "foreign" to the United States government
20 for the purposes of police powers and legislative jurisdiction. Here is confirmation of that fact which the geographical 21 definitions within federal also CONFIRM:

22 "Judge Story, in his treatise on the Conflict of Laws, lays down, as the basis upon which all reasonings on the
23 law of comity must necessarily rest, the following maxims: First, 'that every nation possesses an exclusive
24 sovereignty and jurisdiction within its own territory'; secondly, 'that no state or nation can by its laws directly
25 affect or bind property out of its own territory, or bind persons not resident therein, whether they are natural
26 born subjects or others.' The learned judge then adds: 'From these two maxims or propositions there follows
27 a third, and that is that whatever force and obligation the laws of one country have in another depend solely 28 upon the laws and municipal regulation of the matter; that is to say, upon its own proper jurisdiction and polity,
29 and upon its own express or tacit consent.' Story on Conflict of Laws, §23."
30 [Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Co. v. Chambers, 73 Ohio.St. 16, 76 N.E. 91, 11 L.R.A., N.S., 1012 (1905)]

31 Congress is given the authority under the Constitution, Article 1, Section 8, Clause 4 to write "an uniform Rule of 32 Naturalization" and they have done this in Title 8 of the U.S. Code called the "Aliens and Nationality", but they were never 33 given any authority under the Constitution to prescribe laws for the states of the Union relating to citizenship by birth
34 rather than naturalization. That subject is, and always has been, under the exclusive jurisdiction of states of the Union.
35 Naturalization is only one of two ways by which a person can acquire citizenship, and Congress has jurisdiction only over 36 one of the two ways of acquiring citizenship.

37 "The question, now agitated, depends upon another question; whether the State of Pennsylvania, since the 26th
38 of March, 1790, (when the act of Congress was passed) has a right to naturalize an alien? And this must 39 receive its answer from the solution of a third question; whether, according to the constitution of the United 40 States, the authority to naturalize is exclusive, or concurrent? We are of the opinion, then, that the States,
41 individually, still enjoy a concurrent authority upon this subject; but that their individual authority cannot be
42 exercised so as to contravene the rule established by the authority of the Union.

43 "The true reason for investing Congress with the power of naturalization has been assigned at the Bar: --It
44 was to guard against too narrow, instead of too liberal, a mode of conferring the rights of citizenship. Thus,
45 the individual States cannot exclude those citizens, who have been adopted by the United States; but they can
46 adopt citizens upon easier terms, than those which Congress may deem it expedient to impose.

47 "But the act of Congress itself, furnishes a strong proof that the power of naturalization is concurrent. In the 48 concluding proviso, it is declared, 'that no person heretofore proscribed by any State, shall be admitted a
49 citizen as aforesaid, except by an act of the Legislature of the State, in which such person was proscribed.'
50 Here, we find, that Congress has not only circumscribed the exercise of its own authority, but has recognized
51 the authority of a State Legislature, in one case, to admit a citizen of the United States; which could not be
52 done in any case, if the power of naturalization, either by its own nature, or by the manner of its being vested
53 in the Federal Government, was an exclusive power."

1 Many freedom fighters overlook the fact that the STATUTORY "citizen" mentioned in 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1 can also be a
 2 corporation, and this misunderstanding is why many of them think that they are the only proper subject of the Subtitle A
 3 federal income tax. In fact, a corporation is also a STATUTORY "person" and an "individual" and a "citizen" within the 4 meaning of the Internal Revenue Code.

5 "A corporation is a citizen, resident, or inhabitant of the state or country by or under the laws of which it was
 6 created, and of that state or country only."
 7 [19 Corpus Juris Secundum (C.J.S.), Corporations, §886 (2003); Legal encyclopedia]

8 Corporations, however, cannot be either a CONSTITUTIONAL "person" or "citizen" nor can they have a legal existence 9 outside of the sovereignty that they were created in.

10 "Citizens of the United States within the meaning of this Amendment must be natural and not artificial
 11 persons; a corporate body is not a citizen of the United States.<sup>14</sup>

 13 14 Insurance Co. v. New Orleans, 13 Fed.Cas. 67 (C.C.D.La. 1870). Not being citizens of the United States,
 14 corporations accordingly have been declared unable "to claim the protection of that clause of the Fourteenth
 15 Amendment which secures the privileges and immunities of citizens of the United States against abridgment or 16 impairment by the law of a State." Orient Ins. Co. v. Dags, 172 U.S. 557, 561 (1869) . This conclusion was in 17 harmony with the earlier holding in Paul v. Virginia, 75 U.S. (8 Wall.) 168 (1869), to the effect that 18 corporations were not within the scope of the privileges and immunities clause of state citizenship set out in

24 Consequently, the only corporations who are "citizens" and the only "corporate profits" that are subject to tax under
 25 Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A are those that are formed under the laws of the District of Columbia, and not those under 26 the laws of states of the Union. Congress can ONLY tax or regulate that which it creates as a VOLUNTARY franchise,
 27 and corporations are just such a franchise. Here is why:

28 "Now, a grant of corporate existence is a grant of special privileges to the corporators, enabling them to act for 29 certain designated purposes as a single individual, and exempting them (unless otherwise specifically provided)
 30 from individual liability. The corporation being the mere creation of local law, can have no legal existence
 31 beyond the limits of the sovereignty where created. As said by this court in Bank of Augusta v. Earle, 'It must 32 dwell in the place of its creation and cannot migrate to another sovereignty.' The recognition of its existence
 33 even by other States, and the enforcement of its contracts made therein, depend purely upon the comity of those
 34 States—a comity which is never extended where the existence of the corporation or the exercise of its powers
 35 are prejudicial to their interests or repugnant to their policy."
 36 [Paul v. Virginia, 8 Wall (U.S.) 168, 19 L.Ed. 357 (1868)]

37 In conclusion, you aren't the STATUTORY "citizen" described in 8 U.S.C. §1401 and 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1 who is the proper
 38 subject of Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A, nor are you a "resident" of the "United States" defined in 26 U.S.C.
 39 §7701(a)(9) if you were born in a state of the Union and are domiciled there. Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A only
 40 applies to persons domiciled in the federal zone and payments originating from within the United States government. If 41 you are domiciled in a state of the Union, then you aren't domiciled in the federal zone. Consequently, the only type of 42 person you can be as a person born in a state of the Union is a "national" as defined in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) . If you are 43 also a public officer in the government, then you are also a "nonresident alien" as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(B), but 44 only in the context of your official duties and not your private life.

45 The reason most Americans falsely think they owe income tax and why they continue to illegally be the target of IRS
 46 enforcement activity is because they file the wrong tax return form and thereby create false presumptions about their status
 47 in relation to the federal government. IRS Form 1040 is only for use by resident aliens, not those who are non-residents
 48 such as state nationals. The "individual" mentioned in the upper left corner of the form is defined in 26 C.F.R. §1.1441-
 49 1(c)(3) as a STATUTORY but not CONSTITUTIONAL "alien" or a "nonresident alien". STATUTORY "citizens" (under 50 8 U.S.C. §1401) are not included in the definition and this is the only definition of "individual" anywhere in the I.R.C. or 51 the Treasury Regulations. It also constitutes fraud for a state national to declare themselves to be a resident alien. A state

1 national who chooses a domicile in the federal zone is classified as a statutory "U.S.** citizen" pursuant to 8 U.S.C.
 2 §1101(a)(22)(A) and NOT a "resident" (alien). It is furthermore a criminal violation of 18 U.S.C. §911 for a state national
 3 to impersonate a statutory "U.S. citizen". The only tax return form a state national can file without committing fraud or a
 4 crime is IRS Form 1040NR, and even then he or she is committing a fraud unless lawfully serving in a public office in the 5 national government.

6 If you still find yourself confused or uncertain about citizenship in the context of the Internal Revenue Code after having

42 5.2.20 Rebutted DOJ and Judicial Deception Regarding Federal Jurisdiction

1 The federal government on a number of occasions has committed fraud in attempting to deny that its jurisdiction is limited
2 to persons domiciled in the federal zone and payments from the U.S. government in the case of Subtitle A income taxes.
3 For instance, section 40.14[2] of the Department of Justice (DOJ), Tax Division, Criminal Tax Manual (DOJTDCTM) at

20 United States v. Ward, 833 F.2d. 1538, 1539 (11th Cir. 1987), cert. denied, 485 U.S. 1022 (1988). See also
21 United States v. McMullen, 755 F.2d. 65, 67 (6th Cir. 1984), cert. denied, 474 U.S. 829 (1985). The argument
22 that the United States has jurisdiction only over Washington, D.C., federal enclaves and territories, and
23 possessions of the United States has similarly been rejected. See Ward, 833 F.2d. at 1539.

24 We agree with the DOJ that the United States can have extraterritorial jurisdiction, but only in the following cases:

- 25 1. Federal employees and instrumentalities, regardless of where they are situated, pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §871(b). All 26 such instrumentalities are engaged in a "trade or business", which the I.R.C. defines as a "public office" in 26 U.S.C.
27 §7701(a)(26). This includes:
28 1.1. Federal employees.
29 1.2. Federal corporations.
30 1.3. Federal benefit recipients.
31 2. Federal payments not connected with a "trade or business", as defined in 26 U.S.C. §871(a).
32 3. Persons domiciled in the statutory but not constitutional "United States", which is limited to the District of Columbia
33 per 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10), and who are located abroad under 26 U.S.C. §911.

34 We will also prove later, starting in section 5.4 and its subsections, that all extraterritorial (outside the federal zone)
35 jurisdiction the federal government exercises MUST originate from voluntary consent in some form. That consent is 36 manifested in any of the following forms:

- 37 1. The voluntary choice of domicile within the federal zone. See section 5.4.8 and following.
38 2. The voluntary choice to engage in privileged, excise taxable activities, such as a "trade or business", which is the 39 equivalent of a business partnership with the federal government. See:
40 The "Trade or Business" Scam, Family Guardian Fellowship
41 <http://famguardian.org/Subjects/Taxes/Articles/TradeOrBusinessScam.htm>
42 3. The act of incorporating a corporation.

43 The court held that the first company's charter was a contract between it and the state, within the protection of 44 the constitution of the United States, and that the charter to the last company was therefore null and void., Mr.
45 *Justice DAVIS, delivering the opinion of the court, said that, if anything was settled by an unbroken chain of 46 decisions in the federal courts, it was that an act of incorporation was a contract between the state and the 47 stockholders, 'a departure from which now would involve dangers to society that cannot be foreseen, would 48 shock the sense of justice of the country, unhinge its business interests, and weaken, if not destroy, that
49 respect which has always been felt for the judicial department of the government.'
50 [New Orleans Gas Co. v. Louisiana Light Co., 115 U.S. 650 (1885)]

- 51 4. Authority delegated in the constitution itself on any of the following subjects:

- 1 4.1. Use of mail. (see U.S. Constitution, Article 1, Section 8, Clause 7 and 18 U.S.C. §1341)
 2 4.2. Federal insurance (see 18 U.S.C. §2113)
 3 4.3. Interstate commerce (see U.S. Constitution, Article 1, Section 8, Clause 3 and 18 U.S.C. §2314)
 4 4.4. Slavery (see U.S. Constitution, Amendment 13 and 18 U.S.C. §1581)
 5 4.5. Excise taxes (duties, imposts, etc) on foreign commerce under Subtitles D and E of the Internal Revenue Code
 6 (see U.S. Constitution, Article 1, Section 8, Clause 3)

7 Of the above, the only one that could have fit Mr. Ward was item 2 above, a "trade or business". Chances are, information
 8 returns were filed against him that he never rebutted which connected him with a public office in the U.S. government and 9 unwittingly made him into a "taxpayer". If he had rebutted these returns, the outcome of his case probably would have 10 been very different.

18 v.

19 ARTHUR D. WARD, DEFENDANT-APPELLANT

20 [6] Appeal from the United States District Court for the Middle District of Florida.

21 [7] Lowell H. Becraft, Jr., for Appellant.

22 [8] Robert W. Merkle, USA; Bruce Hinshelwood, AUSA, for Appellee.

23 [9] Hill, Fay and Kravitch, Circuit Judges.

24 [10] Author: Per Curiam

25 [11] Arthur D. Ward was convicted of three counts of tax evasion (26 U.S.C. § 7201), and two counts of 26 making false statements or claims to a federal agency. 18 U.S.C. § 1001. Ward makes three arguments on this
 27 appeal. First, he suggests that the United States has jurisdiction over only Washington, D.C., the federal
 28 enclaves within the states, and the territories and possessions of the United States. Secondly, he interprets the 29 term "individual" within the Internal Revenue Code to apply only to those individuals located within this 30 jurisdiction of the United States. Ward reaches this twisted conclusion by misinterpreting a portion of the 31 Income Tax Code. The 1913 Act defined the words "state" or "United States" to "include" United States
 32 territories and the District of Columbia; Ward asks this court to interpret the word "include" as a term of 33 limitation, rather than of definition. Finally, Ward maintains that the only persons expressly and statutorily
 34 liable for income tax are the withholding agents of nonresident aliens and foreign corporations.
 35

36 [12] We find each of appellant's contentions to be utterly without merit. The district court properly denied
 37 Ward's motions for acquittal, and properly refused to instruct the jury as to Ward's theory of his defense.
 38 The opinion of the district court is AFFIRMED.

42 Attorney Larry Becraft represented Mr. Ward. Below are his words on the subject:

43 Back in 1987, I tried a tax evasion case in Orlando where the defendant's name was Arthur D. Ward. He was 44 convicted and we appealed.

45 In Sept. 1987, AUSA Bruce Hinshelwood filed his brief in that appeal wherein he stated as follows:

46 "The government is unable, therefore, to offer case authority for the universally accepted proposition that a
 47 citizen of the United States, working and residing in the United States, subject to federal law, earning wages,
 48 and responsible for filing an income tax return, is liable for taxation."

49 See attached PDF of parts of his brief. Notwithstanding this statement, Ward's conviction was affirmed; see
 50 United States v. Ward, 833 F.2d. 1538 (11th Cir. 1988).

1 Back in 1987, I circulated to a small confidential group a letter outlining the arguments in that appeal, and
 2 today there has circulated on the Net what appears to be a redraft of that letter, which I no longer have. I hope
 3 what I state in this e-mail explains today's "amazing" e-mail, which did not originate with me.

6 Note that this is the ONLY case the DOJ hangs its hat on in denying that federal jurisdiction under Subtitle A only applies
 7 to persons domiciled in the federal zone. Remember, however, that the Supreme Court has never ruled in this manner on
 8 such issues or it would have been cited as precedent in this case, and that even the IRS' own Internal Revenue Manual in 9 section 4.10.7.2.9.8 says that cases below the Supreme Court such as the one above do not apply generally to all taxpayers,
 10 but only to the "single taxpayer" litigating the case.

11 Internal Revenue Manual (I.R.M.), Section 4.10.7.2.9.8 (05/14/99): Importance of Court Decisions

12 1. "Decisions made at various levels of the court system are considered to be interpretations of tax laws and 13 may be used by either examiners or taxpayers to support a position.

14 2. Certain court cases lend more weight to a position than others. A case decided by the U.S. Supreme Court
 15 becomes the law of the land and takes precedence over decisions of lower courts. The Internal Revenue
 16 Service must follow Supreme Court decisions. For examiners, Supreme Court decisions have the same
 17 weight as the Code.

18 3. Decisions made by lower courts, such as Tax Court, District Courts, or Claims Court, are binding on the 19 Service only for the particular taxpayer and the years litigated. Adverse decisions of lower courts do not 20 require the Service to alter its position for other taxpayers."

21 Therefore, the above case, at least in the case of Subtitle A income taxes, cannot and should not be cited as a precedent by 22 the Department of Justice. They did it anyway in the case of the DOJTDCTM because it benefits them financially, even 23 though the case appears to be a void judgment because of its lack of specificity and lack of any evidence of jurisdiction
 24 identified by the judge in the ruling.

25 Another person, Bernard Sussman, also correctly argues that the federal government's jurisdiction is not limited to the 26 federal zone. You can read his arguments and our response to them below:

27 5.3 Know Your Proper Income Tax Filing Status!

28 "If the Lord had meant us to pay income taxes, he'd have made us smart enough to prepare the return."
 29 [Kirk Kirkpatrick]

30 "People who complain about taxes can be divided into two classes: men and women."
 31 [Unknown]

32 Every successful battle begins with studying your enemy and yourself. We started this chapter off by showing you the 33 limits on federal authority right from the Constitution itself. This is not enough. Before you even think about taking on a
 34 brutal and dishonest opponent, you must also know where you stand in relation to him. That relationship is described by 35 your citizenship and filing status so you know what legal position you are fighting from in relation to your enemy. Sun
 36 Tzu, a Chinese contemporary of Confucius and author of The Art of War, wrote:

37 "Know your enemy, win some of your battles...know yourself, win some of your battles...know your enemy and 38 know yourself, win all of your battles".
 39 [Sun Tzu]

40 We already know that your goal is to be a sovereign, who isn't the proper subject of any law. But do you know what status
 41 that is in the Internal Revenue Code and what forms, if any, a sovereign would file to prove he is a sovereign? What is 42 your filing status as a sovereign? That, it turns out, is a result of your citizenship status. We covered the citizenship subject

1 in great detail in Chapter 4 of this book and before you read this section, if you haven't already, you might want to read

1 In this section, we'll show you that you have been filing your taxes incorrectly all these years, and that you really needed to
2 be using the IRS Form 2555 AND the IRS Form 1040, instead of the form 1040 ONLY if you are claiming to be a "U.S.
3 citizen", which we assert later in this chapter is a very bad idea. This surprises many people, no doubt, to find that they
4 have been filing incorrectly for so long and yet the IRS hasn't corrected them in all these years. Why? Because you will
5 pay considerably less taxes if you file in a way that reflects your proper status and the IRS wants your money so it
6 conveniently looks the other way!

7 We start this subsection off with the notion of "the matrix", which the Bible describes as the Beast. Anyone who has seen
8 the movie called The Matrix will understand what we mean when we say that having a Socialist Security Number is the 9 umbilical, or "the Mark of the Beast" described in Revelation 13:16-18 that connects the back of our head into "the matrix"
10 and makes us into slaves and drones of the socialist state and host organisms for the parasite called the U.S. Government.
11 That's why we tell people over and over throughout this book to do everything they can to get rid of the number and avoid
12 using it. Another kind of "matrix" to consider is the one below that defines when we are connected, or subservient to this 13 "matrix" or biblical beast described above through slavery to the income tax. We want to give you plenty of ways to look 14 at this so you understand completely what your obligations are relative to federal taxes:

1 NOTES:

- 2 1. For all the Subtitle A income taxes above, the tax is imposed in 26 U.S.C. §1(1)(1) and 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1(a)(1). It is imposed ONLY on STATUTORY U.S. citizens “resident” abroad and on “nonresident
- 3 aliens” with income described in 26 U.S.C. §871(b) or 26 U.S.C. §877(b) (Expatriation to avoid tax). It is NOT imposed on nonresident aliens who do not hold public office or who do not have income
- 4 associated with a “trade or business” in the federal United States, which is the condition that describes most Americans. It is also not imposed upon state citizens.
- 5 2. For all the taxes above, liability for tax is created by 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1(b), which is an “illegal regulation” as we describe in section 5.6.1. This regulation is illegal because it exceeds that scope of the statute
- 6 that it implements found in 26 U.S.C. §1.

1 To conclude this section, below is a graphical diagram that shows all the classifications of alien and citizenship status and the associated tax filing status.

2 Figure 5-4: Citizenship, domicile, taxpayer status diagram

NOTES ON THE ABOVE DIAGRAM:

1. All those born outside of the federal zone above and whose domicile is outside the federal zone are classified as “non-resident non-persons”. They become “nonresident aliens” who file form 1040NR, and not form 1040 only when they are engaged in a public office. In this respect, domiciliaries of states of the Union are on an equal footing with foreign nationals with respect to I.R.C., Subtitle A The Reason is because states of the Union are essentially foreign countries with respect to federal legislative jurisdiction:

“It is no longer open to question that the general government, unlike the states, Hammer v. Dagenhart, 247 U.S. 251, 275, 38 S.Ct. 529, 3 A.L.R. 649, Ann.Cas.1918E 724, possesses no inherent power in respect of the internal affairs of the states; and emphatically not with regard to legislation.”
 Carter v. Carter Coal Co., [298 U.S. 238, 56 S.Ct. 855 (1936)]

2. The IRS Published Products Catalog, Document 7130 (2003), states that the IRS Form 1040 can only be filed by “citizens” and “resident” of the “United States”, which is defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10) as the District of Columbia. Both of these groups have in common a domicile in the District of Columbia. Those who do not have a domicile in the District of Columbia are “nationals” and “aliens”, rather than “citizens” and “resident” respectively.

Table 5-27: Effect of domicile on citizenship status

Status	Domicile WITHIN the FEDERAL ZONE	Temporary domicile WITHOUT the FEDERAL ZONE (meets presence test)	Permanent Domicile WITHOUT the FEDERAL ZONE
Domestic national	Citizen 8 U.S.C. §1401	Citizen abroad 26 U.S.C. §911 (Meets presence test)	National but not citizen 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22)(B) 8 U.S.C. §1408 8 U.S.C. §1452
Foreign national	Resident 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(A)	Resident abroad 26 U.S.C. §911 (Meets presence test)	Nonresident Alien 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(B)

3. A “resident”, also called a “resident alien” is defined as an “alien” who has declared a domicile in the District of Columbia, under 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(A).
4. If statutory “U.S. citizen” defined under 8 U.S.C. §1401 originally from the federal zone who had a declared domicile there moves overseas, he becomes an “resident” under the terms of an income tax treaty with a foreign country, so long as he meets the “presence test”. The minute he spends less than 90 days per year abroad, he becomes a “national” but not a “citizen” and is no longer required to pay income taxes on foreign earned income under 26 U.S.C. §911. Permanent domicile abroad changes the government he pays taxes to permanently, because domicile is the basis for making a person a “taxpayer”. A person who chooses NO DOMICILE anywhere in the world is a “nontaxpayer” everywhere in the world, and domicile must be voluntary and consensual. See section 5.4.8 later for details on how this works.
5. Everyone inside the “Foreigners” circle above may become a “resident” by declaring their domicile to be the District of Columbia. This declaration of domicile is done under the authority 26 U.S.C. §6013(g) and results in a change to the tax form they file from 1040NR to 1040.

5.3.1 “Taxpayer” v. “Nontaxpayer”: Which One are You?

“The taxpayer-- that's someone who works for the federal government but doesn't have to take the civil service examination.”

[President Ronald W. Reagan]

The word “taxpayer” is defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(14) and 26 U.S.C. §1313 as someone who is “liable for” and “subject to” the income tax in Internal Revenue Code Subtitle A.

TITLE 26 > Subtitle F > CHAPTER 79 > § 7701
§ 7701. Definitions

(a) When used in this title, where not otherwise distinctly expressed or manifestly incompatible with the intent thereof—

(14) Taxpayer

The term “taxpayer” means any person subject to any internal revenue tax.

The “person” they are referring to above is further characterized as a STATUTORY “citizen of the United States**” or STATUTORY “resident of the United States**” (alien). The tax is not on nonresident aliens, but on their INCOME, therefore they cannot lawfully be “taxpayers”:

*TITLE 26--INTERNAL REVENUE
CHAPTER I--INTERNAL REVENUE SERVICE, DEPARTMENT OF THE TREASURY
PART 1 _INCOME TAXES--Table of Contents

(a) General rule. (1) Section 1 of the Code imposes an income tax on the income of every individual who is a citizen or resident of the United States and, to the extent provided by section 871(b) or 877(b), on the income of a nonresident alien individual.

What “U.S. citizens” and “U.S. residents” share in common is a domicile on federal territory that is no part of the exclusive jurisdiction of any state of the Union. Collectively, they are called “U.S. persons” as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(30). Remember:

“U.S. person=domicile or residence on federal territory and not any state of the Union”

The “United States” they mean in the term “U.S. citizen” is defined as federal territory in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10) and 4 U.S.C. §110(d) and nowhere includes any state of the Union because they are sovereign and foreign in respect to the federal government. In that sense, income taxes are a franchise tax associated with the domicile/protection franchise.

“Thus, the Court has frequently held that domicile or residence, more substantial than mere presence in transit or sojourn, is an adequate basis for taxation, including income, property, and death taxes. Since the Fourteenth Amendment makes one a citizen of the state wherein he resides, the fact of residence creates universally reciprocal duties of protection by the state and of allegiance and support by the citizen. The latter obviously includes a duty to pay taxes, and their nature and measure is largely a political matter. Of course, the situs of property may tax it regardless of the citizenship, domicile, or residence of the owner, the most obvious illustration being a tax on realty laid by the state in which the realty is located.”

Miller Brothers Co. v. Maryland, [347 U.S. 340 (1954)]

“domicile. A person's legal home. That place where a man has his true, fixed, and permanent home and principal establishment, and to which whenever he is absent he has the intention of returning. Smith v. Smith, 206 Pa.Super. 310, 213 A.2d. 94. Generally, physical presence within a state and the intention to make it one's home are the requisites of establishing a “domicile” therein. The permanent residence of a person or the place to which he intends to return even though he may actually reside elsewhere. A person may have more than one residence but only one domicile. The legal domicile of a person is important since it, rather than the actual residence, often controls the jurisdiction of the taxing authorities and determines where a person may exercise the privilege of voting and other legal rights and privileges.”

[Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 485]

1 Those who don't want to pay the tax or be "taxpayers" simply don't partake of the government protection franchise and
 2 instead declare themselves as "non-resident non-persons" with no "residence" or "permanent address" within the
 3 jurisdiction of the taxing authority on every government form they fill out. That is why "non-resident non-persons" cannot 4 be "taxpayers" unless and until they lawfully occupy a public office. For further details, see:

Why Domicile and Becoming a "Taxpayer" Require Your Consent, Form #05.002
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

5 The IRS refers to everyone as "taxpayers" because that is what they want everyone to be. Here is the way one of our
 6 readers describes how he reacts to being habitually called "taxpayer" by the IRS:

7 *I refuse to allow any IRS or State revenue officer to call me or any client a "taxpayer". Just because I may look
 8 like one or have the attributes of one does not necessarily make me one. To one IRS lady, and I have no reason
 9 to doubt that she fits this category, I use the following example. "Miss you have all of the equipment to be a
 10 whore, but that does not make you one by presumption." Until it is proven by a preponderance of evidence I
 11 must assume you are a lady and you will be treated as such. Please have the same respect for me, and don't 12 slander my reputation and defame my character by calling me a whore for the government, which is what a 13 "taxpayer" is.
 14 [Eugene Pringle]*

15 Funny! But guess what? This is not a new idea. We refer you to the Bible book of Revelation, Chapter 17, which 16 describes precisely who this whore or harlot is: Babylon the Great! Check out that chapter, keeping in mind that "Babylon
 17 the Great" is symbolic of the city full of all the ignorant and idolatrous people who have unwittingly made themselves into 18 government whores by becoming surety for government debts in the pursuit of taxable government privileges and benefits
 19 they didn't need to begin with. The Bible describes these harlots and adulterers below:

20 *"Adulterers and adulteresses! Do you not know that friendship [and citizenship] with the world [and the 21 governments/states of the world] is enmity with God? Whoever therefore wants to be a friend of the world
 22 makes himself an enemy of God."
 23 [James 4:4, Bible, NKJV]*

24 *"When thou sawest a thief [the IRS] then thou consentedst with him, and hast been partaker with adulterers."
 25 [Ps 50:18]*

26 *"Where do wars and fights [and tyranny and oppression] come from among you? Do they not come from your 27 desires for pleasure [pursuit of government "privileges"] that war in your members?....You ask [from your 28 government and its THIEF the IRS] and do not receive, because you ask amiss, that you may spend it on your 29 own pleasures. Adulterers and adulteresses [and HARLOTS]! Do you not know that friendship with the 30 world is enmity with God? Whoever therefore wants to be a friend of the world makes himself an enemy of 31 God."
 32 [James 4:3-4, Bible, NKJV]*

33 These "taxpayer" and citizen government idolaters have made government their new pagan god (neo-god), their friend, and 34 their source of false man-made security. That is what the "Security" means in "Social Security". The bible mentions that 35 there is something "mysterious" about "Babylon the Great Harlot":

36 *"And on her forehead a name was written: MYSTERY, BABYLON THE GREAT, THE MOTHER OF HARLOTS
 37 AND OF THE ABOMINATIONS OF THE EARTH."
 38 [Rev. 17:5, Bible, NKJV]*

39 _____
 40 GOVERNMENT ANNOUNCEMENT April 15, 20__

41 [Washington, D.C.]

42 *The federal government announced today that it is changing its emblem from an eagle to a condom,
 43 because that more clearly reflects its political stance. A condom stands up to inflation, halts production,
 44 destroys the next generation, protects a bunch of pricks, and gives you a sense of security while it's actually 45 screwing you.*

46 The mystery about this harlot/adulterous woman described in Rev. 17:5 is symbolic of the ignorance and apathy that these 47 people have about the law and their government. For a fascinating read into this subject, we refer you to the free book on

1 The IRS DOES NOT have the authority conferred by law under Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A to bestow the status of
 2 “taxpayer” on any natural person who doesn’t first volunteer for that “distinctive” title. Below are some facts confirming 3 this:

4 1. There is no statute making anyone liable for the income tax. Therefore, the only way you can become subject is by
 5 volunteering. Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A is therefore “private law” and “special law” that only applies to those
 6 who individually consent by connecting their earnings to a “trade or business”, which is a “public office” in the United
 7 States government. These people are referred to in the Treasury Regulations as “effectively connected with a trade or 8 business”. BEFORE they consent, they are called "nontaxpayers". AFTER they consent, they are called "taxpayers".

9 "To the extent that regulations implement the statute, they have the force and effect of law...The regulation
 10 implements the statute and cannot vitiate or change the statute..."
 11 [Spreckles v. C.I.R., 119 F.2d, 667]

12 "...liability for taxation must clearly appear [from statute imposing tax]."
 13 [Higley v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, 69 F.2d. 160 (1934)]

14 "While Congress might have the power to place such a personal liability upon trust beneficiaries who did not
 15 renounce the trust, yet it would require clear expression of such intent, and it cannot be spelled out from 16 language (as that here) which can be given an entirely natural and useful meaning and application excluding 17 such intent."
 18 [Higley v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, 69 F.2d. 160 (1934)]

19 "A tax is a legal imposition, exclusively of statutory origin (37 Cyc. 724, 725), and, naturally, liability to 20 taxation must be read in statute, or it does not exist."
 21 [Bente v. Bugbee, 137 A. 552, 103 N.J. Law. 608 (1927)]

22 "...the taxpayer must be liable for the tax. Tax liability is a condition precedent to the demand. Merely 23 demanding payment, even repeatedly, does not cause liability."
 24 [Terry v. Bothke, 713 F.2d. 1405, at 1414 (1983)]

25 If you want to know more about this subject see:

26 1.1. Section 5.6.1 later, which covers the subject of no liability in excruciating detail.

27 1.2. The following link is the online version of the above section:

28 <http://famguardian.org/Subjects/Taxes/Articles/NoStatuteLiable.htm>

29 1.3. Sections 5.4.6 through 5.4.6.6 later prove that the Internal Revenue Code is “private law” and a private 30 contract/agreement. Those who have consented are called “taxpayers” and those who haven’t are called 31 “nontaxpayers”.

32 2. The federal courts agree that the IRS cannot involuntarily make you a “taxpayer” when they said the following:

33 "A reasonable construction of the taxing statutes does not include vesting any tax official with absolute power
 34 of assessment against individuals not specified in the statutes as a person liable for the tax without an 35 opportunity for judicial review of this status before the appellation of 'taxpayer' is bestowed upon them and 36 their property is seized..."
 37 [Botta v. Scanlon, 288 F.2d. 504, 508 (1961)]

38 3. IRS has no statutory authority to convert employment withholding taxes under I.R.C., Subtitle C into “income taxes”
 39 under I.R.C., Subtitle A. We show later in section 5.6.8 that employment withholding taxes deducted under the 40 authority of Subtitle C of the Internal Revenue Code using a W-4 voluntary withholding agreement and that the IRS
 41 classifies them in IRS Document 6209 as “Tax Class 5”, which is “Estate and gift taxes”. Therefore, they are gifts to 42 the U.S. government, not taxes that may not be enforced. We also show in section 5.6.8 that taxes paid under the 43 authority of Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A are classified as Tax Class 2, “Individual Income Tax”. We also 44 exhaustively prove with evidence later in section 5.6.16 that IRS has no statutory or regulatory authority to convert
 45 what essentially amounts to a voluntary “gift” paid through withholding to a “tax”. Only you can do that by assessing
 46 yourself. That is why the 1040 form requires that you attach the information returns to it, such as the W-2: So that the 47 gift and the tax are reconciled and so that the accuracy of the W-2, which is unsigned hearsay evidence, is guaranteed
 48 by the penalty of perjury signature on the 1040 form itself.

The consequence of the IRS not having any lawful authority to make anyone into a “taxpayer” is that they cannot do a lawful Substitute For Return (SFR) or penalty assessment under I.R.C., Subtitle A, as you will learn later. This is also confirmed by the following document:

Why the Government Can't Lawfully Assess Human Beings With an Income Tax Liability Without Their Consent, Form #05.011
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

If you have been the victim of an involuntary IRS assessment and do a Freedom of Information Act (FOIA) request for assessment documents as we have, and you examine all of the documents returned, you will not see even one document signed by any IRS employee that purports to be an assessment and which has your name on it as the only subject of the assessment. The reason they won't sign the assessment document, such as the 23C or the IRS RACS 006 Report, under penalty of perjury is that no one is STUPID enough to accept legal liability for violating the Constitution and the rights of those they have done wrongful assessments against. The IRS knows these people are involved in wrongdoing, which is why they assign “pseudo names” (false names) to their employees: To protect them from lawsuits against them for their habitual violation of the law. The documents you will get back from the IRS in response to your FOIA include the following forms, none of which are signed by the IRS employee:

1. IRS Form 886-A: Explanation of Terms
2. IRS Form 1040: Substitute For Return \(SFR\)
3. IRS Form 3198: Special Handling Notice
4. IRS Form 4549: Income Tax Examination Changes
5. IRS Form 4700: Examination Work Papers
6. IRS Form 5344: Examination Closing Record
7. IRS Form 5546: Examination Return Charge-Out
8. IRS Form 5564: Notice of Deficiency Waiver
9. IRS Form 5600: Statutory Notice Worksheet
10. IRS Form 12616: Correspondence Examination History Sheet
11. IRS Form 13496: IRC Section 6020\(b\) Certification

If you want to look at samples of the above forms, see section 6 of the link below, under the column "Examples":

<http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/Forms/IRS/IRSFormsPubs.htm>

We have looked at hundreds of these assessment documents and every one of them is required by 26 U.S.C. §6065 to be signed under penalty of perjury by the IRS employee who prepared them but none are. As a matter of fact, the examination documents prepared by the IRS Examination Branch to do the illegal Substitute for Returns (involuntary assessments) purport to be a “proposal” rather than an involuntary assessment, have no signature of an IRS employee, and the only signature is from the “taxpayer”, who must consent to the assessment in order to make it lawful. See, for instance, IRS Forms 4549 and 5564. What they do is procure the consent invisibly using a commercial default process by ignoring your responsive correspondence, and therefore “assume” that you consented. This, ladies and gentlemen, is constructive FRAUD, not justice. It is THEFT! The Form 12616 above is the vehicle by which they show that the “taxpayer” consented to the involuntary assessment, because they can't do ANYTHING without his consent.

Furthermore, 28 U.S.C. §2201 also removes the authority of federal courts to declare the status of “taxpayer” on a sovereign American also!:

United States Code
 TITLE 28 - JUDICIARY AND JUDICIAL PROCEDURE
 PART VI - PARTICULAR PROCEEDINGS
 CHAPTER 151 - DECLARATORY JUDGMENTS
 Sec. 2201. Creation of remedy

(a) In a case of actual controversy within its jurisdiction, except with respect to Federal taxes other than actions brought under section 7428 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, a proceeding under section 505 or 1146 of title 11, or in any civil action involving an antidumping or countervailing duty proceeding regarding a class or kind of merchandise of a free trade area country (as defined in section 516A(f)(10) of the Tariff Act of 1930), as determined by the administering authority, any court of the United States, upon the filing of an appropriate pleading, may declare the rights and other legal relations of any interested party seeking such declaration, whether or not further relief is or could be sought. Any such declaration shall have the force and effect of a final judgment or decree and shall be reviewable as such.

(b) For limitations on actions brought with respect to drug patents see section 505 or 512 of the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act.

The federal courts themselves agree that they do not have the jurisdiction to bestow the status of “taxpayer” upon someone who is a “nontaxpayer”:

“And by statutory definition the term “taxpayer” includes any person, trust or estate subject to a tax imposed by the revenue act. ...Since the statutory definition of taxpayer is exclusive, the federal [and state] courts do not have the power to create nonstatutory taxpayers for the purpose of applying the provisions of the Revenue Acts...”

[C.I.R. v. Trustees of L. Inv. Ass’n., 100 F.2d. 18 (1939)]

26 U.S.C. §1461 is the only statute within the Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A which creates an explicit liability or “legal duty”. That duty is enforceable only against those subject to the I.R.C., who are “taxpayers” with “gross income” above the exemption amount identified in 26 U.S.C. §6012. All amounts reported by third parties on Information Returns, such as the W-2, 1042-S, 1098, and 1099, document receipt of “trade or business” earnings. All “trade or business” earnings, as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26), are classified as “gross income”. A “non-resident alien non-person” who has these information returns filed against him or her becomes his or her own “withholding agent”, and must reconcile their account with the federal government annually by filing a tax return. This is a requirement of all those who are engaged in a “public office”, which is a type of business partnership with the federal government. That business relationship is created through the operation of private contract and private law between you, the natural human, and the federal government. The method of consenting to that contract is any one of the following means:

1. Assessing ourselves with a liability shown on a tax return.
2. Voluntarily signing an IRS Form W-4, which is identified in the regulations as an “agreement” to include all earnings in the context of that agreement as “gross income” on a 1040 tax return. See 26 C.F.R. §31.3402(p)-1(a) . For a person who is not a “public official” or engaged in a “public office”, the signing of the W-4 essentially amounts to an agreement to procure “social services” and “social insurance”. You must bribe the Beast with over half of your earnings in order to convince it to take care of you in your old age.
3. Completing, signing, and submitting an IRS Forms 1040 or 1040NR and indicating a nonzero amount of “gross income”. Nearly all “gross income” and all information returns is connected with an excise taxable activity called a “trade or business” pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §871\(b\) and 26 U.S.C. §6041, which activity then makes you into a “resident”. See older versions of 26 C.F.R. §301.7701-5:
4. Filing information returns on ourself or not rebutting information returns improperly filed against us, such as the Forms W-2, 1042-S, 1098, and 1099. Pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §6041\(a\), all of these federal forms associate all funds documented on them with the taxable activity called a “trade or business”. If you are not a federal “employee” or a “public officer”, then you can’t lawfully earn “trade or business” income. See the following for details:

5. Allowing Currency Transaction Reports (CTR’s), IRS Form 8300, to be filed against us when we withdraw 10,000 or more in cash from a financial institution. The statutes at 31 U.S.C. §5331 and the regulation at 31 C.F.R. §103.30(d)(2) only require these reports to be filed in connection with a “trade or business”, and this “trade or business” is the same “trade or business” referenced in the Internal Revenue Code at 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26) and 26

U.S.C. §162. If you are not a “public official” or if you do not consent to be treated as one in order to procure “social insurance”, then banks and financial institutions are violating the law to file these forms against you. See:

The “Trade or Business” Scam, Form #05.001
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

6. Completing and submitting the Social Security Trust document, which is the SSA Form SS-5. This is an agreement that imposes the “duty” or “fiduciary duty” upon the natural person and makes him into a “trustee” and an officer of a the federal corporation called the “United States”. The definition of “person” for the purposes of the criminal provisions of the Internal Revenue Code, codified in 26 U.S.C. §7343, incidentally is EXACTLY the same as the above. Therefore, all tax crimes require that the violator must be acting in a fiduciary capacity as a Trustee of some kind or another, whether it be as an Executor over the estate of a deceased “taxpayer”, or over the Social Security Trust maintained for the benefit of a living trustee/employee of the federal corporation called the “United States Government”. See the following for details:

Resignation of Compelled Social Security Trustee, Form #06.002

Unless and until we do any of the above, voluntarily, and abent duress, deceit silence or fraud by the government, our proper title is “nontaxpayer”. The foundation of American Jurisprudence is the presumption that we are “innocent until proven guilty”, which means that we are a “nontaxpayer” until the government proves with court-admissible evidence signed under penalty of perjury that we are a “taxpayer” who is participating in government franchises that are subject to the excise tax upon a “trade or business” which is described in I.R.C., Subtitle A. For cases dealing with the term “nontaxpayer” see: Long v. Rasmussen, 281 F. 236, 238 (1922); Rothensis v. Ullman, 110 F.2d. 590(1940); Raffaele v. Granger, 196 F.2d. 620 (1952); Bullock v. Latham, 306 F.2d. 45 (1962); Economy Plumbing & Heating v. United States, 470 F.2d. 585 (1972); and South Carolina v. Ragan, 465 U.S. 367 (1984).

“The revenue laws are a code or system in regulation of tax assessment and collection. They relate to taxpayers, and not to nontaxpayers. The latter are without their scope. No procedure is prescribed for nontaxpayers, and no attempt is made to annul any of their rights and remedies in due course of law. With them Congress does not assume to deal, and they are neither of the subject nor of the object of the revenue laws...”

 [Long v. Rasmussen, 281 F. 236, 238 (1922)]

Since the above ruling, Congress has added new provisions to the I.R.C. which obtusely mention “nontaxpayers”, but not by name, because they don’t want people to have a name to describe their proper status. The new provision is found in 26 U.S.C. §7426, and in that provision of the I.R.C., “nontaxpayers” are referred to as “Persons other than taxpayers”. So far as we know, this is the ONLY provision within the I.R.C. that provides any remedy or standing to a “nontaxpayer”.

The behavior of the IRS confirms the above conclusions. See the following IRS internal memo proving that a return that is signed under penalty of perjury and saying “not liable” or words to that effect is treated as a non-return:

<http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/Evidence/Refunds/1998-053IRSMemoZeroRet.pdf>

Look what the above internal top secret IRS memo says (are they trying to hide something?.. cover-up and obstruction of justice!). Pay particular attention to the use of the word “taxpayer” in this excerpt, by the way, which doesn’t include most people:

“A taxpayer can also negate the penalties of perjury statement with an addition. In Schmitt v. U.S., 140 B.R. 571 (Bank W.D. Okl. 1992), the taxpayers filed a return with the following statement at the end of the penalties of perjury statement, “SIGNED UNDER DURESS, SEE STATEMENT ATTACHED.” In the addition, the taxpayers denied liability for tax on wages. The Service argued that the statement, added to the “return”, qualified the penalties of perjury statement, thus making the penalties of perjury statement ineffective and the return a nullity. Id. at 572.

In agreeing with the Service, the court pointed out that the voluntary nature of our tax system requires the Service to rely on a taxpayer’s self-assessment and on a taxpayer’s assurance that the figures supplied are true to the best of his or her knowledge. Id. Accordingly, the penalties of perjury statement has important significance in our tax system. The statement connects the taxpayer’s attestation of tax liability (by the signing of the statement) with the Service’s statutory ability to summarily assess the tax.

Similarly, in Sloan v. Comm'r, 53 F.3d 799 (7th Cir. 1995), cert. denied, 516 U.S. 897 (1995), the taxpayers submitted a return containing the words "Denial & Disclaimer attached as part of this form" above their signatures. In the addition, the taxpayers denied liability for any individual income tax. In determining the effect of the addition on the penalties of perjury statement, the court reasoned that it is a close question whether the addition negates the penalties of perjury statement or not. The addition, according to the court, could be read just to mean that the taxpayers reserve their right to renew their constitutional challenge to the federal income tax law. However, the court concluded that the addition negated the penalties of perjury statement. Id. at 800.

In both Schmitt and Sloan the court questioned the purpose of the addition. Both courts found that the addition of qualifying language was intended to deny tax liability. Accordingly, this effect rendered the purported returns invalid."

The reason is clear: If you are a "nontaxpayer" who is "not liable", then you essentially are outside their jurisdiction and can't even ask for a refund of the money you paid in. All of your property is consequently classified as a "foreign estate", as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(31):

TITLE 26 > Subtitle F > CHAPTER 79 > Sec. 7701.
Sec. 7701. - Definitions

(a)(31) Foreign estate or trust

(A) Foreign estate

The term "foreign estate" means an estate the income of which, from sources without the United States which is not effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business within the United States, is not includible in gross income under subtitle A.

If you indeed are a "nontaxpayer" and act like one, the IRS will pretend like you don't even exist, that is, until in their ignorance and greed they try years later to go after you wrongfully and unlawfully for willful failure to file, notice of deficiency, or some other contrived nonsense to terrorize you into paying and filing again. That's how they make "nontaxpayers" "volunteer" into becoming "taxpayers": with terrorism and treason against the rights of sovereign Americans, starting with "mailing threatening, false, and harassing communications" in violation of 18 U.S.C. §876. Lawyer hypocrites! Jesus was right!

"Woe to you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! For you pay tithes of mint and anise and cummin, and have neglected the weightier matters of the law: justice and mercy and faith. These you ought to have done, without leaving the others undone."
[Matt. 23:23, Bible]

Now that we understand the difference between "taxpayer" and a "nontaxpayer", allow us to make a very critical distinction that is the Achilles Heel of the IRS fraud. Ponder for a moment in your mind the following very insightful question:

"Is a person in law always either a 'taxpayer' or a 'nontaxpayer' as a whole? Can a person simultaneously be BOTH?"

Once you understand the answer to this crucial question, you will understand how to get your money back in an IRS refund claim without litigating! The answer, by the way, is YES! Let us now explain why this is the case.

We said above that if you are a "nontaxpayer", the IRS will basically try to completely ignore your refund claim and you are lucky if they even respond. At worst, they will illegally try to penalize you and at best, they will ignore you. We must remember, however, that it is "taxable income" that makes you a "taxpayer". "Taxable income" is "gross income" minus "deductions", as described in 26 U.S.C. §63(a). Therefore, we must earn "gross income" as legally defined in order to have "taxable income". One cannot earn "gross income" unless they fit into one of the following categories:

1. Domestic taxable activities: Activities within the "United States", which is defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10) as the District of Columbia.
  - 1.1. Federal "Employees", Agencies, and "Public officers" – meaning those who are federal "public officers", federal "employees", and elected officials of the national government. This is one reason why 26 U.S.C. §6331(a) lists only federal officers, federal employees, federal instrumentalities, and elected officials as ones who can be served with a levy upon their compensation, which is actually a payment from the federal government.

1.2. Federal benefit recipients. These people are receiving “social insurance” payments such as Medicare, Social Security, or Unemployment. These benefits are described as “gross income” in 26 U.S.C. §871(a)(3). When they signed up for these programs, they became “trustees”, “employees”, and instrumentalities of the U.S. government. They are described as “federal personnel” in the Privacy Act, 5 U.S.C. §552a(a)(13). Neither the Constitution nor the Social Security Act authorize these benefits to be offered to anyone domiciled outside of federal territories and possessions. For details on this scam, see:

[Resignation of Compelled Social Security Trustee, Family Guardian Fellowship

1.3. Those who operate in a representative capacity in behalf of the federal government via contract. This includes those who have a valid Taxpayer Identification Number, which constitutes a constructive trust contract with the federal government and use that federal property [number] as per 20 C.F.R. §422.103(d). They are identified as federal trustees and/or federal employees as referenced in 20 C.F.R. “Employee Benefits”. For details on this scam, see:

[Resignation of Compelled Social Security Trustee, Family Guardian Fellowship

2. Foreign taxable activities: Activities in the states of the Union or abroad.

2.1. Domiciliaries of the federal zone abroad and in a foreign country pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §911 who are engaged in a “trade or business”:

2.1.1. Statutory “U.S. citizens” - those are federal statutory creations of Congress and defined specifically at 8 U.S.C. §1401 to be those who were born in a U.S. territory or possession AND who have a legal domicile there.

2.1.2. Statutory “Residents” (aliens). These are foreign nationals who have a legal domicile within the District of Columbia or a federal territory or possession. They are defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(A) and 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(2).

If you would like to know more about why the above are the only foreign subjects of taxation, see:

[Why Domicile and Becoming a “Taxpayer” Require Your Consent, Form #05.002
http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm](http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm)

2.2. States of the Union. Neither the IRS nor the Social Security Administration may lawfully operate outside of the federal zone. See:

2.2.1. 4 U.S.C. §72 limits all “public offices” to the District of Columbia. It says that the “public offices” that are the subject of the tax upon a “trade or business” must be exercised ONLY in the District of Columbia and not elsewhere, except as expressly provided by law.

2.2.2. 26 U.S.C. §7601 limits IRS enforcement to internal revenue districts. The President is authorized to establish internal revenue districts pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §7621, but he delegated that authority to the Secretary of the Treasury pursuant to Executive Order 10289. Treasury Order 150-02, signed by the Secretary of the Treasury, says that the only remaining internal revenue district is in the District of Columbia. It eliminated all the other internal revenue districts.

2.2.3. 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10) define the term “United States” as the District of Columbia. Nowhere anyplace else is the tax described in Subtitle A expanded to include anyplace BUT the “United States”.

2.2.4. The U.S. Supreme Court said Congress enjoys NO LEGISLATIVE JURISDICTION within states of the Union and the Internal Revenue Code is “legislation”.

[Carter v. Carter Coal Co., 298 U.S. 238, 56 S.Ct. 855 (1936)]*

*“The difficulties arising out of our dual form of government and the opportunities for differing opinions concerning the relative rights of state and national governments are many; but for a very long time this court has steadfastly adhered to the doctrine that the taxing power of Congress does not extend to the states or their political subdivisions. The same basic reasoning which leads to that conclusion, we think, requires like limitation upon the power which springs from the bankruptcy clause. United States v. Butler, supra.”
[Ashton v. Cameron County Water Improvement District No. 1, 298 U.S. 513, 56 S.Ct. 892 (1936)]*

2.2.5. The U.S. Supreme Court said Congress Cannot establish a “trade or business” in a state and tax it. A “trade or business” is the main subject of Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A. See the following court cite:

“Thus, Congress having power to regulate commerce with foreign nations, and among the several States, and with the Indian tribes, may, without doubt, provide for granting coasting licenses, licenses to pilots, licenses to

1 trade with the Indians, and any other licenses necessary or proper for the exercise of that great and extensive
2 power; and the same observation is applicable to every other power of Congress, to the exercise of which the
3 granting of licenses may be incident. All such licenses confer authority, and give rights to the licensee.

4 But very different considerations apply to the internal commerce or domestic trade of the States. Over this
5 commerce and trade Congress has no power of regulation nor any direct control. This power belongs
6 exclusively to the States. No interference by Congress with the business of citizens transacted within a State is
7 warranted by the Constitution, except such as is strictly incidental to the exercise of powers clearly granted to
8 the legislature. The power to authorize a business within a State is plainly repugnant to the exclusive power of
9 the State over the same subject. It is true that the power of Congress to tax is a very extensive power. It is given
10 in the Constitution, with only one exception and only two qualifications. Congress cannot tax exports, and it
11 must impose direct taxes by the rule of apportionment, and indirect taxes by the rule of uniformity. Thus limited,
12 and thus only, it reaches every subject, and may be exercised at discretion. But, it reaches only existing 13 subjects. Congress cannot authorize a trade or business within a State in 14 order to tax it."

15 [License Tax Cases, 72 U.S. 462, 18 L.Ed. 497, 5 Wall. 462, 2 A.F.T.R. 2224 (1866)]

16 Based on options above, most people do not have "gross income" as legally defined, and they are actually deceiving the 17 government if they put anything but zero on their income tax return. Because none of the earnings of the typical person
18 who is employed in the private sector can legally be classified as either "income" or "gross income", what you put down for 19 "gross income" on your tax return boils down to the question of:

20 "How much of my receipts do I want to 'volunteer' or 'elect' or 'choose' to call 'income' or 'gross income' for 21 the purposes of federal taxes?"

22 How you choose to answer that question then determines the net "donation" (not "tax", but "donation") you are making to
23 the federal government based on the tax rate schedule that your fictitious and fabricated "gross income" falls into. As we 24 said at the beginning of this chapter in section 5.1.8, the income tax is "voluntary" and we really meant it! Not only that,
25 but the U.S. Supreme Court agrees with us!

26 "Our system of taxation is based upon voluntary assessment and payment, not distraint."
27 [Flora v. U.S., 362 U.S. 145 (1960)]

28 Returning to our original question, then, "Can a person be simultaneously BOTH a 'taxpayer' and a 'nontaxpayer'?", the 29 answer is YES. Why? Because so long as we as biological people aren't federal "public officers", any amount we put 30 down for "gross income" on our tax return is a voluntary choice and not REAL "gross income" as legally defined. That
31 amount, and ONLY that amount, which we volunteer to define as "gross income" on our tax return makes us into a
32 "taxpayer", but only for the specific sources of revenue we voluntarily identified as "gross income"! All other monies that 33 we earned are, by definition and implication, not taxable and not "gross income", which means that for those "sources" of 34 revenue that are not "gross income", we are a "nontaxpayer" and NOT a "taxpayer".

35 So when someone asks you if you are a "taxpayer", both the question and your answer must be put in the context of a
36 specific source of income. You should respond by first asking: "for which revenue source?" The answer can seldom be a
37 general "yes" or "no" for ALL RECEIPTS. Consequently, if we put down one cent for "gross income" on our tax return,
38 then ONLY for that source of revenue do we become "taxpayers". All other sources of revenue for us are, by implication,
39 NOT either "gross income" or "taxable income", which means that for those revenues and receipts, we are a
40 "nontaxpayer". Furthermore, once we make the determination of "gross income" and self-assessment on the tax return that
41 only we can do on ourselves, the IRS has NO AUTHORITY to make us into a "taxpayer" or assess us an involuntary
42 liability associated with any receipts other than those that we specifically identify as "gross income":

43 "Our tax system is based on individual self-assessment and voluntary compliance".
44 [Mortimer Caplin, Internal Revenue Audit Manual (1975)]

45 Remember, the only amount we are responsible for paying is the amount we assess ourselves that appears on a tax return
46 that ONLY WE FILL OUT. The Internal Revenue Manual (I.R.M.), Section 5.1.11.6.8 confirms that the IRS is NOT 47 AUTHORIZED to do a Substitute For Return (SFR) on our behalf for the IRS Form 1040 or any of its derivatives (e.g.
48 1040X, 1040EZ, 1040NR, etc). Furthermore, 26 C.F.R. §1.6151-1 confirms that you are only responsible for paying the 49 amount shown on a return (because it says "shall pay").

TITLE 26--INTERNAL REVENUE
 CHAPTER I--INTERNAL REVENUE SERVICE, DEPARTMENT OF THE TREASURY (CONTINUED)
 Procedure and Administration--Table of Contents
 Sec. 1.6151-1 Time and place for paying tax shown on returns.

(a) In general. Except as provided in section 6152 and paragraph (b) of this section, the tax shown on any income tax return shall, without assessment or notice and demand, be paid to the internal revenue officer with whom the return is filed at the time fixed for filing the return (determined without regard to any extension of time for filing the return). For provisions relating to the time for filing income tax returns, see section 6072 and Secs. 1.6072-1 to 1.6072-4, inclusive. For provisions relating to the place for filing income tax returns, see section 6091 and Secs. 1.6091-1 to 1.6091-4, inclusive.

(b)(1) Returns on which tax is not shown. If a taxpayer files a return and in accordance with section 6014 and the regulations thereunder, elects not to show the tax on the return, the amount of tax determined to be due shall be paid within 30 days after the date of mailing to the taxpayer a notice stating the amount payable and making demand upon the taxpayer therefor. However, if the notice is mailed to the taxpayer more than 30 days before the due date of the return, payment of the tax shall not be required prior to such due date.

26 U.S.C. §6020(b) does not authorize the IRS to do an assessment on you because only you (as the “sovereign”) can do an assessment on yourself for a voluntary donation program called the Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A. The only exception to this rule is under 26 U.S.C. §6014, where you can delegate to the IRS the authority to do a return on your behalf, which we don’t recommend. Are you beginning to see through the fog? It took us four years of diligent study to figure this scam out and we are trying to save you some time.

How do we apply this wonderful new discovery to the pursuit of an administrative refund of monies paid into the IRS using a request for refund? First of all, we already established earlier in this section that if you put zero on your return for “gross income”, the IRS will basically treat you as a “nontaxpayer” in entirety and either ignore you completely or try to penalize you illegally as we indicated earlier in section 5.4.16. See the discussion of the IRS internal memo earlier in this section for details. But what if we put down one red cent as “gross income”, then we are “taxpayers” but at the same time the IRS is not authorized to assess us a greater liability. They will try to propose a corrected return amount and act like they have the authority to assess you a greater amount, but we know that they can’t. They may also threaten a penalty if you don’t go along with their proposed new assessment, but this is a fraud too because penalties imposed without a judicial trial are a Bill of Attainder that is prohibited by the Constitution. The way to prevent them scamming us when we use this technique to get our money back is to clarify on our administrative refund request the following facts, which completely ties their hands to do anything BUT refund all the money you paid in mistakenly or under duress. The below qualification that you can add to your refund request will completely tie the IRS’ hands and back them into a corner so that they have no choice but to give you a refund and not penalize you. It uses their own rules and guidance against them so they cannot ignore your filing but also can’t get any more money out of you than you volunteer to pay:

1. This return constitutes a “conditional self-assessment”. I am only indicating a nonzero “gross income” in order to procure a refund of all taxes paid over the period in question. I do not, in fact, make any “gross income” as legally defined but am electing to say that I have “gross income” in order to compel you to process my “return” and provide a refund of all taxes paid. In the past, I have filed “zero returns” and have found that they were ignored because I was not a “taxpayer” so that you had no jurisdiction to respond. Now, I am claiming that I have only one cent of “taxable income” and “gross income” so that you can no longer ignore my return or claim you have no jurisdiction.
2. In the event that the refund requested is not obtained, this conditional self-assessment and attached return is null and void in its entirety ab initio (from the beginning) because only a voluntarily executed return submitted absent duress or compulsion is valid and admissible as evidence according to the Supreme Court in Weeks v. United States, 232 U.S. 383 (1914). However, you should keep a copy of the return in your records as proof that I filed “something” so that the statute of limitations clock starts for all criminal and civil issues. The only thing that has to appear on the return is a signature under penalty of perjury, which it has, in order to be considered a valid filing according to the federal courts.
3. The attached tax return and any determinations by the IRS that are based on it is false, fraudulent, incorrect, and involuntarily submitted if anything on it is changed or altered in any way by either me or the IRS or if the IRS proposes or makes without my written, explicit consent, any change in the assessment appearing on the return or in their computer system. That means you can’t alter the IMF to be inconsistent with what appears on my return or alter the return itself. That is why my return is submitted in pen. In effect, I am delegating VERY SPECIFIC authority to

- 1 only process the return AS IS with NO CHANGES and no penalties or to withdraw the return from processing but not
 2 entry into my IRS administrative file.
- 3 4. The IRS does not have my permission or consent to do any of the following without my explicit written and notarized
 4 consent, and if it does, I withdraw my consent and my self-assessment and change the value of “gross income” on the 5 return to zero.
- 6 4.1. Propose an amended assessment or execute a “Substitute For Return” (SFR).
 7 4.2. Correct anything appearing on this return.
 8 4.3. Enter anything appearing on this return into any kind of information system.
 9 4.4. Share any of the information provided to any agency, person, government organization, or private party who is 10 outside of the IRS and not directly involved in processing this request for refund.
- 11 5. I am not now and never have been an “employee” as defined or used in 26 U.S.C. §6331, 26 U.S.C. §3401(c ), or 26
 12 C.F.R. §31.3401(c)-1.
- 13 6. Any reports of “income” or “wages” provided to you by banks or employers on forms W-2 and 1099 and associated 14 with the SSN attached to my name are hereby declared and presumed to be incorrect, fraudulent, and may not be relied 15 upon as a basis for good faith belief, because they:
- 16 6.1. Are not signed
 17 6.2. Are not submitted under penalty of perjury.
 18 6.3. Are hearsay evidence.
 19 6.4. Are only lawfully required in the case of “employees” under Subtitle C of the Internal Revenue Code, which I just 20 declared in the previous item I am not.
 21 6.5. Are a violation of the Privacy Act, because when private employers illegally volunteer to act as agents of the 22 federal government under the color of law, they are also bound to comply with other laws relating to federal 23 agencies, including the Privacy Act. They in effect become a voluntary federal agency under the color of law in 24 processing federal forms. The Privacy Act, 5 U.S.C. §552a says that agencies may not provide Privacy Act
 25 information to other federal agencies unless authorized by the employee and as required by law in the 26 performance of their lawful functions. Because they are not located on federal property and federal criminal
 27 statutes under 18 U.S.C. and civil statutes under 26 U.S.C. do not apply outside of federal property, then they have
 28 no jurisdiction as federal agents or “federal police” to be involved in any kind of “police power” enforcement 29 activity related to tax collection.

- 30 These financial forms therefore create false presumptions on your part about me that are completely incorrect, 31 unauthorized by law, and which I never consented or authorized my bank voluntarily to provide to you or about me.
- 32 7. The number attached to my name which you call a Social Security Number, is NOT MY number. To be MY number, I 33 have to request it and consent to using it. Since I didn't apply for this number and my parents did without my consent,
 34 and since I use it under unlawful duress and compulsion from both government and financial institutions, then I cannot 35 and should not be held responsible for using or correctly specifying that which is not “mine”. Do not attempt to refer
 36 to that number as “taxpayer identification number”, because it can only be so if I am a “taxpayer”, which I am not for 37 all but one red (communist) cent of monies received which I have elected to call “gross income” for the purposes of 38 obtaining a refund. Even that one cent isn't really “gross income” but I'm electing to call it that so that you can't 39 ignore my return by calling me a “nontaxpayer” if I have zero for “gross income”.
- 40 8. Because I claim that all monies or revenues I earned other than the one cent appearing on my return are NOT “gross 41 income”, then for those monies, I am classified as a “nontaxpayer” and therefore DO NOT have any kind of burden of 42 proving that they are nontaxable under 26 U.S.C. §7491. Instead, the burden of proving that any monies listed on any 43 W-2 or 1099 forms you may have received about me are “taxable income” or “gross income” rests squarely and 44 exclusively on you and only you. Respect for my due process rights under the Fifth and Fourteenth Amendments
 45 demands that you and not me satisfy the burden of proving that these monies qualify as “taxable income” or “gross
 46 income”. Any “presumptions” you might want to make to the contrary about this are hereby refuted and I demand 47 evidence of both the law and the facts that validate any such false presumption.
- 48 9. Pursuant to Internal Revenue Manual (I.R.M.), Section 5.1.11.6.8, you are NOT AUTHORIZED to prepare an 49 amended or Substitute For Return (SFR) changing the “gross income” defined on my form 1040NR. Such returns are
 50 only proposed assessment, but not actual legal assessments. The GAO audit of the IRS in November 1999
 51 documented in GAO report number GAO/GGD-00-60R entitled “Substitute for Returns Program” available on the 52 website at:
 53 <http://famguardian.org/PublishedAuthors/Govt/GAO/GAO-GGD-00-60R-SFR.pdf>
- 54 quotes employees of the IRS officially stating, and I quote:

"In its response to this letter, IRS official indicated that they do not generally prepare actual tax returns. Instead, they said IRS prepares substitute documents that propose assessments. Although IRS and legislation refer to this as the substitute for return program, these officials said that the document does not look like an actual tax return." [Report, page 1]

10. Pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §6020\(b\), IRS is not authorized to do an assessment under Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A. Only I, as the sovereign, can do a self-assessment. No one but me can make me liable for the income tax.
11. There's no liability statute anywhere in the Internal Revenue Code making me liable to pay any tax, and federal courts say one is required in order to collect a tax:

"To the extent that regulations implement the statute, they have the force and effect of law...The regulation implements the statute and cannot vitiate or change the statute..."
[Spreckles v. C.I.R., 119 F.2d, 667]

"Liability for taxation must clearly appear[from statute imposing tax]."
[Higley v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, 69 F.2d. 160 (1934)]

"While Congress might have the power to place such a personal liability upon trust beneficiaries who did not renounce the trust, yet it would require clear expression of such intent, and it cannot be spelled out from language (as that here) which can be given an entirely natural and useful meaning and application excluding such intent."
[Higley v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, 69 F.2d. 160 (1934)]

"A tax is a legal imposition, exclusively of statutory origin (37 Cyc. 724, 725), and, naturally, liability to taxation must be read in statute, or it does not exist."
[Bente v. Bugbee, 137 A. 552, 103 N.J. Law. 608 (1927)]

"...the taxpayer must be liable for the tax. Tax liability is a condition precedent to the demand. Merely demanding payment, even repeatedly, does not cause liability."
[Terry v. Bothke, 713 F.2d. 1405, at 1414 (1983)]

The implementing regulation at 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1 that uses the word "liable to" is null and void, because the Secretary of the Treasury is nowhere conferred the authority to legislate or make law or exceed the scope of the statute at 26 U.S.C. §1 that imposes the tax:

"When enacting §7206(1) Congress undoubtedly knew that the Secretary of the Treasury is empowered to prescribe all needful rules and regulations for the enforcement of the internal revenue laws, so long as they carry into effect the will of Congress as expressed by the statutes. Such regulations have the force of law. The Secretary, however, does not have the power to make law. Dixon v. United States, supra."
[United States v. Levy, 533 F.2d. 969 (1976)]

Therefore, any amount I indicate on my tax return as a natural person as "gross income" is nothing more than a method of making a "donation" to the federal government and cannot be classified as a "tax" without committing fraud. As a matter of fact, it is FRAUD on the part of the IRS and the government to even call the "income tax" a "tax" in my case because nowhere in the Constitution is such as "tax" even authorized. Without the specific authority of the Constitution, whatever you may do or propose to do under the "color of law", including collecting a "voluntary" donation, is null, void, and unenforceable ab initio.

"We start with first principles. The Constitution creates a Federal Government of enumerated powers. See U.S. Const., Art. I, § 8. As James Madison wrote, "[t]he powers delegated by the proposed Constitution to the federal government are few and defined. Those which are to remain in the State governments are numerous and indefinite." The Federalist No. 45, pp. 292-293 (C. Rossiter ed. 1961). This constitutionally mandated division of authority "was adopted by the Framers to ensure protection of our fundamental liberties." Gregory v. Ashcroft, 501 U.S. 452, 458 \(1991\) (internal quotation marks omitted). "Just as the separation and independence of the coordinate branches of the Federal Government serves to prevent the accumulation of excessive power in any one branch, a healthy balance of power between the States and the Federal Government will reduce the risk of tyranny and abuse from either front." Ibid. "
U.S. v. Lopez, [514 U.S. 549 \(1995\)]

Show me where your power to tax internal to the country and upon natural persons is specifically enumerated in the Constitution, because it didn't come from the Constitution and it didn't come from the Sixteenth Amendment,

1                   “...the 16th Amendment conferred no new power of taxation, but simply prohibited the previous complete and
2 plenary power of income taxation possessed by Congress from the beginning from being taken out of the 3 category of indirect taxation [on corporations and businesses rather than individuals] to which it inherently
4 belonged, and being placed in the category of direct taxation.”
5 Stanton v. Baltic Mining Co., [240 U.S. 103, 112-13, 36 S.Ct. 278 (1916)]

6 As a matter of fact, before the Sixteenth Amendment, the case of Pollock v. Farmers' Loan and Trust Company, 157
7 U.S. 429, 158 U.S. 601 (1895) ruled that direct income taxes on biological people like me are unconstitutional, so what
8 change in the constitution since that case in 1895 other than the Sixteenth Amendment modified that? As the Supreme
9 Court said in Marbury v. Madison, 5 U.S. 137 (1803):

10                   “The government of the United States has been emphatically termed a government of laws, and not of men.
11 It will certainly cease to deserve that high appellation, if the laws furnish no remedy for the violation of a vested
12 legal right.”
13  Marbury v. Madison, [5 U.S. 137; 1 Cranch 137, 2 L.Ed. 60 (1803)]

14 So where is not only the Constitutional authority for what you are doing, but also please provide the following as 15 evidence of your personal authority:

16 11.1. Your Delegation order.

17 11.2. A copy of your Pocket Commission under Internal Revenue Manual (I.R.M.), Section 1.16.4 pursuant to the 18 Freedom of Information Act, 5 U.S.C. §552.

19 11.3. The source of your authority to exercise the equivalent of “police powers” as a federal agency within the borders
20 of the sovereign union states. The Supreme Court has ruled hundreds of times that the federal government has no
21 police powers inside the borders of the states of the Union, and that is where I am writing to you from. The act of 22 collecting taxes is a police power. Here is the definition of “police power” from Black’s Law Dictionary:

24 Const., upon the individual states, and, in turn, delegated to local governments, through which they are enabled
25 to establish a special department of police; adopt such laws and regulations as tend to prevent the commission
26 of fraud and crime, and secure generally the comfort, safety, morals, health, and prosperity of the citizens by
27 preserving the public order, preventing a conflict of rights in the common intercourse of the citizens, and 28 insuring to each an uninterrupted enjoyment of all the privileges conferred upon him or her by the general
29 laws.

30                   The power of the State to place restraints on the personal freedom and property rights of persons for the 31 protection of the public safety, health, and morals or the promotion of the public convenience and general
32 prosperity. The police power is subject to limitations of the federal and State constitutions, and especially to 33 the requirement of due process. Police power is the exercise of the sovereign right of a government to promote 34 order, safety, security, health, morals and general welfare within constitutional limits and is an essential
35 attribute of government. Marshall v. Kansas City, Mo., 355 S.W.2d. 877, 883.
36 [Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1156]

- 37 12. It is the height of hypocrisy and arrogance on your part for you to be on the one hand effectively illegally soliciting
38 donations and bribery from me under the “color of law” to then either attempt to penalize me illegally in the process or 39 make demands about any aspect of the conditions under which I choose or volunteer to “donate”. I simply refuse to 40 “donate” if you refuse to let me decide the terms under which I can or will donate. Compelled charity in that case
41 would not be charity at all, but slavery disguised as charity. Slavery is illegal under the Thirteenth Amendment.
- 42 13. I am not now and never have been a “fiduciary” for any entity or “income” (taxable or not) in any way and if you have 43 records indicting the contrary, then I:
44 13.1. Have enclosed an IRS Form 56 eliminating all such fiduciary relationships.
45 13.2. Demand that you send to me the authority by which such a relationship was established, because I never 46 authorized it. Failure to provide evidence of the existence of fiduciary duty within 30 days shall constitute a nihil
47 dicit judgment under common law of the fact that none exists.
- 48 14. I am not now and never have been a “transferee” for U.S. government property as defined in 26 U.S.C. §6901 and I
49 demand any evidence you might have that might suggest the contrary. Failure to provide evidence of the existence of
50 my status as a “transferee” within 30 days constitutes a nihil dicit judgment under common law establishing that I am 51 not such a transferee.
- 52 15. The entirety of all my property and my estate is now classified and always has been classified as a “foreign estate”
53 under 26 U.S.C. §7701\(a\)\(31\) in regards to Title 26 of the Internal Revenue Code and I demand any evidence you have
54 that might suggest the contrary. Failure to provide evidence suggesting that any part of my estate is not a foreign estate
55 within 30 days constitutes a nihil dicit judgment under common law establishing that my estate is a foreign estate as 56 legally defined.

16. The only reason you may have received any “taxes” that were either illegally withheld under Subtitle C or paid under Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A is because of the presence of duress and unlawful coercion against my property rights and my right to work by my employer, who I am very afraid to prosecute because I might lose my job. He nevertheless deserves to be behind bars for his misdeeds. You should interpret receipt of withholding monies by you from my employer as evidence of extortion, racketeering, and conspiracy against my property rights in violation of the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution. For you to condone or encourage or permit such criminal conduct on the part of private employers makes you an accessory to extortion and racketeering in violation of 18 U.S.C. §872 and 18 U.S.C. §225. Instead, as my fiduciary agent (see Public Law 96-303, Executive Order 12731, and 5 C.F.R. §2635.101), you are duty-bound to right this wrong and return this unlawfully extorted money back to me. If you don't, I will prosecute you personally for
- 16.1. Breach of fiduciary duty in violation of Public Law 96-303, Executive Order 12731, and 5 C.F.R. §2635.101.
  - 16.2. RICO in violation of 18 U.S.C. §872
  - 16.3. Peonage under Thirteenth Amendment, 18 U.S.C. §1581, and 42 U.S.C. §1994.
  - 16.4. Bank robbery, if you attempt any Notice of Levies on me in violation of my Fifth Amendment rights.
  - 16.5. Conspiracy against rights under 18 U.S.C. §241.
  - 16.6. Obstruction of justice, for not revealing the truth to me about this matter in violation of 18 U.S.C. Chapter 73.
17. This request for refund constitutes a Petition for Redress of Grievances protected under the First Amendment of the U.S. Constitution. The right to petition for redress CANNOT be penalized, taxed, controlled, or regulated in any way by the government because it is a right and not a privilege. You cannot penalize me for exercising this constitutional right.
18. You are therefore not authorized by law to penalize me for submitting this “conditional self-assessment” because:
- 18.1. Of the constitutional constraint against Bills of Attainder found in Article 1, Section 9, Clause 3 of the U.S. Constitution
  - 18.2. The definition of the term “person” in the context of the penalty regulations found in 26 C.F.R. §301.6671-1(b), which means only an employee of a corporation, and which I am not. If you choose to try to illegally impose any penalties on this conditional assessment, then I demand evidence that I am an “employee of a corporation” as defined there. If you penalize me in disregard of my due process rights under the Fifth and Fourteenth Amendments, then you will be prosecuted under 26 U.S.C. §7433 for wrongful collection actions and also under the Constitution for violation of my inalienable Constitutional rights. I shall pursue a writ of mandamus to have my property returned and have you FIRED for malfeasance, negligence, and breach of fiduciary duty.
  - 18.3. You would be compelling me under unlawful duress to commit fraud and make false statements on future filings in order to appease your illegal, irrational, and extortionary demands.
19. Don't try to pull any scams with the word “includes” in your response because I know your game and it's a violation of my due process rights to use ambiguous definitions or laws that are “void for vagueness”. See the following for hard proof of this:

<http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/Forms/Discovery/Deposition/Section 09.htm>

Either the law applies to me as a private individual or it doesn't, and I'm not going to play word guessing games or engage in speculation about what either you or any federal judge who is both paid by the income tax and subservient to your organized extortion “thinks” the word “includes” implies. If the law doesn't explicitly identify me as a person “liable” for the tax as a private person residing in a union state and outside of your territorial jurisdiction, then I'm not responsible to subject myself to your harassment or your illegal attempts at racketeering and extortion in order to get me to “volunteer” under duress to pay a “tax” that I don't owe. Prove your authority using only the law or get out of my life, please.

20. The only difference between what you do and what the Mafia does is the authority of law, both in the Constitution and in the Statutes that implement the Constitution. If you can't show me the law that makes me responsible in clear and unambiguous terms, or you know what the law says and refuse to explain or justify the good faith basis for your belief, then:
- 20.1. I have no choice but to assume that you are the Mafia, and your inaction and negligent administration of the tax code was what earned you that name.
  - 20.2. I must conclude that you are a Communist as defined in 50 U.S.C. §841, because the U.S. Congress in that section defines a “communist” as follows:

“Unlike political parties, the Communist Party acknowledges no constitutional or statutory [lawful] limitations upon its conduct or upon that of its members. The Communist Party is relatively small numerically, and gives scant indication of capacity ever to attain its ends by lawful political means. The peril inherent in its operation arises not from its numbers, but from its failure to acknowledge any limitation as to the nature of its activities, and its dedication to the proposition that the present constitutional Government of the United States ultimately must be brought to ruin by any available means, including resort to force and violence [or using income taxes]. Holding that doctrine, its role as the agency of a hostile foreign power [the Federal Reserve and the American Bar Association (ABA)] renders its existence a clear present and continuing danger to the security of the United States."

If you refuse to acknowledge or comply with or explain the lawful basis for your authority, then YOU ARE A COMMUNIST because you refuse to acknowledge or comply with lawful constraints upon your authority. So show me the law that makes me liable and acknowledge the laws that limit and define your power to me or YOU ARE A COMMUNIST as the United States Congress defines it.

21. Without the explicit authority of Constitutional, statutory, and regulatory law combined making me "liable" and evidence of that lawful authority provided to me in satisfaction of my due process rights under the Constitution, any amount of money that you might attempt to extort from me is paid in violation of the following laws, which in effect makes me into a co-conspirator with you in the following serious felonies. It also makes you into a money laundering operation for the extortion racket headed by our corrupted politicians:
  - 21.1. 18 U.S.C. §201: Bribery of public officers and witnesses. I would be compelled to bribe my Congressman with monies extorted from me involuntarily.
  - 21.2. 18 U.S.C. §597 Expenditures to Influence Voting. The monies I involuntarily paid to the federal government absent Constitutional authority could be used by politicians to influence voters to vote for them because of some socialist benefit they might receive.
22. I cannot in good conscience subsidize any government activity that is not explicitly authorized by both the Constitution and the Statutes that implement it and a clear and explicit showing by the moving party (that is you) that jurisdiction exists as required by the Administrative Procedures Act, 5 U.S.C. §556(d). To do otherwise or acquiesce otherwise would be to condone and subsidize criminal behavior by our government and by public servants in our government. Such acquiescence would also constitute Treason against the Constitution in violation of Article III of the Constitution. My military oath prevents me from any act of such Treason. You cannot penalize me for honoring my Constitutional oath.
23. Silence or lack of response to all the demands in this legal notice after a 30 day period shall constitute acquiescence to all of the determinations and facts herein contained and will result in a Notice of Default served upon you with a Proof of Mailing provided by a registered Notary Public.
24. Don't bother quoting any federal court cases below the Supreme Court in response to this legal notice because your own Internal Revenue Manual (I.R.M.), Section 4.10.7.2.9.8 says that any ruling below the Supreme Court may not be applied to more than the single "taxpayer" in the case involved. If you can't follow your own written internal procedures, then why on earth should I do what you expect me to or even listen to you?
25. Don't bother asserting jurisdiction based on my citizenship status because I am a "national" under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) domiciled outside the federal zone and not exercising a public office. That makes me a "non-resident non-person" beyond the jurisdiction of Congress.
26. The closes status in your codes and regulations would be a "nonresident alien" not engaged in a "trade or business" (public office) for the purposes of the income tax pursuant to 26 C.F.R. §1.871-1(b)(1)(i), but I am not a statutory "nonresident alien" either because not engaged in a public office.
27. You may feel tempted to retaliate against this request for refund by overriding your IDRS system and manually entering bogus time-barred assessments against me that are back-dated. Be advised that I am very familiar with how to decode my non-sanitized IMF file and if you do so, you will be prosecuted for fraud, put behind bars, and fired from the service for your misconduct if I have anything to say about it.
28. What the Lord requires of you in this case is to DO JUSTICE and to LOVE MERCY. You can't do either if you care more about stealing my money than you care about following the law and the Constitution, your own integrity, and about upholding the public trust and the Constitution that maintains the civil society that we both value. Both of these biblical requirements, JUSTICE and MERCY, can be satisfied by refunding to me the money that was illegally sent to you under duress by my criminal employer, who forced me to pay a tax I didn't voluntarily want to pay as a condition of employment.

"He has shown you, O man, what is good;
And what does the Lord require of you
But to do justly,
To love mercy,
And to walk humbly with your God?"
[Micah 6:8, Bible, NKJV]

29. If you respond to this request for refund by providing the amount of refund requested, then under a nihil dicit judgment, you have consented that all other revenues and receipts received by me are NOT TAXABLE and NOT GROSS INCOME, and you agree that:

29.1. My estate is indeed a foreign estate as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701\(a\)\(31\).

29.2. The only amount of “gross income” I earn is the amount that I say I earn, because none of what I make is legally defined as “gross income”. Nowhere is any of the money that I earned as a private worker who is not a “public official” of the United States legally classified as “gross income”. I challenge you to provide any statute that concludes otherwise. If you look in the annotated U.S. Code, 1928 edition, under 26 U.S.C. §954, you can clearly see that the definition of “gross income” has always meant, in the case of natural persons, only public officers of the United States government. Obfuscation of the Internal Revenue Code by greedy lawyers in the Department of Treasury can't change that fact either, because the Constitution hasn't changed and it remains the definition and limitation of Congress' power to tax.

29.3. You are forever estopped from proceeding against me in the future either administratively or in litigation for:

29.3.1. A return or civil suit for return of the monies you refunded to me.

29.3.2. Fraud or false statements in violation of 26 U.S.C. §7204.

29.3.3. Failure to file a tax return in violation of 26 U.S.C. §7203.

If you find yourself unwilling or unable to consent to the above determinations in conjunction with the requested refund, please find a supervisor or other authority who has such delegated authority and have him sign the letter you enclose with your refund as an affidavit so that we can settle this matter and bar or estop any future criminal or civil litigation related to it.

30. If you don't comply by providing to me the refund I am demanding under the authority of law, then I will see you in court and will show you the same amount of lack of mercy that you earned by refusing to be civil or accountable or helpful to members of the public like me who you are there to SERVE as a public servant. I will personally make sure that you will reap exactly what you sow. Remember, “Service” is the most important part of “Internal Revenue Service”, and I am the customer you exist to serve. Making me your servant is the very definition of tyranny in a free country.

A word of caution is in order about the above approach. We warn you throughout this book never to claim to be a “taxpayer” because it prejudices your rights. The discussion above helps to show you how to avoid prejudicing your rights more than necessary when you claim to be a “taxpayer”. We warn you that it is at best a triage measure designed as an expedient to help those of you who have been wronged by your private employers wrongfully withholding taxes from your pay against your wishes. We are trying to show you how to undo that wrong and recover these illegally withheld taxes without prejudicing your rights and without the need to litigate. Please be cautious and make sure you have read at least the first five chapters of this book before you attempt to claim a refund using the above technique.

We wish to conclude this section by revealing some very important implications of being a “nontaxpayer” that we need to be very aware of in order to avoid jeopardizing our status and creating a false presumption that we are a “taxpayer”, which are summarized below:

1. You cannot quote any section of the Internal Revenue Code that requires you to be a “taxpayer” in order to claim its benefit. For instance, 26 U.S.C. §7433, which purports to allow anyone to file a suit against an IRS agent for wrongful collection actions, says the following:

§7433. Civil damages for certain unauthorized collection actions

(a) In general If, in connection with any collection of Federal tax with respect to a taxpayer, any officer or employee of the Internal Revenue Service recklessly or intentionally, or by reason of negligence, disregards any provision of this title, or any regulation promulgated under this title, such taxpayer may bring a civil action for damages against the United States in a district court of the United States. Except as provided in section 7432, such civil action shall be the exclusive remedy for recovering damages resulting from such actions.

Note the phrase above “with respect to a taxpayer”, which are no accident. If you are a “nontaxpayer”, then you have no recourse under the above statute. HOWEVER, you still have recourse under the constitution for deprivation of property without due process of law under the Fifth Amendment. If you filed a lawsuit against an IRS agent, your remedy would then have come from citing the Constitution and possibly also cite the criminal code, which is also positive law, but NOT any part of the I.R.C.

2. You cannot call the Internal Revenue Code "law" or a "statute", but only a "code" or a "title". It can only be "law" if you are a "taxpayer". What makes anything "law" is your consent, according to the Declaration of Independence, and calling the IRC "law" is an admission that you consent to its provisions and are subject to them. See sections 5.4.1 through 5.4.6.6 later for details on this scam.
3. You cannot fill out and submit any form that can only be used by "taxpayers" nor can you sign any form that uses the word "taxpayer" to identify you. We have gone through and created substitute versions of most major IRS Forms to remove such false presumptions from the forms at:

4. When you get an IRS notice that either calls you a "taxpayer" or uses a "Taxpayer Identification Number" (TIN), then the notice is in error and you have a duty to bring this to the attention of the IRS. Only "taxpayers" can have a TIN. Below is an example form which satisfies this purpose:

Wrong Party Notice, Form #07.105

5. You must include the following language in all your correspondence with the tax authorities in order to emphasize your status as a "nontaxpayer":

I look forward to being corrected promptly in anything you believe is inconsistent with reality found in this correspondence or any of its attachments. If you do not respond, I shall conclude that you believe I am a "nontaxpayer" who is neither subject to nor liable for any internal revenue tax.

"The revenue laws are a code or system in regulation of tax assessment and collection. They relate to taxpayers, and not to nontaxpayers. The latter are without their scope, No procedure is prescribed for nontaxpayers, and no attempt is made to annul any of their rights and remedies in due course of law. With them Congress does not assume to deal, and they are neither of the subject nor of the object of the revenue laws..."

*"The distinction between persons and things within the scope of the revenue laws and those without is vital."

I remind you that your own IRS mission statement says that you can only help "taxpayers" to understand their tax responsibilities and therefore, if you won't talk with me, the only thing I can logically conclude is that I must not be a "taxpayer" and instead am a "nontaxpayer" not subject to any provision within the I.R.C. In that case, thank you for confirming that I am person outside your jurisdiction and not "liable" for any internal revenue tax:

*Internal Revenue Manual (I.R.M.), Section 1.1.1.1 (02-26-1999) TA \l "Internal Revenue Manual (I.R.M.), Section 1.1.1.1 (02-26-1999)" \s "Internal Revenue Manual (I.R.M.), Section 1.1.1.1 (02-26-1999)" \c 3
IRS Mission and Basic Organization*

The IRS Mission: Provide America's taxpayers top quality service by helping them understand and meet their tax responsibilities and by applying the tax law with integrity and fairness to all.

6. Any IRS publication addressed to "taxpayers" isn't meant for you and you cannot rely upon it. For instance, IRS Publication 1 is entitled Your Rights as a Taxpayer. The title of this publication is an oxymoron: Taxpayers don't have rights! A "nontaxpayer" cannot cite this pamphlet as authority for defending his rights. We called the IRS and asked them if they have an equivalent pamphlet for "nontaxpayers" and they said no. Then we asked whether the rights mentioned in the pamphlet also apply to "nontaxpayers" and they reluctantly said "yes". Someone wrote an "improved" version of this pamphlet entitled Your Rights as a Nontaxpayer which you may wish to read at:

1 The Internal Revenue Code defines the term “return” as follows:

2 26 U.S.C. §6213\(g\): Restrictions Applicable to deficiencies; petition to Tax Court

3 (g) Definitions

4 For purposes of this section -

5 (1) Return

6 The term "return" includes any return, statement, schedule, or list, and any amendment or supplement thereto,
7 filed with respect to any tax imposed by subtitle A or B, or chapter 41, 42, 43, or 44.

9 TITLE 26 > Subtitle F > CHAPTER 61 > Subchapter B > § 6103

10 § 6103. Confidentiality and disclosure of returns and return information

11 (b) Definitions For purposes of this section—

12 (1) Return

13 The term “return” means any tax or information return, declaration of estimated tax, or claim for refund
14 required by, or provided for or permitted under, the provisions of this title which is filed with the Secretary by,
15 on behalf of, or with respect to any person, and any amendment or supplement thereto, including supporting
16 schedules, attachments, or lists which are supplemental to, or part of, the return so filed.

17 Consequently, anything that identifies itself as a “statement or list” constitutes a “return” for the purposes of U.S. Tax Court
18 deficiencies. Federal courts have also helped to clarify the meaning of “return”, and they imply that if the intention of the 19 submitter was to obtain a “refund” under the authority of any provision of the I.R.C., then the submittal constitutes a
20 “return”:

21 Taxpayers argue that § 6702 does not apply to them in that the Form 1040 that they filed was not a “purported
22 return.” While taxpayers did write on the forms the words “not a tax return,” the form was undeniably filed to
24 §301.6402-3(a)(1) (1983). As stated a district court that recently faced this same situation:

25 Since the plaintiffs' stated purpose was to obtain a refund, the documents submitted must be deemed to be
26 purported tax returns for purposes of Section 6702. It is true that the plaintiffs wrote on the forms that they
27 were not returns, but this disclaimer has no effect in light of the plaintiffs' stated purpose to have the 28 documents treated as returns. If such a disclaimer were sufficient to avoid liability under Section 6702, tax
29 protesters could flood the IRS with frivolous tax returns bearing similar disclaimers without penalty.

30 Nichols v. United States, 575 F.Supp. 320, 322(D.Minn.1983). Thus, the Form 1040 was a purported return, 31 and the district court correctly granted summary judgment on the issue of the penalty under § 6702.
32 [Davis v. U.S., 742 F.2d. 171, 54 A.F.T.R.2d. 84-6084, 84-2 U.S.T.C. P 9808]

33 If you electronically search the entire I.R.C. as we did, in fact, you will also find several references to the phrase “return of 34 income”. Even more interesting is the definition of what a “return of income” is. After careful examination of all statutes
35 that mention “returns”, we conclude based on the preponderance of evidence that it really means a “return of income”,
36 which is a fancy way of describing a “kickback” or “bribe” given by federal “public officers” to their “employer” and
37 franchise tax administrator, the federal government. Below are just a few examples from the “code” that prove that a
38 “return” is actually a payment to the government, and not simply a paper document as the IRS would have you mistakenly 39 believe:

40 26 U.S.C. §6012. Persons required to make **returns of income**

41 (a) General rule

42 Returns with respect to income taxes under subtitle A shall be made by the following:

43 (1) (A) Every individual having for the taxable year gross income which equals or exceeds the exemption
44 amount, except that a return shall not be required of an individual –

26 U.S.C. §7508. Time for performing certain acts postponed by reason of service in combat zone

(a) Time to be disregarded

In the case of an individual serving in the Armed Forces of the United States, or serving in support of such Armed Forces, in an area designated by the President of the United States by Executive order as a "combat zone" for purposes of section 112, at any time during the period designated by the President by Executive order as the period of combatant activities in such zone for purposes of such section, or hospitalized as a result of injury received while serving in such an area during such time, the period of service in such area, plus the period of continuous qualified hospitalization attributable to such injury, and the next 180 days thereafter, shall be disregarded in determining, under the internal revenue laws, in respect of any tax liability (including any interest, penalty, additional amount, or addition to the tax) of such individual -

(1) Whether any of the following acts was performed within the time prescribed therefor:

(A) Filing any return of income, estate, or gift tax (except income tax withheld at source and income tax imposed by subtitle C or any law superseded thereby);

26 U.S.C. §6075. Time for filing estate and gift tax returns

(a) Returns relating to large transfers at death

The return required by section 6018 with respect to a decedent shall be filed with the return of the tax imposed by chapter 1 for the decedent's last taxable year or such later date specified in regulations prescribed by the Secretary.

(b) Gift tax returns

(1) General rule

Returns made under section 6019 (relating to gift taxes) shall be filed on or before the 15th day of April following the close of the calendar year.

(2) Extension where taxpayer granted extension for filing income tax return

Any extension of time granted the taxpayer for filing the return of income taxes imposed by subtitle A for any taxable year which is a calendar year shall be deemed to be also an extension of time granted the taxpayer for filing the return under section 6019 for such calendar year.

A "return" within the I.R.C. is therefore in effect and in truth a compelled "bribe" payment to the government for the "privilege" of conducting a "public office" within the federal government or receiving a federal "payment". Recall that the U.S. government is defined in 28 U.S.C. §3002(15)(A) as a "federal corporation". As you will learn later, "income" is defined by the Sixteenth Amendment as "corporate profit". The IRS fakes most of us out into admitting we are "employees" of this federal corporation on the IRS Form W-4, which says "employee" in the upper left corner. Under 26 U.S.C. §6331(a) and 26 C.F.R. §31.3401\(c\)-1, only those who are "public officers", who are "officers of a corporation" can be "employees". All such corporate officers ("taxpayers") are described in the code as being involved in a "trade or business" in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26). Therefore, nearly all "taxpayers" under the I.R.C. are engaged in a "trade or business", which is a "public office", within the "United States", which is the United States federal government. Receipt of a federal payment by a "public officer" is then counted as "corporate profit" under the I.R.C. and we as the recipients are in the custody of corporate profit which must be returned to the federal government. The "tax" on this "corporate profit" under the I.R.C. is effectively a "return" or kickback of a percentage of the privileged payment received from the federal government. Until federal "tax" is withheld and paid, we are acting as a "fiduciary" or "transferee" (see 26 U.S.C. §6901) over federal property, and "in rem" federal jurisdiction exists over the property under Article 4, Section 3, Clause 2 of the Constitution. Therefore, an "income tax" is nothing but a federal employee kickback payment. Those private citizens who refuse to commit perjury on an IRS Form W-4 by declaring themselves to be federal "employees" or who refuse to pay this illegal bribe and expose this fraud for what it is are sometimes slandered and fired with no law authorizing such treatment whatsoever.

QUESTION FOR DOUBTERS: If you disagree, please show us a section anywhere in the Internal Revenue Code or Treasury Regulations that defines a “return” as anything OTHER than a kickback payment from federal employees to the federal government. You are not allowed to “presume” otherwise. In the legal field, every statement and belief must be backed up with evidence or it is frivolous.

Why did the government implement the income tax as the equivalent of a federal “employee” or “public officer” kickback? Isn't it easier to just cut the pay of federal “public officer” or “employee” rather than overpay them and ask for the difference back? The answer is that:

1. The only types of entities that the government can write laws which impose duties or obligations upon are its own officers and employees while on official duty, and not private persons in the general public. The U.S. Supreme Court has said that the ability to regulate what it calls “private” conduct is “repugnant to the Constitution”:

“The power to “legislate generally upon” life, liberty, and property, as opposed to the “power to provide modes of redress” against offensive state action, was “repugnant” to the Constitution. Id., at 15. See also United States v. Reese, 92 U.S. 214, 218 (1876); United States v. Harris, 106 U.S. 629, 639 (1883); James v. Bowman, 190 U.S. 127, 139 (1903). Although the specific holdings of these early cases might have been superseded or modified, see, e.g., Heart of Atlanta Motel, Inc. v. United States, 379 U.S. 241 (1964); United States v. Guest, 383 U.S. 745 (1966), their treatment of Congress’ §5 power as corrective or preventive, not definitional, has not been questioned.”
[City of Boerne v. Flores, Archbishop of San Antonio, 521 U.S. 507 (1997)]

2. The Constitution prohibits direct taxes under Article 1, Section 2, Clause 3 and Article 1, Section 9, Clause 4 and the first direct income tax Congress tried to impose was declared unconstitutional in Pollock v. Farmers’ Loan & Trust Co., 157 U.S. 429 (1895). Therefore, the only way Congress could lawfully collect an income tax was by imposing it upon excise taxable, voluntary, avoidable activities, which the courts call “franchises” and “public rights”. The excise taxable activity is called a “trade or business” and it is statutorily defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26) as “the functions of a public office”.

Therefore, the federal government couldn't impose a lawful or constitutional income tax and never did attempt to tax people in states of the Union using the Internal Revenue Code. Instead, they created a federal “employee” or “public officer” kickback program that only applied in the District of Columbia initially. This first “tax” or kickback program started during the Civil War with the Revenue Act of 1862, and applied only to public officers and excluded federal judges. Since that time, our “weasels in Washington” have abused “words of art”, obfuscation of the “code”, legal trickery, and corruption of the federal judiciary to unlawfully expand the operation of this kickback “scheme” outside the District of Columbia in what amounts to a conspiracy to destroy the separation of powers between the states and federal government. They did this by fooling people in the states of the Union into believing that they the proper subjects for what amounts to a tax exclusively on federal “public offices”, which 4 U.S.C. §72 limits EXCLUSIVELY to the District of Columbia. You may find a complete description of this conspiracy to destroy the separation of powers for financial reasons in the document below:

Government Conspiracy to Destroy the Separation of Powers, Form #05.023
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

Within the Internal Revenue Code, the only “persons” who earn “income” are those who receive federal payments from or on behalf of the government as “public officers” engaged in the “trade or business” excise taxable franchise. This is confirmed by examining 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1(a)(2)(ii), which says that only those who have “income effectively connected with a trade or business” can earn “gross income”:

*NORMAL TAXES AND SURTAXES
 DETERMINATION OF TAX LIABILITY
 Sec. 1.1-1 Income tax on individuals.*

(a)(2)(ii) For taxable years beginning after December 31, 1970, the tax imposed by section 1(d), as amended by the Tax Reform Act of 1969, shall apply to the income effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business in the United States by a married alien individual who is a nonresident of the United States for all or part of the taxable year or by a foreign estate or trust. For such years the tax imposed by section 1(c), as amended by such Act, shall apply to the income effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business in the United States by an unmarried alien individual (other than a surviving spouse) who is a nonresident of the United States for all or part of the taxable year. See paragraph (b)(2) of section 1.871-8.”

[26 C.F.R. §1.1-1(a)(2)(ii)]

“trade or business” is then defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701\(a\)\(26\) as “the functions of a public office” in the U.S government.

26 U.S.C. §7701\(a\)\(26\)

“The term ‘trade or business’ includes [is limited to] the performance of the functions of a public office.”

26 U.S.C. §7701\(a\)\(31\) also confirms that if we don’t earn any income from within the District of Columbia, which is called the “United States” in the I.R.C., and if that income is not connected to a “trade or business”, then it is foreign to the I.R.C. and outside the jurisdiction of the I.R.S.

TITLE 26 > Subtitle F > CHAPTER 79 > §7701
§7701. Definitions

(a) When used in this title, where not otherwise distinctly expressed or manifestly incompatible with the intent thereof—

(31) Foreign estate or trust
(A) Foreign estate

The term “foreign estate” means an estate the income of which, from sources without the [federal] United States which is not effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business within the United States, is not includible in gross income under subtitle A.

Therefore, only those who consent to be “taxpayers” and “public officers” on behalf of the government and who receive a federal payments greater than the “exemption amount” indicated in 26 U.S.C. §6012 above must make a “return of income” to the government. The only way a person can earn such “income” and “gross income” is to have earnings “effectively connected with a trade or business in the [federal] United States”, which is lawyer-trickery for saying that a person must be engaged in a political office (in the District of Columbia, which is the what “United States” is defined to mean in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10)).

QUESTION FOR DOUBTERS: If you think we are wrong in our conclusions relating to a “trade or business” here, then please explain why 26 U.S.C. §6902\(a\) and 26 U.S.C. §6901\(a\)\(1\)\(A\)\(i\) places the burden of proof upon the Secretary of the Treasury in U.S. Tax Court Proceedings to prove that their opponent is a “transferee”, which is a fiduciary of federal property connected to a “public office”? We assert that the only “taxpayer” who can litigate in Tax Court is one who is engaged in a “trade or business”, which is a public office in the U.S. government.

Once we understand that a “return” is in fact a kickback payment of federal earnings or payments to “public officers”, it becomes clear why the IRS and the federal courts identify a 1040 form with “no liability” indicated as not a legitimate “return”. You can verify this yourself by reading an IRS internal memo indicating this below:

<http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/Evidence/Refunds/1998-053IRSMemoZeroRet.pdf>

Below is a section from the IRS’ own Internal Revenue Manual describing what a valid return is. Notice that they describe the requirements applicable to “taxpayers” but not “nontaxpayers”. Remember from the previous section that a “taxpayer” is someone liable and subject to the I.R.C., which we know doesn’t describe most Americans. The only thing we can conclude from this is that there are no requirements for what constitutes a valid return for “nontaxpayers”.

Internal Revenue Manual
Section 25.6.5.5.1 (11-01-2004)
Valid Return

1. A taxpayer is not considered to have filed a tax return (which begins the period of limitations on assessment) until the taxpayer files a valid tax return. A valid return is described at IRM 25.6.2.4.14. In general, a tax return is considered sufficient for establishing a statute of limitations period if it meets the following criteria:

A. It has data sufficient available to calculate a tax liability,
B. It purports to be a return,
C. It is an honest and reasonable attempt to satisfy the requirements of the tax law, and

1 D. It is signed under penalties of perjury.

2 Note:

3 #While there is no question that an unsigned return is an invalid return; the Service has found it
4 necessary to process unsigned balance due returns since 1970 in order for the Service to handle the 5 volume of unsigned payment returns received annually. This business decision is reflected in P-2-11
6 (Approved 10-02-1970), Internal Revenue Manual (I.R.M.), Section 1.2.1.3.6.#

7 2. A return filed on the wrong form may be a valid return for the purpose of starting the period of limitations if 8 it provides sufficient date to calculate a tax liability.

9 A. Federal Insurance Contributions Act (FICA) form instead of Railroad Retirement Tax Act (RRTA) form. A
10 FICA return did not start the period on an employer's RRTA tax liability because the FICA return did not 11 include all the information necessary to compute the RRTA tax. See Atlantic Land & Improv. Co. v. United 12 States, 790 F.2d. 853, 860 (11th Cir. 1986).

13 B. RRRA form instead of FICA form. It appears that a RRRA return filed for a FICA tax liability might be 14 sufficient to start the period on that liability. See the suggestion in Atlantic Land & Improv. Co., 790 F.2d. 860
15 at footnote 12.

16 [SOURCE: <http://www.irs.gov/irm/part25/ch06s05.html>]

17 Those who earn no "income", which is a code word within the I.R.C., Subtitle A for:

- 18 1. A federal payment to a Social Security Trustee, who is the benefit recipient. See 26 U.S.C. §861\(a\)\(8\).
19 2. Employment compensation to a federal "employee", as defined in 26 C.F.R. §31.3401\(c\)-1.
20 3. Corporate profit for the federal corporation called the "United States", as defined in 28 U.S.C. §3002\(15\)\(A\).

21 . . . cannot "return" a portion of it. Most people fit in this category and don't even realize it because they believe the 22 deliberate deception contained in the IRS publications instead of reading the I.R.C. for themselves. Such "persons" would 23 be described simply as "not liable" and would not need to file any forms with the IRS. However, a condition of no liability,
24 at least as far as the IRS is concerned, can only exist when all erroneous reports of "income" connected with the "trade or 25 business" franchise coming from private companies or financial institutions have been rebutted. This is accomplished in 26 the case of a W-2 by filing IRS Form W-2C separately or IRS Form 4852 with a tax return or sending in corrected versions
27 of the other types of forms. If these erroneous reports of "income" (federal payments) are never rebutted and if the amount 28 reported exceeds the exemption amount identified in 26 U.S.C. §6012, then:

- 29 1. Un-rebutted and erroneous IRS Form W-2, 1042S, 1098, and 1099 information return reports:
30 1.1. Create a false presumption of the receipt of federal payments.
31 1.2. Constitute a statement of liability under penalty of perjury. The IRS Form W-3 identifies itself as a "tax 32 statement" and it is signed under penalty of perjury.
33 1.3. Create a false presumption that the recipient consented to be treated as a federal "employee", which is what it
34 says in the upper left corner of the Form W-4.
35 1.4. Constitute evidence that the recipient received "income" or "gross income" AND that they consented to have his 36 or her earnings treated as "wages" under 26 C.F.R. §31.3401\(a\)-1.
37 1.5. The presence of a federal identifying number on the information returns also constitutes consent to treat an SSN
38 as a TIN. There is no regulation or statute authorizing conversion of an SSN into a TIN. Only the recipient can 39 do that by disclosing a number to the payor or the IRS.
40 1.6. Create a false presumption that the subject of the report filed an IRS Form W-4, which is called a "voluntary 41 withholding agreement".
42 2. Since the payee of the payment received a copy of these reports and did not rebut it, the government will "presume"
43 that the recipient consented to participate in the federal income tax and therefore has "income effectively connected 44 with a trade or business in the United States".
45 3. Because consent was present and voluntary, the recipient is a "taxpayer" and is subject to the "code". Enforcement
46 will then be attempted against the recipient and that recipient will be treated as a federal "employee" during the 47 collection process, which under 26 U.S.C. §6331\(a\), is an elected or appointed officer of the federal government.

48 If you would like to know how to nullify these erroneous reports to rebut the false presumption of being connected with a
49 "trade or business in the United States", see:

Correcting Erroneous Information Returns, Form #04.001

<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

1 Why does the government want to deceive you into believing that a “return” is a piece of paper instead of a kickback of 2 payments from the federal government? Here are a few answers:

- 3 1. When they prosecute people maliciously and wrongfully for “willful failure to file” under 26 U.S.C. §7203, they don't 4 have to satisfy the burden of proof that your income was “effectively connected to a trade or business”, which would 5 immediately expose their fraud.
- 6 2. They don't have to explain to juries that a “trade or business” is actually a “public office” under [26 U.S.C.
7 §7701\(a\)\(26\)](#).
- 8 3. They don't want juries to know that I.R.C., Subtitle A describes a “kickback” and not a legitimate, constitutional 9 income tax.

10 Finally, if you would like to know more about this illegal and unethical kickback program, see our section entitled “Public 11 Officer Kickback Position” later starting in section 5.6.10.

12 5.3.3 Summary of Federal Income Tax Filing Status by Citizenship and Residency

13 The table below summarizes the federal jurisdiction to tax organized by citizenship and then residency. It presents the 14 previous table in a somewhat different way. Most people are very surprised when they see this, and you will never see this
15 table in any of the IRS Publications, because they don't want you to know you have been filing incorrectly! That's why we 16 had to do so much research to write this section and build the table below, because the IRS doesn't want you hearing the 17 truth and has done their best to conceal it:

NOTES:

1. Definitions of "United States":
  - 1.1. U.S.*= United States the country (in the family of nations)
  - 1.2. U.S.** = the federal zone=District of Columbia and all federal territories, possessions, and enclaves.
  - 1.3. U.S.*** = the contiguous 50 states of the union outside the federal zone.
2. A person who is a "Citizen of the United States of America" (a state-only citizen) is referred to as a "U.S. national" or simply a "national" but not a statutory "U.S. citizen". He is also called a constitution "citizen of the United States"
3. Foreign national is someone who is a citizen of another country that is outside of the 50 contiguous states of the union.
4. Foreign aliens are typically citizens of other countries who are domiciled in the 50 Union states of the United States of America.
5. The Fourteenth Amendment made everyone born or naturalized in the United States* into citizens of the United States** (and by implication, the United States* and United States***) and the State wherein they reside as follows:

*Section 1. All persons born or naturalized in the United States [the federal zone/U.S.**], and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the United States[**] and of the state wherein they reside. No state shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States; nor shall any state deprive any person of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law; nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws.*

6. If you examine 26 C.F.R. §1.861, which is used for identifying and computing taxable income for ALL sources both within and without the "United States***", you will note that the taxable sources (and all of the examples given in that section) are restricted to those involved in government privileged activities subject to indirect excise taxation. Such activities include [are limited to] service as a public officer of the U.S. government, an officer of U.S.** registered corporations. This is not a mistake or an oversight, but a direct result of the fact that the income tax, according to the Supreme Court, is and always has been an indirect excise tax. U.S. Supreme Court rulings over the years have always identified Subtitle A income taxes as indirect excise taxes, both before and after the passage of the 16th Amendment (see section 5.1.8 for further details on this). These conclusions also agree with Congressional Research Service Report 97-59A appearing on our website, which is the very same report that Congressmen send their constituents when they get questions about income taxes. The rate of tax is determined by 26 U.S.C. Section 871 for nonresident aliens and 26 U.S.C. Section 1 for U.S.** citizens residing in the U.S.**. If you file a 1040 form, then you elect to use 26 U.S.C. Section 1 to compute your rate of tax. If you file a 1040NR, then you are using 26 U.S.C. Section 871(a) to compute the tax rate for income from sources without the “United States” and the rate is 30%. The graduated rate of tax on nonresident aliens found in 26 U.S.C. Section 871(b) only applies to elected or appointed political officials of the U.S. government. Once again, we'd like to review the meaning of “trade or business” as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26):

26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26) Definitions. Trade or Business. The term “trade or business” includes [only] the performance of the functions of a public office.”

26 U.S.C. §871(b)(2)-GRADUATED RATE OF TAX...

“(2) DETERMINATION OF TAXABLE INCOME.—In determining taxable income...gross income includes ONLY gross income which is effectively connected with the conduct of a TRADE OR BUSINESS within the United States.”

Following is a definition of “public office”:

*Public Office, pursuant to Black's Law Dictionary, Abridged Sixth Edition, means:

“Essential characteristics of a ‘public office’ are:

- (1) Authority conferred by law,
- (2) Fixed tenure of office, and
- (3) Power to exercise some of the sovereign functions of government.
- (4) Key element of such test is that “officer is carrying out a sovereign function”.
- (5) Essential elements to establish public position as ‘public office’ are:
  - (a) Position must be created by Constitution, legislature, or through authority conferred by legislature.
  - (b) Portion of sovereign power of government must be delegated to position,
  - (c) Duties and powers must be defined, directly or implied, by legislature or through legislative authority.
  - (d) Duties must be performed independently without control of superior power other than law, and
  - (e) Position must have some permanency.”

The vast majority of American nationals domiciled in the 50 Union states, however, DO NOT fall in this category. The rest of us therefore aren't liable for the payment of federal income taxes! Read the section for yourself, because it is very enlightening. There are very good reasons for the above restrictions, including 1:9:4 and 1:2:3 of the u.S. Constitution, which do not allow direct taxes on the sovereign 50 Union states without apportionment! The 16th Amendment, according to the U.S. supreme Court, didn't change that situation at all because it had no enabling clauses and did not modify or qualify these two parts of the constitution.

7. An American National who never claims or has “U.S.** citizen” status under 8 U.S.C. §1401 is equivalent to a “non-resident non-person” for the purposes of the federal income tax. The term for this type of citizen used in the U.S.*** Constitution is capitalized, e.g. “Citizen” and not “citizen”.
8. We become a prima facie statutory “U.S.** citizen” whenever we do any of the following and don't fully clarify what we mean:
  - 8.1. We are born or naturalized in the “United States”**/federal zone, but not in the nonfederal areas within the 50 Union states (see the 14th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution).
  - 8.2. Emigrate into the United States** and apply for “U.S. citizenship” and don't clarify that we DO NOT want to be a federal citizen, but only a national of United States* the country or United States*** the 50 Union states.
  - 8.3. Declare on a voter registration that we are a “U.S. citizen” without clarifying what we mean (in fact, we should mean “national” or “state national” and NOT U.S.** citizen).
  - 8.4. Declare on a Driver's license application that we are a “U.S. citizen” without clarifying what we mean (in fact, we should mean “national” or “state national” and NOT U.S.** citizen).

- 1 8.5. Declare on our jury summons that we are a "U.S.** citizen" and don't clarify that we instead are a "national", which means we reside in the country and are 2 state citizens.
- 3 8.6. Declare on any kind of tax return that we are a "U.S. citizen" without clarifying what we mean (in fact, we should mean "national" or "state national" and 4 NOT U.S.** citizen). We can also do this by filing the wrong tax form, in this case a 1040 instead of the correct 1040NR form.
- 5 9. The U.S. constitution, in Article 1, Section 2, Clause 1 (mentioned in section 3.6.7) says:

6 *Article I, Section 8, Clause 1: "The Congress shall have Power To lay and collect Taxes, Duties, Imposts and Excises, to pay the Debts and provide for the common
7 Defence and general Welfare of the United States; but all Duties, Imposts and Excises shall be uniform throughout the United States; "*

- 8 Did you notice that it says "but all Duties, Imposts and Excises shall be uniform throughout the United States"? If you look in table 5-6 in section 5.2.3, you will see
9 that THE ONLY taxes that are uniform in that table are those for "nonresident aliens" covered in IRS publication 19 and citizens living abroad covered in IRS
10 Publication 54! The only income tax that is NOT uniform and graduated are taxes for statutory "U.S. citizens" and "residents" domiciled in the federal zone (who 11 file 1040 tax forms), which do not fall under the constitutional protections or limitations according to Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 (1901), covered earlier in 12 section 3.16.6.
- 13 10. In the event that definitions of such terms as "U.S.**" or "includes" has you confused about your tax liability or the applicability of the above table, remember that 14 the supreme court said of the rules of statutory construction as found in the case of Spreckels Sugar Refining Co. v. McClain, 192 U.S. 397 (1904):

15 "Keeping in mind the well-settled rule that the citizen is exempt from taxation unless the same is imposed by clear and unequivocal language, and that where the 16 construction of a tax law is doubtful, the doubt is to be resolved in favor of those upon whom the tax is sought to be laid."
17 [Spreckels Sugar Refining Co. v. McClain, 192 U.S. 397 (1904)]

- 18 The reason for this is obvious. The Fifth and Sixth Amendments say that we have a right to due process and to know and understand the charges against us. How 19 can we be assured of a fair trial or justice if we can't definitively even know or limit what the law says in such a way that we can completely understand what is
20 expected of us and obey it? Furthermore, the definition of the word "definition" found in Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 423:

21 "A description of a thing by its properties; an explanation of the meaning of a word or term. The process of stating the exact meaning of a word by means of other 22 words. Such a description of the thing defined, including all essential elements and excluding all nonessential, as to distinguish it from all other things and classes."
23 [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 423]

- 24 If the term "includes" found in 26 U.S.C. §7701(c) is used "expansively" everywhere in the IRC as it is defined in 26 U.S.C. Section 7701(c), NOTHING is 25 defined in the Internal Revenue Code ANYWHERE! For such a case the whole code is "Void for Vagueness" as described in section 5.10!

26 For all the above reasons, we strongly suggest that you do the following to ensure that no one can ever legally prove that you are a U.S.** Citizen:

- 27 1. Whenever you sign any kind of tax return, voter registration, or government application for benefits that asks you if you are a "U.S. citizen", add an "A." to the end
28 of "U.S." to emphasize that you are a "national" under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) and not a statutory "federal citizen" pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1401. Also, change the 29 word "citizen" to begin with capital letters, so that it appears as "Citizen", which will make you a sovereign American of the 50 Union states. Then put an asterisk
30 next to the term "USA" and make a note at the bottom stating: "Not a statutory citizen under 8 U.S.C. §1401." Most clerks don't pay enough attention to the forms
31 you sign to even notice. You should make a copy of every type of form or application like this that you sign, so you have proof to use in court that you are a natural 32 born State Citizen.
- 33 2. Get a copy of your birth certificate. Examine whether it says anything about you being a "U.S. Citizen". If it does, go to the county recorder where you were born
34 and have them alter or amend it to reflect that you are NOT a U.S.** citizen, but rather a sovereign state Citizen of the U.S.A. Or file an affidavit with the recorder
35 and have it recorded stating that you are not a 14th Amendment or U.S.** citizen.

- 1 3. Follow the guidance in section 2.5.3.13 of the following:

Sovereignty Forms and Instructions Manual, Form #10.005

5.3.4 What's Your Proper Federal Income Tax Filing Status?

The proper status from the table above for most Americans who are domiciled in the 50 Union states is #10, the "national" or "state national" who is a "non-resident non-person" of the federal zone and the U.S.**. "nationals" are defined in 8 U.S.C. §1101\(a\)\(21\). People born in the 50 states of the Union should also be filing as "non-resident non-persons" instead of using an IRS Form W-4 form for your employer withholding.

QUESTION FOR DOUBTERS: If the term "United States" as used in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) includes the nonfederal/private areas of the 50 Union states, then why does our own federal government call foreigners domiciled in these areas "nonresident aliens" and ask them to fill out a form 1040NR? Shouldn't they be called "resident aliens"?

We want to emphasize that most citizens are incorrectly deceived by the IRS into filing under status #7 above, which is a U.S.** citizen who elects to be treated as a resident of the U.S.**. Also recall earlier from section 5.2.14 that the only "residents" within the context of the income tax code are aliens domiciled in the federal "United States". In the tax code, resident=alien. Remember that! Why is this? Here are a few of the many reasons why these assertions are absolutely true:

1. The Internal Revenue Code, in section 7701, defines "United States" as "The term 'United States' when used in a geographical sense includes only the States and the District of Columbia." The same section defines "State" as "The term 'State' shall be construed to include the District of Columbia, where such construction is necessary to carry out provisions of this title." Note that the word "States" is the plural of the word "State". See sections 3.12.1.19 and 3.12.1.23 for further details on this distinction. Suffice it to say that both "States" and "United States" mean the federal zone and/or the District of Columbia and NOT the 50 Union states. See section 4.7 for further background on the meaning of the term "federal zone". The U.S. supreme Court ruled as follows on this issue:

"There is a canon of legislative construction which teaches Congress that, unless a contrary intent appears [legislation] is meant to apply only within the territorial jurisdiction of the United States."
[U.S. v. Spelar, 338 U.S. 217 at 222.]

2. IRS Publication 54: Tax Guide for U.S. Citizens and Resident Aliens Abroad (2000) (which you can download from our website), defines the term "foreign country" as follows on page 12:

"A foreign country usually is any territory (including the air space and territorial waters) under the sovereignty of a government other than that of the United States.... The term 'foreign country' does not include Puerto Rico, Guam, the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands, the Virgin Islands, or U.S. possessions such as American Samoa."

[Emphasis added]

All entities mentioned above as being excluded from being foreign countries are federal "States" as far as the Internal Revenue Code is concerned and are areas over which the United States** has exclusive jurisdiction and sovereignty. These federal "States" are all territories, and include Puerto Rico, Guam, and the Virgin Islands to name a few. Do you see the 50 Union states of the United States excluded from the above definition of "foreign country"? No! For the purposes of the Internal Revenue Code, the 50 sovereign states are "foreign countries" with respect to the U.S. Government! This conclusion is also consistent with California's definition of "foreign country" found in section 17019 of the California Revenue and Taxation Code:

17019. "Foreign country" means any jurisdiction other than one embraced within the United States.

Note that California's definition of "United States" in their tax code is the same as the federal government's. Yes, the federal government does have limited subject matter jurisdiction within the Union states, but they do not have territorial jurisdiction and are NOT sovereign over areas within the several Union states that are not federal areas or enclaves. The reason for this, in part, has to do with the fact that the Constitution in Article 4, Section 3 prohibits the establishment of any "State" within another "State":

Article 4, Section 3

1                    "...no new State shall be formed or erected within the Jurisdiction of any other State; nor any State be
2                    formed by the Junction of two or more States, or Parts of States, without the Consent of the Legislatures of the
3                    States concerned as well as of the Congress."

4                    For instance, everything the federal government does with air space and territorial waters surrounding or above states
5                    of the Union is controlled by elected representatives from our state who represent us and who will not be reelected if
6                    they don't represent us adequately. Therefore, the U.S. Government can't be sovereign even over the areas they have
7                    exclusive jurisdiction if they can't independently control who exercises control of those waters. Once again, according
8                    to the Declaration of Independence, the U.S. Government derives its "just powers from the consent of the governed",
9                    so the people, and not the government, are the sovereigns, and they exercise their sovereignty by voting and serving on
10                    jury duty, which in turn indirectly controls everything that the U.S. government does on their behalf. Ultimately, no
11                    government like ours can be wholly sovereign over anything because the people are the real sovereigns in a republican
12                    form of government. The supreme Court agreed with this view in Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U.S. 356, 370 (1885):

13                    "While sovereign powers are delegated to the agencies of government, Sovereignty itself remains with the 14                    people, by whom and for whom all government exists and acts."
15                    [Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U.S. 356 (1886)]

17                    Maryland, 18 U.S. 316, 404, 405.

18                    Jurisdiction and sovereignty are synonymous. Only states of the Union are sovereign over the territory within them
19                    and they exercise plenary/exclusive legislative powers over nearly everything that happens within them (NOTE: We 20                    talked about the subject of jurisdiction earlier in section 5.2.2 if you want to go back and review). That is why:

- 21                    • Direct taxes must be apportioned to the 50 state governments instead of directly on the people inside the
- 22                    states (see Article 1, Section 9, Clause 4 and Article 1, Section 2, Clause 3 of the Constitution).
- 23                    • The Congress cannot tax exports from any state (see Article 1, Section 9, Clause 5 of the Constitution).
- 24                    • The Congress has no authority to join or divide states without concurrence of the State (see Article 4, Section
- 25                    3, Clause 1).
- 26                    • Congress only has exclusive legislative jurisdiction (read "sovereignty") in the District of Columbia and
- 27                    other federal territories as per Article 1, Section 8, Clause 17 of the Constitution:

28                    To exercise exclusive Legislation in all Cases whatsoever, over such District (not exceeding ten Miles square)
29                    as may, by Cession of Particular States, and the Acceptance of Congress, become the Seat of the Government of
30                    the United States, and to exercise like Authority over all Places purchased by the Consent of the Legislature of
31                    the State in which the Same shall be, for the Erection of Forts, Magazines, Arsenals, dock-Yards and other
32                    needful Buildings;

33                    3. The legal dictionary defines "sovereign" as:

34                    "That which is preeminent among all others. 1 Bl. Comm. *241. For instance, in a monarchy, the king as 35                    sovereign has absolute power, the sovereign power. Blackstone, the eighteenth century legal theorist, defined
36                    sovereign power to mean 'the making of laws.' 1 Bl. Comm. *49. In ancient England, the king's word was law, 37                    in today's democratic governments, the law-making function has been taken over by representative bodies such
38                    as Congress."<sup>34</sup>

39                    Is the U.S. Government "preeminent" within the boundaries of the 50 Union states?...NO! As a matter of fact, if you
40                    look in Bouvier's Law Dictionary, Revised Sixth Edition, 1856, which was written by a supreme Court Justice and 41                    used by the Supreme Court for many years, you find the following mentioned under the definition of the term "United 42                    States of America":

43                    6. The states, individually, retain all the powers which they possessed at the formation of the constitution, and 44                    which have not been given to congress. (q.v.)

45                    It sure sounds to us like the states are "sovereign" and "preeminent" within their own geographical boundaries. Does
46                    the U.S. government have exclusive authority to make laws applying within the boundaries of the 50 Union
47                    states?...NO! You will note that as per 1:8:17 of the U.S. Constitution, the only area within which the United States government has “sovereignty” or exclusive/plenary legislative authority is “the federal zone”, which the vast majority of Americans don’t reside in and which we described in sections 4.8 through 4.9.1 earlier. Therefore, the states of the Union are sovereign “foreign countries” with respect to the U.S. Government as far as the Internal Revenue Code Subtitle A income taxes are concerned! We talked further about the relationship of the 50 states of the Union being foreign with respect to the U.S. Government in section 5.2.14 if you want to go back and review again. To repeat what one court said from section 3.12.1.6:

[N.Y. re: Merriam, 36 N.E. 505, 141 N.Y. 479, Affirmed 16 S.Ct. 1973, 41 L.Ed. 287, Emphasis added]

4. The supreme Court of the United States had the following to say about the sovereignty of the 50 Union states relative to the Federal government:

“...The states are separate sovereigns with respect to the federal government.”
[Heath v. Alabama, 474 U.S. 82]

5. By filing a form 1040 and or a W-2 form ONLY instead of a form 2555 attached to your 1040, you are in effect “electing to be a resident” of the “federal zone” and of the “United States**”, which you are perfectly authorized and entitled (but woefully ignorant and misinformed!) to do. This creates a prima facie case in favor of the presumption that you are an “alien” domiciled in the federal zone (see 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1(a)(2)(ii)). Remember?: The Income Tax is “voluntary”, and the heart of its voluntary nature begins by you electing to be treated as a “citizen” and a “resident” of the “United States” even though you technically are NOT! IRS Publication 54 tells you how to choose to be a resident of the “United States” on pages 5 through 6 of the Year 2000 version:

Nonresident Spouse Treated as a Resident

If, at the end of your tax year, you are married and one spouse is a U.S. citizen or a resident alien and the other is a nonresident alien, you can choose to treat the nonresident as a U.S. resident. This includes situations in which one of you is a nonresident alien at the beginning of the tax year, but a resident alien at the end of the year, and the other is a nonresident alien at the end of the year.

If you make this choice, the following two rules apply.

1) You and your spouse are treated, for income tax purposes, as residents for all tax years that the choice is in effect.

2) You must file a joint income tax return for the year you make the choice.

This means that neither of you can claim tax treaty benefits as a resident of a foreign country for a tax year for which the choice is in effect. You can file joint or separate returns in years after the year in which you make the choice.

How To Make the Choice

Attach a statement, signed by both spouses, to your joint return for the first tax year for which the choice applies. It should contain the following:

- 1) A declaration that one spouse was a nonresident alien and the other spouse a U.S. citizen or resident alien on the last day of your tax year, and that you choose to be treated as U.S. residents for the entire tax year, and
2) The name, address, and social security number (or individual taxpayer identification number) of each spouse. (If one spouse died, include the name and address of the person making the choice for the deceased spouse.)

You generally make this choice when you file your joint return. However, you can also make the choice by filing a joint amended return on Form 1040 or Form 1040A. Be sure to write the word “Amended” across the top of the amended return. If you make the choice with an amended return, you and your spouse must also amend any returns that you may have filed after the year for which you made the choice.

You generally must file the amended joint return within 3 years from the date you filed your original U.S. income tax return or 2 years from the date you paid your income tax for that year, whichever is later.

Suspending the Choice

The choice to be treated as a resident alien does not apply to any later tax year if neither of you is a U.S. citizen or resident alien at any time during the later tax year.

Example. Dick Brown was a resident alien on December 31, 1997, and married to Judy, a nonresident alien. They chose to treat Judy as a resident alien and filed a joint 1997 income tax return. On January 10, 1999, Dick became a nonresident alien. Judy had remained a nonresident alien. Dick and Judy can file joint or separate returns for 1999. Neither Dick nor Judy is a resident alien at any time during 2000 and their choice is suspended for that year. For 2000, both are treated as nonresident aliens. If Dick becomes a resident alien again in 2001, their choice is no longer suspended and both are treated as resident aliens.

Ending the Choice

Once made, the choice to be treated as a resident applies to all later years unless suspended (as explained above) or ended in one of the ways shown in Figure 1–A. If the choice is ended for any of the reasons listed in Figure 1–A, neither spouse can make a choice in any later tax year.

It is very important to note that the above excerpt from IRS Publication 54 indicates that by filing a form 1040 for filing jointly, you are electing to be treated as a resident/domiciliary of the federal United States**/federal zone (not United States of America or the several states, but the United States) for all other tax years! The only way you can revoke that status is to make a Revocation of Election as described under “Ending the Choice” above. We encourage you to obtain this publication and make your Revocation of Election to be treated as a nonresident alien of the United States for tax purposes if you live in any of the 50 Union states. There are big tax advantages to doing this! We have included forms and procedures to facilitate making your Revocation of Election easier both on our website and in Chapters 8 and 14 of this book. Elections to be treated as a resident or citizen of the federal United States are also discussed in 26 U.S.C. §6013(g).

6. The reason Citizens have been abused by the federal courts and made to believe that they are obligated to pay income taxes they in fact don't owe is because Congress has exclusive authority within the “federal zone” and is not bound by constitutional constraints against direct income taxes within the federal zone as per 4:3:2 of the Constitution:

The Congress shall have Power to dispose of and make all needful Rules and Regulations respecting the Territory or other Property belonging to the United States; and nothing in this Constitution shall be so construed as to Prejudice any Claims of the United States, or of any particular State.

This conclusion is also supported by the findings of the U.S. supreme Court in the case of Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 (1901), which we talked about in section 3.17.6 earlier:

“Indeed, the practical interpretation put by Congress upon the Constitution has been long continued and uniform to the effect [182 U.S. 244, 279] that the Constitution is applicable to territories acquired by purchase or conquest, only when and so far as Congress shall so direct. Notwithstanding its duty to ‘guarantee to every state in this Union a republican form of government’ (art. 4, 4), by which we understand, according to the definition of Webster, ‘a government in which the supreme power resides in the whole body of the people, and is exercised by representatives elected by them.’ Congress did not hesitate, in the original organization of the territories of Louisiana, Florida, the Northwest Territory, and its subdivisions of Ohio, Indiana, Michigan, Illinois, and Wisconsin and still more recently in the case of Alaska, to establish a form of government bearing a much greater analogy to a British Crown colony than a republican state of America, and to vest the legislative power either in a governor and council, or a governor and judges, to be appointed by the President. It was not until they had attained a certain population that power was given them to organize a legislature by vote of the people. In all these cases, as well as in territories subsequently organized west of the Mississippi, Congress thought it necessary either to extend to Constitution and laws of the United States over them, or to declare that the inhabitants should be entitled to enjoy the right of trial by jury, of bail, and of the privilege of the writ of habeas corpus, as well as other privileges of the bill of rights.”
[Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 (1901)]

Why doesn't the IRS tell you in their 1040 booklet that you are “volunteering” to be a “resident” of the “federal zone” when you submit a 1040 form without a form 2555(?).because then you would refute it with a letter or statement attached to your 1040 tax return because you know it isn't true and that would end their jurisdiction to impose direct taxes on you! Instead, they make the 1040 a generic book that applies to both residents and nonresidents and then hide the “contract to become a resident” in Pub. 54, which most Citizens never read because they would never even imagine that their true status is “foreign” in relation to the United States Government taxing jurisdiction or the federal zone! This is scandalous!

7. The IRS and Congress have used the term “foreign country” in IRS Publication 54 above to confuse the issue with most citizens, so they won't use the 1040NR form to claim their rightful status, even though it does indeed apply to them. Instead, if the IRS and Treasury were completely honest, they would have used the term “non-U.S. area” or “areas outside the federal zone/District United States” in their publications being. We talked about the use of other similar forms like the IRS Form 2555 in sections 5.9.6 entitled “Other Clues”, section 5.11.4 entitled “The Sixteenth Amendment says ‘from whatever source derived’.. this means the source doesn't matter!”, and especially section 6.6.17 entitled “Cover-Up of 1995: Modified Regulations to Remove Pointers to Form 2555 for IRC Section 1 Liability for Foreign Income Tax”. We encourage you to go skip to section 6.6.17 and read it now so you know what we are talking about before you continue further.
8. By signing and submitting a form 1040 instead of submitting a 1040NR and a Revocation of Election, we are electing to become “residents” of the “United States”, and there is in effect a binding contract between us and the United States Government. The terms of the contract are described in IRS Publication 54. Furthermore, the States are prohibited to interfere with this contract because the U.S. Constitution says in Article 1, Section 10, Clause 1:

“Section. 10. No State shall enter into any Treaty, Alliance, or Confederation; grant Letters of Marque and Reprisal; coin Money; emit Bills of Credit; make any Thing but gold and silver Coin as Tender in Payment of Debts; pass any Bill of Attainder, ex post facto Law, Law impairing the Obligation of Contracts, or grant any Title of Nobility.”

[Emphasis added]

The IRS doesn't tell you in their publications that submitting an IRS Form 1040 instead of a 1040NR and a W-8 amounts to a “voluntary contract to become a resident of domiciliary of the federal zone”, but that is a fact as documented in IRS Publication 54. Now that you know your rights and that you have been deceived into giving them up, what are you going to do about it, other than bend over and look the other way as they screw you? Are you as mad as we were when we first learned about this deception? We sure hope so, and we hope you are mad enough to go out and do something about it immediately starting with completing your Revocation of Election and filing IRS Form 1040NR from now on, that is, if you don't first use the Request for Refund letter we provide in section 2.9.1 of the following:

Sovereignty Forms and Instructions Manual, Form #10.005
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

To summarize the above section:

*The heart of the voluntary nature of the income taxes is the very important first step we take by choosing to file an IRS Form 1040 instead of form 1040NR, which as we just explained, in effect amounts to signing an invisible contract declaring ourselves as “citizens” and “residents” of the United States**, which we now know is completely incorrect and untrue. When you think about it, you are admitting to a scientific impossibility. No person can simultaneously be domiciled in two mutually exclusive territorial jurisdictions at the same time!*

This single act is the main source of our tax troubles with the U.S. Government, and it was caused by our own ignorance of the law mainly, and facilitated by deception by the IRS in their publications and the legal profession who are in cahoots with them in order to maximize their business. This is the first act of “volunteering” which subsequently eliminates all of our constitutional rights. Until we regain our rightful status as “non-resident non-persons” for the purposes of the tax code, there will be no end of troubles for us in regaining our rightful status under the law, not to mention our Constitutional protections! The courts know this, but judges also know that they would be committing political and professional suicide to admit it in any or their rulings relating to federal income taxes. Instead, they will not focus or mention in their rulings the residency of the person being tried on tax issues, and make it “appear” that direct taxes are indeed being enforced upon Citizens of the United States in direct violation of the Constitution. This sometimes makes it “appear” like there is a judicial conspiracy to protect the income tax, when in fact, the judges and attorneys on the case may be honoring the law but not telling people the whole story, which is that they elected and “contracted” to be a citizen and resident with the first

1 filing of a form 1040 and so they must pay the consequences of having no constitutional protections and no immunity from
 2 income tax. This is a very common practice in the legal profession...abusing people because of their own ignorance, but
 3 fully and completely and in fact, honoring and abiding by the law. It's obviously unethical and dishonest, but it's not
 4 against the law and it probably never will be, and who knows more about the law than the lawyers? They make the laws!

5.3.5 Summary of State v. Federal Income Tax Liability by Domicile and Citizenship

6 In order to better clarify the findings of this section and their impact on both state and federal income taxes, we have taken
 7 the liberty to research the federal and state taxing statutes and come up with a helpful table for your use in determining the
 8 extent of your tax liability and the proper forms to file for both federal and state. The example we show below is for 9 California. Your state may be different. The state portion of the table below is derived from the California Revenue and 10 Taxation Code (R&TC) §§17001-18776 and federal income tax found in 26 U.S.C./IRC. A nonfederal area is anything
 11 outside of "State" as defined in California Revenue and Taxation Code, §17018:

12 17018. "State" includes the District of Columbia, and the possessions of the United States.
 13 [which don't include the 50 sovereign states but do include federal enclaves within those states]

14 You can read the above for yourself at: <http://www.leginfo.ca.gov/cgi-bin/displaycode?section=rtc&group=17001-18000&file=17001-17039.1>. The federal portion of the table on the right derives mainly from 40 U.S.C. §3112 and sections 5.2.12 and 5.3.1.

17 Before we begin, we'd like to emphasize that federal and state territorial taxing jurisdictions are mutually exclusive and cannot overlap. The reason is that only ONE government can be sovereign in a territory at any one given time.

19 "§79. [ . . . ] There cannot be two separate and independent sovereignties within the same limits or jurisdiction; nor can there be two distinct and separate sources of sovereign authority within the same jurisdiction. The right of commanding in the last resort can be possessed only by one body of people inhabiting the same territory, and can be executed only by those intrusted with the execution of such authority."

23 [Treatise on Government, Joel Tiffany, p. 49, Section 78;

25 If a person is domiciled in the nonfederal areas of a state of the Union, then he must be considered a "non-resident non-person" for the purpose of federal income taxes, unless of course he "volunteers" through his own stupidity to pay "donations" by falsely admitting he is either a statutory "U.S. citizen" pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1401, a "U.S. resident" (alien), pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(A), or a "U.S. person" pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(30). All statutory "U.S. persons" and statutory "U.S. citizens" and "U.S. residents" have one thing in common: They all are treated by the federal government as having a domicile in the federal zone and collectively are called "inhabitants". We should ask ourselves, however: "How can a person simultaneously be domiciled in two mutually exclusive and separate territorial jurisdictions and therefore owe tax in both jurisdictions?" The answer is, they can't. Therefore, the correct filing status for most sovereign Americans born in the 50 Union states is the "non-resident non-person" of the federal taxing jurisdiction and the inhabitant (but not "resident") of the state jurisdiction. Remember from section 4.10 earlier that we should never use the word "resident" to describe ourselves for taxation purposes on a federal or state income tax form, because it means we are an "alien" domiciled in the federal zone in the context of the Internal Revenue Code and most state and federal income tax statutes! "Transient foreigner" is a better word. In most states, the implication of properly declaring this status is that the person declaring the status is liable for neither federal nor state income taxes!

39 In order to fully comprehend the relationship between federal and state income taxes, we must always be aware that federal and state territorial taxing jurisdictions are mutually exclusive and cannot overlap. This is a product of the "separation of powers doctrine" and fundamental to the organization of or "republican form of government" mandated by Article 4, Section 4 of the U.S. Constitution. The reason why these two jurisdictions must be mutually exclusive is that only ONE government can be sovereign over a geographical region at any one given time. Every state of the Union therefore consists of two states:

- 45 1. Republic State. Land within the exclusive jurisdiction of the state fall within this area.
- 46 2. Corporate State. This area consists of federal areas within the exterior limits of the state. These areas are federal territory not protected by the Constitution of the United States or the Bill of Rights and are "instrumentalities" of the federal government. Jurisdiction over these areas is shared with the federal government under the auspices of the following legal authorities:

- 2.1. The Assimilated Crimes Act, 18 U.S.C. §13.
- 2.2. The Rules of Decision Act, 28 U.S.C. §1652. This act prescribes which of the two conflicting laws shall prevail in the case of crimes on federal territory.
- 2.3. 28 U.S.C. §2679\(c\), which says that any action against an officer or employee of the United States in which the officer or employee is acting outside their authority shall be prosecuted in a state court.
- 2.4. Agreements on Coordination of Tax Administration (ACTA) between the state and the Secretary of the Treasury.

The situation above in respect to a state of the Union is not unlike our national government, which has two mutually exclusive jurisdictions:

"It is clear that Congress, as a legislative body, exercise two species of legislative power: the one, limited as to its objects, but extending all over the Union: the other, an absolute, exclusive legislative power over the District of Columbia. The preliminary inquiry in the case now before the Court, is, by virtue of which of these authorities was the law in question passed?"
[\[Cohens v. Virginia, 19 U.S. 264, 6 Wheat. 265, 5 L.Ed. 257 \(1821\)\]](#)

"The idea prevails with some, indeed it has found expression in arguments at the bar, that we have in this country substantially two national governments; one to be maintained under the Constitution, with all of its restrictions; the other to be maintained by Congress outside the independently of that instrument, by exercising such powers [of absolutism] as other nations of the earth are accustomed to. I take leave to say that, if the principles thus announced should ever receive the sanction of a majority of this court, a radical and mischievous change in our system of government will result. We will, in that event, pass from the era of constitutional liberty guarded and protected by a written constitution into an era of legislative absolutism.. It will be an evil day for American liberty if the theory of a government outside the supreme law of the land finds lodgment in our constitutional jurisprudence. No higher duty rests upon this court than to exert its full authority to prevent all violation of the principles of the Constitution."
[\[Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 \(1901\)\]](#)

The hard part is figuring out which of the two jurisdictions that any particular state statute or law applies to. What makes this process difficult are the following complicating factors:

1. There is no constitutional requirement that the laws passed by the state legislature must clearly state which of the two jurisdiction they apply to. This was also confirmed in the following exhibit, which is a letter from a United States Congressman:

Congressman Zoe Lofgren Letter, SEDM Exhibit #04.003
<http://sedm.org/Exhibits/ExhibitIndex.htm>

2. Crafty state legislators deliberately obfuscate the laws they write so as to encourage those within the Republic to obey laws that in fact only apply to the Corporate state so as to unlawfully increase their revenues, power, and control.
3. Courts of INjustice and the judges who serve in them refuse to acknowledge that most statutes passed by the legislature can only lawfully affect federal areas and persons who consent to be treated as though they inhabit these areas.

Within federal law, the Republic portion of each state is referred to as a "foreign state". To wit:

"Foreign states. Nations which are outside the United States. Term may also refer to another state; i.e. a sister state."
[\[Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 648\]](#)

"Generally, the states of the Union sustain toward each other the relationship of independent sovereigns or independent foreign states, except in so far as the United States is paramount as the dominating government, and in so far as the states are bound to recognize the fraternity among sovereignties established by the federal Constitution, as by the provision requiring each state to give full faith and credit to the public acts, records, and judicial proceedings of the other states..."
[\[81A Corpus Juris Secundum \(C.J.S.\), United States, §29 \(2003\)\]](#)

"The United States Government is a foreign corporation with respect to a state," [\[N.Y. v. re Merriam 36 N.E. 505; 141 N.Y. 479; affirmed 16 S.Ct. 1073; 41 L.Ed. 287\] \[underlines added\]](#)
[\[19 Corpus Juris Secundum \(C.J.S.\), Corporations, §884 \(2003\)\]](#)

Let's now examine the practical implications of this document in relation to how or if you would file a state or federal tax return and what status you would need to file under. If a person is a domiciliary of the nonfederal areas of his state, which we call the "Republic State" in this document, then he must be considered a "non-resident non-person" for the purpose of federal income taxes, unless of course he "volunteers" through his own stupidity to donate to the federal government by falsely admitting he is either a “U.S. citizen” under 8 U.S.C. §1401 or a “U.S. person” under 26 U.S.C. §7701\(a\)\(30\). We should always ask ourselves, however: “How can a person simultaneously be a resident of two mutually exclusive territorial jurisdictions and therefore owe tax in both jurisdictions?” The answer is, they can't. Therefore, the correct filing status for most sovereign Americans/Nationals of the 50 Union states is the “non-resident non-person” of the federal taxing jurisdiction and the “resident” of the state jurisdiction. In most states, the implication of properly declaring this status is that the person declaring the status is liable for neither federal nor state income taxes! The table below summarizes the relationship between federal taxation and state taxation in the case of California. Most other states appear to be similar. This table was extracted from section 5.3.3 earlier. The important things to remember about this table are the following:

1. Federal and state income taxes presume domicile in the same place, which is the Corporate State. Those domiciled in the Republic State are “nontaxpayers” who are not subject to the federal or state income tax.
2. The federal personal income tax described in I.R.C., Subtitle A is upon “residents” as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701\(b\)\(1\)\(A\), who are aliens with a domicile on federal territory.
3. A person who was born within and domiciled within any of the 50 states or federal territory is not an alien, and therefore not a “resident”.
4. The IRS Form 1040 is ONLY for use by “residents” , who are aliens with a domicile on federal territory. This is confirmed by IRS Document 7130, the IRS Published Products Catalog.
5. A statutory “U.S. citizen” as defined in 8 U.S.C. §1401 when temporarily abroad pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §911 is treated as a “resident” within the Internal Revenue Code. This is because he interfaces to the I.R.C. through a tax treaty with a foreign country and he is an “alien” in relation to that foreign country that he is within.
6. The federal and state income taxes are indirect excise taxes upon a “trade or business”, which is defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701\(a\)\(26\) as “the functions of a public office”. If you are not in fact and in deed engaged in a “public office”, then:
  - 6.1. You are a “nontaxpayer” whose estate is a “foreign estate” not subject to the Internal Revenue Code:

TITLE 26 > Subtitle F > CHAPTER 79 > § 7701
§ 7701. Definitions

(a) When used in this title, where not otherwise distinctly expressed or manifestly incompatible with the intent thereof—
 (31) Foreign estate or trust

(A) Foreign estate

The term “foreign estate” means an estate the income of which, from sources without the United States which is not effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business within the United States, is not includible in gross income under subtitle A.

- 6.2. You are not required to file a federal income tax return, even if you are domiciled on federal territory.
7. If you are a statutory “U.S. citizen” who is NOT abroad in a foreign country pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §911, there is no IRS Form you can file, because you are not a “resident” and the only people who can use IRS Form 1040 are “residents”, which are “aliens” with a domicile on federal territory. The IRS Form 1040 is for us ONLY by “U.S. individuals”, and the term “individual” is defined in 26 C.F.R. §1.1441-1(c)(3) as an “alien” or “nonresident alien”. Nowhere is the term “individual” defined as a “citizen” or “U.S. citizen” anywhere in either the Internal Revenue Code or the Treasury Regulations. Therefore, you would be committing perjury under penalty of perjury to file an IRS Form 1040 if you were a statutory “U.S. citizen” not in a foreign country, because you would be falsely declaring yourself to be an “individual” by filing such a form.

1. A "U.S.** citizen" shown above is one who is a federal citizen born or naturalized in the federal zone and described in 8 U.S.C. §1401. This is NOT the same as a person who is a "national". The Internal Revenue Code only applies to U.S.** citizens and is municipal/special law that does not apply to Sovereign Natural Born Citizens in the 50 Union states.
2. You can read the California Revenue and Taxation Code (R&TC) for yourself on the web at <http://www.leginfo.ca.gov/cgi-bin/calawquery?codesection=rtc&codebody=&hits=20>
3. Why don't the state and federal income tax publications reflect the above considerations? We can only assume that it is because they want to simplify these publications because they want to maximize revenues from income taxation.

5.3.6 How to Revoke Your Election to be Treated as a U.S. Resident and Become a Nonresident

Revocation of Election is required for those who have been filing IRS Form 1040's and who want to become nonresident aliens as documented later in section 5.6.13. The below instructions are derived directly from IRS Publication 54 (2000), p. 6 on how to revoke your election to be treated as a resident of the U.S.**. Note that you must also submit an IRS Form W-8 along with the revocation of election in order to properly identify yourself as a "non-resident non-person" to the IRS. Revocation of Election is also treated in 26 U.S.C. §6013(g) and the corresponding regulations found in 26 C.F.R. §1.6013-6(b) and 26 C.F.R. §1.6013-6(a)(3):

1. Either spouse can revoke the choice for any tax year.
2. The revocation must be made by the due date for filing the tax return for that tax year.
3. The spouse who revokes must attach a signed statement declaring that the choice is being revoked.
4. The statement revoking the choice must include the following:
  - 4.1. The name, address, and social security number (or taxpayer identification number) of each spouse.
  - 4.2. The name and address of any person who is revoking the choice for a deceased spouse.
  - 4.3. A list of any states, foreign countries, and possessions that have community property laws in which either spouse is domiciled or where real property is located from which either spouse receives income.
5. If the spouse revoking the choice must file a return, attach the statement to the return for the first year the revocation applies.
6. If the spouse revoking the choice does not have to file a return, but does file a return (for example, to obtain a refund), attach the statement to the return.
7. If the spouse revoking the choice does not have to file a return and does not file a claim for refund, send the statement to the Internal Revenue Service Center where the last joint return was filed.

26 C.F.R. §1.6013-6 Election to treat nonresident alien individual as resident of the United States.

[...]

(1) Revocation.

(i) An election under this section shall terminate if either spouse revokes the election. An election that is revoked terminates as of the first taxable year for which the last day prescribed by section 6072(a) and 6081(a) for filing the return of tax has not yet occurred.

(ii) Revocation of the election is made by filing a statement of revocation in the following manner. If the spouse revoking the election is required to file a return under section 6012, the statement is filed by attaching it to the return for the first taxable year to which the revocation applies. If the spouse revoking the election is not required to file a return under section 6012, but files a claim for refund under section 6511, the statement is filed by attaching it to the claim for refund. If the spouse revoking the election is not required to file a return and does not file a claim for refund, the statement is filed by submitting it to the service center director with whom was filed the most recent joint return of the spouses. The revocation may, if the revoking spouse dies after the close of the first taxable year to which the revocation applies but before the return, claim for refund, or statement of revocation is filed, be made by the executor, administrator or other person charged with the property of the deceased spouse.

(iii) A revocation of the election is effective as of a particular taxable year if it is filed on or before the last day prescribed by section 6072(a) and 6081(a) for filing the return of tax for that taxable year. However, the revocation is not final until that last day.

(iv) The statement of revocation must contain a declaration that the election under this section is being revoked. The statement must also contain the name, address, and taxpayer identifying number of each spouse. If the revocation is being made on behalf of a deceased spouse, the statement must contain the name and address of the executor, administrator, or other person revoking the election on behalf of the deceased spouse. The statement must also include a list of the States, foreign countries, and possessions of the United States which have community property laws and in which:

(A) Each spouse is domiciled, or

1 (B) real property is located from which either of the spouses receives income.

2 The statement must be signed by the person revoking the election.

3 (2) Death.

4 An election under this section shall terminate if either spouse dies. An election that terminates on account of 5 death terminates as of the first taxable year of the surviving spouse following the taxable year in which the
6 death occurred. However, if the surviving spouse is a citizen or resident of the United States who is entitled to 7 the benefits of section 2, the election terminates as of the first taxable year following the last taxable year for
8 which the surviving spouse is entitled to the benefits of section 2. If both spouses die within the same taxable
9 year, the election terminates as of the first day after the close of the taxable year in which the deaths occurred.

10 (3) Legal separation.

11 An election under this section terminates if the spouses legally separate under a degree of divorce or of 12 separate maintenance. An election that terminates on account of legal separation terminates as of the close of 13 the taxable year preceding the taxable year in which the separation occurs. The rules in section 1.6013-4(a) are 14 relevant in determining whether two spouses are legally separated.

15 (4) Inadequate records.

16 An election under this section may be terminated by the Commissioner if it is determined that either spouse has 17 failed to keep adequate records. An election that is terminated on account of inadequate records terminates as 18 of the close of the taxable year preceding the taxable year for which the Commissioner determines that the 19 election should be terminated. Adequate records are the books, records, and other information reasonably
20 necessary to ascertain the amount of liability for taxes under Chapters 1, 5, and 24 of the code of either spouse
21 for the taxable year. Adequate records also includes the granting of access to the books and records.

22 (c) Illustrations.

23 The application of this section is illustrated by the following examples. In each case the individual's taxable
24 year is the calendar year and the spouses are not legally separated.

25 Example (1). W, a U.S. citizen for the entire taxable year 1979, is married to H, a nonresident alien individual.
26 W and H may make the section 6013(g) election for 1979 by filing the statement of election with a joint return.
27 If W and H make the election, income from sources within and without the United States received by W and H in 28 1979 and subsequent years must be included in gross income for each taxable year unless the election later is 29 terminated or suspended. While W and H must file a joint return for 1979, joint or separate returns may be filed 30 for subsequent years.

31 Example (2). H and W are husband and wife and are both nonresident alien individuals. In June 1980 H
32 becomes a U.S. resident and remains a resident for the balance of the year. H and W may make the section
33 6013(g) election for 1980. If H and W make the election, income from sources within and without the United
34 States received by H and W for the entire taxable year 1980 and subsequent years must be included in gross
35 income for each taxable year, unless the election later is terminated or suspended.

36 Example (3). W, a U.S. resident on December 31, 1981, is married to H, a nonresident alien. W and H make the 37 section 6013(g) election and file joint returns for 1981 and succeeding years. On January 10, 1987, W becomes 38 a nonresident alien. H has remained a nonresident alien. W and H may file a joint return or separate returns
39 for 1987. As neither W or H is a U.S. resident at any time during 1988, their election is suspended for 1988. If 40 W and H have U.S. source or foreign source income effectively connected with the conduct of a U.S. trade or 41 business in 1988, they must file separate returns as nonresident aliens. W becomes a U.S. resident again on 42 January 5, 1990. Their election no longer is in suspense. Income from sources within and without the United 43 States received by W or H in the years their election is not suspended must be included in gross income for each 44 taxable year.

45 Example (4). H, a U.S. citizen for the entire taxable year 1979, is married to W, who is not a U.S. citizen. While 46 W believes that she is a U.S. resident, H and W make the section 6013(g) election for 1979 to cover the 47 possibility that later it would be determined that she is a nonresident alien during 1979. The election for 1979
48 will not be considered evidence that W was a nonresident alien in prior years. Income from sources within and
49 without the United States received by H and W in 1979 and subsequent years must be included in gross income
50 for each taxable year, unless the election later is terminated or suspended.

5.3.7 What Are the Advantages and Consequences of Filing as a Nonresident Citizen?

Let us preface this section by saying that although we don't under any circumstances advocate being a federal/U.S.** citizen under 8 U.S.C. §1401, we are including this section for completeness for those of you who insist on being one anyway. We are suggesting that if you WANT to foolishly be one, then you should at least elect to be a nonresident U.S. citizen who files the form 2555 along with your 1040 form. Below are some reasons why.

Once we complete our Revocation of Election form and become nonresidents for the purposes of the federal income tax, we gain all kinds of advantages that U.S.** (federal zone) residents don't have. This includes the following, derived directly from IRS Publication 54 (from the year 2000):

1. To qualify as a resident of a "foreign country", you must pass the "Physical Presence Test", which means that you must be present in that "country" for no less than 330 full days during a period of 12 consecutive months.
2. You must file an IRS Form 673 (Statement For Claiming Exemption From Withholding on Foreign Earned Income Eligible for the Exclusions(s) Provided by Section 911) with your employer documenting your nonresidency status. Do NOT include either a TIN or an SSN on the form and do not fill out either an SS-5, W-7, or W-9 to get a number to put on the 673 form because you don't have to provide a number. TINs are only issued to aliens, which you aren't in most cases, and SSN's may not be used on tax forms as an identifying number or as a substitute for TINs, as you will learn later in section 5.4.23.
3. You get all the same deductions on your tax return as "residents" of the United States** ("federal zone").
4. If you choose to exclude foreign earned income or housing amounts, you cannot deduct, exclude, or claim a credit for any item that can be allocated to or charged against the excluded amounts. This includes any expenses, losses, and other normally deductible items that are allocable to the excluded income. You can deduct only those expenses connected with earning includible income.
5. Foreign income taxes (which is what state income taxes are for most Americans):
  - 5.1. If you pay income tax to a foreign country or to one of the 50 Union states, you cannot claim those taxes on your income tax return as U.S. income taxes withheld, but you can make a foreign tax deduction from your taxes paid.
  - 5.2. You cannot take a deduction or credit from the taxes paid on amounts subject to the foreign income or housing exclusion.
  - 5.3. You can deduct foreign property taxes and foreign income taxes using the Schedule A form.
  - 5.4. Foreign income taxes can only be taken as a credit on form 1040, line 43, or as an itemized deduction on Schedule A for amounts above the foreign income exclusion amount.
  - 5.5. You can use IRS Form 1116 to take a foreign tax credit and file this form with your 1040. This form can be used to figure the amount of foreign tax paid or accrued that you can claim as a foreign tax credit.
  - 5.6. The rules for breaking up credits between earned income and unearned income can be complicated, and we recommend that you refer to IRS Publication 54 for details.
6. All "foreign income" is classified into three categories:
  - 6.1. Earned income (payments received in exchange for personal services):
    - 6.1.1. Salaries and wages.
    - 6.1.2. Commissions
    - 6.1.3. Bonuses
    - 6.1.4. Professional fees
    - 6.1.5. Tips
  - 6.2. Unearned income
    - 6.2.1. Dividends
    - 6.2.2. Interest
    - 6.2.3. Capital gains
    - 6.2.4. Gambling winnings
    - 6.2.5. Alimony
    - 6.2.6. Social Security benefits.
    - 6.2.7. Pensions
    - 6.2.8. Annuities
  - 6.3. Variable Income
    - 6.3.1. Business profits
    - 6.3.2. Royalties
    - 6.3.3. Rents

7. You can deduct the full cost of housing minus any reimbursements from your employer or the government.
8. After you deduct the housing costs, you can apply an exclusion amount of up to $78,000 (in the year 2001) to your remaining earned income (such as wages and payments for personal services).
9. You can fill out an IRS Form 673 and give it to your employer, which allows them to legally exclude amounts of your income below the $78,000 (in the year 2001) from your income subject to income tax withholding. This form becomes the equivalent of an IRS Form W-4E (exemption from withholding). Here is what IRS Publication 54 (2000 version) says on pages 7 through 9 about this:

“U.S. employers generally must withhold U.S. income tax from the pay of U.S. citizens performing services in a foreign country unless the employer is required by law to withhold foreign income tax. Your employer, however, is not required to withhold U.S. income tax from the portion of your wages earned abroad that are equal to the foreign earned income exclusion and the foreign housing exclusion if your employer has good reason to believe that you will qualify for these exclusions.”

- Once again, we remind you of the meaning of “U.S.” above, which means the “federal zone”, and includes only the District of Columbia and the federal territories and possessions. If they meant the United States of America or the 50 Union states, then they would have used that term and specified it clearly. They obviously didn't, because they have no legal authority or jurisdiction or sovereignty within the States to use that term.
10. Regardless of the fact that you do not owe any federal income tax, you must still file a form 2555 annually if your income exceeds a specified amount as follows (for the year 2000):

Filing Status Amount

Single	$7,200
65 or older	$8,300
Head of household	$9,250
65 or older	$10,350
Qualifying widow(er)	$10,150
65 or older	$11,250
Married filing jointly	$12,950
Not living with spouse at end of year	$2,800
One spouse 65 or older	$13,800
Both spouses 65 or older	$14,650
Married filing separately	$2,800

11. Social Security and Medicare taxes apply even when you work in a foreign country.
12. U.S. payers of earned income excluding wages (other than U.S. government wages) are required to withhold at a flat rate of 30% of all earnings, including dividends and royalties. If you are a U.S. citizen or resident and this tax is withheld in error from payments to you because you have a foreign address, you should notify the payer of the income to stop the withholding. Use form W-9.
13. Foreign earned income may NOT include the following:
- 13.1. The previously excluded value of meals and lodging furnished for the convenience of your employer.
  - 13.2. Pension or annuity payments including social security benefits.
  - 13.3. U.S. Government payments to its employees.
  - 13.4. Amounts included in your income because of your employer's contributions to a nonexempt employee trust or to a nonqualified annuity contract.
  - 13.5. Recaptured unallowable moving expenses.
  - 13.6. Payments received after the end of the tax year following the tax year in which you performed the services that earned the income.

(Doubters NOTE: Did you notice that the above (item 13) list DIDN'T exclude from “foreign income” income derived from any of the 50 Union states?)

14. For the purposes of the foreign earned income exclusion and the foreign housing exclusion or deduction, foreign earned income does not include any amounts paid by the United States or any of its agencies to its employees. Payments to employees of unappropriated fund activities are not foreign earned income. Nonappropriated fund activities include the following employers:
- 14.1. Armed forces post exchanges.
  - 14.2. Officers' and enlisted personnel clubs

- 1 14.3. Post and station theaters.
 2 14.4. Embassy commissaries.
 3 15. Amounts paid by the United States or its agencies to persons who are not their employees may qualify for exclusion or 4 deduction.

5 5.3.8 Tactics Useful for Employees of the U.S. Government

6 What's interesting about the earlier sections relative to nonresident alien status is that U.S. government "employees" (5
 7 U.S.C. §2105) are the ones who get screwed by having to pay taxes on "wages" from U.S.*/federal zone sources, which is
 8 precisely the opposite of what you would expect as a reward for their patriotism and loyalty. According to dubious IRS
 9 publications, U.S. Government employees domiciled outside the federal zone earn "gross income" under Subtitle A of the 10 code if they volunteer to become "taxpayers". Since they are domiciled outside the federal zone and were born there in 11 most cases, they are "non-resident non-persons" by default. By virtue of the public office they hold, they also become
 12 "nonresident aliens" and under 26 U.S.C. §871(a), they must then "donate" a flat 30% federal income tax on income
 13 sources "within" the federal zone". There are a number of ways that U.S. Government employees can effectively and 14 legally avoid this kind of taxation. Here are some of the ways designed to minimize your tax liability:

- 15 1. Even if you do earn money from "within" the federal United States, there is still no statute under Internal Revenue
 16 Code, Subtitle A that makes you liable to pay any funds to the government.
 17 2. The same source rules described in 26 U.S.C. Sections 861 and 862 apply to federal income. Therefore, your earnings
 18 as a person who works for the federal government are still not "income" in a constitutional sense and is still not 19 subject to federal income tax! Refer to sections 5.6.5 and 8.1 for further details.
 20 3. Remember the definition of "employee" from 26 U.S.C. §3401(c) (the Internal Revenue Code)? It says:

21 26 U.S.C. Sec. 3401

22 (c) Employee

23
 24 For purposes of this chapter, the term "employee" includes [is limited to] an officer, employee, or elected
 25 official of the United States, a State, or any political subdivision thereof, or the District of Columbia, or any
 26 agency or instrumentality of any one or more of the foregoing. The term "employee" also includes an officer of 27 a corporation.

28 (See section 3.12.1.4 for further details on the definition of "employee".) For the purposes of income tax withholding
 29 liability, 26 C.F.R. §31.3401(c)-1 defines the term "employee" as elected or appointed political officials of the United 30 States, which most federal employees do not fall under. You must therefore be an elected or appointed official of the 31 U.S. holding public office or an officer of a corporation to be a U.S. Government "employee". Most government
 32 "employees" are neither of these, and therefore at least for the purposes of the income tax, they may include their
 33 income as "foreign". Also, if we look at the definition of "employee" found in 5 U.S.C. §2105, you must be appointed
 34 to civil service by the President, a member of Congress, a member of a uniformed service, or another "employee" who 35 has been. See the following if you would like to learn more:

Why Your Government is Either a Thief or You are a "Public Officer" for Income Tax Purposes, Form #05.008
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

- 36 4. Earnings as a federal worker (note we didn't say "employee") paid by the United States actually comes from you! You 37 are a "tax payer" (but not a "taxpayer"). The United States government is just the "independent contractor" for the 38 states that redistributes the income that tax payers from the 50 Union states pay to it. That means that the U.S.
 39 government didn't really pay this money because it never earned it, and receipt of income that it never earned can't be 40 a privilege. Remember, all rights and privileges we enjoy in the United States come from the PEOPLE and NOT the 41 government. The people and NOT the government are the true sovereigns in our system of government. The 42 Declaration of Independence says so! Therefore, you could say that the income was directly paid by the tax payers,
 43 and indirectly by the U.S. government. That is why the federal courts say they have authority to assess "direct" income 44 taxes, in many cases.
 45 5. One common approach that many government employees use to escape tax withholding and reporting (but not tax 46 liability, because there is no such thing under I.R.C., Subtitle A) is to become independent contractors for the 47 government. As we described in item 10 above, such contractors are not considered employees and therefore their 48 income can be described as "foreign income" which is subject to the "foreign exclusion" amount and housing
 49 deductions.

1 With all of the interesting knowledge gleaned from above, who needs the politicians to give us a tax cut? We can give
 2 ourselves a BIG tax cut just by changing our civil status to “non-resident non-person”, and IRS Publication 519 tells us
 3 exactly how to do it! If we file as “non-resident non-persons” or even “nonresident aliens, then for most of us, our income
 4 federal income tax would go to zero! We can also quit jobs with the U.S. Government and become independent contractors
 5 to cut our federal taxes. However, we have to make sure that we don't falsely indicate a domicile in the federal zone on any 6 federal or government form, or all these benefits go out the window and we lose our Constitutional rights.

7 5.4 The Truth About the "Voluntary" Aspect of Income Taxes

8 5.4.1 The true meaning of “voluntary”

9 Next, we will analyze what “voluntary” really means. Black's Law Dictionary deceptively defines the word “voluntary” as 10 follows:

11 voluntary. “Unconstrained by interference; unimpelled by another's influence; spontaneous; acting of oneself.
 12 Coker v. State, 199 Ga. 20, 33 S.E.2d. 171, 174. Done by design or intention. Proceeding from the free and 13 unrestrained will of the person. Produced in or by an act of choice. Resulting from free choice, without 14 compulsion or solicitation. The word, especially in statutes, often implies knowledge of essential facts. Without 15 valuable consideration; gratuitous, as a voluntary conveyance. Also, having a merely nominal consideration;
 16 as, a voluntary deed.”
 17 [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1575]

18 Remember, lawyers licensed by a corrupted government with a conflict of interest wrote the above and the goal they had 19 was to keep you from seeing the real truth so they could perpetuate their livelihood and prestige. They tip-toed around the 20 real issue by using “free choice” and “free will”, without explaining from where these two things originate. This is what we
 21 call “legal peek-aboo”. The result is that they told you everything about the word “voluntary” except the most important
 22 thing, which is the relationship of the word to “consent”. You can throw out all that lawyer double-speak crap above and 23 replace the definition with the following, which is very simple and easy to comprehend and which speaks the complete
 24 truth:

25 “voluntary. Proceeding of one's own initiative from consent derived without duress, force, or fraud being 26 applied. Proceeding with the informed and full knowledge and participation of the person or entity against 27 whom any possibly adverse consequences or liabilities may result, and which the consenting party wills and 28 wishes to happen.”

29 The reason duress cannot exist in order for a civil law or contract to be enforceable is that any contract or commitment
 30 made in the presence of duress is void or voidable, according to the American Jurisprudence (Am.Jur) Legal Encyclopedia:

31 “An agreement [consensual contract] obtained by duress, coercion, or intimidation is invalid, since the party
 32 coerced is not exercising his free will, and the test is not so much the means by which the party is compelled to
 33 execute the agreement as the state of mind induced.<sup>35</sup> Duress, like fraud, rarely becomes material, except
 34 where a contract or conveyance has been made which the maker wishes to avoid. As a general rule, duress
 35 renders the contract or conveyance voidable, not void, at the option of the person coerced,<sup>36</sup> and it is
 36 susceptible of ratification. Like other voidable contracts, it is valid until it is avoided by the person entitled to
 37 avoid it.<sup>37</sup> However, duress in the form of physical compulsion, in which a party is caused to appear to assent
 38 when he has no intention of doing so, is generally deemed to render the resulting purported contract void.<sup>38</sup>
 39 [American Jurisprudence 2d, Duress, §21 (1999)]

40 All governments are established EXCLUSIVELY for the protection of PRIVATE rights. The first step in protecting private 41 rights, in turn, is to prevent them from being converted into public rights and public property without the consent of the

<sup>38</sup> Restatement 2d, Contracts § 174, stating that if conduct that appears to be a manifestation of assent by a party who does not intend to engage in that conduct is physically compelled by duress, the conduct is not effective as a manifestation of assent.

owner. Therefore, anyone in government who calls anything "voluntary" is committing FRAUD if they refuse to protect your right to NOT volunteer by:

1. Readily recognizing that those who do NOT consent exist. For instance, recognizing and protecting the fact that:
  - 1.1. Not everyone is a "driver" under the vehicle code, and it is OK to travel WITHOUT a "license" or permission from the government if you are not using the roadways to conduct business activity.
  - 1.2. "nontaxpayers" or "persons other than statutory taxpayers" exist.
  - 1.3. You are encouraged and allowed to get married WITHOUT a state license and write your own marriage contract. The family code is a franchise and a contract. Since you have a right NOT to contract, then you have a right to write your own marriage contract that excludes ANY participation by the government or any right by the government to write the terms of the marriage contract.
2. Prosecuting those who engage in an of the following activities that injure non-consenting parties:
  - 2.1. Institute duress against people who are compelled to misrepresent their status on a government form as a precondition of doing business. Banks and employers do this all the time and it is CRIMINAL.
  - 2.2. PRESUME that you are a consenting party and franchisee, such as a "taxpayer", "driver", "spouse", etc. We call this "theft by presumption", because such a presumption associates you with the obligations of a status you do not have because you didn't consent to have it.
3. Providing forms and checkboxes on existing forms that recognize those who don't consent or volunteer, such as a "nontaxpayer" or "nonresident non-individual" block on tax withholding forms.
4. Providing a block on their forms that says "Not subject but not statutorily 'exempt'". An "exempt" person is, after all, someone who is otherwise subject but is given a special exclusion for a given situation. One can be "not subject" without being statutorily "exempt".
5. Providing forms and remedies for those who are either nonresidents or those who have been subjected to duress to misrepresent their status as being a franchisee such as a "taxpayer".
6. Providing a REAL, common law, non-franchise court, where those who are not party to the franchise can go to get a remedy that is just as convenient and inexpensive as that provided to franchisees. Example: U.S. Tax Court Rule 13(a) says that only franchisees called statutory "taxpayers" can petition the court, and yet there is not equally convenient remedy for NONTAXPAYERS and judges in district court harass, threaten and penalize those who are "nontaxpayer".

It is a maxim of law that gross negligence is equivalent to FRAUD. If they CALL something "voluntary" and yet refuse to ENFORCE all the above, it is gross negligence and therefore fraud under the common law:

Gross negligence is equal to fraud.
 [Bouvier's Maxims of Law, 1856;
 SOURCE: <http://famguardian.org/Publications/BouvierMaximsOfLaw/BouvierversMaxims.htm>]

A failure to implement all of the above by those who call themselves "government" is also a violation of the requirement for "equal protection of the law" that is the foundation of the United States Constitution. Any organization that calls itself a "government" and that does NOT provide ALL the remedies indicated above is a de facto government that is engaging in "selective enforcement" to benefit itself personally and financially and has a criminal conflict of financial interest. Here is how the U.S. Supreme Court describes such a de facto government:

"It must be conceded that there are [PRIVATE] rights [and property] in every free government beyond the control of the State [or any judge or jury]. A government which recognized no such rights, which held the lives, liberty and property of its citizens, subject at all times to the disposition and unlimited control of even the most democratic depository of power, is after all a despotism. It is true that it is a despotism of the many-- of the majority, if you choose to call it so--but it is not the less a despotism."
 [Loan Ass'n v. Topeka, 87 U.S. (20 Wall.) 655, 665 (1874)]

The de facto government described above that REFUSES to do the MAIN job it was created to do of protecting PRIVATE rights is extensively described in:

De Facto Government Scam, Form #05.043
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

The Declaration of Independence says that all just powers of government derive from the "consent" of the governed, which implies that anything not consensual is unjust. "Consent" is the real issue, not "free will". When a government lawyer is

1 prosecuting a rape perpetrator, he doesn't talk about whether the woman "volunteered" to have sex by failing to fight her
2 attacker. Instead, he talks about whether she "consented".

3 "As used in the law of rape 'consent' means consent of the 4 will, and submission under the influence of fear or terror
5 cannot amount to real consent.

6 There must be an exercise of intelligence based on
7 knowledge of its significance and moral quality and there must be a [free, uncoerced] choice between
8 resistance and assent. And if a woman resists to the point where further resistance would be useless or until 9 her resistance is overcome by force or violence, submission thereafter is not 'consent'."
[Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 305, emphasis added]

10 Somehow, these same federal prosecutors, when THEY become the "financial rapists" of the citizenry, suddenly magically
11 and mysteriously "forget" about the requirement for the same kind of "consent" in the context of taxes on the labor of a
12 human being. Like the all too frequent political scandals that haunt American politics, they develop "selective amnesia"
13 about the fact that slavery and involuntary servitude were outlawed by the Thirteenth Amendment, and that taxes on labor
14 are slavery. For no explicable or apparent reason that they are willing to admit, they mysteriously replace the forbidden
15 "consent" word with a nebulous "voluntary compliance" so there is just enough "cognitive dissonance" to keep the jury in 16 fear and doubt so they can be easily manipulated to do the government's illegal lynching of a fellow citizen. Who better
17 than a lawyer would use language to disguise the criminal nature of their acts? Apparently, financial rape is OK as long as 18 the government is doing the raping and as long as government lawyers are careful to use "politically correct" words to
19 describe the rape like "voluntary compliance". Do women being raped "voluntarily comply" with their rapists at the point
20 they quit fighting? We think not, and the same thing could be said of those who do not wish to participate in a corrupted
21 and unconstitutionally administered tax system under protest.

22 In a free country such as we have in America, consent is mandatory in every human interaction. The basis for protecting
23 rights within such an environment is the free exercise of our power to contract. All law in a society populated by 24 Sovereigns is based on our right to contract. If we are entering into a consensual relationship with another party where risk
25 may be involved, we can write a contract or agreement to define the benefits and liabilities resulting from that relationship
26 and use the court system to ensure adherence to the contract.

27 Contract. An agreement between two or more [sovereign] persons which creates an obligation to do or not to 28 do a particular thing. As defined in Restatement, Second, Contracts §3: "A contract is a promise or a set of 29 promises for the breach of which the law gives a remedy, or the performance of which the law in some way
30 recognizes as a duty." A legal relationships consisting of the rights and duties of the contracting parties; a
31 promise or set of promises constituting an agreement between the parties that gives each a legal duty to the 32 other and also the right to seek a remedy for the breach of those duties. Its essentials are competent parties,
33 subject matter, a legal consideration, mutuality of agreement, and mutuality of consideration. Lamoureux v.
34 Burrillville Racing Ass'n, 91 R.I. 94, 161 A.2d. 213, 215.

35 Under U.C.C., term refers to total legal obligation which results from parties' agreement as affected by the 36 Code. Section 1-201(11). As to sales, "contract" and "agreement" are limited to those relating to present or 37 future sales of goods, and "contract for sale" includes both a present sale of goods and a contract to sell goods
38 at a future time. U.C.C. §2-106(a).

39 The writing which contains the agreement of parties with the terms and conditions, and which serves as a proof
40 of the obligation
41 [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 322]

42 Our personal rights and our ability to protect them through our power to contract is the essence of our sovereignty and our 43 rightful ownership over our life, liberty, and property. There are several ways in which we use our power to contract as a 44 means of protection:

- 45 1. The U.S. Constitution and our state constitutions are all contracts between us and our public servants. Every public 46 servant must swear an oath to uphold and defend this contract. Willful violation of this Contract is called "Treason"
47 and is punishable by death. These contracts, in fact, are the ones responsible for the creation of all federal and state
48 governments. See section 4.4.3 earlier, where Lysander Spooner analyzed the nature of the Constitution as a contract.
- 49 2. Marriage licenses are a contract between us, the state, AND our partner. There are THREE, not TWO parties to this
50 contract. In that sense, getting a marriage license makes us into a polygamist. Signing this contract makes us subject
51 to the Family Code in our state. We cannot be subject to these codes any other way, because Common Law Marriage
52 is not recognized in most states.

3. Employment agreements are contracts between us and our prospective employer.
4. Trust deeds on property are contracts between the buyer, the finance company, and the county government.
5. Citizenship is contract between you and the government. The only party to the contract who can revoke the contract is you, and NOT your government. We talked about this earlier in section 4.11.10 and following.

In the Bible, contracts are called “covenants” or “promises” or “commandments”. In law, contracts are called “compacts”:

“Compact, n. An agreement or contract between persons, nations, or states. Commonly applied to working agreements between and among states concerning matters of mutual concern. A contract between parties, which creates obligations and rights capable of being enforced and contemplated as such between the parties, in their distinct and independent characters. A mutual consent of parties concerned respecting some property or right that is the object of the stipulation, or something that is to be done or forborne. See also Compact clause; Confederacy; Interstate compact; Treaty.”
[Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 281]

In the context of government, we showed earlier in section 4.3.1 that our government is a “government by compact”, which is to say that the Constitution is a contract between us, who are the Masters, and our public servants, who are our servants and agents:

“In Europe, the executive is synonymous with the sovereign power of a state...where it is too commonly acquired by force or fraud, or both...In America, however the case is widely different. Our government is founded upon compact [consent expressed in a written contract called a Constitution or in positive law]. Sovereignty was, and is, in the people [as individuals: that's you!].”
[Glass v. The Sloop Betsey, 3 (U.S.) Dall 6]

The Supreme Court agreed that all laws in any civil society are based on collective consent of the Sovereign within any community when it said:

“Undoubtedly no single nation can change the law of the sea. That law is of universal obligation, and no statute of one or two nations can create obligations for the world. Like all the laws of nations, it rests upon the common consent of civilized communities.”
[The Scotia, 81 U.S. (14 Wall.) 170 (1871)]

The legal profession has been trying to escape revealing the Master/Servant fiduciary relationship established by the contract and trust indenture called our Constitution by removing such important words as “public servant” from the legal dictionary, but the relationship still exists. Ever wonder what happened to that word? Greedy lawyer tyrants and the politicians who license and oppress them don’t want you knowing who is in charge or acting like a the Master that you are.

The Constitution governs our horizontal relationship with our fellow man, which the Bible calls our “neighbor”. Likewise, the Bible governs our vertical relationship with our Creator and it is the origin of all our earthly rights. Our rights are Divine rights direct from God Himself. The Declaration of Independence says so. We as believers in God are bound by the contract or covenant called the Bible to obey our Master and Maker, who is God. This makes us into His temporary fiduciaries and servants and ambassadors while we are here on earth.

“I am your servant; give me discernment that I may understand your [God’s] testimonies [laws].”
[Psalm 119:125, Bible, NKJV]

“In Your [God’s] mercy cut off my enemies, and destroy all those who afflict my soul; for I am Your servant.”
[Psalm 143:12, Bible, NKJV]

If we violate our treaty or contract with God by violating His laws found in the Bible and thereby injure our neighbor or fellow American, then we must be stripped by God Himself of our stewardship and most of the benefits and blessings of the contract that created it by using the “police powers” we delegated to our public servants. One of the greatest benefits and rewards of respecting and keeping our contract and covenant with God, of course, is personal sovereignty, liberty, and the right to rule and direct the activities of our public servants:

“Now the Lord is the Spirit; and where the Spirit of the Lord is, there is liberty.”
[2 Cor. 3:17, Bible, NKJV]

“Humble yourselves in the sight of the Lord, and He will lift you up [above your public servants and government].”
[James 4:10, Bible, NKJV]

1 The reason we must be divested of our sovereignty as a criminal member of society is that we can't be allowed to direct the
 2 activities of a government using our political rights unless we continually demonstrate mature love and concern for our
 3 fellow man, because the purpose of government is to protect and not harm our neighbor. Unless we know how to govern
 4 ourselves and protect and love our neighbor and not harm him, then we certainly can't lead or teach our public servants to
 5 do it! If we violate the very purpose of government with our own personal actions in hurting others, we simply can't and
 6 shouldn't be allowed to direct those who would keep us from being injured by such activities because doing so would be a
 7 conflict of interest.

8 It shouldn't come as a surprise that there are limits on our right and power to contract within a republican system of 9 government. These limits apply not only to our private contracts with other sovereign individuals, but also to our ability to 10 delegate authority to the governments we created through the written contract called the U.S. Constitution. The Supreme
 11 Court said the following about these limits in respect to our ability to write "law" that can be enforced against society
 12 generally:

13 "In Calder v. Bull, which was here in 1798, Mr. Justice Chase said, that there were acts which the Federal 14 and State legislatures could not do without exceeding their authority [from GOD!], and among them he 15 mentioned a law which punished a citizen for an innocent act; a law that destroyed or impaired the lawful
 16 private [labor] contracts [and labor compensation, e.g. earnings from employment through compelled W-4
 17 withholding] of citizens; a law that made a man judge in his own case; and a law that took the property from 18 A [the worker], and gave it to B [the government or another citizen, such as through social welfare
 19 programs]. 'It is against all reason and justice,' he added, 'for a people to intrust a legislature with such 20 powers, and therefore it cannot be presumed that they have done it. They may command what is right and 21 prohibit what is wrong; but they cannot change innocence into guilt, or punish innocence as a crime, or 22 violate the right of an antecedent lawful private [employment] contract [by compelling W-4 withholding, for 23 instance], or the right of private property. To maintain that a Federal or State
 24 legislature possesses such powers [of THEFT!] if they had not 25 been expressly restrained, would, in my opinion, be a political 26 heresy altogether inadmissible in all free republican
 27 governments.' 3 Dall. 388."
 28 [Sinking Fund Cases, 99 U.S. 700 (1878)]

29 In the quote below, the Supreme Court has also held that that no man can be compelled to participate in any government
 30 welfare or social benefit program.

31 "Men are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable rights, -life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness;'
 32 and to 'secure,' not grant or create, these rights, governments are instituted. That property which a man has 33 honestly acquired he retains full control of, subject to these limitations:

34 [1] First, that he shall not use it to his neighbor's injury, and that does not mean that he must use it for his 35 neighbor's benefit;
 36 [2] second, that if he devotes it to a public use, he gives to the public a right to control that use; and 37 [3] third, that whenever the public needs require, the public may take it upon payment of due compensation.
 38 [Budd v. People of State of New York, 143 U.S. 517 (1892)]

39 Notice the Supreme Court held:

40 "he shall not use it [his property or labor or income] to his neighbor's injury, and that does not mean that he
 41 must [or can be required by the government] use it for his neighbor's benefit".

42 Since over 56% of all federal expenditures go to pay for social benefit programs (see section 1.12 earlier), then it also 43 stands to reason that no one can be compelled to participate in the federal income tax that funds those programs. The secret 44 the government uses to part a fool and his money through the fraudulent administration of the tax laws is item (2) in the
 45 quote above, whereby the lies of the IRS cause us to unwittingly donate our private property to a "public use" and give the 46 government free control over it. This is what happens when we inadvertently connect our labor or assets to a "public 47 office" or a "trade or business" by:

- 48 1. Filing information returns (IRS Forms W-2, 1042-S, 1098, 1099) on ourselves which are FALSE in most cases.
- 49 2. Using government property, the Social Security Number or Taxpayer Identification Number, in connection with our 50 otherwise private labor.

3. Refusing to correct or remedy those who file false returns in our name in violation of 26 U.S.C. §7434 and 26 U.S.C. §7206. The prosecution rests its case, your Honor.
4. Filling out the wrong tax form such as the W-4 and thereby fraudulently misrepresenting oneself as a statutory government "employee" per 26 U.S.C. §3401(c).

5.4.2 "Public Law" or "Private Law?"

The most important subject to study in the legal field is how to distinguish what is "law" and what is not. This is a subject that is not taught in law schools, because lawyers and politicians want you to believe that everything they enact into law imposes an immediate obligation upon you, which is simply not true in the vast majority of cases. Many laws, in fact, are simply "directory in nature", meaning that you have an option to obey them but they cannot be lawfully enforced if you don't.

"Directory. A provision in a statute, rule of procedure, or the like, which is a mere direction or instruction of no obligatory force, and involving no invalidating consequence for its disregard, as opposed to an imperative or mandatory provision, which must be followed. The general rule is that the prescriptions of a statute relating to the performance of a public duty are so far directory that, though neglect of them may be punishable, yet it does not affect the validity of the acts done under them, as in the case of statute requiring an officer to prepare and deliver a document to another officer on or before a certain day."
 [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 460]

This section and the following subsections will therefore concern themselves with teaching the reader how discern between legislation which imposes an affirmative obligation and liability, and that which is merely "directory in nature" and of no obligatory force. We will prove that the origin of all law in America is informed, voluntary consent and that where there is no consent, there is no enforceable legal right to anything. This is a very important subject, because it will help you to modify your behavior with the goal of freeing you from obeying many legal enactments of your servant government which:

1. Are not in fact "law" in your specific case.
2. Are simply "directory in nature" and of no obligatory force.
3. Are "special law" or "private law" that apply only to a particular group of persons and things that you are not a part of.
4. Are "private law" disguised as "public law" to deceive you into obedience.
5. Apply only to government employees and not to the general public as a whole.

By helping you to discern what is "obligatory" and what is "directory", we don't mean to suggest any of the following:

1. That the Internal Revenue Code or the Social Security Act are not "law". They absolutely are.
2. That there are no persons subject to them.
3. That I.R.C., Subtitle A doesn't apply to anyone. Rather, the group of persons who are subject to it is far more limited than most people realize.
4. That "taxpayers" are not subject to the Internal Revenue Code.
5. That there are no "taxpayers".

In covering this important subject, we will learn to distinguish between "Public law" and "private law", and we will demonstrate their relationship to "positive law". We will also hopefully give you the words and tools to argue these issues in a court of law so that you avoid many of the legal traps that many freedom lovers fall into.

5.4.2.1 Public v. Private law

As we said earlier in sections 3.3 and 4.3.3, the purpose of law, like the purpose of government, is to protect us from harming each other, in fulfillment of the second great commandment to love our neighbor found in the Bible in Matt. 22:39. The only means by which law can afford that protection is to:

1. Prohibit and punish harmful behaviors.
2. Leave men otherwise free to regulate and fully control their own lives.

Thomas Jefferson agreed with the above conclusions when he said:

1                    "With all [our] blessings, what more is necessary to make us a happy and a prosperous people? Still one thing
2 more, fellow citizens--a wise and frugal Government, which shall restrain men from injuring one another, shall
3 leave them otherwise free to regulate their own pursuits of industry and improvement, and shall not take from
4 the mouth of labor the bread it has earned. This is the sum of good government, and this is necessary to close
5 the circle of our felicities."
6                    [Thomas Jefferson: 1st Inaugural, 1801. ME 3:320]

7 In the above sense, law is a negative concept: It provides a remedy for past harm but has no moral authority to prevent or 8 promote or mandate any other type of behavior, including the public good. De jure law acts only upon those who institute
9 past injury. When it acts upon FUTURE conduct or in a PREVENTIVE rather than CORRECTIVE role, it requires the 10 CONSENT of those who are affected by its preventive role. Otherwise, involuntary servitude and theft of property is the 11 result, where "rights" are property.

12 The very basis of the government's police powers, in fact, is only to provide a remedy for past harm but not to compel any 13 other behavior. Since the Constitution in the Fourteenth Amendment, Section 1 mandates "equal protection of the laws" to 14 everyone, then all laws dealing with such protection must be "public" and affect everyone equally in society:

15                    "Public law. A general classification of law, consisting generally of constitutional, administrative, criminal,
16 and international law, concerned with the organization of the state, the relations between the state and the 17 people who compose it, the responsibilities of public officers to the state, to each other, and to private persons,
18 and the relations of states to one another. An act which relates to the public as a whole. It may be (1) general
19 (applying to all persons within the jurisdiction), (2) local (applying to a geographical area), or (3) special
20 (relating to an organization which is charged with a public interest).

21                    That portion of law that defines rights and duties with either the operation of government, or the relationships
22 between the government and the individuals, associations, and corporations.

23                    That branch or department of law which is concerned with the state in its political or sovereign capacity,
24 including constitutional and administrative law, and with the definition, regulation, and enforcement of rights
25 in cases where the state is regarded as the subject of the right or object of the duty, --including criminal law
26 and criminal procedure, --and the law of the state, considered in its quasi private personality, i.e., as capable of 27 holding or exercising rights, or acquiring and dealing with property, in the character of an individual. That 28 portion of law which is concerned with political conditions; that is to say, with the powers, rights, duties,
29 capacities, and incapacities which are peculiar to political superiors, supreme and subordinate. In one sense, a
30 designation given to international law, as distinguished from the laws of a particular nation or state. In 31 another sense, a law or statute that applies to the people generally of the nation or state adopting or enacting it,
32 is denominated a public law, as contradistinguished from a private law, affecting an individual or a small 33 number of persons.

34                    See also General law. Compare Private bill; Private law; Special law."
35                    [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1230]

36 In a Republican form of government, passage of all public laws requires the explicit consent of the governed. That consent
37 is provided through our elected representatives and is provided collectively rather than individually. Any measure passed 38 by a legislature:

- 39 1. Which does not limit itself to prohibiting and punishing harmful behaviors.
- 40 2. Does not apply to everyone equally (equal protection of the laws).
- 41 3. Which was passed without the consent of the governed.

42 . . . is therefore voluntary and cannot be called a "Public law". Any law that does not confine itself strictly to public
43 protection and which is enforced through the police powers of the state is classified as "Private Law", "Special Law",
44 "Administrative Law", or "Civil Law". The only way that such measures can adversely affect our rights or become 45 enforceable against anyone is by the exercise of our private right to contract. We must consent individually to anything that 46 does not demonstrably prevent harm. Anything that we privately consent to and which affects only those who consent is 47 called "private law".

48                    "Private law. That portion of the law which defines, regulates, enforces, and administers relationships among
49 individuals, associations, and corporations. As used in contradistinction to public law, the term means all that
50 part of the law which is administered between citizen and citizen, or which is concerned with the definition,
51 regulation, and enforcement of rights in cases where both the person in whom the right inheres and the person
52 upon whom the obligation is incident are private individuals. See also Private bill; Special law. Compare
53 Public Law."
54                    [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1196]

1 Those who consent individually to a private law are the only ones subject to its provisions. For them, this enactment is
2 referred to as "special law":

3 "special law. One relating to particular persons or things; one made for individual cases or for particular
4 places or districts; one operating upon a selected class, rather than upon the public generally. A private law.
5 A law is "special" when it is different from others of the same general kind or designed for a particular purpose,
6 or limited in range or confined to a prescribed field of action or operation. A "special law" relates to either
7 particular persons, places, or things or to persons, places, or things which, though not particularized, are
8 separated by any method of selection from the whole class to which the law might, but not such legislation, be
9 applied. Utah Farm Bureau Ins. Co. v. Utah Ins. Guaranty Ass'n, Utah, 564 P.2d. 751, 754. A special law
10 applies only to an individual or a number of individuals out of a single class similarly situated and affected, or
11 to a special locality. Board of County Com'rs of Lemhi County v. Swensen, Idaho, 80 Idaho 198, 327 P.2d. 361,
12 362. See also Private bill; Private law. Compare General law; Public law."
13 [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, pp. 1397-1398]

14 All "special laws" are by individual consent of the parties only. "Special law" is a subset of and a type of "private law".
15 An example of "special law" is a private contract between individuals.

16 In the context of the government, "special laws" usually deal with procuring "privileges" relating to a regulated or licensed
17 activity. An example would be Social Security. You can only become subject to the provisions of the Social Security Act
18 by signing up for it using the SSA Form SS-5. Those who never signed up for it or who quit the program are not subject to 19 any of the codes relating to it. For those who never signed up for or consented to Social Security by applying:

- 20 1. The Social Security Act is NOT "law" and is irrelevant.
- 21 2. The Social Security Act is not enforceable against them and may not adversely affect their rights. It is "foreign" and 22 "alien" to the jurisdiction and forum within which they live.

23 The same arguments apply to Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A, which is the individual income tax:

- 24 1. Only certain selected groups of people are even allowed to consent to the provisions of the code under Subtitle A.
25 Nearly all of these people hold a "public office" in the United States government and are engaged in a "trade or 26 business", which is a privileged, regulated, and taxable activity.
- 27 2. Those who consented to the I.R.C. by procuring the privilege of taking any kind of deductions or credits under 28 U.S.C. sections 32 or 162 or who signed a "contract" called a W-4 or a 1040 become subject to its provisions.
- 29 3. Those subject to the provisions of the I.R.C. are defined as "taxpayers" in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(14) and they must 30 comply with ALL of its provisions, including the criminal provisions.
- 31 4. Those who never consented to be subject to the Internal Revenue Code are called "nontaxpayers". For them:
32 4.1. Its provisions are not "law" and are irrelevant.
33 4.2. They may not be the target of IRS enforcement actions.
34 4.3. All IRS notices directed at "taxpayers" may not be sent to them.
- 35 5. A government which wants to STEAL your money through fraud will try to hide the mandatory requirement for 36 consent so that you falsely believe compliance is mandatory:
37 5.1. They will try to make the process of consenting "invisible" and keep you unaware that you are consenting.
38 5.2. They will remove references to "nontaxpayers" off their website.
39 5.3. When asked about whether the "code" is voluntary, they will lie to you and tell you that it isn't.
40 5.4. They will pretend like a "private law" is a "public law".
41 5.5. They will commit constructive fraud by abuse the rules of statutory construction to include things in definitions
42 that do not appear anywhere within the law in order to make "private law" look like "public law". See:

43 Meaning of the Words "includes" and "including"
44 <http://famguardian.org/Subjects/Taxes/FalseRhetoric/Includess.pdf>

- 45 5.6. They will ensure that all paperwork, such as the W-4, in which you consent hides the fact that it is a contract or 46 agreement. Look at the IRS Form W-4: Do you see any reference to the word "agreement" on it? Well guess
47 what, it's an agreement and you didn't even know. The regulations at 26 C.F.R. §31.3401(a)-3(a) say it's an 48 "agreement", which is a contract. Why didn't your public SERVANTS tell you this? Because they want to fool you into thinking that participation is mandatory and that the I.R.C. is a "public law", when in fact, it is a "private law" that you must consent to in order to be subject to.

1 On a few very rare occasions, some people have gotten employees of the IRS to admit some of the above facts. Below is a
 2 link to a remarkable letter signed by an IRS Disclosure Officer, Cynthia Mills, which admits that the Internal Revenue
 3 Code is “special law” and is essentially voluntary and avoidable:

SEDM Exhibit #09.023

4 The other interesting thing to observe about our deceitful public servants is that if they want to trick you into complying,
 5 then they will:

- 6 1. Want to label everything they pass, including “private law”, as “public law”.
- 7 2. Mix and confuse private law with public law and make the two indistinguishable. For instance, when they propose a 8 bill, they will call it a “public law” and then load it down with a bunch of pork barrel “private law” provisions.
- 9 3. Make it so confusing and difficult to distinguish what is public law from what is private law, that people will just give 10 up and be forced to assume falsely that everything is “public law”. The result is the equivalent of “government
 11 idolatry”: Assuming authority that does not lawfully exist.

12 Since the foundation of this country, the U.S. Congress has had two sections of laws they pass in the Statutes at Large:
 13 Public Law and Private Law. Every year, the Statutes at Large are published in two volumes: Public Law and Private Law.
 14 In many cases, a bill they pass will identify itself as “public law” and be published in the volume labeled “Public law”
 15 when in fact it has provisions that are actually “private law”. Then they will obfuscate the definitions or not include
 16 definitions, called “words of art”, so as to fool you into thinking that what is actually a private law is a public law. In 17 effect, they will procure your consent through constructive fraud and deceit using the very words of the law itself.

18 *“Shall the throne of iniquity, which devises evil by law, have fellowship with You? They gather
 19 together against the life of the righteous, and condemn innocent blood. But the Lord has been my defense, and 20 my God the rock of my refuge. He has brought on them their own iniquity, and shall cut them off in their own
 21 wickedness; the Lord our God shall cut them off.”
 22 [Psalm 94:20-23, Bible, NKJV]*

23 Question: Who else but wicked lawmakers could the Bible be referring to in the above scripture? Now do you know why
 24 the book of Revelation refers to the “kings of the earth” as “the Beast” in Rev. 19:19?

25 We'll now provide an enlightening table comparing “public law” and “private law” as a way to summarize what we have 26 learned so far:

Table 5-30: Public Law v. Private/Special Law

#	Characteristic	Public law	Private/Special law
1	Consent provided	Collectively	Individually
2	Party consenting	Elected representatives	Individuals
3	Your consent provided	Indirectly	Directly
4	Consent procured through	Offer of enhanced protection/security	Offer of special "privilege" or benefits, which are usually financial in nature
5	Consent manifested by you through	Voting for your elected representatives	Signing the contract Engaging in certain regulated, or licensed activities. E.g.: Contractor's License, Business License, Marriage License, etc.
6	When consent procured through fraud or duress or absent constitutional authority or fully informed consent, law is called	"Decree under legislative form" (see Loan Ass'n v. Topeka , 87 U.S. 655 (1874)) Unconstitutional act Tyranny	Adhesion contract Usury Extortion Racketeering
7	Tyranny and dishonesty in government manifested by	Confusing Public law with private law Obfuscating law using "words of art"	Refusing to identify the privileged activities Making "excise taxes" on privileges appear like unavoidable "direct taxes" Making that which is a "code" and not positive law to appear as though it is
8	Proposed version that has not yet been ratified is called	"Bill"	Offer Proposal Bid
9	Ratified/enacted version called	"Statute" "Legislation" "Enactment" "Positive law"	"Contract" "Code"
10	Law affects	Everyone equally within the territorial jurisdiction of the government (equal protection)	Only parties who provided consent
11	Those subject to the law are called	"Subject to" "Liable"	"Liable"
12	Limits upon content of law?	Limited by Constitution	Limited only by what parties will agree/consent to
13	Enforceability of enacted/ratified version	Requires implementing regulations published in the federal register	May be enforced by statute and without implementing regulations
14	Territorial enforcement authority	Limited to territorial jurisdiction of enacting government	Can be enforced only in federal court if Federal government is party. Can be enforced only in state court if state government is a party. This is a result of the Separation of Powers Doctrine.
15	Examples of language within such a law	"All persons..." "Every person..." "All individuals..."	"A person..." "An individual..." "A person subject to..."

Now let's apply what we have learned in this section to a famous example: The Ten Commandments. We will demonstrate for you how to deduce the nature of each commandment as being either "public law" or "private law". The rules are simple:

1. Everything that says “thou shalt NOT” or uses the word “no” and carries with it a punishment is a “public law”.
2. Everything that says “thou shalt” is a “private law” that is essentially a voluntary contract. It has no punishment for disobedience but usually has a blessing for obedience.

To start off, we will list each of the ten commandments, from Exodus 20:3-17, NKJV:

1. "You shall have no other gods before Me.
2. "You shall not make for yourself a carved image--any likeness of anything that is in heaven above, or that is in the earth beneath, or that is in the water under the earth; <sup>5</sup>you shall not bow down to them nor serve them. For I, the LORD your God, am a jealous God, visiting the iniquity of the fathers upon the children to the third and fourth generations of those who hate Me, <sup>6</sup>but showing mercy to thousands, to those who love Me and keep My commandments.
3. "You shall not take the name of the LORD your God in vain, for the LORD will not hold him guiltless who takes His name in vain.
4. "Remember the Sabbath day, to keep it holy. Six days you shall labor and do all your work, but the seventh day is the Sabbath of the LORD your God. In it you shall do no work: you, nor your son, nor your daughter, nor your male servant, nor your female servant, nor your cattle, nor your stranger who is within your gates. For in six days the LORD made the heavens and the earth, the sea, and all that is in them, and rested the seventh day. Therefore the LORD blessed the Sabbath day and hallowed it.
5. "Honor your father and your mother, that your days may be long upon the land which the LORD your God is giving you.
6. "You shall not murder.
7. "You shall not commit adultery.
8. "You shall not steal.
9. "You shall not bear false witness against your neighbor.
10. "You shall not covet your neighbor's house; you shall not covet your neighbor's wife, nor his male servant, nor his female servant, nor his ox, nor his donkey, nor anything that is your neighbor's."

Now some statistics on the above commandments based on our analysis in this section:

1. Commandments 1,2,3,6,7,8,9,10 are “public law”. They are things you cannot do and which apply equally to everyone. Disobeying these laws will harm either ourself or our neighbor, will offend God, and carry with them punishments for disobedience.
2. Commandments 4 and 5 are “private law”, and apply only to those who consent. Blessings flow from obeying them but no punishment is given for disobeying them anywhere in the Bible. Below is an example of the blessings of obedience to this “private law”:

"Honor your father and your mother, that your days may be long upon the land which the LORD your God is giving you"
[Exodus 20:12, Bible, NKJV].

"Honor your father and your mother, as the LORD your God has commanded you, that your days may be long, and that it may be well with you in the land which the LORD your God is giving you."
[Deut. 5:16, Bible, NKJV]

3. The first four commandments deal with our vertical relationship with God, our Creator, in satisfaction of the first Great Commandment to love our God found in Matt. 22:37.
4. The last six commandments deal with our horizontal, earthly relationship with our neighbor, in satisfaction of the second of two Great Commandments to love our neighbor found in Matt. 22:39.

How do we turn a “private law” into a “public law”? Let’s use the fifth commandment above to “honor your father and mother”. Below is a restatement of that “private law” that makes it a “public law”. A harmful behavior of “cursing” is being given the punishment of death:

"He who curses father or mother, let him be put to death."
[Exodus 21:17, Bible, NKJV]

One last important concept needs to be explained about how to distinguish Public Law or Private law. When reading a statute or code, if the law uses such phrases as “All persons...” or “Everyone...” or “All individuals...”, then it applies equally to everyone and therefore is most likely a “public law”. If the code uses such phrases as “An individual...” instead of “All

1 individuals..”, then it is probably a private or special law that only applies to those who consent to it. The only element
 2 necessary in addition to such language in order to make such a section of code into “law” is the consent of the governed,
 3 which means the section of code must be formally enacted by the sovereigns within that system of government. If it was
 4 never enacted through such consent of the governed, then it can't be described as “law”, except possibly to those specific
 5 individuals who, through either and explicit signed written agreement or their conduct, express their consent to be bound by 6 it.

7 5.4.2.2 Why and how the government deceives you into believing that “private law” is “public law” in order to
 8 PLUNDER and ENSLAVE you unlawfully

9 Your public servants in the Legislative Branch know that the only way they can lawfully through legislation reach inside
 10 the “cookie jar”, which are the “foreign states” called states of the Union, is through the operation of “private law” for 11 nearly all subject matters except interstate and foreign commerce. They also know that since private law requires explicit
 12 consent and that most people would not voluntarily give up their life, liberty, property, or sovereignty, that the only way
 13 they are going to procure such consent is by fooling them into believing that private law is public law that everyone MUST 14 obey. They do this by the following means:

- 15 1. They will pretend like a “private law” is a “public law”.
- 16 2. They will deny attempts to characterize their activities truthfully as “private law” both in the laws they publish and 17 their court rulings.
- 18 3. They will call their enactment a “code” but never refer to it as a “law”. It doesn't become “law” for anyone until they 19 explicitly consent to it. All “law” implicitly conveys rights to the parties, and no rights exist where there is no one who 20 consents to a “code”! Look at 1 U.S.C. §204 and you will see that Title 26 of the Internal Revenue Code is never 21 referred to as a “law”.
- 22 4. They will call those who consent “residents” and those who don't consent “aliens” or “transient foreigners”. By doing
 23 this, they aren't implying that you LIVE within their jurisdiction, but instead that you are a party to their private law
 24 contract who has a “res”, which is a collection of rights and benefits “ident” ified within their jurisdiction. Sneaky, 25 huh?

26 Resident. *“Any person who occupies a dwelling within the State, has a present intent to remain within the State
 27 for a period of time, and manifests the genuineness of that intent by establishing an ongoing physical presence
 28 within the State together with indicia that his presence within the State is something other than merely
 29 transitory in nature. The word “resident” when used as a noun means a dweller, habitant or occupant; one who
 30 resides or dwells in a place for a period of more, or less, duration; it signifies one having a residence, or one
 31 who resides or abides. [Hanson v. P.A. Peterson Home Ass'n, 35 Ill.App.2d. 134, 182 N.E.2d. 237, 240]
 32 [Underlines added]*

33 Word “resident” has many meanings in law, largely determined by statutory context in which it is used. Kelm v.
 34 Carlson, C.A.Ohio, 473, F.2d. 1267, 1271
 35 [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1309]

36 The term “the State” they are referring to in the case of most private law usually means “the government” and not the 37 people that it serves. Everyone who is party to the private law or special law usually are agents, public officers, or 38 “employees” of the government in one form or another. See the following for proof:

39 Why Your Government is Either a Thief or You are a “Public Officer” for Income Tax Purposes, Form #05.008
 40 <http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

- 41 5. They will try to make the process of consenting “invisible” and keep you unaware that you are consenting.
- 42 6. When you contact them to notify them that you have withdrawn your consent and rescinded your signatures on any 43 forms you filled out, they will LIE to you by telling you that there is no way to quit the program.
- 44 7. They will remove references to people who don't consent off their website and from their publications. They will also 45 forbid their employees, through internal policy, from recognizing, helping, or communicating with those who did not
 46 consent. For instance, they will refuse to recognize the existence of “nontaxpayers” or people who are not “licensed”
 47 or privileged in some way. These people are the equivalent of “aliens” as far as they are concerned.
- 48 8. When asked about whether the “code” is voluntary, they will lie to you and tell you that it isn't, and that EVERYONE 49 is obligated to obey it, even though only those who consent in fact are.
- 50 9. They will commit constructive fraud by abuse the rules of statutory construction to include things in definitions that do not appear anywhere within the law in order to make “private law” look like “public law” that applies to everyone.
 See:

Meaning of the Words "includes" and "including"<http://famguardian.org/Subjects/Taxes/FalseRhetoric/Includess.pdf>

10. They will ensure that all paperwork that you sign in which you consent hides the fact that it is a contract or agreement. Look at the IRS Form W-4: Do you see any reference to the word "agreement" on it? Well guess what, it's an agreement and you didn't even know. The regulations at 26 C.F.R. §31.3401(a)-3(a) say it's an "agreement", which is a contract. Why didn't your public SERVANTS tell you this? Because they want to fool you into thinking that participation is mandatory and that the I.R.C. is a "public law", when in fact, it is a "private law" that you must consent to in order to be subject to.

The government will play all the above games because deep down, they know their primary duty is to protect you, and that the only people they can really regulate or control are their own employees in the process of protecting you. Therefore, they have to make you into one of their own employees or agents or contractors in order to get ANY jurisdiction over you:

"The power to "legislate generally upon" life, liberty, and property, as opposed to the "power to provide modes of redress" against offensive state action, was "repugnant" to the Constitution. Id., at 15. See also United States v. Reese, 92 U.S. 214, 218 (1876); United States v. Harris, 106 U.S. 629, 639 (1883); James v. Bowman, 190 U.S. 127, 139 (1903). Although the specific holdings of these early cases might have been superseded or modified, see, e.g., Heart of Atlanta Motel, Inc. v. United States, 379 U.S. 241 (1964); United States v. Guest, 383 U.S. 745 (1966), their treatment of Congress' §5 power as corrective or preventive, not definitional, has not been questioned."
[City of Boerne v. Flores, Archbishop of San Antonio, 521 U.S. 507 (1997)]

How can we know this is happening for any given interaction with the government? It's really quite simple. Let us give you an example. Just about every municipality in the country has a system of higher education. Every one of them charges TWO rates for their tuition: 1. Resident; 2. Nonresident. The Constitution in Section 1 of the Fourteenth Amendment requires "equal protection", which means EVERYONE, resident or nonresident, is EQUAL under the law. It's logical to ask:

"How can they discriminate against nonresidents by charging them a significantly higher rate of college tuition than residents without violating the equal protection clauses of the Constitution? Why hasn't someone litigated this in court already and fixed this injustice?"

The answer is that:

1. The municipality has created a PRIVATE corporation under the authority of PRIVATE law.
2. Those who partake of the benefits of this PRIVATE corporation are partaking of a PRIVILEGE, and can only procure the PRIVILEGE by consenting to the contract codified within the laws of the municipality.
3. The written application for the benefit constitutes the "consent" to the contract, even though the complete terms of the contract do not appear on the contract itself. In practice, the terms of the contract, like the laws themselves, are so voluminous that it would be impractical to publish them on the form used to apply for the benefit. Therefore, the terms are deliberately left out so that the applicant, in practical effect, is signing a BLANK CHECK! The government, by rewriting its laws, can change the terms of the contract at any time without your explicit consent!

CALIFORNIA CIVIL CODE
 DIVISION 3. OBLIGATIONS
 PART 2. CONTRACTS
 CHAPTER 3. CONSENT
Section 1589

1589. A voluntary acceptance of the benefit of a transaction is equivalent to a consent to all the obligations arising from it, so far as the facts are known, or ought to be known, to the person accepting.

4. The method for providing "reasonable notice" of the terms of the "constructive contract" or "implied contract" is by publication of a "code" by the municipality within its municipal ordinances. They call it a "code" because it isn't law until someone consents to it! In that sense, it is an "invisible contract", because most people never read the laws that their government publishes and couldn't read or research the law if their life depended on it. The federal and state courts have repeatedly affirmed that everyone has a duty to seek out, read, and know the law:

*But it must be remembered that all are presumed to know the law, and that whoever deals with a municipality*643 is bound to know the extent of its powers. Those who contract with it, or furnish it supplies,*

1 do so with reference to the law, and must see that limit is not exceeded. With proper care on their part and on
 2 the part of the representatives of the municipality, there is no danger of loss."

8 "Every citizen of the United States is supposed to know the law. . ."

9 [Floyd Acceptances, 7 Wall (74 U.S. 169) 666 (1869)]

11 "Of course, ignorance of the law does not excuse misconduct in any one, least of all in a sworn officer of the 12 law. But this is a quasi criminal action, and in fixing the penalty to be imposed the court should properly take 13 into account the motives and purposes which actuated the accused. Applying these considerations, we think the 14 requirements of the situation will be satisfied by a judgment suspending the respondent from practice for a 15 limited time."

16 [In re McCowan , 177 Cal. 93, 170 P. 1100 (1917)]

18 It is one of the fundamental maxims of the common law that ignorance of the law excuses no one. If 19 ignorance of the law could in all cases be the foundation of a suit in equity for relief, there would be no end
 20 of litigation, and the administration of justice would become in effect impracticable. There would be but few 21 cases in which one party or the other would not allege it as a ground for exemption from legal liability, and the
 22 extent of the legal knowledge of each individual suitor would be the material fact on which judgment would be
 23 founded. Instead of trying the facts of the case and applying the law to such facts, the time of the court would be 24 occupied in determining whether or not the parties knew the law at the time the contract was made or the 25 transaction entered into. The administration of justice in the courts is a practical system for the regulation of 26 the transactions of life in the business world. It assumes, and must assume, that all persons of sound and mature 27 mind know the law, otherwise there would be no security in legal rights and no certainty in judicial 28 investigations."

29 [Daniels v. Dean, 2 Cal.App. 421, 84 P. 332 (1905)]

31 "Every man is supposed to know the law. A party who makes a contract with an officer [of the government]
 32 without having it reduced to writing is knowingly accessory to a violation of duty on his part. Such a party aids
 33 in the violation of the law."

34 [Clark v. United States, 95 U.S. 539 (1877) ]

35 Even the Bible itself condemns those who don't read, learn, or obey the law!:

36 "One who turns his ear from hearing the law [God's law or man's law], even his prayer is an abomination."

37 [Prov. 28:9, Bible, NKJV]

38 "But this crowd that does not know [and quote and follow and use] the law is accursed."

39 [John 7:49, Bible, NKJV]

40 "Salvation is far from the wicked, For they do not seek Your statutes."

41 [Psalm 119:155, Bible, NKJV]

42 The fundamental injustices in the above SCHEME are the following:

- 43 1. The contract, BEFORE IT WAS SIGNED, was not "law" for the applicant, but simply a "code". Private law is not 44 "law" for those who are not subject to it. Only those who explicitly consent to it are subject and only for them can it be
 45 called "law". The contract "activates" and becomes "law" only AFTER it is consented to. Before it is consented to, it 46 is simply a "proposal" or an "offer".
- 47 2. It is therefore unreasonable for any court of law to infer that the a person has a "duty" to read or learn or know that 48 which is not "law" for him or that doesn't pertain to him. Therefore, there is no way that it can use the maxim of law
 49 that "everyone is supposed to know the law" as an excuse to PRESUME that he the applicant had "reasonable notice"
 50 of the terms of a contract that were never spelled out on the application itself. No court, we might add, has ever said:

51 "Every citizen of the United States is supposed to read and know and learn 'codes' but not 'laws' that don't 52 pertain to him."

- 1 3. The municipality has deprived other PRIVATE corporations of equal protection who are engaged in the same
 2 competitive activity as the government's competitive PRIVATE corporation. For instance:
 3 3.1. Other competing private corporations are not allowed to publish their administrative regulations within the 4 municipal code like the government does. Why not?
 5 3.2. Other private corporations do not enjoy the same kind of subsidies from the municipality as the state-run schools
 6 do.
 7 3.3. Other private corporations cannot assert "sovereign immunity" to protect their PRIVATE business activities like 8 the government can.

9 The way out of the above quagmire for people dealing with the government is simply to write the following on every 10 government form, so that you don't surrender any rights under it:

11 "All rights reserved without prejudice, U.C.C. §1-308"

12 There are yet other ways that the government abuses this deception to unlawfully protect and enlarge its PRIVATE
 13 business pursuits, such as junior college, Social Security, Medicare, etc. The Supreme Court has created a judicial doctrine
 14 not found within the Constitution called "sovereign immunity", which requires that both the federal government and the 15 states of the Union may not be sued in their own courts without their consent.

16 The exemption of the United States from being impleaded without their consent is, as has often been affirmed by 17 this court, as absolute as that of the crown of England or any other sovereign. In Cohens v. Virginia, 6 Wheat.
 18 264, 411, Chief Justice MARSHALL said: 'The universally-received opinion is that [106 U.S. 196, 227]
 19 no suit can be commenced or prosecuted against the United States.' In Beers v. Arkansas, 20 How. 527, 529,
 20 Chief Justice TANEY said: 'It is an established principle of jurisprudence, in all civilized nations, that the 21 sovereign cannot be sued in its own courts, or in any other, without its consent and permission; but it may, if it
 22 thinks proper, waive this privilege, and permit itself to be made a defendant in a suit by individuals, or by
 23 another state. And as this permission is altogether voluntary on the part of the sovereignty, it follows that it may 24 prescribe the terms and conditions on which it consents to be sued, and the manner in which the suit shall be
 25 conducted, and may withdraw its consent whenever it may suppose that justice to the public requires it.' In the 26 same spirit, Mr. Justice DAVIS, delivering the judgment of the court in Nichols v. U.S. 7 Wall. 122, 126, said:
 27 'Every government has an inherent right to protect itself against suits, and if, in the liberality of legislation they
 28 are permitted, it is only on such terms and conditions as are prescribed by statute. The principle is fundamental,
 29 applies to every sovereign power, and, but for the protection which it affords, the government would be unable
 30 to perform the various duties for which it was created.' See, also, U.S. v. Clarke, 8 Pet. 436, 444; Cary v.
 31 Curtis, 3 How. 236, 245, 256; U.S. v. McLemore, 4 How. 286, 289; Hill v. U.S. 9 How. 386, 389; Reccside v.
 32 Walker, 11 How. 272, 290; De Groot v. U.S. 5 Wall. 419, 431; U.S. v. Eckford, 6 Wall. 484, 488; The Siren, 7
 33 Wall. 152, 154; The Davis, 10 Wall. 15, 20; U.S. v. O'Keefe, 11 Wall. 178; Case v. Terrell, 11 Wall. 199, 201;
 34 Carr v. U.S. 98 U.S. 433, 437; U.S. v. Thompson, 98 U.S. 486, 489; Railroad Co. v. Tennessee, 101 U.S. 337;
 35 Railroad Co. v. Alabama, 101 U.S. 832.
 36 [U.S. v. Lee, 106 U.S. 196 (1882)]
 37

 39 The inherent nature of sovereignty prevents actions against a state by its own citizens without its consent.
 40 [491 U.S. 39] In Atascadero, 473 U.S. at 242, we identified this principle as an essential element of the 41 constitutional checks and balances:

42 The "constitutionally mandated balance of power" between the States and the Federal Government was adopted
 43 by the Framers to ensure the protection of "our fundamental liberties." [Garcia v. San Antonio Metropolitan 44 Transit Authority, 469 U.S. 528, 572 (Powell, J., dissenting)]. By guaranteeing the sovereign immunity of the 45 States against suit in federal court, the Eleventh Amendment serves to maintain this balance.
 46 [Great Northern Ins. Co. v. Read, 322 U.S. 47, 51 (1944)]

47 States and the federal government both have historically abused the confusion between "private law" and "public law" so
 48 that they could unlawfully and unjustly assert "sovereign immunity" to protect what actually amounts to PRIVATE
 49 business enterprises and PRIVATE municipal and federal corporations they have set up for their own pecuniary benefit.
 50 The U.S. Supreme Court has repeatedly said that when a government engages in PRIVATE business concerns, it surrenders
 51 its sovereign immunity to suit and devolves to that of a private business corporation as far as standing in court:

52 When a State engages in ordinary commercial ventures, it acts like a private person, outside the area of its
 53 "core" responsibilities, and in a way unlikely to prove essential to the fulfillment of a basic governmental
 54 obligation.
 55 [College Savings Bank v. Florida Prepaid Postsecondary Education Expense, 527 U.S. 666 (1999)]
 56

1 "What, then, is meant by the doctrine that contracts are made with reference to the taxing power resident in the
 2 State, and in subordination to it? Is it meant that when a person lends money to a State, or to a municipal
 3 division of the State having the power of taxation, there is in the contract a tacit reservation of a right in the 4 debtor to raise contributions out of the money promised to be paid before payment? That cannot be, because if
 5 it could, the contract (in the language of Alexander Hamilton) would 'involve two contradictory things: an
 6 obligation to do, and a right not to do; an obligation to pay a certain sum, and a right to retain it in the shape
 7 of a tax. It is against the rules, both of law and of reason, to admit by implication in the construction of a
 8 contract a principle which goes in destruction of it.' The truth is, States and 9 cities, when they borrow money and contract to 10 repay it with interest, are not acting as 11 sovereignties. They come down to the level of ordinary individuals. Their contracts have the 12 same meaning as that of similar contracts between private persons. Hence, instead of there being in the 13 undertaking of a State or city to pay, a reservation of a sovereign right to withhold payment, the contract should 14 be regarded as an assurance that such a right will not be exercised. A promise to pay, with a 15 reserved right to deny or change the effect of the promise, is an 16 absurdity."

17 Is, then, property, which consists in the promise of a State, or of a municipality of a State, beyond the reach of 18 taxation? We do not affirm that it is. A State may undoubtedly tax any of its creditors within its jurisdiction for 19 the debt due to him, and regulate the amount of the tax by the rate of interest the debt bears, if its promise be 20 left unchanged. A tax thus laid impairs no obligation assumed. It leaves the contract untouched. But until 21 payment of the debt or interest has been made, as stipulated, we think no act of State sovereignty can work an 22 exoneration from what has been promised to the [446] creditor; namely, payment to him, without a violation of 23 the Constitution. The true rule of every case of property founded on contract with the government is this: It
 24 must first be reduced into possession, and then it will become subject, in common with other similar property, to 25 the right of the government to raise contributions upon it. It may be said that the government may fulfil this
 26 principle by paying the interest with one hand, and taking back the amount of the tax with the other. But to this
 27 the answer is, that, to comply truly with the rule, the tax must be upon all the money of the community, not upon 28 the particular portion of it which is paid to the public creditors, and it ought besides to be so regulated as not to 29 include a lien of the tax upon the fund. The creditor should be no otherwise acted upon than as every other
 30 possessor of money; and, consequently, the money he receives from the public can then only be a 31 fit subject of taxation when it is entirely separated' (from the 32 contract), 'and thrown undistinguished into the common mass.' 3
 33 Hamilton, Works, 514 et seq. Thus only can contracts with the State be allowed to have the same meaning as all 34 other similar contracts have.
 35 [Murray v. City of Charleston, 96 U.S. 432 (1877)]
 36

37 Moreover, if the dissent were correct that the sovereign acts doctrine permits the Government to abrogate its 38 contractual commitments in "regulatory" cases even where it simply sought to avoid contracts it had come to 39 regret, then the Government's sovereign contracting power would be of very little use in this broad sphere of 40 public activity. We rejected a virtually identical argument in Perry v. United States, 294 U.S. 330 (1935), in 41 which Congress had passed a resolution regulating the payment of obligations in gold. We held that the law
 42 could not be applied to the Government's own obligations, noting that "the right to make binding obligations
 43 is a competence attaching to sovereignty." Id. at 353.

44 See also Clearfield Trust Co. v. United States, 318 U.S. 363, 369 (1943) ("The United States does business on 45 business terms") (quoting United States v. National Exchange Bank of Baltimore, 270 U.S. 527, 534 (1926)); 46 Perry v. United States, supra at 352 (1935) ("When the United States, with constitutional authority, makes
 47 contracts, it has rights and incurs responsibilities similar to those of individuals who are parties to such 48 instruments. There is no difference . . . except that the United States cannot be sued without its consent")
 49 (citation omitted); United States v. Bostwick, 94 U.S. 53, 66 (1877) ("The United States, when they contract 50 with their citizens, are controlled by the same laws that govern the citizen in that behalf"); Cooke v. United 51 States, 91 U.S. 389, 398 (1875) (explaining that when the United States "comes down from its position of 52 sovereignty, and enters the domain of commerce, it submits itself to the same laws that govern individuals 53 there").

54 See Jones, 1 Cl.Ct. at 85 ("Wherever the public and private acts of the government seem to commingle, a
 55 citizen or corporate body must by supposition be substituted in its place, and then the question be determined
 56 whether the action will lie against the supposed defendant"); O'Neill v. United States, 231 Ct.Cl. 823, 826 57 (1982) (sovereign acts doctrine applies where, "[w]ere [the] contracts exclusively between private parties, the

1 party hurt by such governing action could not claim compensation from the other party for the governing
 2 action"). The dissent ignores these statements (including the statement from Jones, from which case Horowitz
 3 drew its reasoning literally verbatim), when it says, post at 931, that the sovereign acts cases do not emphasize 4 the need to treat the government-as-contractor the same as a private party.
 5 [United States v. Winstar Corp., 518 U.S. 839 \(1996\)]

6 How does the government abuse sovereign immunity to protect PRIVATE business activities? Let's use the Internal 7 Revenue Code, for example, which we now know is "private law":

- 8 1. The Internal Revenue Code is identified as a "code" and not a "law" in 1 U.S.C. §204. In fact, it is a "code" of 9 repealed laws. 53 Stat. 1 REPEALED the entire Internal Revenue Code, leaving no "law" left to enforce.
- 10 2. No court ruling we have ever read at the supreme court or district court level acknowledges whether the Internal 11 Revenue Code is either "private law" or "public law". This is deliberate, because they want to perpetuate the FRAUD
 12 and FALSE PRESUMPTION in the minds of the American public and the legal profession that it is "public law" that 13 applies to everyone.
- 14 3. Those persons who claim to be "nontaxpayers" not subject to the private law that is the Internal Revenue Code 15 preserve all their constitutional rights and are free to challenge the constitutionality of the enforcement of any provision 16 of this "code" against them in any court of law.

17 "The revenue laws are a code or system in regulation of tax assessment and collection. They relate to taxpayers, 18 and not to nontaxpayers. The latter are without their scope. No procedure is prescribed for nontaxpayers, and 19 no attempt is made to annul any of their rights and remedies in due course of law. With them Congress does not 20 assume to deal, and they are neither of the subject nor of the object of the revenue laws..."
 21 [Long v. Rasmussen, 281 F. 236 \(1922\)]

22 *"Revenue Laws relate to taxpayers [officers, employees, and elected officials of the Federal Government] and
 23 not to non-taxpayers [American Citizens/American Nationals not subject to the exclusive jurisdiction of the 24 Federal Government]. The latter are without their scope. No procedures are prescribed for non-taxpayers and 25 no attempt is made to annul any of their Rights or Remedies in due course of law. With them[non-taxpayers]
 26 Congress does not assume to deal and they are neither of the subject nor of the object of federal revenue laws."*
 27 [Economy Plumbing & Heating v. U.S., 470 F.2d. 585 \(1972\)]

- 28 4. When "nontaxpayers" have historically challenged the constitutionality of UNLAWFULLY enforcing provisions of the 29 "contract" called the Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A against those who never consented to it, federal courts have 30 repeatedly and unlawfully invoked provisions within the contract itself that don't apply to the litigant as an excuse to 31 circumvent the challenge. For instance, the Anti-Injunction Act, 26 U.S.C. §7421 says that federal courts may not 32 restrain or interfere with the assessment or collection of any "tax".

33 TITLE 26 > Subtitle F > CHAPTER 76 > Subchapter B > § 7421
 34 § 7421. Prohibition of suits to restrain assessment or collection

35 (a) Tax

36 *Except as provided in sections 6015 \(e\), 6212 \(a\) and (c), 6213 \(a\), 6225 \(b\), 6246 \(b\), 6330 \(e\)\(1\), 6331 \(i\),
 37 6672 \(c\), 6694 \(c\), and 7426 \(a\) and (b)(1), 7429 \(b\), and 7436, no suit for the purpose of restraining the 38 assessment or collection of any tax shall be maintained in any court by any person, whether or not such person 39 is the person against whom such tax was assessed.*

40 (b) Liability of transferee or fiduciary

41 No suit shall be maintained in any court for the purpose of restraining the assessment or collection (pursuant to 42 the provisions of chapter 71) of—

43 (1) the amount of the liability, at law or in equity, of a transferee of property of a taxpayer in respect of any
 44 internal revenue tax, or

45 (2) the amount of the liability of a fiduciary under section 3713 \(b\) of title 31, United States Code in in respect 46 of any such tax.

- 47 5. In effect, the courts in unlawfully enforcing provisions of the contract against those who are not parties to it are 48 abusing legislatively created sovereign immunity to protect PRIVATE business activity. This is CLEARLY
 49 unconstitutional if it injures the Constitutionally guaranteed rights of litigants who are "nontaxpayers" not subject to 50 the "code"/"contract".

1 The net result of the abuse of sovereign immunity to protect the PRIVATE business activity documented within the Internal
2 Revenue Code, Subtitle A is:

- 3 1. Involuntary servitude in violation of the Thirteenth Amendment.
- 4 2. Peonage in violation of 18 U.S.C. §1581 and 42 U.S.C. §1994.
- 5 3. Enticement into slavery in violation of 18 U.S.C. §1583. The W-4 says nothing about the fact that it is an "agreement"
6 or contract even though the regulations at 26 C.F.R. §31.3401(a)-3 and statute at 26 U.S.C. §3402(p) identify it as
7 such. If the IRS tells anyone that they HAVE to sign and consent to what is actually a voluntary agreement, they are 8 enticing the person into slavery, and yet the federal courts refuse to hold them accountable for such criminal activity.
- 9 4. Conspiracy against rights in violation of 18 U.S.C. §241.
- 10 5. Conflict of interest on the part of federal judges, who are both "taxpayers" subject to the extortion and recipients of 11 benefits and laundered money proceeding from the extortion, in violation of 28 U.S.C. §§144 and 455.
- 12 6. Racketeering and extortion in violation of 18 U.S.C. §1951.
- 13 7. Kidnapping in violation of 18 U.S.C. §1201. 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(39) and 26 U.S.C. §7408(d) both allow federal 14 judges to "kidnap" the legal identities of persons subject to the I.R.C. and make them into the equivalent of 15 domiciliaries of the District of Columbia for the purposes of the Internal Revenue Code. By imposing these provisions
16 against parties who do not consent to be "taxpayers" and who are "nontaxpayers" not subject to any provision of the 17 I.R.C., they are engaging in kidnapping and identity theft. Do you REALLY think the I.R.C. would need provisions
18 like this if the federal government REALLY had jurisdiction within states of the Union to collect income taxes
19 pursuant to I.R.C., Subtitle A?

20 Judges in federal courts must certainly be aware of all of the above, which is why they positively refuse their constitutional
21 duty to protect your rights by admitting that I.R.C., Subtitle A is "private law" and not "public law", that only applies to
22 those who consent, and then explaining to the parties to the lawsuit EXACTLY what form that consent takes so that they
23 receive reasonable notice of the rights they are surrendering by engaging in PRIVATE business activity with a government
24 that has made a BUSINESS out of effectively STEALING from you under the color but without the actual authority of law.
25 This is the biggest travesty of justice in our time. Through this constructive fraud, they have effectively criminalized
26 personal responsibility and exclusively enjoying your own life, liberty, and property, thus making slaves out of us all. The 27 Civil War did not end slavery by any means. It has simply taken a slightly altered and more "stealthy" form. Some things
28 never change, do they? Of this FRAUD and abuse of law to deceive and enslave people, Lysander Spooner said:

29 "What, then, is legislation?

30 It is an assumption by one man, or body of men, of absolute, irresponsible dominion over all other men whom 31 they can subject to their power.

32 *It is an assumption by one man, or body of men, of a right to subject all other men to their will and their
33 service.*

34 *It is an assumption by one man, or body of men, of a right to abolish outright all the natural rights, all the
35 natural liberty of all other men; to make all other men their slaves; to arbitrarily dictate to all other men what 36 they may, and may not do; what they may, and may not, have; what they may, and may not, be.*

37 *It is, in short, the assumption of a right to banish the principle of human rights, the principle of justice itself,
38 from off the earth, and set up their own personal will, pleasure, and interest in its place.*

39 *All this, and nothing less, is involved in the very idea that there can be any such thing as legislation that is 40 obligatory upon those upon whom it is imposed."
41 [Lysander Spooner in 1882]*

43 5.4.2.3 Comity

44 An important form of official "consent" is called "comity" in the legal field. Black's Law Dictionary defines "comity" as
45 follows:

1           “comity. Courtesy; complaisance; respect; a willingness to grant a privilege, not as a matter of right, but out
 2 of deference and good will. Recognition that one sovereignty allows within its territory to the legislative,
 3 executive, or judicial act of another sovereignty, having due regard to rights of its own citizens. Nowell v.
 4 Nowell, Tex.Civ.App., 408 S.W.2d. 550, 553. In general, principle of “comity” is that courts of one state or
 5 jurisdiction will give effect to laws and judicial decisions of another state or jurisdiction, not as a matter of 6 obligation, but out of deference and mutual respect. Brown v. Babbitt Ford, Inc., 117 Ariz. 192, 571 P.2d. 689,
 7 695. See also Full faith and credit clause.”
 8 [Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 267]

9 Comity is the reason why countries and even sister states of the Union do the following for each other, even though no law 10 requires them to:

- 11 1. Extradite criminals wanted in another country.
- 12 2. Provide military aid.
- 13 3. Accept immigrants or refugees from other countries.

14 Comity is usually used to describe the actions of states of the Union in relation to the federal government. Below is how 15 the U.S. Supreme Court describes the sovereignty of the states, and the fact that it cannot compel states to do anything in 16 relation to each other:

17           “This court has declined to take jurisdiction of suits between states to compel the performance of obligations
 18 which, if the states had been independent nations, could not have been enforced judicially, but only through the
 19 political departments of their governments. Thus, in Kentucky v. Dennison, 24 How. 66, where the state of 20 Kentucky, by her governor [127 U.S. 265, 289] applied to this court, in the exercise of its original jurisdiction,
 21 for a writ of mandamus to the governor of Ohio to compel him to surrender a fugitive from justice, this court,
 22 while holding that the case was a controversy between two states, decided that it had no authority to grant the 23 writ.”
 24 [State of Wisconsin v. Pelican Insurance Company, 127 U.S. 265 (1888)]

25 The U.S. Supreme Court also said that “comity” may not be employed to enlarge the powers of the federal government in 26 relation to the states.

27           Where Congress exceeds its authority relative to the States, therefore, the departure from the constitutional
 28 plan cannot be ratified by the "consent" of state officials. An analogy to the separation of powers among the 29 branches of the Federal Government clarifies this point. The Constitution's division of power among the 30 three branches is violated where one branch invades the territory of another, whether or not the encroached-
 31 upon branch approves the encroachment. In Buckley v. Valeo, 424 U.S. 1, 118-137 (1976), for instance, the 32 Court held that Congress had infringed the President's appointment power, despite the fact that the President
 33 himself had manifested his consent to the statute that caused the infringement by signing it into law. See 34 National League of Cities v. Usery, 426 U.S., at 842, n. 12. In INS v. Chadha, 462 U.S. 919, 944-959 (1983), 35 we held that the legislative veto violated the constitutional requirement that legislation be presented to the
 36 President, despite Presidents' approval of hundreds of statutes containing a legislative veto provision. See id.,
 37 at 944-945. The constitutional authority of Congress cannot be expanded by the “consent” of the governmental
 38 unit whose domain is thereby narrowed, whether that unit is the Executive Branch or the States.

39           State officials thus cannot consent to the enlargement of the powers of Congress beyond those enumerated in
 40 the Constitution. Indeed, the facts of this case raise the possibility that powerful incentives might lead both
 41 federal and state officials to view departures from the federal structure to be in their personal interests. Most
 42 citizens recognize the need for radioactive waste disposal sites, but few want sites near their homes. As a result,
 43 while it would be well within the authority of either federal or state officials to choose where the disposal sites
 44 will be, it is likely to be in the political interest of each individual official to avoid being held accountable to the
 45 voters for the choice of location. If [505 U.S. 144, 183] a federal official is faced with the alternatives of
 46 choosing a location or directing the States to do it, the official may well prefer the latter, as a means of shifting
 47 responsibility for the eventual decision. If a state official is faced with the same set of alternatives - choosing a
 48 location or having Congress direct the choice of a location - the state official may also prefer the latter, as it
 49 may permit the avoidance of personal responsibility. The interests of public officials thus may not coincide with
 50 the Constitution's intergovernmental allocation of authority. Where state officials purport to submit to the 51 direction of Congress in this manner, federalism is hardly being advanced.”
 52 [New York v. United States, 505 U.S. 144 (1992)]

53 A departure from the Constitutional plan for taxation therefore cannot be ratified by the acquiescence or “comity” of a state
 54 without violating the Constitution. Only We the People individually and personally can ratify such a departure. When they
 55 do this, their consent must be fully informed and procured completely absent duress. The only way we can ratify such a
 56 departure as a “state” or nation is therefore to amend the Constitution. We cannot write a “code”, such as the Internal

1 Revenue Code, that circumvents the Constitution, breaks down the separation of powers, and does so through compulsion
2 or enforcement. Consequently, we cannot lawfully:

- 3 1. Write a "private law", command or allow our public servants to deceive the public by portraying it as a "public law",
4 and then empower an independent contractor, which is not an agency of the federal government, such as the IRS, to 5 enforce it against those who do not consent individually to obey it absent duress.
- 6 2. Allow our state government to look the other way and acquiesce to abuses or usurpations by the federal government.

7 Below is how the U.S. Supreme Court describes how "comity" can affect the tax system, from a case where it was talking
8 about Social Security. Notice they don't mention anything about "consent" of the state, or where or how that consent is 9 procured from the state or the individual who might be the subject of the tax. In that sense, they have violated the very
10 purpose of the Constitution, which is to respect and protect the requirement for consent in every human interaction:

11 A nondiscriminatory taxing measure that operates to defray the cost of a federal program by recovering a
12 fair approximation of each beneficiary's share of the cost is surely no more offensive to the constitutional
13 scheme than is either a tax on the income earned by state employees or a tax on a State's sale of bottled
14 water. 18 The National Government's interest in being compensated for its expenditures is only too apparent.
15 More significantly perhaps, such revenue measures by their very nature cannot possess the attributes that led
16 Mr. Chief Justice Marshall to proclaim that the power to tax is the power [435 U.S. 444, 461] to destroy.
17 There is no danger that such measures will not be based on benefits conferred or that they will function as
18 regulatory devices unduly burdening essential state activities. It is, of course, the case that a revenue provision
19 that forces a State to pay its own way when performing an essential function will increase the cost of the state
20 activity. But Graves v. New York ex rel. O'Keefe, and its precursors, see 306 U.S., at 483 and the cases cited in
21 n. 3, teach that an economic burden on traditional state functions without more is not a sufficient basis for
22 sustaining a claim of immunity. Indeed, since the Constitution explicitly requires States to bear similar
23 economic burdens when engaged in essential operations, see U.S. Const., Amdts. 5, 14; Pennsylvania Coal Co.
24 v. Mahon, 260 U.S. 393 (1922) (State must pay just compensation when it "takes" private property for a public
25 purpose); U.S. Const., Art. I, 10, cl. 1; United States Trust Co. v. New Jersey, 431 U.S. 1 (1977) (even when
26 burdensome, a State often must comply with the obligations of its contracts), it cannot be seriously contended
27 that federal exactions from the States of their fair share of the cost of specific benefits they receive from federal
28 programs offend the constitutional scheme.

29 Our decisions in analogous context support this conclusion. We have repeatedly held that the Federal
30 Government may impose appropriate conditions on the use of federal property or privileges and may require
31 that state instrumentalities comply with conditions that are reasonably related to the federal interest in
32 particular national projects or programs. See, e. g., Ivanhoe Irrigation Dist. v. McCracken, 357 U.S. 275, 294 -
33 296 (1958); Oklahoma v. Civil Service Comm'n, 330 U.S. 127, 142 -144 (1947); United States v. San Francisco,
34 310 U.S. 16 (1940); cf. National League of Cities v. Usery, 426 U.S. 833, 853 (1976); Fry v. United States, 421
35 U.S. 542 (1975). A requirement that States, like all other users, pay a portion of the costs of the benefits they
36 enjoy from federal programs is surely permissible since it is closely related to the [435 U.S. 444, 462] federal 37 interest in recovering costs from those who benefit and since it effects no greater interference with state
38 sovereignty than do the restrictions which this Court has approved.

39 A clearly analogous line of decisions is that interpreting provisions in the Constitution that also place
40 limitations on the taxing power of government. See, e. g., U.S. Const., Art. I, 8, cl. 3 (restricting power of States 41 to tax interstate commerce); 10, cl. 3 (prohibiting any state tax that operates "to impose a charge for the
42 privilege of entering, trading in, or lying in a port." Clyde Mallory Lines v. Alabama ex rel. State Docks
43 Comm'n, 296 U.S. 261, 265 -266 (1935)). These restrictions, like the implied state tax immunity, exist to protect
44 constitutionally valued activity from the undue and perhaps destructive interference that could result from
45 certain taxing measures. The restriction implicit in the Commerce Clause is designed to prohibit States from
46 burdening the free flow of commerce, see generally Complete Auto Transit, Inc. v. Brady, 430 U.S. 274 (1977),
47 whereas the prohibition against duties on the privilege of entering ports is intended specifically to guard
48 against local hindrances to trade and commerce by vessels. See Packet Co. v. Keokuk, 95 U.S. 80, 85 (1877).

49 Our decisions implementing these constitutional provisions have consistently recognized that the interests
50 protected by these Clauses are not offended by revenue measures that operate only to compensate a
51 government for benefits supplied. See, e. g., Clyde Mallory Lines v. Alabama, supra (flat fee charged each 52 vessel entering port upheld because charge operated to defray cost of harbor policing); Evansville-
53 Vanderburgh Airport Authority v. Delta Airlines, Inc., 405 U.S. 707 (1972) ($1 head tax on explaining
54 commercial air passengers upheld under the Commerce Clause because designed to recoup cost of airport
55 facilities). A governmental body has an obvious interest in making those who specifically benefit from its 56 services pay the cost and, provided that the charge is structured to compensate the government for the benefit
57 conferred, there can be no danger of the kind of interference [435 U.S. 444, 463] with constitutionally valued
58 activity that the Clauses were designed to prohibit.
59 [Massachusetts v. United States, 435 U.S. 444 (1978)]

1 The U.S. Supreme Court also agreed that one of the may consequences of the Social Security system was to break down the
 2 separation of powers between the states and the federal government and allow the feds to coerce and intimidate the states.
 3 This result alone ought be sufficient reason not to participate in the system:

4 *"A state may enter into contracts; but a state cannot, by contract or statute, surrender the execution, or a share
 5 in the execution, of any of its governmental powers either to a sister state or to the federal government, any
 6 more than the federal government can surrender the control of any of its governmental powers to a foreign
 7 nation. The power to tax is vital and fundamental, and, in the highest degree, governmental in character.
 8 Without it, the state could not exist. Fundamental also, and no less important, is the governmental power to 9 expend the moneys realized from taxation, and exclusively to administer the laws in respect of the character of 10 the tax and the methods of laying and collecting it and expending the proceeds.*

11 *The people of the United States, by their Constitution, have affirmed a division of internal governmental powers
 12 between the federal government and the governments of the several states-committing to the first its powers by 13 express grant and necessary implication; to the latter, or [301 U.S. 548, 611] to the people, by reservation,
 14 'the powers not delegated to the United States by the Constitution, nor prohibited by it to the States.' The 15 Constitution thus affirms the complete supremacy and independence of the state within the field of its powers.
 16 Carter v. Carter Coal Co., 298 U.S. 238, 295, 56 S.Ct. 855, 865. The federal government has no more authority
 17 to invade that field than the state has to invade the exclusive field of national governmental powers; for, in the 18 oft-repeated words of this court in Texas v. White, 7 Wall. 700, 725, 'the preservation of the States, and the 19 maintenance of their governments, are as much within the design and care of the Constitution as the 20 preservation of the Union and the maintenance of the National government.' The necessity of preserving each
 21 from every form of illegitimate intrusion or interference on the part of the other is so imperative as to require
 22 this court, when its judicial power is properly invoked, to view with a careful and discriminating eye any 23 legislation challenged as constituting such an intrusion or interference. See South Carolina v. United States,
 24 199 U.S. 437, 448, 26 S.Ct. 110, 4 Ann.Cas. 737.*

25 [. . .]

26 *By these various provisions of the act, the federal agencies are authorized to supervise and hamper the 27 administrative powers of the state to a degree which not only does not comport with the dignity of a quasi
 28 sovereign state-a matter with which we are not judicially concerned-but which deny to it that supremacy and 29 freedom from external interference in respect of its affairs which the Constitution contemplates-a matter of very 30 definite judicial concern. I refer to some, though by no means all, of the cases in point.*

31 *In the License Cases, 5 How. 504, 588, Mr. Justice McLean said that the federal government was supreme 32 within the scope of its delegated powers, and the state governments equally supreme in the exercise of the 33 powers not delegated nor inhibited to them; that the states exercise their powers over everything connected with 34 their social and internal condition; and that over these subjects the federal government had no power. 'They 35 appertain to the State sovereignty as exclusively as powers exclusively delegated appertain to the general
 36 government.'*

37 *In Tarble's Case, 13 Wall. 397, Mr. Justice Field, after pointing out that the general government and the state
 38 are separate and distinct sovereignties, acting separately and independently of each other within their 39 respective spheres, said that, except in one particular, they stood in the same independent relation to each other
 40 as they would if their authority embraced distinct territories. The one particular referred to is that of the 41 supremacy of the authority of the United States in case of conflict between the two.*

42 *In Farrington v. Tennessee, 95 U.S. 679, 685, this court said, 'Yet every State has a sphere of action where the 43 authority of the national government may not intrude. Within that domain the State is as if the union were not.
 44 Such are the checks and balances in our complicated but wise system of State and national polity.'*

45 *'The powers exclusively given to the federal government,' it was said in Worcester v. State of 46 Georgia, 6 Pet. 515, 570, 'are limitations upon the state authorities. But [301 U.S. 548, 615]
 47 with the exception of these limitations, the states are supreme; and their sovereignty can be
 48 no more invaded by the action of the general government, than the action of the state
 49 governments can arrest or obstruct the course of the national power.'*

50 The force of what has been said is not broken by an acceptance of the view that the state is not coerced by the 51 federal law. The effect of the dual distribution of powers is completely to deny to the states whatever is 52 granted exclusively to the nation, and, conversely, to deny to the nation whatever is reserved exclusively to 53 the states. 'The determination of the Framers Convention and the ratifying conventions to preserve complete
 54 and unimpaired state self-government in all matters not committed to the general government is one of the
 55 plainest facts which emerges from the history of their deliberations. And adherence to that determination is
 56 incumbent equally upon the federal government and the states. State powers can neither be appropriated on
 57 the one hand nor abdicated on the other.' Carter v. Carter Coal Co., supra, 298 U.S. 238, at page 295, 56
 58 S.Ct. 855, 866. The purpose of the Constitution in that regard does not admit of doubt or qualification; and it 59 can be thwarted no more by voluntary surrender from within than by invasion from without.

Nor may the constitutional objection suggested be overcome by the expectation of public benefit resulting from the federal participation authorized by the act. Such expectation, if voiced in support of a proposed constitutional enactment, would be quite proper for the consideration of the legislative body. But, as we said in the Carter Case, supra, 298 U.S. 238, at page 291, 56 S.Ct. 855, 864, 'nothing is more certain than that beneficent aims, however great or well directed, can never serve in lieu of constitutional power.' Moreover, everything which the act seeks to do for the relief of unemployment might have been accomplished, as is done by this same act for the relief of the misfortunes of old age, with- [301 U.S. 548, 616] out obliging the state to surrender, or share with another government, any of its powers.

If we are to survive as the United States, the balance between the powers of the nation and those of the states must be maintained. There is grave danger in permitting it to dip in either direction, danger-if there were no other-in the precedent thereby set for further departures from the equipoise. The threat implicit in the present encroachment upon the administrative functions of the states is that greater encroachments, and encroachments upon other functions, will follow.

[Steward Machine Company v. Davis, 301 U.S. 548 (1937)]

5.4.2.4 Positive Law

There are only two types of governments: government by consent (contract) or government by force/fraud. All governments that operate by force or fraud rather than consent are terrorist governments. The Bible describes all such terrorist governments as "The Beast" in Rev. 19:19. The Declaration of Independence says that all just powers of the United States government derive from the consent of the governed.

"That to secure these rights, governments are instituted among men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed."
[Declaration of Independence]

Absent individual, explicit, and voluntary consent for everything that government does in this country, a law may not be enforced and may not adversely affect our Constitutional rights to life, liberty or property. In a Republic of free and sovereign People who have rights, any government that disregards the requirement for consent is essentially acting unjustly and involving itself in organized crime, extortion, and terrorism. A law which is enforceable because the people either individually or collectively consented explicitly to it is called positive law:

"Positive law. Law actually and specifically enacted or adopted [consented to] by proper authority for the government of an organized jural society. See also Legislation."
[Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1162]

"Proper authority" above is the people's elected representatives, because all power in this country derives from We The People.

"In the United States, sovereignty resides in the people...the Congress cannot invoke sovereign power of the People to override their will as thus declared."
[Perry v. U.S., 294 U.S. 330 (1935)]

"Sovereignty itself is, of course, not subject to law, for it is the author and source of law...While sovereign powers are delegated to...the government, sovereignty itself remains with the people."
[Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U.S. 356 (1886)]

"The words 'people of the United States' and 'citizens,' are synonymous terms, and mean the same thing. They both describe the political body who, according to our republican institutions, form the sovereignty, and who hold the power and conduct the government through their representatives. They are what we familiarly call the 'sovereign people,' and every citizen is one of this people, and a constituent member of this sovereignty. ..."
Boyd v. State of Nebraska, [143 U.S. 135 (1892)]

There is only one exception to the above rule, which is that a person who commits a crime that injures the rights of a fellow sovereign thereby surrenders his own rights because he has broken his covenant with God to "love his neighbor" (see Gal 5:14), which is one of only two great commandments in the Bible (see Matt. 22:39, Bible). Such an exception as this, however, does not at all apply to so-called "crimes" within the Internal Revenue Code, because no one's "rights" are adversely impacted by those who refuse to pay such government "extortion under the color of law". If you choose not to consent to become a "taxpayer", you may cause other "taxpayers" to lose "privileges" (government socialist handouts) by refusing to participate, but other "taxpayers" don't lose any of their constitutional rights if you refuse to subsidize the evil

1 and socialism that is embodied in the Infernal Revenue Code. In fact, the “crimes” listed in 26 U.S.C. §§7201 to 7217 are 2 not even “tax crimes”, because:

- 3 1. Those who are “nontaxpayers” are not subject to it. We’ll cover this further later.
- 4 2. There is no statute which creates a liability and there is no evidence of consent to abide by it. Therefore, it is not law
5 for those who have not consented in some way, who therefore become “nontaxpayers”. See:

Your Rights as a “Nontaxpayer”, Form #08.008

<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

- 6 3. Subtitle A of the Internal Revenue does not describe a “tax” as legally defined by the Supreme Court, because revenues
7 collected are being paid to private people who are not federal “employees” or a “public purpose”. See:

Why Your Government is Either a Thief or You are a “Public Officer” for Income Tax Purposes, Form #05.008

<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

8 When federal courts choose to illegally enforce the criminal provisions of the Internal Revenue Code, which is not positive
9 law, against those in states of the Union who are not in fact and in deed “public officers” engaged in a “trade or business”
10 within the United States government, they are prosecuting people for what is called “malum prohibitum acts”. They are 11 also involved in treason against the Constitution if they acquiesce to or aid in the prosecution of private parties who are not
12 in fact federal “employees”, who live in states of the Union and outside of federal territorial jurisdiction.

13 “Malum prohibitum. A wrong prohibited; a thing which is wrong because prohibited; an act which is not
14 inherently immoral, but becomes so because its commission is expressly forbidden by positive law; an act
15 involving an illegality resulting from positive law. Compare Malum in se. “
16 [Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 960]

17 Treason, by the way, is punishable by death under 18 U.S.C. §2381. See section 5.1.2 earlier for a complete explanation of 18 this concept. They are committing treason because they are not enforcing a “tax” as legally defined. “Taxes” can ONLY 19 go to support public employees on official business and cannot constitutionally be used for any other purpose:

20 “To lay, with one hand, the power of the government on the property of the citizen, and with the other to bestow
21 it upon favored individuals to aid private enterprises and build up private fortunes, is none the less a robbery
22 because it is done under the forms of law and is called taxation. This is not legislation. It is a decree under 23 legislative forms.

24 Nor is it taxation. ‘A tax,’ says Webster’s Dictionary, ‘is a rate or sum of money assessed on the person or
25 property of a citizen by government for the use of the nation or State.’ ‘Taxes are burdens or charges imposed
26 by the Legislature upon persons or property to raise money for public purposes.’ Cooley, Const. Lim., 479.”
27 [Loan Association v. Topeka, 20 Wall. 655 (1874)]

28 The legislation passed by Congress in pursuance of the authority delegated to it by the Constitution of the United States
29 (which is “positive law”) is organized by subject in the 50 titles of the U.S. Code. Each title of the U.S. Code covers a
30 different subject area. For instance, Title 26 covers Internal Revenue: that is, revenue gathered within the territorial 31 jurisdiction of the federal government, which is limited to the territories and possessions of the United States and the 32 District of Columbia, collectively called the “federal zone” throughout this book.

33 Within the U.S. Code, certain titles are enacted into “positive law” while others are not. Those that are not enacted into 34 positive law may safely be regarded as “private law”. Those that are should be regarded as “public law”. The legislative 35 notes under 1 U.S.C. §204 list which Titles are positive law and which are not. Only those titles that are enacted into 36 positive law have the potential to become binding generally upon all legal “persons” within the territorial jurisdiction of the 37 federal government. However, before this can happen, an agency of the federal government within the Executive Branch
38 must choose to step forward under the leadership of the President of the United States and voluntarily consent to take
39 responsibility for executing the statute by writing implementing regulations giving the statutes force and effect, and 40 publishing those enforcement regulations in the Federal Register for public review and comment. Below is a definition of 41 the Federal Register from Black’s Law Dictionary:

42 “Federal Register. The Federal Register, published daily, is the medium for making available to the public
43 Federal agency regulations and other legal documents of the executive branch. These documents cover a wide
44 range of Government activities. An important function of the Federal Register is that it includes proposed
45 changes (rules, regulations, standards, etc.) of governmental agencies. Each proposed change published
46 carries an invitation for any citizen or group to participate in the consideration of the proposed regulation
47 through the submission of written data, views, or arguments, and sometimes by oral presentations. Such 48 regulations and rules as finally approved appear therefore in the Code of Federal Regulations.”

[Black's Law Dictionary, Fifth Edition]

The above description explains that the Federal Register also serves as the means by which notice is given to the general public that laws by Congress can and will be enforced by rules and regulations that may adversely affect their rights. "Due notice" to all of the affected parties is considered an essential and fundamental element of Constitutional "due process". Here is how the U.S. Supreme Court describes it:

"An elementary and fundamental requirement of due process in any proceeding which is to be accorded finality is notice reasonably calculated, under the circumstances, to apprise interested [and affected] parties of the pendency of the action and afford them an opportunity to present their objections."
[Mullane v. Central Hanover Bank & Trust Co., 339 U.S. 306, 314 (1950)]

These regulations are then subsequently published in the Code of Regulations (hereafter C.F.R.) after they are published in the Federal Register. The C.F.R. then becomes the means by which Federal Government employees are informed of the limits of their conduct when implementing the laws they are authorized and required to enforce under the authority of the Constitution. The public record built during the public review process then becomes the means by which the courts enforce the regulations against the public, because it helps establish legislative intent of both the agency and the public.

44 U.S.C. §1505(a) (which is positive law) requires that every document or order which has "general applicability and legal effect" to all persons must be printed in the Federal Register. In other words, if the statute and the regulations that implement it haven't been published in the Federal Register, then the statute is unenforceable against the general public. This means that all positive laws, including both the statutes and the regulations that implement them, must appear in the Federal Register before one can reasonably conclude that the general public has been properly placed on notice about a law according to which they must control their conduct.

Sec. 1505. - Documents to be published in Federal Register

(a) Proclamations and Executive Orders; Documents Having General Applicability and Legal Effect; Documents Required To Be Published by Congress.

There shall be published in the Federal Register -

(1) Presidential proclamations and Executive orders, except those not having general applicability and legal effect or effective only against Federal agencies or persons in their capacity as officers, agents, or employees thereof;

(2) documents or classes of documents that the President may determine from time to time have general applicability and legal effect; and

(3) documents or classes of documents that may be required so to be published by Act of Congress.

For the purposes of this chapter every document or order which prescribes a penalty has general applicability and legal effect.

If a positive law statute was passed by the Legislative branch for which no agency in the Executive Branch ever claimed responsibility and for which no implementing regulations were ever published in the Federal Register, that statute would be a "dead law" that effectively is unenforceable against anything but federal employees. Note that paragraph (a)(1) in the above statute says no implementing regulations are required in the context of federal officers, agents, or employees.

"...the Act's civil and criminal penalties attach only upon violation of the regulation promulgated by the Secretary; if the Secretary were to do nothing, the Act itself would impose no penalties on anyone...The Government urges that since only those who violate these regulations [not the Code] may incur civil or criminal penalties, it is the actual regulations issued by the Secretary of the Treasury, and not the broad authorizing language of the statute, which are to be tested against the standards of the Fourth Amendment: and that when so tested they are valid."

An example of such "dead laws" are the campaign finance reforms passed during the early 2000's by Congress. They are not enforced. Does that surprise you? There is one important exception to these general rules for positive law, and that exception is that any act of Congress that affects only federal employees in the Executive branch acting only in their official capacity need not be published in the Federal Register and need not have implementing regulations in order to be enforceable. This exception is found in 44 U.S.C. §1505(a)(1), which we showed above. This same exception also appears a second time in 5 U.S.C. §553(a)(2):

TITLE 5--GOVERNMENT ORGANIZATION AND EMPLOYEES
PART 1--THE AGENCIES GENERALLY
CHAPTER 5--ADMINISTRATIVE PROCEDURE
SUBCHAPTER II--ADMINISTRATIVE PROCEDURE
Sec. 553. Rule making

(a) This section applies, according to the provisions thereof,
except to the extent that there is involved--
(1) a military or foreign affairs function of the United States; or
(2) a matter relating to agency management or personnel or to public property, loans, grants, benefits, or contracts.

Some say that while the Internal Revenue Code may not be “positive law”, there ARE or at least MAY BE sections within it that ARE positive law. They will look at the legislative notes on a section of the code and find the Congressional Acts that it references and conclude that because the Act that the section was based on was a positive law and because it was passed AFTER the Internal Revenue Code was repealed in 1939, then that section and only that section is “positive law”. That may very well be true. However, the government has the burden of proving in each case, usually as the moving party, that the section they are citing is positive law for each case or instance where they use it. To do otherwise would be to violate due process of law and disrespect the requirement for consent in every aspect of government..

1 U.S.C. §204 describes the applicability of statutes within the U.S. Code based on whether they are “positive law”, which we will now show below. We have broken 1 U.S.C. §204(a) into two clauses, with each one numbered in the cite below. Everything after the “[1]” would be clause 1 and everything after the “[2]” would be clause 2.

1 U.S.C. §204

Sec. 204. - Codes and Supplements as evidence of the laws of United States and District of Columbia; citation of Codes and Supplements

In all courts, tribunals, and public offices of the United States, at home or abroad, of the District of Columbia, and of each State, Territory, or insular possession of the United States -

(a) United States Code. -

[1] The matter set forth in the edition of the Code of Laws of the United States current at any time shall, together with the then current supplement, if any, establish prima facie [by presumption] the laws of the United States, general and permanent in their nature, in force on the day preceding the commencement of the session following the last session the legislation of which is included:

[2] Provided, however, That whenever titles of such Code shall have been enacted into positive law the text thereof shall be legal evidence of the laws therein contained, in all the courts of the United States, the several States, and the Territories and insular possessions of the United States.

The above statute shows three jurisdictions: (1) Clause 1 shows the “United States”, which is defined as the District of Columbia under 4 U.S.C. §72; (2) Clause 2 adds the States of the Union and Territories to the jurisdiction. We have therefore created a table to show each of the three jurisdictions and the applicability of “positive law” and “prima facie law” in each of the three cases based on the foregoing discussion.

Table 5-31: Applicability of laws of United States to various jurisdictions

9	Type of law applying here is	Private law	Public law	Public law

An example of wording that can be used to make law positive is in the Fifth Amendment to the U.S. Constitution. By starting out "No person..." it is clear that no one is excluded. In statutes, a phrase such as "any person is required" is used to indicate that the statute applies to anyone. When Congress omits the word "is" from such a phrase, making it read "any person required" (as in 26 U.S.C. §7203), it is saying that this law only applies to a specific person. This is not a positive law, it is a "special law" or "private law" which became "law" by virtue of the consent of that specific individual. It only applies to the person who exercised his personal choice (sovereignty) to become effectively connected with it by accepting some duty that made him a "person required," i.e. the person in section 7343 of the I.R. Code who is under a duty to perform the act in respect of which the violation occurs.

Acquiescence to the legal consequence of non-positive law legislation is possible only when a person makes himself subject to that legislation, i.e. a Federal Government "employee" or contractor, as to income belonging to the U.S. Government. Once a person is effectively connected with a law, he is required to obey it. If a person is not "effectively connected" with such a law, a violation of that law is not legally possible. For example, it is impossible for a person who is not connected with the U.S. Government's (called a "trade or business") income or within federal jurisdiction to be under a legal obligation or condition to perform some act or duty with regard to such income. When no legal duty exists, the consequences of section 7203 cannot be legally forced upon him.

Lastly, if you are engaged in litigation against "the Beast", be very careful in your use of the word "law". Anyone who refers to any code section within the I.R.C. as "law" during a court trial:

1. Is making a "presumption" that cannot be supported with evidence. All "presumption" is a violation of due process in the legal realm. An unchallenged presumption becomes fact in any legal proceeding. Watch out!

"The principle that there is a presumption of innocence in favor of the accused is the undoubted law, axiomatic and elementary, and its enforcement lies at the foundation of the administration of our criminal law."
[Coffin v. United States, 156 U.S. 432, 453 (1895)]

"It is apparent, this court said in the Bailey Case ( 219 U.S. 239, 31 S.Ct. 145, 151) 'that a constitutional prohibition cannot be transgressed indirectly by the creation of a statutory presumption any more than it can be violated by direct enactment. The power to create presumptions is not a means of escape from constitutional restrictions.'"
[Heiner v. Donnan, 285 U.S. 312 (1932)]

1 Thus the Court held that presumptions, while often valid (and some of which, I think, like the presumption of 2 death based on long unexplained absence, may perhaps be even salutary in effect), must not be allowed to
 3 stand where they abridge or deny a specific constitutional guarantee. It is one thing to rely on a presumption
 4 to justify conditional administration of the estate of a person absent without explanation for seven years, see
 5 Cunnius v. Reading School District, 198 U.S. 458; compare Scott v. McNeal, 154 U.S. 34; it would be quite
 6 another to use the presumption of death from seven years' absence to convict a man of murder. I do not think it
 7 can be denied that use of the statutory presumptions in the case before [380 U.S. 63, 81] us at the very least
 8 seriously impaired Gainey's constitutional right to have a jury weigh the facts of his case without any 9 congressional interference through predetermination of what evidence would be sufficient to prove the facts
 10 necessary to convict in a particular case. [ . . . ]

11 For all the foregoing reasons, I think that these two statutory presumptions by which Congress has tried to 12 relieve the Government of its burden of proving a man guilty and to take away from courts and juries the 13 function and duty of deciding guilt or innocence according to the evidence before them, unconstitutionally
 14 encroach on the functions of courts and deny persons accused of crime rights which our Constitution
 15 guarantees them. The most important and most crucial action the courts take in trying people for crime is to 16 resolve facts. This is a judicial, not a legislative, function. I think that in passing these two sections Congress
 17 stepped over its constitutionally limited bounds and encroached on the constitutional power of courts to try
 18 cases. I would therefore affirm the judgment of the court below and grant Gainey a new trial by judge and jury
 19 with all the protections accorded by the law of the land.
 20 United States v. Gainly, [380 U.S. 63 (1965)]
 21

22 Legislation declaring that proof of one fact of group of facts shall constitute prima facie evidence of an
 23 ultimate fact in issue is valid if there is a rational connection between what is proved and what is to be 24 inferred. A prima facie presumption casts upon the person against whom it is applied the duty of going
 25 forward with his evidence on the particular point to which the presumption relates. A statute creating a
 26 presumption that is arbitrary, or that operates to deny a fair opportunity to repel it, violates the due process
 27 clause of the Fourteenth Amendment. Legislative fiat may not take the place of fact in the judicial
 28 determination of issues involving life, liberty, or property. Manley v. Georgia, 279 U.S. 1, 49 S.Ct. 215, 73
 29 L.Ed. -, and cases cited.
 30 Western and Atlantic Railroad v. Henderson, [279 U.S. 639 (1929)]

32 "[I]t is unconstitutional for a legislature to remove from the jury the assessment of facts that increase the 33 prescribed range of penalties to which a criminal defendant is exposed. It is equally clear that such facts
 34 must be established by proof beyond a reasonable doubt."
 35 McMillan v. Pennsylvania, [477 U.S. 79 (1986)]

- 36 2. Has transformed "prima facie evidence" of law into legally admissible evidence if unchallenged. See 1 U.S.C.
 37 §204, legislative notes, which says that the I.R.C. is "prima facie" evidence, which means "presumed to be true"
 38 unless rebutted.
 39 3. Is implying that you, the litigant, gave your consent in some form to be bound by the legal provision which they
 40 are referring to. This makes you look like a bad American and a criminal if you don't challenge their presumption.
 41 4. When their presumption of the existence of "law" is challenged, the moving party must shoulder the burden of 42 showing what form the consent was given. If they do not meet the burden of proof, then you should object to their 43 use of the word "law" in any and all cases. You should refer to all statements about such "law" as "hearsay" until 44 proven with other than "prima facie evidence".

45 Let us now summarize some important things we have learned about positive law:

- 46 1. Whether a statute is positive law is helpful in establishing WHERE it may lawfully be enforced. Statutes which are not 47 positive law may not be lawfully enforced in states of the Union.
 48 2. Statutes which are not positive law may be enforced only in the District of Columbia.
 49 3. The Internal Revenue Code is not positive law. Therefore, it is "law" for those subject to it within the limits of the 50 general sovereignty of the national government, but may not be lawfully enforced inside states of the Union, except
 51 possibly against "federal employees", who according to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 17(b) are subject to the laws
 52 of the District of Columbia when acting in a representative capacity for the federal corporation called the "United 53 States", and which is defined in 28 U.S.C. §3002(15)(A). That federal corporation is a "U.S. citizen" under 8 U.S.C.
 54 §1401, and so they become "U.S. citizens" when representing the corporation as federal "employees".

55 5.4.2.5 Justice

The whole notion of “justice” implies the requirement of positive law in all dealings with the public. The only way that positive law can be enacted is through the consent of those it is enforced against, which the Declaration of Independence calls “the consent of the governed”. Below is a definition of “justice” from Easton’s Bible Dictionary which clearly proves this:

JUSTICE — is rendering to every one [equally, whether citizen or alien] that which is his due. It has been distinguished from equity in this respect, that while justice means merely the doing [of] what positive law demands, equity means the doing of what is fair and right in every separate case.<sup>39</sup>
[Easton’s Bible Dictionary, 1996]

We would also add to the above definition that:

1. Enforcing anything BUT “positive law”.
2. Enforcing anything unequally against one group or class of persons more than another.
3. Taking more tax as a percentage from one group than another.

... equates with INjustice or the OPPOSITE of justice, in our view. When we look up the definition of “justice” in the legal dictionary, however, lawyers try to hide its relationship to “positive law”. Below is the definition of “justice” from Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition:

Justice, n. Title given to judges, particularly judges of U.S. and state supreme courts, and as well to judges of appellate courts. The U.S. Supreme Court, and most state supreme courts are composed of a chief justice and several associate justices.

Proper administration of laws. In jurisprudence, the constant and perpetual disposition of legal matters or disputes to render every man his due.

Commutative justice concerns obligations as between persons (e.g., in exchange of goods) and requires proportionate equality in dealings of person to person; Distributive justice concerns obligations of the community to the individual, and requires fair disbursement of common advantages and sharing of common burdens; Social justice concerns obligations of individual to community and its end is the common good.

In Feudal law, jurisdiction; judicial cognizance of causes or offenses. High justice was the jurisdiction or right of trying crimes of every kind, even the highest. This was a privilege claimed and exercised by the great lords or barons of the middle ages. Law justice was jurisdiction of petty offenses.

See also Miscarriage of justice; Obstructing justice.
[Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 864]

Apparently, only pastors can be trusted to tell the truth about the meaning of “justice”, because Pharisees/lawyers with Mercedes payments to make aren’t going to undermine their livelihood and make their job moot by telling the truth. Common to both the ecclesiastical and the legal dictionary definitions of “justice” above, however, is the notion of “rendering to every man his due”. The world owes NOTHING to any man. As we said at the beginning of section 4.1 earlier:

“Don’t go around saying the world owes you a living. The world owes you nothing. It was here first.”
[Mark Twain]

The only thing that can be “owed” or “due” to a man is that which he has earned or procured under contract to some other free agent. What is owed to him is considered “property”, and the government’s most fundamental obligation is to protect our right to property. Therefore, the whole notion of “justice” originates from the exercise of our right to contract. All law, in fact, is an extension of our right to contract, as we said in the previous sections, because it is created with our consent, behaves as a contract, and conveys to us certain rights and benefits that courts have a sacred duty to protect. Even the U.S. Supreme Court recognized this fact, when it said:

“Independent of these views, there are many considerations which lead to the conclusion that the power to impair contracts [either the Constitution or the Holy Bible], by direct action to that end, does not exist with the general [federal] government. In the first place, one of the objects of the Constitution, expressed in its preamble, was the establishment of justice, and what that meant in its relations to contracts is not left, as was

justly said by the late Chief Justice, in Hepburn v. Griswold, to inference or conjecture. As he observes, at the time the Constitution was undergoing discussion in the convention, the Congress of the Confederation was engaged in framing the ordinance for the government of the Northwestern Territory, in which certain articles of compact were established between the people of the original States and the people of the Territory, for the purpose, as expressed in the instrument, of extending the fundamental principles of civil and religious liberty, upon which the States, their laws and constitutions, were erected. By that ordinance it was declared, that, in the just preservation of rights and property, 'no law ought ever to be made, or have force in the said Territory, that shall, in any manner, interfere with or affect private contracts or engagements bona fide and without fraud previously formed.' The same provision, adds the Chief Justice, found more condensed expression in the prohibition upon the States [in Article 1, Section 10 of the Constitution] against impairing the obligation of contracts, which has ever been recognized as an efficient safeguard against injustice; and though the prohibition is not applied in terms to the government of the United States, he expressed the opinion, speaking for himself and the majority of the court at the time, that it was clear 'that those who framed and those who adopted the Constitution intended that the spirit of this prohibition should pervade the entire body of legislation, and that the justice which the Constitution was ordained to establish was not thought by them to be compatible with legislation [or judicial precedent] of an opposite tendency.' 8 Wall. 623. [99 U.S. 700, 765] Similar views are found expressed in the opinions of other judges of this court." [Sinking Fund Cases, 99 U.S. 700 (1878)]

The reason the U.S. Supreme Court had to state the above is that if it did not, it would be sanctioning public servants to violate the right to contract of We the People, by disrespecting the Constitution itself, which is a contract. The Supreme Court also recognized that state Constitutions are "contracts" as well, when it said:

"A state can no more impair the obligation of a contract by her organic law [constitution] than by legislative enactment; for her constitution is a law within the meaning of the contract clause of the national constitution. Railroad Co. v. [115 U.S. 650, 673] McClure, 10 Wall. 511; Ohio Life Ins. & T. Co. v. Debolt, 16 How. 429; Sedg. St. & Const. Law, 637 And the obligation of her contracts is as fully protected by that instrument against impairment by legislation as are contracts between individuals exclusively. State v. Wilson, 7 Cranch, 164; Providence Bank v. Billings, 4 Pet. 514; Green v. Biddle, 8 Wheat. 1; Woodruff v. Trapnall, 10 How. 190; Wolff v. New Orleans, 103 U.S. 358." [New Orleans Gas Company v. Louisiana Light Company, 115 U.S. 650 (1885)]

You can also electronically search, as we have, the entire 50+ volume legal encyclopedia called American Jurisprudence 2d for a definition of "justice" and you will not find one. Think about just how absurd this is: The entire purpose of law, government, and the legal profession is justice, as revealed by the founding fathers in Federalist Paper #51:

"Justice is the end of government. It is the end of civil society. It ever has been, and ever will be pursued, until it be obtained, or until liberty be lost in the pursuit." [James Madison, The Federalist No. 51 (1788)]

. . . and yet the largest legal reference and encyclopedia on law in the country, American Jurisprudence 2d, doesn't even define exactly what "justice" is as revealed here! The foundation of justice is enforcing ONLY positive law. The foundation of positive law is consent. Therefore, to ignore the requirement for positive law is to ignore the requirement for "consent of the governed", which is the very foundation of our system of government starting with the Declaration of Independence and going down from there. Here, in fact, is how the U.S. Supreme Court describes the relationship of the Declaration of Independence to our system of jurisprudence:

"No language is more worthy of frequent and thoughtful consideration than these words of Mr. Justice Matthews, speaking for this court, in Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U.S. 356, 369, 6 S. Sup. Ct. 1064, 1071: 'When we consider the nature and the theory of our institutions of government, the principles upon which they are supposed to rest, and review the history of their development, we are constrained to conclude that they do not mean to leave room for the play and action of purely personal and arbitrary power.' The first official action of this nation declared the foundation of government in these words: 'We hold these truths to be self-evident, [165 U.S. 150, 160] that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable rights, that among these are life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness.' While such declaration of principles may not have the force of organic law, or be made the basis of judicial decision as to the limits of right and duty, and while in all cases referenced must be had to the organic law of the nation for such limits, yet the latter is but the body and the letter of which the former is the thought and the spirit, and it is always safe to read the letter of the constitution in the spirit of the Declaration of Independence. No duty rests more imperatively upon the courts than the enforcement of those constitutional provisions intended to secure that equality of rights which is the foundation of free government." [Gulf, C. & S.F.R. Co. v. Ellis, 165 U.S. 150 (1897)]

Ignoring the requirement for positive law in all interactions of the government with its citizens and subjects is therefore INjustice, not justice. Now do you understand Jesus' condemnation of the Pharisees/Lawyers, when he said:

1 "Woe to you, scribes and Pharisees [lawyers], hypocrites! For you pay tithes of mint and anise and cummin,
 2 *and have neglected the weightier matters of the [God's] law: justice and
 3 mercy and faith. These you ought to have done [FIRST], without leaving the others undone."
 4 [Matthew 23:23, Bible, NKJV]

5 This is very telling indeed. If lawyers and judges had to admit what REAL justice was and that it consisted of enforcing
 6 ONLY "positive law" enacted with the full authority of "consent of the governed", then they would have to admit that most 7 of what our present day government does amounts to INjustice, because they are implementing that which is not
 8 specifically authorized by any public law, and which therefore only applies to those who individually consent to it. To give 9 you just a few examples of private law that is wrongfully enforced as though it were positive public law, consider the 10 following important private laws:

- 11 1. Title 42, which contains the Social Security, FICA, and Medicare codes, is not positive law. Therefore, these are 12 strictly voluntary programs that no one can be compelled to participate in, and certainly not those domiciled in a
 13 state of the Union. The U.S. Supreme Court confirmed this, when it called Social Security "not coercive", which 14 means unenforceable unless individual consent is provided:

15 "There remain for consideration the contentions that the state act is invalid because its enactment was coerced
 16 by the adoption of the Social Security Act, and that it involves an unconstitutional surrender of state power.
 17 Even though it be assumed that the exercise of a sovereign power by a state, in other respects valid, may be
 18 rendered invalid because of the coercive effect of a federal statute enacted in the exercise of a power granted
 19 to the national government, such coercion is lacking here. [301 U.S. 495, 526] It is unnecessary to repeat
 20 now those considerations which have led to our decision in the Chas. C. Steward Machine Co. Case, that the 21 Social Security Act has no such coercive effect. As the Social Security Act is not coercive in its operation, the 22 Unemployment Compensation Act cannot be set aside as an unconstitutional product of coercion. The United* 23 States and the State of Alabama are not alien governments. They coexist within the same territory.
 24 Unemployment within it is their common concern. Together the two statutes now before us embody a 25 cooperative legislative effort by state and national governments for carrying out a public purpose common to 26 both, which neither could fully achieve without the cooperation of the other. The Constitution does not prohibit 27 such cooperation."
 28 [Carmichael v. Southern Coal and Coke Co., 301 U.S. 495 (1937)]

- 29 2. Title 50, which contains the Military Selective Service Act and describes how men may be "drafted", is not 30 positive law. Therefore, participation is voluntary for people in states of the Union. The only persons it can 31 pertain to are statutory "U.S. citizens" domiciled in the federal zone. See:

Why You Aren't Subject to the Draft of Selective Service Program

<http://famguardian.org/Subjects/Military/Draft/NotSubjectToDraft.htm>

- 32 3. Title 26, which is the Internal Revenue Code, is not positive law. Neither has there ever been any attempt by any 33 court that we are aware of to decide which of its provisions are indeed positive law. Therefore, its provisions must 34 be voluntary for everyone, and especially for those domiciled in states of the Union.

35 Instead, our public "servants" have turned our government into a money-making corporation (see 28 U.S.C. §3002(15)(A))
 36 intent on maximizing "corporate profit" by plundering the most that it can from people it is supposed to instead be
 37 protecting, rather than plundering. They have become PREDATORS, not PROTECTORS.

38 Lastly, there are only two ways that courts can lawfully ignore the requirement for "consent of the governed". Those two 39 ways are:

- 40 1. To fool you into signing away your rights via a contract or to involve yourself in some act that creates a presumption
 41 that you waived your rights. Most often, this method relies on some government benefit program such as Social 42 Security to make you a federal "employee". Participating in such benefit programs makes participation in federal 43 taxation "quasi-contractual", as the Supreme Court calls it. See Milwaukee v. White, 296 U.S. 268 (1935)
 44 2. To kidnap your legal identity and "domicile" and to physically place it in a location where consent of the governed is 45 not legally required. That place is the "federal zone", as revealed throughout this book. See, for instance, 26 U.S.C.
 46 §7408(d) or 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(39), and 26 C.F.R. §301.6109-1(g) for examples of how this type of devious fraud is 47 effected against those domiciled in states of the Union and outside of exclusive/general federal jurisdiction.

48 As you will learn throughout the remainder of this chapter, both of the above devious and dishonest tactics are used to
 49 assault and undermine the sovereignty of the people both in the Internal Revenue Code and daily in the federal courts.

1 Whichever of the above two devious tricks they pull on you, we wish to remind the readers of the following fact, that most
2 people overlook when litigating to defend their rights:

3 "In all legal actions bearing upon legal rights, the moving party asserting the right, which is the government in
4 most cases, has the burden of proving with a preponderance of evidence that the defendant gave his consent in
5 some form, or that you maintained a legal domicile in a place where consent was not required. Absent such
6 proof, there is no way to enforce a government regulation or statute that is not positive law against the
7 defendant. Strictly satisfying this requirement in all legal proceedings is the very essence and definition of 'due
8 process' as we understand it."

10 5.4.2.6 Invisible consent: The weapon of tyrants

11 We established in the last few sections that only consent in some form can produce a "law" within a Republican
12 government populated by Sovereigns. Where people are Sovereign, the only way you can lose rights is to give them away
13 by exercising your right to contract. The type of consent provided determines the type of "law" that is produced by the act
14 of consenting. Collective consent produces "public law". Individual consent produces "private law" or "special law". In 15 section 5.4.2.1, we also showed that within the realm of private law, the consent that produces the individual contractual 16 obligation can be manifested or implied in several ways:

- 17 1. By a signed instrument that identifies itself as a contract or agreement. For instance, the W-4 is identified in Treasury
18 Regulations 26 C.F.R. §31.3401\(a\)-3\(a\) as an "agreement", which means a private contract between you and uncle
19 Sam to procure "social insurance". The only people who are allowed to procure social insurance under the Internal 20 Revenue Code are "employees", so when you procure such insurance, you have to consent to be treated as a federal 21 "employee". Note, for instance, that 26 U.S.C. Subtitle C, Chapter 21, Subchapter A, which is the FICA program, is 22 entitled "Tax on Employees", which means you are a federal "employee" if you participate in the program. 5 U.S.C.
23 §552a(a)(13), which is the Privacy Act, also identifies you as "federal personnel". You become the equivalent of an 24 uncompensated federal "employee" until you begin collecting retirement benefits.
- 25 2. By certain behavior which implicates a person as being associated with the contract. For instance:
26 2.1. The only people with a legal obligation to file tax returns are those "subject to" and "liable for" something under 27 the Internal Revenue Code. If you are a "nontaxpayer" and you file one of these, you implicitly imply yourself to 28 be a "taxpayer".
29 2.2. The only people who litigate in family court are those who volunteered to be subject to the Family Code. The 30 only people subject to the Family Code in most states are those who obtained a state marriage license. Many 31 states that issue marriage licenses do not recognize common law marriage. This means you can only become 32 subject to the Family Code and government control of your family by volunteering.
- 33 3. By applying for a license to engage in a privileged, regulated, or taxable activity. For instance:
34 3.1. Applying for a business license implies intent to be subject to business taxation, because a Taxpayer
35 Identification Number is asked for on the application and the application implies that failure to provide the 36 number will result in the application not being granted.
37 3.2. Applying for driver's license implies that you are engaged in revenue-taxable commercial activities upon the 38 public roadways and that you agree to pay taxes upon such activity. That is why you must supply a Socialist 39 Security Number when you apply for a Driver's License: so they can enforce the payment of taxes upon your 40 commercial activities.

41 Of the above three methods of manifesting consent, the last two are not recognized as a voluntary process by the average
42 American, but in fact they are. A government run by covetous tyrants will do everything that it can to make the process of 43 consenting to something invisible or to make the activity look involuntary or unavoidable. Therefore, they will usually 44 elect the last two of the above three methods to in effect force or compel people to become privileged, regulated, and
45 taxable. In most cases, this process of compelled consent is illegal, but few Americans realize why it is illegal and 46 therefore do not prosecute the abuse. Tyrannical governments make the process of procuring consent invisible by:

- 47 1. Not mentioning anything about "agreement" or "contract" on the form, but only in the regulations that usually only the 48 agency will read. This is the case of the IRS Form W-4. How many of you knew that the IRS Form W-4 was indeed a 49 binding legal contract?
- 50 2. Destroying or interfering with all other alternatives to what the government is offering so that you must accept the 51 government's offer. For instance

- 1 2.1. Those who do not wish to get a state-issued marriage license may lawfully draft their own private contract and 2 record it at the county recorder. The government's method for interfering with this process is to refuse to record
 3 anything at the recorder's office other than government-issued applications. In many cases, they will not allow 4 parties to record private contracts, because it undermines their monopoly.
- 5 2.2. Those who do not wish to obtain a Taxpayer Identification Number are often refused in opening bank accounts as 6 a matter of bank policy rather than as a requirement of law. This forces private individuals into becoming 7 taxpayers subject to IRS supervision just in order to conduct their financial affairs.
- 8 2.3. Those who do not wish to pay property tax may elect to quitclaim their property to an unnamed third party and 9 file the quitclaim with the country recorder. At that point, the government cannot enforce the payment of 10 property taxes because it does not know who the property owner is. Some county governments interfere with this
 11 tactic by refusing to record such documents, even though this is perfectly legal and an extension of our protected
 12 right to contract. We have a right to keep our private contracts secret from the government if we wish, and to not 13 have the government account for or track who owns our property if we choose.
- 14 3. Making false presumptions about the status of a person based on their behavior. For instance:
- 15 3.1. If you send in a tax return, then the IRS will "assume" that you must be a "taxpayer" who has income exceeding 16 the exemption amount. Therefore, the penalty provisions of the I.R.C. apply to you. In fact, this is not true if the 17 amount of gross income on the return is zero. You can't be a taxpayer without taxable income. Without taxable
 18 income, regardless of whether you sent in a return or not, you can't be subject to any other provision of the I.R.C.
- 19 3.2. When the IRS sends you a collection notice and you don't respond, then they will assume that you agree and 20 basically "Default" you. In most cases, you don't, but they in effect assume that you therefore "consent" to 21 whatever determination they might make about you that results from your failure to respond.
- 22 3.3. If your employer sent the IRS a form W-2, then the I.R.S. will assume that you completed a W-4 and are subject
 23 to the I.R.C. contract. This is simply not true, and in fact, we show later in this chapter that those who never 24 signed a W-4 should never have W-2's filed on them and if they do have any such forms, the amount of "wages"
 25 must be zero.
- 26 3.4. If you apply for a Social Security Number, then you must maintain a "domicile" in the federal zone. This also is 27 untrue, because the SSA Form SS-5 and the SSA Program Operations Manual does not tell the whole truth about
 28 what a "U.S. citizen" is, and the fact that Americans born in the states of the Union on nonfederal land are NOT 29 statutory "U.S. citizens" as defined under 8 U.S.C. §1401.
- 30 3.5. If you receive an IRS Form 1099, then you must be engaged in a privileged activity called a "trade or business".
 31 This also is untrue, as we explain later in section 5.6.12 and following.
- 32 3.6. If you send in an IRS Form 1040, then the IRS will assume that you have a domicile in the District of Columbia, 33 even though you actually live elsewhere. According to IRS Publication 7130, the 1040 form may only be used by 34 either citizens (U.S. citizens under 8 U.S.C. §1401) or residents (aliens), both of whom have a domicile in the 35 "United States", which is defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10) as the District of Columbia.
- 36 4. Inviting you to attend a court hearing at "federal church", also called "district court:
- 37 4.1. The judge will use non-positive law assume that you are a "taxpayer" unless you prove you are not. See 26
 38 U.S.C. §7491. This is a prejudice to your constitutional rights and according to the Supreme Court, is a violation 39 of due process. See:
 40 <http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/CitesByTopic/Presumption-RPG-Federal.pdf>
- 41 4.2. If you show up and do not do any of the following, the judge will usually falsely assume that you are subject to 42 exclusive and general federal jurisdiction.
- 43 4.2.1. Appear by special rather than general appearance. A general appearance subjects you to the general rather 44 than special jurisdiction of the court.
- 45 4.2.2. Do not challenge jurisdiction in your response. Jurisdiction is "assumed" if you do not challenge it.
- 46 4.2.3. Do not claim diversity jurisdiction under Article III Section 2 of the Constitution and NOT 28 U.S.C. §1332.
 47 Consequently, they will assume you are a domiciliary of the federal zone and that you are subject to the 48 exclusive jurisdiction of the federal government.
- 49 4.3. The judge will falsely assume that you are subject to whatever code or title you quote in your pleading. You can't 50 cite a code or statute that you aren't subject to.
- 51 4.4. The judge will falsely assume that you agree with everything you didn't explicitly disagree with in your response
 52 to the government's Complaint. This creates a tremendous burden of effort to deflect false government charges if 53 the government's pleading is long.

54 Consequently, we must be very aware of the use of the above tactics in procuring or establishing evidence of our consent.
 55 We can give consent without even realizing it, if we are ignorant of the law and of legal process and especially the false
 56 presumptions which it employs. The key to preserving our God-given rights is to understand how these tactics of procuring

1 "invisible consent" by false presumption operate and to openly and forcefully challenge their exercise on every occasion
2 that they are employed.

3 If you want to learn more about how corrupted public dis-servants eliminate or avoid the need or requirement for consent,
4 you can go back and read sections 4.3.16 through 4.3.16.9 earlier in this book.

5 5.4.3 Understanding Administrative Law<sup>40</sup>

6 What you are about to read is very provocative and likely to shock, but educate, many of you. Some of you will likely be
7 inspired to do likewise, but just as you see those disclaimers which say, "Experts - do not try this at home," so I say, "Do
8 not try mimicking this at home. Remember, when reality and common sense run up against politics and money, the former 9 two will not register in the courts."

10 We have all heard the term "Administrative Law." Administrative Law is everywhere in society, and affects everyone of us.
11 But despite our familiarity, how many people really know what "Administrative Law" is? Most people see the word "Law"
12 and automatically think it is some kind of a special law passed by either Congress, our state legislators, or our city councils,
13 etc. No matter where we are in our experience and knowledge of Administrative Law, we all tend to feel deep down inside,
14 "I just do not like it." It is that same sort of feeling when we drive down the highway and pass a police car with its lights
15 flashing, having pulled over a car. You don't naturally think, "Boy, I'm pleased to see that police officer out here on the 16 highway performing us a public service." Rather, you are more likely to think, "Boy, I'm glad it's him he pulled over, and 17 not me." Just as hearing from the Internal Revenue Service, "public service" is probably the last thing that enters your mind.

18 Administrative Law demands things of us that intrude into our personal lives, our homes, our businesses. It makes us
19 comply with certain codes, inspects us, demands arbitrary taxes and payment in advance of establishing liability, calls us
20 into account before boards composed of political appointees having conflicts of interests, all without the benefit of a trial by 21 jury of your peers.

22 Administrative Law governs us, to name only a few, in our relation to our children through CPS, our right to contract
23 through the State Contractor's License Board, our businesses through Business Licenses and Worker's Compensation
24 Boards which provide a feeding frenzy for lawyers, and even our pleasurable moments through Fishing and Gaming
25 Licenses, our travel through DMV, etc, etc, and so on without end. In fact, all of our lives in every area is governed by 26 administrative agencies and their "laws," and there is near nothing that is not regulated and licensed by some agency. It
27 would almost seem that life's existence itself is but a special privilege of government that is revocable upon whim.
28 Whatever happened to "... governments are instituted among men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the 29 governed...?"

30 As some of you may already know, none of the protections set forth in the U.S. Constitution has any application
31 whatsoever upon the enforcement and carrying out of "Administrative Law." So we shout with outrage at the government,
32 "You're violating my Constitutional rights," and you ask, "What gives? Is Administrative Law superior to, and above, the 33 Constitution of the United States, which is the supreme Law of this Land?"

34 I am now going to pull the veil off the mystery of "Administrative Law," and let you in on a secret that no government
35 wants you to know. Some of you are going to laugh at the simplicity of the matter, once I tell you. "Administrative Law" is 36 not some esoteric law passed by some legislative body. "Administrative Law" simply means "Contract Agreement." But if 37 government called it what it really was, everyone would know what is going on. But by the government calling it
38 "Administrative Law," few understand it, and think, "Oh my goodness, I don't want to go to jail because I violated
39 Administrative Law." What you must implicitly remember is that Administrative Law and Police Powers are diametrically
40 opposed to each other. They cannot co-exist in the same context. Like oil and water, they can never mix. But governments
41 do not want you to know that. If there were any form of police power exerted to enforce "Administrative Law," it would 42 clearly fly in the face of the Constitution. So all governments exercise fraud when they take "Administrative Law" beyond
43 "the consent of the governed," Declaration of Independence.

44 Every time you hear the term "Administrative Law," you must correctly think "Contract Agreement." If everyone thought
45 that way, people would automatically ask themselves the logical question: "Where's the contract?". But government does
46 not want you to think in terms of "Contracts," nor the fact that there can ever be police powers involved in the enforcement

1 of a contract. If you fail to show up for work, can your boss call up the police and send them out to arrest you? No! This is
 2 true even if your boss happens to be the city, or the chief of police. Police powers are limited only to criminal acts, never
 3 contract disputes. These are totally separate and exclusive jurisdictions.

4 The U.S. Constitution specifically forbids all fifty states of this country from passing any law that interferes with any 5 individual's right of contract, or, if the person so chooses, the right not to contract.

6 *"No state shall...make any...law impairing the obligation of contracts."
 7 [Constitution Article I, Sec. 10, Clause 1]*

8 The right to contract necessarily establishes the right not to contract. Just like the First Amendment to Congress:

9 *"Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof;"
 10 [Constitution, First Amendment]*

11 so also in Article I, Sec. 10, it says that no state shall make any law that impairs the free exercise of the right to contract or 12 not to contract. Now how does this Constitutional prohibition to states apply to such state administrative agencies as the 13 "State Contractor's License Board?" Ah, yes, and note, we are not here even challenging this as an Administrative Law, but
 14 rather the very authority of the State itself to even "make" such an administrative agency that presumes to govern the right
 15 to contract. In other words, the Legislature was acting unconstitutionally when they even considered "making" such a law,
 16 whether the law passed by a majority vote or not. In other words, it was null and void the very moment it was "passed."
 17 One could just imagine the untold hundreds of billions of dollars that would invigorate the entire economy of this country if 18 states could not interfere with, or tax our constitutional right to contract, or not to contract, with whosoever we pleased.

19 Contracts are very much a necessary part of all of our lives, and we all understand the meaning of agreements and keeping 20 our word. Contracts always must contain a consideration, and are made voluntarily for the mutual benefit of each of the 21 parties entering them.

22 I am going to explain the legitimate uses of contracts, and then proceed to what they have been transmuted into by the 23 State. In a legitimate contract, for instance, and I speak to those married, remember the days when you went out on dates
 24 with that special person that made your heart throb? You fell in love and the two of you decided, for the mutual benefit of 25 both of you, to get married. You voluntarily appeared before a minister who asked you the question, "Do you, Sharon, take 26 Steven to be your lawfully wedded husband?" In which you replied, "I do!" You were under no obligation to agree.
 27 Remember, wherever one may say "Yes" or "I do" they equally have the right to say, "No," or "I don't," to wit, "Do you,
 28 Steven, take Sharon to be your lawfully wedded wife?" which could equally be responded to by, "No, I do not!" Of course,
 29 what a way to shock everyone and ruin a marriage ceremony. Without both parties agreeing equally to the full terms and 30 conditions, there can be no "Administrative Law," oops, I mean, "Contract Agreement."

31 (For the benefit of those of you reading this who are ministers, I would like to take a sidebar. What are those commonly 32 heard words that come from your lips, "...lawfully wedded wife?" I ask you, is there an "unlawfully wedded wife," or an 33 "unlawfully wedded husband?" How did those words get in the marriage vow? Why not just ask, "Do you, Steven, take 34 Sharon to be your wife?" Ah, it is the State trying to stick their foot in the door and become a third party to the marriage
 35 "Contract Agreement." I ask you, is it a crime to get married? Must couples have government's permission to get married?
 36 The government thinks so. But does the government have constitutional authority to do so? Absolutely not.

37 Consider the marriage license. A license is a special grant of permission from the government to do that which is otherwise
 38 illegal. People are now being convicted of "practicing law without a license," so I ask you, are couples who refuse marriage
 39 licenses guilty of practicing marriage without a license? We are instructed in the Bible, "Whoso findeth a wife findeth a 40 good thing, and obtaineth favour of the LORD." Prov. 18:22. Yes, and remember that famous quote, "Render therefore unto 41 Caesar the things which are Caesar's; and unto God the things that are God's, Matt. 22:21, and "What therefore God hath 42 joined together, let not man put asunder." Matt. 19:6. Would it not be just as appropriate if God were to say, "What 43 therefore God has 'licensed,' let not man license?" Of course! Are you not therefore rendering to Caesar that which is 44 God's? And are you not doing it "By the power vested in you by the State of [fill in state], I now pronounce you man and 45 wife." And what about this so-called doctrine beaten into our heads by the courts of "Separation of Church and State?" End 46 of sidebar.)

47 Let's next turn to the "Contract Agreement" of Civil Service Employment. You open the newspaper and see an ad placed by 48 the City of Ten Buck Two, saying "Now hiring." You go and apply for the job and you are hired. Whether it be secretary,

1 street cleaner, or police officer, you enter a Civil Service Contract, and receive a mutual benefit, i.e, a paycheck. If you
2 were to receive no consideration from the city, you would be merely a slave. Neither the city nor you were under duress,
3 you both receive a consideration, and established a legitimate "Contract Agreement." The city wishes to call it
4 "Administrative Law." After being hired, if there arises a dispute, you cannot shout, "My Constitutional Rights were 5 violated," for you are now under Civil Service protection, and are not entitled to a jury trial nor any of the protections of the 6 Constitution, for now it is Administrative Law that controls, and the Constitution has no application whatsoever.

7 Now let's take this a step further, and talk about a ticket. I once was mailed a ticket through the mail offering me an 8 "Administrative Review." I wrote back to this administrative agency by certified mail with return receipt, and with a sworn 9 declaration attached stating that I had never entered into a "Contract Agreement" with them, and that such contract did not
10 exist. I further demanded that they respond with a counter-declaration stating that I had indeed entered into a "Contract
11 Agreement" with them, and thus bring the question into issue. (An uncontested declaration stands as the truth. No counter-
12 declaration, no dispute.) I also demanded that they attach of copy of the contract we had between us as evidence to support
13 their contention.

14 This administrative agency just did not know what to do, so they just declared my "request for an Administrative Review"
15 untimely, despite the certified mail proving otherwise. They then stated that I now owed them more than twice the amount
16 they originally demanded of me. However, as you note, I did not ask for an "Administrative Review." Rather my only issue
17 was the appropriateness and legitimacy of the agency "offering" me the administrative review. If you received a letter from 18 Moscow, Russia accusing you of failing to possess a license from the Moscow Aviation Flight Board, and offering you an 19 administrative review, would you ask for an administrative review?

20 Further, in my communication to this administrative body, which further baffled them, I asked:

21 "When you say you are offering me an 'Administrative Review,' it implies I am now on appeal. Was there a trial
22 in which I have already been found guilty, and that I now should appeal that decision? I never received a notice
23 of such trial. When was the trial? Who sat in judgment? What was the basis of his or her findings? What is the 24 particular clause in the "Contract Agreement" I have been found guilty of violating?"

25 You see, my questions were entirely logical and practical, but they just did not know how to deal with me. So they just 26 forged ahead with enforcement as if I said nothing. This resulted in my lawsuit against them which went all the way to the 27 U.S. Supreme Court twice, once through the state courts, and then all the way through the federal, the issue in federal court
28 being deprivation of due process of law. There was not one court, neither state, nor federal, that would address a single 29 issue I presented in my lawsuit. This suit resulted in five long years of litigation, and the agency admittedly spent over 30 $100,000.00 defending itself, and demanded of me that I should pay them for their time from what started out to be $55.

31 This case resulted in my filing a criminal complaint against the defendants with the U.S. Attorney, and petitioning Congress
32 to open impeachment proceedings against five federal judges for conspiracy to commit extortion, accompanied with a copy
33 of the proposed Federal J.A.I.L. Bill, with my instant case as an example of why Congress should pass J.A.I.L. into law.
34 Everything grew very quiet. No one would say anything.

35 All this over the implied assumption that I had entered into a "Contract Agreement" that did not exist, and never did exist.

36 Here in Los Angeles, the city dispenses bureaucrats throughout the city to search your home. However, the city likes to 37 refer to it as "inspection." Although the U.S. Constitution provides:

38 "The right of the people to be secure in their persons, houses, papers and effects, against unreasonable
39 searches and seizure shall not be violated, and no warrants shall issue, but upon probable cause, supported by 40 oath or affirmation, and particularly describing the place to be searched, and the persons or things to be 41 seized"
42 [Fourth Amendment]

43 these bureaucrats come to you "for your good," as a "public service." They charge you money for their services, and 44 exercise police power, having neither oath or affirmation, warrant, or probable cause, mandating you "volunteer" to accept
45 their searches. If you refuse to volunteer, they turn you over to the city prosecutor who will prosecute you for failure to 46 comply with the program. If you think these bureaucrats are bribe-free, you have a shock coming. Many hint at and suggest 47 that they can arrange special treatment for you, or that they can make things very bad for you.

1 We have now come to the point in this country where the public's common acceptance that we are administrative subjects,
2 that a mere suggestion by a government bureaucrat has now become law, and one is guilty by the simple allegation of
3 whatever charge these bureaucrats wish to lay upon them without appeal to the Constitution.

4 Approximately seven years ago I was stopped by a police officer. He "offered" to engage me into a contract with him. The
5 problem with his contract offer was that it was imposed upon me by the threat of my going immediately to jail, and that of
6 having my car stolen. Under criminal constitutional standards he was required to take me before a magistrate at least within
7 48 hours of his conducting my arrest. He did not wish to do that however, so for his convenience, not mine, he asked me to
8 enter into a contract with him. But what was my consideration in this contract? Was it that I didn't have to go to jail
9 immediately? Nay, for that is like placing a gun to one's head and asking them to voluntarily write a check, which is called 10 "Robbery" in the criminal codes.

11 This nice policeman told me that by signing his ticket, I was not waiving any of my rights. I read it, and all it said was that 12 I promised to appear before the clerk of the court authorized to receive bail by a certain date. I went ahead and took the 13 comfortable route, and signed his contract under duress, "agreeing" to appear before the court clerk as opposed to going to
14 jail. I then went to the clerk of the court by the date specified and asked if she was the clerk of the court authorized to 15 accept bail. She said "Yes." I then told her who I was, and that since she was the authorized person before whom I had 16 promised to appear, I needed her signature showing I had fulfilled my promise. She refused. Gee, what's wrong with these 17 people? They demand my signature to show up before them under threat of going to jail. I show up as they ask and request
18 their signature to show that I have complied, and they refuse. They do not respect you for keeping your promise to them. It
19 seems they are not satisfied, and they want something more from you than they made you promise. Hmmm, it seems to me
20 that not all the terms of the contract were revealed when the officer said all I had to do was appear in front of the clerk. I
21 must have been defrauded.

22 What they really wanted, and now demanded, was that I appear before a commissioner, not a judge, when originally I was
23 entitled under the Constitution to appear before a magistrate for a determination of probable cause of my arrest by the kind
24 police officer. The officer must have lied to me when I was clearly told that I would not be waiving any of my rights. But 25 a waiver of my rights under the Constitution requires my voluntary and knowledgeable consent with a consideration in the 26 pie for me. But I never got the pie. This "Contract Agreement" does not seem to be like saying "I do" at the altar and 27 getting a wife, or "I agree" at the Civil Service interview, and getting a paycheck.

28 This commissioner bullied me, trying to induce me by force to enter into his offered contract agreement, when in no way
29 was he qualified to act or perform pursuant to the Fourth Amendment requirements of a magistrate.

30 When he failed to convince me that it was in my best interest that I should voluntarily agree to his contract, he proceeded to 31 unilaterally enter me into his contract whether I agreed to it or not. And of course, it was done with "my best interest at 32 heart." He's an educated man, and has graduated from law school. So why didn't he know that a contract requires my 33 voluntary consent? Having waived my rights for me (which is an impossibility), he now tells me that I am going to appear
34 for trial on the date he chose for me, and that I am going to sign a promise to appear. I told him, "NO! I am not going to 35 sign such a contract agreement!" He became very wroth, and I was immediately arrested, chained to thieves, con artists, and 36 extortionists and thrown into jail for not agreeing to sign.

37 At least one of the sheriff's deputies handling me expressed disbelief at what she was hearing that I was arrested for not 38 agreeing to sign on to the commissioner's offer. Here they were digging through my pockets and relieving me of all my 39 possessions, and my crime is failing to accept an offer. This could only be a civil charge at best, but refusing to contract is 40 not a violation of a contract. I had not even agreed to the deprivation of a magistrate to appear before this commissioner.

41 No sooner had they illegally processed me into the Los Angeles County jail system, that they wanted to get rid of me.
42 Under California statute, no person can be jailed on an alleged infraction, but here I was in jail. The fact is, neither the 43 courts nor the administrative boards know how to deal with the rare individual who sensibly raises questions about the 44 existence of a contract, so they just bully forward with police power enforcement, and address nothing.

45 The deputies told me they were putting me out of jail, but that I must come back to court on the date specified by the 46 commissioner. I told them "No! I did not agree to appear." They told me that if I did not appear, I would be arrested. I
47 said that I was already under arrest, so just keep me in jail until you are finished with me. They said, we can't do that, we
48 don't have the money to keep you here. I said, "I'm not here to save you money. If you want me, just keep me here. If you
49 don't want me, put me out." So they threw me out of jail to get rid of me, and I never showed up later. In the meantime, I

1 commenced suit against the commissioner for kidnapping, holding me hostage and demanding ransom for my release. (His
2 ransom was my signature, for he said when I gave him my signature, I would be free to go. Of course, that was why I was
3 in jail because I did not agree to that.)

4 In my civil suit against the commissioner, I had him totally defenseless, and the trial judge hearing the case knew it. There
5 was absolutely no way the commissioner could lawfully wiggle off, but since when do judges do things lawfully? The trial
6 judge knew the commissioner was naked, and had no jurisdiction whatsoever for what he did to me. He slammed his hands
7 down on the bench and said, "Mr. Branson, in all my twenty years' career on the bench, I have never met a person like you."
8 He then quoted the words found in my complaint, "Just keep me in jail until you are finished with me."

9 This judge could see the potential chaotic conditions if every person which was stopped by the cops stated "Just keep me in 10 jail until you are finished with me." I was supposed to fear losing my job, my reputation and companionship and capitulate.
11 He knew that if everybody did what I was doing, the entire system would fall apart. I was suddenly costing government
12 mucho money to the tune of thousands upon thousands of dollars when the whole idea was to make some money from me.
13 This lawsuit continued for years all the way up to the U.S. Supreme Court, yet not one judge would address the issues of 14 my contract case.

15 I now refer to a humorous situation that sounds like make-believe. An acquaintance of mine was called into court by one of 16 the ABC "public service" administrative agencies to be cross-examined to discover information from him to be used against 17 him. He was asked to take the witness stand. They asked him to raise his right hand after which the clerk of the court said,
18 "Do you solemnly swear to tell the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, so help you God?" He responded, "No,
19 I do not!" Everyone in the court gasped. (Remember, the right to say "Yes" also includes the right to say "No!") The judge
20 instructed the clerk to re-read the swearing-in again, supposing that he just did not understand the question. He responded
21 the second time, "I heard you the first time, and my answer is, No, I do not!" You can imagine the uncomfortable and 22 embarrassing situation into which this placed the judge. He asked why he would not swear to tell the truth, and he said,
23 "The Bible says, 'Let God be true, but every man a liar,' " (referring to Rom. 3:4), and "I am a man, and a liar."

24 The judge came unglued and threatened him with jail if he did not swear to tell the truth. He responded,

25 "Judge, you asked me a straight-forward question requiring either a yes, or a no answer. I gave you a straight-
26 forward answer to your question, and that was No, I do not. You can't say I did not answer your question, for I
27 did answer it, but you just don't like my answer. If you didn't want to hear my answer, then don't ask me the 28 question. And judge, on what basis do you threatened me with jail? Is it because I answered your question
29 truthfully? Or is it because you wanted me to lie, and I didn't do it? Or is it because you believe I am lying to 30 you when I tell you I am a man, and a liar?"

31 The judge threw him in jail for three days, after which he brought him forth to swear him in again. He said, "Judge, my 32 answer to you is still the same as three days ago. I am still a man, and still a liar, and no amount of jail time can change that.
33 The judge again threatened him with jail, to which he responded:

34 "On what basis do you threaten me with jail? Is it because I answered your question truthfully, and you want
35 me to lie? Or is it because you believe I am lying to you when I tell you I am a man, and a liar?"

36 The system just does not know how to handle people who question the actions of government when all the government is 37 only trying to get your approval to what they do to you. If you don't agree to the Contract Agreement, then they do you the 38 favor of "agreeing" for you even if it is against your will, without consideration. As I say, this is not quite like you saying
39 "I do" at the altar, but the judge spake and it was so.

40 Other examples are, when you are called to jury duty, the judge makes you raise your right hand and agree to follow the law
41 as interpreted to you by the judge. But wait, it is not the judge or the jurors who are entitled to a jury trial, but the 42 defendant who is constitutionally entitled to a fully informed and unencumbered jury which must judge on both the law and 43 the facts. Here we have a judge seeking to induce the defendant's jurors to conspire with him against the defendant. How 44 can the judge, in conspiracy with the jurors, lawfully agree to waive the rights of the defendant? They can't. It is the 45 defendant that is entitled to a fair and impartial trial, "In all criminal prosecutions, the accused shall enjoy ... an impartial 46 jury." Jurors who have been induced to conspire with the judge cannot possibly be "an impartial jury." Fifth Amendment, 47 U.S. Constitution.

48 Then there are the various taxing agencies who want you to enter into a "Contract Agreement" with them. They kindly 49 provide you with a pre-printed line on their forms to agree with their offer of a "Contract Agreement." But if you choose not to accept their offer, can one go to jail? Not constitutionally. However, they somehow want you to believe that if you do not accept their offer, then you are obligated to comply with their "Imposed Criminal Administrative Law," for after all, you don't want to go to jail because you violated the law.

Remember, anything that requires your signature, or a swearing thereto in order to give it application, is not law, but a contract. A contract must entail:

1. Being fully cognizant of all its terms.
2. Agreeing to all those terms.
3. Having equal right to say yes or no.
4. Offering you a consideration to which you would rather have than retaining your constitutional rights and saying no.
5. Being totally done without duress in any way.

Anything otherwise fails the test of a contract.

5.4.4 The three methods for exercising our Constitutional right to contract

Within the legal field, there are three distinct ways that we exercise our right to contract and thereby surrender a portion of our private rights or become the target of enforcement actions by the government.:

1. Contract between two private parties: see Article 1, Section 10 of the Constitution. We can sign a contract or consent to a contract by our behavior, and thereby forfeit our rights in pursuit of the benefits or special privileges that result from availing ourself of the contract.
2. Government "codes" or "statutes" which are not enacted positive law and which therefore are a voluntary private contract between you and the state. An example is marriage licenses and the family law codes in most states which implement them are in fact entirely voluntary. If you don't volunteer or consent to get a marriage license, then you aren't obligated to comply with the family code in most states, and especially those that do not recognize "common law marriage".
3. Enacted positive law. Law which the people directly or indirectly consented to because their elected representatives "enacted" it into positive law.

The above list is in order of priority. The first two are based on our private right to contract. The last one is based on our ability to contract collectively as a group called a "state" with the public servants who will enforce and protect our rights using the law/contract. The parties to the contract are our representatives and the public servants who will enforce the contract they enact called a "Public law". In a society such as we have which is populated with sovereigns, our private power to contract supersedes enacted positive law and in some cases is also used as a substitute for positive law in cases where positive law cannot be enacted. No government, as we pointed out earlier in section 5.4.1, has the power to interfere with our private right to contract. Likewise, no state has the ability to interfere with the right of the federal government to contract with private people in the states to provide "social services" such as Medicare, Social Security, etc.

Below is a tabular summary that graphically depicts who the parties are to each of the above three types of contracts and what form the contract takes in each case. The purpose of each of the tree types of contract is to protect and defend the rights of the parties:

Table 5-32: The three methods for exercising our right to contract

#	Type of contract	Form of contract	Enforcer of contract	PARTIES TO THE CONTRACT
				Two consenting parties	The government and individually consenting parties	The "state" and every person individually
1	Contract between two private parties	Private, notarized, recorded contract	Parties to contract and their counsel	X
2	Government "code" that is not positive	Government application for benefits	IRS, Social Security Administration		X

	law
3	Enacted positive law	Positive laws	Attorney General			X

The second option above is the equivalent of an “invisible adhesion contract” in the legal field:

“Adhesion contract. Standardized contract form offered to consumers of [government] goods and services on essentially “take it or leave it” basis without affording consumer realistic opportunity to bargain and under such conditions that consumer cannot obtain desired product or services except by acquiescing in form contract. Distinctive features of adhesion contract is that weaker party has no realistic choice as to its terms. Cubic Corp. v. Marty, 4 Dist., 185 C.A.3d 438, 229 Cal.Rptr. 828, 833; Standard Oil Co. of Calif. V. Perkins, C.A.Or., 347 F.2d. 379, 383. Recognizing that these contracts are not the result of traditionally “bargained” contracts, the trend is to relieve parties from onerous conditions imposed by such contracts. However, not every such contract is unconscionable. Lechmere Tire and Sales Co. v. Burwick, 360 Mass. 718, 720, 721, 277 N.E.2d. 503.”

[Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 40]

Adhesion contracts have only come into vogue in the last century because of the corporatization of America and the monopolistic power that these large corporations have over the economy. If we didn't have such large, government sanctioned, corporate monopolies within specific segments of our economy, the sovereign People would have enough choice that they would never knowingly consent to an “adhesion contract” because they could entertain other competitive options. This concept of monopolistic coercion of the public also applies to the federal government. 28 U.S.C. §3002(15)(A) identifies the “United States” government as a “corporation”. It also happens to be the largest corporation in the world which has a virtual monopoly in certain market segments. It has abused this monopolistic power to coerce people into complying with what amounts to an “invisible adhesion contract” called the Infernal Revenue Code. What makes this particular contract “invisible” is the fact that our public servants positively refuse to help you or notify you of precisely what activity or action makes you a party to this private contract. They do this because they don't want anyone escaping their control so that everyone will be trapped in their usurping spider web of tyranny, lies, and deceit. Hence, we had to write this entire book so you would understand all the nuances of this invisible contract and thus make an informed choice about whether you wish to be party to it. In response to publishing the terms of this “stealth contract” within our book, the government has repeatedly harassed, threatened, and persecuted us in an effort to keep the truth away from public view. Earlier in this book, in section 4.3.2, we revealed some of the many devious ways that dishonest and evil public servants attempt to conceal, avoid, or hide the requirement for consent in their interactions with the public. If you haven't read that section, then we recommend going back and doing so now before you proceed further.

On the subject of “invisible adhesion contracts”, you might want to visit our website and read a fascinating series of articles by George Mercier on the subject at:

<http://famguardian.org/PublishedAuthors/Indiv/MercierGeorge/GeorgeMercier.htm>

Our public dis-servants often use the second option above, the “invisible adhesion contract”, quite deviously in order to pass statutes that “appear” to impose a mandatory obligation on their surface, but which in fact are not “law” and are entirely voluntary and only simply “directory” in nature:

“Directory. A provision in a statute, rule of procedure, or the like, which is a mere direction or instruction of no obligatory force, and involving no invalidating consequence for its disregard, as opposed to an imperative or mandatory provision, which must be followed. The general rule is that the prescriptions of a statute relating to the performance of a public duty are so far directory that, though neglect of them may be punishable, yet it does not affect the validity of the acts done under them, as in the case of statute requiring an officer to prepare and deliver a document to another officer on or before a certain day.”

[Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 460]

The second option above, by the way, is an extension of both our and the government's right to contract. The government writes the contract as a statute but doesn't enact it into positive law. This makes it simply a “proposal” that we can choose to accept or not to accept. The contract provides some benefit or “privilege” that people or the states want, which is usually some form of protection or some entitlement to a financial benefit. An example would be welfare “benefits”. When a person or a state accept the benefit of the statute, then they must obey the REST of the contract, even if they did not explicitly consent in writing to the rest of the contract. In the case of receipt of federal welfare benefits, one requirement is that all states who want to receive the benefit MUST require those applying for driver's licenses to provide a Slave Surveillance Number, for instance. This approach is simply a devious legal extension of the Golden Rule:

1 "He who owns the gold rules."

2 In the case of our current federal government, by the way, the gold they are ruling with is stolen! It is loot! Here is how the
3 Supreme Court describes it:

4 "The Government urges that the Power Company is estopped to question the validity of the Act creating the
5 Tennessee Valley Authority, and hence that the stockholders, suing in the right of the corporation, cannot [297
6 U.S. 323] maintain this suit. .... The principle is invoked that one who accepts the benefit of a statute cannot
7 be heard to question its constitutionality. Great Falls Manufacturing Co. v. Attorney General, 124 U.S. 581;
8 Wall v. Parrot Silver & Copper Co.*, 244 U.S. 407; St. Louis Casting Co. v. Prendergast Construction Co.,
9 260 U.S. 469."
10 [Ashwander v. Tennessee Valley Auth., 297 U.S. 288 (1936)]

11 "...when a State willingly accepts a substantial benefit from the Federal Government, it waives its immunity 12 under the Eleventh Amendment and consents to suit by the intended beneficiaries of that federal assistance."
13 [Papasian v. Allain, 478 U.S. 265 (1986)]

14 In effect, a statute that is not positive law but which confers a government "privilege" or a "benefit", becomes a "roach
15 trap". They set the trap by writing the statute that implements the benefit program, and those who walk into the legal trap
16 must obey their new landlord to get out of the trap. We call this kind of trickery "privilege-induced slavery" earlier in 17 section 4.3.12. We will simply refer to it as the "roach trap statutes" throughout the rest of this book. Do you want your 18 public servants treating you like an insect because that is what you have become? The easiest way to avoid the "roach trap"
19 is never to accept any government benefit. Those who are sovereign cannot be dependent in any respect and won't walk
20 into such a trap to begin with. Another way to avoid "roach trap statutes" is to qualify one's consent when applying for the 21 benefit by explicitly stating the terms under which one consents. If the receiving agency accepts your application, then they 22 accepted the terms of your proposed new or replacement "contract". This, by the way, is the vehicle we recommend for 23 those who insist on filing "tax returns" with the government: making them into conditional self-assessments with tons of 24 strings attached.

25 IMPORTANT!: Only those who are party to "roach trap" statutes and the "constructive contract" they describe should be
26 using or citing anything from them! If you aren't a "taxpayer", and are not subject to the Internal Revenue Code, then don't 27 go citing anything from the I.R.C. in a court federal or state court pleading or in correspondence with the government. The 28 minute you claim any "privilege" or "benefit" from using or quoting any part of the Internal Revenue Code is the minute
29 you become a "taxpayer"! WATCH OUT! People who aren't subject to federal law shouldn't be benefiting from it in any 30 way. The only exception to this rule are positive laws elsewhere in the U.S. Code such as Title 18, the Criminal Code,
31 which applies to all crimes committed by federal employees or on federal property. We cover this subject of not citing
32 federal statutes to protect your rights earlier in section 4.2.6 entitled "Why you shouldn't cite federal statutes as authority 33 for protecting your rights."

34 The U.S. Supreme Court has also agreed with the conclusions of this section, by declaring that the payment of taxes is 35 "quasi-contractual", which means that the Internal Revenue Code must be the contract!

36 "Even if the judgment is deemed to be colored by the nature of the obligation whose validity it establishes, and
37 we are free to re-examine it, and, if we find it to be based on an obligation penal in character, to refuse to

8 The weak point of roach trap laws and the point upon which we can attack and undermine them is that the benefit must
 9 indeed be a tangible, measurable benefit. Simply "perceiving" it as a benefit does not in fact make it into a benefit. The 10 benefit also cannot derive from the absence of force, fraud, or illegal duress upon the person in receipt of the benefit.
 11 Compelled receipt of a benefit is nothing but slavery and involuntary servitude cleverly disguised as government
 12 "benevolence". Without some mutual tangible benefit voluntarily and freely accepted, which is called "consideration" in 13 the legal field, a valid contract cannot be formed. Every valid legal contract must include an offer, acceptance, mutual
 14 consideration, and mutual informed consent. In the case of the Internal Revenue Code, it ought to be quite obvious that if
 15 payment is voluntary and consensual under Subtitle A, there is absolutely no tangible benefit whatsoever that can result
 16 from "volunteering" or "consenting" to become a federal serf as a person domiciled in a state of the Union. The only
 17 people who could possibly "benefit" from this corrupt communistic and socialistic system, in fact, are parasites and thieves
 18 who intend from the beginning to draw more out of the government than they put in. God's law, however, tells us that no
 19 righteous government has any moral authority to be taxing and pillaging the successful members of society in order to 20 subsidize and reward this kind of thievery, failure, and government dependency:

21 "My son, if sinners [socialists, in this case] entice you,
 22 Do not consent [do not abuse your power of choice]
 23 If they say, "Come with us,
 24 Let us lie in wait to shed blood [of innocent "nontaxpayers"];
 25 Let us lurk secretly for the innocent without cause;
 26 Let us swallow them alive like Sheol,
 27 And whole, like those who go down to the Pit:
 28 We shall fill our houses with spoil [plunder];
 29 Cast in your lot among us,
 30 Let us all have one purse [share the stolen LOOT]"--

31 My son, do not walk in the way with them [do not ASSOCIATE with them and don't let the government
 32 FORCE you to associate with them either by forcing you to become a "taxpayer"/government whore or a
 33 "U.S. person".
 34 Keep your foot from their path;
 35 For their feet run to evil,
 36 And they make haste to shed blood.
 37 Surely, in vain the net is spread
 38 In the sight of any bird;
 39 But they lie in wait for their own blood.
 40 They lurk secretly for their own lives.
 41 So are the ways of everyone who is greedy for gain [or unearned government benefits];
 42 It takes away the life of its owners."
 43 [Proverbs 1:10-19, Bible, NKJV]

44 Furthermore, the U.S. Supreme Court has said several times that the government cannot manipulate Constitutional rights
 45 out of existence either directly or indirectly, which means they can't abuse their taxing powers or their power to contract in 46 order to deceive people into bargaining away their Constitutional rights:

47 "It has long been established that a State may not impose a penalty upon those who exercise a right guaranteed
 48 by the Constitution." Frost & Frost Trucking Co. v. Railroad Comm'n of California, 271 U.S. 583.
 49 "Constitutional rights would be of little value if they could be indirectly denied," Smith v. Allwright, 321 U.S.
 50 649, 644, or manipulated out of existence,' Gomillion v. Lightfoot, 364 U.S. 339, 345."
 51 [Harman v. Forssenius, 380 U.S 528 at 540, 85 S.Ct. 1177, 1185 (1965)]

52 When we signed our first tax return or IRS Form W-4, which were knowingly false as far as our public dis-servants were 53 concerned, the government didn't explicitly inform us as "nationals" and "non-resident non-persons" who have rights that
 54 we would be giving away those rights by lying to the government in admitting that we are a "U.S. individual" in the upper 55 left corner of the form. In fact, the government didn't even want you to know that you were consenting to anything by 56 submitting the form. Did you ever notice, for instance, that the upper left corner of the IRS Form W-4 says "Employee's

1 Withholding Allowance Certificate”, and yet within the Treasury Regulations that the government knows you will probably
 2 never read in your lifetime, they instead call this same form a “Withholding Agreement”? Sneaky, huh?

3 26 C.F.R. Sec. 31.3401(a)-3 Amounts deemed wages under voluntary withholding
 4 agreements.

5 (a) IN GENERAL. Notwithstanding the exceptions to the definition of wages specified in section 3401(a) and 6 the regulations thereunder, the term "wages" includes the amounts described in paragraph (b)(1) of this
 7 section with respect to which there is a voluntary withholding agreement in effect under section 3402(p).
 8 References in this chapter to the definition of wages contained in section 3401(a) shall be deemed to refer also 9 to this section (Section 31.3401(a)-3).

10 (b) REMUNERATION FOR SERVICES.

11 (1) Except as provided in subparagraph (2) of this paragraph, the amounts referred to in paragraph (a) of 12 this section include any remuneration for services performed by an employee for an employer which, without 13 regard to this section, does not constitute wages under section 3401(a). For example, remuneration for 14 services performed by an agricultural worker or a domestic worker in a private home (amounts which are 15 specifically excluded from the definition of wages by section 3401(a)(2) and (3), respectively) are amounts with 16 respect to which a voluntary withholding agreement may be entered into under section 3402(p). See Sections
 17 31.3401(c)-1 and 31.3401(d)-1 for the definitions of "employee" and "employer".

18 Who is doing the agreeing here, anyway? IT'S YOU!! Your public servants don't want you to know that they need your 19 consent to take your money. They want the process of giving consent to be “invisible” to you so that you are tricked into 20 believing that participation in payroll withholding is mandatory. Your devious politicians and government lawyer
 21 “servants” have been playing tricks on you like this for decades, and most Americans have been blissfully unaware of these
 22 devious machinations until this book came out. Consequently then, it must be presumed in the context of the W-4 fraud
 23 documented above that we never provided sufficiently informed or voluntary consent, which the Supreme Court interprets
 24 to mean that we never made any choice or provided any “consent” at all:

25 "Waivers of constitutional rights not only must be voluntary but must be knowing, intelligent acts done with 26 sufficient awareness of the relevant circumstances and likely consequences."
 27 [Brady v. U.S., 397 U.S. at 749, 90 S.Ct. 1463 at 1469 (1970)]

28 Laws that are not “positive law” are described simply as “prima facie evidence of law” and may not be cited as admissible
 29 evidence in any criminal or civil trial. Prima facie evidence is rebuttable evidence:

30 1 U.S.C. §204

31 Sec. 204. - Codes and Supplements as evidence of the laws of United States and District of Columbia; citation
 32 of Codes and Supplements

33 In all courts, tribunals, and public offices of the United States, at home or abroad, of the District of Columbia,
 34 and of each

35 State, Territory, or insular possession of the United States -

36 (a) United States Code. -

37 The matter set forth in the edition of the Code of Laws of the United States current at any time shall, together
 38 with the then current supplement, if any, establish prima facie [by presumption] the laws of the United States,
 39 general and permanent in their nature, in force on the day preceding the commencement of the session
 40 following the last session the legislation of which is included: Provided, however, That whenever titles of such
 41 Code shall have been enacted into positive law the text thereof shall be legal evidence of the laws therein
 42 contained, in all the courts of the United States, the several States, and the Territories and insular
 43 possessions of the United States.

44 Of the above three methods for exercising our right to contract, the Internal Revenue Code falls into the category of item 3
 45 above: Legislation or statutes which is not enacted into positive law and which are therefore not “law”, and whose 46 enforcement provisions are not published in the Federal Register. See the following for evidence of the missing 47 enforcement regulations at:

IRS Due Process Meeting Handout, Form #03.008
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

Consequently, the Internal Revenue Code, because it is neither “positive law” nor “law” and because there are no enforcement provisions published in the Federal Register, can only be enforced against federal “employees” who are “effectively connected” to U.S. government income if it is enforced at all. The reason is because federal employees basically must observe their employment contract, which includes the implied agreement to pay “kickbacks” to the federal government out of their pay called “income taxes”. These “kickbacks” are recorded and accounted for on a “return”, which is a return of the government’s property to its rightful owner. For all persons other than federal “employees”, the I.R.C. is nothing more than a voluntary contract which each individual must choose for himself or herself whether he or she individually wants the “benefits” of. Those who choose to avail themselves of the benefits of this constructive voluntary private “contract” reveal their consent and intent by declaring themselves to be federal “employees” on the IRS Form W-4 and submitting it directly to the IRS or indirectly, through their private, non-federal employer. When they elect to avail themselves of this contract, they will be treated by the government in every respect relating to “taxes” like any typical federal “employee”, even if they in fact are not and even if they deny having done so. Note, however, that in the vast majority of cases, those who submit the IRS Form W-4 had to LIE in order to avail themselves of the contract because there are 280+ million Americans but only about 2,000 elected or appointed “public officers” who lawfully hold public office. Once they perjure themselves on the W-4 by claiming they are federal “employees” under penalty of perjury, now the government has them trapped because they have given the government court-admissible evidence that they are federal “employees”. If they then later claim they were deceived or tricked in filling out the form, the government can try to blackmail them by saying they committed perjury on the form. Checkmate!

Another way to challenge the “roach trap” in court is simply to show that statistically, the statute one is subject to does not “benefit”, but instead harms people and societies. Once you can prove that it isn’t a benefit but in fact a harm to the people, the government loses its ability to enforce its’ contract upon the recipient. The sole purpose of both law and government is to protect and not harm society. Government cannot exceed that boundary no matter what. The Supreme Court explained why this is as follows:

“The great principle is this: because the constitution will not permit a state to destroy, it will not permit a law involving the power to destroy.”
 [Providence Bank v. Billings, 29 U.S. 514 (1830)]

The last point we want to make about “roach trap statutes” in relation to income taxation is that the Supreme Court has already said that their main benefit, which is the Social Security and Medicare benefits that go with the payment of income taxes, is NOT, and I repeat NOT, a contract.

“We must conclude that a person covered by the Act has not such a right in benefit payments... This is not to say, however, that Congress may exercise its power to modify the statutory scheme free of all constitutional restraint.”
 [Flemming v. Nestor, 363 U.S. 603 (1960)]

Therefore, payment by the government of benefits is not contractual, it is discretionary according to the Supreme Court. Where there is no contract, there can be no breach of contract or harm to the benefit recipient. Therefore, payment to the government for these so-called “benefits” through income taxation cannot be contractual either. Equal protection of the laws guaranteed by Section 1 of the Fourteenth Amendment demands this. Not only that, but anyone who takes out anything more than exactly what they put in, is a THIEF! The Bible says that all such thieves MUST be forced to pay back DOUBLE what they stole to the victims of the theft:

“If a man [the government, in this case] delivers to his neighbor [a citizen, in this case] money or articles to keep, and it is stolen out of the man's house [our out of his paycheck], if the thief is found, he shall pay double. If the thief is not found, then the master of the house shall be brought to the judges to see whether he has put his hand into his neighbor's goods.”
 [Exodus 22:7-8, Bible, NKJV]

The “victim” of the theft, in this case, are all the “nontaxpayers” who never wanted to participate in this bankrupt humanistic/socialist tax and welfare-state system to begin with. If people cannot lawfully be permitted to take out more than they put in because it would be theft, then why have the socialist program to begin with? All it will do is encourage those who receive the benefit to abuse their voting power to compel the government to STEAL from their fellow working citizens, in violation of 18 U.S.C. §597, which IS positive law, by the way.

5.4.5 Federalism

Federalism is the mechanism by which the sovereignty of the States and the People are preserved out of respect for the requirements of the Tenth Amendment to the United States Constitution, which states:

*United States Constitution
Tenth Amendment*

The powers not delegated to the United States by the Constitution, nor prohibited by it to the States, are reserved to the States respectively, or to the people.

Federalism is advanced primarily but not exclusively through the following means:

1. Requirement of comity when acting extra-territorially. Whenever the federal government wishes to exercise extraterritorial jurisdiction within a state of the Union, which is a foreign state for the purposes of federal legislative jurisdiction, it must respect the requirement for “comity”, which means that it must pursue the consent of the parties to the action.

“Every State or nation possesses an exclusive sovereignty and jurisdiction within her own territory, and her laws affect and bind all property and persons residing within it. It may regulate the manner and circumstances under which property is held, and the condition, capacity, and state of all persons therein, and also the remedy and modes of administering justice. And it is equally true that no State or nation can affect or bind property out of its territory, or persons not residing [domiciled] within it. No State therefore can enact laws to operate beyond its own dominions, and if it attempts to do so, it may be lawfully refused obedience. Such laws can have no inherent authority extraterritorially. This is the necessary result of the independence of distinct and separate sovereignties.”

“Now it follows from these principles that whatever force or effect the laws of one State or nation may have in the territories of another must depend solely upon the laws and municipal regulations of the latter, upon its own jurisprudence and polity, and upon its own express or tacit consent.”
[Dred Scott v. John F.A. Sanford, 60 U.S. 393 (1856)]

“Judge Story, in his treatise on the Conflicts of Laws, lays down, as the basis upon which all reasonings on the law of comity must necessarily rest, the following maxims: First 'that every nation possesses an exclusive sovereignty and jurisdiction within its own territory'; secondly, 'that no state or nation can by its laws directly affect or bind property out of its own territory, or bind persons not resident therein, whether they are natural born subjects or others.' The learned judge then adds: 'From these two maxims or propositions there follows a third, and that is that whatever force and obligation the laws of one country have in another depend solely upon the laws and municipal regulation of the latter; that is to say, upon its own proper jurisdiction and polity, and upon its own express or tacit consent.' Story on Conflict of Laws §23.”

2. The separation of powers between the states and the federal government in order to preserve a “diffusion of sovereign power”. This means that a state may not delegate any of its powers conferred by the Constitution to the Federal Government, and likewise, that the federal government may not delegate any of its powers to any state of the Union:

“To the contrary, the Constitution divides authority between federal and state governments for the protection of individuals. State sovereignty is not just an end in itself: “Rather, federalism secures to citizens the liberties that derive from the diffusion of sovereign power.” Coleman v. Thompson, 501 U.S. 722, 759 (1991) (BLACKMUN, J., dissenting). “Just as the separation and independence of the coordinate branches of the Federal Government serve to prevent the accumulation of excessive power in any one branch, a healthy balance of power between the States and the Federal Government will reduce the risk of tyranny and abuse from either front.” Gregory v. [505 U.S. 144, 182] Ashcroft, 501 U.S., at 458. See The Federalist No. 51, p. 323. (C. Rossiter ed. 1961).

Where Congress exceeds its authority relative to the States, therefore, the departure from the constitutional plan cannot be ratified by the “consent” of state officials. An analogy to the separation of powers among the branches of the Federal Government clarifies this point. The Constitution's division of power among the three branches is violated where one branch invades the territory of another, whether or not the encroached-upon branch approves the encroachment. In Buckley v. Valeo, 424 U.S. 1, 118-137 (1976), for instance, the Court held that Congress had infringed the President's appointment power, despite the fact that the President himself had manifested his consent to the statute that caused the infringement by signing it into law. See National League of Cities v. Usery, 426 U.S., at 842, n. 12. In INS v. Chadha, 462 U.S. 919, 944-959 (1983), we held that the legislative veto violated the constitutional requirement that legislation be presented to the

 2 at 944-945. The constitutional authority of Congress cannot be expanded by the "consent" of the governmental
 3 unit whose domain is thereby narrowed, whether that unit is the Executive Branch or the States.

4 State officials thus cannot consent to the enlargement of the powers of Congress beyond those enumerated in
 5 the Constitution. Indeed, the facts of this case raise the possibility that powerful incentives might lead both
 6 federal and state officials to view departures from the federal structure to be in their personal interests. Most
 7 citizens recognize the need for radioactive waste disposal sites, but few want sites near their homes. As a result,
 8 while it would be well within the authority of either federal or state officials to choose where the disposal sites
 9 will be, it is likely to be in the political interest of each individual official to avoid being held accountable to the
 10 voters for the choice of location. If [505 U.S. 144, 183] a federal official is faced with the alternatives of
 11 choosing a location or directing the States to do it, the official may well prefer the latter, as a means of shifting
 12 responsibility for the eventual decision. If a state official is faced with the same set of alternatives - choosing a
 13 location or having Congress direct the choice of a location - the state official may also prefer the latter, as it
 14 may permit the avoidance of personal responsibility. The interests of public officials thus may not coincide with 15 the Constitution's intergovernmental allocation of authority. Where state officials purport to submit to the
 16 direction of Congress in this manner, federalism is hardly being advanced. "
 17 [New York v. United States, 505 U.S. 144 (1992)]

- 18 3. Parties domiciled in states of the Union may not consent to the jurisdiction of the federal courts where no subject
 19 matter jurisdiction exists within the Constitution, because it would unlawfully enlarge the jurisdiction of the federal 20 government beyond the clear boundaries enumerated in the Constitution of the United States.

21 Pacemaker argues that in the federal system a party may not consent to jurisdiction, so that the parties cannot
 22 waive their rights under Article III. The maxim that parties may not consent to the jurisdiction of federal courts
 23 is not applicable here. The rule is irrelevant because it applies only where the parties attempt to confer upon an 24 Article III court a subject matter jurisdiction that Congress or the Constitution forbid. See, e.g., Jackson v.
 25 Ashton, 33 U.S. (8 Peters), 148, 148-49, 8 L.Ed. 898 (1834); Mansfield, Coldwater & Lake Michigan Railway
 26 Co. v. Swan, 111 U.S. 379, 28 L.Ed. 462, 4 S.Ct. 510 (1884). The limited jurisdiction of the federal courts and 27 the need to respect the boundaries of federalism underlie the rule. In the instant case, however, the subject
 28 matter, patents, is exclusively one of federal law. The Supreme Court has explicitly held that Congress may 29 "confer upon federal courts jurisdiction conditioned upon a defendant's consent." Williams v. Austrian, 331
 30 U.S. 642, 652, 91 L.Ed. 1718, 67 S.Ct. 1443 (1947); see Harris v. Avery Brundage Co., 305 U.S. 160, 83 L.Ed.
 31 100, 59 S.Ct. 131 (1938). The litigant waiver in this case is similar to waiver of a defect in jurisdiction over the 32 person, a waiver federal courts permit. Hoffman v. Blaski, 363 U.S. 335, 343, 4 L.Ed.2d. 1254, 80 S.Ct. 1084
 33 (1960).
 34 [Pacemaker Diagnostic Clinic of America Inc. v. Instromedix Inc., 725 F.2d. 537 (9th Cir. 02/16/1984)]

35 The best descriptions of federalism are found in presidential executive orders. Below is an example:

36 Executive Order 12612--Federalism

37 Source: The provisions of Executive Order 12612 of Oct. 26, 1987, appear at 52 FR 41685, 3 CFR, 1987
 38 Comp., p. 252, unless otherwise noted.

39 By the authority vested in me as President by the Constitution and laws of the United States of America, and in
 40 order to restore the division of governmental responsibilities between the national government and the States
 41 that was intended by the Framers of the Constitution and to ensure that the principles of federalism established
 42 by the Framers guide the Executive departments and agencies in the formulation and implementation of 43 policies, it is hereby ordered as follows:

44 Section 1. Definitions. For purposes of this Order:

- 45 (a) "Policies that have federalism implications" refers to regulations, legislative comments or proposed 46 legislation, and other policy statements or actions that have substantial direct effects on the States, on the 47 relationship between the national government and the States, or on the distribution of power and 48 responsibilities among the various levels of government.
 49 (b) "State" or "States" refer to the States of the United States of America, individually or collectively, and,
 50 where relevant, to State governments, including units of local government and other political subdivisions
 51 established by the States.

52 Sec. 2. Fundamental Federalism Principles. In formulating and implementing policies that have federalism
 53 implications, Executive departments and agencies shall be guided by the following fundamental federalism
 54 principles:

- 55 (a) Federalism is rooted in the knowledge that our political liberties are best assured by limiting the size and 56 scope of the national government.
 57 (b) The people of the States created the national government when they delegated to it those enumerated
 58 governmental powers relating to matters beyond the competence of the individual States. All other sovereign powers, save those expressly prohibited the States by the Constitution, are reserved to the States or to the people.

- (c) The constitutional relationship among sovereign governments, State and national, is formalized in and protected by the Tenth Amendment to the Constitution.
- (d) The people of the States are free, subject only to restrictions in the Constitution itself or in constitutionally authorized Acts of Congress, to define the moral, political, and legal character of their lives.
- (e) In most areas of governmental concern, the States uniquely possess the constitutional authority, the resources, and the competence to discern the sentiments of the people and to govern accordingly. In Thomas Jefferson's words, the States are "the most competent administrations for our domestic concerns and the surest bulwarks against antirepublican tendencies."
- (f) The nature of our constitutional system encourages a healthy diversity in the public policies adopted by the people of the several States according to their own conditions, needs, and desires. In the search for enlightened public policy, individual States and communities are free to experiment with a variety of approaches to public issues.
- (g) Acts of the national government--whether legislative, executive, or judicial in nature--that exceed the enumerated powers of that government under the Constitution violate the principle of federalism established by the Framers.
- (h) Policies of the national government should recognize the responsibility of--and should encourage opportunities for--individuals, families, neighborhoods, local governments, and private associations to achieve their personal, social, and economic objectives through cooperative effort.
  - (i) In the absence of clear constitutional or statutory authority, the presumption of sovereignty should rest with the individual States. Uncertainties regarding the legitimate authority of the national government should be resolved against regulation at the national level.

Sec. 3. Federalism Policymaking Criteria. In addition to the fundamental federalism principles set forth in section 2, Executive departments and agencies shall adhere, to the extent permitted by law, to the following criteria when formulating and implementing policies that have federalism implications:

- (a) There should be strict adherence to constitutional principles. Executive departments and agencies should closely examine the constitutional and statutory authority supporting any Federal action that would limit the policymaking discretion of the States, and should carefully assess the necessity for such action. To the extent practicable, the States should be consulted before any such action is implemented. Executive Order No. 12372 ("Intergovernmental Review of Federal Programs") remains in effect for the programs and activities to which it is applicable.
- (b) Federal action limiting the policymaking discretion of the States should be taken only where constitutional authority for the action is clear and certain and the national activity is necessitated by the presence of a problem of national scope. For the purposes of this Order:
  - (1) It is important to recognize the distinction between problems of national scope (which may justify Federal action) and problems that are merely common to the States (which will not justify Federal action because individual States, acting individually or together, can effectively deal with them).
  - (2) Constitutional authority for Federal action is clear and certain only when authority for the action may be found in a specific provision of the Constitution, there is no provision in the Constitution prohibiting Federal action, and the action does not encroach upon authority reserved to the States.
- (c) With respect to national policies administered by the States, the national government should grant the States the maximum administrative discretion possible. Intrusive, Federal oversight of State administration is neither necessary nor desirable.
- (d) When undertaking to formulate and implement policies that have federalism implications, Executive departments and agencies shall:
  - (1) Encourage States to develop their own policies to achieve program objectives and to work with appropriate officials in other States.
  - (2) Refrain, to the maximum extent possible, from establishing uniform, national standards for programs and, when possible, defer to the States to establish standards.
  - (3) When national standards are required, consult with appropriate officials and organizations representing the States in developing those standards.

Sec. 4. Special Requirements for Preemption.

- (a) To the extent permitted by law, Executive departments and agencies shall construe, in regulations and otherwise, a Federal statute to preempt State law only when the statute contains an express preemption provision or there is some other firm and palpable evidence compelling the conclusion that the Congress intended preemption of State law, or when the exercise of State authority directly conflicts with the exercise of Federal authority under the Federal statute.
- (b) Where a Federal statute does not preempt State law (as addressed in subsection (a) of this section), Executive departments and agencies shall construe any authorization in the statute for the issuance of regulations as authorizing preemption of State law by rule-making only when the statute expressly authorizes issuance of preemptive regulations or there is some other firm and palpable evidence compelling the conclusion that the Congress intended to delegate to the department or agency the authority to issue regulations preempting State law.
- (c) Any regulatory preemption of State law shall be restricted to the minimum level necessary to achieve the objectives of the statute pursuant to which the regulations are promulgated.
- (d) As soon as an Executive department or agency foresees the possibility of a conflict between State law and Federally protected interests within its area of regulatory responsibility, the department or agency shall consult, to the extent practicable, with appropriate officials and organizations representing the States in an effort to avoid such a conflict.

- (e) When an Executive department or agency proposes to act through adjudication or rule-making to preempt State law, the department or agency shall provide all affected States notice and an opportunity for appropriate participation in the proceedings.

Sec. 5. Special Requirements for Legislative Proposals. Executive departments and agencies shall not submit to the Congress legislation that would:

- (a) Directly regulate the States in ways that would interfere with functions essential to the States' separate and independent existence or operate to directly displace the States' freedom to structure integral operations in areas of traditional governmental functions;
- (b) Attach to Federal grants conditions that are not directly related to the purpose of the grant; or
- (c) Preempt State law, unless preemption is consistent with the fundamental federalism principles set forth in section 2, and unless a clearly legitimate national purpose, consistent with the federalism policymaking criteria set forth in section 3, cannot otherwise be met.

Sec. 6. Agency Implementation.

- (a) The head of each Executive department and agency shall designate an official to be responsible for ensuring the implementation of this Order.
- (b) In addition to whatever other actions the designated official may take to ensure implementation of this Order, the designated official shall determine which proposed policies have sufficient federalism implications to warrant the preparation of a Federalism Assessment. With respect to each such policy for which an affirmative determination is made, a Federalism Assessment, as described in subsection (c) of this section, shall be prepared. The department or agency head shall consider any such Assessment in all decisions involved in promulgating and implementing the policy.
- (c) Each Federalism Assessment shall accompany any submission concerning the policy that is made to the Office of Management and Budget pursuant to Executive Order No. 12291 or OMB Circular No. A-19, and shall:
- (1) Contain the designated official's certification that the policy has been assessed in light of the principles, criteria, and requirements stated in sections 2 through 5 of this Order;
  - (2) Identify any provision or element of the policy that is inconsistent with the principles, criteria, and requirements stated in sections 2 through 5 of this Order;
  - (3) Identify the extent to which the policy imposes additional costs or burdens on the States, including the likely source of funding for the States and the ability of the States to fulfill the purposes of the policy; and
  - (4) Identify the extent to which the policy would affect the States' ability to discharge traditional State governmental functions, or other aspects of State sovereignty.

Sec. 7. Government-wide Federalism Coordination and Review.

- (a) In implementing Executive Order Nos. 12291 and 12498 and OMB Circular No. A-19, the Office of Management and Budget, to the extent permitted by law and consistent with the provisions of those authorities, shall take action to ensure that the policies of the Executive departments and agencies are consistent with the principles, criteria, and requirements stated in sections 2 through 5 of this Order.
- (b) In submissions to the Office of Management and Budget pursuant to Executive Order No. 12291 and OMB Circular No. A-19, Executive departments and agencies shall identify proposed regulatory and statutory provisions that have significant federalism implications and shall address any substantial federalism concerns. Where the departments or agencies deem it appropriate, substantial federalism concerns should also be addressed in notices of proposed rule-making and messages transmitting legislative proposals to the Congress.

Sec. 8. Judicial Review.

This Order is intended only to improve the internal management of the Executive branch, and is not intended to create any right or benefit, substantive or procedural, enforceable at law by a party against the United States, its agencies, its officers, or any person.

An example of the operation of Federalism to constrain the extraterritorial jurisdiction of the federal government in a judicial setting is found in the Supreme Court ruling below. Note that the court is addressing a situation where Congress is acting extraterritorially upon land within a state of the Union that is not within its exclusive or general jurisdiction of the federal government:

*Respondents contend that Congress is without power, in view of the immunity doctrine, thus to subject a State to suit. We disagree. Congress enacted the FELA in the exercise of its constitutional power to regulate [377 U.S. 191] interstate commerce. Second Employers' Liability Cases, 223 U.S. 1. While a State's immunity from suit by a citizen without its consent has been said to be rooted in "the inherent nature of sovereignty," Great Northern Life Ins. Co. v. Read, supra, 322 U.S. 47, 51,[9] the States surrendered a portion of their sovereignty when they granted Congress the power to regulate commerce.

This power, like all others vested in congress, is complete in itself, may be exercised to its utmost extent, and acknowledges no limitations other than are prescribed in the constitution.

. . . If, as has always been understood, the sovereignty of congress, though limited to specified objects is plenary as to those objects, the power over commerce with foreign nations, and among the several States, is vested in congress as absolutely as it would be in a single government, having in its constitution the same restrictions on the exercise of the power as are found in the constitution of the United States.

Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 1, 196-197. Thus, as the Court said in United States v. California, supra, 297 U.S. at 184-185, a State's operation of a railroad in interstate commerce must be in subordination to the power to regulate interstate commerce, which has been granted specifically to the national government. The sovereign power of the states is necessarily diminished to the extent of the grants of power to the federal government in the Constitution. . . . [T]here is no such limitation upon the plenary power to regulate commerce [as there is upon the federal power to tax [377 U.S. 192] state instrumentalities]. The state can no more deny the power if its exercise has been authorized by Congress than can an individual.

By empowering Congress to regulate commerce, then, the States necessarily surrendered any portion of their sovereignty that would stand in the way of such regulation. Since imposition of the FELA right of action upon interstate railroads is within the congressional regulatory power, it must follow that application of the Act to such a railroad cannot be precluded by sovereign immunity.{10}

Recognition of the congressional power to render a State suable under the FELA does not mean that the immunity doctrine, as embodied in the Eleventh Amendment with respect to citizens of other States and as extended to the State's own citizens by the Hans case, is here being overridden. It remains the law that a State may not be sued by an individual without its consent. Our conclusion is simply that Alabama, when it began operation of an interstate railroad approximately 20 years after enactment of the FELA, necessarily consented to such suit as was authorized by that Act. By adopting and ratifying the Commerce Clause, the States empowered Congress to create such a right of action against interstate railroads; by enacting the FELA in the exercise of this power, Congress conditioned the right to operate a railroad in interstate commerce upon amenability to suit in federal court as provided by the Act; by thereafter operating a railroad in interstate commerce, Alabama must be taken to have accepted that condition and thus to have consented to suit.

[B]y engaging in interstate commerce by rail, [the State] has subjected itself to the commerce power, and is liable for a violation of the . . . Act, as are other [377 U.S. 193] carriers. . . .

United States v. California, supra, 297 U.S. at 185; California v. Taylor, supra, 353 U.S. at 568. We thus agree that [T]he State is liable upon the theory that, by engaging in interstate commerce by rail, it has subjected itself to the commerce power of the federal government.

* * * *

It would be a strange situation indeed if the state could be held subject to the [Federal Safety Appliance Act] and liable for a violation thereof, and yet could not be sued without its express consent. The state, by engaging in interstate commerce, and thereby subjecting itself to the act, must be held to have waived any right it may have had arising out of the general rule that a sovereign state may not be sued without its consent.

Maurice v. State, 43 Cal.App.2d at 275, 277, 110 P.2d. at 710-711. Accord, Higginbotham v. Public Belt R. Comm'n, supra, 192 La. 525, 550-551, 188 So. 395, 403; Mathewes v. Port Utilities Comm'n, supra.[11] [377 U.S. 194]

Respondents deny that Alabama's operation of the railroad constituted consent to suit. They argue that it had no such effect under state law, and that the State did not intend to waive its immunity or know that such a waiver would result. Reliance is placed on the Alabama Constitution of 1901, Art. I, Section 14 of which provides that "the State of Alabama shall never be made a defendant in any court of law or equity"; on state cases holding that neither the legislature nor a state officer has the power to waive the State's immunity;[12] and on cases in this Court to the effect that whether a State has waived its immunity depends upon its intention and is a question of state law [377 U.S. 195] only. Chandler v. Dix, 194 U.S. 590; Palmer v. Ohio, 248 U.S. 32; Ford Motor Co. v. Department of Treasury, 323 U.S. 459, 466 470. We think those cases are inapposite to the present situation, where the waiver is asserted to arise from the State's commission of an act to which Congress, in the exercise of its constitutional power to regulate commerce, has attached the condition of amenability to suit. More pertinent to such a situation is our decision in Petty v. Tennessee-Missouri Bridge Comm'n, supra. That was a suit against a bi-state authority created with the consent of Congress pursuant to the Compact Clause of the Constitution. We assumed arguendo that the suit must be considered as being

1 against the States themselves, but held nevertheless that, by the terms of the compact and of a proviso that
 2 Congress had attached in approving it,[13] the States had waived any immunity they might otherwise have had.
 3 In reaching this conclusion, we rejected arguments, like the one made here, based on the proposition that
 4 neither [377 U.S. 196] of the States, under its own law, would have considered the language in the compact to
 5 constitute a waiver of its immunity. The question of waiver was, we held, one of federal law. It is true that this
 6 holding was based on the inclusion of the language in an interstate compact sanctioned by Congress under the 7 Constitution. But such compacts do not present the only instance in which the question whether a State has 8 waived its immunity is one of federal law. This must be true whenever the waiver is asserted to arise from an
 9 act done by the State within the realm of congressional regulation; for the congressional power to condition
 10 such an act upon amenability to suit would be meaningless if the State, on the basis of its own law or 11 intention, could conclusively deny the waiver and shake off the condition. The broad principle of the Petty
 12 case is thus applicable here: where a State's consent to suit is alleged to arise from an act not wholly within its 13 own sphere of authority, but within a sphere -- whether it be interstate compacts or interstate commerce --
 14 subject to the constitutional power of the Federal Government, the question whether the State's act constitutes 15 the alleged consent is one of federal law. Here, as in Petty, the States by venturing into the congressional 16 realm "assume the conditions that Congress under the Constitution attached." 359 U.S. at 281-282.
 17 [Parde v. Terminal R. Co., 377 U.S. 184 (1964)]

18 Note in the above case that extraterritorial jurisdiction was procured by the federal government within the exterior limits of 19 a "foreign state", which was a state of the Union, by the commission of an act by the state in the context of its private
 20 business ventures, which act constituted interstate commerce. The state indicated that it did not consent to the jurisdiction
 21 of the federal government, but their consent was implied by the combination of the Constitution, which is a "contract" or
 22 "compact", as well as an act falling within the Constitution for which Congress was granted exclusive authority over the 23 state by the state's own ratification of said "compact" as a member of the Union. In that sense, the Constitution creates the 24 equivalent of an "implied contract" or "quasi contract" which can be used to regulate all activities covered by the contract
 25 extraterritorially, even among parties who were unaware of the implied contract and did not explicitly or individually
 26 consent. Below is a definition of "implied contract" from Black's Law Dictionary:

27 CONTRACT. [ . . . ] An implied contract is one not created or evidenced by the explicit agreement of the 28 parties, but inferred by the law, as a matter of reason and justice from their acts or conduct, the circumstances
 29 surrounding the transaction making it a reasonable, or even a necessary, assumption that a contract existed
 30 between them by tacit understanding. Miller's Appeal, 100 Pa. 568, 45 Am.Rep. 394; Landon v. Kansas City
 31 Gas Co., C.C.A.Kan., 10 F.2d. 263, 266; Caldwell v. Missouri State Life Ins. Co., 230 S.W. 566, 568, 148 Ark.
 32 474; Cameron, to Use of Cameron, v. Eynon, 332 Pa. 529, 3 A.2d. 423, 424; American La France Fire Engine
 33 Co., to Use of American La France & Foamite Industries, v. Borough of Shenandoah, C.C.A.Pa., 115 F.2d.
 34 886, 867.

35 Implied contracts are sometimes subdivided into those "implied in fact" and those "implied in law," the former
 36 being covered by the definition just given, while the latter are obligations imposed upon a person by the law,
 37 not in pursuance of his intention and agreement, either expressed or implied, but even against his will and
 38 design, because the circumstances between the parties are such as to render it just that the me should have a
 39 right, and the other a corresponding liability, similar to those which would arise from a contract between them.
 40 This kind of obligation therefore rests on the principle that whatsoever it is certain a man ought to do that the
 41 law will suppose him to have promised to do. And hence it is said that, while the liability of a party to an
 42 express contract arises directly from the contract, it is just the reverse in the case of a contract "implied in law,"
 43 the contract there being Implied or arising from the liability. Bliss v. Hoy, 70 Vt. 534, 41 A. 1026; Kellum v.
 44 Browning's Adm'r. 231 Ky. 308. 21 S.W.2d. 459, 465. But obligations of this kind are not properly contracts at 45 all, and should not be so denominated. There can be no true contract without a mutual and concurrent intention

49 If you want to investigate the matter of federalism further, we highly recommend the following succinct summary from the 50 Liberty University, Item #2.4:

Cooperative Federalism, Gerald Brown, Ed.D.
<http://sedm.org/LibertyU/CooperativeFederalism.pdf>

51 5.4.6 The Internal Revenue Code is not Public or Positive Law, but Private Law

52 5.4.6.1 Proof that the I.R.C. is not positive law

53 You can find a list of specific titles of the U.S. Code that are positive law by examining the legislative Notes under 1 U.S.C.
 54 §204. In addition, each Title of the U.S. Code indicates whether or not it contains positive law. As an example, Title One,
 55 General provisions, starts out with:

The Great IRS Hoax: Why We Don't Owe Income Tax, version 4.54

TOP SECRET: For Official Treasury/IRS Use Only (FOUO)

Copyright Family Guardian Fellowship

1                   "This title has been made positive law by section 1 of the act of July 30, 1947, ch. 388, 61 Stat. 633, which
 2 provided in part that: 'Title 1 of the United States Code entitled 'General Provisions,' is codified and enacted
 3 into positive law and may be cited as '1 U.S.C. Sec....'"

4 Whereas Title 26 makes no statement that it is positive law. Congress just says that I.R. Codes were "enacted" and how
 5 they may be cited, but never explicitly says they are "positive law". That means they don't obligate you to anything
 6 without your explicit consent in some form. In that sense, they are "private law" and amount essentially to a contract for 7 federal employment.

8 If you trace the history of the current Internal Revenue Code, you will find that it began with the 1939 code. All revenue
 9 laws prior to the 1939 I.R.C. were repealed when the 1939 code was enacted. See Section 4 of the 1939 code, 53 Stat. 1.
 10 In addition to repealing all the previous revenue laws, the 1939 code repealed itself! You can see this for yourself by 11 viewing the 1939 code in section 4:

12 <http://www.famguardian.org/Disks/LawDVD/Federal/RevenueActs/Revenue%20Act%20of%201939.pdf>

13 There have been two major revisions of the I.R.C. since the 1939 code: 1954 and 1986. Both of these codes referred to 14 themselves simply as "amendments", but what they amended was a repealed code that was dead! If you look at the list of 15 amendments in the 1954 code, it doesn't even list the sections of the previous 1939 code that were changed, and the reason
 16 it doesn't is because it is amending a dead, inactive, and repealed code! That is why the Internal Revenue Code is not only
 17 not positive law, but is not law at all. Instead, it is a "code of repealed laws" that have no force and effect at all against 18 anyone who does not explicitly consent in some way. Consequently, any legal trials based on the Internal Revenue Code
 19 are simply religious inquisitions and not valid legal proceedings by any stretch of the imagination. We will cover this 20 startling fact in the next section to show all the similarities between a historical religious inquisition and a modern tax trial.

21 No reference to the I.R. Code being positive law either in 1 U.S.C. §204 legislative notes or in the "Title" itself confirms 22 that it is "private law" that applies to specific persons rather than "all persons generally". These specific persons are those 23 who chose to become "effectively connected" with the U.S. Government income and the only "individual" mentioned in the 24 I.R. Code is a person with the specific status of a Federal Government employee. This is confirmed, for instance, by:

- 25 1. 26 U.S.C. §6331(a), which is the ONLY person against whom levy and distraint (enforcement) may be instituted.
- 26 2. 26 U.S.C. §7343, which defines "person" for the purposes of the criminal provisions of the I.R.C. as:

27                   "...an officer or employee of a corporation, or a member or employee of a partnership, who as such officer,
 28 employee, or member is under a duty to perform the act in respect of which the violation occurs."

- 29 3. 26 U.S.C. §6671(b), which defines "person" for the purposes of the penalty provisions of the I.R.C. as:

30                   "...an officer or employee of a corporation, or a member or employee of a partnership, who as such officer,
 31 employee, or member is under a duty to perform the act in respect of which the violation occurs."

32 Incidentally, the "duty" they are talking about above is fiduciary duty as a "transferee" over federal payments. This 33 fiduciary duty is then defined in 26 U.S.C. §6903. The fiduciary duty was created when you signed up to be a "trustee" for 34 the Social Security Trust by signing and submitting SSA Form SS-5. A trustee is a person who has a fiduciary duty to the 35 Beneficiary of the trust. Your elected representatives in the District of Criminals are the beneficiary of the trust, which has 36 a domicile in the District of Columbia. See the following for exhaustive details on this scam:

37 <http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/Forms/Emancipation/SSTrustIndenture.pdf>

38 Another very important point about codes that are not "positive law" needs to be made here, which is that those codes
 39 within the U.S. code which are not "positive law", such as the Internal Revenue Code, are described simply as "prima facie
 40 evidence" of law. 1 U.S.C. §204 and the notes thereunder describe the I.R.C. as a "code" or a "title", but NEVER as a 41 "law". Below is the text of 1 U.S.C. §204 to demonstrate this:

42                   TITLE 1 > CHAPTER 3 > §204
 43                   §204. Codes and Supplements as evidence of the laws of United States and District of Columbia; citation of
 44                   Codes and Supplements

In all courts, tribunals, and public offices of the United States, at home or abroad, of the District of Columbia, and of each State, Territory, or insular possession of the United States—

(a) United States Code.—

The matter set forth in the edition of the Code of Laws of the United States current at any time shall, together with the then current supplement, if any, establish prima facie the laws of the United States, general and permanent in their nature, in force on the day preceding the commencement of the session following the last session the legislation of which is included: Provided, however, That whenever titles of such Code shall have been enacted into positive law the text thereof shall be legal evidence of the laws therein contained, in all the courts of the United States, the several States, and the Territories and insular possessions of the United States.

The term “prima facie evidence” is a fancy legal term or “word of art” that simply means “presumed to be law until rebutted with substantive evidence”. Based on our discussion of “presumption” earlier in section 2.8.2 and our detailed coverage of “due process” starting later in section 5.4.14 and following, we know that anything involving “presumption” is not only a Biblical sin under Psalm 19:12-13 and Numbers 15:30, but also is a violation of “due process”.

[New York Times v. Sullivan, 376 U.S. 254 (1964)]

“But where the conduct or fact, the existence of which is made the basis of the statutory presumption, itself falls within the scope of a provision of the Federal Constitution, a further question arises. It is apparent that a constitutional prohibition cannot be transgressed indirectly by the creation of a statutory presumption any more than it can be violated by direct enactment. The power to create presumptions is not a means of escape from constitutional restrictions. And the state may not in this way interfere with matters withdrawn from its authority by the Federal Constitution, or subject an accused to conviction for conduct which it is powerless to proscribe.”
[Bailey v. State of Alabama, 219 U.S. 219 (1911)]

“Conclusive presumptions affecting protected interests: A conclusive presumption may be defeated where its application would impair a party's constitutionally-protected liberty or property interests. In such cases, conclusive presumptions have been held to violate a party's due process and equal protection rights. Vlandis v. Kline (1973) [412 US 441, 449, 93 S.Ct. 2230, 2235; Cleveland Bd. of Ed. v. LaFleur (1974) 414 US 632, 639-640, 94 S.Ct. 1208, 1215-presumption under Illinois law that unmarried fathers are unfit violates process]”
[Federal Civil Trials and Evidence (2005), Rutter Group, paragraph 8:4993, p. 8K-34]

Under the rules of Constitutional due process, an unsubstantiated presumption of any kind cannot act as a substitute for hard physical evidence or else the Constitution has been violated. In a system of jurisprudence such as we have where people are “presumed” to be innocent until proven guilty with evidence, any “presumption” to the contrary is a violation of due process. It is a violation of due process to “assume” or “presume” that anything is “law” unless it was enacted into positive law and proof is entered on the record of same. Positive law is the only legitimate or admissible evidence that the people ever consented to the enforcement of an enactment, and without such explicit consent, no enactment is enforceable nor may it adversely affect a person's rights. Once again, the Declaration of Independence says that all just powers derive from “consent”, which implies that any compulsion by government absent consent is unjust. The only exception to this rule is the criminal laws, which could not function properly if consent of the criminal was required. “Presumption”, in fact, is the OPPOSITE of “due process”, as the definition of “due process” admits in Black's Law Dictionary:

“Due process of law. Law in its regular course of administration through courts of justice. Due process of law in each particular case means such an exercise of the powers of the government as the settled maxims of law permit and sanction, and under such safeguards for the protection of individual rights as those maxims prescribe for the class of cases to which the one in question belongs. A course of legal proceedings according to those rules and principles which have been established in our systems of jurisprudence for the enforcement and protection of private rights. To give such proceedings any validity, there must be a tribunal competent by its constitution—that is, by the law of the creation—to pass upon the subject-matter of the suit; and, if that involves merely a determination of the personal liability of the defendant, he must be brought within its jurisdiction by service of process within the state, or his voluntary appearance. Pennoyer v. Neff, 95 U.S. 714, 24 L.Ed. 565. Due process of law implies the right of the person affected thereby to be present before the tribunal which pronounces judgment upon the question of life, liberty, or property, in its most comprehensive sense; to be heard, by testimony or otherwise, and to have the right of controverting, by proof, every material fact which bears on the question of right in the matter involved. If any question of fact or liability be conclusively be presumed [rather than proven] against him, this is not due process of law.

[Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 500; Emphasis added]

How do we rebut the false “presumption” that the Internal Revenue Code is law using admissible evidence? One way to rebut the fact that the Internal Revenue Code is “law” is to present section 4 of the 1939 Internal Revenue Code itself, located in 53 Stat. 1, and show that the code repealed all prior revenue laws as well as itself, and therefore is unenforceable. You can also present the legislative notes for 1 U.S.C. §204 to show that it is not “law” or “positive law”, but is “presumed to be law”. Since all presumption which prejudices Constitutional rights is a violation of due process, then the code cannot be used as a substitute for real positive law evidence. The only reason this wouldn't work in a court of law is because a tyrant judge with a conflict of interest (in violation of 18 U.S.C. §208 and 28 U.S.C. §455) who is subject to IRS extortion won't allow such evidence to be admitted at trial because it is too likely to reduce his federal retirement benefits. However, if we put the evidence in our IRS administrative record BEFORE the trial by attaching it to the certified mail correspondence we send them, and keep the original correspondence and the notarized proof that we mailed it, then the corrupt judge can no longer keep it out of evidence and may not grant a motion “in limine” by the Department of Injustice to exclude it as evidence at trial. Our administrative record with the IRS is ALWAYS admissible as evidence.

The authority of the IRS is limited to seeing that a proper “return” (kickback) of U.S. Government property (income) is made by Federal Government “employees” and fiduciaries (Trustees) in the name of “tax”. The tax is actually corporate profit that is kicked back to the mother corporation, which is defined as the “United States” in 28 U.S.C. §3002(15)(A). When IRS employees act upon property not within the authority given them by the I.R. Code, they are NOT acting in behalf of the U.S. government and must personally accept the consequences of their illegal actions.

IRS employees and government welfare recipients such as tax attorneys have invented a number of specious and false arguments relating to the fact that the I.R.C. is not “positive law”. They will try to exploit your legal ignorance in order to deceive you into thinking that it IS positive law by any one of the following statements. We observed these false statements being made by Mr. Rookyard (http://www.geocities.com/b\_rookard/) as we debated him on the Sui Juris Forums (<http://suijuris.net>). We used the information below to “checkmate” him on each of these issues and thereby exposed his fraud to the large audience there. We have cataloged each false statement and provided a rebuttal you can use against it:

1. FALSE STATEMENT #1: “Everything in the Statutes at Large is ‘positive law’. The IRC was published in the Statutes at Large. Therefore, the I.R.C. MUST be positive law.”
2. REBUTTAL TO FALSE STATEMENT #1: Not everything in the Statutes at Large is “positive law”, in fact. Both the current Social Security Act and the current Internal Revenue Code (the 1986 code) were published in the Statutes at Large and 1 U.S.C. §204 legislative notes indicate that NEITHER Title 26 (the I.R.C.) nor Title 42 (the Social Security Act) of the U.S. Code are “positive law”. Therefore, this is simply a false statement. If you would like to see the evidence for yourself, here it is:
  - 2.1. 1 U.S.C. §204 Legislative Notes: http://assembler.law.cornell.edu/uscode/html/uscode01/usc\_sec\_01\_00000204---000-.html
  - 2.2. 1986 Internal Revenue Code, 100 Stat 2085: <http://www.famguardian.org/Disks/LawDVD/Federal/RevenueActs/Revenue%20Act%20of%201986.pdf>
  - 2.3. Current Social Security Act: http://www.ssa.gov/OP\_Home/ssact/comp-toc.htm
3. FALSE STATEMENT #2: “The Statutes at Large, 53 Stat. 1, say the 1939 Internal Revenue Code was ‘enacted’. Anything that is ‘enacted’ is ‘law’. Therefore, the 1939 I.R.C. and all subsequent versions of it MUST be positive law.”
4. REBUTTAL TO FALSE STATEMENT #2: A repeal of a statute can be enacted, and it produces no new “law”. Seeing the word “enacted” in the Statutes of Law does not therefore necessarily imply that new “law” was created. In fact, you can go over both the current version of 1 U.S.C. §204 legislative notes and all of its predecessors all the way back to 1939 and you will not find a single instance where the Internal Revenue Code has ever been identified as “positive law”. If you think we are wrong, then show us the proof or shut your presumptuous and deceitful mouth.
5. FALSE STATEMENT #3: “The Internal Revenue Code does not need to be ‘positive law’ in order to be enforceable. Federal courts and the I.R.S. call it ‘law’ so it must be ‘law’.”
6. REBUTTAL TO FALSE STATEMENT #3: The federal courts are a foreign jurisdiction with respect to a state national domiciled in his state on land not subject to exclusive federal jurisdiction under Article 1, Section 8, Clause 17 and who has no contracts or fiduciary relationships with the federal government. This is covered extensively in the Tax Fraud Prevention Manual, Form #06.008, Chapter 7. Your statement represents an abuse of caselaw for political rather than legal purposes as a way to deceive people. Even the IRS’ own Internal Revenue Manual (I.R.M.), Section

4.10.7.2.9.8 says that cases below the Supreme Court may not be cited to sustain a position. Furthermore, if you read the cases to which you are referring, you will find out that the party they were talking about was a “taxpayer”. Because the Internal Revenue Code has no liability statute under Subtitle A, then the only way a person can become a “taxpayer” is by consenting to abide by the Code. If he consented, then the code becomes “law” for him. This is why even the U.S. Supreme Court itself refers to the income tax as “voluntary” in Flora v. United States, 362 U.S. 145 (1960). Consent is the ONLY thing that can produce “law”, as we covered in previous sections. The I.R.C. is private law, special law, and contract law that only applies to those who explicitly consent by signing a contract vehicle, such as a W-4, an SS-5, or a 1040. Since all of these forms produce an obligation, then all of them are contracts. The obligation cannot exist without signing them, nor can the IRS lawfully or unilaterally assess a person on a 1040 form under 26 U.S.C. §6020(b) who does not first consent. See section 5.3.1 earlier for details on this scam.

5.4.6.2 The “Tax Code” is a state-sponsored Religion, not a “law”

“Preach the Word; be prepared in season and out of season [by diligent study of this book and God’s Word]; correct, rebuke and encourage—with great patience and careful instruction. For the time will come when men [in the legal profession or the judiciary] will not put up with sound [legal] doctrine [such as that found in this book]. Instead, to suit their own desires, they [our covetous public dis-servants] will gather around them a great number of teachers [court-appointed “experts”, “licensed” government whores called attorneys and CPA’s, and educators in government-run or subsidized public schools and liberal universities] to say what their itching ears want to hear. They will turn their ears away from the truth and turn aside to [government and legal-profession] myths[ and fables]. But you [the chosen of God and His servants must], keep your head in all situations, endure hardship, do the work of an evangelist, discharge all the duties of your [God’s] ministry.”
 [2 Tim. 4:2-5, Bible, NKJV]

As a consequence of the considerations in the previous section about the requirement for “positive law”, one may safely conclude the following with regard to the Internal Revenue “Code”:

1. The Internal Revenue Code is not positive law, and therefore imposes no obligation upon anyone except federal “public officers”, agents, and contractors and those who consented (called “elected” in IRS publications) to be treated as one of these, even if they in fact are not. Instead, it is “special law”, which applies to particular persons and things and not to all people generally throughout the country. Personal consent is required to give the I.R.C. the status of enforceable law, and we can choose to withhold our consent with no adverse legal consequence.
2. The I.R.C. effectively amounts to an offer and a proposal by the government to put you under their “special protection” from the abuses and tyranny of the IRS. If you accept their offer, you are a party to a private contract with them and are in receipt of taxable federal privileges. The privilege you agreed to accept was that of being left alone and not harassed by the IRS for your decision to keep or retain whatever money and property is left over after the Federal Mafia has raped and pillaged their share from your estate.
3. Every contract requires four things to be valid:
  - 3.1. An offer: The Internal Revenue Code.
  - 3.2. Informed and voluntary Consent/Acceptance. Both parties must voluntarily accept the terms of the offer and duress may not be used to procure consent.
  - 3.3. Mutual Consideration: Something valuable that both parties receive from the agreement.
  - 3.4. Mutual assent. Both parties were fully informed about the rights they were surrendering and the consideration they were receiving in return, and all terms of the contract were fully disclosed in writing.
4. In the case of the voluntary contract called the Internal Revenue Code, the consideration is the right to be left alone after you pay the IRS a large bribe and that essentially amounts to “protection money”. Keeping whatever is left over after you bribe them and pay them their extortion is the consideration you derive from this private contract. This is not, however, true consideration, mind you, because it is not an exercise of free will. Instead, if you don’t accept the contract, then you become the target of IRS harassment and terrorism, may lose your job (especially your federal job) and be persecuted by your coworkers for being a “crackpot”. Voluntary consent is impossible under such conditions. Therefore, it is impossible for you to agree to such a legal contract, which is why the government never bothers to disclose it to begin with!
5. The contract is also void on its face because it was not based on informed consent. The IRS and the government never fully disclosed to you the terms of their “invisible adhesion contract”, and chances are you never even read any part of the contract by reading Title 26 for yourself. As a matter of fact, they have exercised every opportunity available to stifle and persecute those freedom advocates who were trying to educate others about the nature of this contract. Consequently, like the marriage license you never should have gotten, you signed away your whole life and all your rights by filing your first 1040 or IRS Form W-4 and thereby declaring yourself to be a “taxpayer” under penalty of perjury.

[Brady v. U.S., 397 U.S. 742 (1970)]

[Brookhart v. Janis, 384 U.S. 1; 86 S.Ct. 1245; 16 L.Ed.2d. 314 (1966)]

6. The decision to accept the terms of the I.R.C. contract also involved fraud on the part of the government. The employees of the IRS who directly or indirectly influenced you to make the decision to accept the contract also never fully disclosed to you that they had no authority to enforce the Internal Revenue Code to begin with. If they never had authority to enforce the I.R.C. against a private citizen who is not employed by the federal government, then they couldn't offer to stop doing that which they were never authorized to do to begin with! Therefore, they deceived you to believe that they really were giving you something of value (a “benefit” or “consideration”) that they had the legal authority to provide, which is the absence of lawful enforcement actions directed against you. In effect, they convinced you to pay for something that they didn't have the legal authority to provide to begin with! It's all based on fraud.

Unquestionably, the concealment of material facts that one is, under the circumstances, bound to disclose may constitute actionable fraud. 3 Indeed, one of the fundamental tenets of the Anglo-American law of fraud is that fraud may be committed by a suppression of the truth (suppressio veri) as well as by the suggestion of falsehood (suggestio falsi). 4 It is, therefore, equally competent for a court to relieve against fraud whether it is committed by suppression of the truth—that is, by concealment—or by suggestion of falsehood. 5

Where failure to disclose a material fact is calculated to induce a false belief, the distinction between concealment and affirmative misrepresentation is tenuous. Both are fraudulent. 11 An active concealment has the same force and effect as a representation which is positive in form. 12 The one acts negatively, the other positively; both are calculated, in different ways, to produce the same result. 13 The former, as well as the latter, is a violation of the principles of good faith. It proceeds from the same motives and is attended with the same consequences; 14 and the deception and injury may be as great in the one case as in the other.
[37 American Jurisprudence 2d, Fraud and Deceit, §144 (1999)]

“Fraud vitiates every transaction and all contracts. Indeed, the principle is often stated, in broad and sweeping language, that fraud destroys the validity of everything into which it enters, and that it vitiates the most solemn contracts, documents, and even judgments. 8 Fraud, as it is sometimes said, vitiates every act, which statement embodies a thoroughly sound doctrine when it is properly applied to the subject matter in controversy and to the parties thereto and in a proper forum. As a general rule, fraud will vitiate a contract notwithstanding that it contains a provision to the effect that no representations have been made as an inducement to enter into it, or that either party shall be bound by any representation not contained therein, or a similar provision attempting to nullify extraneous representations. Such provisions do not, in most jurisdictions, preclude a charge of fraud based on oral representations.”
[37 American Jurisprudence 2d, Fraud and Deceit, §144 (1999)]

Since the people domiciled in the states never enacted the Internal Revenue Code into “positive law”, then they as the “sovereigns” in our system of government never consented to enforce it upon themselves collectively. “Positive law” is the only evidence that the people ever explicitly consented to enforcement actions by their government, because legislation can only become positive law by a majority of the representatives of the sovereign people voting (consenting) to enact the law. Since the people never consented, then the “code” cannot be enforced against the general public. The Declaration of Independence says that all just powers of government derive from the “consent” of the governed. Anything not consensual is, ipso facto, unjust by implication. In fact, the sovereign People REPEALED, not ENACTED the Internal Revenue Code. It has been nothing but a repealed law since 1939, in fact. An examination of the Statutes at Large, 53 Stat. 1, Section 4, reveals that the Internal Revenue Code and all prior revenue laws were REPEALED. See:

1 Even state legislatures recognize that the Internal Revenue Code is not law. Below is a cite from the Oregon Revised

18 If the Internal Revenue Code is not “positive law”, but a voluntary contract, then what exactly is it? It is a de facto state-
 19 sponsored Federal/Political Religion. Below is how one Christian Writer describes this state-sponsored de facto religion:

20 “There is a war on. Since 1975, hundreds of thousands of Christians in the United States have become aware 21 of the threat to Christianity posed by humanism. It is amazing how long it took for Christians to recognize that 22 humanism is a rival religion: about a century.”
 23 [75 Bible Questions Your Instructors Pray You Won't Ask, Gary North, copyright 1984, 1988, ISBN 0-930462-
 24 03-3, p. 1]

25 You can read the above free book yourself on our website at:

26 <http://famguardian.org/Subjects/Spirituality/Articles/75BibleQuestions.pdf>

27 The Internal Revenue Code is “de facto” because there is no positive law passed by Congress that actually implements it.
 28 Only those who consent to follow it can have any legal obligation to follow it, because it prescribes no legal duties upon
 29 anyone but federal “employees”, contractors, agencies, and benefit recipients. Its existence outside of the federal
 30 workplace, such as in the lives of private Americans living or working in the states of the Union, was created and continues
 31 to be maintained by constructive fraud using “judge-made law”, which is de facto law put in place by the edicts of covetous
 32 criminals sitting on the federal bench. This type of law can only exist as long as there are guns and prisons in the hands of 33 government thieves and idolaters, but as soon as the unlawful duress stops, so does the “[in]voluntary compliance”, as the 34 government likes to call it. Remember what the First Amendment says?:

35 “Congress shall make no law respecting the establishment of religion or prohibiting the free exercise thereof.”
 36 [First Amendment]

37 The First Amendment doesn't say anything at all about “judges making law”, so that is exactly what our corrupted state and 38 federal judiciaries have done! A religion is simply a “voluntary” association of people who espouse certain common
 39 beliefs and behaviors, the object of which is to reverence or hold in high esteem a “superior being”. If that superior being is 40 anything but the true living God mentioned in the Bible, then we are involved in pagan idol worship.

41 “Religion. Man's relation to Divinity, to reverence, worship, obedience, and submission to mandates and
 42 precepts of supernatural or superior beings. In its broadest sense includes all forms of belief in the existence of
 43 superior beings exercising power over human beings by volition, imposing rules of conduct, with future rewards
 44 and punishments. Bond uniting man to God, and a virtue whose purpose is to render God worship due him as
 45 source of all being and principle of all government of things. Nikulnikoff v. Archbishop, etc., of Russian
 46 Orthodox Greek Catholic Church, 142 Misc. 894, 255 N.Y.S. 653, 663.”
 47 [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1292, emphasis added]

1 Our society is based on “equal protection of the laws” (see section 4.3.2 earlier), so there simply can't be any “superior
2 beings” in America, but the judiciary has changed all that with “judge made law” so that judges become the object of idol
3 worship. We call this “neo-religion” or state-sponsored pagan federal religion “The Civil Religion of Socialism”. This 4 religion is thoroughly described in detail in the free pamphlet below:

Socialism: The New American Civil Religion, Form #05.016
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

5 Unlike Christianity, the foundation of this state-sponsored judicial religion is fear, not love. This state religion of
6 humanism and socialism is based entirely on “the power to destroy”, which is why it produces fear and why people comply
7 at all. In that sense, it is Satanic and evil. The only basis for a righteous justice system is “the power to create” and not the 8 “power to destroy”, as we pointed out at the beginning of this chapter in section 5.1.1.

9 “The great principle is this: because the constitution will not permit a state to destroy, it will not permit a law
10 involving the power to destroy. [ . . . ] They decided against the tax; because the subject had been placed
11 beyond the power of the states, by the constitution. They decided, not on account of the subject, but on 12 account of the power that protected it; they decided that a prohibition against destruction was a prohibition
13 against a law involving the power of destruction.”
14 [Providence Bank v. Billings, 29 U.S. 514 (1830)]

15 The “law” described above that is doing the destruction to our society presently is “judge made law”, and not statutes
16 passed by Congress. The superior being that is being worshipped in this false religion is “The Beast”, mentioned in the 17 book of Revelation chapters 17 and 18 in the Bible. That book describes “The Beast” as the political rulers (politicians, 18 Congressmen, Judges, and the President) of the earth. The worship and servitude of this “Beast” occurs mostly out of fear
19 but also because of ignorance and laziness, as we showed earlier in section 4.3.10.

20 “And I saw the beast, the kings [political rulers] of the earth, and their armies [of nonbelievers under a 21 democratic form of government], gathered together to make war against Him [God] who sat on the horse and 22 against His army.”
23 [Revelation 19:19, Bible, NKJV]

24 Those who took the mark of this “Beast”, the Socialist Security Number, will be the first to be judged and condemned by 25 God, as described in Revelation 16:1-2. See our book as follows available for free downloading at:

Social Security: Mark of the Beast, Steven Miller
<http://famguardian.org/Publications/SocialSecurity/TOC.htm>

26 This Beast is personified by the corruption evident in the political realm and the Federal and state Judiciaries in their
27 treasonous and illegal enforcement of our revenue codes (not “laws”, but “codes”). The judges in courts everywhere have
28 become the “Priests” of this pagan neo-religion, and by virtue of the fact that they are ignoring the federal and state
29 Constitutions and are not being held accountable for such Treason, everything that comes out of their mouth becomes law,
30 or “common law” or “judge-made law”:

31 “Judge-made law. A phrase used to indicate judicial decisions which construe away the meaning of statutes,
32 or find meanings in them the legislature never intended. It is perhaps more commonly used as meaning, simply,
33 the law established by judicial precedent and decisions. Laws having their source in judicial decisions as 34 opposed to laws having their source in statutes or administrative regulations.”
35 [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 841]

36 This “judge-made law” has created a new, “de facto” government that is in complete conflict with the “de jure” government
37 described by our federal and state Constitutions and the public acts that implement them. We show this process of 38 corruption graphically later on in section 6.1, where we show the history of how the Executive, Legislative, and Judicial
39 branches have conspired over the last 100 years to strip us of our Constitutional rights and thereby make us into tax slaves
40 residing on the “federal plantation” called the federal zone. Only a pagan “god” called a “judge” can create law out of 41 nothing and without explicit consent of the people found in the Constitution. Only a pagan “god” called a “judge” can 42 deprive the people of “equal protection” by protecting IRS wrongdoers while coercing those who refuse to consent to their 43 abuses. Only a pagan “god” can create man-made “law” which conflicts with the Ten Commandments and the Constitution
44 and do so with impunity.

1 “...it must be recognized that in any culture the source of law is the god of that society. If law has its source
 2 in man's reason, then reason is the god of that society. If the source is an oligarchy, or in a court, senate, or 3 ruler, then that source is the god of that system.

4 [. . .]

5 Modern humanism, the religion of the state, locates law in the state and thus makes the state, or the people as
 6 they find expression in the state, the god of the system. As Mao Tse-Tung has said, "Our God is none other than 7 the masses of the Chinese people." [2] In Western culture, law has steadily moved away from God to the people
 8 (or the state) as its source, although the historic power and vitality of the West has been in Biblical faith and 9 law.

10 "Third, in any society, any change of law is an explicit or implicit change of religion. Nothing more clearly
 11 reveals, in fact, the religious change in a society than a legal revolution. When the legal foundations shift from 12 Biblical law to humanism, it means that the society now draws its vitality and power from humanism, not from 13 Christian theism.

14 "Fourth, no disestablishment of religion as such is possible in any society. A church can be disestablished, and
 15 a particular religion can be supplanted by another, but the change is simply to another religion. Since the 16 foundations of law are inescapably religious, no society exists without a religious foundation or without a law-
 17 system which codifies the morality of its religion."
 18 [The Institutes of Biblical Law. Rousas John Rushdoony, 1973, pp. 4-5]

19 The purpose of the “Civil Religion of Socialism” is to steal the sovereignty of the People and to replace it with a 20 dictatorship and a totalitarian police state devoid of individual rights. This is accomplished through “judge-made law” and 21 social engineering in the tax “code”. The result is that the people comply out of their desire to take the path of least 22 resistance which minimizes fear and personal liability. The Internal Revenue Code is just such a voluntary federal religion.
 23 When we join this feudal religion and figuratively move our “domicile” and our primary political “allegiance” to the federal
 24 plantation under 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10), 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(39) and 26 U.S.C. §7408(d). By doing so, we 25 surrender our sovereignty, turn it over to the Congress, and become “subjects” who live on the “federal plantation” (federal 26 zone), which we call the “matrix”. To join such a state-sponsored religion, we need only lie about our status as federal 27 “employees” on either a W-4 or submit a 1040 form with a nonzero liability. Once we shift our primary allegiance from 28 God to the “state”, Congress becomes our new “king” because they can pass any statute and it will apply to us, including
 29 those statutes that are not “positive law”, and they can disregard the need for implementing regulations because they don’t
 30 need implementing regulations for federal “employees”. The benefits of this religion are that we are insulated from 31 responsibility for ourselves and from fear of the IRS or the government. Acceptance of this religion represents a formal and 32 complete transfer of sovereignty over your person, labor and property from you to your public “dis-servants”. You turn
 33 over responsibility for yourself to the government in exchange for them taking care of you when you get old or 34 unemployed. You become federal property: a slave, in effect, through the operation of a voluntary contract called the 35 Internal Revenue Code. This, friends, is nothing short of idolatry, in stark violation of the First Commandment in the Ten
 36 commandments (see Exodus 20 in the Bible) to not have any other idols before God. We are supposed to trust God, not 37 government, to provide for us. Trusting government is putting the vanity of man ahead of the grace and majesty and 38 sovereignty of God.

39 "It is better to trust the Lord
 40 Than to put confidence in man.
 41 It is better to trust in the Lord
 42 Than to put confidence in princes [or government, or the 'state']."
 43 [Psalm 118:8-9]

44 Such man-centric (rather than God-centric) idolatry is the worst of all sins described in the Bible, and a sin for which God
 45 repeatedly and violently killed those who committed it. Refer to sections 4.1 and 4.3.1 through 4.3.13 for an in-depth
 46 exposition backing up these conclusions. This type of idolatry describes the original sin of Lucifer, who wanted to do it
 47 “his [man’s] way” instead of God’s way.<sup>41</sup> God pronounced a death sentence upon us for the original sin of Adam and Eve,
 48 and He said life would be a struggle as a consequence of this death sentence meted out under His sovereign Law.

49 "Cursed is the ground for your sake;
 50 In toil you shall eat of it
 51 All the days of your life.
 52 Both thorns and thistles it shall bring forth for you,

1                   And you shall eat the herb of the field.
2                   In the sweat of your face you shall eat bread
3                   Till you return to the ground,
4                   For out of it you were taken;
5                   For dust you are,
6                   And to dust you shall return."
7                   [Genesis 3:17-19, Bible, NKJV]

8       Ever since the original fall described above, we have been trying to escape God's sovereign judgment and punishment for 9       our sin by escaping liability for ourselves and accountability to Him. We have been doing this by making an atheistic
10      government into our false god, parent, caretaker, and social insurance company. The purpose of law within a society based 11      on this "Civil Religion of Socialism" is to facilitate irresponsibility and thereby undermine God's sovereignty by interfering
12      with the curse He put on us for our original sin and disobedience against His sovereign command. We talked about this
13      much more thoroughly earlier in section 4.3.10, entitled "The Unlimited Liability Universe" if you would like to investigate
14      further. In so doing, we fornicate with the Beast, which is the political rulers of the world. Black's Law Dictionary defines 15      "commerce" as "intercourse".

16                   "Commerce. ...Intercourse by way of trade and traffic between different peoples or states and the 17                   citizens or inhabitants thereof, including not only the purchase, sale, and exchange of commodities, but also the
18                   instrumentalities [governments] and agencies by which it is promoted and the means and appliances by which it
19                   is carried on..."
20                   [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 269]

21      When we, as natural persons, send our money to the government or receive money from the government, we are involved in
22      "intercourse". The Bible in Isaiah 54:5-6 describes God as the "husband" of believers and it describes believers as His 23      "bride". We as His bride are committing adultery and fornication when we conduct "commerce" with the government as 24      private individuals. See section 4.3.1 earlier for a complete explanation of this analogy that is quite frightening and 25      completely fulfills the prophesy found in the book of Revelation in the Bible.

26      Now that we have established that the "Tax Code" is in fact a state sponsored religion, we will now document the core
27      "beliefs" that make up this false religion. We will also show why every one of these beliefs not only cannot be
28      substantiated with facts or law, but also that the opposite can be established with admissible evidence, scientifically
29      provable facts, and law. This comparison and analysis builds upon our earlier article in section 4.3.13 entitled "Our 30      Government has become Idolatry and a False Religion", where we proved that our government has become a god, and that
31      this was done essentially by destroying the "equal protection of the laws" that is the foundation of freedom in this country,
32      and thereby making the public servants into gods because they do not have to abide by the same rules as everyone else 33      does.

1 Table 5-33: Comparison of Political Religion v. Christianity

Belief	The false belief of "cult members"	The truth	Proof of the truth found in which section of this book
View of government	Government does good things for people and would never do bad things.	People working in government are human, make mistakes, and in the context of money, have been known to lie, deceive, and persecute those who insist on a law-abiding revenue collection system.	4.3.1, 4.3.2, 4.3.12
Purpose of government	Minimize risk and personal responsibility. Promote good. Decriminalize sinful behaviors. Act as a big parent for everyone.	To keep people from hurting each other and leave all other subjects at the discretion of the people.	4.3.1, 4.3.4
View of freedom in this country	Declaration of Independence says all just powers are based on the "consent of the governed". I am free because no one forces me to do anything.	Americans are not free because taxes on labor are slavery in violation of the Thirteenth Amendment. The IRS collects without the authority of law or the explicit consent of the people. Consent is required and therefore the IRS is a terrorist organization because it ignores the requirement for consent. If you want to find out how "free" you are, then just	5.4.1 to 5.4.6.4
Citizenship	Everyone born in America is a statutory "U.S. citizen" under federal law and under 8 U.S.C. §1401	People born in states of the Union and not on federal property are "citizens of the United States" under Section 1 of the Fourteenth Amendment but do not come under the jurisdiction of nearly all federal laws, including 8 U.S.C. §1401.	4.11 to 4.11.12
Meaning of the word "tax"	"Taxes" are money we pay the government to be spent however the democratic majority decides they want to spend it	The power of the government cannot be used for wealth redistribution, because this would be legalized theft, and theft is a sin and a crime, no matter who does it	5.1.2.
Federal jurisdiction	The federal government has unlimited jurisdiction within states	The federal government only has delegated authority within states of the Union that derives directly from the Constitution. This authority is limited exclusively to mail fraud, counterfeiting, treason, and slavery. All other subject matters come under the exclusive police powers of the states.	5.2 to 5.1.11

View of American justice system	Our justice system is fair and lawful. There is no conflict of interest anywhere.	Conflict of interest occurs every day all day in federal courtrooms. It is a conflict of interest in violation of 18 U.S.C. §208 for any judge or jurist to hear a case in which they have a financial interest, and yet federal judges and jurors routinely participate in tax trials while at the same time either being "taxpayers" who are jealous of the accused for not paying his "fair share", or they are in receipt of socialist benefits derived from other people who participate in the IRS scam. This scam started in 1918, which was the first year that federal judges were made into "taxpayers" and subject to IRS extortion. As long as a federal judge risks an audit by IRS for not helping them prosecute tax resisters, justice is impossible in any courtroom. As long as attorneys are licensed by the government, it is impossible to get impartial representation in a court either. Attorney licensing started about the same time as judges became "taxpayers", during the 1930's in this country.	6.9 to 6.9.12
Nature of IRS publications	The IRS and the government tell the truth in the IRS publications and in their phone support.	The IRS publications are deceptive because they omit the most important parts of the truth.	3.19
Federal judges	Federal judges are honorable men who have no conflict of interest when hearing tax trials.	Since federal judges were put on the income tax rolls starting in 1918 and put under IRS terrorism, there has been no justice in the federal courtroom in the context of income taxes since then.	See: http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/Forms/Discovery/Deposition/WhyCourtsCantAddressQuestions.htm
Purpose of law	To promote good and public policy	To punish harm and leave all other subjects at the discretion of the individual.	3.3 to 3.6
IRS authority	IRS has legal authority to enforce the income tax, including assessments, penalties, and require people to keep records.	The Internal Revenue Code is not positive law, but special law. The entire title was never enacted into positive law (see 1 U.S.C. §204 legislative notes) and can't be, because abuse of the government's taxing power to accomplish theft can never be made into law. The I.R.C. was repealed in 1939 and now essentially amounts to a state-sponsored federal religion which is by the federal judiciary using "malicious abuse of legal process".	5.4.15 to 5.4.18, Chapter 7
Requirement to pay taxes	Everyone should pay their "fair share". This is a political, not legal requirement., which makes it a religion, not a law.	"Fair share" is determined by law, and we don't have a law. The Internal Revenue Code, which is not law, also has no enforcement regulations so that even if it was law, it could not be enforced by the IRS. Therefore, there is no requirement for the average American to pay anything under the Internal Revenue Code.	5.1.2, 5.4.1 to 5.4.6.4, 5.6 to 5.6.21

Requirement to file a return	Everyone, and especially patriotic "U.S. citizens", must file a return	There must be a legal "liability" existing in a positive law federal statute that applies to American in the states before there is a liability to file a return. No such statutes, nor regulations that implement them, exist. All prosecutions for willful failure to file amount to "malicious abuse of legal process" and "terrorism" by government judges and prosecutors in the absence of positive law.	5.5 to 5.5.10
Relationship between religious belief and government	God comes first in my life as a Christian.	God comes second in the lives of those who pay federal taxes, because the government gets the "first fruits" before God gets His, in violation of Prov. 3:9-10. This is idolatry in violation of the first four commandments.	4.1, 4.3.3 to 4.3.15
View of my church's relationship to the government	My pastor is neutral and objective in his view of government, and is under no duress at all by the government.	Most pastors are extensions of the government because they are privileged under 26 U.S.C. §501(c)(3). With this privileged status comes an obligation to not speak out against the government or corruption in the government, for fear of losing tax exempt status that was never really needed anyway because the federal government had no jurisdiction over them to begin with. There is no separation of church and state as long as IRS is able to abuse its power to persecute churches who expose their illegal activities by pulling their I.R.C. §501(c)(3) status and subjecting them to audits and harassment.	4.3.6 to 4.3.13

1 One of the things you hear church pastors talk about quite often is how Satan is the great imitator. Satan imitates God's
2 design for everything. Satan, in fact, is quoted as saying:

3 *"I will ascend into heaven,
4 I will exalt my throne above the stars of God;
5 I will also sit on the mount of the congregation
6 On the farthest sides of the north;
7 I will ascend above the heights of the clouds,
8 I will be like the Most High.
9 [Isaiah 14:13-14, Bible, NKJV]*

10 The Bible also says that Satan is in control of this world and the governments of the world. See Matt. 4:8-11, John 14:30-
11 31. Our tax system, in fact, is an imitation of God's design for the church and has all the trappings of a church. Going 12 back to our definition of "religion" once again to prove this:

13 *"Religion. Man's relation to Divinity, to reverence, worship, obedience, and submission to mandates and
14 precepts of supernatural or superior beings. In its broadest sense includes all forms of belief in the existence of
15 superior beings exercising power over human beings by volition, imposing rules of conduct, with future rewards
16 and punishments. Bond uniting man to God, and a virtue whose purpose is to render God worship due him as
17 source of all being and principle of all government of things. Nikulnikoff v. Archbishop, etc., of Russian
18 Orthodox Greek Catholic Church, 142 Misc. 894, 255 N.Y.S. 653, 663."
19 [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1292]*

20 Based on the criteria in the above table, we can see that the Internal Revenue Code has all the essential characteristics of a
21 "religion" and a church and thereby imitates God's design:

- 22 1. "Belief" in a superior being, which is the federal judge and our public "servants". This reversal of roles, whereby the 23 public "servants" become the ruling class is called a "dulocracy" in law.

24 *"Dulocracy. A government where servants and slaves have so much license and privilege that they domineer."
25 [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 501]*

- 26 2. The capitol, Washington D.C., is the "political temple" or headquarters of this false religious cult. Don't believe us?
27 During the Congressional debates of the Sixteenth Amendment in 1909, one Congressman amazingly admitted as 28 much. The Sixteenth Amendment is the income tax amendment that was later fraudulently ratified in 1913. Notice the 29 use of the words "civic temple" and "faith" in his statement, which are no accident.

30 *"Now, Mr. Speaker, this Capitol is the civic temple of the people, and we are here by direction of the people to
31 reduce the tariff tax and enact a law in the interest of all the people. This was the expressed will of the people
32 at the polls, and you promised to carry out that will, but you have not kept faith with the American people."
33 [44 Cong.Rec. 4420, July 12, 1909; Congressman Heflin talking about the enactment of the Sixteenth
34 Amendment]*

35 If you want to read the above amazing admission for yourself, visit our website at:

36 <http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/History/Congress/1909-16thAmendCongrRecord.pdf>

- 37 3. This false and evil religion meets all the criteria for being described as a "cult", because:
  - 38 3.1. The cult imposes strict rules of conduct that are thousands of pages long and which are far more restrictive than 39 any other religious cult.
  - 40 3.2. Participating in it is harmful to our rights, liberty, and property.
  - 41 3.3. The "cult" is perpetuated by keeping the truth secret from its members. This book contains 1,900 pages of secrets
42 that our public servants and the federal judiciary have done their best to keep cleverly hidden and obscured from 43 public view and discourse. When these secrets come out in federal courtrooms, the judges make the case
44 unpublished so the American people can't learn the truth about the misdeeds of their servants in government.
45 Don't believe us? Read the proof for yourself:
46 <http://www.nonpublication.com/>
  - 47 3.4. Those who try to abandon this harmful cult are threatened and harassed illegally and unconstitutionally by 48 covetous public dis-servants. For an example, see:
49 <http://www.irs.gov/compliance/enforcement/article/0,,id=119332,00.html>
- 50 4. No scientifically proven basis for belief. False belief is entirely based on false presumption, which in turn is promoted 51 by:

- 4.1. "Prima facie" law such as the Internal Revenue Code. "Prima facie" means "presumed to be law".
- 4.2. Propaganda and "brainwashing" by the media and public schools and cannot stand public scrutiny or scientific investigation because it cannot be substantiated.
- 4.3. Deceptive IRS publications that don't tell the whole truth. See section 3.19 earlier for proof.
5. The false government "god" is the "source of all being and principle of all government". Those who refuse to comply are illegally stripped of their property rights, their security, and their government employment by a lawless federal judiciary in retaliation for demanding the rule of written positive law. They cease to have a commercial existence or "being" as a punishment for demanding the "rule of law" instead of "rule of men" in our country. Their credit rating is destroyed and their property is illegally confiscated as punishment for failure to comply with the whims, wishes, and edicts of an "imperial judiciary" and its henchmen, the IRS.
6. The false religion has its own "bible", which is all 9,500 pages of the "Infernal (Satanic) Revenue Code". This "scripture" or "bible" was written by the false prophets, who are our political leaders in Congress. It was written to further their own political (church) ends. Former Treasury Secretary Paul O'Neil calls the I.R.C.:

"9,500 pages of gibberish."

7. Federal courtrooms are where "worship services" are held for the cult. Even the seats are the same as church pews! This worship service amounts to devil worship, because its purpose is to help criminals working for the government to enforce in a federal courtroom that which is neither law nor which can be proven to create any obligation on the part of anyone. In that sense, we are participating in Treason against the Constitution by aiding and abetting it. By subsidizing this madness and fraud, we are also bribing public officials in violation of 18 U.S.C. §201.
- 7.1. Worship services begin with a religious event.
- 7.1.1. The taking of an oath is a religious event.

To swear is to call God to witness, and is an act of religion. 3 Co. Inst. 165. Vide 3 Bouv. Inst. n. 3180, note; 1 Benth. Rat. of Jud. Ev. 376, 371, note.

[Bouvier's Maxims of Law, 1856;

SOURCE: <http://famguardian.org/Publications/BouvierMaximsOfLaw/BouviereMaxims.htm>]

- 7.1.2. Before the worship services begin, observers and the jury must stand up when the judge enters the room. This too is an act of "worshipping and reverencing" their superior being, who in fact is a pagan deity.

Religion. Man's relation to Divinity, to reverence, worship, obedience, and submission to mandates and precepts of supernatural or superior beings [JUDGES, in this case]. In its broadest sense includes all forms of belief in the existence of superior beings exercising power over human beings by volition, imposing rules of conduct, with future rewards and punishments. Bond uniting man to God, and a virtue whose purpose is to render God worship due him as source of all being and principle of all government of things. Nikulnikoff v. Archbishop, etc., of Russian Orthodox Greek Catholic Church, 142 Misc. 894, 255 N.Y.S. 653, 663. [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1292]

- 7.2. The worship ceremony, at least in the context of taxes, is conducted in the figurative dark, like a séance. The Bible describes Truth as "light". Any ceremony where the entire truth is not considered is conducted in the dark.
- 7.2.1. The judge is gagged by the law from speaking the truth by the legislature. 28 U.S.C. §2201\(a\).
- 7.2.2. The judge forbids others from speaking the ONLY truth, which is the law itself. In tax trials, judges very commonly forbid especially defendants from quoting or using the law in front of the jury. Those who disregard this prohibition are sentenced to contempt of court.

"One who turns his ear from hearing the law [God's law or man's law], even his prayer [and ESPECIALLY his trial] is an abomination."
[Prov. 28:9, Bible, NKJV]

- 7.2.3. Jurists who have never read or learned the law in public school are not even aware of what they are enforcing. Therefore, they become agents of the judge instead of the law.
- 7.2.4. The law library in the court building forbids jurors from going in and reading the law they are enforcing, and especially while serving as jurists. They are supposed to be supervising the judge in executing the law, and they can't fulfill that duty as long as they have never learned and are forbidden from reading the law while serving as jurors.

7.2.5. The judge does everything in his power to destroy the weapons of the nongovernmental opponent by excluding everything he can and excluding none of the government's evidence. This basically results in a vacuum of truth in the courtroom.

[Prov. 18:17, Bible, NKJV]

"The hypocrite with his mouth destroys his neighbor, But through knowledge the righteous will be delivered."
[Prov. 11:9, Bible, NKJV]

8. The "deacons" of the church are attorneys who are "licensed" to practice law in the church by the chief priests of the church.
  - 8.1. They too have been "brainwashed" in both public school and law school to focus all their effort on procedure, presentation, and managing their business. They learn NOTHING about history, legislative intent, or natural law, which are the very foundations of law.
  - 8.2. The Statutes At Large published by Congress are the only real law and legally admissible evidence, in most cases. See 1 U.S.C. §204. Yet, it is so expensive and inconvenient to read the Statutes At Large online that for all practical purposes, it is off limits to all attorneys. For instance, it costs over $7 per page to even VIEW the Statutes at Large in the largest online legal reference service, Westlaw.
  - 8.3. Because they are licensed to practice law, the license is used as a vehicle to censor and control the attorneys from speaking the truth in the courtroom. Consequently, they usually blindly follow what the priest, ahem, I mean "judge" orders them to do and when they don't, they have their license pulled and literally starve to death.
9. The greatest sin in the government church called court is willful violations of the law. All tax crimes carry "willfulness" as a prerequisite. God's law and Christianity work exactly the same way. The greatest sin in the Holy Bible is to blaspheme the Holy Spirit, which is equivalent of doing something that you KNOW is wrong. See Matt. 12:32, Mark 3:29, Luke 12:10.
10. The judge, like the church pastor, wears a black robe and chants in Latin. Many legal maxims are Latin phrases that have no meaning to the average citizen, which is the very same thing that happens in Catholic churches daily across the country.
11. The jury are the twelve disciples of the judge, rather than of the Truth or the law or their conscience. Their original purpose was as a check on government abuse and usurpation, but judges steer them away from ruling in such a manner and being gullible sheep raised in the public "fool" system, they comply to their own injury.
  - 11.1. Those who are not already members of the cult are not allowed to serve on juries. The judge or the judge's henchmen, his "licensed attorneys" who are "officers of the court", dismiss prospective jurists who are not cult members during the voir dire (jury selection) phase of the tax trial. The qualifications that prospective jurists must meet in order to be part of the "cult" are at least one of the following:
    - 11.1.1. They collect government benefits based on income taxes and don't want to see those benefits reduced or stopped. The only people who can collect federal benefits under enacted law and the Constitution are federal employees. Therefore, they must be federal employees. Since jurists are acting as "voters", then receipt of any federal benefits makes them into a biased jury in the context of income taxes and violates 18 U.S.C. §597, which makes it illegal to bribe a voter. The only way to eliminate this conflict of interest is to permanently remove public assistance or to recuse/disqualify them as jurists.
    - 11.1.2. They faithfully pay what they "think" are "income taxes". They are blissfully unaware that in actuality, the 1040 return is a federal employment profit and loss statement.
    - 11.1.3. They believe or have "faith" in the cult's "bible", which is the Infernal Revenue Code and falsely believe it is "law". Instead, 1 U.S.C. §204 legislative notes says it is NOT positive law, but simply "presumed" to be law. Presumption is a violation of due process and therefore illegal under the Sixth Amendment.
    - 11.1.4. They are ignorant of the law and were made so in a public school. They therefore must believe whatever any judge or attorney tells them about "law". This means they will make a good lemming to jump off the cliff with the fellow citizen who is being tried.
  - 11.2. Juries are FORBIDDEN in every federal courthouse in the country from entering the law library while serving on a jury because judges don't want jurists reading the law and finding out that judges are misrepresenting it in the courtroom. Don't believe us? Then call the law library in any federal court building and ask them if jurists are allowed to go in there and read the law while they are serving. Below are the General Order 228C for the Federal District Court in San Diego proving that jurors are not allowed to use the court law library while serving. Notice jurors are not listed as authorized to use the library in this order:

- 1 11.3. Unlike every other type of federal trial, judges forbid discussing the law in a tax trial. Could it be because we 2 don't have any and he doesn't want to admit it?
- 3 11.4. Public (government) schools deliberately don't teach law or the Constitution either, so that the public become 4 sheep that the government can shear and rape and pillage.
- 5 11.5. Federal judges also warn juries these days NOT to vote on their conscience, as juries originally did and were 6 encouraged to do. He does this to steer or direct the jury to do his illegal and unconstitutional dirty work. He
7 turns the jury effectively into an angry lynch mob and thereby maliciously abuses legal process for his own
8 personal benefit in violation of 18 U.S.C. §208. He helps get the jury angry at the defendant by giving them the 9 idea that their "tax" bill will be bigger because the defendant refuses to "pay their fair share".
- 10 12. Those who refuse to worship the false god and false religion (which the Bible describes in the book of Revelation as 11 "the Beast") are "exorcised" from society by being put into jail so that they don't spread the truth about the total lack of 12 lawful authority to institute income taxation within states of the Union. They are jailed as political prisoners by 13 communist judges and socialist fellow citizens, just like in the Soviet Union. You can read more about this at:
14 <http://famguardian.org/Publications/SocialSecurity/TOC.htm>
- 15 13. The lawyers representing both sides are licensed by the pope/judge and therefore will pay homage to and cooperate
16 with him fully or risk losing their livelihood and becoming homeless. Every tax trial has THREE prosecutors who are 17 there to prosecute you: your defense attorney, the opposing U.S. attorney, and the judge, all of whom are on the take.
18 Attorneys have a conflict of interest and it is therefore impossible for them to objectively satisfy the fiduciary duty to 19 their clients which they have under the law. You can read more about this scam at:
20 <http://famguardian.org/Subjects/LawAndGovt/LegalEthics/PetForAdmToPractice-USDC.pdf>
- 21 14. "Future rewards and punishments", which are political persecution in a courtroom using our uninformed neighbors
22 acting as jurors as a weapon against us and by exploiting their fear of the government, envy and jealousy directed
23 against the rich or those who dare to demand the authority of law before they will pay "their fair share", or those who 24 challenge being compelled to subsidize the government benefit payments to these jurors with their labor.
- 25 15. Tax preparation businesses all over the country like H.R. Block are where "confession" is held annually to "deacons" 26 of the federal church/cult.
- 27 16. Representatives of this church/cult, such as the Department of Justice and the IRS, dress the same as Mormon 28 missionaries.
- 29 17. Those who participate in this cult can write-off or deduct their contributions just like donations to any church. State 30 income taxes, for instances, are deductible from federal gross income.
- 31 18. The false god/idol called government gets the "first fruits" of our labor, before the Lord even gets one dime, using 32 payroll deductions. Some employers treat the payroll deduction program like it is a law to be followed religiously,
33 even though it is not. This is a violation of Prov. 3:9, which says:

34 "Honor the LORD with your possessions, And with the firstfruits of all your increase;"
35 [Prov. 3:9, Bible, NKJV]

36 Yes, people, the government has made itself into a religion and a church, at least in the realm of taxation. The problem
37 with this corruption of our government is that the U.S. Supreme Court said they cannot do it:

38 *"The "establishment of religion" clause of the First Amendment means at least this: neither a state nor the

50 person's standing in the political community. Direct government action endorsing religion or a particular 51 religious practice is invalid under this approach, because it sends a message to nonadherents that they are
52 outsiders, not full members of the political community, and an accompanying message to adherents that they 53 are insiders, favored members of the political community".
54 [Wallace v. Jaffree, 472 U.S. 38 (1985)]

55 Can we prove with evidence that this false political religion is a "cult"? Below is the definition of "cult" from Easton's
56 Bible Dictionary:

1           “cults, illicit non-Israelite forms of worship. Throughout the history of ancient Israel, there were those who
2 participated in and fostered the growth of cults (cf. 2 Kings 21). These cults arose from Canaanite influence in
3 the land of Israel itself and from the influence of neighboring countries. One of the main tasks of the prophets
4 was to return the people to the proper worship of God and to eliminate these competing cults (1 Kings 18:20-
5 40). See also Asherah; Baal; Chemosh; Harlot; High Place; Idol; Milcom; Molech; Queen of Heaven;
6 Tammuz; Topheth; Worship; Zeus.”<sup>42</sup> “

7 Since the belief and worship of people is directed at other than a monotheistic Christian God, the government has become a
8 “cult”. It has also become a dangerous or harmful cult. Below is the description of “dangerous cults” from the Microsoft
9 Encarta Encyclopedia 2005:

10           “V. Dangerous Cults

11           Some cults or alternative religions are clearly dangerous: They provoke violence or antisocial acts or place
12 their members in physical [or financial] danger. A few have caused the deaths of members through mass
13 suicide or have supported violence, including murder, against people outside the cult. Sociologists note that 14 violent cults are only a small minority of alternative religions, although they draw the most media attention.

15           Dangerous cults tend to share certain characteristics. These groups typically have an exceedingly 16 authoritarian leader who seeks to control every aspect of members' lives and allows no questioning of 17 decisions. Such leaders may hold themselves above the law or exempt themselves from requirements made of 18 other members of the group. They often preach a doomsday scenario that presumes persecution from forces
19 outside the cult and a consequent need to prepare for an imminent Armageddon, or final battle between good
20 and evil. In preparation they may hoard firearms. Alternatively, cult leaders may prepare members for suicide, 21 which the group believes will transport it to a place of eternal bliss”

23 To summarize then:

- 24 1. A “cult” is “dangerous” if it promotes activities that are harmful. Giving away one’s earnings and sovereignty is 25 harmful if not done knowingly, voluntarily, and with full awareness of what one was giving up. This is exactly what 26 people do who file or pay monies to the government that no law requires them to pay.
- 27 2. Dangerous cults are authoritarian and have stiff mainly “political penalties” for failure to comply. The federal 28 judiciary dishes out stiff penalties to people who refuse to join or participate in the dangerous cult, even though there is 29 no “law” or positive law authorizing them to do so and no implementing regulation that authorizes any kind of 30 enforcement action for the positive law. These penalties are as follows:
- 31 2.1. Jail time.
- 32 2.2. Persecution from a misinformed jury who has been deliberately tampered with by the judge to cover up 33 government wrongdoing and prejudice the case against the accused.
- 34 2.3. Exorbitant legal fees paying for an attorney in order to resist the persecution.
- 35 2.4. Loss of reputation, credit rating, and influence in society.
- 36 2.5. Deprivation of property and rights to property because of refusal to comply.
- 37 3. The dangerous cult of the Infernal (Satanic) Revenue Code also seeks to control every aspect of the members lives.
38 The tax code is used as an extensive, excessive, and oppressive means of political control over the spending and 39 working habits of working Americans everywhere. The extent of this political control was never envisioned or 40 intended by our Founding Fathers, who wanted us to be completely free of the government. Members of the cult
41 falsely believe that there is a law requiring them to report every source of earnings, every expenditure in excruciating
42 detail. They have to sign the report under penalty of perjury and be thrown in jail for three years if even one digit on 43 the report is wrong. The IRS, on the other hand, isn’t responsible for the accuracy of anything, including their 44 publications, phone support, or even their illegal assessments. In that sense, they are a false god, because they play by 45 different and lesser rules than everyone else.
- 46 4. The cult of the Infernal Revenue Code also “preaches a doomsday scenario that presumes persecution from forces 47 outside the cult”. This is a religion based on fear, and the fear originates both from ignorance about the law and with 48 what will happen to the members who leave the cult or refuse to comply with all the requirements of the cult. The 49 doomsday messages are broadcast from the IRS and DOJ website, public affairs section, where they target famous 50 personalities for persecution because of failure to participate in the cult, and when successful, use the result as evidence
51 that they too will be severely persecuted for failure to participate. This is no different than what the Communists did in

1 Eastern Europe, where they put a big wall around East Berlin 100 miles long to force people to remain under
 2 communist rule. They patrolled the wall by guards, dogs, and weapons, and highly publicized all escape attempts in
 3 which people were killed, maimed, or murdered. This negative publicity acted as a warning and deterrent against those 4 who might think of escaping.

- 5 5. The cult of the Infernal (Satanic) Revenue Code also prepares people for spiritual suicide and Armageddon.
 6 Remember, the term “Armageddon” comes from the Bible book of Revelation, where doomsday predictions describe
 7 what will happen to those who allowed government to become their false god. Those who did so, and who accepted
 8 the government’s “mark” called the Socialist INSecurity Number, will be the first to be judged and persecuted and 9 injured, according to Revelation. This is the REAL Armageddon folks!

10 *“So the first [angel] went and poured out his bowl [of judgment] upon the earth, and a foul and loathsome
 11 sore came upon the men who had the mark of the beast [political rulers] and those who worshiped his image
 12 [on the money].”
 13 [Rev. 16:2, Bible, NKJV]*

14 Only those who do not accept the government’s mark will reign with Christ in Heaven:

15 *“And I saw thrones, and they sat on them, and judgment was committed to them. Then I saw the souls of those 16 who had been beheaded for their witness to Jesus and for the word of God, who had not worshiped the beast or 17 his image, and had not received his mark on their foreheads or on their hands. And they lived and reigned 18 with Christ for a thousand years.”
 19 [Rev. 20:4, Bible, NKJV]*

20 Surprisingly, the U.S. Congress, who are the REAL criminals and cult leaders who wrote the “Bible” that started this 21 dangerous “cult of the Infernal Revenue Code”, also described the cult as a form of “communism”. Here is the 22 unbelievable description, right from the Beast’s mouth, of the dastardly corruption of our legal and political system which it
 23 willfully did and continues to perpetuate and cover up:

24 TITLE 50 > CHAPTER 23 > SUBCHAPTER IV > Sec. 841.
 25 Sec. 841. - Findings and declarations of fact

26 *The Congress finds and declares that the Communist Party of the United States [consisting of the IRS, DOJ,
 27 and a corrupted federal judiciary], although purportedly a political party, is in fact an instrumentality of a
 28 conspiracy to overthrow the [de jure] Government of the United States [and replace it with a de facto
 29 government ruled by a the judiciary]. It constitutes an authoritarian dictatorship [IRS, DOJ, and corrupted
 30 federal judiciary in collusion] within a [constitutional] republic, demanding for itself the rights and privileges
 31 [including immunity from prosecution for their wrongdoing in violation of Article 1, Section 9, Clause 8 of the 32 Constitution] accorded to political parties, but denying to all others the liberties [Bill of Rights] guaranteed by 33 the Constitution. Unlike political parties, which evolve their policies and programs through public means, by 34 the reconciliation of a wide variety of individual views, and submit those policies and programs to the 35 electorate at large for approval or disapproval, the policies and programs of the Communist Party are secretly
 36 [by corrupt judges and the IRS in complete disregard of the tax laws] prescribed for it by the foreign leaders of 37 the world Communist movement [the IRS and Federal Reserve]. Its members [the Congress, which was 38 terrorized to do IRS bidding recently by the framing of Congressman Traficant] have no part in determining 39 its goals, and are not permitted to voice dissent to party objectives. Unlike members of political parties,
 40 members of the Communist Party are recruited for indoctrination [in the public schools by homosexuals,
 41 liberals, and socialists] with respect to its objectives and methods, and are organized, instructed, and 42 disciplined [by the IRS and a corrupted judiciary] to carry into action slavishly the assignments given them by 43 their hierarchical chieftains. Unlike political parties, the Communist Party [thanks to a corrupted federal 44 judiciary] acknowledges no constitutional or statutory limitations upon its conduct or upon that of its members.
 45 The Communist Party is relatively small numerically, and gives scant indication of capacity ever to attain its 46 ends by lawful political means. The peril inherent in its operation arises not from its numbers, but from its 47 failure to acknowledge any limitation as to the nature of its activities, and its dedication to the proposition that
 48 the present constitutional Government of the United States ultimately must be brought to ruin by any available
 49 means, including resort to force and violence [for using income taxes]. Holding that doctrine, its role as the 50 agency of a hostile foreign power [the Federal Reserve and the American Bar Association (ABA)] renders its 51 existence a clear present and continuing danger to the security of the United States. It is the means whereby
 52 individuals are seduced into the service of the world Communist movement, trained to do its bidding, and 53 directed and controlled in the conspiratorial performance of their revolutionary services. Therefore, the 54 Communist Party should be outlawed*

55 That’s right folks: We now live under communism stealthily disguised as “democracy”, and which is implemented exactly
 56 the same way it was done in Eastern Europe. It’s just a little better hidden than it was in Europe, but it’s still every bit as 57 real and evil. Go back and review section 2.7.1 earlier if you want to compare our system of government with Pure
 58 Communism. The “wall” between east and west like the one in Berlin is an invisible “legal wall” maintained by the federal

1 judiciary and the legal profession, who keep people (the “slaves” living on the federal plantation) from escaping the
 2 communism and regaining their freedom and complete control over their property, their labor, and their lives. Those who
 3 participate in the federal income tax system by living on this figurative “federal plantation” essentially are treated as
 4 government “employees”. In order to join this dangerous cult, all they have to do is use a federal W-4 or 1040 form to lie
 5 or deceive the federal government into believing that they are “U.S. citizens” and “employees”, who under the I.R.C. are
 6 actually and only privileged “public officers” of the United States government. This is what it means to have income
 7 “effectively connected with a trade or business”, as described throughout the code, because “trade or business” is defined in
 8 26 U.S.C. 7701(a)(26) as “the functions of a [privileged, excise taxable] public office [in the United States Government]”.
 9 If you would like to know how this usurious and unconstitutional federal employee kickback program is used to perpetuate
 10 the fraud, read section 5.6.10 later. A whole book has been written about how the “federal employee kickback program”
 11 works called IRS Humbug: Weapons of Enslavement, Frank Kowalik, written by Frank Kowalik, and it is a real eye opener
 12 that we highly recommend.

13 All the earnings of these slaves living on this federal plantation are treated in law (not physically, but by the courts) as 14 originating from a gigantic monopoly called the “United States” government which, based on the way it has been acting, is 15 actually nothing but a big corporation (see 28 U.S.C. §3002(15)(A)) a million times more evil than what happened to Enron
 16 and which will eventually destroy everyone, including those who refuse to participate in the “cult”, if we continue to
 17 complacently tolerate its usurpations and violations of the Constitution and God’s laws. The book of Revelation in the 18 Bible describes exactly how the destruction will occur, and it even gives this big corporation a name called “The Beast”.
 19 The people living on the federal corporate plantation are called “Babylon the Great Harlot”, which is simply an assembly of 20 ignorant, lazy, irresponsible, and dependent people living under a pure, atheistic commercial democracy who are ignorant
 21 and complacent about government, law, truth, and justice. They have been dumbed-down in the school system and taught
 22 to treat government as their friend, not realizing that this same government has actually become the worst abuser of their 23 rights. Wake up people!

24 “And I heard another voice from heaven [God] saying, ‘Come out of her [Babylon the Great Harlot, a
 25 democratic state full of socialist non-believers], my people [Christians], lest you share in her sins, and lest you
 26 receive of her plagues.”
 27 [Revelation 18:4, Bible, NKJV]

28 5.4.6.3 How you were duped into signing the contract and joining the state-sponsored religion and what the 29 contract says

30 It might surprise you to find that if you are a “taxpayer”, then at one point or another, you probably unknowingly
 31 volunteered to become a federal “employee”, even if you never set foot in a federal building or worked for the federal 32 government! That process of volunteering is accomplished using the Form W-4, which says at the top “Employee
 33 Withholding Allowance Certificate” and this is the nexus that connects you to the Beast. When you signed that IRS Form
 34 W-4 and submitted it with a perjury oath in violation of Matt. 5:34, then:

- 35 1. You consented to be treated as an “employee” of the federal government. All “employees” are elected or appointed 36 under 26 C.F.R. §31.3401(c)-1. That makes you into a “public officer” and the federal government has always had 37 nearly totalitarian authority over its officers and employees, and can compel them to surrender ALL of their 38 constitutional rights in the lawful exercise of their duties.

39 “The restrictions that the Constitution places upon the government in its capacity as lawmaker, i.e., as the
 40 regulator of private conduct, are not the same as the restrictions that it places upon the government in its
 41 capacity as employer. We have recognized this in many contexts, with respect to many different constitutional

 54 [Rutan v. Republican Party of Illinois, 497 U.S. 62 (1990)]

1 Every action you do after signing up to be a federal “employee”, including your earnings from private life, are
 2 considered to be “done on official federal business” at that point. Your new boss and idol to be worshipped is the
 3 federal government, and not God. Your continued obedience to the IRS is evidence that you worship this false god.

4 2. By virtue of being a federal “employee”, then you became “effectively connected with a trade or business” because
 5 “trade or business” is defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26) as “the functions of a public office”. 26 C.F.R. §1.1-
 6 1(a)(2)(ii) reveals that only “aliens” (residents) and “nonresident aliens” (nationals domiciled in states of the Union
 7 engaged in a public office) with income “effectively connected with a trade or business” can have “taxable income” or
 8 be the proper subject of the code. The process of becoming “effectively connected” with federal income was done
 9 through what is called an “election” in the Internal Revenue Code. This “election” is made upon either filing a form
 10 W-4 that authorizes withholding or a 1040 form that indicates a nonzero liability. This contractual act of “election”
 11 can be revoked using the procedures described later in section 5.3.6, which are further described in our [Tax Fraud
 12 Prevention Manual, Form #06.008](#).

13 3. Once your earnings contractually became “effectively connected with a trade or business”, at least a portion of them
 14 became “public property” and the federal government gained “in rem” jurisdiction over them by virtue of Article 4,
 15 Section 3, Clause 2 of the U.S. Constitution, even if that property is not situated on federal land or otherwise within 16 exclusive federal jurisdiction. The portion of your earnings that are considered “public property” over which they have
 17 jurisdiction is that portion which you owe in “taxes” (kickbacks) at the end of the year. If you resist efforts to collect
 18 property in your custody that always has belonged to the government, then all actions against you will be a “replevin”,
 19 meaning an action against the property under your control and not against the “person”, which is you.

20 *“Replevin. An action whereby the owner or person entitled to repossession of goods or chattels may recover
 21 those goods or chattels from one who has wrongfully distrained or taken or who wrongfully detains such goods
 22 or chattels. Jim’s Furniture Mart, Inc. v. Harris, 42 Ill.App.3d. 488, 1 Ill.Dec. 175, 176, 356 N.E.2d. 175, 176.
 23 Also refers to a provisional remedy that is an incident of a replevin action which allows the plaintiff at any time
 24 before judgment to take the disputed property from the defendant and hold the property pendente lite. Other 25 names for replevin include Claim and delivery, Detinue, Revendication, and Sequestration (q.v.).”*
 26 [Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1299]

27 4. Because your earnings as a federal “employee” are “public property”, then under 5 U.S.C. §553(a)(2) and 44 U.S.C.
 28 §1505(a)(1), there is no need to publish implementing regulations in the Federal Register governing the management of 29 that property. Because you volunteered to be treated as a federal “employee”, you already consented to the terms of 30 the implied employment agreement found in the Internal Revenue Code between your new “employer” (the federal 31 government) and you. Those who don’t want to be “effectively connected” simply don’t pursue federal employment or 32 volunteer to fill out any forms that would indicate they are “effectively connected”.

33 5. Because you are an “employee” and are treated under the I.R.C., Subtitles A and C as a “person” whose every action is 34 in the context of federal employment, then all monies paid to the IRS at that point literally do support the 35 “government”, because everything you do in your private life is done essentially as a government “employee”.
 36 Therefore, the Internal Revenue Code literally does describe a “tax” at that point because it does support only the 37 government, of which you are part 24 hours a day, 7 days a week. The only thing the government can spend money on 38 is a “public purpose”, which means the only thing they can compensate you for is services as a federal “employee”:

39 *“Public purpose. In the law of taxation, eminent domain, etc., this is a term of classification to distinguish the
 40 objects for which, according to settled usage, the government is to provide, from those which, by the like usage,
 41 are left to private interest, inclination, or liberality. The constitutional requirement that the purpose of any tax,
 42 police regulation, or particular exertion of the power of eminent domain shall be the convenience, safety, or
 43 welfare of the entire community and not the welfare of a specific individual or class of persons [such as, for
 44 instance, federal benefit recipients as individuals]. “Public purpose” that will justify expenditure of public
 45 money generally means such an activity as will serve as benefit to community as a body and which at same time
 46 is directly related function of government. Pack v. Southwestern Bell Tel. & Tel. Co., 215 Tenn. 503, 387
 47 S.W.2d. 789, 794.*

48 *The term is synonymous with governmental purpose. As employed to denote the objects for which taxes may be
 49 levied, it has no relation to the urgency of the public need or to the extent of the public benefit which is to
 50 follow; the essential requisite being that a public service or use shall affect the inhabitants as a community,
 51 and not merely as individuals. A public purpose or public business has for its objective the promotion of the
 52 public health, safety, morals, general welfare, security, prosperity, and contentment of all the inhabitants or
 53 residents within a given political division, as, for example, a state, the sovereign powers of which are exercised
 54 to promote such public purpose or public business.”*
 55 [Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1231, Emphasis added]

56 6. As a federal statutory “employee” (5 U.S.C. §2105(a)), you surrendered your sovereign immunity as a “non-resident
 57 non-person” and made an election (elected yourself into public office) under 26 U.S.C. §6013(g) to be treated as a

1 privileged "alien" and a "resident" who no longer has control over his earnings. Here is how the U.S. Supreme Court
2 describes it:

3 A nondiscriminatory taxing measure that operates to defray the cost of a federal program by recovering a
4 fair approximation of each beneficiary's share of the cost is surely no more offensive to the constitutional
5 scheme than is either a tax on the income earned by state employees or a tax on a State's sale of bottled
6 water. 18 The National Government's interest in being compensated for its expenditures is only too apparent.
7 More significantly perhaps, such revenue measures by their very nature cannot possess the attributes that led
8 Mr. Chief Justice Marshall to proclaim that the power to tax is the power [435 U.S. 444, 461] to destroy.
9 There is no danger that such measures will not be based on benefits conferred or that they will function as
10 regulatory devices unduly burdening essential state activities. It is, of course, the case that a revenue provision
11 that forces a State to pay its own way when performing an essential function will increase the cost of the state
12 activity. But Graves v. New York ex rel. O'Keefe, and its precursors, see 306 U.S., at 483 and the cases cited in
13 n. 3, teach that an economic burden on traditional state functions without more is not a sufficient basis for
14 sustaining a claim of immunity. Indeed, since the Constitution explicitly requires States to bear similar
15 economic burdens when engaged in essential operations, see U.S. Const., Amdts. 5, 14; Pennsylvania Coal Co.
16 v. Mahon, 260 U.S. 393 (1922) (State must pay just compensation when it "takes" private property for a public
17 purpose); U.S. Const., Art. I, 10, cl. 1; United States Trust Co. v. New Jersey, 431 U.S. 1 (1977) (even when
18 burdensome, a State often must comply with the obligations of its contracts), it cannot be seriously contended
19 that federal exactions from the States of their fair share of the cost of specific benefits they receive from federal
20 programs offend the constitutional scheme.

21 Our decisions in analogous context support this conclusion. We have repeatedly held that the Federal
22 Government may impose appropriate conditions on the use of federal property or privileges and may require
23 that state instrumentalities comply with conditions that are reasonably related to the federal interest in
24 particular national projects or programs. See, e. g., Ivanhoe Irrigation Dist. v. McCracken, 357 U.S. 275, 294 -
25 296 (1958); Oklahoma v. Civil Service Comm'n, 330 U.S. 127, 142-144 (1947); United States v. San Francisco,
26 310 U.S. 16 (1940); cf. National League of Cities v. Usery, 426 U.S. 833, 853 (1976); Fry v. United States, 421
27 U.S. 542 (1975). A requirement that States, like all other users, pay a portion of the costs of the benefits they
28 enjoy from federal programs is surely permissible since it is closely related to the [435 U.S. 444, 462]
29 federal interest in recovering costs from those who benefit and since it effects no greater interference with 30 state sovereignty than do the restrictions which this Court has approved.

31 A clearly analogous line of decisions is that interpreting provisions in the Constitution that also place
32 limitations on the taxing power of government. See, e. g., U.S. Const., Art. I, 8, cl. 3 (restricting power of States 33 to tax interstate commerce); 10, cl. 3 (prohibiting any state tax that operates "to impose a charge for the
34 privilege of entering, trading in, or lying in a port." Clyde Mallory Lines v. Alabama ex rel. State Docks
35 Comm'n, 296 U.S. 261, 265-266 (1935)). These restrictions, like the implied state tax immunity, exist to protect
36 constitutionally valued activity from the undue and perhaps destructive interference that could result from
37 certain taxing measures. The restriction implicit in the Commerce Clause is designed to prohibit States from
38 burdening the free flow of commerce, see generally Complete Auto Transit, Inc. v. Brady, 430 U.S. 274 (1977),
39 whereas the prohibition against duties on the privilege of entering ports is intended specifically to guard
40 against local hindrances to trade and commerce by vessels. See Packet Co. v. Keokuk, 95 U.S. 80, 85 (1877).

41 Our decisions implementing these constitutional provisions have consistently recognized that the interests
42 protected by these Clauses are not offended by revenue measures that operate only to compensate a
43 government for benefits supplied. See, e. g., Clyde Mallory Lines v. Alabama, supra (flat fee charged each 44 vessel entering port upheld because charge operated to defray cost of harbor policing); Evansville-
45 Vanderburgh Airport Authority v. Delta Airlines, Inc., 405 U.S. 707 (1972) ($1 head tax on explaining

- 52 7. As an employee, the federal courts exercise jurisdiction over you as a federal "employee", trustee, and fiduciary as 53 described in 26 U.S.C. §6903. If you fail to properly discharge your duties and return profits of your employment to 54 the mother corporation, you violate your fiduciary duty and your employment contract, the I.R.C., and become subject
55 to federal but not state jurisdiction. Below is how the legal encyclopedia American Jurisprudence 2d describes claims
56 by the United States against its employees and officers:

57 "The interest to be recovered as damages for the delayed payment of a contractual obligation to the United
58 States is not controlled by state statute or local common law.<sup>43</sup> In the absence of an applicable federal statute,

1                   the federal courts must determine according to their own criteria the appropriate measure of damages.<sup>44</sup>
 2                   State law may, however, be adopted as the federal law of decision in some instances.<sup>45</sup>
 3                   [American Jurisprudence 2d, United States, §42: Interest on Claim (1999)]

4 The same process above is also accomplished by completing and signing and submitting the IRS Form 1040 to the IRS. 26
 5 C.F.R. §1.1-1(a)(2)(ii) specifically says that the only biological people who earn “taxable income” are those with income
 6 “effectively connected with a trade or business”, and these are the only sections anywhere in the I.R.C. or implementing
 7 regulations which we could find that refer to the earnings of a biological person as being taxable. By submitting a 1040
 8 with a nonzero “taxable income” to the IRS or a W-4 to an “employer”, you are essentially signing a contract with the 9 federal government. Below are the terms of that “adhesion contract”:

10                   “For you, brethren, have been called to liberty; only do not use liberty as an opportunity for the flesh, but 11                   through love serve one another.”
 12                   [Gal. 5:13, Bible, NKJV]

13 1. Benefits/consideration:

14 1.1. You can surrender responsibility for yourself to your public servants and live a life of luxury and complacency at 15 government expense. That life of luxury is described in Rev. 18:3:

16 1.1.1. Your new false god, the government, will now take care of you like it takes care of the rest of its own:
 17 counterfeiting money or stealing it from your neighbor to take care of you when you get old. You have
 18 joined the Mafia’s retirement system and they will take care of you, so long as you are politically correct.

19 1.1.2. You have imperceptibly and unknowingly joined Babylon the Great Harlot, and the process was transparent
 20 to you so you don’t have to fear the inevitable consequences of God’s wrath for your decision. To wit:

21                   For all the nations [and socialist peoples] have drunk of the wine of the wrath of her fornication, the kings
 22                   [political rulers] of the earth have committed fornication [commerce] with her, and the merchants
 23                   [corporations] of the earth have become rich through the abundance of her luxury.”
 24                   And I heard another voice from heaven saying, “Come out of her, my people, lest you share in her sins, and lest
 25                   you receive of her plagues. For her sins have reached<sup>2</sup> to heaven, and God has remembered her iniquities.”
 26                   [Rev. 18:3-5, Bible, NKJV]

27 1.2. Your life while on earth will be a comfortable and “safe” life free of consequence or responsibility. It will be a 28 life that rewards failure, dependency, and irresponsibility, and punishes, taxes, and persecutes success and 29 entrepreneurship. You will be a “subject federal citizen” who surrendered all his rights and abdicated his godly 30 stewardship:

31                   TITLE 42 > CHAPTER 21 > SUBCHAPTER 1 > Sec. 1981.
 32                   Sec. 1981. - Equal rights under the law

33                   (a) Statement of equal rights

34                   All persons within the jurisdiction of the United States [ . . . ], shall be subject to like punishment, pains,
 35                   penalties, taxes, licenses, and exactions [and IRS extortions] of every kind, and to no other.

36 You will live in a very temporary man-made, egalitarian socialist utopia free of God or liability to obey His laws.
 37 Those churches who criticize this result as immoral are persecuted by pulling their 501(c)(3) exemption and 38 raping and pillaging and seizing their assets. The government will enforce with its unjust laws not only equality of 39 opportunity, but equality of RESULT, by abusing its taxing powers to redistribute wealth from the “haves” to the 40 “have-nots and parasites” of society.

41 1.3. Your political “mafia protectors” will abuse their lawmaking power to indemnify you from liability for all of the 42 following sins and violations of God’s eternal laws. Their lawmaking power will be used as a “license to sin”
 43 free of consequence:

44 1.3.1. Bad parenting. The government will take care of your kids if you screw up. They will become “wards of 45 the state” who won’t come knocking on your door when you get older because Uncle will take care of them
 46 instead.

47 1.3.2. Selfishness in churches. The government will take over the charity business with Welfare, Medicare, and 48 Social Security so that churches don’t have to bother with charity anymore and can keep all their tithes for vain and self-serving purposes like gymnasiums, new buildings, raises for the pastor, and after-school care programs.

1.3.3. Homosexuality. Leviticus 18:22 forbids homosexuality and says it is an abomination to be hated and for which God will judge. The government, on the other hand, will decriminalize it and even promote gay marriages, causing eternal damnation for all those who practice it after they die. Your politicians will either decriminalize it or offer to do so in order to procure your votes at election time.

1.3.4. Abortion. Exodus 20:13 and Prov. 31:8-9 say abortion is murder and violates God's law. Politicians promise to decriminalize it in order to bribe promiscuous single people to vote for them.

1.3.5. Adultery. The Ten Commandments in Exodus 20:14 makes adultery a sin. King David was punished and persecuted by God for his violation of this law. Yet government, in race to bribe voters for votes, has replaced lifelong Holy Matrimony with temporary civil unions, thus making

1.3.5.1. Marriage into a form of legalized prostitution

1.3.5.2. Marriage licenses into prostitution licenses

1.3.5.3. Family court judges into "pimps"

1.3.5.4. Family law attorneys into tax collectors for the pimp.

Without Holy Matrimony virtually eliminated and replaced with temporary civil unions, there can be no such thing as adultery. All children born to parents practicing this form of prostitution give birth to bastard children under God's law who have no right to inheritance. Consequently, the state will steal their inheritance through inheritance taxes. See:

<http://famguardian.org/Subjects/FamilyLaw/Marriage/InDefenseOfMarriage.htm>

1.3.6. Fornication. God says in 1 Cor. 6:18 and 1 Thess. 4:3-6 not to fornicate. Yet the government panders to the sinful nature of people by loosening FCC rules for lewdness on TV, teaching children in high school sex education class how to fornicate without having babies. They teach "safe sex", but avoid teaching "abstinence", thus contributing to the decay of society and the sacredness of Holy Matrimony.

1.3.7. Laziness. No need to be in a hurry to find a job because government will support me indefinitely if I don't.

"The hand of the diligent will rule, but the lazy man will be put to forced labor [government slavery!]."
[Prov. 12:24, Bible, NKJV]

1.3.8. Borrowing money. We showed earlier in section 2.8.11 that God's laws, such as Rom. 13:8, Deut. 15:6, Deut. 28:12, Deut. 23:19 say we should not borrow or go into debt or charge interest to our brother. Yet our politicians actually encourage debt through the tax code by allowing write-offs.

1.4. You gain the right to demand that the government subsidize and encourage your sinful behaviors by offering you "tax deductions" for sins that it wants you to commit in its name. For instance:

1.4.1. You can demand on your tax return the "privilege" to demand that the government allow you to exempt or deduct interest on debt, as a way to encourage you to go into debt, even though debt violates God's laws found in Rom. 13:8, Deut. 15:6, Deut. 28:12, Deut. 23:19.

1.4.2. You can "write off" those kids you never wanted by claiming them as deductions, as long as you make them into "taxpayers" and government "whores" by giving them "Slave Surveillance Numbers". The government will then use the SSN as a way to chain your kids and their kids to the federal plantation for the rest of their lives. Is that kind of treachery of your kids worth $3,000 in deductions per year? Shouldn't they have the right to make an informed choice when they reach adulthood whether or not they want to be "taxpayers" or have an SSN?

2. Responsibilities and Liabilities:

2.1. You must accept the Mark of the Beast, the Slave Surveillance Number (SSN). This number is simply a number used to track federal property, which you then become.

2.2. You become a federal "employee" on official business 24 hours a day, 7 days a week because:

2.2.1. When "employed", you become a subcontractor to the federal government and a fiduciary over earnings that actually belong to the government and which are paid to you as a "trustee" of federal property by your federal "employer".

2.2.2. Your "straw man", who has the Slave Surveillance Number (SSN) attached to it, actually becomes the recipient of your earnings and you become the "trustee". The straw man has "legal title" and you have "equitable title". You cease to be the "trustee" and achieve "legal title" ONLY AFTER you have given the government their "fair share" according to whatever your benefactors at the IRS say you are entitled to keep. In other words, you get the "spoils" and the "leftovers" after the government has taken whatever it wants and picked the bones clean.

2.2.3. Any money you spend on yourself that came from the government disguised as an "entitlement" or "benefit" and which you did not directly earn with your own personal labor in effect becomes "employment income" that controls your private, personal behavior. The Supreme Court said in Loan Assoc. v. Topeka, 87 U.S. (20 Wall.) 655, 665 (1874), that a legitimate “tax” can only be spent on the support of the “government”. If you spend government entitlements on yourself instead of in furtherance of an official government function, then you become a thief and a criminal who is abusing government funds for personal gain. Therefore, it must be presumed that you are on “official business” 24 hours a day, 7 days a week or you would have to be thrown in jail for embezzlement.

- 2.3. Because you are a federal “employee” 24 hours a day, 7 days a week, then you, all of your earnings, and your personal and real property become federal property subject to federal jurisdiction under Article 4, Section 3, Clause 2 of the U.S. Constitution, regardless of where it physically exists. The government has an “equity interest” in your property which you gave to them by identifying yourself as a federal “employee” with a Slave Surveillance Number.
- 2.4. You become an “officer of a corporation”, which is the federal corporation called the United States government as defined in 28 U.S.C. §3002(15)(A). As such, you become the proper legal subject of most penalty statutes within the Internal Revenue Code such as 26 U.S.C. §6671(b) and 26 U.S.C. §7343, which only apply penalties to “officers of corporations”.
- 2.5. You become a “resident” (alien) living on the federal plantation situated in the District of Columbia (see 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(39)) and 26 U.S.C. §7408(d). None of the property or labor the government “harvests” from its slaves on the plantation can be considered stolen property, because everyone living on the federal plantation presumably “volunteered” to be there by signing the form W-4 and 1040.
- 2.6. You and your property become surety for endless government debt in violation of Prov. 6:1-5. The whole function of the IRS, in fact, is to manufacture fraudulent debt instruments called “assessments” without lawful authority and to thereby put people into perpetual debt slavery to their government in violation of the Thirteenth Amendment prohibition against “peonage” (slavery to pay off a debt), and “involuntary servitude”.
- 2.7. You become “an individual” and a “natural person” in the context of the Internal Revenue Code and become subject to the code in its entirety. This is called being “effectively connected with a trade or business” in the code.
- 2.8. Since you already admitted you are a “taxpayer”, which is a government “whore”, by furnishing a federal identifying number and specifying a liability on a tax form, then the burden of proof shifts to you to prove that you don't earn “Taxable income” under 26 U.S.C. §7491. Your Constitutional right of being “innocent until proven guilty” is now completely reversed. You are guilty of being a government “whore” until you prove you are innocent.
- 2.9. All of your earnings become “effectively connected with a trade or business in the [federal] United States”, which means they are treated as though they originated from the Federal Government, even if they didn't. All those who are “effectively connected” are essentially parties to an implied “employment” contract with the federal government. In effect, you became a federal “contractor” and the money you earn is theirs until you settle accounts with the prime contractor by submitting a tax return. This “return” is actually a return of property actually belonging to the federal government:

“THE”+”IRS”=”THEIRS”

- 2.10. Whenever you are given a political or a legal choice as a jurist or voter or a parent, you have an obligation to do whatever you must in order to ensure the flow of your share of the stolen “loot” from the public servant thieves you work for in the federal judiciary and the IRS.
  - 2.10.1. As a jurist, you must rule against all those people who try to exit the fraudulent revenue collection system or who try to reform the corruption within the system.
  - 2.10.2. As a voter, you must vote for the candidate who promises the most stole “loot”.
  - 2.10.3. As a parent, you must train your children that they have a duty to participate in the tax system, because that is where your retirement is going to come from!

The above is EVIL! It is the essence of socialism. Christians cannot be socialists. All socialists worship government as their false god. This is Satan worship and idolatry, because it is man/government-centric instead of God centric. The Bible calls such rebellion and mutiny of God's laws “witchcraft” in 1 Sam 15:22-23. Such idolatry is punishable by death under God's law (see Ezekial 9 in the Bible). The same kind of rebellion by our public servants of the Constitution is also punishable by death under 18 U.S.C. §2381.

Based on the above analysis, the only ethical and moral way to avoid the “roach trap statute” called the Internal Revenue Code is to not accept any social welfare benefit. This is a very important point. The Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act

(F.S.I.A.), codified in 28 U.S.C. Chapter 97, in fact, clearly identifies why this is the case. 28 U.S.C. §1605, part of the act, contains a list of exceptions whereby a foreign sovereign forfeits its sovereign immunity in courts of justice. Two exceptions in particular reveal why we can't accept federal benefits or be "U.S. citizens". To wit:

1. 28 U.S.C. §1605(a)(2) says that if you conduct "commerce" within the legislative jurisdiction of the "United States" (meaning the federal zone), then you lose your sovereign immunity. Receiving government benefits or paying for them through taxation qualifies as "commerce". 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(39) and 26 U.S.C. §7408(d) place all "persons" subject to the tax code squarely within the District of Columbia regardless of where they live, which is what the "United States" is defined as in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10):

TITLE 28 > PART IV > CHAPTER 97 > § 1605

§ 1605. General exceptions to the jurisdictional immunity of a foreign state

A foreign state shall not be immune from the jurisdiction of courts of the United States or of the States in any case—

(2) in which the action is based upon a commercial activity carried on in the United States by the foreign state; or upon an act performed in the United States in connection with a commercial activity of the foreign state elsewhere; or upon an act outside the territory of the United States in connection with a commercial activity of the foreign state elsewhere and that act causes a direct effect in the United States;

For further confirmation of the fact that your domicile as a federal "employee" is the District of Columbia, see Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 17(b), which says that those acting in a representative capacity for a federal corporation, which in this case is the "United States", become subject to the laws for the domicile of the corporation, which is the District of Columbia under 4 U.S.C. §72 and Article 1, Section 8, Clause 17 of the Constitution:

IV. PARTIES > Rule 17.

Rule 17. Parties Plaintiff and Defendant; Capacity

(b) Capacity to Sue or be Sued.

Capacity to sue or be sued is determined as follows:

(1) for an individual who is not acting in a representative capacity, by the law of the individual's domicile;

(2) for a corporation for an officer of the corporation such as the Social Security Trustee, by the law under which it was organized; and

(3) for all other parties, by the law of the state where the court is located, except that:

(A) a partnership or other unincorporated association with no such capacity under that state's law may sue or be sued in its common name to enforce a substantive right existing under the United States Constitution or laws; and

(B) 28 U.S.C. §§ 754 and 959(a) govern the capacity of a receiver appointed by a United States court to sue or be sued in a United States court.

2. 28 U.S.C. §1603(b), also part of the act, defines an "agency or instrumentality" of a foreign state as an entity (1) which is a separate legal person, corporate or otherwise, and (2) which is an organ of a foreign state or political subdivision thereof, or a majority of whose shares or other ownership interest is owned by a foreign state or political subdivision thereof, and (3) which is neither a citizen of the a state of the United States as defined in 28 U.S.C. §1332(c) and (d) nor created under the laws of any third country.

TITLE 28 > PART IV > CHAPTER 97 > § 1603

§ 1603. Definitions

For purposes of this chapter—

(a) A "foreign state", except as used in section 1608 of this title, includes a political subdivision of a foreign state or an agency or instrumentality of a foreign state as defined in subsection (b).

(b) An "agency or instrumentality of a foreign state" means any entity—

(1) which is a separate legal person, corporate or otherwise, and

(2) which is an organ of a foreign state or political subdivision thereof, or a majority of whose shares or other ownership interest is owned by a foreign state or political subdivision thereof, and

(3) which is neither a citizen of a State of the United States as defined in section 1332 (c) and (d) of this title, nor created under the laws of any third country.

Based on the above, when you are acting effectively as a federal “employee”, you are not a “separate legal person”, but instead are just an extension of the federal government. Consequently, you cannot be part of a “foreign state” and maintain judicial immunity in a federal court if you accept federal employment as a person engaged in a “trade or business”. Likewise, you will lose your sovereign immunity if you allow yourself to be a statutory “citizen of the United States” under 8 U.S.C. §1401. That is why we suggested in the preceding chapter that you MUST correct your citizenship status to expatriate statutory citizenship in favor of Constitutional citizenship. Watch out!

We can't take what we didn't earn, and so if we are willing to accept a “benefit” (government bribe), then we should be just as willing to accept the responsibility to pay for it or else we are definitely a thief. No devout Christian can be a thief. Some people try to compromise on this principle by calculating how much they paid in, inflation adjusting it, and then only taking out exactly what they put in and no more. This is another alternative, but the cleanest way to separate from the Beast is simply to:

1. Completely abandon all entitlement to government social welfare “benefits”. You can abandon Social Security Participation, for instance, using the following form:

Resignation of Compelled Social Security Trustee, Family Guardian Fellowship
<http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/Forms/Emancipation/SSTrustIndenture.pdf>

2. Consider all contributions so far as simply donations to charity.
3. Completely abandon allegiance to the Beast. When we say “abandon allegiance”, we mean abandon allegiance to the lawless de facto government we have now but maintain our allegiance to the de jure “state”, which is all the people that our public servants work for and who are the true “sovereigns” in our system of government. If we have allegiance to them instead of our political rulers, then we will want to do what is best for them but taking them off their sinful addiction to plundered loot stolen by our covetous public servants.
4. Vow to take complete and exclusive responsibility for ourselves from this day forward. This is what the Bible requires:

“Make it your ambition to lead a quiet life, to mind your own business and to work with your hands, just as we told you, so that your daily life may win the respect of outsiders and so that you will not be dependent on anybody.”
 [1 Thess. 4:9-12, Bible, NIV]

“Go to the ant, you sluggard! Consider her ways and be wise, which, having no captain, overseer or ruler, provides her supplies in the summer, and gathers her food in the harvest, how long will you slumber, O sluggard? When will you rise from your sleep? A little sleep, a little slumber, a little folding of the hands to sleep--so shall your poverty come on you like a prowler [and government dependence], and your need like an armed man.”
 [Prov. 6:6-11, Bible, NKJV]

[INTERPRETATION: Laziness allows us to be robbed of our heritage and our birthright, our dignity and our sovereignty, because we are victimized by it and will end up surrendering our rights to the government out of desperation in order to get the sustenance that we were otherwise unwilling to earn. This makes the government into a Robinhood, which using the tools of democracy, turns a sword against its own citizens to rob from the rich to give to the poor. This leads to the downfall of democracy eventually because the government becomes an agent of plunder.]

A search of the Federal Register and the C.F.R. will not find criminal sections 7201(tax evasion) and 7203(willful failure to file) of Title 26 (the I.R. Code) anywhere. This fact seems to contradict the mandate of 44 U.S.C. §1505(a), which says, “for the purposes of this chapter (Sec. 1501 et seq.) every document or order which prescribes a penalty has generally applicability and legal effect” and that those “having general applicability and legal effect” are “required to be published.” From this it would appear as though these penalty statutes should have been published in the Federal Register and the C.F.R. if they were to be enforced against the public at large, but Congress very deliberately limited the application of these penalty statutes and all of chapter 75 of the I.R. Code to a person described in section 7343 of the I.R. Code—a person who is “under a duty to perform the act in respect of which the violation occurs.” The person under a duty is only a person who “effectively connected” himself with the U.S. Government income, an act called a “trade or business”, and willfully made some of that income part of their own estate by criminal conduct, such as fraud or perjury. Upon proof of fraud or perjury, the additional punishment of these statutes is applicable. Hence, sections 7201 and 7203 are not statutes of primary punishment, they only provide for additional punishment after a primary criminal act has been charged and proven. Only

1 then does the U.S. Court have authority to impose the additional punishment under section 7201(tax evasion) and section
2 7203 (willful failure to file) upon such a person, and no other.

3 The Federal Government “employee” who works in the federal zone and is responsible for handling part of the U.S.
4 Government’s income is the most likely candidate to be in a position to act fraudulently with regard to that income. Such
5 person is in a fiduciary relationship with regard to the U.S. Government income and 44 U.S.C. §1501(a)(2) excepted
6 statutes that are “effective only against Federal agencies or persons in their capacity as officers, agents, or employees
7 thereof.” So, technically, section 1505(a) does not require section 7201 and section 7203 of the I.R. code to be in the 8 Federal Register or C.F.R. if it is only being enforced against federal “employees”.

9 If these statutes prescribed primary rather than secondary punishment, they would have general applicability and would be
10 required to be noticed. But, these statutes state they are additional punishment, so they cannot lawfully be used as primary
11 punishment. The fact that they are not noticed in the Federal Register as required for other types of penalties is conclusive
12 evidence that they can only be applied upon the specific persons described in section 7343 and only upon specific U.S.
13 Government income. Section 7343, in turn, only specifies that “officer or employee of a corporation” is the party who has 14 the duty to perform, and that person is holding “public office” in the United States government ONLY. Absence in the 15 Federal Register tells that the subject matter is limited to internal revenue service and not possible to use for external (to the 16 Federal Government) revenue service.

17 With I.R.C. Sections 7201 and 7203 being applied generally through malicious prosecutions and malicious abuse of legal
18 process, there remains only one source of authority being used by Federal Government employees against Americans
19 domiciled in states of the Union and outside of federal jurisdiction. Unlawfulness notwithstanding, Federal Government
20 employees must be relying on authority received by judicial decisions, referred to as “case law” or “judge-made law” by 21 lawyers within and without the U.S. Government.

47 The phrase “indebitatus assumpsit” is fancy Latin for “assumed debt”. In other words, the government, in collecting taxes,
48 is “assuming” or “presuming” that you contracted a debt to pay for their services, even if you did not intend to use or

1 contract for or consent to receive any of their services. In this section, we will expand the notion that income taxes are
 2 contractual to show that even if you did explicitly consent, there is no one in the government who could consent to the 3 agreement or contract.

4 Any valid contract requires the following minimum elements:

- 5 1. An offer.
- 6 2. Mutual consideration.
- 7 3. Fully informed consent/assent.
- 8 4. Voluntary acceptance. This implies no penalty for failing to participate.
- 9 5. Legal age.

10 The Constitution for the United States divides the federal government into three distinct branches: Legislative, Executive,
 11 and Judicial. This broke “Humpty Dumpty” into three pieces. The reasonable question arises as to which of these three 12 pieces has the lawfully delegated authority to contract for or on behalf of the U.S. government in the context of income
 13 taxes. Below is what the U.S. Supreme Court said about this interesting subject:

14 “The Government may carry on its operations through conventional executive agencies or through corporate
 15 forms especially created for defined ends. See Keifer & Keifer v. Reconstruction Finance Corp., 306 U.S. 381,
 16 390, 518. Whatever the form in which the Government functions, anyone entering into an arrangement
 17 with the Government takes the risk of having accurately ascertained that he who purports to act for the 18 Government stays within the bounds of his authority. The scope of this authority may be explicitly defined by 19 Congress or be limited by delegated legislation, properly exercised through the rule-making power. And this 20 is so even though, as here, the agent himself may have been unaware of the limitations upon his authority. See,
 21 e.g., Utah Power & Light Co. v. United States, 243 U.S. 389, 409, 391; United States v. Stewart, 311 U.S. 60,
 22 70, 108, and see, generally, In re Floyd Acceptances, 7 Wall. 666.”
 23 [Federal Crop Ins. v. Merrill, 332 U.S. 380 (1947)]

25 Justice Holmes wrote: “Men must turn square corners when they deal with the Government.” Rock Island, A. &
 26 L. R. Co. v. United States, 254 U.S. 141, 143 (1920). This observation has its greatest force when a private 27 party seeks to spend the Government's money. Protection of the public fisc requires that those who seek public
 28 funds act with scrupulous regard for the requirements of law; respondent could expect no less than to be held to 29 the most demanding standards in its quest for public funds. This is consistent with the general rule that those
 30 who deal with the Government are expected to know the law and may not rely on the conduct of Government
 31 agents contrary to law. 17. [467 U.S. 51, 64]

32 [ . . . ]

33 The appropriateness of respondent's reliance is further undermined because the advice it received from 34 Travelers was oral. It is not merely the possibility of fraud that undermines our confidence in the reliability of 35 official action that is not confirmed or evidenced by a written instrument. Written advice, like a written judicial 36 opinion, requires its author to reflect about the nature of the advice that is given to the citizen, and subjects that
 37 advice to the possibility of review, criticism, and reexamination. The necessity for ensuring that governmental
 38 agents stay within the lawful scope of their authority, and that those who seek public funds act with scrupulous
 39 exactitude, argues strongly for the conclusion that an estoppel cannot be erected on the basis of the oral advice
 40 that underlay respondent's cost reports. That is especially true when a complex program such as Medicare is 41 involved, in which the need for written records is manifest.
 42 [Heckler v. Comm Health Svc, 467 U.S. 51 (1984)]

44 In their answers some of the defendants assert that when the forest reservations were created an understanding
 45 and agreement was had between the defendants, or their predecessors, and some unmentioned officers or
 46 agents of the United States, to the effect that the reservations would not be an obstacle to the construction or
 47 operation of the works in question; that all rights essential thereto would be allowed and granted under the act
 48 of 1905; that, consistently with this understanding and agreement, and relying thereon, the defendants, or their 49 predecessors, completed the works and proceeded with the generation and distribution of electric energy, and
 50 that, in consequence, the United States is estopped to question the right of the defendants to maintain and
 51 operate the works. Of this it is enough to say that the United States is neither bound nor estopped by acts of 52 its officers or agents in entering into an arrangement or agreement to do or cause to be done what the law
 53 does not sanction or permit. Lee v. Munroe, 7 Cranch, 366, 3 L.Ed. 373; Filor v. United States, 9 Wall. 45,
 54 49, 19 L.Ed. 549, 551; Hart v. United States, 95 U.S. 316, 24 L.Ed. 479; Pine River Logging Co. v. United
 56 [Utah Power and Light v. U.S., 243 U.S. 389 (1917)]

"It is contended that since the contract provided that the government 'inspectors will keep a record of the work done,' since their estimates were relied upon by the contractor, and since by reason of the inspector's mistake the contractor was led to do work in excess of the appropriation, the United States is liable as upon an implied contract for the fair value of the work performed. But the short answer to this contention is that since no official of the government could have rendered it liable for this work by an express contract, none can by his acts or omissions create a valid contract implied in fact. The limitation upon the authority to impose contract obligations upon the United States is as applicable to contracts by implication as it is to those expressly made."

[Sutton v. U.S., 256 U.S. 575 (1921)]

Undoubtedly, the general rule is that the United States are neither bound nor estopped by the acts of their officers and agents in entering into an agreement or arrangement to do or cause to be done what the law does not sanction or permit. Also, those dealing with an agent of the United [294 U.S. 120, 124] States must be held to have had notice of the limitation of his authority. Utah Power & Light Co. v. United States, 243 U.S. 389, 409, 37 S.Ct. 387; Sutton v. United States, 256 U.S. 575, 579, 41 S.Ct. 563, 19 A.L.R. 403.

How far, if at all, these general rules are subject to modification where the United States enter into transactions commercial in nature (Cooke v. United States, 91 U.S. 389, 399; White v. United States, 270 U.S. 175, 180, 46 S.Ct. 274) we need not now inquire. The circumstances presented by this record do not show that the assured was deceived or misled to his detriment, or that he had adequate reason to suppose his contract would not be enforced or that the forfeiture provided for by the policy could be waived. New York Life Insurance Co. v. Eggleston, 96 U.S. 572; Phoenix Mut. Life Insurance Co. v. Doster, 106 U.S. 30, 1 S.Ct. 18. The grounds upon which estoppel or waiver are ordinarily predicated are not shown to exist.

[Wilbur Nail Bank v. U.S., 294 U.S. 120 (1935)]

Based on the foregoing, we can safely conclude:

1. Only law or legislative enactment can bind the government to a contract.
2. Persons doing business with the government are presumed to know the law, and the law is the vehicle for notifying the public about the limitations imposed upon the authority of agents working for or on behalf of the government.
3. Oral contracts with the government are unenforceable.
4. Only written contracts with the government are enforceable.
5. Officers of the U.S. government who have no delegated authority to bind the government cannot lawfully be party to any agreement or contract.
6. Any contract or agreement entered into with an agent who had no lawful authority to bind the government is null and void ab initio.
7. Even among officers of the U.S. government who have delegated authority from their supervisor to bind the government through contracts, if either they or their supervisors are acting outside of the authority of law, the contracts are unenforceable and create no rights or remedies for the parties.

In addition to the above, no branch of government can delegate any of its powers to another branch. This requirement originates from the Separation of Powers Doctrine:

"To the contrary, the Constitution divides authority between federal and state governments for the protection of individuals. State sovereignty is not just an end in itself: "Rather, federalism secures to citizens the liberties that derive from the diffusion of sovereign power." Coleman v. Thompson, 501 U.S. 722, 759 (1991) (BLACKMUN, J., dissenting). "Just as the separation and independence of the coordinate branches of the Federal Government serve to prevent the accumulation of excessive power in any one branch, a healthy balance of power between the States and the Federal Government will reduce the risk of tyranny and abuse from either front." Gregory v. [505 U.S. 144, 182] Ashcroft, 501 U.S., at 458. See The Federalist No. 51, p. 323. (C. Rossiter ed. 1961).

Where Congress exceeds its authority relative to the States, therefore, the departure from the constitutional plan cannot be ratified by the "consent" of state officials. An analogy to the separation of powers among the branches of the Federal Government clarifies this point. The Constitution's division of power among the three branches is violated where one branch invades the territory of another, whether or not the encroached-upon branch approves the encroachment. In Buckley v. Valeo, 424 U.S. 1, 118-137 (1976), for instance, the Court held that Congress had infringed the President's appointment power, despite the fact that the President himself had manifested his consent to the statute that caused the infringement by signing it into law. See National League of Cities v. Usery, 426 U.S., at 842, n. 12. In INS v. Chadha, 462 U.S. 919, 944-959 (1983), we held that the legislative veto violated the constitutional requirement that legislation be presented to the President, despite Presidents' approval of hundreds of statutes containing a legislative veto provision. See id., at 944-945. The constitutional authority of Congress cannot be expanded by the "consent" of the governmental unit whose domain is thereby narrowed, whether that unit is the Executive Branch or the States.

State officials thus cannot consent to the enlargement of the powers of Congress beyond those enumerated in the Constitution. Indeed, the facts of this case raise the possibility that powerful incentives might lead both federal and state officials to view departures from the federal structure to be in their personal interests. Most citizens recognize the need for radioactive waste disposal sites, but few want sites near their homes. As a result, while it would be well within the authority of either federal or state officials to choose where the disposal sites will be, it is likely to be in the political interest of each individual official to avoid being held accountable to the voters for the choice of location. If [505 U.S. 144, 183] a federal official is faced with the alternatives of choosing a location or directing the States to do it, the official may well prefer the latter, as a means of shifting responsibility for the eventual decision. If a state official is faced with the same set of alternatives - choosing a location or having Congress direct the choice of a location - the state official may also prefer the latter, as it may permit the avoidance of personal responsibility. The interests of public officials thus may not coincide with the Constitution's intergovernmental allocation of authority. Where state officials purport to submit to the direction of Congress in this manner, federalism is hardly being advanced." [New York v. United States, 505 U.S. 144 (1992)]

The only persons within the government who can bind the government are "public officers" acting under the authority of law. These officials exercise broad discretion in the execution of the "public trusts" under their stewardship as elected or appointed officials of the U.S. government:

"As expressed otherwise, the powers delegated to a public officer are held in trust for the people and are to be exercised in behalf of the government or of all citizens who may need the intervention of the officer. 46 Furthermore, the view has been expressed that all public officers, within whatever branch and whatever level of government, and whatever be their private vocations, are trustees of the people, and accordingly labor under every disability and prohibition imposed by law upon trustees relative to the making of personal financial gain from a discharge of their trusts. 47 That is, a public officer occupies a fiduciary relationship to the political entity on whose behalf he or she serves. 48 and owes a fiduciary duty to the public. 49 It has been said that the fiduciary responsibilities of a public officer cannot be less than those of a private individual. 50 Furthermore, it has been stated that any enterprise undertaken by the public official which tends to weaken public confidence and undermine the sense of security for individual rights is against public policy.<sup>51</sup>" [63C American Jurisprudence 2d., Public Officers and Employees, §247 (1999)]

An employee who is not a "public official" has no authority to bind the government because he has no fiduciary duty to act in the best interests of the government. It is worth noting that the ONLY person in the IRS who is a "public official" is the IRS commissioner himself. He is appointed by the President pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §7803\(a\)\(1\)\(A\). Everyone below him has no statutory authority to serve and DO NOT serve even as federal "employees". This is confirmed by the 1939 Internal Revenue Code, which is the basis for the current Internal Revenue Code and was never repealed. All laws prior to that relating to federal taxation were repealed by the Revenue Act of 1939. See 53 Stat. 1, the Revenue Act of 1939. Below is what it says about Revenue Agents in the 1939 Code, in section 4000, 53 Stat. 489:

no general or special agent or inspector of the Treasury Department in connection with internal revenue, by whatever designation he may be known, shall be appointed, commissioned, or employed.

“Competent agents”? What a joke! If they were “competent”, then they would:

1. Know and follow the law and be fired if they didn't.
2. Work as an “employee” for a specific Congressman in the House of Representatives who was personally accountable for their actions. “Taxation and representation” must coincide to preserve the original intent of the Constitution and the separation of powers doctrine.
3. Have delegated statutory authority of law to serve.
4. Would be public officers with a fiduciary duty to the public who they serve.

You can read the above statute yourself on the Family Guardian website at:

<http://famguardian.org/CDs/LawCD/Federal/RevenueActs/Revenue%20Act%20of%201939.pdf>

If “Revenue Agents” are not “appointed, commissioned, or employed”, then what exactly are they? We'll tell you what they are: They are independent consultants who operate on commission. They get a commission from the property they steal from the American People, and their stolen “loot” comes from the Department of Agriculture. See the following response to a Freedom of Information Act request proving that IRS agents are paid by the Department of Agriculture:

<http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/Evidence/OrgAndDuties/USDApaysIRS.pdf>

Why would the Congress NOT want to make Revenue Agents “appointed, commissioned, or employed”? Well, if they are effectively STEALING property from the American people and if they are not connected in any way with the federal government directly, have no statutory authority to exist under Title 26, and are not “employees”, then the President of the United States and all of his appointees in the Executive Branch cannot then be held personally liable for the acts and abuses of these thieves. What politician in his right mind would want to jeopardize his career by being held accountable for a mafia extortion ring whose only job is to steal money from people absent any legal authority?

The upside of all this is that if IRS agents are not “appointed, commissioned, or employed”, then they have no authority to obligate the government to anything. This is true of EVERYONE in the IRS who serves below the IRS Commissioner. The implications of this are HUGE. Most people become “taxpayers” through the operation of private/special law, as we said earlier. This happens usually by them signing an “agreement” of some kind that makes them subject to the I.R.C., such as: IRS Form 1040, SSA Form SS-5, IRS Form W-4, etc. The Regulations for the IRS Form W-4, for instance, identify this form as an “agreement”:

26 C.F.R. Sec. 31.3402(p)-1
Title 26
CHAPTER I
SUBCHAPTER C
PART 31
Subpart E

Sec. 31.3402(p)-1 Voluntary withholding agreements.

(a) In general. An employee and his employer may enter into an agreement under section 3402(b) to provide for the withholding of income tax upon payments of amounts described in paragraph (b)(1) of Sec. 31.3401(a)-3, made after December 31, 1970. An agreement may be entered into under this section only with respect to amounts which are includible in the gross income of the employee under section 61, and must be applicable to all such amounts paid by the employer to the employee. The amount to be withheld pursuant to an agreement under section 3402(p) shall be determined under the rules contained in section 3402 and the regulations thereunder. (b) Form and duration of agreement. (1)(i) Except as provided in subdivision (ii) of this subparagraph, an employee who desires to enter into an agreement under section 3402(p) shall furnish his employer with Form W-4 (withholding exemption certificate) executed in accordance with the provisions of section 3402(f) and the regulations thereunder. The furnishing of such Form W-4 shall constitute a request for withholding.

1 How can this agreement be an agreement with the government without anyone in the IRS who can bind the government to
 2 the agreement? Does the IRS sign this form? NO! Did the government make you personally an offer to accept this
 3 agreement. NO! Who, then, are the parties to this agreement and by what authority does the government become a party to 4 it?

5 “But the short answer to this contention is that since no official of the government could have rendered it
 6 liable for this work by an express contract, none can by his acts or omissions create a valid contract implied
 7 in fact. The limitation upon the authority to impose contract obligations upon the United States is as 8 applicable to contracts by implication as it is to those expressly made.”
 9 [Sutton v. U.S., 256 U.S. 575 (1921)]

10 Let us give an important example of how this concept operates. The Legislative Branch cannot delegate its taxing or tax
 11 collection powers to the Executive Branch. Article 1, Section 8, Clauses 1 and 3 of the Constitution of the United States
 12 gives ONLY to Congress the power to “lay AND collect taxes”. This means that if Congress wants to collect taxes from 13 within states of the Union, the taxation and representation must coincide in the SAME physical person, who works in the 14 House of Representatives. The U.S. Constitution Article 1, Section 7, Clause 1 requires that all spending bills must
 15 originate in the House of Representatives, and by implication, all taxes must be collected by the House of Representatives
 16 to pay for everything in the spending bill. The House Ways and Means Committee is responsible to ensure that both sides
 17 of this equation will balance out so that we have a balanced budget. The reason that members of the House or 18 Representatives are reelected every two years is that if they get too aggressive in collecting taxes within their district, we 19 can throw the bastards out of office immediately. This reasoning was ably explained by James Madison in Federalist Paper
 20 #58, when he said:

21 “The House of Representatives cannot only refuse, but they alone can propose, the supplies requisite for the
 22 support of government. They, in a word, hold the purse that powerful instrument by which we behold, in the 23 history of the British Constitution, an infant and humble representation of the people gradually enlarging the 24 sphere of its activity and importance, and finally reducing, as far as it seems to have wished, all the overgrown
 25 prerogatives of the other branches of the government. This power over the purse may, in fact, be regarded as 26 the most complete and effectual weapon with which any constitution can arm the immediate representatives of 27 the people, for obtaining a redress of every grievance, and for carrying into effect every just and salutary
 28 measure. But will not the House of Representatives be as much interested as the Senate in maintaining the 29 government in its proper functions, and will they not therefore be unwilling to stake its existence or its 30 reputation on the pliancy of the Senate? Or, if such a trial of firmness between the two branches were hazarded,
 31 would not the one be as likely first to yield as the other? These questions will create no difficulty with those who 32 reflect that in all cases the smaller the number, and the more permanent and conspicuous the station, of men in 33 power, the stronger must be the interest which they will individually feel in whatever concerns the
 34 government..”
 35 [Federalist Paper #58, James Madison]

36 Neither the Senate nor the House of Representatives can lawfully, through legislative enactment, separate the tax
 37 COLLECTION function from the REPRESENTATION function in the context of states of the Union by delegating either
 38 function to another one of the two remaining branches of government. This would destroy the separation of powers and be 39 unconstitutional. If they do, it must be presumed that they are acting upon territory not within the “United States” (states of 40 the Union) within the meaning of the Constitution and which is part of the federal zone, and therefore are not bound by the 41 limitations imposed by the Constitution. This is exactly the situation with the present income tax described in I.R.C.,
 42 Subtitle A: It applies mainly if not exclusively to persons engaged in a “trade or business” or “public office”, which means
 43 people who are contractors, agents, public officers, or employees of the federal government. These people serve primarily 44 within the Executive Branch, which is limited to the District of Columbia pursuant to 4 U.S.C. §72. The IRS is in the 45 Executive Branch as well, under the Treasury Department. When the IRS was first created in 1862, the Congress called it a
 46 “Bureau”, which implies that it exists not to interface directly with people in states of the Union, but to service business
 47 operations WITHIN the government itself. Hence the name INTERNAL Revenue Service.

48 Therefore, we must conclude that even if we did agree to the “quasi contract” to procure the protection of government by
 49 consenting to participate in the Subtitle A income tax, there would be NO ONE within the federal government who could
 50 lawfully act for or obligate the government, since the only parties who could lawfully do it are in the Legislative Branch.
 51 This is also confirmed by the following:

52 “Every man is supposed to know the law. A party who makes a contract with an officer [of the government]
 53 without having it reduced to writing is knowingly accessory to a violation of duty on his part. Such a party aids
 54 in the violation of the law.”
 55 [Clark v. United States, 95 U.S. 539 (1877)]

1 When you submit any kind of tax form to the government, none of them require the signature of an agent of the 2 government. Therefore, the government acquires no rights or remedies pursuant to any law as a non-party to the 3 transaction.

4 5.4.6.5 Modern tax trials are religious “inquisitions” and not valid legal processes

5 This section will build upon sections 4.3.12 and 5.4.6.1 earlier, in which we showed that our government has become
 6 idolatry, a false religion, and false god and that its “Bible” has become the Infernal and Satanic Revenue Code. In it, we
 7 will prove that so-called “income tax” trials are not in fact legal proceedings at all, but essentially amount to religious
 8 inquisitions against those who do not consent to participate in the official state-sponsored federal religion called the Internal
 9 Revenue Code. We will start off by defining what a valid legal proceeding is, and then show you why today’s tax trials do
 10 not even come close to meeting these requirements, and are conducted more like religious inquisitions than valid legal
 11 proceedings. We will even compare modern tax trials to the early “witch trials” to show quite graphically just how similar 12 that they are to religious inquisitions. We will then close the section by giving you a tabular comparison showing all the 13 similarities between how federal tax trials of today are conducted and the way the inquisitions were conducted in the 1600’s
 14 so that the facts are crystal clear in your mind. This will form the basis to describe modern tax trials not only as religious 15 inquisitions, but also as a “malicious abuse of legal process” that is the responsibility of mainly federal judges.

16 At the heart of the notion of religious liberty and the First Amendment is the freedom from “compelled association”. We
 17 can only be “holy” in God’s eyes, if we separate ourselves from pagan people and governments around us. Here are a few
 18 authorities from the Bible on this subject of separation of “church”, which is us as believers, from “state”, which is all the 19 pagan nonbelievers living under our system of government:

20 “Come out from among them [the unbelievers]

21 And be separate, says the Lord.

22 Do not touch what is unclean.

23 And I will receive you.

24 I will be a Father to you,

25 And you shall be my sons and daughters,

26 Says the Lord Almighty.”

27 [2 Corinthians 6:17-18, Bible, NKJV]

28 “Do not love the world or the things in the world. If anyone loves [is a citizen of] the world, the love of the 29 Father is not in Him. For all that is in the world--the lust of the flesh, the lust of the eyes, and the pride of life--
 30 is not of the Father but is of the world. And the world is passing away, and the lust of it; but he who does the 31 will of God abides forever.”

32 [1 John 2:15-17, Bible, NKJV]

33 “Adulterers and adulteresses! Do you now know that friendship [and “citizenship”] with the world is enmity 34 with God? Whoever therefore wants to be a friend [citizen or “taxpayer”] of the world makes himself an 35 enemy of God.”

36 [James 4:4, Bible, NKJV]

37 “Pure and undefiled religion before God and the Father is this: to visit orphans and widows in their trouble,
 38 and to keep oneself unspotted from the world [and the corrupted governments and laws of the world].”

39 [James 1:27, Bible, NKJV]

40 “And you shall be holy to Me, for I the Lord am holy, and have separated you from the peoples, that you
 41 should be Mine.”

42 [Leviticus 20:26, Bible, NKJV]

43 “I am a stranger in the earth;
 44 Do not hide Your commandments from me.”

45 [Psalm 119:19, Bible, NKJV]

46 “I have become a stranger to my brothers,
 47 And an alien to my mother's children;
 48 Because zeal for Your house has eaten me up,
 49 And the reproaches of those who reproach You have fallen on me.”

50 [Psalm 69:8-9, Bible, NKJV]

51 A graphical example of the need for this separation of “church” and “state” is illustrated in the Bible book of Nehemiah, in 52 which the Jews tried to rebuild the wall that separated them, who were believers, from the pagan people, governments, and rulers around them who were enslaving them with taxes, persecuting, and ridiculing them. Does this scenario sound familiar? It should because that is exactly the scenario Christians in America are beginning to be exposed to. Those who want to be holy and sanctified therefore cannot associate themselves with a pagan or socialist state without violating God's laws, sinning, and alienating themselves from God. The First Amendment says the right to refuse to associate, which in this case is a "religious practice", is protected. Below is what a prominent First Amendment reference book says on this subject:

Just as there is freedom to speak, to associate, and to believe, so also there is freedom not to speak, associate, or believe. "The right to speak and the right to refrain from speaking on a government tax return, and in violation of the [Fifth Amendment when coerced, for instance] are complementary components of the broader concept of "individual freedom of mind." Wooley v. Maynard, 430 U.S. 703 (1977). Freedom of conscience dictates that no individual may be forced to espouse ideological causes with which he disagrees:

"[A]t the heart of the First Amendment is the notion that the individual should be free to believe as he will, and that in a free society one's beliefs should be shaped by his mind and by his conscience rather than coerced by the State [through illegal enforcement of the revenue laws]." Aboud v. Detroit Board of Education [431 U.S. 209] (1977)

Freedom from compelled association is a vital component of freedom of expression. Indeed, freedom from compelled association illustrates the significance of the liberty or personal autonomy model of the First Amendment. As a general constitutional principle, it is for the individual and not for the state to choose one's associations and to define the persona which he holds out to the world. [First Amendment Law, Barron-Dienes, West Publishing, ISBN 0-314-22677-X, pp. 266-267]

All of the harassment, financial terrorism, and evil instituted by the IRS and the legal skirmishes happening in courtrooms across the country relating to income taxes is all designed with one very specific, singular purpose in mind: to force and terrorize people into associating with, subsidizing, and having allegiance to a pagan, socialist, EVIL government, and to thereby commit idolatry in making government one's new false god and using that false god as a substitute for the Living God. We are being forced to choose between one of two competing sovereigns: the true, living God, or a pagan and evil government, and we can only choose ONE:

"No one can serve two masters; for either he will hate the one and love the other, or else he will be loyal to the one and despise the other. You cannot serve God and mammon [unrighteous gain or any other false god]."<sup>52</sup> [Jesus in Matt. 6:24, Bible, NKJV]

"Bravery or slavery, take your pick, because your covetous government is going to force you to choose one!" [Family Guardian Fellowship]

We must remember what the Bible says about this choice we have:

"You shall not follow a [socialist or democratic] crowd[or "mob"] to do evil; nor shall you testify in a dispute so as to turn aside after many to pervert justice." [Exodus 23:2, Bible, NKJV]

"Away with you, Satan! For it is written, You shall worship the Lord your God, and Him ONLY [NOT the government!] you shall serve [with your labor or your earnings from labor]."<sup>53</sup> [Jesus in Matt. 4:10, Bible, NKJV]

Therefore, there is only one righteous choice of who our "Master" can be as believers, and it isn't man, or anything including governments, that is made by man. If it isn't God, then you have violated your contract and covenant with God in the Bible. When you choose government as your Master, the tithes you used to pay to God then are diverted to subsidize your new pagan god, the government, in the form of "income taxes". Once you understand this important concept completely, the picture becomes quite clear and the purposes behind the abuse of legal process relating to illegal income tax enforcement and collection will be clear in your mind. What we are dealing with in the court system then, is essentially not a legal, but a political and ideological war. The apostle Paul warned us about this inevitable ideological war, when he said:

"For we do not wrestle against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this age, against spiritual hosts of wickedness in the heavenly [and government] places." [Eph. 6:12, Bible, NKJV]

1 In the context of individual taxation, we now know from the preceding sections that there are no “positive laws” at the
2 federal level, other than perhaps the Constitution itself. The Internal Revenue Code is therefore a religion, and not a law, as
3 we concluded earlier. The disciples of that religion are all those who benefit financially from it by receiving socialist
4 government benefits, which are really just bribes paid from stolen money generated by this false religion. Among the
5 victims of this socialist bribery effected with loot stolen from our fellow Americans are judges, lawyers, and jurors. To
6 validate our analysis here, we will therefore prove to you scientifically in the remainder of this section that modern tax trials
7 are more “political campaigns” and “religious inquisitions” rather than valid legal processes. In a society without tax laws
8 where “voluntary compliance” must be maintained, some method of discipline must be used, and since it can't be “law”,
9 then the tools of discipline and enforcement must then degenerate into political persecution and religious inquisition.

10 A valid legal proceeding in a federal court against a sovereign National who lives in a state of the Union and not on land
11 within federal territorial jurisdiction must meet all the following prerequisites to be a valid:

- 12 1. The statute which is being enforced must be a “positive law” which they are obligated to observe. See 1 U.S.C.
13 §204(a). Positive law means that the people consented to the enforcement of the law and its adverse impact against 14 their rights. If the statute being enforced is not a “positive law”, then the government must disclose on the record how 15 and why the defendant comes under the contractual or voluntary jurisdiction of the statute. They must prove, for 16 instance, beyond a reasonable doubt, why the person is a federal “employee” in order to enforce a “special law” statute
17 such as the Internal Revenue Code that only applies to federal employees.
- 18 2. Implementing regulations must be published in the federal register for the positive law statute that allow the statute to 19 be enforced. Without publishment in the federal register, no law may prescribe any kind of penalty, as we learned
20 earlier. See the following for exhaustive treatment of this subject:
21 IRS Due Process Meeting Handout, Form #03.008
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>
- 22 3. Jurisdictional boundaries and requirements must be strictly observed by the court:
  - 23 3.1. The violation of a “positive law” must occur within federal jurisdiction on land that the government can prove 24 belonged to the federal government at the time of the offense. Such records are in the possession of the 25 Department of Justice.
  - 26 3.2. If the government is exercising extraterritorial jurisdiction, it must provide evidence of consent to the law in some 27 form, so that it is enforcing the equivalent of “private law”/contract law within a foreign jurisdiction. This 28 requirement is the essence of what the courts call “federalism”.
  - 29 3.3. Federal judges who hear federal tax trials must maintain a domicile on federal land within the district where they 30 serve, and are unqualified to serve if they do not.
  - 31 3.4. Since federal law applies mainly inside the federal zone, then the only people who can serve as jurors on a federal 32 trial are people born in and residing within the federal zone, and very few people meet this requirement.
- 33 4. The result of violating the positive law statute must harm a specific, flesh and blood individual. This is the foundation
34 of the notion of “common law”. Laws are there to protect the “sovereign”, which in this country is the People and not
35 the government. This means that if the government is proceeding as the injured party, then it must produce a “verified 36 complaint” alleging a specific injury to other than itself in order to enforce a statute.
- 37 5. A confession or a critical statement or act by the accused upon which a conviction depends must be made completely
38 voluntarily and the subject who made the confession or committed the act may not be under any kind of duress or 39 undue influence, especially by the government who is hearing the case. It is considered prejudicial and a violation of 40 due process to rely upon evidence that was obtained under duress and involuntarily.
- 41 6. No presumptions may be made about the status of the individual involved, because assumption and presumption
42 violate due process of law under the Fifth Amendment and are also a religious sin (see Numbers 15:30, Bible). All
43 evidence admitted, even if it is signed under penalty of perjury by the National, must be verified to be true and correct
44 and the individual must agree that no duress was involved in the production of the evidence in order for it to be 45 admissible.
  - 46 6.1. “prima facie” evidence of law, such as the Internal Revenue Code, are not admissible. “prima facie” means 47 “presumed”. See the legislative notes under 1 U.S.C. §204.
  - 48 6.2. The accused cannot be “presumed” to be an statutory “U.S. citizen” pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1401, without a 49 showing with credible evidence that he was born within federal jurisdiction, on land under the exclusive 50 jurisdiction of the federal government.
  - 51 6.3. The jury may not make any presumptions. Jurists must be warned in advance that they should not make any 52 presumptions about what the tax code says, which means they must be:
    - 53 6.3.1. Shown that the code is not positive law but special law, and therefore may not be used generally, but only against persons who effectively connected themselves to the code by working for the government.

1 6.3.2. Shown the code themselves.

2 6.3.3. Shown why the individual on trial is subject to the code by being shown the liability statute or by proving
3 that he is a federal "employee"

4 6.4. See the following for details on how "presumption" is abused by federal courts to DESTROY your rights:

Presumption: Chief Weapon for Unlawfully Enlarging Federal Jurisdiction, Form #05.017
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

5 7. The voir dire jury selection and judge selection process must remove all persons from the legal process who have any 6 kind of conflict of interest:

7 7.1. Judges who receive retirement benefits or pay from illegal collection activity must recuse themselves.

8 7.2. Jurists who receive any kind of government benefit or who file tax returns and therefore are subject to influence
9 by the IRS must be removed from the trial. The only people who can serve on the jury are those not subject to 10 extortion or influence by the IRS. Consequently, the IRS must agree in writing not to institute any kind of 11 collection action or retaliation against any of the jurists for any adverse decisions they might make against the 12 IRS.

13 8. The judge:

14 8.1. May not pay or receive benefits from Subtitle A federal income taxes, nor be subject to any kind of collection
15 action by the IRS. Even the possibility that such retaliation could happen by the IRS would severely prejudice the 16 rights of the accused if he is opposing the IRS.

17 8.2. Must have an appointment affidavit making him an Article III judge, which is admitted into evidence prior to the 18 start of the trial for the jury and the accused to see.

19 8.3. Must be a member of the Judicial Branch and not the Executive Branch. Consequently, he cannot be an 20 "employee" of the Executive branch and may not have a SF-61 form on file with the executive branch. Instead,
21 all of his records and pay must be handled by the Judicial branch and not any federal agency in the Executive 22 Branch.

23 9. If the judge is either a "taxpayer" or does not demonstrate a willingness to recuse himself as a person who receives
24 financial benefit from the operation of the I.R.C. against persons who do not consent or volunteer, then the jury must
25 be advised that because a clear conflict of interest is present and that they have the right to rule on both the facts and
26 the law. Ordinarily, the judge would rule on the law and the jury would rule only on the facts, but if the judge has a
27 clear conflict of interest, then Thomas Jefferson and John Jay, one of our first chief Justices of the Supreme Court, both
28 said that the jury can and should rule on BOTH the facts AND the law to prevent tyranny by the judge:

29 "It is left... to the juries, if they think the permanent judges are under any bias whatever in any cause, to take
30 on themselves to judge the law as well as the fact. They never exercise this power but when they suspect
31 partiality in the judges; and by the exercise of this power they have been the firmest bulwarks of English 32 liberty."

33 [Thomas Jefferson to Abbe Arnoux, 1789. ME 7:423, Papers 15:283]

34 The judicial process we have today for hearing tax cases in federal district courts does not even remotely resemble most of 35 what is listed above. For instance:

36 1. Federal judges commonly treat the Internal Revenue Code as "law" and admit it into evidence at tax trials against 37 "nontaxpayers" who are not subject to it, which is very prejudicial of the rights of the accused.

38 2. Federal judges seldom if ever recuse themselves even though they are "taxpayers" and even though them being
39 "taxpayers" and receiving benefits based on illegal enforcement of Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A creates a conflict
40 of interest in violation of 18 U.S.C. §208.

41 3. Jurors are seldom excused from tax trials because they are either "taxpayers" or are in receipt of benefits derived from 42 income taxes which might create a conflict of interest. This prejudices the rights of the accused in favor of the
43 government.

44 4. Few of the jurors or judges are domiciled or born on federal land that is within the judicial district or Internal Revenue
45 District in question. Consequently, the trial is moot and illegal from the beginning. Many of them said on their jury
46 summons that they are "U.S. citizens", but the government never defines anywhere exactly what it means to be a "U.S.
47 citizen" in any positive law statute pertaining to jury selection. Consequently, the federal government uses deliberately
48 vague laws and the false presumption they generate to induct illegal jurors to serve on federal tax trials, thereby
49 destroying the separation of powers between state and federal governments.

50 5. The criminal statutes that are being enforced, found in 26 U.S.C. §7201 through 7217 have no implementing
51 regulations published in either the Federal Register or the Code of Federal Regulations, and therefore are 52 unenforceable against anyone but federal "employees". Likewise, the judge prejudices the rights of the accused by not

1 requiring the government to prove that the accused is a federal employee who is the proper subject of the Internal
2 Revenue Code.

- 3 6. The federal judge not only doesn't prevent, but actually encourages false presumption and prejudice by the jury by:
4 6.1. DOJ prosecutors and the judge work as a team to encourage jealousy and contempt in the jurists against the
5 accused by telling them that they are "taxpayers" but "this bozo refuses to pay his fair share!"
6 6.2. Judges refuse to allow jurists to see the actual laws that the accused is being tried for, because there simply are 7 none in most cases.

8 The above abuses of the legal process are primarily the responsibility of the judge hearing the case. If you want to blame
9 anyone or prosecute anyone for the abuse, prosecute the judge himself as a private individual for exceeding his lawful
10 authority and thereby injuring your rights. All of the above abuses of the legal process are described in the legal dictionary
11 as follows:

12 *"Malicious abuse of legal process. Willfully misapplying court process to obtain object not intended by law.
13 The wilful misuse or misapplication of process to accomplish a purpose not warranted or commanded by the 14 writ. The malicious perversion of a regularly issued process, whereby a result not lawfully or properly
15 obtained on a writ is secured; not including cases where the process was procured maliciously but not abused
16 or misused after its issuance. The employment of process where probable causes exists but where the intent is 17 to secure objects other than those intended by law. Hughes v. Swinehart, D.C.Pa., 376 F.Supp. 650, 652. The 18 tort of "malicious abuse of process" requires a perversion of court process to accomplish some end which the 19 process was not designed to accomplish some end which the process was not designed to accomplish, and does
20 not arise from a regular use of process, even with ulterior motives. Capital Elec. Co. v. Cristaldi, D.C.Md., 157
21 F.Supp. 646, 648. See also Abuse (Process); Malicious prosecution. Compare Malicious use of process."
22 [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 958]*

23 The federal Injustice system we have is meant only as a counterfeit that is intended to deceive the people and give them a 24 false sense of security and confidence in our legal system:

25 "GOVERNMENT ANNOUNCEMENT April 15, 2004

26 [Washington, D.C.] The federal government announced today that it is changing its emblem from an eagle to a 27 condom, because that more clearly reflects its political stance.

28 A condom stands up to inflation, halts production, destroys the next generation, protects a bunch of pricks, and 29 gives you a sense of security while it's actually screwing you."

30 Consequently, we contend that most federal tax trials are not a judicial or even a lawful proceeding. This is further
31 described in the free Memorandum of law below:

Political Jurisdiction, Form #05.004
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

32 In fact, based on several Freedom of Information Act Requests (FOIA) about the status of numerous federal district court
33 "judges" we have, who hear such tax cases, most of the judges do not have a valid appointment document, never took any
34 oath as required by positive law, and aren't even listed as "judges" in the records of the government! Don't believe us?
35 Send in a Freedom of Information Act (FOIA) request yourself and find out! Throughout the remainder of this section, we 36 will refer to these imposters simply as "pseudo judges". Therefore, our "United States District Courts" have simply 37 become the equivalent of administrative federal office buildings that are part of the Executive, and not Judicial, branch of 38 the government. A truly sovereign and independent Article III Judicial Branch can't even be mentioned in any federal 39 statute, because of the separation of powers doctrine, and yet we have a whole Title of the U.S. Code, Title 28, which 40 defines and prescribes what pseudo judges in these bogus "courts" can and can't do. The Supreme Court says the existence
41 of such laws proves that such "courts" aren't really judicial tribunals. Notice the statement "the ONLY judicial power
42 vested in Congress" below:

44 good behavior, it necessarily follows that, if Congress authorizes the creation of courts and the appointment
45 of judges for limited time, it must act independently of the Constitution upon territory which is not part of 46 the United States within the meaning of the Constitution."
47 [O'Donoghue v. United States, 289 U.S. 516, 53 S.Ct. 740 (1933)]*

Title 28 not only “creates” all the district and circuit courts of the United States, but it in fact even defines what the “judges” CANNOT rule on. See 28 U.S.C. §2201(a), which plainly states that federal judges CANNOT rule on rights in the context of income taxes. Excuse our language here, but what the HELL is a judge for if he can't defend or rule on our rights(!)? We'll give you a hint: The only “rights” he is there to protect are the governments “right” to STEAL your money and use it to subsidize socialism. The only type of court over which the Congress could have such absolute legislative power over judges is in an Article IV (of the Constitution), territorial court, and this in fact exactly describes our present District and Circuit federal court systems. Our present federal District and Circuit courts were created to rule ONLY over issues relating to federal territory and property under Article 1, Section 8, Clause 17, and Article 4, Section 3, Clause 2 of the Constitution. They are all “legislative” rather than “constitutional” or “judicial” courts. They are part of the Executive Branch of the government, and which have no authority to even address Constitutional rights. They are NOT part of the “judicial branch”, and this is a deception. The entire Judicial Branch, in fact, is composed exclusively of the seven justices of the Supreme Court. A very exclusive club, we might add!

*“The United States District Court has only such jurisdiction as Congress confers [by legislation].”
[Eastern Metals Corp. v. Martin, 191 F.Supp. 245 (D.C.N.Y. 1960)]*

If the pseudo judges who hear tax trials aren't even part of the Judicial branch, were never appointed, and are simply “employees” of the Executive Branch, then what exactly are they? They are simply imposters who are there to create the illusion that there is even a remote possibility of equity and justice in the courtroom relating to an income tax issue. To preserve some semblance of civil order and prevent a massive civil revolt, the government has to maintain some kind of façade so that the people don't lose faith in a government that in fact has already become totally corrupted in the area of money and commerce. Keep in mind that deceit in commerce is the most offensive and abominable sin that God hates the most. Below is an excerpt from Matthew Henry's commentary on the Bible demonstrating why this is:

“As religion towards God is a branch of universal righteousness (he is not an honest man that is not devout), so righteousness towards men is a branch of true religion, for he is not a godly man that is not honest, nor can he expect that his devotion should be accepted; for, 1. Nothing is more offensive to God than deceit in commerce. A false balance is here put for all manner of unjust and fraudulent practices [of our public dis-servants] in dealing with any person [within the public], which are all an abomination to the Lord, and render those abominable [hated] to him that allow themselves in the use of such accursed arts of thriving. It is an affront to justice, which God is the patron of, as well as a wrong to our neighbour, whom God is the protector of. Men [in the IRS and the Congress] make light of such frauds, and think there is no sin in that which there is money to be got by, and, while it passes undiscovered, they cannot blame themselves for it; a blot is no blot till it is hit, Hos. 12:7, 8. But they are not the less an abomination to God, who will be the avenger of those that are defrauded by their brethren. 2. Nothing is more pleasing to God than fair and honest dealing, nor more necessary to make us and our devotions acceptable to him: A just weight is his delight. He himself goes by a just weight, and holds the scale of judgment with an even hand, and therefore is pleased with those that are herein followers of him. A balance cheats, under pretence of doing right most exactly, and therefore is the greater abomination to God.”
[Matthew Henry's Commentary on the Whole Bible; Henry, M., 1996, c1991, under Prov. 11:1]

Back in the 1600's in our country and elsewhere in Europe, there were several notable occasions where so-called “witches” were tried and finally executed for practicing “witchcraft”. The nature of the proceedings strongly resembled the religious “inquisitions” that preceded them throughout Europe in the 1400's. In fact, witchcraft trials evolved out of these religious inquisitions and first began to appear in the late 1400's. A History Channel special on witches aired on October 29, 2004, identified the following common characteristics about how these “witch trials” were conducted:

1. Historical foundations of the public outcry against witchcraft:
  - 1.1. The peak of the witch trials occurred in the late 1600's. The period from the late 1400's to the late 1600s were known as the “Burning Times” because witch hunts and executions were so prevalent during this period. The most common places for witch trials were in the rural villages of France and Germany, but they also occurred in America in the late 1600's.
  - 1.2. The basis for the persecution of witches had a primarily “religious” foundation. The Bible forbids witchcraft in Deut. 19:10. Witches were believed to have a covenant with the devil and worship the devil and to be involved in harmful activities that were a threat to society as a whole.
  - 1.3. The practice of witchcraft was viewed as the worst type of religious heresy and was punishable by death by execution. The reason it had this status was because the practice of witchcraft was made to appear as a threat not just to the church, but to the whole society. Activities of accused “witches” were viewed as a competing “religion” and the worship of the devil. Witchcraft was also viewed as a threat to the predominantly Christian religion and evidence of possession by the “devil”.
2. Social status of witches:

- 2.1. Hatred against and fear of witchcraft was most prevalent among uneducated or under-informed people, who are most susceptible to false belief, presumption, government propaganda, and superstition.
- 2.2. Mobilizing the public against witchcraft was done by encouraging and exploiting intense fear and hatred towards immoral or harmful activities and by associating witches with such immoral and harmful activities. This was done by exploiting the ignorance, presumptions, and prejudices of the people by religious and political leaders.
- 2.3. The people who were accused of witchcraft, in fact, were most often those who were accomplishing most to help their community. These people were often the most prominent political targets and opponents and accusing them of witchcraft was a way to retaliate politically against them. Most were older, single, or widowed and therefore didn't fit the mold that most other women did. They did deviant things like use herbs and folk remedies to heal people magically. They had fewer friends and therefore were more vulnerable to false accusations and persecution, because they did not have a social network of friends who could help defend them.
3. How criminal charges of witchcraft were initiated:
  - 3.1. Search for the witch began when a person was observed to have psychological fits and delirium and the society could not explain the cause of the fits. Observers then would assume it was a supernatural possession by the devil (rather than simply a psychological illness) and would then begin searching for supernatural phenomenon and "witches" to explain the possession.
  - 3.2. Witch trials were often initiated at the request of an upstanding citizen or someone having deliriums who wanted to politically retaliate against an opponent. Most of the accusations of witchcraft came from people who only superficially knew the accused "witches" and therefore were suspicious and fearful of them. An even larger number of accusations came from those accused of witchcraft themselves and who were under torture to make a confession.
  - 3.3. The government fomented and facilitated the witch trials. There was a lot of political propaganda that was intended to smear and denigrate suspected "witches" by associating them with the following harmful activities:
    - 3.3.1. Immoral activity.
    - 3.3.2. The taking of hallucinogenic drugs.
    - 3.3.3. Promiscuous sex, sometimes with the devil.
    - 3.3.4. Murder and cannibalism of innocent infants.
    - 3.3.5. Nocturnal worship of the devil as a deity. This worship was called either the "Witch's Sabbath" or the "Black Sabbath".
    - 3.3.6. Secret invisible societies that created fear, suspicion, and insecurity in the people.
4. How witches were identified, arrested, convicted and punished:
  - 4.1. The basis for determining who was a witch was described in an early book called the Malleus Maleficarum, which is translated to mean "The hammer against witches". The book was published in 1486 by two Dominican monks in Germany named Jacob Springer and Heinrich Kramer. The book described women as the most vulnerable to becoming witches. It described the source of all witchcraft as the carnal lust of women, which it said was insatiable. The book was second in popularity only to the Bible, and served as the equivalent of a bible for witch hunters for over 200 years. Witches were described in the book as being:
    - 4.1.1. Evil.
    - 4.1.2. Lecherous
    - 4.1.3. Vain
    - 4.1.4. Lustful
  - 4.2. The physical evidence required to prove that a person was a "witch" was very subjective and it was very difficult to prove with physical evidence that a person was a witch. Witch trials were more a matter of personal opinion and religious belief than a scientifically provable matter. Evidence that a person was a witch was often fabricated or imagined, and not real.
  - 4.3. When witches were arrested, they:
    - 4.3.1. Were stripped and searched.
    - 4.3.2. Prodded with needles to find the mark of the devil.
    - 4.3.3. Any suspicious wart, mole, or birth mark could be enough to condemn someone to death.
    - 4.3.4. Any questionable character reference from a political opponent could doom a person to death.
  - 4.4. Prerequisite for confession. Civil law required that a "witch" could not be prosecuted without first making a "voluntary" confession. Because few people would voluntarily confess to being "witches", the government sanctioned and condoned an elaborate system of painful physical torture against the accused "witches" to compel them to give a "voluntary" confession. This was the very same type of persecution and torture that was instituted against heretics during the inquisitions in Spain and elsewhere in Europe. The following hideous instruments of torture were used to extract the "confession":
    - 4.4.1. Thumb screws

1 4.4.2. Leg screws

2 4.4.3. Head clamps

3 4.4.4. Iron maiden

4 4.5. During the torture:

5 4.5.1. The Malleus Maleficarum warned the torturer never to look a witch in the eye. This was a devious way to 6 ensure that empathy or sympathy or compassion would not be employed towards those accused of 7 witchcraft. This made the witch trials and those who could be accused of witchcraft very terrified and
8 prejudiced the rights of those accused. The torture used to extract the coerced confessions was also used to 9 implicate other innocent people, and this led to the uncontrollable spread of witch trials throughout France
10 and Germany.

11 4.5.2. Many people confessed to the crime of witchcraft who in fact were not witches, simply to avoid further 12 suffering and torture. When the pain of torture is severe enough, people will confess to almost anything.

13 4.6. The English devised a very prejudicial method for determining if someone was a witch called "swimming the 14 witch". A person accused of witchcraft was thrown in deep water. If she swam and survived then she was 15 proven to be a witch. If she sank and drowned, then she was innocent. Either way, the suspect was doomed and 16 had no chance of survival.

17 4.7. Witnesses and political opponents were allowed to show up at the trials and act out being "possessed" by Satan in 18 front of everyone in the courtroom.

19 4.8. Once a person confessed to being a "witch", then they were usually burned at the stake in a very public way in 20 order to terrorize the rest of the population into "compliance" with the wishes of whoever made the accusation of 21 witchcraft to begin with. The reason for burning, was that it was believed that the witches evil spirit could only 22 be destroyed if she was burned into ashes.

23 5. Political motivation for witch trials explains why they spread:

24 5.1. The government abused the laws against witchcraft, especially in Europe, as follows:

25 5.1.1. Church clergy in Christian churches were accused because they were political opponents of the government.

26 5.1.2. Witch hunters received a bounty for each witch they found and prosecuted.

27 5.1.3. The property and lands of executed witches were confiscated by the government and used to enrich public
28 servants. This is a big reason that explains the promotion and spread of the witch hunts and witch trials by 29 the government.

30 5.2. The largest witch trial ever occurred in the town of Wurzburg in Germany, in which an overzealous magistrate
31 tried nearly the whole town on witchcraft charges! 600 people were condemned to death. 19 were priests and 41
32 were children. In some towns in Germany, there were no women left after the inquisitors came through. Some 33 scholars estimate that between 60,000 and 300,000 people were executed as witches during the "Burning Years"
34 in Europe.

35 5.3. The largest witch trial in America occurred in 1692 in Salem, Massachusetts, in which 200 people were burned at 36 the stake. Salem was a Puritan town torn by Indian and land wars and political controversy. The Salem witch
37 trial investigations began in the home of a Puritan minister, Rev. Samuel Paris. His daughters became allegedly 38 possessed after playing a household game with the family slave and they went into a frenzy, which spread
39 throughout the town. The Puritan minister then launched an investigation to find out who had instigated the 40 possession, leading to three women being tried on witchcraft based on the accusations of the possessed girls. All
41 three of the accused witches were outsiders and deviants who were easy targets for suspicion and retaliation.
42 Historians agree that the investigation into witches in this incident was used to conceal a political agenda. The 43 agenda involved a private dispute, and the witch allegation was used as a means to gain political advantage. After 44 this incident, the witch hysteria spread to 200 other accused witches in 24 other surrounding villages. 27 witches
45 were found guilty and 19 were hanged. The witch trials ended in America when the accusers began accusing
46 prominent people, such as the wife of the governor of Massachusetts. At that point, political leaders abruptly
47 stopped the trials because they were not only not benefiting from them, but began being hurt by them.

48 6. Why witch trials eventually ended and how these matters are handled today:

49 6.1. Two factors contributed to the end of the witch trials in America:

50 6.1.1. Scientific investigation and knowledge ultimately was what brought witch trials to an end. Science
51 eliminated the role of superstition in attributing harmful events to supernatural and magical powers.

52 6.1.2. The wife of the governor of Massachusetts was accused of witchcraft. Once government officials saw that 53 they could no longer benefit, but would be harmed by spreading the witch trials, they put them to an abrupt 54 end.

55 6.2. Today, people who would have been accused as witches in the 1600's would now simply be identified by a
56 mental health expert as mentally ill. Unlike the early witch trials, in which the accusers and inquisitors were often religious figures, today's accusers usually work in the government and they use as their justification the testimony of a mental health professional who:

6.2.1. Would be undermining his livelihood and his income by giving a person a clean mental bill of health.

6.2.2. Has no moral or religious training.

6.2.3. Has a conflict of interest because he is licensed by the same government that is doing the false accusing.

As we examined the above list of characteristics that describe witchcraft, some striking similarities became obvious between the way the government treated "witches" back then and the way the same government treats "tax freedom advocates" of today. Below is a table summarizing the many similarities between the two, organized in the same sequence as the above list:

Table 5-34: Comparison of treatment of "witches" to that of "tax protesters"

#	Characteristic	Incidence in witches	Incidence in freedom advocates
1	Historical foundations of the public outcry against witchcraft	NA	NA
1.1	Context of trials	Peak occurred in late 1600's in rural villages of Europe and America.	Period after World War II, when government no longer needed the income tax but still wanted to expand its power and control over the people in violation of the Constitution.
1.2	Basis for persecution	Main motivation was Biblical prohibitions and superstition by ignorant citizens and government covetousness of property of accused witches. Witch hunts allowed government to confiscate all the property of the witch and not return it to the witch's family.	Government greed and lust for power and money.
1.3	Activities of accused witches	Were viewed as a "religion" and a threat to the Christianity.	Are viewed as a threat to the state-sponsored "Civil religion of Socialism" and a challenge to the authority of the government as the new false "god" and sovereign within society.
2	Social Status	NA	NA
2.1	Hatred and fear of most prevalent in	Uninformed, superstitious, and presumptuous people	Ignorant, superstitious, and presumptuous jurists educated in government schools. This ignorance about law is deliberately created by our government by manipulating the public education system to dumb down the population. Ignorant people tend to be more fearful than highly educated people.
2.2	Public mobilized against accused by government through	Associating "witches" with immoral and harmful activities.	Associating tax protesters with extremist groups such as "Montana Free Men", terrorists, and criminals.
2.3	Profile of accused	Outcasts of society who don't have many friends, and can therefore easily be picked on. This included widows, midwives, divorcees, spinsters, non-religious, and outcasts at their local church.	Outcasts of society who are denigrated by propaganda from government-licensed 501(c ) churches, government licensed attorneys, and the Internal Revenue Service (IRS). Wrongfully accused as "militia", "gun activists", "religious extremists", "unpatriotic", "irresponsible" (don't pay fair share), and harmful to "taxpayers" because they raise the taxes on them.
3	How criminal charges are initiated and encouraged	NA	NA
3.1	Cause for start of investigation	Psychological disorders and abnormal behavior of a "witch" or someone possessed or visited by witch	American refuses to either incriminate themselves on a tax return or to pay money to IRS that law does not require them to pay
3.2	Investigation initiated by	Upstanding citizen or possessed individual who wanted to politically retaliate against an opponent. Most accusations came from people who superficially knew the accused "witches" and therefore were suspicious and fearful of them. Additional referrals came from accused "witches" who confessed or snitched on other witches while under duress and physical torture.	IRS in retaliation against people for demanding due process of law, respect for the Constitution, and obedience to IRS procedures.

3.3	Government fomenting of trials	Judges facilitate violation of due process and loosen need for objective or physical evidence. Government also cooperated with and staged executions of the accused witches and condoned their torture in order to obtain coerced confessions.	Judges condone violation of due process of accused by allowing IRS to take their property without due process of law or a court hearing using "Notice of Levies", "Notice of liens", and other fraudulent securities. The result essentially is grand theft and "extortion under the color of law", which federal judges refuse to hold IRS agents accountable for.
4	How accused is identified, arrested and convicted	NA	NA
4.1	Basis for determining guilt	Malleus Maleficarum book published in 1486 provided procedures and processes useful for determining who are witches. The procedures were very prejudicial. Witches described in the book as: "evil, lecherous, vain, and lustful".	The Department of Justice Criminal Tax manual is used as the "Bible" for federal prosecutors. The book is deliberately deceptive because it does not reveal the most important aspects about the legal basis for federal taxation as documented in this book. "Tax protesters" described in the book as vain, contemptible, ignorant, and impulsive.
4.2	Physical evidence required to prove guilt	A confession by the accused, imagined events by persons who were haunted by accused witch, subjective personal opinions, warts and moles, testimony of clergy, very biased questioning techniques.	1099 and W-2 forms that are not signed by the reporters and are therefore "hearsay" evidence that is inadmissible. Writings of accused submitted under duress on a tax return that are also not admissible because coerced.
4.3	Method of arrest and confinement	Stripped, searched, prodded with needles. Physically tortured until confessed.	Stripped, searched, prodded with needles. Financially tortured by having all assets seized and being forced into financial slavery to a legal professional to represent them. While in federal prison, not able to do own legal research and defense because deprived of proper resources, computers, and legal references. High legal fees act as punishment, torture, and coercion against accused to settle quickly and falsely admit guilt to end the financial bleeding.
4.4	Prerequisite for conviction	A confession from the accused "witch", often extracted under severe physical torture. Even though testimony is coerced, judges still prejudicially admitted it anyway and thereby violated the due process rights of the accused.	Proving that tax crimes committed "willfully" by accused, meaning they were deliberate, defiant acts of disobedience to a known "lawful" duty. Willfulness is proven prejudicially and unfairly by using inadmissible evidence such as: 1. IRS publications which the IRS is not held responsible for the accuracy of; 2. Judicial opinions from courts outside the jurisdiction of the accused; 3. Correspondence and advice from the IRS which the government readily admits it cannot and should not be held accountable for the accuracy of; 4. Advice from government licensed "experts" with a severe conflict of interest such as attorneys, mental health professionals, etc.

4.5	Method and result of the torture	Physical torture conducted using hideous devices. Many accused died while imprisoned and before trial. Brutality and no compassion were shown during physical torture. Witches were dehumanized and torturers would not look witches in the eye. Many accused would make a false confession simply to end the torture. Prisoners could also not leave the prison until they reimbursed the state for the cost of holding them there, which is a double punishment.	Accused is financially tortured by being forced to hire an attorney and pay more than $300 per hour for services that he would not need if the prison provided or allowed computers, internet research, and an extensive law library. Prisoners do not have and are not allowed same legal research tools as attorneys and so are compelled to hire attorney. Once attorney is hired, accused loses right to challenge jurisdiction and becomes "ward of the state", and this prejudices his case. While in prison, employer of accused usually terminates him, bills mount up, and result is that house is confiscated by banks and all equity is lost. Accused is slandered and has a hard time finding future work because of false charges of "willful failure to file" and "tax evasion" by government. Credit rating is destroyed, making it difficult to buy home or obtain credit in the future. Most torture is therefore financial, but it is still torture and done unjustly, because people who don't pay money that no law requires them to pay are not a threat to society and do not need to be imprisoned. In fact, federal jailhouses have become the equivalent of "debtors prisons" for fraudulently created tax debts. "Debtors prisons", including those for tax debts, were outlawed in 1868 by the passage of the Thirteenth Amendment, which outlawed not only slavery but all such involuntary servitude. Yet, the U.S. government STILL allows these debtor's prisons to continue.
4.6	Prejudicial methods for determining guilt	"Swimming the witch". Accused witches were thrown in deep water and if they survived, they were guilty, but if they drowned, they were innocent.	Judges refusing to admit any of the evidence of the accused during preliminary motions in limine before trial while admitting all the government's evidence. This leaves the accused essentially defenseless and a prejudiced attorney whose livelihood will be destroyed by having his license pulled if he objects to or exposes the tactics of the judge in front of the jury.
4.7	Violations of due process at trial	Witnesses and political opponents of the accused were allowed to show up at witch trial and act out being possessed in front of everyone, in order to prejudice the case.	Government parades its own prejudiced "experts" in front of the jury and builds its case not on what the law says, but primarily on the subjective opinions of "experts" who nothing but slanders cleverly disguised as credentialed scientists or specialists. Like the judge himself, all these experts have a conflict of interest because they are usually licensed by the government and will lose their license if they turn on the government, or they are "taxpayers" and they know the IRS will turn on them if they turn on the government. The trial then simply devolves more into a mud-slinging political campaign and the judge and the prosecutor work as a tag team to convict the accused because both of them benefit financially from doing so. If the judge doesn't help the prosecutor get the conviction, then he will end up on the IRS' hit list.

4.8	Political propaganda following the trial	Witches executed by burning or hanging in a very public way. This terrorizes all present to avoid being accused themselves.	IRS and DOJ have a "Press Releases" section where they slander those convicted. Newspapers are called up and results are published to make sure public is warned that they better not buck the Gestapo. The news stories are often deliberately vague so that they look like they apply to everyone instead of the very small subset of people who are actually affected. Sometimes, even the judges will participate in this grandstanding and political propaganda by the way they write their rulings, which are often nothing but rubber-stamped versions of the proposed orders written by the Department of Injustice prosecutor himself. They do this to increase their chances of a promotion or new political appointment to a higher court by winning the favor of the Executive branch in "bringing home the stolen loot". Public is therefore terrorized and coerced into compliance with laws that they are not even subject to, in order to spread the federal slavery and expand the power and control of politicians and judges over the general populace.
5	Political motivation for trials	NA	NA
5.1	Witch trials used to punish political targets and dissidents	Religious factions and rivalry within small rural villages lead to the witch hunts, and they were directed at political targets. Accusers were usually disadvantaged parties in a dispute who wanted upper hand. Government capitalized on these rivalries by plundering the estates of the accused witches. When specific government officials were accused as witches and they found out they could no longer remain neutral in the dispute and could no longer benefit or avoid being harmed, the trials abruptly ended.	Political factions and rivalries between "socialists" (Democrats) and "capitalists" (Republicans and independents) are exploited by the government during tax trials as a way to encourage convictions. Tax trials are turned into a type of class warfare between the "haves" (rich) and the "have nots" (poor). Jealousy, greed, ignorance, fear, and envy are the main tool the government uses to motivate juries into convictions. Since there is no risk for the government participants and judges protect and shield IRS employees from the consequences of their unlawful behavior, then the abuses continue. This is called the "judicial conspiracy to protect the income tax" and it is described later in section 6.9 and following.
5.2	Largest trials	Occurred in rural areas where political factions and rivalries existed. Witch laws were used to settle political scores. Nepotism between the judges and the town marshal in the case of the Salem trials contributed to the spread of the witch hunts. The Salem marshal plundered the estates of the accused witches.	Largest tax trials occur around tax time on April 15 and are used as a means to propagandize and scare Americans into paying extortion and bribery money to the government that no law requires. Big cities are most prevalent places for the convictions, because this is where the following types of dysfunctional types of citizens and government sheep congregate: 1. Socialists and government dependents on Social Security and Medicare; 2. People educated in public schools by the government, who are dysfunctional citizens, and who trust government too much.
6	Why trials eventually ended	NA	NA
6.1	Cause of the end of trials	Scientific discoveries ended the role of superstition and the mass hysteria that the superstition caused. Also, when high officials in the government began to be implicated and risked conviction, the government quickly ended the trials.	Still ongoing, primarily because the same kind of ignorance and superstition about law and legal process exists as that which existed about supernatural events in the 1600's.

6.2	How witches are identified then and now	Back then, subjective opinions and superstition, strong religious beliefs, and political revenge motivated identification of "witches". Since the field of psychology had not yet evolved, psychological disorders could not be attributed as the cause of the abnormal behavior that initiated the investigations.	Today, atheistic and biased psychological "experts" are used as pawns by the government to slander the accused. Juries are deceived into believing that freedom advocates are irresponsible (won't pay their "fair share"), deviant, mentally unstable, anti-social, and disrespectful of all authority. They are also made to appear as though they are a threat to the prevailing social order and the personal financial benefits of the jurists. Who wouldn't vote against an accused that threatened the social security check of a jurist?

1 Isn't it fascinating just how many similarities there are between the trial of a modern-day freedom advocate and the witch
2 trials in the 1600's? The only thing new is the history that you do not know. There is nothing new under the sun. This
3 section, we believe, provides a compelling demonstration that in fact:

- 4 1. The Internal Revenue Code is a government-sponsored religion whose main purpose is to promote socialism,
5 humanism, and the theft of the sovereignty of the individual and the transfer of that sovereignty to the government and 6 the legal profession.
- 7 2. Modern day tax trials are nothing but "religious inquisitions".
- 8 3. The government wins in modern day tax trials by using the same prejudicial techniques as witch hunters used against 9 witches: Exploiting the ignorance, fear, and superstition of the general public about law and legal process.
- 10 4. Confessions are still obtained under duress the same way they were with the witch trials, but instead of the duress and 11 torture being physical, it is now primarily financial. The results, however, are the same: A confession or "compliance"
12 by the accused results primarily as a way to stop the torture, rather than because they actually committed any kind of 13 crime.
- 14 5. The motivation for the witch hunts, insofar as the government is concerned, was the same as the motivation for 15 modern day tax trials: Greed and covetousness. When the government executed a witch, they confiscated all their 16 property and enriched themselves. When the government wins a tax trial, they enrich themselves and rape and pillage 17 the assets of the accused and slander and destroy the credit rating of the accused.
- 18 6. Like the witch trials of the 1600's, the only thing that will end the injustice is:
  - 19 6.1. Public education about law in the schools, so that the scientific method and due process may return to the federal 20 courtroom and ignorance, superstition, and fear may no longer be exploited by the government to convict the 21 accused.
  - 22 6.2. The financial incentives and rewards for the government must be removed from the process, so that judges will 23 no longer act essentially as a partner to the prosecutors. Judges must be recused who are either "taxpayers" or 24 who will receive benefits from illegal enforcement of the Internal Revenue Code. Judges pay must derive 25 exclusively from lawful constitutional activities, which are exclusively taxes on imports, excises.
  - 26 6.3. Due process must return to the courtroom, meaning that ambiguity of the Internal Revenue Code must be 27 eliminated and they must be considerably simplified, so that "experts" are no longer required and so that the 28 general public can easily discern what they mean. This will eliminate the role of ignorance, superstition, and fear
29 in the courtroom that lead to the kind of hysteria present during the witch trials.

30 To help underscore and support assertions made in this section, consider the prosecution of Dr. Phil Roberts, which we will 31 cover later in section 6.8.1. We provide excerpts from the transcript of his trial for tax evasion in that section. The federal 32 judge kept telling the counsel of the defendant that he couldn't talk about "the law" in the courtroom during the trial with 33 the jury present. As a matter of fact, he threatened the counsel with disbarment if he continued to insist on quoting the law!
34 By doing so, the judge was accomplishing the following:

- 35 1. Preventing the jury from learning that the Internal Revenue Code is not "law".
- 36 2. Encouraging superstition, bias, and prejudice on the part of the jury. Absent an objective standard such as enacted
37 positive law, the judge is ensuring that the jury reaches a "political" rather than a "legal" verdict. This makes those 38 convicted of tax crimes into "political prisoners" rather than "criminals".
- 39 3. Preventing enforcement of the Constitution, which is law and a contract, by the jury and against the government, in 40 reaching a verdict. Indirectly, this is a violation of the judge's oath of office to support and defend the Constitution, 41 and amounts to Treason. You can't in good faith uphold that which you refuse to discuss.
- 42 4. Ensuring that the result of the trial would be evil and unjust. The bible says that when "law" is removed from public 43 life, the result will be "abominable":

1 "One who turns his ear from hearing the law, even his prayer is an abomination."
2 [Prov. 28:9, Bible, NKJV]

3 This is only the tip of the iceberg of courtroom corruption, folks. In 2004, we also visited a federal district courthouse in
4 San Diego and noted that it had an extensive law library. We walked into the law library as a private citizen to see if we
5 could read the law for ourselves in the books there while serving as a jurist. Remember, this is a PUBLIC building that is
6 PUBLIC, not private property, which any citizen should have access to provided he does not take it or misuse it or interfere
7 with use by others. There was NO ONE in the law library except the clerk. We were intercepted at the door by an
8 inquisitive and nervous clerk, who asked us why we were there. We said we were serving on jury duty and that we wanted
9 to read what the law says for ourselves rather than trust the biased judge or the attorneys. Here is what she the clerk told us,
10 and what she said completely stunned us:

- 11 1. Federal jurists are NOT allowed to read the law while serving as a jurist.
- 12 2. Federal jurists are NOT allowed to enter the courthouse law library while serving as jurists. The clerk running the law 13 library is under strict orders from the chief justice NOT to allow jurists into the courthouse law library. When we 14 asked her why that was, she could not explain the reasoning.
- 15 3. Jurists who read the law while serving can be impeached from serving on the jury.

16 The above statements by the clerk of the district court law library, friends, and the orders from the Chief Justice that lead
17 her to say what she said to us, are not only Treason punishable by death under 18 U.S.C. §2381, but amount to jury
18 tampering in violation 18 U.S.C. §§1503 and 1504. Law is the solemn expression of the will of the "sovereign" within any 19 system of government.

20 "Law. . . . That which is laid down, ordained, or established. A rule or method according to which 21 phenomenon or actions co-exist or follow each other. Law, in its generic sense, is a body of rules of action or 22 conduct prescribed by controlling authority, and having binding legal force. United States Fidelity and
23 Guaranty Co. v. Guenther, 281 U.S. 34, 50 S.Ct. 165, 74 L.Ed. 683. That which must be obeyed and followed
24 by citizens subject to sanctions or legal consequences is a law. Law is a solemn expression of the will of the 25 supreme power of the State. Calif.Civil Code, §22."
26 [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 884]

27 The "State" above is "We the People", and does not include our public servants at all. In our system of government, the 28 "sovereign" is the People both individually and collectively, and is NOT anyone serving in government. Any federal judge
29 who prevents law from being discussed in a courtroom is refusing to recognize the sovereignty of the People who ordained
30 that law, and is interfering with the definition and protection of their sovereign will in courts of justice. All law is a
31 "compact" or a "contract" between the sovereign People and their servants in government. Refusing to discuss tax laws in 32 a court trial is every bit as ludicrous as trying to enforce a contract without the contract. In effect, federal judges who refuse
33 to discuss law in the courtroom are interfering with the right to contract of the sovereign "People", because law is a
34 "compact" or "contract" between us as Sovereigns and our public servants. Here is what the Supreme Court said about the 35 authority of the government to impair the obligation of such contracts, and in particular the main contract between the 36 sovereign People and their government servants called the Constitution:

37 "Independent of these views, there are many considerations which lead to the conclusion that the power to
38 impair contracts [either the Constitution or the Holy Bible], by direct action to that end, does not exist with 39 the general [federal] government. In the first place, one of the objects of the Constitution, expressed in its 40 preamble, was the establishment of justice, and what that meant in its relations to contracts is not left, as was
41 justly said by the late Chief Justice, in Hepburn v. Griswold, to inference or conjecture. As he observes, at the 42 time the Constitution was undergoing discussion in the convention, the Congress of the Confederation was 43 engaged in framing the ordinance for the government of the Northwestern Territory, in which certain articles of 44 compact were established between the people of the original States and the people of the Territory, for the 45 purpose, as expressed in the instrument, of extending the fundamental principles of civil and religious liberty,
46 upon which the States, their laws and constitutions, were erected. By that ordinance it was declared, that, in
47 the just preservation of rights and property, 'no law ought ever to be made, or have force in the said
48 Territory, that shall, in any manner, interfere with or affect private contracts or engagements bona fide and
49 without fraud previously formed.' The same provision, adds the Chief Justice, found more condensed
50 expression in the prohibition upon the States [in Article 1, Section 10 of the Constitution] against impairing the 51 obligation of contracts, which has ever been recognized as an efficient safeguard against injustice; and though
52 the prohibition is not applied in terms to the government of the United States, he expressed the opinion, 53 speaking for himself and the majority of the court at the time, that it was clear 'that those who framed and
54 those who adopted the Constitution intended that the spirit of this prohibition should pervade the entire body
55 of legislation, and that the justice which the Constitution was ordained to establish was not thought by them
56 to be compatible with legislation [or judicial precedent] of an opposite tendency.' 8 Wall. 623. [99 U.S. 700,
57 765] Similar views are found expressed in the opinions of other judges of this court."

1 [\[Sinking Fund Cases, 99 U.S. 700 \(1878\)\]](#)

2 Now some people might respond to these observations by saying that since the Internal Revenue Code is not "positive law",
3 then the judge is actually preventing a biased trial by keeping discussions of it out of the courtroom. This is partially true,
4 but if the judge either won't allow the Internal Revenue Code to be identified as not being "law", or won't allow other types
5 of real, positive law, such as the Constitution, to be discussed in the courtroom, then he is impairing the right to contract of 6 the sovereign "People" who delegated authority to their government using that positive law. The only basis for interfering 7 with discussing the Constitution as "law" in a federal courtroom is that:

- 8 1. Neither party to the suit inhabits areas in a state of the Union where the Constitution applies....AND
- 9 2. The crime occurred within exclusive federal jurisdiction within a territory or possession of the federal government.

10 In nearly all tax trials, the above false presumptions are invisibly made by both the U.S. attorney prosecutor and the judge.
11 It is made either because of ignorance or because of deliberate malice on the part of the judge. Either way, the resulting tax
12 trial devolves into a witch hunt that is a completely political proceeding that is not founded in any way upon positive law.
13 Don't believe us? Well then watch the movie on our website entitled "How to Keep 100% of Your Earnings", at:

14 <http://famguardian.org/Media/movie.htm>

15 In the above movie, a jurist at a state income tax trial testifies that the judge manipulated the case against a person accused
16 of willful failure to file by preventing the jurists from seeing the law he was accused of violating. She says on tape that this
17 was a tacit admission by the judge that there is no law requiring anyone to pay income tax!

18 Therefore, any judge, whether state or federal, who interferes with discussing the Constitution at a federal tax trial can only
19 justify such action based on a usually false presumption that the accused is a statutory "citizen" under 8 U.S.C. §1401 who
20 does not inhabit the states of the Union and therefore is not a party to the Federal Constitution. It is up to you to understand
21 and challenge all the false presumptions that your federal persecutors are going to make and to challenge them as early on 22 as possible and get them into your administrative record in all your correspondence. Furthermore, also understand that
23 federal tax trials are unique and different from other types of federal trials. We have sat through several other types of trials
24 in federal district court and found through personal observation that tax trials are the only types of trials where the judges
25 are so tenacious in keeping the discussion of law out of the courtroom. It's perfectly OK to discuss law or the Constitution
26 in most other types of trials, but not in tax trials. As a matter of fact, we sat next to a U.S. attorney who handled criminal 27 law on an airplane flight. We asked them if it was OK to discuss criminal law in the courtroom, and she said "Of course.
28 I've never heard of a trial that operated any other way". She obviously hadn't sat through any tax trials! Do you smell a rat
29 here? WE DO!

30 The only thing left when positive law is completely removed from tax trials are the following unreliable and Satanic forces:

- 31 1. Ignorance
- 32 2. Prejudice
- 33 3. Conflict of interest
- 34 4. Bias on the part of the judge
- 35 5. The opinions of biased "experts" who are subject to IRS and judicial extortion.

36 On that last item above, we must consider what the Bible says about the use of "experts" in court:

37 "Preach the Word; be prepared in season and out of season; correct, rebuke and encourage—with great
38 patience and careful instruction. For the time will come when men [in the legal profession or the judiciary]
39 will not put up with sound [legal] doctrine [such as that found in this book]. Instead, to suit their own
40 desires, they [our covetous public dis-servants] will gather around them a great number of teachers [court-
41 appointed "experts", "licensed" government whores called attorneys and CPA's, and educators in 42 government-run or subsidized public schools and liberal universities] to say what their itching ears want to 43 hear. They will turn their ears away from the truth and turn aside to [government and legal-profession
44 myths and fables]. But you [the chosen of God and His servants must], keep your head in all situations,
45 endure hardship, do the work of an evangelist, discharge all the duties of your [God's] ministry."
46 [2 Tim. 4:2-5, Bible, NKJV]

47 Instead of ensuring justice, keeping law out of the courtroom and replacing it with subjective opinions of biased "experts"
48 who have a conflict of interest simply transforms the court into a unruly lynch mob of angry "tax consumers" and federal benefit recipients (“taxpayers”) who want to keep their tax bill down by inducting other tax slaves to join them and share the burden of supporting the federal plantation. This is exactly the tactic, in fact, that was used against Jesus at his trial. A major subject at Jesus’ trial was his attitude about taxes, in fact:

And they [the angry democratic lynch mob of atheistic socialists] began to accuse Him [Jesus], saying, "We found this fellow perverting the nation, and forbidding to pay taxes to Caesar, saying that He Himself is Christ, a King [sovereign]."
[Luke 23:2, Bible, NKJV]

The priests, who were the political enemies of Jesus, fomented negative public opinion against Jesus and caused an angry mob of atheists to bring Jesus before the courts and governor Pilate so that he could be tried for things that weren’t even crimes. These vindictive priests turned an exclusively religious ministry of Jesus into a political persecution by an angry lynch mob in order to silence dissent and challenges to their power and authority. The persecution of Jesus literally was a “witch hunt”, and not a valid legal process. The goal of his persecutors was to strip Him of His sovereignty, dignity, and life. For further information on this subject, see our article entitled “The Trial of Jesus” at the address below, where a real judge analyzed how Jesus was treated:

<http://famguardian.org/Subjects/LawAndGovt/History/TrialOfJesus.htm>

What the Department of Justice has learned how to do in terrorizing and illegally persecuting tax honesty advocates is to institutionalize the kind of tyranny, despotism, and violation of due process which Jesus experienced. They have made every tax trial into a witch hunt that exactly replicates the one Jesus experienced. Tax honesty advocates want their sovereignty and rights respected, while the government wants to destroy it and make them into federal serfs who are falsely “presumed” to inhabit the federal plantation called the “United States” as “U.S. citizens”. Remember: Jesus was a tax protester! See section 1.10.1 earlier for evidence of this fact.

5.4.6.6 How to skip out of “government church worship services”

It ought to be clear by now that government is simply another type of church and religion. We call it a “civil religion” and we have written an entire book to describe this religion:

Socialism: The New American Civil Religion, Form #05.016
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

Those who don’t want to join the church simply change their domicile to be outside the state-sponsored church:

Why Domicile and Becoming a “Taxpayer” Require Your Consent, Form #05.002
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

Those who are not part of the church but who appear before the priests of the church, who are the judges in the government’s courts, are presumed to consent to their jurisdiction if they make an “appearance” before a judge:

appearance. A coming into court as a party to a suit, either in person or by attorney, whether as plaintiff or defendant. The formal proceeding by which a defendant submits himself to the jurisdiction of the court. The voluntary submission to a court's jurisdiction.

In civil actions the parties do not normally actually appear in person, but rather through their attorneys (who enter their appearance by filing written pleadings, or a formal written entry of appearance). Also, at many stages of criminal proceedings, particularly involving minor offenses, the defendant's attorney appears on his behalf. See e.g., Fed.R.Crim.P. 43.

*An appearance may be either general or special: the former is a simple and unqualified or unrestricted submission to the jurisdiction of the court, the latter is a submission to the jurisdiction for some specific purpose only, not for all the purposes of the suit. A special appearance is for the purpose of testing or objecting to the sufficiency of service or the jurisdiction of the court over defendant without submitting to such jurisdiction; a general appearance is made where the defendant waives defects of service and submits to the jurisdiction of court. Insurance Co. of North America v. Kunin, 175 Neb. 260, 121 N.W.2d. 372, 375, 376.
[Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 97]*

1 If you are compelled to appear before a priest of the state-sponsored church, all you have to do is make a "special
2 visitation" rather than an "appearance". This deprives the priest of your "worship and obedience". One of our readers sent
3 us information about a very interesting technique he uses when he gets involuntarily invited to a government "worship
4 service" in a federal church called "District Court". The intent of the interchange is to emphasize that we don't consent and
5 therefore are not subject to the jurisdiction of the court. We repeat it below for your edification and education.

6 *What I'm talking about is actually a legal strategy that we ALL should be employing in the Courts, but very few
7 of us do. It all has to do with CONTRACT law. I've actually known about this for a long time, but just recently 8 did an in-depth study.*

9 *As I said, it's all built around contracts. EVERY State, and EVERY City in the United States of America is a for-
10 profit corporation. It is the goal of every for-profit corporation to conduct "business" in order to obtain profits.
11 It is impossible for any "business" to be conducted without a contract of some type in place. ALL businesses
12 (contracts) are governed by the Uniform Commercial Code. For example, when you go to the grocery store, you
13 offer to discharge your debt for the items you select by offering to give the clerk a certain amount of Federal 14 Reserve Notes. This is a verbal contract which is consummated by both of your actions. You have made an 15 exchange of equal value.*

16 *The same type of thing applies in the Courts. Courts, whether "of record" (state), or not "of record"
17 (municipal/city), are all corporations, doing business for a profit. The only way a corporation can force you to 18 do business with them is IF THEY HAVE YOU UNDER CONTRACT. A judge will always ask you your name,
19 and if you understand the charges. If you give a name, and indicate that you understand the charges, you have
20 entered into a contract to do business with the Court, and the Court will always protect its government
21 corporations. The judge is nothing more than a third party debt collector corporate employee. If you do not
22 enter into a contract to do business with the Court, then the Court cannot proceed against you, as it is not a
23 party. Below is a sample transcript of how one might proceed to deny jurisdiction to the Courts using this 24 approach.*

25 *J = Judge
26 PA = Prosecuting Attorney
27 C = Citizen*

29 PA: Would you please identify yourself?

30 C: I make a reservation of all rights at all times, and surrender, transfer or relinquish none of my rights at any 31 time. I am "I, me, myself, a Citizen of the United States of America"

32 J: Please answer the question

33 C: I just did.

34 J: We need your name.

35 C: I'll just bet you do.

36 J: I'm not going to play this game. Let the record show that the defendant has refused to identify himself.

37 C: I take exception to that statement. I have done no such thing, and I assure you that you are absolutely 38 correct when you say that this is not a game. I am dead serious.

39 J: You didn't give the Court your name!

41 J: But, you have to give your. . . .

42 C: I don't have to do anything, because I'm not under contract to you. Judge, do you have a claim against me?

43 J: The State of XXXXXXXXXX has a claim against you.

44 *C: No, it doesn't. It has a civil "allegation" (or "charge" if you are being tried for a crime), but there is no
45 "claim". There is a BIG difference between a "claim" and an "allegation" (or "charge", as the case may be).
46 Don't try to change the subject. I asked you if you personally have a claim against me?*

1 J: No.

2 C: Can you produce any evidence that I've entered a contract to do business with this Court?

3 J: What do you mean?

4 C: Don't you know what a contract is?

5 J: Of course I do!

6 C: Well, where is your evidence that I've allegedly entered into any contract to do business with this Court? I
7 haven't given my name, and I DO NOT understand the allegations (or charges).

8 J: I don't need any contract. This Court has jurisdiction of all the Citizens of this state.

9 C: Oh, yeah? Sans a contract, exactly what is your lawful authority for that statement? I want to see an actual
10 LAW. This Court is a division of a corporation, and I have elected NOT to do business with you. Judge, you do
11 not have me under contract. I have given no name, nor do I understand any "charge" or "allegation". You are a
12 third party debt collector, and I grant you no authority or jurisdiction over me whatsoever. That having been 13 said, I am not under contract to you, and by your own admission you have acknowledged that no claim has been
14 stated upon which relief may be granted. I do not accept any judgment from this Court. I order this Court, in the 15 name of the United States Constitution, to dismiss these charges and/or allegations against me, with prejudice,
16 unless you can produce a contract by which I've agreed to do business with you, and you can state a claim for 17 which relief may be granted.
18

19 This is one way that you can absolutely deny the Courts any jurisdiction over you whatsoever. They will have no
20 choice but to dismiss the charges against you if you do not agree to contract to do business with them.

21 The above reader then referenced the series of articles entitled "Invisible Contracts" by George Mercier as the authority for 22 the above. Those articles are available at:

24 5.4.7 No Taxation Without Consent<sup>53</sup>

25 Once you give it a little thought, one should conclude that a self-governing people must consent to their own taxes. After 26 all, what do conquered people do? They pay tribute to their conquerors right? Self-governing people don't pay tribute, as 27 they consent to their own taxation.

28 Today in America, what tax is it that takes the largest bite out of the typical American's wallet? What tax is it that is the 29 most invasive? What tax is it that incarcerates more Americans than any other tax? It is the income tax! Did we consent to 30 this tax, or are we paying tribute as conquered people do?

31 The answer to this question is both yes and no. Yes, we consented to an indirect income tax on the net income from 32 business and on the net income from investment. (However, this assumes that the 16th Amendment was properly and 33 legally ratified, which is doubtful.) The amount of such income is determined by subtracting from the gross revenue all 34 business expenses, depreciation, taxes, interest payments, etc., and then severing that income from the underlying asset that 35 produced the income in the first place. Producing taxable net income is kind of like producing wine. There is an intricate 36 process one must go through to get the final result, and there are some good years and bad years.

37 But the answer to the "consent question" is also no. The American People never consented to a direct tax on our wages and 38 salaries. Call it an income tax, call it a capitation tax, call it whatever you want to call it, the American People never 39 consented to a direct tax exempted from the apportionment rule required by the Constitution for direct taxes.

<sup>53</sup> Extract from an article by the same name written by Phil Hart, whose website is at:

1 In order to understand the dynamics of this question, we must realize that some income taxes are direct, while other income
 2 taxes are indirect. The issue is actually quite simple. A direct tax is direct. The tax falls directly on the person or the thing
 3 taxed. The one who is obligated to pay such a tax is not in a position to shift it to another.

4 On the contrary, an indirect tax may either be avoided or shifted to another. A trucking company shifts the excise tax on
 5 fuel to the customer who ships his product by way of the trucking company. The excise tax on cigarettes is avoided by 6 choosing not to smoke. How is the wage earner going to shift the taxes deducted out of his paycheck to another? He can't.
 7 Therefore, the tax imposed directly by the government on the wage earner is a direct tax.

8 The idea that a free people would be taxed without their consent defies all logic. It simply can't be true. From the beginning
 9 of recorded history people have paid taxes without their consent to their conquering masters. Today Americans are paying 10 an income tax on their wages and salaries to which they never consented to. The saddest part about this state of affairs is 11 that the American people are unaware of this fact. Thomas Jefferson was right when he said:

12 "If a nation expects to be ignorant and free... it expects what never was and never will be."

13 The remainder of this article is actually a segment out of a Petition for Writ of Certiorari filed with the Supreme Court on 14 June 21, 2002. This section covers pages 12 thru 17 of the Petition. The case is Philip Lewis Hart v. Commissioner of 15 Internal Revenue. As of this date, the case has not been given a docket number. The Petition was limited to 30 pages, which 16 is extremely short when considering that the Internal Revenue Code and supporting regulations are approximately some 17 20,000 pages. One cannot do justice to such a complex subject in only 30 pages. The following section is excerpted from 18 the Petition:

19 No tax may be imposed on the American People without their consent.

20 In the Declaration of Independence, one of the Grievances against King George III listed by the American Colonists was,
 21 'For imposing taxes on us without our consent.' The Declaration of Independence further states, "That to secure these rights, 22 governments are instituted among men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed."

23 This Court has previously ruled that those Grievances listed in the Declaration of Independence provide a foundation as to 24 the purpose of the American government and also the boundaries as to its power. The Declaration of Independence is 25 America's Great Charter; the Constitution is America's by-laws. Government has only that power for which the People have 26 consented to delegate to it.

27 The idea that taxes may not be levied unless the People consent to them dates back 800 years to another great charter, that 28 of the Magna Carta of 1215. King John, a disorganized ruler, had just suffered an expensive and humiliating defeat by 29 losing Normandy to the French. He desperately needed money and was pressing all in his kingdom with higher taxes.

30 "Magna Carta was the culmination of a protest against the arbitrary rule of King John, who was using
 31 governmental powers which had been established by the great builders of the English nation, William the 32 Conqueror, Henry I, and Henry II, for selfish and tyrannical purposes. In general these abuses took the pattern
 33 of increasing customary feudal obligations and decreasing established feudal rights and privileges. The Barons
 34 were forced to pay higher taxes above the usual rate... The merchants of London were burdened with heavy
 35 taxes... In addition, John's administration was disorganized and inefficient, and he employed unscrupulous 36 foreign adventurers as royal officers and as sheriffs and bailiffs in every county of the land."
 37 [Perry, Richard L.; Cooper, John C., Sources of Our Liberties, 1-2 (William S. Hein & Co., Buffalo, New York, 38 1991)]

39 The requirement that taxes cannot be levied unless the people consent to them appears in Magna Carta at chapters 12 and 40 14. But Magna Carta itself was a result of not only abusive and unjust taxation, but also taxation that was in violation of the 41 Charter of Liberties of King Henry I. Henry I became king in 1100 A.D. when his brother, King William, was removed 42 from the throne because of "unjust exactions."

43 Unfortunately it is the habit of government to exceed its lawful boundaries and by 1297 the administration of Edward I was 44 levying taxes in violation of Magna Carta. The abuses were serious. In August of 1297, while the barons were formally 45 presenting their grievances to the king, they were also arming and preparing for revolution. Revolution was avoided when 46 on November 5, 1297, King Edward signed Confirmatio Cartarum.

1                   "The events leading up to Confirmatio Cartarum, like those which led up to Magna Carta, show that the king's
 2 violation of established laws oppressed the community as a whole and caused the barons and the clergy to unite
 3 in demanding the observance of the law. As was also true of Magna Carta, this oppression often took the form
 4 of illegal and unreasonable taxation.

5                   "Confirmatio Cartarum has had two principal effects upon the development of the liberties of the citizen. First
 6 it established Parliament as a truly representative organ of government by providing in Section 6 that the taxes
 7 must be raised by the common assent of the realm. The imposition of direct taxes without the consent of the 8 people's representatives in Parliament was now against the very letter of the law."
 9 [Perry; Cooper, supra at 24-6]

10 The principle that government must have the consent of the People before levying any tax showed up on the American 11 continent in 1618 with the Ordinances for Virginia.

12                   "The governor should not be allowed to levy taxes on the colony without the consent of the assembly."
 13 [Perry, Cooper, supra at 50.]

14 The Petition of Right of 1628 was yet another attempt by the English people to compel the administration of Charles I to 15 obey the law. Again, one of the abuses was taxation without the consent of the governed. At Section X the document states,
 16 "That no man hereafter be compelled to make or yield any gift, loan, benevolence, tax or such-like charge, without common 17 consent by act of Parliament."

18 The Charter of Massachusetts Bay of 1629 provided for taxation only when consented to by the assembly of freemen. So
 19 did the Charter of Maryland of 1632. Other colonies declared that the colonists had all the rights of Englishmen and that 20 Magna Carta and all subsequent documents that secured those rights applied to the freemen of the colonies including the 21 Bill of Rights of 1689.

22 The Bill of Rights of 1689 was the culmination of a revolution that took place in England which overthrew James II. Again,
 23 one of the major abuses of the absolute rule of James II was illegal and abusive taxation. The preamble and forth clause of 24 the 1689 Bill of Rights states,

25                   "WHEREAS the late King James the Second, by the assistance of divers, evil counselors, judges, and ministers
 26 employed by him, did endeavor to subvert and extirpate the protestant religion, and the laws and liberties of 27 this kingdom... 4. By levying money for and to the use of the crown, by pretence of prerogative, for other time, 28 and in other manner, than the same was granted by parliament."
 29 [Bill of Rights of 1689]

30 The remedy provided by the Bill of Rights of 1689 was that taxes could not be levied except:

31                   "4. That levying money for or to the use of the crown, by pretence or prerogative, without the grant of 32 parliament, for longer time, on in other manner than the same is or shall be granted, is illegal."

33 Back on the American continent was the Resolutions of the Stamp Act Congress of 1765. American Colonists objected to 34 the Stamp Act as it imposed taxes on them without their consent. "John Adams denounced the Stamp Act as a violation of 35 Magna Carta." Perry; Cooper, supra at 10.

36 Various colonial assemblies passed resolutions condemning the Stamp Act. The Virginia House of Burgesses was the first.
 37 Four of seven resolutions offered by Patrick Henry were passed including number 1 and number 3 below:

38                   "(1) That the first settlers of Virginia brought with them all the liberties, privileges, franchises, and immunities
 39 of British subjects; (3) that under the British constitution taxes could be levied only by the people or their 40 representatives."

41 Most of the other colonies passed varying degrees of the Henry resolutions. They also called for a congress of 42 representatives to meet in New York and condemn the Stamp Act. Nine of the colonies sent representatives to the congress.

43                   "There was little difference of opinion as to the fundamental questions involved... Resolutions 2 thru 8
 44 expressed the constitutional theory of the colonists that all taxation... without the consent of the people's 45 representatives was illegal... 'No nation ought to be taxed against its own consent. England had passed through 46 many a year of civil war in defence of the proposition'"
 47 [Perry; Cooper, supra at 266-7]

1 The actual text of the Resolutions of the Stamp Act Congress of October 19, 1765 stated:

2 "2d. That his majesty's liege subjects in these colonies are entitled to all the inherent rights and privileges of his
3 natural born subjects within the kingdom of Great Britain,

4 "3d. That it is inseparably essential to the freedom of a people, and the undoubted rights of Englishmen, that no
5 taxes should be imposed on them, but with their own consent, given personally, or by their representatives."

6 Likewise the Declaration and Resolves of the First Continental Congress of 1774 contained similar language about the 7 necessity of consent for taxation. Additionally, Sir William Blackstone wrote in his Commentaries on the Laws of England,

8 "No subject of England can be constrained to pay any aids or taxes, even for the defence of the realm or the 9 support of government, but such as are imposed by his own consent, or that of his representatives in 10 parliament... And as this fundamental law had been shamefully evaded under many succeeding princes, by 11 compulsive loans, and benevolences extorted without a real and voluntary consent, it was made an article in the 12 petition of right."

13 [Blackstone's Commentaries on the Laws of England, Book I, p. 140 (1st edition, 1765)]

14 This principle was memorialized in the Declaration of Independence. This is one of the great principles upon which the 15 entire system of self-government rests: The consent of the governed must be given to the taxes they must pay. When this 16 principle is not in place, self-government does not exist. Tyranny exists in its place.

17 The Commissioner claims that his authority to collect the tax in the instant case comes from the Sixteenth Amendment. As
18 part of the Constitution, the Sixteenth Amendment must be interpreted using the everyday language and common
19 dictionaries of the time. There are no "words of art" or "terms of art" in the Constitution, as it is We the People who
20 determine what the Constitution means or doesn't mean. We the People don't speak using "words of art." We the People
21 just use everyday language. Therefore the consent for the scope of the meaning of the Sixteenth Amendment is vested in the 22 People, and that meaning will be plain for anyone to see once the evidence has been examined.

23 An exhaustive review of the Congressional Record during the time of the debates on the Sixteenth Amendment reveals no
24 credible evidence that the members of Congress were contemplating a direct tax on the wages and salaries of the American
25 People. An exhaustive review of other congressional documents during the ratification process yields no evidence that 26 Congress contemplated using the Sixteenth Amendment as a vehicle to place an unapportioned direct tax on the wages and 27 salaries of the American People.

28 An exhaustive review of law journal articles of the time produced no articles that indicated Congress or the American
29 People were contemplating a nonapportioned direct tax on the wages and salaries of the American People. No evidence was 30 found in the journals on political economy and economics. Nor was any such evidence discovered in an exhaustive search
31 of New York Times articles, which are all cataloged in yearbooks as the New York Times is a New York Times articles,
32 which are all cataloged in yearbooks as the New York Times is a "newspaper of record."

33 As there is no evidence that can be found anywhere indicating that the American People sought to place an unapportioned
34 direct tax on their wages and salaries, we can conclude that the American People never consented to the very tax that the 35 Commissioner is attempting to collect in the instant case [Hart v. Commissioner].

36 The entire weight of evidence as to the purpose of the Sixteenth Amendment indicates that its objective was to place
37 income taxes on net income from unincorporated business and investment into the classification of indirect taxes. Pollock
38 was overturned by the 16th Amendment. No more and no less. The purpose of the Sixteenth Amendment was to shift the 39 tax burden off of consumption and onto incomes from the accumulated wealth of the country such as to bring tax relief to 40 wage earners.

41 Since the signing of Magna Carta 800 years ago, it has been a well established principle of self-government among the 42 English speaking people that the people must consent to their taxes. According to author R.L. Perry in Sources of Our 43 Liberties:

44 "The liberties of the American citizen depend upon the existence of established and known rules of law limiting
45 the authority and discretion of men wielding the power of government. Magna Carta announced the rule of law;
46 this was its great contribution. It is this characteristic which has provided throughout the years the foundation
47 on which has come to rest the entire structure of Anglo-American constitutional liberties." supra at 1.

1 That Magna Carta and all subsequent documents that secured our liberties are relevant to the American Citizen today is
 2 borne out by the fact that the single monument on the meadow of Runnymede, between Windsor and Staines,
 3 commemorating Magna Carta was designed, paid for and erected by the American Bar Association. The American People
 4 never consented to this unapportioned direct tax on their wages and salaries. Therefore the Commissioner is wholly without 5 any delegated authority whatsoever to collect such a tax within the several union states.

6 5.4.8 Why “domicile” and becoming a “taxpayer” require your consent

7 5.4.8.1 Introduction

8 The purpose of establishing government is solely to provide “protection”. Those who wish to be protected by a specific 9 government must expressly consent to be protected by choosing a domicile within the civil jurisdiction of that specific
 10 government.

- 11 1. Those who have made such a choice and thereby become “customers” of the protection afforded by government are 12 called by any of the following names under the civil laws of the jurisdiction they have nominated to protect them:
  - 13 1.1. “citizens”, if they were born somewhere within the country which the jurisdiction is a part.
  - 14 1.2. “residents” (aliens) if they were born within the country in which the jurisdiction is a part.
  - 15 1.3. "inhabitants", which encompasses both "citizens", and "residents" but excludes foreigners.
  - 16 1.4. "persons".
  - 17 1.5. "individuals".
- 18 2. Those who have not become “customers” or “protected persons” of a specific government are called by any of the 19 following names within the civil laws of the jurisdiction they have refused to nominate as their protector and may NOT 20 be called by any of the names in item 1 above:
  - 21 2.1. “nonresidents”.
  - 22 2.2. “transient foreigners”.
  - 23 2.3. “stateless persons”.
  - 24 2.4. “in transitu”.
  - 25 2.5. “transient”.
  - 26 2.6. “sojourner”.
  - 27 2.7. “civilly dead”.

28 In law, the process of choosing a domicile within the jurisdiction of a specific government is called “animus manendi”.
 29 Latin is used to describe the process because judges don't want you knowing that you can choose NOT to be protected by 30 the civil statutory law. That choice makes you a consenting party to the “civil contract”, “social compact”, and “private 31 law” that attaches to and therefore protects all “inhabitants” and things physically situated on or within that specific
 32 territory, venue, and jurisdiction. In a sense then, your consent to a specific jurisdiction by your choice of domicile within 33 that jurisdiction is what creates the statutory "person", "individual", "citizen", "resident", or "inhabitant" which is the only
 34 proper subject of the civil statutory laws enacted by that government. In other words, choosing a domicile within a specific 35 jurisdiction causes an implied waiver of sovereign immunity, because the courts admit that the term "person" does not refer 36 to the "sovereign":

37 “Since in common usage, the term person does not include the sovereign, statutes not employing the phrase
 38 are ordinarily construed to exclude it.”
 39 [United States v. Cooper Corporation, 312 U.S. 600 (1941)]

40 “Sovereignty itself is, of course, not subject to law for it is the author and source of law;”
 41 [Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U.S. 356 (1886)]

42 “There is no such thing as a power of inherent Sovereignty in the government of the United States. In this
 43 country sovereignty resides in the People, and Congress can exercise no power which they have not, by their
 44 Constitution entrusted to it: All else is withheld.”
 45 [Juilliard v. Greenman, 110 U.S. 421 (1884)]

46 Those who have become customers of government protection by choosing a civil domicile within a specific government
 47 then owe a duty to pay for the support of the protection they demand. The method of paying for said protection is called 48 “taxes”. In earlier times this kind of sponsorship was called “tribute”.

TRIBUTE. Tribute in the sense of an impost paid by one state to another, as a mark of subjugation, is a common feature of international relationships in the biblical world. The tributary could be either a hostile state or an ally. Like deportation, its purpose was to weaken a hostile state. Deportation aimed at depleting the man-power. The aim of tribute was probably twofold: to impoverish the subjugated state and at the same time to increase the conqueror's own revenues and to acquire commodities in short supply in his own country. As an instrument of administration it was one of the simplest ever devised: the subjugated country could be made responsible for the payment of a yearly tribute. Its non-arrival would be taken as a sign of rebellion, and an expedition would then be sent to deal with the recalcitrant. This was probably the reason for the attack recorded in Gn. 14.

[New Bible Dictionary. Third Edition. Wood, D. R. W., Wood, D. R. W., & Marshall, I. H. 1996, c1982, c1962; InterVarsity Press: Downers Grove]

Domicile is an EXTREMELY important subject to learn because it defines and circumscribes:

1. The boundary between what is legislatively "foreign" and legislatively "domestic" in relation to a specific jurisdiction. Everyone domiciled OUTSIDE a specific jurisdiction is legislatively and statutorily "foreign" in relation to that civil jurisdiction. Note that you can be DOMESTIC from a CONSTITUTIONAL perspective and yet ALSO be FOREIGN from a legislative jurisdiction AT THE SAME TIME. This is true of the relationship of most Americans with the national government.
2. The boundary between what is LEGAL speech and POLITICAL speech. For everyone not domiciled in a specific jurisdiction, the civil law of that jurisdiction is POLITICAL and unenforceable. Since real constitutional courts cannot entertain political questions, then they cannot act in a political capacity against nonresidents.

So let us begin our coverage of this MOST important subject.

5.4.8.2 Definition

Domicile is legally defined as follows. We also include the definition of "situs" to help clarify its meaning:

"domicile. A person's legal home. That place where a man has his true, fixed, and permanent home and principal establishment, and to which whenever he is absent he has the intention of returning. Smith v. Smith, 206 Pa.Super. 310, 213 A.2d. 94. Generally, physical presence within a state and the intention to make it one's home are the requisites of establishing a "domicile" therein. The permanent residence of a person or the place to which he intends to return even though he may actually reside elsewhere. A person may have more than one residence but only one domicile. The legal domicile of a person is important since it, rather than the actual residence, often controls the jurisdiction of the taxing authorities and determines where a person may exercise the privilege of voting and other legal rights and privileges.
[Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 485]

"Situs. Lat. Situation; location; e.g. location or place of crime or business. Site; position; the place where a thing is considered, for example, with reference to jurisdiction over it, or the right or power to tax it. It imports fixedness of location. Situs of property, for tax purposes, is determined by whether the taxing state has sufficient contact with the personal property sought to be taxed to justify in fairness the particular tax. Town of Cady v. Alexander Const. Co., 12 Wis.2d. 236, 107 N.W.2d. 267, 270."

Generally, personal property has its taxable "situs" in that state where owner of it is domiciled. Smith v. Lummus, 149 Fla. 660, 6 So.2d. 625, 627, 628. Situs of a trust means place of performance of active duties of trustee. Campbell v. Albers, 313 Ill.App. 152, 39 N.E.2d. 672, 676."
[Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1387]

Notice in the definition of "domicile" above the absence of the word "consent" and replacing it with the word "intent" to disguise the true nature of what they are saying. Lawyers and politicians don't want you to know that they need your consent to make you into a "taxpayer" with a "domicile" within their jurisdiction, even though this is in fact the case. More on this later.

An exhaustive academic treatise on the subject of domicile also candidly admits that there is no all encompassing definition for "domicile".

§57. Difficulty of Defining Domicil.--

The difficulty, if not impossibility, of arriving at an entirely satisfactory definition of domicile has been frequently commented upon. Lord Alvanley, in Somerville v. Somerville, praised the wisdom of Bynkershoek in not hazarding a definition; and Dr. Lushington, in Maltass v. Maltass, speaking of the various attempts of jurists in this direction, considered himself justified in the remarkable language of Hertius: "Verum in iis definiendis mirum est quam sudant doctores." Lord Chelmsford, speaking, as late as 1863, in the case of Moorhouse v. Lord, says: "The difficulty of getting a satisfactory definition of domicil, which will meet every case, has often been admitted, and every attempt to frame one has hitherto failed." [Treatise on the Law of Domicil, §57, pp. 93-98; M.W. Jacobs, 1887; Little Brown and Company

The above admission is not surprising, given the fact that the main purpose for inventing the concept of domicile is to infer or imply consent of the subject to the civil law that has never expressly been given in writing and cannot be proven to exist. No government or judge is going to give a definition, because then people would use that definition to prove that they DON'T have a domicile and that would destroy the source of all the government's civil and taxing authority over the people who employ the definition to break the chains that bind them to their pagan tyrant rulers.

The concept of domicile we inherit primarily from the feudal Roman law system in which the king or emperor or lord claimed ownership over all territory entrusted to him or her by divine right. Everyone occupying said territory therefore became a "subject" of the king and owed him "allegiance" as compensation for the "privilege" or franchise associated with use of his property. That allegiance expressed itself as "tribute" paid to the king, which we know of today as "taxes". What were once "subjects" of the king in Great Britain and the Roman Empire are now called "citizens", and we fired the King when the Declaration of Independence declared all men equal. At that point, everyone became equal and the sovereign transitioned from the former King of England to "We the People" as individuals. Consequently, we no longer have a landlord and the government that serves us cannot therefore lawfully charge us "rent" for the use of the land or territory that we occupy if we own it.

"The people of this State, as the successors of its former sovereign, are entitled to all the rights which formerly belonged to the King by his prerogative. Through the medium of their Legislature they may exercise all the powers which previous to the Revolution could have been exercised either by the King alone, or by him in conjunction with his Parliament; subject only to those restrictions which have been imposed by the Constitution of this State or of the U.S."
[Lansing v. Smith, 21 D. 89, 4 Wendel 9 (1829) (New York)]

"In the United States the people are sovereign, and the government cannot sever its relationship to the people by taking away their citizenship."
[Afroyim v. Rusk, 387 U.S. 253 (1967)]

"Strictly speaking, in our republican form of government, the absolute sovereignty of the nation is in the people of the nation; and the residuary sovereignty of each state, not granted to any of its public functionaries, is in the people of the state. 2 Dall. 471"
[Bouv. Law Dict (1870)]

"The sovereignty of a state does not reside in the persons who fill the different departments of its government, but in the People, from whom the government emanated; and they may change it at their discretion. Sovereignty, then in this country, abides with the constituency, and not with the agent; and this remark is true, both in reference to the federal and state government."
[Spooner v. McConnell, 22 F. 939 @ 943]

"In Europe, the Executive is almost synonymous with the Sovereign power of a State; and, generally, includes legislative and judicial authority. When, therefore, writers speak of the sovereign, it is not necessarily in exclusion of the judiciary; and it will often be found, that when the Executive affords a remedy for any wrong, it is nothing more than by an exercise of its judicial authority. Such is the condition of power in that quarter of the world, where it is too commonly acquired by force, or fraud, or both, and seldom by compact. In America, however, the case is widely different. Our government is founded upon compact. Sovereignty was, and is, in the people. It was entrusted by them, as far as was necessary for the purpose of forming a good government, to the Federal Convention; and the Convention executed their trust, by effectually separating the Legislative, Judicial, and Executive powers; which, in the contemplation of our Constitution, are each a branch of the sovereignty. The well-being of the whole depends upon keeping each department within its limits."
[Glass v. The Sloop Betsey, 3 U.S. 6, 3 Dall. 6, 1 L.Ed. 485 (1794)]

5.4.8.3 Domicile is a First Amendment choice of political affiliation

Another very important observation is in order at this point, which is that our choice of "domicile" is a strictly political and not legal matter. It is a matter of our political choice and affiliation. The Supreme Court has ruled that no government may dictate our choice of political affiliations, as revealed in the American Jurisprudence Legal Encyclopedia:

1 "The right to associate or not to associate with others solely on the basis of individual choice, not being
 2 absolute, 54 may conflict with a societal interest in requiring one to associate with others, or to prohibit one
 3 from associating with others, in order to accomplish what the state deems to be the common good. The 4 Supreme Court, though rarely called upon to examine this aspect of the right to freedom of association, has
 5 nevertheless established certain basic rules which will cover many situations involving forced or prohibited
 6 associations. Thus, where a sufficiently compelling state interest, outside the political spectrum, can be 7 accomplished only by requiring individuals to associate together for the common good, then such forced
 8 association is constitutional. 55 But the Supreme Court has made it clear that compelling an individual to 9 become a member of an organization with political aspects, or compelling an individual to become a member
 10 of an organization which financially supports, in more than an insignificant way, political personages or 11 goals which the individual does not wish to support, is an infringement of the individual's constitutional
 12 right to freedom of association. 56 The First Amendment prevents the government, except in the most 13 compelling circumstances, from wielding its power to interfere with its employees' freedom to believe and
 14 associate, or to not believe and not associate; it is not merely a tenure provision that protects public employees
 15 from actual or constructive discharge. 57 Thus, First Amendment principles prohibit a state from compelling
 16 any individual to associate with a political party, as a condition of retaining public employment. 58 The First
 17 Amendment protects nonpolicymaking public employees from discrimination based on their political beliefs or 18 affiliation. 59 But the First Amendment protects the right of political party members to advocate that a specific
 19 person be elected or appointed to a particular office and that a specific person be hired to perform a
 20 governmental function. 60 In the First Amendment context, the political patronage exception to the First
 21 Amendment protection for public employees is to be construed broadly, so as presumptively to encompass
 22 positions placed by legislature outside of "merit" civil service. Positions specifically named in relevant federal,
 23 state, county, or municipal laws to which discretionary authority with respect to enforcement of that law or 24 carrying out of some other policy of political concern is granted, such as a secretary of state given statutory 25 authority over various state corporation law practices, fall within the political patronage exception to First
 26 Amendment protection of public employees. 61 However, a supposed interest in ensuring effective government

 3 [American Jurisprudence 2d, Constitutional law, §546: Forced and Prohibited Associations (1999)]

4 One's choice of "domicile" certainly has far-reaching legal consequences and ramifications, but our choice of domicile is
 5 not a legal matter to be decided by any court. No court whether it be a federal or state court, has jurisdiction over strictly
 6 political matters. Below is what the U.S. Supreme Court has to say on this very subject:

7 "But, fortunately for our freedom from political excitements in judicial duties, this court [the U.S. Supreme
 8 Court] can never with propriety be called on officially to be the umpire in questions merely political. The
 9 adjustment of these questions belongs to the people and their political representatives, either in the State or
 10 general government. These questions relate to matters not to be settled on strict legal principles. They are 11 adjusted rather by inclination, or prejudice or compromise, often.

12 [ . . . ]

13 Another evil, alarming and little foreseen, involved in regarding these as questions for the final arbitrament
 14 of judges would be that, in such an event, all political privileges and rights would, in a dispute among the
 15 people, depend on our decision finally. We would possess the power to decide against, as well as for, them,
 16 and, under a prejudiced or arbitrary judiciary, the public liberties and popular privileges might thus be much
 17 perverted, if not entirely prostrated. But, allowing the people to make constitutions and unmake them, allowing
 18 their representatives to make laws and unmake them, and without our interference as to their principles or
 19 policy in doing it, yet, when constitutions and laws are made and put in force by others, then the courts, as
 20 empowered by the State or the Union, commence their functions and may decide on the rights which conflicting
 21 parties can legally set up under them, rather than about their formation itself. Our power begins after theirs
 22 [the Sovereign People] ends. Constitutions and laws precede the judiciary, and we act only under and after 23 them, and as to disputed rights beneath them, rather than disputed points in making them. We speak 24 what is the law, jus dicere, we speak or construe what is the constitution, after both are 25 made, but we make, or revise, or control neither. The disputed rights beneath
 26 constitutions already made are to be governed by precedents, by sound legal principles,
 27 by positive legislation e.g. "positive law", clear contracts, moral duties, and fixed
 28 rules; they are per se questions of law, and are well suited to the education and habits
 29 of the bench. But the other disputed points in making constitutions, depending often, as before shown, on 30 policy, inclination, popular resolves and popular will and arising not in respect to private rights, not what is 31 meum and tuum, but in relation to politics, they belong to politics, and they are settled by political tribunals,
 32 and are too dear to a people bred in the school of Sydney and Russel for them ever to intrust their final 33 decision, when disputed, to a class of men who are so far removed from them as the judiciary, a class also who 34 might decide them erroneously, as well as right, and if in the former way, the consequences might not be able 35 to be averted except by a revolution, while a wrong decision by a political forum can often be peacefully
 36 corrected by new elections or instructions in a single month; and if the people, in the distribution of powers
 37 under the constitution, should ever think of making judges supreme arbiters in political controversies when 38 not selected by nor, frequently, amenable to them nor at liberty to follow such various considerations in their 39 judgments as [48 U.S. 53] belong to mere political questions, they will dethrone themselves and lose one of 40 their own invaluable birthrights; building up in this way -- slowly, but surely -- a new sovereign power in the 41 republic, in most respects irresponsible and unchangeable for life, and one more dangerous, in theory at 42 least, than the worst elective oligarchy in the worst of times. Again, instead of controlling the 43 people in political affairs, the judiciary in our system was designed rather to control
 44 individuals, on the one hand, when encroaching, or to defend them, on the other,
 45 under the Constitution and the laws, when they are encroached upon. And if the judiciary at 46 times seems to fill the important station of a check in the government, it is rather a check on the legislature, who
 47 may attempt to pass laws contrary to the Constitution, or on the executive, who may violate both the laws and 48 Constitution, than on the people themselves in their primary capacity as makers and amenders of constitutions."
 49 [Luther v. Borden, 48 U.S. 1 (1849)]

50 Consequently, no court of law can interfere with your choice of legal domicile, which is a strictly political matter. To do

1 distinct from the federal or state sovereignties. A court of law is certainly not the proper forum, for instance, in which to
 2 question or politically ridicule one's choice of domicile, whether it be in front of a jury or a judge.

3 "Petitioners contend that immunity from suit in federal court suffices to preserve the dignity of the States.
 4 Private suits against nonconsenting States, however, present "the indignity of subjecting a State to the 5 coercive process of judicial tribunals at the instance of private parties." In re Ayers, supra, at 505; accord,
 6 Seminole Tribe, 517 U.S., at 58, regardless of the forum. Not only must a State defend or default but also it
 7 must face the prospect of being thrust, by federal fiat and against its will, into the disfavored status of a debtor,
 8 subject to the power of private citizens to levy on its treasury or perhaps even government buildings or property
 9 which the State administers on the public's behalf.

10 [. . .]

 12 States--especially suits for money damages--may threaten the financial integrity of the States. It is
 13 indisputable that, at the time of the founding, many of the States could have been forced into insolvency but
 14 for their immunity from private suits for money damages. Even today, an unlimited congressional power to
 15 authorize suits in state court to levy upon the treasuries of the States for compensatory damages, attorney's
 16 fees, and even punitive damages could create staggering burdens, giving Congress a power and a leverage
 17 over the States that is not contemplated by our constitutional design. The potential national power would
 18 pose a severe and notorious danger to the States and their resources."
 19 [Alden v. Maine, 527 U.S. 706 (1999)]

20 The Supreme Court said that the sovereignty of We The People is every bit as sacred as that of the states, so why should 21 they not merit the same level of sovereign immunity from suit and dignity, especially in their choice of domicile, as that of 22 the States? To wit:

23 "The rights of individuals and the justice due to them, are as dear and precious as those of states. Indeed the 24 latter are founded upon the former; and the great end and object of them must be to secure and support the 25 rights of individuals, or else vain is government."
 26 [Chisholm v. Georgia, 2 U.S. (2 Dall.) 419, 1 L.Ed. 440 (1793)]

27 "We The People" certainly cannot be "Sovereign" in any sense of the word if legal process can be maliciously and 28 habitually abused by the government at great financial injury and inconvenience to them in the process of questioning or
 29 ridiculing their choice of domicile. In spite of this fact, this very evil happens daily in state and federal courts in the context
 30 of tax trials. We cannot restore the sovereignty of the people unless and until this chronic malicious abuse of legal and 31 judicial process is ended immediately.

32 In recognition of the concepts in this section, the following book on the common law starkly admits that being a CIVIL 33 STATUTORY "PERSON" is optional, and implies MEMBERSHIP in the body politic. If only lawyers now were as 34 honest as those back at the founding of this country!:

35 CHAPTER II.

36 CIVIL PERSON.

37 The state is represented in the person of its chief magistrate, who is at the same time a member of it. Thus the 38 king or president possesses two kinds of rights, a university of rights as a corporation [PUBLIC rights], and 39 individual rights [PRIVATE rights] as a man. As the former become more and more confounded with the 40 latter, so government advances towards some form of monarchy. A bishop also is a sole corporation, but the 41 man holding the office has also his individual rights. The word person neither according to its accurate
 42 meaning nor in law is identical with man. A man may possess at the same time different classes of rights. On 43 the other hand, two or more men may form only one legal person, and have one estate, as partners or 44 corporators. Upon this difference of rights between the person and the man, the individual and the partner,
 45 corporator, tenant in common, and joint tenant, depends the whole law of these several classes. The same
 46 person has perfect power of alienation, of forming contracts, of disposing by last will and testament of his
 47 individual estate, but not of the corporate, nor of his own share in it, unless such power be expressed or implied
 48 in the contract by which the university of rights and duties is created. The same distinction divides all public
 49 from private property, and distinguishes the cases in which the corporation or civil person may sue from
 50 those in which the individual alone can be the party ; - although there are instances in which the injury
 51 complained of may, in reference to the difference of character, be such as to authorize the suit to be
 52 instituted either by the civil person or the individual, or by both. Thus, violence to the person may be 53 punished either as a wrong to the state or to the individual.

The true meaning of the word person is also exemplified in the matter of contracts. It is said, generally, that all persons may contract; but that is not true in the sense that all human beings may contract. Thus, a married woman, an infant, a lunatic, cannot contract. Again, a slave of mature age, sound intellect, with the consent of his master, cannot make a contract binding on himself, although as an agent he may bind his master. These matters are important only as they serve clearly to show that the civil person may have rights distinct from those which he possesses as an individual ; - and that his rights or duties as an individual may consequently become opposed to his rights and duties as a civil person. Thus, a partnership of three persons may own, for example, a moiety of a ship, and one of them the other moiety. In case of a difference between them as to its use, the rights of the one as a partner, and his right as an individual owner of another moiety, are directly opposed. In order, therefore, in any case, to perceive the application of a rule of law, it must be considered whether the person or the individual, or both, is the possessor of the right. For it may be asserted as absolutely true, that the rights of the man are not recognized by that law which is termed the municipal. It recognizes them only as they grow out of, or are consistent with, his character as a civil person. In other words, this is the distinction between the Common Law and the law of nature. Nor is this a fanciful distinction, inasmuch as the rudest tribes, as well as the most civilized nations, have always distinguished between the rights and duties of their members, and of those who were not members of the body politic. Even after the philosophical jurists of antiquity had polished and improved the jurisprudence of aristocratic republican Rome by the philosophy of the Portico, Cicero, statesman, philosopher, and jurisconsult, exclaims with indignation against the confusion of rights of person that the age witnessed: " In urbem nostrum est infusa peregrinitas; nunc vero etiam braccatis et transalpinis nationibus ut nullum veteris leporis vestigium appareat."

The Common Law, as well as the Civil, recognizes as a person an unborn child, when it concerns its interests either as to life or property. " Qui in utero est perinde ac si in rebus humanis esset, custoditur, quotiens de commodis ipsius partus queritur." And both systems provide the same remedies to protect the child and those with whom its birth may interfere. In case of a limitation to the child of which a woman is now pregnant, if twins should be born, the Common Law gives the estate to the first-born; by our law, they would take moieties. Now, as these rights are acquired before the birth of the child or children, there is a double fiction ; not only in considering the unborn as born, but in distinguishing under the Common Law the eldest from the youngest born. Whilst, therefore, the law regards the unborn as born, yet, to transmit the estate, he must be born as a man, alive and capable of living. The law does not presume the life or death of an individual; when his existence has been established, his death also must be proved. * But the birth of an individual and the commencement of his character as a person do not necessarily concur. Thus, an alien of any age is not a person, in relation to a contract concerning lands, nor in any case is an infant ; so a woman marrying before she attains her legal maturity may die of old age without having become a person. On the other hand, a person may suffer civil death before physical death; totally, where he becomes a monk; partially, as a penalty for the commission of an infamous crime; and perpetually or temporarily, as in case of outlawry. * Where a person has not been heard of for seven years, and under circumstances which contradict the probability of his being alive, a court may consider this sufficient proof of death (Stark. Ev. 4 pl. 457). The presumptions which arise in such cases do not concern the death of the person., but the time of his death, as where several die by one shipwreck or other casualty. On this point the rules are, - 1st. In case of parents and children, that children below the age of puberty died before, and adult children after, their parents. 2d. Persons not being parents and children, and the rights of one being dependent upon the previous death of the other, this precedent condition must be proved. 3d. If a grant is to be delated by the act of the grantor, as in case of a don anio inter virum et uxorem, or a donatio ,ortis causa, the donor is presumed, in the absence of testimony, to have died first. (See Pothier, Obligations, by Evans, Vol. II. p. 300.)

5.4.8.4 You can only have one Domicile and that place and government becomes your main source of CIVIL protection

The reason why government forms will ask you your domicile is explained as follows:

1. A person can only have "allegiance" towards one and only one "sovereign". The U.S. Supreme Court confirmed this when it said:

"Citizenship is a political tie; allegiance is a territorial tenure. [ . . . ] The doctrine is, that allegiance cannot be due to two sovereigns; and taking an oath of allegiance to a new, is the strongest evidence of withdrawing allegiance from a previous, sovereign...."

This is also consistent with the Bible, which says on this subject:

"No servant can serve two masters; for either he will hate the one and love the other, or else he will be loyal to the one and despise the other. You cannot serve God and mammon."

1 [Jesus [God] speaking in Luke 16:13, Bible, NKJV]

- 2 2. Choosing a "domicile" in a place is what makes a person a STATUTORY "citizen" or "resident" under the laws of that
 3 place. Because you can only have a "domicile" in one place at a time, then you can only be a "citizen" in one place at 4 a time. Becoming a statutory "citizen" is what makes you "subject" to the civil laws in that place and is the origin of
 5 your authority and privilege to vote, serve on jury duty, and pay income taxes in that place. For instance, Mexicans
 6 visiting the United States for temporary and who have not changed their "domicile" to the United States are called 7 "Mexican Nationals" while they are here. When they return to the place of their domicile, they are called "Mexican 8 citizens".
- 9 3. A legal means needs to be established to pay for the protection afforded by the sovereign to whom we claim allegiance.
 10 "Taxes" are the legal vehicle by which "protection" is paid for. In earlier times, in fact, "taxes" were called "tribute".
 11 When we pay "tribute", we are expressing "allegiance" to our personal "sovereign" by offering it our time and money.
 12 Below is a very revealing quote from a famous Bible dictionary which explains the meaning of the word "tribute" in a
 13 Biblical context:

14 "TRIBUTE. Tribute in the sense of an impost paid by one state to another, as a mark of subjugation, is a
 15 common feature of international relationships in the biblical world. The tributary could be either a hostile state
 16 or an ally. Like deportation, its purpose was to weaken a hostile state. Deportation aimed at depleting the 17 man-power. The aim of tribute was probably twofold: to impoverish the subjugated state and at the same time
 18 to increase the conqueror's own revenues and to acquire commodities in short supply in his own country. As 19 an instrument of administration it was one of the simplest ever devised: the subjugated country could be made
 20 responsible for the payment of a yearly tribute. Its non-arrival would be taken as a sign of rebellion, and an
 21 expedition would then be sent to deal with the recalcitrant. This was probably the reason for the attack
 22 recorded in Gn. 14.
 23 [New Bible Dictionary. Third Edition. Wood, D. R. W., Wood, D. R. W., & Marshall, I. H. 1996, c1982, c1962;
 24 InterVarsity Press: Downers Grove]

25 Therefore, establishing a "domicile" or "residence" also establishes a voluntary "tax home" as well. There are several 26 problems with the above worldly approach that conflict with Christianity:

- 27 1. Luke 16:13 above implies that those who demonstrate allegiance become "servants" of those they demonstrate 28 "allegiance" towards. We have a saying for this:

29 "Protection draws subjection."

- 30 2. God said we can serve only Him, and therefore we cannot have "allegiance" to anything but Him.

31 "Away with you , Satan! For it is written, 'You shall worship the Lord your God, and Him ONLY [NOT the 32 government or its vain laws!] you shall serve.'"
 33 [Matt. 4:10, Bible, NKJV]

- 34 3. Serving anyone but God amounts to idolatry in violation of the first four commandments found in the Ten 35 Commandments. Idolatry is the worst of all sins documented in the Bible. In the Old Testament book of Ezekiel, God 36 killed people and destroyed whole cities whose inhabitants committed idolatry.
- 37 4. The government cannot compel us to consent to anything or to demonstrate "allegiance" toward it. Allegiance must 38 always be completely voluntary.
- 39 5. It is against the Bible for Christians to claim allegiance to any "man" and by implication a civil ruler. That is why the 40 founding fathers declared us to be a "society of law and not men" as declared by the U.S. Supreme Court in Marbury v.
 41 Madison. Christians can ONLY have allegiance to God and His laws, which then gives rise to an INDIRECT
 42 obligation to love and therefore protect our "neighbor" as indicated in Matt. 22:36-40.

43 "Thus saith the LORD; Cursed be the man that trusteth in man [we are a man], and maketh flesh his arm, and 44 whose heart departeth from the LORD."
 45 [Jeremiah 17:5, Bible, KJV]

46 "That your faith should not stand in the wisdom of men, but in the power of God."
 47 [1 Corinthians 2:5, Bible, KJV]

48 "It is better to trust in the Lord, than to put confidence in man. It is better to trust in the Lord, than to put 49 confidence in princes for political rulers, who are but "men"."
 50 [Psalm 118:8-9, Bible, NKJV]

"Trust in the Lord with all your heart, and lean not on your own understanding [because YOU are a "man"]. In all your ways acknowledge Him, And He [RATHER THAN THE winds of political opinion] shall direct your paths. "
 [Prov. 3:5, Bible, NKJV]

"The Moloch [socialist] state simply represents the supreme effort of man to command [or PREDICT] the future, to predestine the world, and to be as God [which was Lucifer's original sin]. Lesser efforts, divination, spirit-questing, magic, and witchcraft, are equally anathema to God. All represent efforts to have the future on other than God's terms, to have a future apart from and in defiance of God. They are assertions that the world is not of God but of brute factuality, and that man can somehow master the world and the future by going directly to the raw materials thereof. Thus King Saul outwardly conformed to God's law by abolishing all black arts, but, when faced with a crisis, he turned to the witch of Endor (I Sam. 28). Saul knew where he stood with God: in rebellion and unrepentant. Saul knew moreover the judgment of the law and of the prophet Samuel concerning him (I Sam. 15:10-35). Samuel alive had declared God's future to Saul. In going to the witch of Endor, Saul attempted to reach Samuel dead, in the faith and hope that Samuel dead was now in touch with and informed concerning a world of brute factuality outside of God which could offer Saul a God-free, law-free future. But the word from the grave only underscored God's law-word (I Sam. 28:15-19): it was the word of judgment."
 [The Institutes of Biblical Law, Rousas John Rushdoony, 1973, p. 35]

Therefore, Christians cannot be expected or required to either accept, consent to, or pay for protection that God says comes ONLY from Him. They cannot allow government to assume an authority equal or superior to God in their lives, including in the area of protection. The only purpose for government is "protection".

"Allegiance and protection are, in this connection, reciprocal obligations. The one is a compensation for the other; allegiance for protection and protection for allegiance."
 [Minor v. Happersett, 88 U.S. (21 Wall.) 162, 166-168 (1874)]

Any government form that asks us what our "domicile" is indirectly is asking us to whom we have exclusive "allegiance". Any government that passes a law compelling "allegiance" or requiring us to consent to laws or a government or protection that we don't want is:

1. Implementing slavery in violation of the Thirteenth Amendment, 18 U.S.C. §1581, 18 U.S.C. §1583, and 42 U.S.C. §1994.
2. Making themselves into an organized crime syndicate that earns its revenues from "protection". This is called a "protection racket" and it is a federal crime under 18 U.S.C. §1951.
3. Violating the antitrust laws at 15 U.S.C. §2, by making themselves into a monopoly that is the only source of "protection".

The Bible describes such an organized crime syndicate as "the Beast", which Rev. 19:19 defines as "the kings of the earth". In modern times, this would be our political rulers.

5.4.8.5 Domicile and taxation

Both state and federal income taxation is based almost entirely upon what is called "domicile". Domicile is a choice we make that requires our consent and participation, and because it requires our consent, then becoming a "taxpayer" who owes a tax requires our consent. We will explain this shortly. An examination of the Internal Revenue Code and implementing regulations confirms that there are only two proper legal "persons" who are the subject of the I.R.C., and that these two "persons" have a "domicile" in the "United States". By "United States" as used in this document, we mean the government of the "United States" and not the "United States" in the geographical sense as used in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10) and 4 U.S.C. §110(d):

Table 5-35: Taxable persons under I.R.C.

Do not file. Not subject to the I.R.C. because not domiciled in the "United States" (federal territory)

Options 1 and 2 above have a civil "domicile" within the statutory but not constitutional "United States", meaning federal territory that is no part of any state of the Union, as a prerequisite. People born in and domiciled within states of the Union fall under status 3. If "nationals" (who are not statutory "citizens" under 8 U.S.C. §1401) domiciled in states have no earnings from the "United States" government or federal territory, then even if they choose to volunteer, they cannot be "liable" to pay any of their earnings to the IRS. Note also that the "aliens" mentioned in option 4 above, even if they live in the "United States" (federal territory), are not even mentioned in the I.R.C. They only become subject to the code by either becoming involved in a "trade or business", which is a public office and a voluntary activity involving federal contracts and employment, or by declaring the "United States" (federal territory) to be their legal "domicile". Making the "United States" (federal territory) into their "domicile" or engaging in a "trade or business" (which is defined as a public office) are the only two activities that can transform "aliens" into "residents" subject to the Internal Revenue Code. "Aliens" or "nonresident aliens" may voluntarily elect (choose) to treat the "United States" (government or federal territory) as their domicile and thereby become "residents" in accordance with the following authorities:

1. 26 U.S.C. §6013(g) or (h).
2. 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(4)(B).
3. 26 C.F.R. §1.871-1(a).
4. The Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act (F.S.I.A.), 28 U.S.C. §1605(a)(2), which says that those who conduct "commerce" within the legislative jurisdiction of the United States (in the federal zone) surrender their sovereign immunity.

TITLE 28 > PART IV > CHAPTER 97 > § 1605
§ 1605. General exceptions to the jurisdictional immunity of a foreign state

(a) A foreign state shall not be immune from the jurisdiction of courts of the United States or of the States in any case—

(2) in which the action is based upon a commercial activity carried on in the United States by the foreign state; or upon an act performed in the United States in connection with a commercial activity of the foreign state elsewhere; or upon an act outside the territory of the United States in connection with a commercial activity of the foreign state elsewhere and that act causes a direct effect in the United States:

We also caution that a "non-resident non-person" can also unwittingly become a "U.S. person" with an effective domicile in the "United States" (federal territory) by incorrectly declaring his or her citizenship status on a government form as that of either a statutory "U.S. citizen" under 8 U.S.C. §1401 or a statutory "resident alien" under 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(A). This ignorant oversight results in a surrender of sovereign immunity under 28 U.S.C. §1603(b)(3), which says that "U.S. citizens" and "residents" may not be treated as "foreign states". This is by far the most frequent mechanism that your unscrupulous government uses to maliciously destroy the sovereignty of persons in states of the Union and undermine the

4 5.4.8.6 The three sources of government civil jurisdiction

5 Even for civil laws that are enacted with the consent of the majority of the governed as the Declaration of Independence
 6 requires, we must still explicitly and individually consent to be subject to them before they can be enforced against us.

7 "When a change of government takes place, from a monarchical to a republican government, the old form is
 8 dissolved. Those who lived under it, and did not choose to become members of the new, had a right to refuse
 9 their allegiance to it, and to retire elsewhere. By being a part of the society subject to the old government, they
 10 had not entered into any engagement to become subject to any new form the majority might think proper to 11 adopt. That the majority shall prevail is a rule posterior to the formation of government, and results from it. It
 12 is not a rule upon mankind in their natural state. There, every man is independent of all laws, except those 13 prescribed by nature. He is not bound by any institutions formed by his fellowmen without his consent"
 14 [Cruden v. Neale, 2 N.C., 2 S.E. 70 (1796)]

15 This requirement for the consent to the protection afforded by government is the foundation of our system of government,
 16 according to the Declaration of Independence: consent of the governed. The U.S. Supreme Court admitted this when it
 17 said:

18 "The people of the United States resident within any State are subject to two governments: one State, and the 19 other National; but there need be no conflict between the two. The powers which one possesses, the other
 20 does not. They are established for different purposes, and have separate jurisdictions. Together they make one
 21 whole, and furnish the people of the United States with a complete government, ample for the protection of all
 22 their rights at home and abroad. True, it may sometimes happen that a person is amenable to both jurisdictions
 23 for one and the same act. Thus, if a marshal of the United States is unlawfully resisted while executing the 24 process of the courts within a State, and the resistance is accompanied by an assault on the officer, the
 25 sovereignty of the United States is violated by the resistance, and that of the State by the breach of peace, in the 26 assault. So, too, if one passes counterfeited coin of the United States within a State, it may be an offence against
 27 the United States and the State: the United States, because it discredits the coin; and the State, because of the 28 fraud upon him to whom it is passed. This does not, however, necessarily imply that the two governments
 29 possess powers in common, or bring them into conflict with each other. It is the natural consequence of a
 30 citizenship [92 U.S. 542, 551] which owes allegiance to two sovereignties, and claims protection from both.

31 The citizen cannot complain, because he has 32 voluntarily submitted himself to such a form of 33 government. He owes allegiance to the two departments, so to speak, and within their respective 34 spheres must pay the penalties which each exacts for disobedience to its laws. In return, he can demand 35 protection from each within its own jurisdiction."*
 36 [United States v. Cruikshank, 92 U.S. 542 (1875) [emphasis added]

37 How, then, did you "voluntarily submit" yourself to such a form of government and thereby contract with that government
 38 for "protection"? If people fully understood how they did this, many of them would probably immediately withdraw their 39 consent and completely drop out of the corrupted, inefficient, and usurious system of government we have, now wouldn't
 40 they? We have spent six long years researching this question, and our research shows that it wasn't your citizenship as a
 41 "national" but not statutory "citizen" pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) that made you subject to their civil laws. Well
 42 then, what was it?

43 It was your voluntary choice of domicile!

44 In fact, the following types of Americans DO have the right to complain if:

- 45 1. The government calls "citizen" status voluntary but positively refuses to recognize or protect your right to NOT be a 46 "citizen". This:
  - 47 1.1. Violates the First Amendment and effectively compels you to contract with the government for civil protection.
  - 48 1.2. Makes the statement on their part that "citizen" status is voluntary a FRAUD.

2. The government PRESUMES that domicile and residence are equivalent, in order to:
  - 2.1. Usurp civil jurisdiction over you that they do not otherwise have.
  - 2.2. Evade the requirement to satisfy their burden of proving on the record that you were "purposefully" and consensually availing yourself of commerce within their civil jurisdiction with people who wanted to be regarded as protected "citizens" or "residents" in the context of YOUR interactions with them. They aren't required to be "citizens" or "residents" for ALL PURPOSES, but only for those that they want to be.
3. The government refuses to recognize your right to be a STATUTORY "citizen" for some purposes but a statutory "non-resident non-person" for other purposes. Since you have a constitutional right to NOT contract and NOT associate, then you ought to be able to choose in each specific case or service offered by government whether you want that specific service, rather than being forced to be a "customer" of government for EVERYTHING if you sign up for ANYTHING. That's called an unconscionable or adhesion contract. The U.S. Supreme Court has also held that not being able to do this is a violation of what they call the "Unconstitutional Conditions Doctrine".
4. You were treated as a statutory "citizen" without your consent.
5. You were PRESUMED to be a statutory citizen absent your express written consent.
6. You are PRESUMED to have a civil domicile within the jurisdiction of a court you are appearing before. In the case of federal courts, this presumption is usually false.
7. Your government opponent PRESUMES that STATUTORY citizens and CONSTITUTIONAL citizens are equivalent. They are NOT.
8. The government PRESUMES that because you are born or naturalized in a place, that you are a STATUTORY "citizen". This presumption is FALSE. Those born or naturalized are CONSTITUTIONAL citizens but not necessarily STATUTORY citizens subject to federal law.
9. The government does not provide a way on ALL of its forms to describe those who do NOT consent to statutory citizen status or ANY civil status subject to government law.
10. The government interferes with or refuses to protect your right to change your status to remove yourself from their civil jurisdiction.

The "citizen" the Supreme Administrative Court is talking about above is a statutory "citizen" and not a constitutional "citizen", and the only way you can become subject to statutory civil law is to have a domicile within the jurisdiction of the sovereign. Below is a legal definition of "domicile":

"domicile. A person's legal home. That place where a man has his true, fixed, and permanent home and principal establishment, and to which whenever he is absent he has the intention of returning. Smith v. Smith, 206 Pa.Super. 310, 213 A.2d. 94. Generally, physical presence within a state and the intention to make it one's home are the requisites of establishing a "domicile" therein. The permanent residence of a person or the place to which he intends to return even though he may actually reside elsewhere. A person may have more than one residence but only one domicile. The legal domicile of a person is important since it, rather than the actual residence, often controls the jurisdiction of the taxing authorities and determines where a person may exercise the privilege of voting and other legal rights and privileges."
[Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 485]

"This right to protect persons having a domicile, though not native-born or naturalized citizens, rests on the firm foundation of justice, and the claim to be protected is earned by considerations which the protecting power is not at liberty to disregard. Such domiciled citizen pays the same price for his protection as native-born or naturalized citizens pay for theirs. He is under the bonds of allegiance to the country of his residence, and, if he breaks them, incurs the same penalties. He owes the same obedience to the civil laws. His property is, in the same way and to the same extent as theirs, liable to contribute to the support of the Government. In nearly all respects, his and their condition as to the duties and burdens of Government are undistinguishable."
[Fong Yue Ting v. United States, 149 U.S. 698 (1893)]

Notice the phrase "civil laws" above and the term "claim to be protected". What they are describing is a contract to procure the protection of the government, from which a "claim" arises. Those who are not party to the domicile/protection contract have no such claim and are immune from the civil jurisdiction of the government. In other words, they have no "civil status" under the laws of that protectorate:

"There are certain general principles which control the disposition of this case. They are, in the main, well settled; the difficulty lies in their application to the particular facts of the case in hand. It is elementary that every state has an undoubted right to determine the status, or domestic and social condition, of the persons domiciled within its territory, except in so far as the powers of the states in this respect are restrained, or duties and obligations imposed upon them by the constitution of the United States." Strader v. Graham, 10 How. 93. Again, the civil status is governed universally by one single principle, namely, that of domicile, which is the criterion established by law for the purpose of determining the civil status; for it is on this basis that the personal rights of a party, — that is to say, the law which determines his majority or minority, his marriage, succession, testacy, or intestacy, — must depend. Udny v. Udny, L. R., 1 H. L. Sc. 457.

 [Woodward v. Woodward, 11 S.W. 892, 87 Tenn. 644 (Tenn., 1889)]

Another implication of the above is that if the STATES have the right to determine civil status, then the people AS INDIVIDUALS from which all their power was delegated have the right to determine their OWN civil status. This right derives from the right to contract and associate and every sovereignty has it. See:

Your Exclusive Right to Declare or Establish Your Civil Status, Form #13.008
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

In fact, there are two categories and four unique ways to become subject to the civil STATUTORY jurisdiction of a specific government. These ways are:

1. Domicile by choice: Choosing domicile within a specific jurisdiction.
2. Domicile by operation of law. Also called domicile of necessity:
  - 2.1. Representing an entity that has a domicile within a specific jurisdiction even though not domiciled oneself in said jurisdiction. For instance, representing a federal corporation as a public officer of said corporation, even though domiciled outside the federal zone. The authority for this type of jurisdiction is, for instance, Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 17(b).
  - 2.2. Becoming a dependent of someone else, and thereby assuming the same domicile as that of your care giver. For instance, being a minor and dependent and having the same civil domicile as your parents. Another example is becoming a government dependent and assuming the domicile of the government paying you the welfare check.
  - 2.3. Being committed to a prison as a prisoner, and thereby assuming the domicile of the government owning or funding the prison.

In addition to the above, one can ALSO become subject involuntarily to the COMMON LAW and not CIVIL STATUTORY jurisdiction of a specific court by engaging in commerce on the territory protected by a specific government and thereby waiving sovereign immunity under:

1. The Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act (F.S.I.A.), 28 U.S.C. §1605.
2. The Minimum Contacts Doctrine, which implements the Fourteenth Amendment. See International Shoe Co. v. Washington, 326 U.S. 310 (1945) .
3. The Longarm Statutes of the state jurisdiction where you are physically situated at the time. For a list of such state statutes, see:
  - 3.1. SEDM Jurisdictions Database, Litigation Tool #09.003
<http://sedm.org/Litigation/LitIndex.htm>
  - 3.2. SEDM Jurisdictions Database Online, Litigation Tool #09.004
<http://sedm.org/Litigation/LitIndex.htm>

We allege that if the above rules are violated then the following consequences are inevitable:

1. A crime has been committed. That crime is identity theft against a nonresident party and it involves using a person's legal identity as a "person" for the commercial benefit of someone else without their express consent. Identity theft is a crime in every jurisdiction within the USA. The SEDM Jurisdictions Database, Litigation Tool #09.003 indicated above lists identity theft statutes for every jurisdiction in the USA.
2. If the entity disregarding the above rules claims to be a "government" then it is acting instead as a private corporation and must waive sovereign immunity and approach the other party to the dispute in EQUITY rather than law, and do so in OTHER than a franchise court. Franchise courts include U.S. District Court, U.S. Circuit Court, Tax Court, Traffic Court, and Family Court. Equity is impossible in a franchise court.

See also Clearfield Trust Co. v. United States, 318 U.S. 363, 369 (1943) ("The United States does business on business terms") (quoting United States v. National Exchange Bank of Baltimore, 270 U.S. 527, 534 (1926)); Perry v. United States, supra at 352 (1935) ("When the United States, with constitutional authority, makes contracts [or franchises], it has rights and incurs responsibilities similar to those of individuals who are parties to such instruments. There is no difference . . . except that the United States cannot be sued without its consent") (citation omitted); United States v. Bostwick, 94 U.S. 53, 66 (1877) ("The United States, when they contract with their citizens, are controlled by the same laws that govern the citizen in that behalf"); Cooke v. United States, 91 U.S. 389, 398 (1875) (explaining that when the United States "comes down from its position of sovereignty, and enters the domain of commerce, it submits itself to the same laws that govern individuals there").

See Jones, 1 Cl.Ct. at 85 ("Wherever the public and private acts of the government seem to commingle, a citizen or corporate body must by supposition be substituted in its place, and then the question be determined whether the action will lie against the supposed defendant"); O'Neill v. United States, 231 Ct.Cl. 823, 826 (1982) (sovereign acts doctrine applies where, "[w]here [the] contracts exclusively between private parties, the party hurt by such governing action could not claim compensation from the other party for the governing action"). The dissent ignores these statements (including the statement from Jones, from which case Horowitz drew its reasoning literally verbatim), when it says, post at 931, that the sovereign acts cases do not emphasize the need to treat the government-as-contractor the same as a private party.
[United States v. Winstar Corp., 518 U.S. 839 (1996)]

Lastly, those who have not chosen a domicile within a specific jurisdiction and therefore chosen NOT to become the following in relation to ONLY that jurisdiction:

1. Among those "governed" by the civil laws.
2. Statutory "citizens" or "residents".
3. A "member" of the body politic if they are statutory "citizens". We call the "body politic" by the affectionate term "the club".

. . .are called "exclusively private". Such parties have been acknowledged by the U.S. Supreme Court to beyond the civil control of the government. Notice they only recognize the right to "regulate" activity of "citizens" and NOT "ALL PERSONS":

*When one becomes a member of society, he necessarily parts with some rights or privileges which, as an individual not affected by his relations to others, he might retain. "A body politic," as aptly defined in the preamble of the Constitution of Massachusetts, "is a social compact by which the whole people covenants with each citizen, and each citizen with the whole people, that all shall be governed by certain laws for the common good." This does not confer power upon the whole people to control rights which are purely and exclusively private, Thorpe v. R. & B. Railroad Co., 27 Vt. 143; but it does authorize the establishment of laws requiring each citizen to so conduct himself, and so use his own property, as not unnecessarily to injure another. This is the very essence of government, and 125*125 has found expression in the maxim sic utere tuo ut alienum non laedas. From this source come the police powers, which, as was said by Mr. Chief Justice Taney in the License Cases, 5 How. 583, "are nothing more or less than the powers of government inherent in every sovereignty, . . . that is to say, . . . the power to govern men and things." Under these powers the government regulates the conduct of its citizens one towards another, and the manner in which each shall use his own property, when such regulation becomes necessary for the public good. In their exercise it has been customary in England from time immemorial, and in this country from its first colonization, to regulate ferries, common carriers, hackmen, bakers, millers, wharfingers, innkeepers, &c., and in so doing to fix a maximum of charge to be made for services rendered, accommodations furnished, and articles sold. To this day, statutes are to be found in many of the States upon some or all these subjects; and we think it has never yet been successfully contended that such legislation came within any of the constitutional prohibitions against interference with private property. With the Fifth Amendment in force, Congress, in 1820, conferred power upon the city of Washington "to regulate . . . the rates of wharfage at private wharves, . . . the sweeping of chimneys, and to fix the rates of fees therefor, . . . and the weight and quality of bread," 3 Stat. 587, sect. 7; and, in 1848, "to make all necessary regulations respecting hackney carriages and the rates of fare of the same, and the rates of hauling by cartmen, wagoners, carmen, and draymen, and the rates of commission of auctioneers," 9 id. 224, sect. 2.

5.4.8.7 The Social Contract/Compact

The end of the previous section referred to what the U.S. Supreme Court called "the social compact". What most judges won't tell you about the above requirement for establishing jurisdiction is that the "social compact" is one means of satisfying the need for a "contract" in order to establish civil jurisdiction over you. In law, the words "compact" and "contract" are equivalent:

"Compact, n. An agreement or contract between persons, nations, or states. Commonly applied to working agreements between and among states concerning matters of mutual concern. A contract between parties, which creates obligations and rights capable of being enforced and contemplated as such between the parties,

1 in their distinct and independent characters. A mutual consent of parties concerned respecting some property
 2 or right that is the object of the stipulation, or something that is to be done or forborne. See also Compact
 3 clause; Confederacy; Interstate compact; Treaty."
 4 [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 281]

5 All civil societies are based on "compact" and therefore "contract". Here is how the U.S. Supreme Court describes this 6 compact and therefore contract.

7 "Yet, it is to be remembered, and that whether in its real origin, or in its artificial state, allegiance, as well as
 8 fealty, rests upon lands, and it is due to persons. Not so, with respect to Citizenship, which has arisen from the
 9 dissolution of the feudal system and is a substitute for allegiance, corresponding with the new order of things.
 10 Allegiance and citizenship, differ, indeed, in almost every characteristic. Citizenship is the effect of compact
 11 [CONTRACT!]; allegiance is the offspring of power and necessity. Citizenship is a political tie; allegiance is 12 a territorial tenure. Citizenship is the charter of equality; allegiance is a badge of inferiority. Citizenship is 13 constitutional; allegiance is personal. Citizenship is freedom; allegiance is servitude. Citizenship is 14 communicable; allegiance is repulsive. Citizenship may be relinquished; allegiance is perpetual. With such
 15 essential differences, the doctrine of allegiance is inapplicable to a system of citizenship; which it can neither
 16 serve to controul, nor to elucidate. And yet, even among the nations, in which the law of allegiance is the most
 17 firmly established, the law most pertinaciously enforced, there are striking deviations that demonstrate the
 18 invincible power of truth, and the homage, which, under every modification of government, must be paid to the
 19 inherent rights of man....The doctrine is, that allegiance cannot be due to two sovereigns; and taking an oath
 20 of allegiance to a new, is the strongest evidence of withdrawing allegiance from a previous, sovereign...."

24 Note the sentence: "Citizenship is the effect of compact [CONTRACT!]". By calling yourself a "citizen", you:

- 25 1. Identify yourself as a consenting party to the social compact/contract.
- 26 2. Make yourself subject to the civil laws that implement the contract.
- 27 3. Consent to be governed by the sovereignty executing that social contract.

28 Even the author of the Law Of Nations, which is the document upon which the USA Constitution was based by the 29 founding fathers, acknowledged that all civilizations are based upon compact and contract, called this contract the "social
 30 compact", and said that when the government fails to be accountable for the protection sought, those being protected have a
 31 right to leave said society. Notice that the author, Vattel, refers to the parties to the social compact as "contracting parties".

32 The Law of Nations, Book I: Of Nations Considered in Themselves
 33 § 223. Cases in which a citizen has a right to quit his country.

34 There are cases in which a citizen has an absolute right to renounce his country, and abandon it entirely — a 35 right founded on reasons derived from the very nature of the social compact.

36 1. If the citizen cannot procure subsistence in his own country, it is undoubtedly lawful for him to seek it
 37 elsewhere. For, political or civil society being entered into only with a view of facilitating to each of its
 38 members the means of supporting himself, and of living in happiness and safety, it would be absurd to pretend
 39 that a member, whom it cannot furnish with such things as are most necessary, has not a right to leave it.

40 2. If the body of the society, or he who represents it, absolutely fail to discharge their obligations [of 41 protection] towards a citizen, the latter may withdraw himself. For, if one of the contracting parties does not 42 observe his engagements, the other is no longer bound to fulfil his; as the contract is reciprocal between the 43 society and its members. It is on the same principle, also, that the society may expel a member who violates its 44 laws.

45 3. If the major part of the nation, or the sovereign who represents it, attempt to enact laws relative to matters
 46 in which the social compact cannot oblige every citizen to submission, those who are averse to these laws
 47 have a right to quit the society, and go settle elsewhere. For instance, if the sovereign, or the greater part of 48 the nation, will allow but one religion in the state, those who believe and profess another religion have a right
 49 to withdraw, and take with them their families and effects. For, they cannot be supposed to have subjected
 50 themselves to the authority of men, in affairs of conscience;<sup>3</sup> and if the society suffers and is weakened by their 51 departure, the blame must be imputed to the intolerant party; for it is they who fail in their observance of the 52 social compact — it is they who violate it, and force the others to a separation. We have elsewhere touched
 53 upon some other instances of this third case, — that of a popular state wishing to have a sovereign (§ 33), and 54 that of an independent nation taking the resolution to submit to a foreign power (§ 195).

Item #2 above, in which a government fails to discharge its obligation of "protection", includes any one or more of the following:

1. Government refuses to protect you from GOVERNMENT abuses or violations of your rights.
2. Government refuses to recognize or protect EXCLUSIVELY PRIVATE rights.
  - 2.1. Confuses NATURAL "rights" with statutory franchise "privileges" by calling them BOTH "rights".
  - 2.2. Interferes with common law protections for private rights and compels ONLY statutory remedies. Hence, they compel all those who are injured to become public officers in the government and surrender all their private rights and private property, because statutory remedies only apply to public officers in the government and not private humans. See:

Why Statutory Civil Law is Law for Government and Not Private Persons, Form #05.037
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

- 2.3. Makes a business or profitable franchise out of alienating PRIVATE rights that are supposed to be inalienable according to the Declaration of Independence. This is most often done through either offering or enforcing public franchises anywhere, and especially within states of the Union. Franchises, by definition, convert PRIVATE rights into PUBLIC rights, usually WITHOUT the consent of the owner. This causes government to do the OPPOSITE for which it was established, which is the protection of ONLY PRIVATE rights.
- 2.4. Makes a crime out of exercising PRIVATE or CONSTITUTIONAL rights. For instance, they make it a crime to operate a conveyance WITHOUT PERMISSION from the government in the form of a license. The license in turn is then used to ILLEGALLY make you into a public officer called a "driver" without your consent and often without your knowledge.
3. Government enforces unequal authority or rights to itself that they refuse to recognize that you also have.
  - 3.1. Absolute equality is the foundation of ALL of your freedom, as held by the U.S. Supreme Court. Gulf, C. & S.F.R. Co. v. Ellis, 165 U.S. 150 (1897).
  - 3.2. Inequality under the law violates the constitutional requirement for equal protection and equal treatment.
  - 3.3. Inequality causes government to become a civil religion in which you are the worshipper, and they are the god with superior or supernatural powers.
  - 3.4. The main method of introducing inequality is offering or enforcing franchises within a constitutional state, which is prohibited by the U.S. Supreme Court. License Tax Cases, 72 U.S. 462, 18 L.Ed. 497, 5 Wall. 462, 2 A.F.T.R. 2224 (1866).
  - 3.5. They will undermine equality by refusing to enforce your equal right to sovereign immunity or their burden of proving that you consensually waived it. In a government of delegated powers, they can have no more rights than you have and if they violate this concept, they are creating a religion in which taxes are tithes.
4. Government lies with impunity about anything, and especially about what the law requires or about their responsibilities under the law.
5. Government refuses to be responsible for the injuries they cause you or abuse sovereign immunity to protect themselves from culpability for said injuries.
6. Government refuses to allow you to stop subsidizing it or stop being a "customer" of its protection called a "citizen" or "resident", and hence indirectly interferes with the ONLY method of peacefully procuring relief from their usurpations. This leaves no option OTHER than violence, and hence anarchy. Hence, they promote violence and anarchy with such policies.

"If money is wanted by Rulers who have in any manner oppressed the People, [the People] may retain [their money] until their grievances are redressed, and thus peaceably procure relief, without trusting to despised petitions or disturbing the public tranquility."
[Journals of the Continental Congress, Wednesday, October 26, 1774]

7. Government refuses to allow you to abandon any and all civil statuses or franchises to which public rights attach. This includes:
  - 7.1. Hides statuses on government forms that would allow you to NOT be a customer for the specific service they are offering.
  - 7.2. Hides forms or not offering forms to quit.
  - 7.3. Says you can't quit.
  - 7.4. Presumes that any or all people have the civil status that allows them to regulate and control you, and that you can acquire said status WITHOUT your express consent in some form.
  - 7.5. Calls participation "voluntary" and yet hypocritically refuses to protect your right to NOT volunteer.
8. Government kidnaps your civil legal identity and transports it to a legislatively foreign jurisdiction by enforcing legislatively foreign law upon you. They do this by:

- 1 8.1. Quotes or enforces foreign law not from your domicile against you.
- 2 8.2. Violates Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 17(b).
- 3 8.3. Uses irrelevant law or case law from a foreign jurisdiction as the equivalent of “political propaganda” designed to
- 4 mislead people into obedience to it.
- 5 8.4. Violates or misrepresents choice of law rules.
- 6 9. Government PRESUMES that any or all of the above are a “benefit” and then forces you to pay for it in the form of
- 7 “taxes”, even though YOU identify it as an INJURY and NOT a “benefit”. All such “presumptions” are a violation of
- 8 due process of law.

10 He who receives the benefit should also bear the disadvantage.”

16 The terms of the “social compact” at the heart of every civilized society are exhaustively described in the following classic
17 book by Rousseau written just before the U.S. Constitution was written:

The Social Contract or Principles of Political Right, Jean Jacques Rousseau, 1762

HTML: <http://famguardian.org/Publications/TheSocialContract-Rousseau/Rousseau%20Social%20Contract.htm>

PDF: http://famguardian.org/Publications/TheSocialContract-Rousseau/The\_social\_contract.pdf

18 Rousseau is also widely regarded as the father of socialism. In chapter 8 of the above book he even describes all
19 governments as what he calls a “civil religion”. Here is the way Rousseau describes the “social compact” that forms the 20 foundation of all societies:

21 There is but one law which, from its nature, needs unanimous consent. This is the social compact; for civil
22 association is the most voluntary of all acts. Every man being born free and his own master, no one, under any
23 pretext whatsoever, can make any man subject without his consent. To decide that the son of a slave is born a 24 slave is to decide that he is not born a man.

25 If then there are opponents when the social compact is made, their opposition does not invalidate the 26 contract, but merely prevents them from being included in it. They are foreigners among citizens. When the 27 State is instituted, residence constitutes consent; to dwell within its territory is to submit to the Sovereign.<sup>64</sup>

28 Apart from this primitive contract, the vote of the majority always binds all the rest. This follows from the 29 contract itself. But it is asked how a man can be both free and forced to conform to wills that are not his own.
30 How are the opponents at once free and subject to laws they have not agreed to?

31 *I retort that the question is wrongly put. The citizen gives his consent to all the laws, including those which 32 are passed in spite of his opposition, and even those which punish him when he dares to break any of them.
33 The constant will of all the members of the State is the general will; by virtue of it they are citizens and free<sup>65</sup>.
34 When in the popular assembly a law is proposed, what the people is asked is not exactly whether it approves or 35 rejects the proposal, but whether it is in conformity with the general will, which is their will. Each man, in 36 giving his vote, states his opinion on that point; and the general will is found by counting votes. When therefore 37 the opinion that is contrary to my own prevails, this proves neither more nor less than that I was mistaken, and 38 that what I thought to be the general will was not so. If my particular opinion had carried the day I should have
39 achieved the opposite of what was my will; and it is in that case that I should not have been free.

40 This presupposes, indeed, that all the qualities of the general will still reside in the majority: when they cease
41 to do so, whatever side a man may take, liberty is no longer possible.

42 In my earlier demonstration of how particular wills are substituted for the general will in public deliberation, I
43 have adequately pointed out the practicable methods of avoiding this abuse; and I shall have more to say of 44 them later on. I have also given the principles for determining the proportional number of votes for declaring

<sup>64</sup> This should of course be understood as applying to a free State; for elsewhere family, goods, lack of a refuge, necessity, or violence may detain a man in a country against his will; and then his dwelling there no longer by itself implies his consent to the contract or to its violation.

1 that will. A difference of one vote destroys equality; a single opponent destroys unanimity; but between equality
2 and unanimity, there are several grades of unequal division, at each of which this proportion may be fixed in 3 accordance with the condition and the needs of the body politic.

4 There are two general rules that may serve to regulate this relation. First, the more grave and important the
5 questions discussed, the nearer should the opinion that is to prevail approach unanimity. Secondly, the more the 6 matter in hand calls for speed, the smaller the prescribed difference in the numbers of votes may be allowed to 7 become: where an instant decision has to be reached, a majority of one vote should be enough. The first of these
8 two rules seems more in harmony with the laws, and the second with practical affairs. In any case, it is the 9 combination of them that gives the best proportions for determining the majority necessary.
10 [The Social Contract or Principles of Political Right, Jean Jacques Rousseau, 1762, Book IV, Chapter 2]

11 Note how Rousseau describes those who are not party to the social contract as “foreigners”:

12 “If then there are opponents when the social compact is made, their opposition does not invalidate the contract,
13 but merely prevents them from being included in it. They are foreigners among citizens. When the State is 14 instituted, residence constitutes consent; to dwell within its territory is to submit to the Sovereign.”

15 We also clarify the following about Rousseau’s comments above:

- 16 1. Those who are parties to the social compact are called “citizens” if they were born in the country and “residents” if 17 they were born in a foreign country, who together are called “inhabitants” or “domiciliaries”.
- 18 2. The “foreigner” he is talking about is either a statutory “alien” (foreign national) and a “nonresident” or a “non-resident 19 non-person” in the case of a state domiciled state national.
- 20 3. When Rousseau says “Apart from this primitive contract, the vote of the majority always binds all the rest.”, 21 what he means by “the rest” is “the rest of the inhabitants, citizens, or residents”, but NOT “nonresidents” or “transient
22 foreigners”. This is implied by his other statement: “If then there are opponents when the social compact is made,
23 their opposition does not invalidate the contract, but merely prevents them from being included in it. They are 24 foreigners among citizens.”
- 25 4. Rousseau says that: “When the State is instituted, residence constitutes consent; to dwell within its territory is to 26 submit to the Sovereign.” Here are some key points about this statement:
  - 27 4.1. What he means by “residence” is a political and voluntary act of association and consent, and NOT physical 28 presence in a specific place.
  - 29 4.2. Those who have made this choice of “residence” and thereby politically associated with and joined with a specific 30 political “state” acquire the status under the social contract called “resident” or “citizens”. Those who have not 31 associated are called “transient foreigners”, “strangers”, or “in transitu”.
  - 32 4.3. The choice of “residence” is protected by the First Amendment right of association and freedom from compelled 33 association.
- 34 5. All rights under the social contract attach to the statuses under the contract called “citizen”, “resident”, “inhabitant”, or 35 “domiciliary”. In that sense, the contract behaves as a franchise or what we call a “protection franchise”. You are not 36 protected by the franchise unless you procure a status under the franchise called “citizen” or “resident”.
- 37 6. In a legal sense, to say that one is “in the state” or “dwelling in the state” really means that a person has consented to 38 the social contract and thereby become a “government contractor”. Your corrupt politicians have written this social
39 contract in such a way that consenting to it makes you a public officer within the government, even though such a 40 corruption of the de jure system is clearly beyond its legislative intent. See:

De Facto Government Scam, Form #05.043

<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

- 41 7. It is a violation of due process of law, theft, slavery, and even identity theft to:
  - 42 7.1. PRESUME that by virtue of physically occupying a specific place, that a person has consented to take up 43 “residence” there and thereby consented to the social contract and the civil laws that implement it.
  - 44 7.2. Interfere with one’s choice of political association and consent to the social compact by refusing to accept any 45 piece of paper that declares one a “nonresident”.
  - 46 7.3. Impose the status of “citizen” or “resident” against those who do not consent to the social contract.
  - 47 7.4. Enforce any provision of the social contract against a non-consenting party.
  - 48 7.5. Connect the status of “citizen” or “resident” with a public office in the government or use that unlawfully created
49 office as method to impose any duty upon said party. Why? Because the Thirteenth Amendment forbids
50 “involuntary servitude”.

If you are injured and take the party who injured you into a civil court, the judge, in fact, is really acting as a trustee of the social contract/compact in enforcing that contract between you and the other party. All governments in the USA, in fact, are “trustees”:

"Whatever these Constitutions and laws validly determine to be property, it is the duty of the Federal Government, through the domain of jurisdiction merely Federal, to recognize to be property.

"And this principle follows from the structure of the respective Governments, State and Federal, and their reciprocal relations. They are different agents and trustees of the people of the several States, appointed with different powers and with distinct purposes, but whose acts, within the scope of their respective jurisdictions, are mutually obligatory."

[Dred Scott v. Sandford, 60 U.S. 393 (1856)]

Both parties to the lawsuit must be parties to the social contract and therefore “citizens” or “residents” within the jurisdiction you are civilly suing. If the defendant you are suing is NOT party to the social contract, they are called a “nonresident” who is therefore protected from being civilly sued by:

1. The “Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act”, codified at 28 U.S.C. Part IV, Chapter 97 starting at section 1602.
2. The “Minimum Contacts Doctrine” elucidated by the U.S. Supreme Court in International Shoe Co. v. Washington, 326 U.S. 310 (1945). This doctrine states that it is a violation of due process to bring a nonresident into a foreign court to be sued unless certain well defined standards are met. Here is how the federal courts describe this doctrine:

In International Shoe Co. v. Washington, 326 U.S. 310 (1945), the Supreme Court held that a court may exercise personal jurisdiction over a defendant consistent with due process only if he or she has "certain minimum contacts" with the relevant forum "such that the maintenance of the suit does not offend 'traditional notions of fair play and substantial justice.' " Id. at 316 (quoting Milliken v. Meyer, 311 U.S. 457, 463 (1940)). Unless a defendant's contacts with a forum are so substantial, continuous, and systematic that the defendant can be deemed to be "present" in that forum for all purposes, a forum may exercise only "specific" jurisdiction - that is, jurisdiction based on the relationship between the defendant's forum contacts and the plaintiff's claim.

In this circuit, we analyze specific jurisdiction according to a three-prong test:

(1) The non-resident defendant must purposefully direct his activities or consummate some transaction with the forum or resident thereof; or perform some act by which he purposefully avails himself of the privilege of conducting activities in the forum, thereby invoking the benefits and protections of its laws;

(2) the claim must be one which arises out of or relates to the defendant's forum-related activities; and

(3) the exercise of jurisdiction must comport with fair play and substantial justice, i.e. it must be reasonable.

Schwarzenegger v. Fred Martin Motor Co., 374 F.3d. 797, 802 (9th Cir. 2004) (quoting Lake v. Lake, 817 F.2d. 1416, 1421 (9th Cir. 1987)). The first prong is determinative in this case. We have sometimes referred to it, in shorthand fashion, as the "purposeful availment" prong. Schwarzenegger, 374 F.3d. at 802. Despite its label, this prong includes both purposeful availment and purposeful direction. It may be satisfied by purposeful availment of the privilege of doing business in the forum; by purposeful direction of activities at the forum; or by some combination thereof.

[Yahoo! Inc. v. La Ligue Contre Le Racisme Et L'Antisemitisme, 433 F.3d. 1199 (9th Cir. 01/12/2006)]

Why does all this matter? Because what if you are a nonresident and the U.S. government wants to sue you for a tax liability? They can't take a nonresident (in relation to federal territory) and a “nontaxpayer” into a Federal District Court and must instead sue you in a state court under the above requirements. Even their own Internal Revenue Manual says so:

*Internal Revenue Manual
9.13.1.5 (09-17-2002)
Witnesses In Foreign Countries*

1. Nonresident aliens physically present in a foreign country cannot be compelled to appear as witnesses in a United States District Court since they are beyond jurisdiction of United States officials. Since the Constitution requires confrontation of adverse witnesses in criminal prosecutions, the testimony of such aliens may not be admissible until the witness appears at trial. However, certain testimony for the admissibility of documents may be obtained under 18 USC §3491 et seq. without a "personnel" appearance in the United States. Additionally, 28 USC §1783 et seq. provides limited powers to induce the appearance of United States citizens physically present in a foreign country.

The other great thing about being a nonresident, is that the statute of limitations under civil law DO NOT apply to you and do not limit your rights or the protection of those rights.

1. If you invoke the common law rather than statutory law, you have an unlimited amount of time to sue a federal actor for a tort. All such statutes of limitations are franchises to which BOTH parties to the suit must be contractors under the social contract/compact in order to enforce.
2. If only one party is a "citizen" or a "resident" protected by the social contract, and the other party is protected by the Constitution but not the civil law implementing the social contract, then the Constitution trumps the civil law and becomes self-executing. Remedies which are "self-executing" need no statute as a basis to sue and cannot be LIMITED by statute.

The design of the Fourteenth Amendment has proved significant also in maintaining the traditional separation of powers 524*524 between Congress and the Judiciary. The first eight Amendments to the Constitution set forth self-executing prohibitions on governmental action, and this Court has had primary authority to interpret those prohibitions. The Bingham draft, some thought, departed from that tradition by vesting in Congress primary power to interpret and elaborate on the meaning of the new Amendment through legislation. Under it, "Congress, and not the courts, was to judge whether or not any of the privileges or immunities were not secured to citizens in the several States." Flack, supra, at 64. While this separation-of-powers aspect did not occasion the widespread resistance which was caused by the proposal's threat to the federal balance, it nonetheless attracted the attention of various Members. See Cong. Globe, 39th Cong., 1st Sess., at 1064 (statement of Rep. Hale) (noting that Bill of Rights, unlike the Bingham proposal, "provide[s] safeguards to be enforced by the courts, and not to be exercised by the Legislature"); id., at App. 133 (statement of Rep. Rogers) (prior to Bingham proposal it "was left entirely for the courts . . . to enforce the privileges and immunities of the citizens"). As enacted, the Fourteenth Amendment confers substantive rights against the States which, like the provisions of the Bill of Rights, are self-executing. Cf. South Carolina v. Katzenbach, 383 U. S., at 325 (discussing Fifteenth Amendment). The power to interpret the Constitution in a case or controversy remains in the Judiciary.

[City of Boerne v. Flores, 521 U.S. 507 (1997)]

Why do we say these things? Because what you think of as civil law, in most cases, is really only a private law franchise for government officers and statutory "employees", as exhaustively proven in the following document:

Why Statutory Civil Law is Law for Government and Not Private Persons, Form #05.037
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

Under the concepts in the above document, a "statute of limitations" is an example of an "privilege and immunity" afforded to ONLY government officers and statutory "employees" when the OTHER party they injure is also a government officer or employee in some capacity. If the injured party is not party to the social compact and franchise but is protected by the Constitution, then the statutes of limitations cannot be invoked under the franchise.

In the United States (the country), there are, in fact TWO "social contracts" or "social compacts", and each protects a different subset of the overall population.

"It is clear that Congress, as a legislative body, exercise two species of legislative power: the one, limited as to its objects, but extending all over the Union: the other, an absolute, exclusive legislative power over the District of Columbia. The preliminary inquiry in the case now before the Court, is, by virtue of which of these authorities was the law in question passed?"
[Cohens v. Virginia, 19 U.S. 264, 6 Wheat. 265, 5 L.Ed. 257 (1821)]

You can only be a party to ONE of these two social contracts/compacts at a time, because you can only have a domicile in ONE jurisdiction at a time. These two jurisdictions that Congress legislates for are:

1. The states of the Union under the requirements of the Constitution of the United States. In this capacity, it is called the "federal/general government".

2. The U.S. government, the District of Columbia, U.S. possessions and territories, and enclaves within the states. In this capacity, it is called the “national government”. The authority for this jurisdiction derives from Article 1, Section 8, Clause 17 of the United States Constitution. All laws passed essentially amount to municipal laws for federal property, and in that capacity, Congress is not restrained by either the Constitution or the Bill of Rights. We call the collection of all federal territories, possessions, and enclaves within the states “the federal zone” throughout this document.

The “separation of powers doctrine” is what created these two separate and distinct social compacts and jurisdictions. Each has its own courts, unique types of “citizens”, and laws. That doctrine is described in:

Government Conspiracy to Destroy the Separation of Powers, Form #05.023
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

The U.S. Supreme Court has identified the maintenance of separation between these two distinct jurisdictions as THE MOST IMPORTANT FUNCTION OF ANY COURT. Are the courts satisfying their most important function, or have they bowed to political expediency by abusing deception and words of art to entrap and enslave you in what amounts to a criminal conspiracy against your constitutional rights? Have the courts become what amounts to a modern day Judas, who sold the truth for the twenty pieces of silver they could STEAL from you through illegal tax enforcement by abusing word games?

“The idea prevails with some, indeed it has found expression in arguments at the bar, that we have in this country substantially two national governments; one to be maintained under the Constitution, with all of its restrictions; the other to be maintained by Congress outside the independently of that instrument, by exercising such powers [of absolutism] as other nations of the earth are accustomed to.. I take leave to say that, if the principles thus announced should ever receive the sanction of a majority of this court, a radical and mischievous [SATANIC] change in our system of government will result. We will, in that event, pass from the era of constitutional liberty guarded and protected by a written constitution into an era of legislative absolutism.. It will be an evil [SATANIC] day for American liberty if the theory of a government outside the supreme law of the land finds lodgment in our constitutional jurisprudence. No higher duty rests upon this court than to exert its full authority to prevent all violation of the principles of the Constitution.”
 [Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 (1901)]

WHICH of the two social compacts are you party to? Your choice of domicile determines that. It CAN'T legally be both because you can only have a domicile in ONE place at a time. Furthermore, if you have been deceived by corrupt politicians and “words of art” into becoming a party to BOTH social compacts, you are serving TWO masters, which is forbidden by the Holy Bible:

“No one can serve two masters [two employers, for instance]; for either he will hate the one and love the other, or else he will be loyal to the one and despise the other. You cannot serve God and mammon [government].”

We might also add that franchises and the right to contract that they are based upon cannot lawfully be used to destroy the separation between these two distinct jurisdictions. Preserving that separation is, in fact, the heart and soul of the United States Constitution. That is why the U.S. Supreme Court held the following:

“Thus, Congress having power to regulate commerce with foreign nations, and among the several States, and with the Indian tribes, may, without doubt, provide for granting coasting licenses, licenses to pilots, licenses to trade with the Indians, and any other licenses necessary or proper for the exercise of that great and extensive power; and the same observation is applicable to every other power of Congress, to the exercise of which the granting of licenses may be incident. All such licenses confer authority, and give rights to the licensee.

But very different considerations apply to the internal commerce or domestic trade of the States. Over this commerce and trade Congress has no power of regulation nor any direct control. This power belongs exclusively to the States. No interference by Congress with the business of citizens transacted within a State is warranted by the Constitution, except such as is strictly incidental to the exercise of powers clearly granted to the legislature. The power to authorize [e.g. LICENSE as part of a franchise] a business within a State is plainly repugnant to the exclusive power of the State over the same subject. It is true that the power of Congress to tax is a very extensive power. It is given in the Constitution, with only one exception and only two qualifications. Congress cannot tax exports, and it must impose direct taxes by the rule of apportionment, and indirect taxes by the rule of uniformity. Thus limited, and thus only, it reaches every subject, and may be exercised at discretion. But, it reaches only existing subjects. Congress cannot authorize [e.g. LICENSE] a trade or business within a State in order to tax it.”
 [License Tax Cases, 72 U.S. 462, 18 L.Ed. 497, 5 Wall. 462, 2 A.F.T.R. 2224 (1866)]

1 Notice the language "Congress cannot authorize [e.g. LICENSE] a trade or business within a State in order to tax it."
 2 All licensed activities are, in fact, franchises and excise taxes are what implement them and pay for them. The income tax
 3 itself, in fact, is such a franchise. See the following for exhaustive proof:

The "Trade or Business" Scam, Form #05.001
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

4 On the subject of whether Christians can be party to or consent to what the courts call "the social compact" and contract,
 5 God Himself says the following:

6 "You shall make no covenant [contract or franchise] with them [foreigners, pagans], nor with their [pagan
 7 government] gods [laws or judges]. They shall not dwell in your land [and you shall not dwell in theirs by
 8 becoming a "resident" or domiciliary in the process of contracting with them], lest they make you sin against
 9 Me [God]. For if you serve their [government] gods [under contract or agreement or franchise], it will surely
 10 be a snare to you."

11 [Exodus 23:32-33, Bible, NKJV]

12 Why did God warn Christians in this way? Because Rev. 19:19 identifies political rulers as "The Beast", and contracting
 13 with them MAKES you an officer of and one of them. And as their officer or public officer participating in their 14 franchises, you can't avoid "serving them", and hence, violating the First Commandment NOT to serve other pagan gods,
 15 among which are included civil rulers or governments.

16 Now let's discuss how the courts treat the issue of the social compact to confirm what we have said in this section. The 17 first federal corporation established outside of federal territory was the original Bank of the United States commissioned by 18 Congress. That bank invaded the state of Ohio and began operating there. The state sought to penalize and tax it out of 19 existence and the bank refused to pay the state penalties and taxes. When the state seized assets of the bank for 20 nonpayment of taxes, the case went before the U.S. Supreme Court. The court held that the bank:

- 21 1. Was a federal but not state corporation and therefore NOT a constitutional "person" or "citizen" under the judiciary
- 22 clauses of the Constitution.
- 23 2. Was an office within the national government.
- 24 3. Was exempt from state taxes and penalties.

25 The case also held that the ONLY way that federal law can be enforced within a state of the Union was if EITHER a public
 26 office was involved (which is federal government property), OR if the bank had a contract with the government (which is 27 ALSO federal government property).

28 "All the powers of the government [including ALL of its civil enforcement powers against the public] must be
 29 carried into operation by individual agency, either through the medium of public officers, or contracts made 30 with [private] individuals."

31 [Osborn v. Bank of U.S., 22 U.S. 738 (1824)]

32 The above holding brings up some crucial points about civil jurisdiction in courts of justice:

- 33 1. The government can only regulate and control its own agents.
- 34 2. Contracts with the government create agency on behalf of the government.
- 35 3. Public offices are also evidence of agency on behalf of the government.
- 36 4. If you are not a public officer and have no contracts with the government, they can't civilly regulate or control you 37 because you are PRIVATE and they have no jurisdiction over EXCLUSIVELY private conduct.
- 38 5. If a government takes you into civil court seeking to enforce an obligation they claim you have to the government, then 39 they as the moving party MUST satisfy the burden of proving ONE of the following two things in order to establish 40 their jurisdiction:
- 41 5.1. That you are lawfully occupying a public office OR...
- 42 5.2. You have a contract with them and therefore are acting as their agent.

43 5.4.8.8 "Domicile"= "allegiance" and "protection"

44 The U.S. Supreme Court describes the relationship of domicile to taxation as follows:

1 "Thus, the Court has frequently held that domicile or residence, more substantial than mere presence in
 2 transit or sojourn, is an adequate basis for taxation, including income, property, and death taxes. Since the
 3 Fourteenth Amendment makes one a citizen of the state wherein he resides, the fact of residence creates
 4 universally reciprocal duties of protection by the state and of allegiance and support by the citizen. The latter
 5 obviously includes a duty to pay taxes, and their nature and measure is largely a political matter. Of course,
 6 the situs of property may tax it regardless of the citizenship, domicile, or residence of the owner, the most 7 obvious illustration being a tax on realty laid by the state in which the realty is located."
 8 [Miller Brothers Co. v. Maryland, 347 U.S. 340 (1954)]

9 The first thing to notice about the above ruling is that the essence of being a "citizen" is one's domicile, not just their place
 10 of birth or naturalization. "Domicile" establishes your LEGAL status within a municipal government while "nationality"
 11 (being a "national") establishes your POLITICAL status and association with a specific nation under the law of nations.

12 "Nationality. That quality or character which arises from the fact of a person's belonging to a nation or state.
 13 Nationality determines the political status of the individual, especially with reference to allegiance; while 14 domicile determines his civil status. Nationality arises either by birth or by naturalization. See also 15 Naturalization."
 16 [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1025]

17 The U.S. Supreme Court admitted that an alien with a domicile in a place is treated as a native or naturalized "citizen" in 18 nearly every respect. We call this type of "citizen" simply a "domiciled citizen" to distinguish it from anything resembling
 19 nationality. Note that they use the phrase "This right to protect persons having a domicile", meaning they DON'T have a 20 right to protect people who choose NOT to have a domicile and therefore are UNABLE to render protection because they 21 can ONLY "govern" people who consent to be governed by choosing a domicile within their protection.

22 "This right to protect persons having a domicile, though not native-born or naturalized citizens, rests on the
 23 firm foundation of justice, and the claim to be protected is earned by considerations which the protecting
 24 power is not at liberty to disregard. Such domiciled citizen pays the same price for his protection as native-
 25 born or naturalized citizens pay for theirs. He is under the bonds of allegiance to the country of his 26 residence, and, if he breaks them, incurs the same penalties. He owes the same obedience to the civil laws.
 27 His property is, in the same way and to the same extent as theirs, liable to contribute to the support of the 28 Government. In nearly all respects, his and their condition as to the duties and burdens of Government are 29 undistinguishable."
 30 [Fong Yue Ting v. United States, 149 U.S. 698 (1893)]

31 Note also the key role of the word "intention" within the meaning of domicile. A person can have many "abodes", which 32 are the place they temporarily "inhabit", but only one legal "domicile". You cannot have a legal "domicile" in a place
 33 without also having an intention (also called "consent") to live there "permanently", which implies allegiance to the people
 34 and the laws of that place.

35 "Allegiance and protection [by the government from harm] are, in this connection, reciprocal obligations.
 36 The one is a compensation for the other; allegiance for protection and protection for allegiance."
 37 [Minor v. Happersett, 88 U.S. (21 Wall.) 162, 166-168 (1874)]

38 What the U.S. supreme Court essentially is describing above is a contract to procure the civil protection of a specific 39 government, and it is giving that contract a name called "domicile". What makes the contract binding is the fact that each
 40 party to the contract both gives and receives specific and measurable "consideration". You manifest your consent to the 41 contract by voluntarily calling yourself a "subject", "inhabitant", "citizen", or "resident", all of which have in common a
 42 domicile within the jurisdiction that those terms relate to. You give "allegiance" and the support (e.g. "taxes") that go with 43 that allegiance, and in return, the government has an implied legal duty to protect and serve you. All contracts require both 44 mutual consent and mutual consideration. Without both demonstrated elements, the contract is unenforceable. The 45 contract is therefore only enforceable if both parties incur reciprocal duties that are enforceable in court as "rights". Below
 46 is how the U.S. Supreme Court again describes this "protection contract":

47 The reason why States are "bodies politic and corporate" is simple: just as a corporation is an entity that can 48 act only through its agents, "[t]he State is a political corporate body, can act only through agents, and can 49 command only by laws." Poindexter v. Greenhow, supra, 114 U.S., at 288, 5 S.Ct. at 912-913. See also Black's
 50 Law Dictionary 159 (5th ed. 1979) ("[B]ody politic or corporate": "A social compact by which the whole
 51 people covenants with each citizen, and each citizen with the whole people, that all shall be governed by 52 certain laws for the common good"). As a "body politic and corporate," a State falls squarely within the 53 Dictionary Act's definition of a "person."
 54 [Will v. Michigan Dept. of State Police, 491 U.S. 58, 109 S.Ct. 2304 (U.S.Mich.,1989)]

1 Now let's look at the domicile "protection contract" or "protection franchise" a little closer. Does it meet all the requisite
 2 legal elements of a legally enforceable contract? In fact, after you declare your exclusive allegiance to the "state" by
 3 declaring a "domicile" within that state so that you can procure "protection", ironically, the courts continue to forcefully
 4 insist that your public SERVANTS STILL have NO LEGAL OBLIGATION to protect you! This is what Franklin Delano
 5 Roosevelt, the traitor, calls "The New Deal", and what we call "The RAW Deal". Below is the AMAZING truth right from 6 the horse's mouth, the courts, proving that police officers cannot be sued if they fail to come to your aid after you call them
 7 when you have a legitimate need for their protection:

Do You Have a Right to Police Protection?

<http://famguardian.org/Subjects/Crime/Articles/PoliceProtection.htm>

8 Consequently, the "protection contract" is unenforceable as a duty upon you because it imposes no reciprocal duty upon the
 9 government. On the one hand, the government throws people in jail for failing to pay for protection in the form of "taxes",
 10 while on the other hand, it refuses to prosecute police officers for failing to provide the protection that was paid for, even
 11 though their willful or negligent refusal to protect us could have far more injurious and immediate effects than simply
 12 failing to pay for protection. This is a violation of the equal protection of the laws. If it is a crime to not pay for protection,
 13 then it ought to equally be a crime to not provide it! Who would want to live in a country or be part of a "state" that would
 14 condone such hypocrisy? That is why we advocate "divorcing the state". It is precisely this type of hypocrisy that explains
 15 why prominent authorities will tell you that taxes are not "contractual": because the courts treat it like a contract and a
 16 criminal matter to not pay taxes for "taxpayers", but refuse to hold public servants equally liable for their half of the 17 bargain, which is protection:

"A tax is not regarded as a debt in the ordinary sense of that term, for the reason that a tax does not depend upon the consent of the taxpayer and there is no express or implied contract to pay taxes. Taxes are not contracts between party and party, either express or implied; but they are the positive acts of the government, through its various agents, binding upon the inhabitants, and to the making and enforcing of which their personal consent individually is not required."

[Cooley, Law of Taxation, Fourth Edition, pgs 88-89]

24 The above is a deception at best and a LIE at worst. A "taxpayer" is legally defined as a person liable, and it is true that for 25 such a person, taxes are not consensual and in no way "voluntary". HOWEVER, the choice about whether one wishes to 26 BECOME a "taxpayer" as legally defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(14) is based on domicile and the excise taxable activities
 27 one voluntarily engages in, both of which in fact ARE voluntary actions and choices. By their careful choice of words, they
 28 have misrepresented the truth so they could get into your pocket. What else would you expect of greedy LIARS, I mean
 29 "lawyers"? We would also like to take this opportunity to clarify for whom taxes are "voluntary" in order to further clarify
 30 the title of this section:

- 31 1. Income taxes under I.R.C., Subtitle A are not voluntary for "taxpayers".
- 32 2. Income taxes under I.R.C., Subtitle A are not voluntary for everyone, because some subset of everyone are "taxpayers".
- 33 3. Income taxes under I.R.C., Subtitle A are voluntary for those who are "nontaxpayers", who we define here as those 34 persons who are NOT the "taxpayer" defined in 26 U.S.C. §§7701(a)(14) and 1313.

"Revenue Laws relate to taxpayers [officers, employees, instrumentalities, and elected officials of the Federal Government] and not to non-taxpayers [American Citizens/American Nationals not subject to the exclusive jurisdiction of the Federal Government]. The latter are without their scope. No procedures are prescribed for non-taxpayers and no attempt is made to annul any of their Rights or Remedies in due course of law. With them [non-taxpayers] Congress does not assume to deal and they are neither of the subject nor of the object of federal revenue laws."

[Economy Plumbing & Heating v. U.S., 470 F.2d. 585 (1972)]

42 Some other points to consider about this "Raw Deal" scam:

- 43 1. You can't be a "citizen" or a "resident" without having a legally enforceable right to protection.
- 44 2. Since the government won't enforce the rendering of the ONLY consideration required to make you a "citizen" or a 45 "resident", then the protection contract is unenforceable and technically, you can't lawfully therefore call yourself a 46 "citizen".
- 47 3. Since you can't be a member of a "state" without being a "citizen", then technically, there is no de jure "state", no de 48 jure government that serves this "state", and no "United States". It's just "US", friends, cause there ain't no "U.S."!
- 49 4. The implication is that your government has legally abandoned you and you are an orphan, because they didn't
 50 complete their half of the protection contract bargain. Without a government, God is back in charge. The Bible says

1 He owns the earth anyway, which leaves us as “nonresidents” and “transient foreigners” in respect to any jurisdiction
 2 that claims to be a “government” because we know they’re lying.
 3 5. The Bible says of this “Raw Deal” the following: You've been HAD, folks!

4 For thus says the LORD: “ You have sold yourselves for nothing, And you shall be redeemed without money.”
 5 [Isaiah 52:3, Bible, NKJV]

6 The U.S. Supreme Court has also held that “allegiance” is completely incompatible with any system of “citizenship” in a
 7 republican form of government, and that it is “repulsive”. Consequently, we must conclude that allegiance to anything but 8 God is therefore to be avoided at all costs.

9 “Yet, it is to be remembered, and that whether in its real origin, or in its artificial state, allegiance, as well as
 10 fealty, rests upon lands, and it is due to persons. Not so, with respect to Citizenship, which has arisen from the
 11 dissolution of the feudal system and is a substitute for allegiance, corresponding with the new order of things.
 12 Allegiance and citizenship, differ, indeed, in almost every characteristic. Citizenship is the effect of compact

 17 essential differences, the doctrine of allegiance is inapplicable to a system of citizenship; which it can neither
 18 serve to controul, nor to elucidate. And yet, even among the nations, in which the law of allegiance is the most
 19 firmly established, the law most pertinaciously enforced, there are striking deviations that demonstrate the
 20 invincible power of truth, and the homage, which, under every modification of government, must be paid to the
 21 inherent rights of man.....The doctrine is, that allegiance cannot be due to two sovereigns; and taking an oath
 22 of allegiance to a new, is the strongest evidence of withdrawing allegiance from a previous, sovereign....”

26 Notice that they say that citizenship is the effect of “compact”, which is a type of contract. If “domicile” is the basis of 27 citizenship, and citizenship is the effect of “compact”, then “domicile” amounts to the equivalent of a “contract”. This 28 leads us right back to the conclusion that the voluntary choice of one’s “domicile” is a “contract”:

29 *“Compact, n. An agreement or contract between persons, nations, or states. Commonly applied to working
 30 agreements between and among states concerning matters of mutual concern. A contract between parties,
 31 which creates obligations and rights capable of being enforced and contemplated as such between the parties,
 32 in their distinct and independent characters. A mutual consent of parties concerned respecting some property
 33 or right that is the object of the stipulation, or something that is to be done or forborne. See also Compact
 34 clause; Confederacy; Interstate compact; Treaty.”*
 35 [Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 281]

36 The Bible is consistent with the Supreme Court above in its disdain for “allegiance”. It has a name for those expressing 37 “allegiance”: It is called an “oath”. When a person becomes a naturalized citizen of the United States, he must by law (see 38 8 U.S.C. §1448) take an “oath” of “allegiance” and be “sworn in”. When a person signs an income tax return, he must 39 swear a perjury oath. Jesus, on the other hand, commanded believers not to take “oaths” to anything but God, and 40 especially not to earthly Kings, and said that doing otherwise was essentially Satanic:

41 “Again you have heard that it was said to those of old, “You shall not swear falsely, but shall perform your 42 *oaths to the Lord.’ But I say to you, do not swear at all: neither by heaven, for it is God’s throne; nor by the
 43 earth, for it is His footstool; nor by Jerusalem, for it is the city of the great King. Nor shall you swear by your 44 head, because you cannot make one hair white or black. But let your “Yes” be “Yes,” and your “No,” “No.” For 45 whatever is more than these is from the evil one [Satan].”
 46 [Matt. 5:33-37, Bible, NKJV]

47 God also commanded us to take oaths ONLY in His name and no others:

48 “You shall fear the LORD your God and serve [only] Him, and shall take oaths in His name.”
 49 [Deut. 6:13, Bible, NKJV]

50 “If a man makes a vow to the LORD, or swears an oath to bind himself by some agreement, he shall not break 51 his word; he shall do according to all that proceeds out of his mouth.”
 52 [Numbers 30:2, Bible, NKJV]

1 Israel's first King, Saul, in fact, distressed the people because one of his first official acts was to try to put the people under
2 oath to him instead of God.

3 "And the men of Israel were distressed that day, for Saul had placed the people under oath"
4 [1 Sam. 14:24, Bible, NKJV]

5 God's response to the Israelites electing a King/protector to whom they would owe "allegiance", in fact, was to say that they 6 sinned:

7 Then all the elders of Israel gathered together and came to Samuel at Ramah, and said to him, "Look, you are
8 old, and your sons do not walk in your ways. Now make us a king to judge us like all the nations [and be 9 OVER them]".

10 But the thing displeased Samuel when they said, "Give us a king to judge us." So Samuel prayed to the Lord.
11 And the Lord said to Samuel, "Heed the voice of the people in all that they say to you; for they have rejected
12 Me [God], that I should not reign over them. According to all the works which they have done since the day
13 that I brought them up out of Egypt, even to this day—with which they have forsaken Me and served other
14 gods [Kings, in this case]—so they are doing to you also [government becoming idolatry]. Now therefore,
15 heed their voice. However, you shall solemnly forewarn them, and show them the behavior of the king who 16 will reign over them."

17 So Samuel told all the words of the LORD to the people who asked him for a king. And he said, "This will be 18 the behavior of the king who will reign over you: He will take [STEAL] your sons and appoint them for his
19 own chariots and to be his horsemen, and some will run before his chariots. He will appoint captains over his 20 thousands and captains over his fifties, will set some to plow his ground and reap his harvest, and some to 21 make his weapons of war and equipment for his chariots. He will take [STEAL] your daughters to be
22 perfumers, cooks, and bakers. And he will take [STEAL] the best of your fields, your vineyards, and your 23 olive groves, and give them to his servants. He will take [STEAL] a tenth of your grain and your vintage, and 24 give it to his officers and servants. And he will take [STEAL] your male servants, your female servants, your
25 finest young men, and your donkeys, and put them to his work [as SLAVES]. He will take [STEAL] a tenth
26 of your sheep. And you will be his servants. And you will cry out in that day because of your king whom you
27 have chosen for yourselves, and the LORD will not hear you in that day."

28 Nevertheless the people refused to obey the voice of Samuel; and they said, "No, but we will have a king over 29 us, that we also may be like all the nations, and that our king may judge us and go out before us and fight our 30 battles."
31 [1 Sam. 8:4-20, Bible, NKJV]

32 Notice above the repeated words "He [the new King] will take...". God is really warning them here that the King they elect 33 will STEAL from them, which is exactly what our present day government does! Some things never change, do they?

34 5.4.8.9 Choice of Domicile is a voluntary and SERIOUS choice

35 *"The rights of the individual are not derived from governmental agencies, either municipal, state or federal,
36 or even from the Constitution. They exist inherently in every man, by endowment of the Creator, and are merely
37 reaffirmed in the Constitution, and restricted only to the extent that they have been voluntarily surrendered by
38 the citizenship to the agencies of government. The people's rights are not derived from the government, but the 39 *government's authority comes from the people.*946 The Constitution but states again these rights already* 40 existing, and when legislative encroachment by the nation, state, or municipality invade these original and 41 permanent rights, it is the duty of the courts to so declare, and to afford the necessary relief. The fewer
42 restrictions that surround the individual liberties of the citizen, except those for the preservation of the public
43 health, safety, and morals, the more contented the people and the more successful the democracy."
44 *[City of Dallas v Mitchell, 245 S.W. 944 (1922)]

45 The law and government that a person voluntarily consents or "intends" to be subject to determines where their "legal 46 home" is under this concept. This choice must be completely voluntary and not subject to coercion or intimidation because 47 all just powers of any free government derive from the "consent of the governed", as the Declaration of Independence 48 indicates.

49 § 143. Id. Actual Choice. - Third. There must be actual choice. In order to effect a change of domicil a person
50 must not only be capable of forming the proper intention and free to do so, but he must actually form such 51 intention.
52 [A Treatise on the Law of Domicil, National, Quasi-National, and Municipal, M.W. Jacobs, Little, Brown, and
53 Company, 1887, p. 208]

This form of consent is called "allegiance" in the legal field. A voluntary choice of allegiance to a place amounts to a choice to join or associate with a group of people called a "state" and to respect, be subject to, and obey all positive laws passed by the citizens who dwell there. The First Amendment guarantees us a right of free association, and therefore, only we can choose the group of people we wish to associate with and be protected by as a result of choosing a "domicile". The First Amendment also guarantees us a right of freedom from "compelled association", which is the act of forcing a person to join or be part of any group, including a "state".

Just as there is freedom to speak, to associate, and to believe, so also there is freedom not to speak, associate, or believe "The right to speak and the right to refrain from speaking on a government tax return, and in violation of the [Fifth Amendment when coerced, for instance] are complementary components of the broader concept of "individual freedom of mind." Wooley v. Maynard [430 U.S. 703] (1977). Freedom of conscience dictates that no individual may be forced to espouse ideological causes with which he disagrees:

"[A]t the heart of the First Amendment is the notion that the individual should be free to believe as he will, and that in a free society one's beliefs should be shaped by his mind and by his conscience rather than coerced by the State [through illegal enforcement of the revenue laws]." Abood v. Detroit Board of Education [431 U.S. 209] (1977)

Freedom from compelled association is a vital component of freedom of expression. Indeed, freedom from compelled association illustrates the significance of the liberty or personal autonomy model of the First Amendment. As a general constitutional principle, it is for the individual and not for the state to choose one's associations and to define the persona which he holds out to the world. [First Amendment Law, Barron-Dienes, West Publishing, ISBN 0-314-22677-X, pp. 266-267]*

Therefore, no government has lawful authority to compel us to choose a "domicile" that is within its legislative jurisdiction or to have allegiance towards it, because that would be compelled association. The right to choose what political group or country we wish to join and have allegiance to and protection from also implies that we can reject all the earthly options and simply elect to join God's followers and be subject ONLY to His laws. This type of government would be called a "theocracy". This, in fact, is the goal of this entire publication: Establishing an ecclesiastical state separate from the corrupted governments that plague our land. It is a stark reality that what you define as protection might amount to its opposite for someone else. Therefore, each person is free to:

1. Define what "protection" means to them.
2. Choose to join a political group or country that agrees most with their definition of "protection". This makes them into "nationals" of that country who profess "allegiance" to the "state" and thereby merit its protection.
3. Choose a "domicile" within that country or group, and thereby become subject to its laws and a benefactor of its protection.

The notion of freedom to choose one's allegiances is a natural consequence of the fact that a "state" can consist of any number of people, from one person to millions or even billions of people. The political landscape constantly changes precisely because people are constantly exercising their right to change their political associations. A single person is free to create his own "state" and pass his own laws, and to choose a domicile within that created state. The boundaries of that created "state" might include only himself, only his immediate family, or encompass an entire city, county, or district. He might do this because he regards the society in which he lives to be so corrupt that it's laws, morality, and norms are injurious rather than protective. Such a motive, in fact, is behind an effort called the "Free State Project", in which people are trying to get together to create a new and different type of state within the borders of our country. The U.S. Supreme Court, in fact, has ruled that when the laws of a society become more injurious than protective to us personally, then we cease to have any obligation to obey them and may lawfully choose other allegiances and domiciles that afford better protection. To wit:

"By the surrender, the inhabitants passed under a temporary allegiance to the British government and were bound by such laws and such only as it chose to recognize and impose. From the nature of the case, no other laws could be obligatory upon them, for where there is no protection or allegiance or sovereignty, there can be no claim to obedience."

If a person decides that the laws and the people of the area in which he lives are injurious of his life, liberty, and property, then he is perfectly entitled to withhold his allegiance and shift his domicile to a place where better protection is afforded. When a person has allegiance and domicile to a place or society other than where he lives, then he is considered "foreign" in that society and all people comprising that society become "foreigners" relative to him in such a case. He becomes a "transient foreigner" and the only laws that are obligatory upon him are the criminal laws and the common law and no

1 other. Below is what the U.S. Supreme Court said about the right of people to choose to disassociate with such "foreigners"
 2 who can do them harm. Note that they say the United States government has the right to exclude foreigners who are
 3 injurious. This authority, it says, comes from the Constitution, which in turn was delegated by the Sovereign People. The
 4 People cannot delegate an authority they do not have, therefore they must individually ALSO have this authority within
 5 their own private lives of excluding injurious peoples from their legal and political life by changing their domicile and
 6 citizenship. This act of excluding such foreigners becomes what we call a "political divorce" and the result accomplishes
 7 the equivalent of "disconnecting from the government matrix":

8 "The government, possessing the powers which are to be exercised for protection and security, is clothed with 9 authority to determine the occasion on which the powers shall be called forth; and its determinations, so far as
 10 *the subjects affected are concerned, are necessarily conclusive upon all its departments and officers. If,
 11 therefore, the government of the United States, through its legislative department, considers the presence of 12 foreigners of a different race in this country, who will not assimilate with us, to be dangerous to its peace and
 13 security, their exclusion is not to be stayed because at the time there are no actual hostilities with the nation
 14 of which the foreigners are subjects. The existence of war would render the necessity of the proceeding only*
 15 more obvious and pressing. The same necessity, in a less pressing degree, may arise when war does not exist,
 16 and the same authority which adjudges the necessity in one case must also determine it in the other. In both
 17 cases its determination is conclusive upon the judiciary. If the government of the country of which the 18 foreigners excluded are subjects is dissatisfied with this action, it can make complaint to the executive head of 19 our government, or resort to any other measure which, in its judgment, its interests or dignity may demand; and 20 there lies its only remedy.

21 The power of the government to exclude foreigners from the country whenever, in its judgment, the public
 22 interests require such exclusion, has been asserted in repeated instances, and never denied by the executive or 23 legislative departments.

25 The power of exclusion of foreigners being an incident of sovereignty belonging to the government of the 26 United States as a part of those sovereign powers delegated by the constitution, the right to its exercise at any
 27 time when, in the judgment of the government, the interests of the country require it, cannot be granted away
 28 or restrained on behalf of any one. The powers of government are delegated in trust to the United States, and* 29 are incapable of transfer to any other parties. They cannot be abandoned or surrendered. Nor can their 30 exercise be hampered, when needed for the public good, by any considerations of private interest. The exercise
 31 of these public trusts is not the subject of barter or contract."
 32 [Chae Chan Ping v. U.S., 130 U.S. 581 (1889)]

33 Notice above the phrase:

34 "If the government of the country of which the foreigners excluded are subjects is dissatisfied with this action, it
 35 can make complaint to the executive head of our government, or resort to any other measure which, in its 36 judgment, its interests or dignity may demand; and there lies its only remedy."

37 The court is tacitly admitting that there is NO legal remedy in the case where a foreigner is expelled because the party
 38 expelling him has an absolute right to do so. This inalienable right to expel harmful foreigners is just as true of what 39 happens on a person's private property as it is to what they want to do with their ENTIRE LIFE, property, and liberty. This 40 same argument applies to us divorcing ourselves from the state where we live. There is absolutely no legal remedy in any 41 court and no judge has any discretion to interfere with your absolute authority to divorce not only the state, but HIM! This 42 is BIG, folks! You don't have to prove that a society is injurious in order to disassociate from it because your right to do so
 43 is absolute, but if you want or need a few very good reasons why our present political system is injurious that you can 44 show to a judge or a court, read through chapter 2 of this book.

45 The following authority establishes that a change in domicile is a SERIOUS choice that can have drastic effects upon 46 people:

47 "§ 124. A Change of Domicil a Serious Matter, and presumed against –

48 But in any case a change of domicil, whether domicil of origin or of choice, national or quasi-national, is a
 49 very serious matter, involving as it may, and as it frequently does, an entire change of personal [CIVIL] law.
 50 The validity and construction of a man's testamentary acts and title disposition of his personal property in case
 51 of intestacy; his legitimacy in some cases and, if illegitimate, his capacity for legitimation; the rights and (in the 52 view of some jurists) the capacities of married women; jurisdiction to grant divorces, and, according to the 53 more recent English view, capacity to contract marriage, all these and very many other legal questions depend
 54 for their solution upon the principle of domicil; I so that upon the determination of the question of domicil it

1 may depend oftentimes whether a person is legitimate or illegitimate, married or single, testate or intestate,
 2 capable or incapable of doing a variety of acts and possessing a variety of rights. To the passage quoted .. in
 3 the last section Kindersley, V. C., adds: "In truth, to hold that a man has acquired a domicile in a foreign
 4 country is a most serious matter, involving as it does the consequence that the validity or invalidity of his
 5 testamentary acts and the disposition of his personal property are to be governed by the laws of that foreign
 6 country. No doubt the evidence may be so strong and conclusive as to render such a decision unavoidable. But 7 the consequences of such a decision may be, and generally are, so serious and so injurious to the welfare of 8 families, that it can only be justified by the clearest and most conclusive evidence."

9 [A Treatise on the Law of Domicil, National, Quasi-National, and Municipal, M.W. Jacobs, Little, Brown, and
 10 Company, 1887, p. 186]

11 Lastly, we emphasize that there is no method OTHER than domicile available in which to consent to the civil laws of a
 12 specific place. None of the following conditions, for instance, may form a basis for a prima facie presumption that a 13 specific human being consented to be civilly governed by a specific municipal government:

- 14 1. Simply being born and thereby becoming a statutory "national" (per 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21)) of a specific country is 15 NOT an exercise of personal discretion or an express act of consent.
- 16 2. Simply living in a physical place WITHOUT choosing a domicile there is NOT an exercise of personal discretion or an 17 express act of consent.

18 5.4.8.10 It is idolatry for a Christian to have an earthly domicile

19 Note also the use of the word "permanent home" in the definition of "domicile". According to the Bible, "earth" is NOT
 20 permanent, but instead is only temporary, and will eventually be destroyed and rebuilt as a new and different earth:

21 "But the heavens and the earth which are now preserved by the same word, are reserved for fire until the day of 22 judgment and perdition of ungodly men."
 23 [2 Peter 3:7, Bible NKJV]

24 The legal definition of "permanent" also demonstrates that it can mean any length of time one wants it to mean:

25 8 U.S.C. §1101

26 (a)(31) The term "permanent" means a relationship of continuing or lasting nature, as distinguished from 27 temporary, but a relationship may be permanent even though it is one that may be dissolved eventually at the 28 instance either of the United States or of the individual, in accordance with law.

29 We believe what they are really describing above is the equivalent of a "protection contract" between you and the 30 government, because the way it functions is that it is terminated when either you or the government insist, which means that
 31 while it is in force, your consent is inferred and legally "presumed". Below is how another author describes it, and note
 32 that the real meaning of "indefinitely" is "as long as he consents to a protector":

33 "One resides in one's domicile indefinitely, that is, with no definite end planned for the stay. While we hear
 34 'permanently' mentioned, the better word is 'indefinitely'. This is best seen in the context of a change of 35 domicile."
 36 [Conflicts in a Nutshell, Third Edition, David D. Siegel and Patrick J. Borchers, ISBN 0-314-160669-3, West
 37 Publishing, p. 16]

38 Christians define "permanent" the same way God does. God is eternal so His concept of "permanent" means "eternal".
 39 Therefore, no place on earth can be "permanent" in the context of a Christian:

40 "Do not love [be a permanent inhabitant or resident of] the world or the things in the world. If anyone loves
 41 the world, the love of the Father is not in him. For all that is in the world--the lust of the flesh, the lust of the 42 eyes, and the pride of life--is not of the Father but is of the world. And the world is passing away [not 43 permanent], and the lust of it; but he who does the will of God abides forever."
 44 [1 John 2:15, Bible, NKJV]

45 Christians are only allowed to be governed by God and His laws found in the Bible. Man's laws are simply a vain
 46 substitute, but God's laws are our only true and permanent source of protection, and the only type of protection we can
 47 consent to or intend to be subject to without violating our covenant and contract with God found in the Holy Bible.

1 "Away with you , Satan! For it is written, 'You shall worship the Lord your God, and Him ONLY [NOT the
2 government or man's vain laws or an atheistic democratic socialist "state"] you shall serve.'
3 [Matt. 4:10, Bible, NKJV]

4 The main allegiance of Christians is exclusively to Him, and not to any man or earthly law or government. We are citizens
5 of Heaven, and not earth. The most we can be while on earth is "nationals", because "nationals" are not subject to man's 6 laws and only "citizens" are. See:

Citizens v. Nationals, Family Guardian Fellowship
<http://famguardian.org/Subjects/Taxes/Citizenship/CitizensVNationals.htm>

7 Therefore, Heaven can be our only "legal home" or "domicile" or "residence".

8 "For our citizenship is [not WAS or WILL BE, but PRESENTLY IS] in heaven, from which we also eagerly 9 wait for the Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ"
10 [Philippians 3:20, Bible, NKJV]

11 "These all died in faith, not having received the promises, but having seen them afar off were assured of them,
12 embraced them and confessed that they were strangers and pilgrims on the earth."
13 [Hebrews 11:13, Bible, NKJV]

14 "Beloved, I beg you as sojourners and pilgrims [temporarily occupying the world], abstain from fleshly lusts 15 which war against the soul..."
16 [1 Peter 2:1, Bible, NKJV]

17 "Do you not know that friendship [and citizenship] with the world is enmity with God? Whoever therefore 18 wants to be a friend for "resident" of the world makes himself an enemy of God."
19 [James 4:4, Bible, NKJV]

20 "And do not be conformed to this world, but be transformed by the renewing of your mind, that you may prove 21 what is that good and acceptable and perfect will of God."
22 [Romans 12:2, Bible, NKJV]

23 The above scriptures say we are "sojourners and pilgrims", meaning we are perpetual travelers while temporarily here as 24 God's ambassadors. Legal treatises on domicile also confirm that while a person is "in transitu", meaning travelling and 25 sojourning temporarily, he cannot choose a domicile and that his domicile reverts to his "domicile of origin". The domicile
26 of origin is the place you were created and existed before you came to Earth, which is Heaven:

27 § 114. Id. Domicil of Origin adheres until another Domicil is acquired. - But whether the doctrine of Udney v.
28 Udney be or be not accepted, the law, as held in Great Britain and America, is beyond all doubt clear that
29 domicil of origin clings and adheres to the subject of it until another domicile is acquired. This is a logical
30 deduction from the postulate that "every person must have a domicile somewhere." For as a new domicile cannot 31 *be acquired except by actual residence cum animo manendi, it follows that the domicile of origin adheres while
32 the subject of it is in transitu, or, if he has not yet determined upon a new place of abode, while he is in
33 search of one,--"quarens quo se conferat ubi constituat." Although this is a departure from the Roman* 34 law doctrine, yet it is held with entire unanimity by the British and American cases. It was first announced,
35 though somewhat confusedly, by Lord Alvanley in Somerville v. Somerville: "The third rule I shall extract is 36 that the original domicile . . . or the domicile of origin is to prevail until the party has not only acquired another,
37 but has manifested and carried into execution an intention of abandoning his former domicile and taking another
38 as his sole domicile." The same idea has been expressed by Lord Wensleydale in somewhat different phrase in 39 Aikman v. Aikman : "Every man's domicile of origin must be presumed to continue until he has acquired another
40 sole domicile by actual residence with the intention of abandoning his domicile of origin. This change must be
41 animo et facto, and the burden of proof unquestionably lies upon him who asserts the change." Lord Cranworth
42 observed in the same case: "It is a clear principle of law that the domicile of origin continues until another is 43 acquired; i.e., until the person has made a new home for himself in lieu of the home of his birth." In America
44 similar language has been used.
45 [Treatise on the Law of Domicil, M.W.Jacobs, Little, Brown, and Company, 1887, pp. 174-175;

47 Even the U.S. Supreme Court has held that while a person temporarily occupies a place and is "in transitu" or "in itinere", 48 he or she is not subject to the civil laws of that place.

49 "It is generally agreed by writers upon international law, and the rule has been judicially applied in a great
50 number of cases, that wherever any question may arise concerning the status of a person, it must be determined
51 according to that law which has next previously rightfully operated on and fixed that status. And, further, that

1 the laws of a country do not rightfully operate upon and fix the status of persons who are within its limits in
 2 itiner, or who are abiding there for definite temporary purposes, as for health, curiosity, or occasional
 3 business; that these laws, known to writers on public and private international law as personal statutes,
 4 operate only on the inhabitants of the country. Not that it is or can be denied that each independent nation
 5 may, if it thinks fit, apply them to all persons within their limits. But when this is done, not in conformity with 6 the principles of international law, other States are not understood to be willing to recognize or allow effect to 7 such applications of personal statutes."
 8 [Dred Scott v. Sandford, 60 U.S. (19 How.) 393,595 (1856)]

9 To "consent" or "choose" to be governed by anything but God and His sacred Law is idolatry in violation of the first four 10 Commandments of the Ten Commandments.

11 "It is better to trust the Lord
 12 Than to put confidence in man.
 13 It is better to trust in the Lord
 14 Than to put confidence in princes [or government, or the 'state']."
 15 [Psalm 118:8-9, Bible, NKJV]

16 If you can't put confidence in "princes", which we interpret to mean political rulers or governments, then we certainly can't 17 have allegiance to them or put that allegiance above our allegiance to God. We can therefore have no "legal home" or 18 "domicile" or "residence" anywhere other than exclusively within the Kingdom of Heaven and not within the jurisdiction of 19 any corrupted earthly government. Our only law is God's law and Common law, which is based on God's law. Below is an 20 example of how the early Jews adopted this very attitude towards government from the Bible.

21 "Then Haman said to King Ahasuerus, "There is a certain people [the Jews, who today are the equivalent of
 22 Christians] scattered and dispersed among the people in all the provinces of your kingdom; their laws are
 23 different from all other people's because they are [God's laws!], and they do not keep the [king's \[unjust\] laws](#).
 24 Therefore it is not fitting for the king to let them remain. If it pleases the king, let a decree be written that they
 25 be destroyed, and I will pay ten thousand talents of silver into the hands of those who do the work, to bring it
 26 into the king's treasuries."
 27 [Esther 3:8-9, Bible, NKJV]

28 "Those people who are not governed [ONLY] by GOD and His laws will be ruled by tyrants."
 29 [William Penn (after whom Pennsylvania was named)]

30 "A free people [claim] their rights as derived from the laws of nature [God and His laws], and not as the gift of 31 their chief magistrate [or any government law]."
 32 [Thomas Jefferson: Rights of British America, 1774. ME 1:209, Papers 1:134]

33 Our acronym for the word BIBLE confirms the above conclusions:

34 B-Basic
 35 I-Instructions
 36 B-Before
 37 L-Leaving
 38 E-Earth

39 We are only temporarily here and Heaven is where we intend to return and live permanently. Legal domicile is based only
 40 on intent, not on physical presence, and it is only "domicile" which establishes one's legal and tax "home". No one but us
 41 can establish our "intent" and this is the express intent. Neither can we as Christians permit our "domicile" to be subject to 42 change under any circumstances, even when coerced. To admit that there is a "permanent home" or "place of abode"
 43 anywhere on earth is to admit that there is no afterlife, no God, and that this earth is as good as it gets, which is a depressing
 44 prospect indeed that conflicts with our religious beliefs. The Bible says that while we are here, Satan is in control, so this is 45 definitely not a place we would want to call a permanent home or a domicile:

46 "We know that we are of God, and the whole world lies under the sway of the wicked one."
 47 [1 John 5:19, Bible, NKJV]

1 "Again, the devil took Him [Jesus] up on an exceedingly high mountain, and showed Him all the kingdoms of
2 the world and their glory. And he said to Him, "All these things I will give You if You will fall down and
3 worship me. [Satan]"

4 Then Jesus said to him, "Away with you, Satan! For it is written, 'You shall worship the LORD your God, and 5 Him only you shall serve.'"

6 "Then the devil left Him, and behold, angels came and ministered to Him."
7 [Matt. 4:8-11, Bible, NKJV]

9 "I [Jesus] will no longer talk much with you, for the ruler of this world [Satan] is coming, and he has nothing
10 in Me. But that the world may know that I love the Father, and as the Father gave Me commandment, so I do.
11 Arise, let us go from here."
12 Jesus in [John 14:30-31, Bible, NKJV]

13 Satan could not have offered the kingdoms of the world to Jesus and tempted Him with them unless he controlled them to 14 begin with. Satan is in control while we are here. Only a fool or an atheist would intend to make a wicked earth controlled
15 by Satan into a "permanent place of abode".

16 "He who loves his life will lose it, and he who hates his life in this world [on earth] will keep it for eternal 17 life."
18 [John 12:25, Bible, NKJV]

19 Only a person who hates this life and the earth as they are and who doesn't want to make it a "permanent place of abode" or 20 "domicile" can inherit eternal life.

21 "If you were of the world [had a permanent home here], the world would love its own. Yet because you
22 [Christians] are not of the world, but I chose you out of the world, therefore the world hates you [who are a
23 "stranger" and a "foreigner"]."
24 [John 15:19, Bible, NKJV].

25 QUESTION: How can you be "chosen out of the world" as Jesus says and yet still have a domicile here?]

26 "Pure and undefiled religion before God and the Father is this: to visit orphans and widows in their trouble, 27 and to keep oneself unspotted from the world [and the governments, laws, taxes, entanglements, and sin in 28 the world]."
29 [James 1:27, Bible, NKJV]

30 "So we are always confident, knowing that while we are at home in the body [the physical body] we are absent
31 from the Lord. For we walk by faith, not by sight. We are confident, yes, well pleased rather to be absent
32 from the body and to be present with the Lord [in the Kingdom of Heaven]."
33 [2 Cor. 5:6-8, Bible, NKJV]

34 Even Jesus Himself admitted that earth was not his "domicile" when He said:

35 Then a certain scribe came and said to Him, "Teacher, I will follow You wherever You go." And Jesus said to 36 him, "Foxes have holes and birds of the air have nests, but the Son of Man has nowhere to lay His head."
37 [Matt. 8:19-20, Bible, NKJV]

38 When we become believers, we, like Jesus Himself, become God's "ambassadors" on a foreign mission from the Kingdom
39 of Heaven according to 2 Cor. 5:20. Our house is a foreign embassy:

40 "Now then, we are ambassadors for Christ, as though God were pleading through us: we implore you on 41 Christ's behalf, be reconciled to God."
42 [2 Cor. 5:20, Bible, NKJV]

43 The Corpus Juris Secundum Legal Encyclopedia says that ambassadors have the domicile of those who they represent, 44 which in the case of Christians is the Kingdom of Heaven.

45 PARTICULAR PERSONS

46 4. Public Officials and Employees; Members of the Armed Services
47 §31 Public Officials and Employees

48 Ambassadors, consuls, and other public officials residing abroad in governmental service do not generally
49 acquire a domicile in the country where their official duties are performed, but retain their original domicile,"

1 although such officials may acquire a domicile at their official residence, if they engage in business or 2 commerce inconsistent with, or extraneous to, their public or diplomatic character.
 3 [Corpus Juris Secundum (C.J.S.), Domicile, §31 (2003);
 4 SOURCE: <http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/CitesByTopic/Domicile-28CJS-20051203.pdf>]

5 Another interesting aspect of domicile explains why the Bible symbolically refers to believers as the "children of God".
 6 Below are examples:

7 "But as many as received Him, to them He gave the right to become children of God, to those who believe in 8 His name"
 9 [John 1:2, Bible, NKJV]

10 "The Spirit Himself bears witness with our spirit that we are children of God"
 11 [Romans 8:16, Bible, NKJV]

12 "That is, those who are the children of the flesh, these are not the children of God; but the children of the 13 promise are counted as the seed."
 14 [Romans 9:8, Bible, NKJV]

15 "Behold what manner of love the Father has bestowed on us, that we should be called children of God! "
 16 [1 John 3:1, Bible, NKJV]

17 "In this the children of God and the children of the devil are manifest: Whoever does not practice righteousness
 18 is not of God, nor is he who does not love his brother."
 19 [1 John 3:10, Bible, NKJV]

20 "By this we know that we love the children of God, when we love God and keep His commandments."
 21 [1 John 5:2, Bible, NKJV]

22 The Corpus Juris Secundum Legal Encyclopedia says that those who are children, dependents, minors, or of unsound mind
 23 assume the domicile of the sovereign who is their "caretaker". As long as we are called "children of God" and are 24 dependent exclusively on Him, we assume His domicile, which is the Kingdom of God:

25 PARTICULAR PERSONS
 26 Infants
 27 §20 In General

28 An infant, being non sui juris, cannot fix or change his domicile unless emancipated. A legitimate child's 29 domicile usually follows that of the father. In case of separation or divorce of parents, the child has the 30 domicile of the parent who has been awarded custody of the child.
 31 [Corpus Juris Secundum (C.J.S.), Domicile, §20 (2003);
 32 SOURCE: <http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/CitesByTopic/Domicile-28CJS-20051203.pdf>]

33 The Bible treats the government as God's steward for truth and justice under God's laws. The passage below proves this,
 34 and it is not referring to ALL governments, but only those that are righteous, which are God's stewards, and who act in a
 35 way that is completely consistent and not in conflict with God's holy laws.

36 Submit to [Righteous] Government [and rebel against Unrighteous Government]

37 "Let every soul be subject to the governing authorities. For there is no authority except from God, and the 38 authorities that exist are appointed by God. Therefore whoever resists the authority resists the ordinance of 39 God, and those who resist will bring judgment on themselves. For [righteous] rulers are not a terror to good
 40 works, but to evil. [However, unrighteous rulers ARE a terror to good works] Do you want to be unafraid of the 41 [righteous] authority? Do what is good, and you will have praise from the same. For he [ONLY the righteous,
 42 not the unrighteous ruler] is God's minister to you for good. But if you do evil, be afraid; for he does not bear
 43 the sword in vain; for he is God's minister, an avenger to execute wrath on him who practices evil. Therefore 44 you must be subject, not only because of wrath but also for conscience' sake. For because of this you also pay
 45 taxes, for they [the righteous, and not unrighteous rulers] are God's ministers attending continually to this very 46 thing. Render therefore to all [those who are righteous and NOT unrighteous] their due: taxes to whom taxes 47 are due, customs to whom customs, fear to whom fear, honor to whom honor."
 48 [Rom. 13:1-7, Bible, NKJV]

49 The term "governing authorities" is synonymous with "God's ministers". The Bible says that the government is on Jesus'
 50 shoulders, and therefore God's shoulders, not any man:

1 "For God is the King of all the earth: Sing praises with understanding."
 2 [Psalm 47:7, Bible, NKJV]

4 "For the LORD is our Judge, the LORD is our Lawgiver, the LORD is our King: He will save [and protect]
 5 us."
 6 [Isaiah 33:22, Bible, NKJV]

8 For unto us a Child is born,
 9 Unto us a Son is given;
 10 And the government will be upon His shoulder.
 11 And His name will be called
 12 Wonderful, Counselor, Mighty God,
 13 Everlasting Father, Prince of Peace.
 14 [Isaiah 9:6, Bible, NKJV]

15 The Lord cannot be King where Satan is allowed to rule, even temporarily. Those who are not God's ministers are NOT 16 "governing authorities" but usurpers and representatives of Satan, not God. They are "children of Satan", not God.

17 "They have corrupted themselves;
 18 They are not His children,
 19 Because of their blemish:
 20 A perverse and crooked generation."
 21 [Deut. 32:5, Bible, NKJV]

22 When government ceases to be a "minister of God's justice" and rather becomes a competitor for pagan idol worship and
 23 obedience of the people, then God abandons the government and the result is the equivalent of a legal divorce. This is 24 revealed in the following scripture, which describes those who pursue pagan gods and pagan governments that act like god
 25 as "playing the harlot". The phrase "invites you to eat of his sacrifice", in modern day terms, refers to those who receive
 26 socialist welfare in any form, most of which is PLUNDER STOLEN from people who became a human sacrifice to the 27 pagan government:

28 The Covenant Renewed

29 And He said: "Behold, I make a covenant. Before all your people I will do marvels such as have not been done
 30 in all the earth, nor in any nation; and all the people among whom you are shall see the work of the LORD. For 31 it is an awesome thing that I will do with you. Observe what I command you this day. Behold, I am driving out
 32 from before you the Amorite and the Canaanite and the Hittite and the Perizzite and the Hivite and the Jebusite.
 33 Take heed to yourself, lest you make a covenant with the inhabitants of the land where you are going, lest it
 34 be a snare in your midst. But you shall destroy their altars, break their sacred pillars, and cut down their 35 wooden images (for you shall worship no other god, for the LORD, whose name is Jealous, is a jealous God),
 36 lest you make a covenant [engage in a franchise, contract, or agreement] with the inhabitants of the land,
 37 and they play the harlot with their gods and make sacrifice to their gods, and one of them invites you and you 38 eat of his sacrifice, and you take of his daughters for your sons, and his daughters play the harlot with their 39 gods and make your sons play the harlot with their gods.
 40 [Exodus 34:10-16, Bible, NKJV]

41 "No outsider [person who has not taken the Mark of the Beast] shall eat the holy offering [revenues collected
 42 from involuntary human sacrifices to the pagan cult by the IRS or the SSA]; one who dwells with the priest
 43 [judges are the priests of the civil religion], or a hired servant [licensed attorneys, who are the deacons of the 44 church appointed by the chief priests at the Supreme Court], shall not eat the holy thing. But if the priest [the 45 judge] buys a person with his money [his court order to induct a new cult member by compelling participation
 46 in excise taxable activities such as a "trade or business"], he may eat it; and one who is born in his [court]
 47 house [or is a fellow "public officer" of the government engaged in a "trade or business"] may eat his food."
 48 [Lev. 22:10-11, Bible, NKJV]

49 "He who sacrifices to any god, except to the LORD only, he shall be utterly destroyed."
 50 [Exodus 22:20, Bible, NKJV]

51 "They shall no more offer their sacrifices to demons, after whom they have played the harlot. This shall be a 52 statute forever for them throughout their generations.'
 53 [Lev. 17:7, Bible, NKJV]

54 The result of the divorce of a righteous God from a Pagan government that has become a child of Satan and His competitor
 55 for the worship of the people is that God "hides his face", as the Bible says:

1 "And I will surely hide My face in that day because of all the evil which they have done, in that they have
 2 turned to other gods."
 3 [Deut. 31:18, Bible, NKJV]

4 "I will hide My face from them, I will see what their end will be, For they are a perverse generation, Children
 5 in whom is no faith."
 6 [Deut. 32:20, Bible, NKJV]

7 "Then My anger shall be aroused against them in that day, and I will forsake them, and I will hide My face
 8 from them, and they shall be devoured. And many evils and troubles shall befall them, so that they will say in 9 that day, 'Have not these evils come upon us because our God is not among us?'"
 10 [Deut. 31:17, Bible, NKJV]

11 Below is a fascinating sermon about how and why God "hides his face" or "disappears":

The Disappearing God, Pastor John Weaver, 1 Sam. 3:21
<http://www.sermonaudio.com/sermoninfo.asp?SID=8121351932>

12 Those who follow pagan governments rather than God after the civil "divorce" become the children of Satan, not God and 13 are practicing idolatry. These people have misread Romans 13 and made government into a pagan substitute for God's 14 protection and adopt the government as their new caretaker, and thereby shift their effective domicile to the government as
 15 its dependents and "children". This is especially true when the government becomes socialist, abuses its power to tax as a
 16 means of wealth transfer, and pays any type of social welfare to the people. At that point, the people become "dependents"
 17 and assume the domicile of their caretaker. One insightful congressman said the following of this dilemma during the 18 debates over the original Social Security Act:

19 Mr. Logan: "...Natural laws can not be created, repealed, or modified by legislation. Congress should know
 20 there are many things which it can not do..."

21 "It is now proposed to make the Federal Government the guardian of its citizens. If that should be done, the
 22 Nation soon must perish. There can only be a free nation when the people themselves are free and
 23 administer the government which they have set up to protect their rights. Where the general government
 24 must provide work, and incidentally food and clothing for its citizens, freedom and individuality will be
 25 destroyed and eventually the citizens will become serfs to the general government..."

29 Any attempt to think about citizenship, domicile, and residence any way other than the way it is described here amounts to 30 a devious and deceptive attempt by the Pharisees [lawyers] to use the "traditions of men" to entrap Christians and churches
 31 and put them under government laws, control, taxes, and regulation, thereby violating the separation of powers doctrine.
 32 The Separation of Powers Doctrine as well as the Bible itself both require churches and Christians to be totally separate
 33 from government, man's laws, and control, taxation, and regulation by government. See sections 4.3.5 and 4.3.12 of this
 34 book for further details on the competition between "church" and "state" for the love and affections and allegiances of the 35 people, and why separation of these two powers is absolutely essential.

36 "Stand fast therefore in the liberty wherewith Christ hath made us free, and be not entangled again with the 37 yoke of bondage to the government or the income tax or the IRS or federal statutes that are not "[positive law"]
 38 and do not have jurisdiction over us."
 39 [Galatians 5:1, Bible, NKJV]

40 5.4.8.11 Domicile and civil jurisdiction

41 5.4.8.11.1 History of our system of civil statutory law

42 Our system of civil statutory law was inherited from the Roman statutory law, which was called "jus civile".

43 Chapter II: The Civil and the Common Law

44 29. In the original civil law, jus civile, was exclusively for Roman citizens; it was not applied in controversies
 45 between foreigners. But as the number of foreigners increased in Rome it became necessary to find some law
 46 for deciding disputes among them. For this the Roman courts hit upon a very singular expedient. Observing that

1 all the surrounding peoples with whom they were acquainted had certain principles of law in common, they
 2 took those common principles as rules of decision for such cases, and to the body of law thus obtained they
 3 gave the name of Jus gentium. The point on which the jus gentium differed most noticeably from the Jus civile
 4 was its simplicity and disregard of forms. All archaic law is full of forms, ceremonies and what to a modern
 5 mind seem useless and absurd technicalities. This was true of the [civil] law of old Rome. In many cases a sale,
 6 for instance, could be made only by the observance of a certain elaborate set of forms known as mancipation; if
 7 any one of these was omitted the transaction was void. And doubtless the laws of the surrounding peoples had
 8 each its own peculiar requirements. But in all of them the consent of the parties to transfer the ownership for 9 a price was required. The Roman courts therefore in constructing their system of Jus gentium fixed upon this 10 common characteristic and disregarded the local forms, so that a sale became the simplest affair possible.

11 30. After the conquest of Greece, the Greek philosophy made its way to Rome, and stoicism in particular
 12 obtained a great vogue among the lawyers. With it came the conception of natural law (Jus naturale) or the law
 13 of nature (jus naturae); to live according to nature was the main tenet of the stoic morality. The idea was of 14 some simple principle or principles from which, if they could be discovered, a complete, systematic and 15 equitable set of rules of conduct could be deduced, and the unfortunate departure from which by mankind
 16 generally was the source of the confusion and injustice that prevailed in human affairs. To bring their own law
 17 into conformity with the law of nature became the aim of the Roman jurists, and the praetor's edict and the 18 responses were the instruments which they used to accomplish this. Simplicity and universality they regarded as 19 marks of natural law, and since these were exactly the qualities which belonged to the jus gentium, it was no
 20 more than natural that the two should to a considerable extent be identified. The result was that under the name
 21 of natural law principles largely the same as those which the Roman courts had for a long time been 22 administering between foreigners permeated and transformed the whole Roman law.

23 The way in which this was at first done was by recognizing two kinds of rights, rights by the civil law and rights
 24 by natural law, and practically subordinating the former to the latter. Thus if Caius was the owner of a thing by 25 the civil law and Titius by natural law, the courts would not indeed deny up and down the right of Caius. They 26 admitted that he was owner; but they would not permit him to exercise his legal right to the prejudice of Titius,
 27 to whom on the other hand they accorded the practical benefits of ownership; and so by taking away the legal 28 owner's remedies they practically nullified his right. Afterwards the two kinds of laws were more completely
 29 consolidated, the older civil law giving way to the law of nature when the two conflicted. This double system of 30 rights in the Roman law is of importance to the student of the English law, because a very similar dualism
 31 arose and still exists in the latter, whose origin is no doubt traceable in part to the influence of Roman ideas.

32 [An Elementary Treatise on the Common Law for the Use of Students, Henry T. Terry, The Maruzen-Kabushiki-
 33 Kaisha, 1906, pp. 18-20]

34 Roman law recognized only TWO classes of persons: statutory "citizens" and "foreigners". Only those who consented to 35 become statutory "citizens" could become the lawful subject of the jus civile, which was the statutory civil law. Those who
 36 were not statutory "citizens" under the Roman Law, which today means those with NO civil domicile within the territory of 37 the author and grantor of the civil law, were regarded as:

- 38 1. "foreigners"
- 39 2. Not subject to the jus civile or statutory Roman Law.
- 40 3. Subject only to the common law, which was called jus gentium.

41 Note also that the above treatise characterizes TWO classes of rights: Civil rights and Natural rights. Today, these rights
 42 are called PUBLIC rights and PRIVATE rights by the courts in order to distinguish them. Public rights, in turn, are granted
 43 only to statutory "citizens" who consented to become citizens under the civil statutory law. The civil statutory law, or jus
 44 civile, therefore functions in essence as a franchise contract or compact that creates and grants ONLY public rights. Those 45 who do not join the social compact by consenting to become statutory "citizens" therefore are relegated to being protected 46 by natural law and common law, which is much more just and equitable.

47 Note the emphasis in the above upon the concept that everything exchanged must be paid for:

48 "And doubtless the laws of the surrounding peoples had each its own peculiar requirements. But in all of 49 them the consent of the parties to transfer the ownership for a price was required."

50 The concept we emphasize in the above cite is that the PUBLIC rights attached to the status of "citizen" under the Roman
 51 jus civile or statutory law constituted property that could not be STOLEN from those who did not consent to become 52 "citizens" or to accept the "benefits" or "privileges" of statutory citizenship. Such a THEFT by government of otherwise
 53 PRIVATE or NATURAL rights would amount to an unconstitutional eminent domain by the government by converting 54 PRIVATE rights into PUBLIC rights without the consent of the owner and without compensation.

5.4.8.11.2 Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 17 establishes that civil law is a voluntary franchise

Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 17 establishes the basis for litigating in all CIVIL courts under ONLY the STATUTORY law.

IV. PARTIES > Rule 17.
Rule 17. Parties Plaintiff and Defendant; Capacity

(b) Capacity to Sue or be Sued.

Capacity to sue or be sued is determined as follows:

(1) for an individual who is not acting in a representative capacity, by the law of the individual's domicile;
(2) for a corporation, by the law under which it was organized; and

(3) for all other parties, by the law of the state where the court is located, except that:

(A) a partnership or other unincorporated association with no such capacity under that state's law may sue or be sued in its common name to enforce a substantive right existing under the United States Constitution or laws; and

(B) 28 U.S.C. §§ 754 and 959(a) govern the capacity of a receiver appointed by a United States court to sue or be sued in a United States court.

[SOURCE: <http://www.law.cornell.edu/rules/frcp/Rule17.htm>]

Conspicuously absent from the above federal civil rule are the two MOST important sources of law:

1. The USA Constitution.
2. The common law. The common law includes natural rights.

Why are these two sources of law NOT explicitly or expressly mentioned in the above civil rule as a source of jurisdiction or standing to sue in a federal CIVIL statutory court? Because these sources of law come from the constitution and are NOT “granted” or “created” by the government. Anything not CREATED by the government cannot be limited, regulated, or taxed. PRIVATE rights and PRIVATE property, for instance, are NOT “created” by government and instead are created and endowed by God, according to the Declaration of Independence:

“We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness.--That to secure these rights, Governments are instituted among Men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed, -“
 [Declaration of Independence, 1776]

“Men are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable rights, -life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness;’ and to ‘secure,’ not grant or create, these rights, governments are instituted. That property for income] which a man has honestly acquired he retains full control of, subject to these limitations: First, that he shall not use it to his neighbor's injury, and that does not mean that he must use it for his neighbor's benefit [e.g. SOCIAL SECURITY, Medicare, and every other public “benefit”]; second, that if he devotes it to a public use, he gives to the public a right to control that use; and third, that whenever the public needs require, the public may take it upon payment of due compensation.”
 [Budd v. People of State of New York, 143 U.S. 517 (1892)]

The Constitution or the common law therefore may be cited by ANYONE, including those not domiciled within the civil statutory jurisdiction of the civil court, so long as they were physically present on land protected by the Constitution within the district served by the court at the time they received an injury. Recall that the Constitution attaches to LAND, and not to your status as a statutory “citizen” or “resident”:

“It is locality that is determinative of the application of the Constitution, in such matters as judicial procedure, and not the status of the people who live in it.”
 [Balzac v. Porto Rico, 258 U.S. 298 (1922) ]

5.4.8.11.3 Two contexts for legal terms: CONSTITUTIONAL and STATUTORY

 [Confucius (551 BCE - 479 BCE) Chinese thinker and social philosopher]

1 It is absolutely crucial to understand that there are TWO contexts in which all legal statuses such as "citizen", "resident",
2 and "alien" can be used:

3 1. Constitutional.

4 1.1. Relates to one's POLITICAL status.

5 1.2. Relates to NATIONALITY and NOT DOMICILE.

6 1.3. A CONSTITUTIONAL status is established ONLY by being either born or naturalized within the jurisdiction of 7 the specific NATIONAL government that wrote the statute.

8 2. Statutory.

9 2.1. Relates to ones' CIVIL or LEGAL status.

10 2.2. Relates to DOMICILE and NOT NATIONALITY.

11 2.3. A STATUTORY status is established ONLY by voluntarily choosing a domicile within the jurisdiction of the 12 specific government that wrote the statute.

13 It is CRUCIAL in EVERY interaction with any government to establish WHICH of these two contexts that every term they 14 are using relates to, and ESPECIALLY on government forms. A failure to understand the status can literally mean the 15 difference between SLAVERY and FREEDOM.

16 One can, for instance, be a "citizen" under CONSTITUTION and yet be an "non-resident non-person" under 17 STATUTORY law in relation to the federal government. This is the status of those who are born in states of the Union and
18 who are domiciled within the exclusive jurisdiction of a CONSTITUTIONAL state of the Union.s

19 The purpose of providing a statutory definition of a legal "term" is to supersede and not enlarge the ordinary, common law, 20 constitutional, or common meaning of a term. Geographical words of art include:

- 21 1. "State"
- 22 2. "United States"
- 23 3. "alien"
- 24 4. "citizen"
- 25 5. "resident"
- 26 6. "U.S. person"

27 The terms "State" and "United States" within the Constitution implies the constitutional states of the Union and excludes
28 federal territory, statutory "States" (federal territories), or the statutory "United States" (the collection of all federal 29 territory). This is an outcome of the separation of powers doctrine. See:

Government Conspiracy to Destroy the Separation of Powers, Form #05.023
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

30 The U.S. Constitution creates a public trust which is the delegation of authority order that the U.S. Government uses to 31 manage federal territory and property. That property includes franchises, such as the "trade or business" franchise. All 32 statutory civil law it creates can and does regulate only THAT property and not the constitutional States, which are foreign,
33 sovereign, and statutory "aliens" for the purposes of federal legislative jurisdiction.

34 It is very important to realize the consequences of this constitutional separation of powers between the states and national 35 government. Some of these consequences include the following:

- 36 1. Statutory "States" as indicated in 4 U.S.C. §110\(d\) and "States" in nearly all federal statutes are in fact federal 37 territories and the definition does NOT include constitutional states of the Union.
- 38 2. The statutory "United States" defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701\(a\)\(9\) and (a)(10) and 4 U.S.C. §110(d) includes federal 39 territory and excludes any land within the exclusive jurisdiction of a constitutional state of the Union.
- 40 3. Terms on government forms assume the statutory context and NOT the constitutional context.
- 41 4. Domicile is the origin of civil legislative jurisdiction over human beings. This jurisdiction is called "in personam 42 jurisdiction".
- 43 5. Since the separation of powers doctrine creates two separate jurisdictions that are legislatively "foreign" in relation to 44 each other, then there are TWO types of political communities, two types of "citizens", and two types of jurisdictions
45 exercised by the national government.

1                   "It is clear that Congress, as a legislative body, exercise two species of legislative power: the one, limited as to
 2 its objects, but extending all over the Union: the other, an absolute, exclusive legislative power over the District
 3 of Columbia. The preliminary inquiry in the case now before the Court, is, by virtue of which of these 4 authorities was the law in question passed?"
 5 [Cohens v. Virginia, 19 U.S. 264, 6 Wheat. 265, 5 L.Ed. 257 (1821)]

- 6     6. A human being domiciled in a Constitutional state and born or naturalized anywhere in the Union. These are:
 7     6.1. A state national pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1101\(a\)\(21\)
 8     6.2. A statutory "non-resident non-person" if exclusively PRIVATE and not engaged in a public office.
 9     6.3. A statutory "nonresident alien" (26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(B)) in relation to the national government if they lawfully
 10        serve in a public office.
 11    7. You can be a statutory "nonresident alien" pursuant to 26 C.F.R. §1.1441-1(c)(3)(ii) and a constitutional or Fourteenth 12        Amendment "Citizen" AT THE SAME TIME. Why? Because the Supreme Court ruled in Hooven and Allison v.
 13        Evatt, 324 U.S. 652 (1945), that there are THREE different and mutually exclusive "United States", and therefore 14        THREE types of "citizens of the United States". Here is an example:

 16 *opens with a definition of citizenship—not only citizenship of the United States[***], but citizenship of the*
 17 states. No such definition was previously found in the Constitution, nor had any attempt been made to define
 18 it by act of Congress. It had been the occasion of much discussion in the courts, by the executive departments
 19 *and in the public journals. It had been said by eminent judges that no man was a citizen of the [***] except* 20 as he was a citizen of one of the states composing the Union. Those therefore, who had been born and 21 resided always in the District of Columbia or in the territories [STATUTORY citizens], though within the 22 *United States[*], were not [CONSTITUTIONAL] citizens."*
 23 [Slaughter-House Cases, 83 U.S. (16 Wall.) 36, 21 L.Ed. 394 (1873)]

24     The "citizen of the United States" mentioned in the Fourteenth Amendment is a constitutional "citizen of the United 25     States", and the term "United States" in that context includes states of the Union and excludes federal territory. Hence,
 26     you would NOT be a "citizen of the United States" within any federal statute, because all such statutes define "United 27     States" to mean federal territory and EXCLUDE states of the Union. For more details, see:

Why You are a "national", "state national", and Constitutional but not Statutory Citizen, Form #05.006
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

- 28    8. Your job, if you say you are a "citizen of the United States" or "U.S. citizen" on a government form ( a VERY 29        DANGEROUS undertaking!) is to understand that all government forms presume the statutory and not constitutional
 30        context, and to ensure that you define precisely WHICH one of the three "United States" you are a "citizen" of, and do
 31        so in a way that excludes you from the civil jurisdiction of the national government because domiciled in a "foreign 32        state". Both foreign countries and states of the Union are legislatively "foreign" and therefore "foreign states" in 33        relation to the national government of the United States. The following form does that very carefully:

Affidavit of Citizenship, Domicile, and Tax Status, Form #02.001
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

- 34    9. Even the IRS says you CANNOT trust or rely on ANYTHING on any of their forms and publications. We cover this 35        in our Reasonable Belief About Income Tax Liability, Form #05.007. Hence, if you are compelled to fill out a
 36        government form, you have an OBLIGATION to ensure that you define all "words of art" used on the form in such a
 37        way that there is no room for presumption, no judicial or government discretion to "interpret" the form to their benefit,
 38        and no injury to your rights or status by filling out the government form. This includes attaching the following forms 39        to all tax forms you submit:
 40    9.1. Affidavit of Citizenship, Domicile, and Tax Status, Form #02.001
 41        <http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>
 42    9.2. Tax Form Attachment, Form #04.201
 43        <http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

44     The following cite from U.S. v. Wong Kim Ark helps clarify the distinctions between the STATUTORY and 45     CONSTITUTIONAL contexts by admitting that there are TWO components that determine one's "citizenship" status:
 46     NATIONALITY and DOMICILE.

 48 question whether the domicile of the father was in England or in Scotland, he being in either alternative a
 49 British subject. Lord Chancellor Hatherley said: 'The question of naturalization and of allegiance is distinct
 50 from that of domicile.' Page 452. Lord Westbury, in the passage relied on by the counsel for the United States,
 51 began by saying: 'The law of England, and of almost all civilized countries, ascribes to each individual at his birth two distinct legal states or conditions,—one by virtue of which he becomes the subject [NATIONAL] of some particular country, binding him by the tie of natural allegiance, and which may be called his political status; another by virtue of which he has ascribed to him the character of a citizen of some particular country, and as such is possessed of certain municipal rights, and subject to certain obligations, which latter character is the civil status or condition of the individual, and may be quite different from his political status.' And then, while maintaining that the civil status is universally governed by the single principle of domicile (domicilium), the criterion established by international law for the purpose of determining civil status, and the basis on which 'the personal rights of the party—that is to say, the law which determines his majority or minority, his marriage, succession, testacy, or intestacy— must depend,' he yet distinctly recognized that a man's political status, his country (patria), and his 'nationality,—that is, natural allegiance,'—may depend on different laws in different countries.' Pages 457, 460. He evidently used the word 'citizen,' not as equivalent to 'subject,' but rather to 'inhabitant'; and had no thought of impeaching the established rule that all persons born under British dominion are natural-born subjects. United States v. Wong Kim Ark, 169 U.S. 649, 18 S.Ct. 456, 42 L.Ed. 890 (1898) ; SOURCE: [http://scholar.google.com/scholar\_case?case=3381955771263111765]

So:

1. The Constitution is a POLITICAL and not a LEGAL document. It therefore determines your POLITICAL status rather than your LEGAL/STATUTORY status.
2. Nationality determines your POLITICAL STATUS and whether you are a "subject" of the country.
3. DOMICILE determines your CIVIL and LEGAL and STATUTORY status. It DOES NOT determine your POLITICAL status or nationality.
4. Being a constitutional "citizen" per the Fourteenth Amendment is associated with nationality, not domicile.
5. Allegiance is associated with nationality, not domicile. Allegiance is what makes one a "subject" of a country.
6. Your personal and municipal rights, meaning CONSTITUTIONAL rights, associate with your choice of legal domicile, not your nationality or what country you are a subject of or have allegiance to.
7. Being a statutory "citizen" is associated with domicile, not nationality, because it is associated with being an inhabitant RATHER than a "subject".
8. A statutory "alien" under most acts of Congress is a person with a foreign DOMICILE, not a foreign NATIONALITY. By "foreign", we mean:
  - 8.1. Nationality context: OUTSIDE of COUNTRY United States.
  - 8.2. Domicile context: OUTSIDE of federal territory and the exclusive federal jurisdiction, and NOT outside the Constitutional United States (states of the Union).

Understanding the distinction between nationality and domicile, in turn is absolutely critical.

1. Nationality:
  - 1.1. Is a political status.
  - 1.2. Is defined by the Constitution, which is a political document.
  - 1.3. Is synonymous with being a "national" within statutory law.
  - 1.4. Is associated with a specific COUNTRY.
2. Domicile:
  - 2.1. Is a civil status.
  - 2.2. Is not even addressed in the constitution.
  - 2.3. Is defined by civil statutory law RATHER than the constitution.
  - 2.4. Is in NO WAY connected with one's nationality.
  - 2.5. Is usually connected with the word "person", "citizen", "resident", or "inhabitant" in statutory law.
  - 2.6. Is associated with a specific COUNTY and a STATE rather than a COUNTRY.
  - 2.7. Implies one is a "SUBJECT" of a SPECIFIC MUNICIPAL but not NATIONAL government.

Nationality and domicile, TOGETHER determine the POLITICAL AND CIVIL/LEGAL status of a human being respectively. These important distinctions are recognized in Black's Law Dictionary:

"nationality – That quality or character which arises from the fact of a person's belonging to a nation or state. Nationality determines the political status of the individual, especially with reference to allegiance; while domicile determines his civil [statutory] status. Nationality arises either by birth or by naturalization."
[Black's Law Dictionary (6th ed. 1990), p. 1025]

The U.S. Supreme Court also confirmed the above when they held the following. Note the key phrase "political jurisdiction", which is NOT the same as legislative/statutory jurisdiction. One can have a political status of "citizen" under

1 the constitution while NOT being a "citizen" under federal statutory law because not domiciled on federal territory. To
2 have the status of "citizen" under federal statutory law, one must have a domicile on federal territory:

3 *"This section [Fourteenth Amendment, Section 1] contemplates two sources of citizenship, and two sources
4 only, -birth and naturalization. The persons declared to be citizens are 'all persons born or naturalized in the
5 United States, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof.' The evident meaning of these last words is, not merely 6 subject in some respect or degree to the jurisdiction of the United States, but completely subject to their
7 [plural, not singular, meaning states of the Union] political jurisdiction, and owing them [the state
8 of the Union] direct and immediate allegiance. And the words relate to the time of birth in the one case, as 9 they do [169 U.S. 649, 725] to the time of naturalization in the other. Persons not thus subject to the 10 jurisdiction of the United States at the time of birth cannot become so afterwards, except by being naturalized,
11 either individually, as by proceedings under the naturalization acts, or collectively, as by the force of a treaty 12 by which foreign territory is acquired."*
13 U.S. v. Wong Kim Ark, [169 U.S. 649, 18 S.Ct. 456; 42 L.Ed. 890 (1898)]

14 *"This right to protect persons having a domicile, though not native-born or naturalized citizens, rests on the
15 firm foundation of justice, and the claim to be protected is earned by considerations which the protecting power
16 is not at liberty to disregard. Such domiciled citizen pays the same price for his protection as native-born or
17 naturalized citizens pay for theirs. He is under the bonds of allegiance to the country of his residence, and, if
18 he breaks them, incurs the same penalties. He owes the same obedience to the civil laws. His property is, in 19 the same way and to the same extent as theirs, liable to contribute to the support of the Government. In nearly 20 all respects, his and their condition as to the duties and burdens of Government are undistinguishable."*
21 Fong Yue Ting v. United States, [149 U.S. 698 (1893)]

22 Notice in the last quote above that they referred to a foreign national born in another country as a "citizen". THIS is the 23 REAL "citizen" that judges and even tax withholding documents are really talking about, rather than the "national"
24 described in the constitution. And also notice that they say in relation to DOMICILE/STATUTORY status the following
25 "He owes the same obedience to the CIVIL laws", thus establishing that CIVIL law does not apply to those WITHOUT a
26 DOMICILE.

27 Domicile and NOT nationality is what imputes a status under the tax code and a liability for tax. Tax liability is a civil
28 liability that attaches to civil statutory law, which in turn attaches to the person through their choice of domicile. When you
29 CHOOSE a domicile, you elect or nominate a protector, which in turn gives rise to an obligation to pay for the civil 30 protection demanded. The method of providing that protection is the civil laws of the municipal (as in COUNTY)
31 jurisdiction that you chose a domicile within.

32 *"domicile. A person's legal home. That place where a man has his true, fixed, and permanent home and 33 principal establishment, and to which whenever he is absent he has the intention of returning. Smith v. Smith,
34 206 Pa.Super. 310, 213 A.2d. 94. Generally, physical presence within a state and the intention to make it one's 35 home are the requisites of establishing a "domicile" therein. The permanent residence of a person or the place
36 to which he intends to return even though he may actually reside elsewhere. A person may have more than one
37 residence but only one domicile. The legal domicile of a person is important since it, rather than the actual 38 residence, often controls the jurisdiction of the taxing authorities and determines where a person may 39 exercise the privilege of voting and other legal rights and privileges."
40 [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 485]*

41 Later versions of Black's Law Dictionary attempt to cloud this important distinction between nationality and domicile in
42 order to unlawfully and unconstitutionally expand federal power into the states of the Union and to give federal judges
43 unnecessary and unwarranted discretion to kidnap people into their jurisdiction using false presumptions. They do this by 44 trying to make you believe that domicile and nationality are equivalent, when they are EMPHATICALLY NOT. Here is an 45 example:

46 "nationality – The relationship between a citizen of a nation and the nation itself, customarily involving 47 allegiance by the citizen and protection by the state; membership in a nation. This term is often used 48 synonymously with citizenship."
49 [Black's Law Dictionary (8th ed. 2004)]

50 Federal courts regard the term "citizenship" as equivalent to domicile, meaning domicile on federal territory.

51 "The words "citizen" and citizenship," however, usually include the idea of domicile, Delaware, L. & W.R.
52 Co. v. Petrowsky, C.C.A.N.Y., 250 F. 554, 557:"

1. The term “citizenship” is being stealthily used by government officials as a magic word that allows them to hide their presumptions about your status. Sometimes they use it to mean NATIONALITY, and sometimes they use it to mean DOMICILE.
2. The use of the word “citizenship” should therefore be AVOIDED when dealing with the government because its meaning is unclear and leaves too much discretion to judges and prosecutors.
3. When someone from any government uses the word “citizenship”, you should:
  - 3.1. Tell them NOT to use the word, and instead to use “nationality” or “domicile”.
  - 3.2. Ask them whether they mean “nationality” or “domicile”.
  - 3.3. Ask them WHICH political subdivision they imply a domicile within: federal territory or a constitutional state of the Union.

WARNING: A failure to either understand or correctly apply the above concepts can literally mean the difference between being a government pet in a legal cage called a franchise, and being a free and sovereign man or woman.

5.4.8.11.4 “Domicile” and “residence” compared

We know from earlier discussion that one can have only ONE domicile but as many residences as they want. The reason is that:

1. DOMICILE is associated with PERSONS and implies physical presence and allegiance, which must be undivided. You can only be in one physical place at a time and have undivided allegiance to only one government at a time.
2. RESIDENCE is associated with CONTRACTS and the statuses they create. Residence is usually a consequence of the exercise of your right to contract with those usually OUTSIDE the place of your domicile. It is a product of the Minimum Contacts Doctrine. Since your right to contract is unlimited, then you can have more than one residence. Each “residence” can, in turn, dictate a different choice of law or government protector.

[Bouvier's Maxims of Law, 1856;

SOURCE: <http://famguardian.org/Publications/BouvierMaximsOfLaw/BouviereMaxims.htm>]

Black's Law Dictionary helps define the distinctions between residence and domicile:

RESIDENCE. A factual place of abode. Living in a particular locality. Reese v. Reese, 179 Misc. 665, 40 N.Y.S.2d. 468, 472; Zimmerman v. Zimmerman, 175 Or. 585, 155 P.2d. 293, 295. It requires only bodily presence as an inhabitant of a place. In re Campbell's Guardianship, 216 Minn. 113, 11 N.W.2d. 786, 789.

As "domicile" and "residence" are usually in the same place, they are frequently used as if they had the same meaning, but they are not identical terms, for a person may have two places of residence, as in the city and country, but only one domicile. Residence means living in a particular locality, but domicile means living in that locality with intent to make it a fixed and permanent home. Residence simply requires bodily presence as an inhabitant in a given place, while domicile requires bodily presence in that place and also an intention to make it one's domicile. In re Riley's Will, 266 N.Y.S. 209, 148 Misc. 588.

"Residence" demands less intimate local ties than "domicile, but "domicile" allows absence for indefinite period if intent to return remains. Immigration Act 1917. §3, 8 U.S.C.A. .§136 (e, p). Transatlantica Italiana v. Elting, C.C.A.N.Y., 74 F.2d. 732, 733. But see, Ward v. Ward, 115 W.Va. 429. 176 S.E. 708. 709; Southwestern Greyhound Lines v. Craig, 182 Okl. 610, 80 P.2d. 221, 224; holding that residence and domicile are synonymous terms. "Residence" has a meaning dependent on context and purpose of statute. In re Jones, 341 Pa. 329, 19 A.2d. 280. 282. Words "residence" and "domicile". may have an identical or variable meaning depending on subject-matter and context of statute. Kemp v. Kemp, 16 N.Y.S.2d. 26, 34, 172 Misc. 738. [Black's Law Dictionary, Revised Fourth Edition, p. 1473]

The above definition deliberately clouds the issue of:

1. Whether residence has consent as a prerequisite or not. We know based on previous analysis that domicile does.
2. What citizenship, domicile, and nationality status are associated with “residence” in each context.

When we look up the definitions for “abode” and “inhabitant” as used in the definition of “residence”, they all connect back to domicile and therefore also have consent as a prerequisite.

1. Definition “inhabitant”:

1           "Inhabitant. One who resides actually and permanently in a given place, and has his domicile there. Ex parte
 2 Shaw, 145 U.S. 444, 12 S.Ct. 935, 36 L.Ed. 768. The words "inhabitant," "citizen," and "resident," as employed
 3 in different constitutions to define the qualifications of electors, means substantially the same thing; and, in
 4 *general, one is an inhabitant, resident, or citizen at the place where he has his domicile or home. But the
 5 terms "resident" and "inhabitant" have also been held not synonymous, the latter implying a more fixed and
 6 permanent abode than the former, and importing privileges and duties to which a mere resident would not be
 7 subject. A corporation can be an inhabitant only in the state of its incorporation. Sperry Products v.

 9 [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 782]

10 2. Definition of "abode":

11           "Abode. One's home; habitation; place of dwelling; or residence. Ordinarily means "domicile." Living place
 12 impermanent in character. Fowler v. Fowler, 156 Fla. 316, 22 So.2d. 817, 818. The place where a person
 13 dwells. In re Erickson, 18 N.J.Misc. 5, 10 A.2d. 142, 146. Residence of a legal voter. Pope v. Board of Election
 14 Com'rs, 370 Ill. 196, 18 N.E.2d. 214, 216. Fixed place of residence for the time being. Augustus Co., for Use of 15 Bourgeois v. Manzella, 19 N.J.Misc. 29, 17 A.2d. 68, 70. For service of process, one's fixed place of residence
 16 for the time being; his "usual place of abode." Fed.R. Civil P.4. Kurilla v. Roth, 132 N.J.L. 213, 38 A.2d.
 17 862,864.

18           See Domicile; Residence. General abode. See Residence."
 19 [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 7]

20 So to say that a "residence" is "A factual place of abode" in the definition of "residence" means one's CHOSEN place of 21 domicile. And to say that "It requires only bodily presence as an inhabitant of a place" in the definition of "residence"
 22 ALSO implies domicile and therefore requires consent, because an "inhabitant" is someone who is "domiciled" in a place.

23 The following authorities clarify that "residence", and especially in taxing statutes, is usually associated with 24 CONSTITUTIONAL but not STATUTORY alienage or "alien" status and excludes those who are nationals of the country.

25           The reasons for not allowing to other aliens exemption 'from the jurisdiction of the country in which they are
 26 *found' were stated as follows: When private individuals of one nation [states of the Unions are "nations"
 27 under the law of nations] spread themselves through another as business or caprice may direct, mingling
 28 indiscriminately with the inhabitants of that other, or when merchant vessels enter for the purposes of trade,
 29 it would be obviously inconvenient and dangerous to society, and would subject the laws to continual 30 infraction, and the government to degradation, if such individuals or merchants did not owe temporary and 31 local allegiance, and were not amenable to the jurisdiction of the country. Nor can the foreign sovereign have 32 any motive for wishing such exemption. His subjects thus passing into foreign countries are not employed by 33 him, nor are they engaged in national pursuits. Consequently, there are powerful motives for not exempting
 34 persons of this description from the jurisdiction of the country in which they are found, and no one motive for
 35 *requiring it. The implied license, therefore, under which they enter, can never be construed to grant such 36 exemption.' 7 Cranch, 144.

37           In short, the judgment in the case of The Exchange declared, as incontrovertible principles, that the jurisdiction
 38 of every nation within its own territory is exclusive and absolute, and is susceptible of no limitation not imposed
 39 by the nation itself; that all exceptions to its full and absolute territorial jurisdiction must be traced up to its
 40 own consent, express or implied; that upon its consent to cede, or to waive the exercise of, a part of its
 41 territorial jurisdiction, rest the exemptions from that jurisdiction of foreign sovereigns or their armies entering
 42 *its territory with its permission, and of their foreign ministers and public ships of war; and that the implied
 43 license, under which private individuals of another nation enter the territory and mingle indiscriminately
 44 with its inhabitants, for purposes of business or pleasure, can never be construed to grant to them an
 45 exemption from the jurisdiction of the country in which they are found. See, also, Carlisle v. U.S. (1872) 16
 46 Wall. 147, 155; Radich v. Hutchins (1877) 95 U.S. 210; Wildenhuis' Case (1887) 120 U.S. 1, 7 Sup.Ct. 385;

50           "Residents, as distinguished from citizens, are aliens who are permitted to take up a permanent abode in the
 51 *country. Being bound to the society by reason of their dwelling in it, they are subject to its laws so long as 52 they remain there, and, being protected by it, they must defend it, although they do not enjoy all the rights of 53 citizens. They have only certain privileges which the law, or custom, gives them. Permanent residents are
 54 those who have been given the right of perpetual residence. They are a sort of citizen of a less privileged 55 character, and are subject to the society without enjoying all its advantages. Their children succeed to their 56 status; for the right of perpetual residence given them by the State passes to their children."
 57 [The Law of Nations, Vattel, Book 1, Chapter 19, Section 213, p. 87]

1 We wish to clarify that those who are domiciled within the exclusive jurisdiction of a CONSTITUTIONAL but not
 2 STATUTORY "State" relative to federal law and who were born somewhere within the country where the "State" is
 3 located are all the following in relation to the national government. This status, by the way, is the status of the AVERAGE
 4 American:

- 5 1. "Domiciled" but not "resident" within federal STATUTORY law.
- 6 2. Have no "residence" under federal STATUTORY law. Only statutory "aliens" can have a "residence".
- 7 3. STATUTORY "nationals" per 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21).
- 8 4. STATUTORY "non-resident non-persons".
- 9 5. Legislatively but not Constitutional "foreign nationals".
- 10 6. Not STATUTORY:
  - 11 6.1. "nationals and citizens of the United States** at birth" per 8 U.S.C. §1401
  - 12 6.2. "citizens of the United States**" per 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1(c), and 26 U.S.C. §3121(e) or any other federal law.

13 It therefore appears to us that the only occasion where "domicile" or "residence" are NOT equivalent is in the case of those 14 who are constitutional but not statutory aliens of the place they are in. Otherwise, they are equivalent. The implication is 15 that constitutional aliens do not need to consent to the civil laws of the place they are in because they are "privileged",
 16 whereas nationals born there do. This appears to violate the notion of equal protection, which may explain why the legal 17 dictionary was so terse in their definition of residence: because they don't want to admit that courts routinely treat people
 18 unequally and in violation of the requirement for equal protection.

19 Below is the ONLY definition of "residence" found anywhere in the Internal Revenue Code. This definition is entirely
 20 consistent with the above. The definition does not begin with qualifying language such as "for the purposes of this section"
 21 or "for the purposes of this chapter". Therefore, it is a universal definition that applies throughout the Internal Revenue
 22 Code and Treasury Regulations. Note also that the definition is provided ONLY in the context of an "alien". Therefore,
 23 "citizens" or "nationals" cannot have a "residence". This is VERY important and is completely consistent with the fact that
 24 the only kind of "resident" defined anywhere in the Internal Revenue Code (see 26 U.S.C. §7701\(b\)\(1\)\(A\)) is an "alien":

25 Title 26: Internal Revenue
 26 PART 1—INCOME TAXES
 27 nonresident alien individuals
 28 § 1.871-2 Determining residence of alien individuals.

29 (b) Residence defined.

30 An alien actually present in the United States who is not a mere transient or sojourner is a resident of the
 31 United States for purposes of the income tax. Whether he is a transient is determined by his intentions with 32 regard to the length and nature of his stay. A mere floating intention, indefinite as to time, to return to another
 33 country is not sufficient to constitute him a transient. If he lives in the United States and has no definite 34 *intention as to his stay, he is a resident. One who comes to the United States for a definite purpose which in 35 its nature may be promptly accomplished is a transient; but, if his purpose is of such a nature that an
 36 extended stay may be necessary for its accomplishment, and to that end the alien makes his home temporarily
 37 in the United States, he becomes a resident, though it may be his intention at all times to return to his domicile*
 38 abroad when the purpose for which he came has been consummated or abandoned. An alien whose stay in the 39 United States is limited to a definite period by the immigration laws is not a resident of the United States within 40 the meaning of this section, in the absence of exceptional circumstances.

41 The phrase "definite purpose" is important in the definition of "residence" above. Those who have a definite purpose
 42 because of their eternal covenant with God and their contractual relationship to Him described in the Bible and who know
 43 they are only here temporarily can only be classified as "transients" above. This explains why our rulers in government
 44 want to get God out of the schools and out of public life: so that the sheep will have no purpose in life other than to serve
 45 them and waste themselves away in vain and sinful material pursuits.

46 "Then I hated all my labor in which I had toiled under the sun, because I must leave it to the man who will come
 47 *after me. And who knows whether he will be wise or a fool? Yet he will rule over all my labor in which I
 48 toiled and in which I have shown myself wise under the sun. This also is vanity. Therefore I turned my heart*
 49 *and despaired of all the labor in which I had toiled under the sun. For there is a man whose labor is with
 50 wisdom, knowledge, and skill; yet he must leave his heritage to a man who has not labored for it. This also is
 51 vanity and a great evil. For what has man for all his labor, and for the striving of his heart with which he has*
 52 toiled under the sun? For all his days are sorrowful, and his work burdensome; even in the night his heart takes 53 no rest. This also is vanity."
 54 [Eccl. 2:18-23, Bible, NKJV]

1 Only you, the Sovereign, can determine your "intention" in the context of "residence". Notice the words "definite
2 purpose", "transient" and "temporary" in the definition of "residence" above are nowhere defined in the law, which means
3 that you, and not your public servants, define them. If you do not intend to remain in the "United States", which is defined
4 as federal territory in 26 U.S.C. §7701\(a\)\(9\) and (a)(10) and 4 U.S.C. §110(d) and not expanded elsewhere in Subtitle A to
5 include any other place, then you can't be counted as a "resident", even if you are in fact an "alien". The government
6 cannot determine your intention for you. An intention that is not voluntary is not an intention, but simply a reaction to 7 unjust external authority. This is the basis for why the Supreme Court said:

8 "The citizen cannot complain [about the laws or the tax system], because he has voluntarily submitted
9 himself to such a form of government. He owes allegiance to the two departments, so to speak, and within 10 their respective spheres must pay the penalties which each exacts for disobedience to its laws. In return, he can 11 demand protection from each within its own jurisdiction."
12 United States v. Cruikshank, [92 U.S. 542 (1875) (emphasis added)]

13 The California Election Code, Section 349 further clarifies the distinctions between "domicile" and "residence" as follow:

14 California Election Code, section 349:

15 349. (a) "Residence" for voting purposes means a person's domicile.

16 (b) The domicile of a person is that place in which his or her habitation is fixed, wherein the person has the 17 intention of remaining, and to which, whenever he or she is absent, the person has the intention of returning. At 18 a given time, a person may have only one domicile.

19 (c) The residence of a person is that place in which the person's habitation is fixed for some period of time,
20 but wherein he or she does not have the intention of remaining. At a given time, a person may have more than 21 one residence.

22 The above definition is consistent with the analysis earlier in this section, but don't make the false assumption that the 23 above definitions apply within income tax codes, because they DON'T. Only statutory "citizens" who have a domicile
24 within the forum can be the subject of the above statute relating to voting and elections, while the Internal Revenue Code,
25 Subtitle A applies exclusively to privileged aliens who have a domicile or tax home on federal territory: two 26 COMPLETELY different audiences of people, for which the terms are NOT interchangeable. A "residence" in the I.R.C. is 27 the temporary abode of a privileged alien, while a "residence" in the election code is the temporary abode of a non-
28 privileged Sovereign American National. The worst mistake that you can make as a person born in your country is to
29 believe or think that laws written only for "aliens" or "resident aliens" apply to you. The only types of persons the federal 30 government can write laws for in a state of the Union, in fact, are Constitutional but not statutory aliens and not those born
31 there:

32 In accord with ancient principles of the international law of nation-states, the Court in The Chinese Exclusion
33 Case, 130 U.S. 581, 609 (1889), and in Fong Yue Ting v. United States, 149 U.S. 698 (1893), held broadly, as 34 the Government describes it, Brief for Appellants 20, that the power to exclude aliens is "inherent in 35 sovereignty, necessary for maintaining normal international relations and defending the country against
36 foreign encroachments and dangers - a power to be exercised exclusively by the political branches of 37 government . . . ." Since that time, the Court's general reaffirmations of this principle have [408 U.S. 753,
38 766] been legion. 6 The Court without exception has sustained Congress' "plenary power to make rules for 39 the admission of aliens and to exclude those who possess those characteristics which Congress has 40 forbidden." Boutilier v. Immigration and Naturalization Service, 387 U.S. 118, 123 (1967). "[O]ver no
41 conceivable subject is the legislative power of Congress more complete than it is over" the admission of

43 [Kleindienst v. Mandel, 408 U.S. 753 (1972)]

44 If you are born in a state of the Union and have a domicile there and not on federal territory, federal laws CANNOT and 45 DO NOT apply to you. The only exception is if you contract away your rights and sovereignty by pursuing a federal 46 government benefit, such as Social Security, Medicare, federal employment, etc. Otherwise, We the People are Sovereign
47 over their public servants:

48 "The ultimate authority ... resides in the people alone."
49 James Madison, [The Federalist, No. 46.]

1 "Whatever these Constitutions and laws validly determine to be property, it is the duty of the Federal
2 Government, through the domain of jurisdiction merely Federal, to recognize to be property.

3 "And this principle follows from the structure of the respective Governments, State and Federal, and their
4 reciprocal relations. They are different agents and trustees of the people of the several States, appointed with 5 different powers and with distinct purposes, but whose acts, within the scope of their respective jurisdictions,
6 are mutually obligatory."

7 [Dred Scott v. Sandford, 60 U.S. 393 (1856)]
8

9 "While sovereign powers are delegated to ... the government, sovereignty itself remains with the people..."
10 [Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U.S. 356 (1886)]

11 "There is no such thing as a power of inherent sovereignty in the government of the United States .... In this
12 country sovereignty resides in the people, and Congress can exercise no power which they have not, by their
13 Constitution entrusted to it: All else is withheld."
14 [Juilliard v. Greenman, 110 U.S. 421 (1884)]

15 "In the United States***, sovereignty resides in the people who act through the organs established by the 16 Constitution. [cites omitted] The Congress as the instrumentality of sovereignty is endowed with certain 17 powers to be exerted on behalf of the people in the manner and with the effect the Constitution ordains. The 18 Congress cannot invoke the sovereign power of the people to override their will as thus declared."

20 5.4.8.11.5 The TWO types of "residents": FOREIGN NATIONAL under the common law or 21 GOVERNMENT CONTRACTOR/PUBLIC OFFICER under a franchise

22 5.4.8.11.5.1 Introduction

23 As we pointed out earlier in section 5.1.4.2:

- 24 1. CONTEXT is extremely important in the legal field.
- 25 2. There are TWO main contexts in which legal terms can be used:
  - 26 2.1. CONSTITUTIONAL or common law: This law protects exclusively PRIVATE rights.
  - 27 2.2. STATUTORY: This law protects primarily PUBLIC rights and franchises.

28 CONTEXT therefore has a HUGE impact upon the meaning of the legal term "resident". Because there are two main 29 contexts in which "resident" can be used, then there are TWO possible meanings for the term.

- 30 1. CONSTITUTIONAL or COMMON LAW meaning: A foreign national domiciled within the jurisdiction of the 31 municipal government to which the term "resident" relates. One can be a "resident" under constitutional state law and 32 a "nonresident" in relation to the national government because their civil domicile is FOREIGN in relation to that 33 government. This is a product of the separation of powers doctrine.
- 34 2. STATUTORY meaning: Means a man or woman who consented to a voluntary government civil franchise and by 35 virtue of volunteering, REPRESENTS a public office exercised within and on behalf of the franchise. While on 36 official duty on behalf of the government grantor of the franchise, they assume the effective domicile of the public
37 office they are representing, which is the domicile of the government grantor, pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil 38 Procedure 17(b). For instance, the effective domicile of a state franchisee is within the granting state and the domicile
39 of a federal franchisee is within federal territory.

40 Most of the civil law passed by state and federal governments are civil franchises, such as Medicare, Social Security, driver
41 licensing, marriage licensing, professional licensing, etc. All such franchises are actually administered as FEDERAL
42 franchises, even by the state governments. Men and women domiciled within a constitutional state have a legislatively
43 foreign domicile outside of federal territory and they are therefore treated as statutory "non-resident non-persons" in
44 relation to the national government. Once they volunteer for a franchise, they consent to represent a public office within 45 that civil franchise and their civil statutory status changes from being a "non-resident non-person" to being a statutory
46 "domiciled citizen" in relation to federal territory and the national government under the specific franchise they signed up
47 for. The operation of Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 17(b) is what makes them a "domiciled citizen" because the office
48 they occupy or represent is domiciled on federal territory in the District of Columbia per 4 U.S.C. §72.

1 The legal definition of “resident” within Black’s Law Dictionary tries to hint at the above complexities with the following
2 deliberately confusing language:

3 Resident. “Any person who occupies a dwelling within the State, has a present intent to remain within the State
4 for a period of time, and manifests the genuineness of that intent by establishing an ongoing physical presence
5 within the State together with indicia that his presence within the State is something other than merely
6 transitory in nature. The word “resident” when used as a noun means a dweller, habitant or occupant; one who
7 resides or dwells in a place for a period of more, or less, duration; it signifies one having a residence, or one
8 who resides or abides. Hanson v. P.A. Peterson Home Ass’n, 35 Ill.App.2d. 134, 182 N.E.2d. 237, 240.

9 Word “resident” has many meanings in law, largely determined by statutory context in which it is used. [Kelm
10 v. Carlson, C.A.Ohio, 473, F.2d. 1267, 1271]

11 [Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1309]

12 Note the following critical statement in the above, admitting that sleight of hand is involved:

13 “Word “resident” has many meanings in law, largely determined by statutory context in which it is used.
14 [Kelm v. Carlson, C.A.Ohio, 473, F.2d. 1267, 1271”]

15 Within the above definition, the term “the State” can mean one of TWO things:

- 16 1. A PHYSICAL or GEOGRAPHICAL place. This is the meaning that ignorant people with no legal training would 17 naturally PRESUME that it means.
- 18 2. A LEGAL place, meaning a LEGAL PRESENCE as a “person” within a legal fiction called a corporation. For 19 instance, an OFFICER of a federal corporation becomes a “RESIDENT” within the corporation at the moment he or 20 she volunteers for the position and thereby REPRESENTS the corporation. Once they volunteer, Federal Rule of Civil 21 Procedure 17(b) says they become “residents” of the government grantor of the corporation, but only while
22 REPRESENTING said corporation:

23 IV. PARTIES > Rule 17.
24 Rule 17. Parties Plaintiff and Defendant; Capacity

25 (b) Capacity to Sue or be Sued.

26 Capacity to sue or be sued is determined as follows:

27 (1) for an individual who is not acting in a representative capacity, by the law of the individual's domicile;
28 (2) for a corporation, by the law under which it was organized; and

29 (3) for all other parties, by the law of the state where the court is located, except that:

30 (A) a partnership or other unincorporated association with no such capacity under that state's law may sue
31 or be sued in its common name to enforce a substantive right existing under the United States Constitution
32 or laws; and

33 (B) 28 U.S.C. §§ 754 and 959\(a\) govern the capacity of a receiver appointed by a United States court to sue
34 or be sued in a United States court.

35 [SOURCE: <http://www.law.cornell.edu/rules/frcp/Rule17.htm>]

36 All federal corporations are “created” and “organized” under federal law and therefore are considered “residents” and 37 “domestic” in relation to the national government.

38 TITLE 26 > Subtitle F > CHAPTER 79 > Sec. 7701.
39 Sec. 7701. - Definitions

40 (a) When used in this title, where not otherwise distinctly expressed or manifestly incompatible with the intent
41 thereof—

42 (4) Domestic

43 The term “domestic” when applied to a corporation or partnership means created or organized in the United
44 States or under the law of the United States or of any State unless, in the case of a partnership, the Secretary
45 provides otherwise by regulations.

46 It is also important to emphasize that ALL governments are corporations as held by the U.S. Supreme Court:

1           "Corporations are also of all grades, and made for varied objects; all governments are corporations, created
 2 by usage and common consent, or grants and charters which create a body politic for prescribed purposes;
 3 but whether they are private, local or general, in their objects, for the enjoyment of property, or the exercise
 4 of power, they are all governed by the same rules of law, as to the construction and the obligation of the
 5 instrument by which the incorporation is made. One universal rule of law protects persons and property. It is
 6 a fundamental principle of the common law of England, that the term freemen of the kingdom, includes 'all
 7 persons,' ecclesiastical and temporal, incorporate, politique or natural; it is a part of their magna charta (2
 8 Inst. 4), and is incorporated into our institutions. The persons of the members of corporations are on the same
 9 footing of protection as other persons, and their corporate property secured by the same laws which protect
 10 that of individuals. 2 Inst. 46-7. 'No man shall be taken,' 'no man shall be disseised,' without due process of law,
 11 is a principle taken from magna charta, infused into all our state constitutions, and is made inviolable by the
 12 federal government, by the amendments to the constitution."
 13 [Proprietors of Charles River Bridge v. Proprietors of Warren Bridge, 36 U.S. 420 (1837)]

14 Consequently, when one volunteers to become a public officer within a government corporation, then they acquire a
 15 "LEGAL PRESENCE" in the LEGAL AND NOT PHYSICAL PLACE called "United States" as an officer of the 16 corporation. In effect, they are "assimilated" into the corporation as a legal "person" as its representative.

17 Earlier versions of the Treasury Regulations reveal the operation of the SECOND method for creating "residents", which is 18 that of converting statutory aliens into statutory residents using government franchises:

19 26 C.F.R. §301.7701-5 Domestic, foreign, resident, and nonresident persons.

20 A domestic corporation is one organized or created in the United States, including only the States (and during the 21 periods when not States, the Territories of Alaska and Hawaii), and the District of Columbia, or under the
 22 law of the United States or of any State or Territory. A foreign corporation is one which is not domestic. A
 23 domestic corporation is a resident corporation even though it does no business and owns no property in the
 24 United States. A foreign corporation engaged in trade or business within the United States is referred to in
 25 the regulations in this chapter as a resident foreign corporation, and a foreign corporation not engaged in
 26 trade or business within the United States, as a nonresident foreign corporation. A partnership engaged in
 27 trade or business within the United States is referred to in the regulations in this chapter as a resident
 28 partnership, and a partnership not engaged in trade or business within the United States, as a nonresident
 29 partnership. Whether a partnership is to be regarded as resident or nonresident is not determined by the
 30 nationality or residence of its members or by the place in which it was created or organized.
 31 [Amended by T.D. 8813, Federal Register: February 2, 1999 (Volume 64, Number 21), Page 4967-4975]
 32 [SOURCE: <http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/CitesByTopic/Resident-26cfr301.7701-5.pdf>]

33 The key statement in the above is that the status of "resident" does NOT derive from either nationality or domicile, but 34 rather from whether one is "purposefully and consensually" engaged in the FRANCHISE ACTIVITY called a "trade or 35 business". This is consistent with the Minimum Contacts Doctrine of the U.S. Supreme Court, which requires "purposeful 36 availment" in order to waive sovereign immunity under the Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act (F.S.I.A.), 28 U.S.C.
 37 Chapter 97:

38 A foreign corporation engaged in trade or business within the United States is referred to in the regulations
 39 in this chapter as a resident foreign corporation, and a foreign corporation not engaged in trade or business
 40 within the United States, as a nonresident foreign corporation. A partnership engaged in trade or business
 41 within the United States is referred to in the regulations in this chapter as a resident partnership, and a
 42 partnership not engaged in trade or business within the United States, as a nonresident partnership. Whether a 43 partnership is to be regarded as resident or nonresident is not determined by the nationality or residence of 44 its members or by the place in which it was created or organized.

45 Incidentally, we were the first people we know of who discovered the above mechanisms and as soon as we exposed them
 46 on this website, the above regulation was quickly replaced with a temporary regulation to hide the truth. Scum bags!

47 The deliberately confusing and evasive definition of "resident" in Black's Law Dictionary is trying to obfuscate or cover up
 48 the above process by inventing new terms called "the State", which they then refuse to define because if they did, they
 49 would probably start the second American revolution and destroy the profitability of the government franchise scam that 50 subsidizes the authors within the legal profession! They are like Judas: Selling the truth for 20 pieces of silver.

51 What we want to emphasize in this section is that:

- 52 1. The word "resident" within most government civil law and ALL franchises actually means a government contractor, 53 and has nothing to do with the domicile or nationality of the parties.

2. The “residence” of the franchisee is that of the OFFICE he or she occupies as a statutory but not constitutional alien, and not his or her personal or physical location.

Finally, if you would like to know more about how VOLUNTARY participation in government franchises makes one a “resident”, see:

Government Instituted Slavery Using Franchises, Form #05.030, Sections 6.3, 8, and 11.5.2

5.4.8.11.5.2 Why was the statutory “resident” under civil franchises created instead of using a classical constitutional “citizen” or “resident” as its basis?

After looking at the “resident” government contractor franchise scam, we wondered why they had to do this instead of simply using a classical constitutional “citizen” or “resident” with a domicile within the territory protected by a specific government as the basis for franchises. After careful thought and research, we found that there are many reasons they had to do this:

1. The Constitution forbids what is called “class legislation” relating to constitutional “citizens” or “residents”. The reason is that it violates the requirement for equal protection and equal treatment that is at the heart of the Constitution. Governments are NOT allowed to treat any subset of constitutional citizens or residents differently, or confer or grant “benefits”, and by implication “franchises”, to any SUBSET of them. If participation is in fact voluntary, there is no way they could even offer franchises to constitutional citizens without favoring one group over another and thereby creating an unconstitutional “title of nobility”. Below is how the U.S. Supreme Court described this violation after the first income tax was enacted and declared UNCONSTITUTIONAL by the U.S. Supreme Court:

“The present assault upon capital is but the beginning. It will be but the stepping stone to others larger and more sweeping, until our political contest will become war of the poor against the rich; a war of growing intensity and bitterness. If the court sanctions the power of discriminating taxation, and nullifies the uniformity mandate of the constitution,” as said by one who has been all his life a student of our institutions, ‘it will mark the hour when the sure decadence of our present government will commence.’

The legislation, in the discrimination it makes, is class legislation. Whenever a distinction is made in the burdens a law imposes or in the benefits it confers on any citizens by reason of their birth, or wealth, or religion, it is class legislation, and leads inevitably to oppression and abuses, and to general unrest and disturbance in society.”
[Pollock v. Farmers’ Loan and Trust, 157 U.S. 429 (1895)]

2. It has always been unconstitutional to abuse the government’s taxing power to pay private individuals. Classical constitutional citizens and residents are inherently PRIVATE individuals.

“His [the individual’s] rights are such as existed by the law of the land long antecedent to the organization of the State, and can only be taken from him by due process of law, and in accordance with the Constitution. Among his rights are a refusal to incriminate himself, and the immunity of himself and his property from arrest or seizure except under a warrant of the law. He owes nothing to the public so long as he does not trespass upon their rights.”
[Hale v. Henkel, 201 U.S. 43 (1906)]

Hence, the government cannot lawfully create any franchise “benefit” offered to PRIVATE constitutional citizens or residents that could be used to redistribute wealth between different groups of otherwise private individuals. For instance, they cannot tax the rich to give to the poor, as the U.S. Supreme Court indicated above and hence, cannot offer franchises to constitutional citizens or residents, or tie eligibility for the franchise to the status of constitutional citizen or resident.

“A tax, in the general understanding of the term and as used in the constitution, signifies an exaction for the support of the government. The word has never thought to connote the expropriation of money from one group for the benefit of another.”
[U.S. v. Butler, 297 U.S. 1 (1936)]

"To lay with one hand the power of government on the property of the citizen, and with the other to bestow it on favored individuals.. is none the less robbery because it is done under the forms of law and is called taxation. This is not legislation. It is a decree under legislative forms."
 [Loan Association v. Topeka, 20 Wall. 655 (1874)]

"The king establishes the land by justice, But he who receives bribes [socialist handouts, government "benefits", or PLUNDER stolen from nontaxpayers] overthrows it. "
 [Prov. 29:4, Bible, NKJV]

3. It has been repeatedly held as unconstitutional for governments to establish a "poll tax". Poll taxes are fees required to be paid before one may vote in any election. Voting, in turn, is described as a "franchise". Eligibility to vote is established by the coincidence of both nationality and domicile. If domicile instead of "residence" under a franchise were used as the criteria for income tax obligation, then indirectly the income tax would act for all intents and purposes as a "poll tax" and thereby quickly be declared as unconstitutional.

We conclude that a State violates the Equal Protection Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment whenever it makes the affluence of the voter or payment of any fee an electoral standard. Voter qualifications have no relation to wealth nor to paying or not paying this or any other tax.<sup>66</sup> Our cases demonstrate that the Equal Protection Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment restrains the States from fixing voter qualifications which invidiously discriminate. Thus without questioning the power of a State to impose reasonable residence restrictions on the availability of the ballot (see Pope v. Williams, 193 U.S. 621, 24 S.Ct. 573, 48 L.Ed. 817), we held in Carrington v. Rash, 380 U.S. 89, 85 S.Ct. 775, 13 L.Ed.2d 675, that a State may not deny the opportunity to vote to a bona fide resident merely because he is a member of the armed services. 'By forbidding a soldier ever to controvert the presumption of non-residence, the Texas Constitution imposes an invidious discrimination in violation of the Fourteenth Amendment.' Id., at 96, 85 S.Ct. at 780. And see Louisiana v. United States, 380 U.S. 145, 85 S.Ct. 817. Previously we had said that neither homesite nor occupation 'affords a permissible basis for distinguishing between qualified voters within the State.' Gray v. Sanders, 372 U.S. 368, 380, 83 S.Ct. 801, 808, 9 L.Ed.2d 821. We think the same must be true of requirements of wealth or affluence or payment of a fee.

Long ago in Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U.S. 356, 370, 6 S.Ct. 1064, 1071, 30 L.Ed. 220 the Court referred to 'the political franchise of voting' as a 'fundamental political right, because preservative of all rights.' Recently in Reynolds v. Sims, 377 U.S. 533, 561—562, 84 S.Ct. 1362, 1381, 12 L.Ed.2d 506, we said, 'Undoubtedly, the right of suffrage is a fundamental matter in a free and democratic society. Especially since the right to exercise the franchise in a free and unimpaired manner is preservative of other basic civil and political rights, any alleged infringement of the right of citizens to vote must be carefully and meticulously scrutinized.' There we were considering charges that voters in one part of the State had greater representation per person in the State Legislature than voters in another part of the State. We concluded:

A citizen, a qualified voter, is no more nor no less so because he lives in the city or on the farm. This is the clear and strong command of our Constitution's Equal Protection Clause. This is an essential part of the concept of a government of laws and not men. This is at the heart of Lincoln's vision of 'government of the people, by the people, (and) for the people.' The Equal Protection Clause demands no less than substantially equal state legislative representation for all citizens, of all places as well as of all races.' Id., at 568, 84 S.Ct. at 1385.

We say the same whether the citizen, otherwise qualified to vote, has $1.50 in his pocket or nothing at all, pays the fee or fails to pay it. The principle that denies the State the right to dilute a citizen's vote on account of his economic status or other such factors by analogy bars a system which excludes those unable to pay a fee to vote or who fail to pay.

[Harper v. Virginia State Board of Elections Butts v. Harrison, 383 U.S. 663, 86 S.Ct. 1079, 16 L.Ed.2d 169, 1965 WL 130114 (1966) ]

4. Corrupt politicians through abuse of legal "words of art" had to make franchise participation at least "LOOK" like it was somehow connected to citizenship, even though technically it is not, in order to fool people into thinking that participation was mandatory by virtue of their nationality or domicile, even though in fact it is NOT. Therefore they confused the word "resident" and "residence" with a statutory status of a constitutional or classical "alien", even though they are NOT the same.

<sup>66</sup> Only a handful of States today condition the franchise on the payment of a poll tax. Alabama (Ala. Const., §§ 178, 194, and Amendments 96 and 207; Ala. Code Tit. 17, § 12) and Texas (Tex. Const., Art. 6, § 2; Vernon's Ann. Stat., Election Code, Arts. 5.02, 5.09) each impose a poll tax of $1.50. Mississippi (Miss. Const., §§ 241, 243; Miss. Code §§ 3130, 3160, 3235) has a poll tax of $2. Vermont has recently eliminated the requirement that poll taxes be paid in order to vote. Act of Feb. 23, 1966, amending Vt. Stat. Ann. Tit. 24, § 701.

5. Since you can only have a domicile in one place at a time, then if income taxes were based on domicile alone, you could only pay the tax to ONE municipal government at a time. Hence, you could NOT simultaneously owe both STATE and FEDERAL income tax at the same time. The only way to reconcile the conflict under such circumstances is to pay it to the state government only. On the other hand, if taxes are based on "residence" you could owe it to more than one government at a time if you had multiple "residences". Therefore, they HAD to base the tax upon "residence" and not "domicile" and to make "residence" a product of your consent to contract with a specific government for services or protection under a specific franchise.

5.4.8.11.5.3 How the TWO types of "RESIDENTS" are deliberately confused

As we pointed out in the previous section, there is a vested financial interest in covetous governments deliberately confusing FOREIGN NATIONALS under the common law with CONTRACTORS under government franchises. Great pains have been taken over time to confuse these two because of these strong motivations to recruit more government franchisee contractors and thus increase revenues. We will discuss these mechanisms in this section.

The first technique was already pointed out earlier in section 5.4.8.11.4, where we showed that "residence" is deliberately confused with "domicile", even though they are NOT equivalent and mutually exclusive under franchise statutes. "Residence" under the Internal Revenue Code "trade or business" franchise, for instance, means the abode of a statutory "alien" and DOES NOT include either "citizens" or even "nonresident aliens".

The second technique is to confuse the word "reside" with "residence" or "domicile". Reside simply means where one sleeps at night and has NOTHING to do with either their domicile OR their residence:

"RESIDE. Live, dwell, abide, sojourn, stay, remain, lodge. Western-Knapp Engine."

[Black's Law Dictionary, Fourth Edition, p. 1473]

You can RESIDE somewhere WITHOUT having EITHER a domicile or a residence there. Here is an example:

*There are no cases in California deciding whether a foreign corporation can "reside" in a county within the meaning of the recordation sections of the Code. There are cases, however, on the question whether a foreign corporation doing business in California can acquire a county residence within the state for the purpose of venue. The early cases held that such residence could not be acquired. These cases were explained in Bohn v. Better Biscuits, Inc., 26 Cal.App.2d. 61, 78 P.2d. 1177,2 wherein it was finally established that a foreign corporation doing business in California, having designated its principal office pursuant to Section 405 of the California Civil Code provision (passed in 1929), could acquire a county residence in the state for the purpose of venue. The court in that case construed the venue provision of Section 395 of the Code of Civil Procedure which reads as follows: "In all other cases, * * * the county in which the defendants, or some of them, reside at the commencement of the action, is the proper county for the trial of the action. * * * If none of the defendants resides in the State, * * * the action may be tried in any county which the plaintiff may designate in his complaint."*

*In relation to this section, the court held: "The plaintiff stresses the word 'reside.' It then contends that as the defendant is a foreign corporation having its principal place of business at Grand Rapids, Mich., that place is its residence and it may not be heard to claim that it resides at any other place. If by the use of the word 'reside' one means 'domicil' that contention would be sound. * * * It is not claimed that there is anything in the context showing the word 'reside' was intended to mean 'domicil.' By approved usage of the language 'reside' means: 'Live, dwell, abide, sojourn, stay, remain, lodge.' * * * By a long line of decisions it has been held that a domestic corporation resides at the place where its principal place of business is located. Walker v. Wells Fargo Bank, etc., Co., 8 Cal.2d. 447, 65 P.2d. 1299. The designation of the principal place of business of a domestic corporation is contained in its articles. Civ.Code, § 290 * * * The designation of the principal place of business of a foreign corporation in this state is contained in the statement which it is required to file in the office of the secretary of state before it may legally transact business in this state. Civ.Code, § 405 * * *. Prior to the enactment of sections 405-406a * * * a foreign corporation had no locus in this state. No statute required it to designate, by a written statement duly filed in the office of the secretary of state, the location of its principal place of business in the state. After the enactment of said sections, the principal place of business of foreign corporations as well as domestic corporations was fixed by law. When the reason is the same, the rule should be the same. Civ.Code, § 3511. It follows * * * by reason of the enactment of section 405 et seq. of the Civil Code * * * said section 395 of the Code of Civil Procedure * * * applies to persons both natural and artificial and whether the corporation is a domestic or a foreign corporation." Bohn v. Better Biscuits, Inc., 26 Cal.App.2d. 61, 64, 65, 78 P.2d. 1177, 1179, 80 P.2d. 484.*

[Western-Knapp Engineering Co. v. Gilbank, 129 F.2d. 135 (9th Cir., 1942)]

1 Keep in mind the following important facts about the above case:

- 2 1. "Reside" is where the corporation physically does business, not the place of its civil domicile.
- 3 2. One can "do business" in a geographic region without having a civil domicile there.
- 4 3. The corporation is a creation of and therefore component LEGALLY WITHIN the government that granted it,
- 5 regardless of where it is physically located or where it does business. This is reflected in Federal Rule of Civil
- 6 Procedure 17(b).
- 7 4. Those "doing business" in a specific geographical region are "deemed to be LEGALLY present" within the forum or
- 8 civil laws they are doing business in, regardless of whether they have offices in that region under:
  - 9 4.1. The Minimum Contacts Doctrine in International Shoe Co. v. Washington, 326 U.S. 310 (1945).
  - 10 4.2. The Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act (F.S.I.A.), 28 U.S.C. Chapter 97.
- 11 5. The fact that one "does business" within a specific region does not necessarily mean that you are "purposefully
- 12 availing yourself" under the laws of that region, and especially if the parties doing business have a contract between
- 13 them REMOVING the government and its protections from their CIVIL relationship. How might this be done? They
- 14 could have a "binding arbitration" agreement or contract that relegates all disputes to a private third party, for instance.
- 15 6. The civil statutory laws of a place are a social compact, and it would constitute eminent domain without compensation
- 16 over those who have neither a "domicile" nor a "residence" in the region to impose or enforce these laws against them.
- 17 That is the foundation of the Minimum Contacts Doctrine itself, in fact.
- 18 7. One can be legally present UNDER THE COMMON LAW while being NOT PRESENT under civil statutory law.
- 19 That would be the condition of a nonresident foreign corporation such as the one in the case above.
- 20 8. "Residing" somewhere implies an effective legal "residence" under the Minimum Contacts Doctrine ONLY if one is
- 21 ALSO "doing business", and ONLY for that specific transaction and for NO other purpose or franchise.

22 5.4.8.11.5.4 PRACTICAL EXAMPLE 1: Opening a bank account

23 Let us give you a practical business example of this phenomenon in action whereby a person becomes a "resident" from a

24 legal perspective by exercising their right to contract. You want to open a checking account at a bank. You go to the bank

25 to open the account. The clerk presents you with an agreement that you must sign before you open the account. If you

26 won't sign the agreement, then the clerk will tell you that they can't open an account for you. Before you sign the account

27 agreement, the bank doesn't know anything about you and you don't have an account there, so you are the equivalent of an

28 "alien". An "alien" is someone the bank will not recognize or interact with or help. They can only lawfully help

29 "customers", not "aliens". After you exercise your right to contract by signing the bank account agreement, then you now

30 become a "resident" of the bank. You are a "resident" because:

- 31 1. You are a "thing" that they can now "identify" in their computer system and their records because you have an
- 32 "account" there. A "res" is legally defined as a "thing". They now know your name and "account number" and will
- 33 recognize you when you walk in the door to ask for help. Hence "res-ident".
- 34 2. You are the "person" described in their account agreement. Before you signed it, you were a "foreigner" not subject to
- 35 it.
- 36 3. They issued you an ATM card and a PIN so you can control and manage your "account". These things that they issued
- 37 you are the "privileges" associated with being party to the account agreement. No one who is not party to such an
- 38 agreement can avail themselves of such "privileges".
- 39 4. The account agreement gives you the "privilege" to demand "services" from the bank of one kind or another. The
- 40 legal requirement for the bank to perform these "services" creates the legal equivalent of "agency" on their part in
- 41 doing what you want them to do. In effect, you have "hired" them to perform a "service" that you want and need.
- 42 5. The account agreement gives the bank the legal right to demand certain behaviors out of you of one kind or another.
- 43 For instance, you must pay all account fees and not overdraw your account and maintain a certain minimum balance.
- 44 The legal requirement to perform these behaviors creates the legal equivalent of "agency" on your part in respect to the
- 45 bank.
- 46 6. The legal obligations created by the account agreement give the two parties to it legal jurisdiction over each other
- 47 defined by the agreement or contract itself. The contract fixes the legal relations between the parties. If either party
- 48 violates the agreement, then the other party has legal recourse to sue for exceeding the bounds of the "contractual
- 49 agency" created by the agreement. Any litigation that results must be undertaken consistent with what the agreement
- 50 authorizes and in a mode or "forum" (e.g. court) that the agreement specifies.

51 5.4.8.11.5.5 PRACTICAL EXAMPLE 2: Creation of the "resident" under a government civil franchise

When two parties execute a franchise agreement or contract between them, they are engaging in “commerce”. The practical consequences of the franchise agreement are the following:

1. The main source of jurisdiction for the government is over commerce.
2. The mutual consideration passing between the parties provides the nexus for government jurisdiction over the transaction.
3. If the exchange involves a government franchise offered by the national government:
  - 3.1. An “alienation” of private rights has occurred. This alienation:
    - 3.1.1. Turns formerly private rights into public rights.
    - 3.1.2. Accomplishes the equivalent of a “donation” of private property to a public use, public purpose, and public office in order to procure the “benefits” of the franchise by the former owner of the property.
  - 3.2. Parties to the franchise agreement cannot engage in a franchise without implicitly surrendering governance over disputes to the government granting the franchise. In that sense, their effective domicile shifts to the location of the seat of the government granting the franchise.
  - 3.3. The parties to the franchise agreement mutually and implicitly surrender their sovereign immunity under the Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act (F.S.I.A.), 28 U.S.C. §1605\(a\)\(2\), which says that commerce within the legislative jurisdiction of the “United States” constitutes constructive consent to be sued in the courts of the United States. This is discussed in more detail in the previous section.

Another surprising result of engaging in franchises and public “benefits” that most people overlook is that the commerce it represents, in fact, can have the practical effect of making an “alien” or “nonresident” party into a “resident” for the purposes of statutory jurisdiction. Here is the proof:

In International Shoe Co. v. Washington, 326 U.S. 310 (1945), the Supreme Court held that a court may exercise personal jurisdiction over a defendant consistent with due process only if he or she has "certain minimum contacts" with the relevant forum "such that the maintenance of the suit does not offend 'traditional notions of fair play and substantial justice.'" Id. at 316 (quoting Milliken v. Meyer, 311 U.S. 457, 463 (1940)). Unless a defendant's contacts with a forum are so substantial, continuous, and systematic that the defendant can be deemed to be "present" in that forum for all purposes, a forum may exercise only "specific" jurisdiction - that is, jurisdiction based on the relationship between the defendant's forum contacts and the plaintiff's claim. The parties agree that only specific jurisdiction is at issue in this case.

In this circuit, we analyze specific jurisdiction according to a three-prong test:

- (1) The non-resident defendant must purposefully direct his activities or consummate some transaction with the forum or resident thereof; or perform some act by which he purposefully avails himself of the privilege of conducting activities in the forum, thereby invoking the benefits and protections of its laws;
- (2) the claim must be one which arises out of or relates to the defendant's forum-related activities; and
- (3) the exercise of jurisdiction must comport with fair play and substantial justice, i.e. it must be reasonable.

Schwarzenegger v. Fred Martin Motor Co., 374 F.3d. 797, 802 (9th Cir. 2004) (quoting Lake v. Lake, 817 F.2d. 1416, 1421 (9th Cir. 1987)). The first prong is determinative in this case. We have sometimes referred to it, in shorthand fashion, as the "purposeful availment" prong. Schwarzenegger, 374 F.3d. at 802. Despite its label, this prong includes both purposeful availment and purposeful direction. It may be satisfied by purposeful availment of the privilege of doing business in the forum; by purposeful direction of activities at the forum; or by some combination thereof.

We have typically treated "purposeful availment" somewhat differently in tort and contract cases. In tort cases, we typically inquire whether a defendant "purposefully direct[s] his activities" at the forum state, applying an "effects" test that focuses on the forum in which the defendant's actions were felt, whether or not the actions themselves occurred within the forum. See Schwarzenegger, 374 F.3d. at 803 (citing Calder v. Jones, 465 U.S. 783, 789-90 (1984)). By contrast, in contract cases, we typically inquire whether a defendant "purposefully avails itself of the privilege of conducting activities" or "consummate[s] [a] transaction" in the forum, focusing on activities such as delivering goods or executing a contract. See Schwarzenegger, 374 F.3d. at 802. However, this case is neither a tort nor a contract case. Rather, it is a case in which Yahoo! argues, based on the First Amendment, that the French court's interim orders are unenforceable by an American court. [Yahoo! Inc. v. La. Ligue Contre Le Racisme Et L'Antisemitisme, 433 F.3d. 1199 \(9th Cir. 01/12/2006\) ]

Legal treatises on domicile also confirm that those who are “wards” or “dependents” of the state or the government assume the same domicile or “residence” as their care giver. The practical effect of this is that by participating in government franchises, we become “wards” of the government in receipt of welfare payments such as Social Security, Medicare, etc. As “wards” under “guardianship” of the government, we assume the same domicile as the government who is paying U.S.

1 the “benefits”, which means the District of Columbia. Our domicile is whatever the government, meaning the “court”
2 wants it to be for their convenience:

3 PARTICULAR PERSONS
4 § 24. Wards

5 While it appears that an infant ward's domicile or residence ordinarily follows that of the guardian it does
6 not necessarily do so,<sup>67</sup> as so a guardian has been held to have no power to control an infant's domicile as
7 against her mother.<sup>68</sup> Where a guardian is permitted to remove the child to a new location, the child will not be
8 held to have acquired a new domicile if the guardian's authority does not extend to fixing the child's domicile.
9 Domicile of a child who is a ward of the court is the location of the court.<sup>69</sup>

10 Since a ward is not sui juris, he cannot change his domicile by removal,<sup>70</sup> nor or does the removal of the ward
11 to another state or county by relatives or friends, affect his domicile.<sup>71</sup> Absent an express indication by the 12 court, the authority of one having temporary control of a child to fix the child's domicile is ascertained by 13 interpreting the court's orders.<sup>72</sup>

16 This change in domicile of those who participate in government franchises and thereby become “wards” of the government
17 is also consistent with the U.S. Supreme Court’s view of the government’s relationship to those who participate in 18 government franchises. It calls the government a “parens patriae” in relation to them!:

19 “The proposition is that the United States, as the grantor of the franchises of the company [a corporation, in 20 this case], the author of its charter, and the donor of lands, rights, and privileges of immense value, and as 21 parens patriae, is a trustee, invested with power to enforce the proper use of the property and franchises
22 granted for the benefit of the public.”
23 [U.S. v. Union Pac. R. Co., 98 U.S. 569 (1878)]

24

30 One Congressman during the debates over the proposal of the Social Security Act in 1933 criticized the very adverse effects
31 of the franchise upon people’s rights, including that upon the domicile of those who participate, when he said:

32 Mr. Logan: “...Natural laws cannot be created, repealed, or modified by legislation. Congress should know
33 there are many things which it cannot do...”

34 “It is now proposed to make the Federal Government the guardian of its citizens. If that should be done, the 35 Nation soon must perish. There can only be a free nation when the people themselves are free and administer
36 the government which they have set up to protect their rights. Where the general government must provide 37 work, and incidentally food and clothing for its citizens, freedom and individuality will be destroyed and 38 eventually the citizens will become serfs to the general government...”

TITLE 26 > Subtitle F > CHAPTER 79 > § 7701
§ 7701. Definitions

(a) When used in this title, where not otherwise distinctly expressed or manifestly incompatible with the intent thereof—

(39) Persons residing outside United States

If any citizen or resident of the United States does not reside in (and is not found in) any United States judicial district, such citizen or resident shall be treated as residing [“domiciled”] in the District of Columbia for purposes of any provision of this title relating to—

(A) jurisdiction of courts, or
 (B) enforcement of summons.

TITLE 26 > Subtitle F > CHAPTER 76 > Subchapter A > § 7408
§7408. Action to enjoin promoters of abusive tax shelters, etc.

(d) Citizens and residents outside the United States If any citizen or resident of the United States does not reside in, and does not have his principal place of business in, any United States judicial district, such citizen or resident shall be treated for purposes of this section as residing in the District of Columbia.

Since your Constitutional right to contract is unlimited, then you can have as many temporary and transient “residences” as you like, but you can have only one legal “domicile”, because your allegiance must be undivided or you will have a conflict of interest and allegiance.

“No one can serve two masters; for either he will hate the one and love the other, or else he will be loyal to the one and despise the other. You cannot serve God and mammon.”
 [Matt. 6:23-25, Bible, NKJV]

Now do you understand the reasoning behind the following maxim of law? You become a “subject” and a “resident” under the jurisdiction of a government’s civil law by demanding its protection! If you want to “fire” the government as your “protector”, you MUST quit demanding anything from it by filling out government forms or participating in its franchises:

Protectio trahit subjectionem, subjectio projectionem.
 Protection draws to it subjection, subjection, protection. Co. Litt. 65.
 [Bouvier’s Maxims of Law, 1856;
 SOURCE: <http://famguardian.org/Publications/BouvierMaximsOfLaw/BouviereMaxims.htm>]

Remember, “resident” is a combination of two word roots: “res”, which is legally defined as a “thing”, and “ident”, which stands for “identified”.

Res. Lat. The subject matter of a trust or will. In the civil law, a thing; an object. As a term of the law, this word has a very wide and extensive signification, including not only things which are objects of property, but also such as are not capable of individual ownership. And in old English law it is said to have a general import, comprehending both corporeal and incorporeal things of whatever kind, nature, or species. By “res,” according to the modern civilians, is meant everything that may form an object of rights, in opposition to “persona,” which is regarded as a subject of rights. “Res,” therefore, in its general meaning, comprises actions of all kinds; while in its restricted sense it comprehends every object of right, except actions. This has reference to the fundamental division of the Institutes that all law relates either to persons, to things, or to actions.

Res is everything that may form an object of rights and includes an object, subject-matter or status. In re Riggle’s Will, 11 A.D.2d. 51 205 N.Y.S.2d. 19, 21, 22. The term is particularly applied to an object, subject-matter, or status, considered as the defendant in an action, or as an object against which, directly, proceedings are taken. Thus, in a prize case, the captured vessel is “the res”; and proceedings of this character are said to be in rem. (See In personam; In Rem.) “Res” may also denote the action or proceeding, as when a cause, which is not between adversary parties, is entitled “In re _____”.
 [Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, pp. 1304-1306]

The “object, subject matter, or status” they are talking about above is the ALL CAPS incarnation of your legal birth name and the government-issued number, usually an SSN, that is associated with it. Those two things constitute the “straw man” or “trust” or “res” which you implicitly agree to represent at the time you sign up for any franchise, benefit, or “public right”. When the government attacks someone for a tax liability or a debt, they don’t attack you as a private person, but rather the collection of rights that attach to the ALL CAPS trust name and associated Social Security Number trust. They

1 start by placing a lien on the number, which actually is THEIR number and not YOURS. That number associates
2 PRIVATE property with PUBLIC TRUST property. Merriam-Webster's Dictionary definition 5(b) for "Trust" is "office":

3 "Trust: 5 a (1): a charge or duty imposed in faith or confidence or as a condition of some relationship
4 (2): something committed or entrusted to one to be used or cared for in the interest of another b : responsible
5 charge or office c : CARE, CUSTODY <the child committed to her trust.>"
6 [Merriam-Webster's 11th Collegiate Dictionary]

7 20 C.F.R. §422.103(d) says the number is THEIR property. They can lien their property, which is public property in your
8 temporary use and custody as a "trustee" of the "public trust". Everything that number is connected to acts as private
9 property donated temporarily to a public use to procure the "benefits" of the franchise. It is otherwise illegal to mix public
10 property, such as the Social Security Number, with private property, because that would constitute illegal and criminal
11 embezzlement in violation of 18 U.S.C. §912.

12 "Men are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable rights, -life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness;'
13 and to 'secure,' not grant or create, these rights, governments are instituted. That property [or income] which a
14 man has honestly acquired he retains full control of, subject to these limitations: First, that he shall not use
15 it to his neighbor's injury, and that does not mean that he must use it for his neighbor's benefit; second,
16 that if he devotes it to a public use, he gives to the public a right to 17 control that use; and third, that whenever the public needs require, the public may take it upon 18 payment of due compensation.
19 Budd v. People of State of New York, [143 U.S. 517 (1892)]

20 Below is how the U.S. Supreme Court describes the practical effect of creating the trust and placing its "residence" or 21 "domicile" within the jurisdiction of the specific government or "state" granting the franchise:

22 "Thus, the Court has frequently held that domicile or residence, more substantial than mere presence in
23 transit or sojourn, is an adequate basis for taxation, including income, property, and death taxes. Since the
24 Fourteenth Amendment makes one a citizen of the state wherein he resides, the fact of residence creates
25 universally reciprocal duties [e.g. CONTRACTUAL DUTIES!!] of protection by the state and of allegiance
26 and support by the citizen. The latter obviously includes a duty to pay taxes, and their nature and measure is
27 largely a political matter. Of course, the situs of property may tax it regardless of the citizenship, domicile, or 28 residence of the owner, the most obvious illustration being a tax on realty laid by the state in which the realty is 29 located."
30 Miller Brothers Co. v. Maryland, [347 U.S. 340 (1954)]

31 The implication is that you cannot be sovereign if either you or the entities you voluntarily represent have a "domicile" or 32 "residence" in any man-made government or in any place other than Heaven or the Kingdom of Heaven on Earth. If you
33 choose a "domicile" or "residence" any place on earth, then you become a "subject" in relation to that place and voluntarily
34 forfeit your sovereignty. This is NOT the status you want to have! A "resident" by definition MUST therefore be within 35 the legislative jurisdiction of the government, because the government cannot lawfully write laws that will allow them to 36 recognize or act upon anything that is NOT within their legislative jurisdiction.

37 All law is prima facie territorial in nature, and can act only upon the territory under the exclusive control of the government
38 or upon its franchises, contracts, and real and chattel property, which are "property" under its management and control
39 pursuant to Article 4, Section 3, Clause 2 of the United States Constitution. The only lawful way that government laws can 40 reach beyond the territory of the sovereign who controls them is through explicit, informed, mutual consent of the 41 individual parties involved, and this field of law is called "private law".

42 "Judge Story, in his treatise on the Conflicts of Laws, lays down, as the basis upon which all reasonings on the
43 law of comity must necessarily rest, the following maxims: First 'that every nation possesses an exclusive
44 sovereignty and jurisdiction within its own territory'; secondly, 'that no state or nation can by its laws directly
45 affect or bind property out of its own territory, or bind persons not resident therein, whether they are natural
46 born subjects or others.' The learned judge then adds: 'From these two maxims or propositions there follows a
47 third, and that is that whatever force and obligation the laws of one country have in another depend solely upon
48 the laws and municipal regulation of the latter; that is to say, upon its own proper jurisdiction and polity, and
49 upon its own express or tacit consent.'" Story on Conflict of Laws §23."
50 [Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Co. v. Chambers, 73 Ohio.St. 16, 76 N.E. 91, 11 L.R.A., N.S., 1012 (1905)]

51 5.4.8.11.6 Legal presumptions about domicile

It is important also to recognize that state and federal law often establishes certain rebuttable “presumptions” about one’s “residence” as an “alien”/ “resident”. Below is an example from the Arizona Revised Statutes:

Arizona Revised Statutes
Title 43: Taxation of Income
Section 43-104 Definitions

19. "Resident" includes:

(a) Every individual who is in this state for other than a temporary or transitory purpose.

(b) Every individual who is domiciled in this state and who is outside the state for a temporary or transitory purpose. Any individual who is a resident of this state continues to be a resident even though temporarily absent from the state.

(c) Every individual who spends in the aggregate more than nine months of the taxable year within this state shall be presumed to be a resident. The presumption may be overcome by competent evidence that the individual is in the state for a temporary or transitory purpose.

The above presumption is rebuttable, and the way to rebut it is to make our intentions known:

"This right of domicile, he continues, is not established unless the person makes sufficiently known his intention of fixing there, either tacitly or by an express declaration. Vatt. Law Nat., pp. 92, 93."
[Fong Yue Ting v. United States, 149 U.S. 698 (1893)]

How do we make our “intentions” known to the protector we are nominating?:

1. By sending the following form according to the instructions:

Legal Notice of Change in Domicile/Citizenship Records and Divorce from the United States, Form #10.001
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

- By sending the state a written notification of domicile, or a Department of Motor Vehicles change of address form. Most change of address forms have a block for indicating one’s “residence”. Line out the word “residence” and replace it with “domicile” or else you will establish yourself as a privileged alien.
- Whenever we write a physical address on any especially government or financial institution form, next to the address we should write "This is NOT my domicile." This is a VERY important habit to get into that will avoid all false presumptions about your legal domicile.
- By revoking our voter registration.

We can also encourage other false presumptions by the government relating to our legal domicile based on the words we use to describe ourself. For instance, if we describe ourself as either a “citizen” or a “resident” or “inhabitant” on any government form, then we are declaring ourself to be a “domiciliary” in respect to the government who is accepting the form. Otherwise, we would be a “transient foreigner” outside of the jurisdiction of that government. This is further explained in the following two articles:

- You're not a STATUTORY "citizen" under the Internal Revenue Code, Family Guardian Fellowship:
<http://famguardian.org/Subjects/Taxes/Citizenship/NotACitizenUnderIRC.htm>
- You're not a STATUTORY "resident" under the Internal Revenue Code, Family Guardian Fellowship:
<http://famguardian.org/Subjects/Taxes/Citizenship/Resident.htm>

Within federal law, persons who are “citizens”, “residents”, or “inhabitants” are described as:

- “Individuals”. See 5 U.S.C. §552(a)(2) and 26 C.F.R. §1.1441-1(c)(3).

5 U.S.C. §552a\(2\) Records maintained on individuals

(2) the term "individual" means a citizen of the United States or an alien lawfully admitted for permanent residence ["resident"];

- “U.S. persons”. See 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(30).

TITLE 26 > Subtitle F > CHAPTER 79 > Sec. 7701.
Sec. 7701. - Definitions

(a)(30) United States person

The term "United States person" means -

(A) a citizen or resident of the United States,

(B) a domestic partnership,

(C) a domestic corporation,

(D) any estate (other than a foreign estate, within the meaning of paragraph (31)), and

(E) any trust if -

(i) a court within the United States is able to exercise primary supervision over the administration of the trust, and

(ii) one or more United States persons have the authority to control all substantial decisions of the trust.

- “domestic”. Both “domicile” and “domestic” have the root “dom” as their source. Both imply the same thing. Within the Internal Revenue Code, “domestic” is defined as follows:

TITLE 26 > Subtitle F > CHAPTER 79 > Sec. 7701.
Sec. 7701. - Definitions

(a) Definitions

(4) Domestic

The term “domestic” when applied to a corporation or partnership means created or organized in the United States or under the law of the United States or of any State unless, in the case of a partnership, the Secretary provides otherwise by regulations.

Therefore, “domestic” means “subject to the laws of the United States”. Under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 17(b), you cannot be “subject” to the laws without having a domicile in the territory where those laws apply.

Those who are “non-resident non-persons”, “nontaxpayers” and “transient foreigners” therefore cannot declare themselves as being either “citizens”, “residents”, “inhabitants”, “U.S. persons”, “individuals”, or “domestic” on any federal government form, or they forfeit their status and become “taxpayers”, “domiciliaries”, and “subjects” and tenants living on the king’s land. For an important example of how the above concept applies, examine the IRS Form W-8BEN:

<http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/Forms/IRS/IRSFormW8ben.pdf>

Block 3 is used by the applicant to declare both the entity type AND their legal domicile as well. The declaration of “domicile” is “hidden” in the word “individual”. Notice there is no block on the form for either “human being” or “transient foreigner”. The only block a human being can fill out is “individual”. 5 U.S.C. §552\(a\)\(2\) identifies an “individual” as either a “citizen” or a “resident”, and a person who is a “non-resident non-person” cannot be either, even if they are a “national” born in the country “United States*”. Therefore, the form essentially coerces the applicant into committing perjury by not providing an option to accurately describe themselves, such as a box for “transient foreigner” or “human being”. This defect is remedied in the amended version of the form available below, which adds to Block 3 an option called “transient foreigner”:

<http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/Forms/IRS/IRSFormW8BENAmendeds.pdf>

The regulations relating to "aliens" also establish the following presumptions:

1. All “aliens” are presumed to be “nonresident aliens” but this may be overcome upon presentation of proof:

Title 26: Internal Revenue
PART 1—INCOME TAXES
nonresident alien individuals
§ 1.871-4

(a) Rules of evidence. The following rules of evidence shall govern in determining whether or not an alien within the United States has acquired residence therein for purposes of the income tax.

1 (b) Nonresidence presumed. An alien by reason of his alienage, is presumed to be a nonresident alien.

2 (c) Presumption rebutted—

3 (1) Departing alien. In the case of an alien who presents himself for determination of tax liability before
4 departure from the United States, the presumption as to the alien's nonresidence may be overcome by proof--

- 5 2. An “alien” who has acquired permanent residence retains that residence until he physically departs from the “United 6 States”, which is defined as federal territory in 26 U.S.C. §7701\(a\)\(9\) and (a)(10) and 4 U.S.C. §110(d) and is not
7 expressly expanded anywhere else in the I.R.C. to include any other place. The purpose for this presumption is to 8 perpetuate the jurisdiction to tax aliens:

9 Title 26: Internal Revenue
10 PART 1—INCOME TAXES
11 nonresident alien individuals
12 § 1.871-5 Loss of residence by an alien.

13 An alien who has acquired residence in the United States retains his status as a resident until he abandons the 14 same and actually departs from the United States. An intention to change his residence does not change his 15 status as a resident alien to that of a nonresident alien. Thus, an alien who has acquired a residence in the 16 United States is taxable as a resident for the remainder of his stay in the United States.

17 If you are state domiciled state national and a “non-resident non-person”, don’t let the above concern you, because you are 18 not an “alien” as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701\(b\)\(1\)\(A\), but rather an “non-resident non-person”. If you are also engaged in 19 a public office, you become a “nonresident alien” as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701\(b\)\(1\)\(B\).

20 5.4.8.11.7 Effect of domicile on citizenship and synonyms for domicile

21 Now let’s summarize what we have just learned so far to show graphically the effect that one’s choice of domicile has on 22 their citizenship status. Below are some authorities upon which we will base our summary and analysis.

23 “Domicile and citizen are synonymous in federal courts, Earley v. Hershey Transit Co., D.C. Pa., 55 F.Supp.
24 981, 982; inhabitant, resident and citizen are synonymous, Standard Stoker Co. v. Lower, D.C.Md., 46 F.2d.
25 678, 683.”
26 [Black’s Law Dictionary, Fourth Edition, p. 311]

27
28 “The term ‘citizen’, as used in the Judiciary Act with reference to the jurisdiction of the federal courts, is 29 substantially synonymous with the term ‘domicile’. Delaware, L. & W.R. Co. v. Petrowsky, 2 Cir., 250 F. 554, 30 557.”
31 [Earley v. Hershey Transit Co., 55 F.Supp. 981, D.C.PA. (1944)]

32
33 The terms “citizen” and “citizenship” are distinguishable from “resident” or “inhabitant.” Jeffcott v. Donovan,
34 C.C.A.Ariz., 135 F.2d. 213, 214; and from “domicile,” Wheeler v. Burgess, 263 Ky. 693, 93 S.W.2d. 351, 354;
35 First Carolinas Joint Stock Land Bank of Columbia v. New York Title & Mortgage Co., D.C.S.C., 59 F.2d. 350,
36 351. The words “citizen” and citizenship,” however, usually include the idea of domicile, Delaware, L. & W.R.
37 Co. v. Petrowsky, C.C.A.N.Y., 250 F. 554, 557; citizen inhabitant and resident often synonymous, Jonesboro
38 Trust Co. v. Nutt, 118 Ark. 368, 176 S.W. 322, 324; Edgewater Realty Co. v. Tennessee Coal, Iron & Railroad
39 Co., D.C.Md., 49 F.Supp. 807, 809; and citizenship and domicile are often synonymous. Messick v. Southern 40 Pa. Bus Co., D.C.Pa., 59 F.Supp. 799, 800.
41 [Black’s Law Dictionary, Fourth Edition, p. 310]

42 We will now present a table based on the above consistent with the entire content of the document which you can use for all
43 future reference. The term “Domestic National” in the table below refers to a person born in any state of the Union, or in a
44 territory or possession of the United States:

Table 5-36: Effect of domicile on citizenship status

Description	CONDITION

NOTES:

1. “United States” is defined as federal territory within 26 U.S.C. §§7701\(a\)\(9\) and (a)(10), 7701\(a\)\(39\), and 7408\(d\), and 4 U.S.C. §110\(d\). It does not include any portion of a Constitutional state of the Union.
2. The “District of Columbia” is defined as a federal corporation but not a physical place, a “body politic”, or a de jure “government” within the District of Columbia Act of 1871, 16 Stat. 419, 426, Sec. 34. See: Corporatization and Privatization of the Government, Form #05.024; <http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>.
3. “nationals” of the United States*** of America who are domiciled outside of federal jurisdiction, either in a state of the Union or a foreign country, are “nationals” but not “citizens” under federal law. They also qualify as “non-resident non-persons”. They become “nonresident aliens” under 26 U.S.C. §7701\(b\)\(1\)\(B\) if they CONSENSUALLY and LAWFULLY engage in a public office in the national government. See sections 4.11.2 earlier for details.
4. Temporary domicile in the middle column on the right must meet the requirements of the “Presence test” documented in IRS publications.
5. District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, and the territories and insular possessions of the United States in the above table.

6. The term “individual” as used on the IRS Form 1040 means an “alien” engaged in a “trade or business”. All “taxpayers” are “aliens” engaged in a “trade or business”. This is confirmed by 26 C.F.R. §1.1441-1(c)(3), 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1(a)(2)(ii), and 5 U.S.C. §552a(a)(2). Statutory “U.S. citizens” as defined in 8 U.S.C. §1401 are not “individuals” unless temporarily abroad pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §911 and subject to an income tax treaty with a foreign country. In that capacity, statutory “U.S. citizens” interface to the I.R.C. as “aliens” rather than “U.S. citizens” through the tax treaty.

Based on the above table, we can see that when a person within any government identifies you as a “citizen”, they presuppose that you maintain a “domicile” within their jurisdiction. The same thing goes for the term “inhabitant”, which also describes a person with a domicile within the jurisdiction of the local government where he lives. Note the use of the phrase “reside actually and permanently in a given place and has a domicile there” in the definition of inhabitant:

“Inhabitant. One who reside actually and permanently in a given place, and has his domicile there. Ex parte Shaw, 145 U.S. 444, 12 S.Ct. 935, 36 L.Ed. 768.*

The words “inhabitant,” “citizen,” and “resident,” as employed in different constitutions to define the qualifications of electors, means substantially the same thing; and, in general, one is an inhabitant, resident, or citizen at the place where he has his domicile or home. But the terms “resident” and “inhabitant” have also been held not synonymous, the latter implying a more fixed and permanent abode than the former, and importing privileges and duties to which a mere resident would not be subject. A corporation can be an inhabitant only in the state of its incorporation. Sperry Products v. Association of American Railroads, C.C.A.N.Y., 132 F.2d. 408, 411. See also Domicile; Residence.” [Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 782]

The legal dictionary is careful to disguise the requirement for “domicile” in their definition of “resident”. To admit that domicile was a prerequisite for being a “resident”, they would open the door for a mass exodus of the tax system by most people, so they beat around the bush. For instance, here is the definition of “resident” from Black’s Law Dictionary:

Resident. “Any person who occupies a dwelling within the State, has a present intent to remain within the State for a period of time, and manifests the genuineness of that intent by establishing an ongoing physical presence within the State together with indicia that his presence within the State is something other than merely transitory in nature. The word “resident” when used as a noun means a dweller, habitant or occupant; one who resides or dwells in a place for a period of more, or less, duration; it signifies one having a residence, or one who resides or abides. Hanson v. P.A. Peterson Home Ass’n, 35 Ill.App.2d. 134, 182 N.E.2d. 237, 240*

Word “resident” has many meanings in law, largely determined by statutory context in which it is used. Kelm v. Carlson, C.A.Ohio, 473, F.2d. 1267, 1271 [Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1309]

The Law of Nations, which is mentioned in Article 1, Section 8 of our Constitution and was used by the Founding Fathers to write the Constitution, is much more clear in its definition of “resident”, and does essentially admit a requirement for “domicile” in order for an “alien” to be classified as a “resident”:

“Residents, as distinguished from citizens, are aliens who are permitted to take up a permanent abode in the country. Being bound to the society by reason of their [intention of] dwelling in it, they are subject to its laws so long as they remain there, and, being protected by it, they must defend it, although they do not enjoy all the rights of citizenship. They have only certain privileges which the law, or custom, gives them. Permanent residents are those who have been given the right of perpetual residence. They are a sort of citizen of a less privileged character, and are subject to the society without enjoying all its advantages. Their children succeed to their status; for the right of perpetual residence given them by the State passes to their children.” [The Law of Nations, p. 87, E. De Vattel, Volume Three, 1758, Carnegie Institution of Washington; emphasis added.]

Since the only definition of “resident” found anywhere in the Internal Revenue Code or the Treasury Regulations is that of a “resident alien”, found in 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(A), then we:

1. Are not statutory “residents” because we are not “aliens” and do not have a “domicile” in the “United States” (federal territory). Therefore, we do not have a “residence”.

2. Do not have a "residence", because only "aliens" can have a "residence" under 26 C.F.R. §1.871-2(a).
3. Are "nonresident aliens" under 26 U.S.C. §7701\(b\)\(1\)\(B\) if engaged in a public office.
4. Are "non-resident non-persons" if not consensually and lawfully engaged in a public office.
5. Are "nationals" but not "citizens" under 8 U.S.C. §1101\(a\)\(21\) and/or 8 U.S.C. §1101\(a\)\(22\)\(B\).
6. Are "transient foreigners":

*"Transient foreigner. One who visits the country, without the intention of remaining."
[Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1498]*

5.4.8.11.8 Effect of domicile on CIVIL STATUTORY "status"

The law of domicile is almost exclusively the means of determining one's "civil status" under the civil statutory laws of a given territory:

§ 29. Status

*It may be laid down that the, status- or, as it is sometimes called, civil status, in contradistinction to political status - of a person depends largely, although not universally, upon domicil. The older jurists, whose opinions are fully collected by Story I and Burge, maintained, with few exceptions, the principle of the ubiquity of status, conferred by the lex domicilii with little qualification. Lord Westbury, in Udny v. Udny, thus states the doctrine broadly: "The civil status is governed by one single principle, namely, that of domicil, which is the criterion established by law for the purpose of determining civil status. For it is on this basis. that the personal rights of the party - that is to say, the law which determines his majority and minority, his marriage, succession, testacy, or intestacy-must depend." Gray, C. J., in the late Massachusetts case of Ross v. Ross, speaking with special reference to capacity to inherit, says: "It is a general principle that the status or condition of a person, the relation in which he stands to another person, and by which he is qualified or made capable to take certain rights in that other's property, is fixed by the law of the domicil; and that this status and capacity are to be recognized and upheld in every other State, so far as they are not inconsistent with its own laws and policy."
[A Treatise on the Law of Domicil, National, Quasi-National, and Municipal, M.W. Jacobs, Little, Brown, and Company, 1887, p. 89]*

We have already established that civil law attaches to one's VOLUNTARY choice of civil domicile. Civil law, in turn, enforces and thereby delivers certain "privileges" against those who are subject to it. In that sense, the civil law acts as a voluntary franchise or "protection franchise" that is only enforceable against those who voluntarily consent to avail themselves of its "benefits" or "protections". Those who voluntarily and consensually avail themselves of such "benefits" and who are therefore SUBJECT to the "protection franchise" called domicile, in turn, are treated as public officers within the government under federal law, as is exhaustively established in the following memorandum:

[Why Statutory Civil Law is Law for Government and Not Private Persons, Form #05.037
http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm](http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm)

The key thing to understand about all franchises is that the Congressionally created privileges or "public rights" they enforce attach to specific CIVIL STATUSES under them. An example of such statuses include:

1. "Person" or "individual".
2. "Alien"
3. "Nonresident alien"
4. "Driver" under the vehicle code of your state.
5. "Spouse" under the family code of your state.
6. "Taxpayer" under the Internal Revenue Code at 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(14).
7. "Citizen", "resident", or "inhabitant" under the civil laws of your state.

The above civil statutory statuses:

- 1 Are contingent for their existence on a DOMICILE in the geographical place or territory that the law applies to. Hence, a "nonresident alien" or even "alien" civil status within the Internal Revenue Code, for instance, only applies if one is PHYSICALLY PRESENT on federal territory or consensually domiciled there. If you are not physically on federal territory and not domiciled there, you CANNOT be ANYTHING under the Internal Revenue Code.

- 1 2 Are TEMPORARY, because your domicile can change.
 2 3 Extinguish when you terminate your domicile and/or your presence in that place.
 3 4 Are the very SAME "statuses" you find on ALL government forms and applications, such as voter registrations,
 4 drivers' license applications, marriage license applications, etc. The purpose of filling out all such applications is to
 5 CONTRACT to PROCURE the status indicated on the form and have it RECOGNIZED by the government grantor
 6 who created the privileges you are pursuing under the civil law franchises that implement the form or application.

7 The ONLY way to AVOID contracting into the civil franchise if you are FORCED to fill out government forms is to:

- 8 1. Define all terms on the form in a MANDATORY attachment so as to EXCLUDE those found in any government law.
 9 Write above your signature the following:

10 "Not valid, false, fraudulent, and perjurious unless accompanied by the SIGNED attachment entitled 11 _____, consisting of ___ pages."

- 12 2. Indicate "All rights reserved, U.C.C. §1-308" near the signature line on the application.
 13 3. Indicate "Non assumpsit" on the application, or scribble it as your signature.
 14 4. Indicate "duress" on the form.
 15 5. Resubmit the form after the fact either in person or by mail fixing the application to indicate duress and withdraw your 16 consent.
 17 6. Ask the government accepting the application to indicate that you are not qualified because you do not consent and 18 consent is mandatory. Then show that denial to the person who is trying to FORCE you to apply.
 19 7. Submit a criminal complaint against the party instituting the duress to get you to apply.
 20 8. Notify the person instituting the unlawful duress that they are violating your rights and demand that they retract their 21 demand for you to apply for something.

22 Below is an authority proving this phenomenon as explained by the U.S. Supreme Court:

23 In Udny v. Udny (1869) L. R. 1 H. L. Sc. 441, the point decided was one of inheritance, depending upon the
 24 question whether the domicile of the father was in England or in Scotland, he being in either alternative a
 25 British subject. Lord Chancellor Hatherley said: 'The question of naturalization and of allegiance is distinct
 26 from that of domicile.' Page 452. Lord Westbury, in the passage relied on by the counsel for the United States,
 27 began by saying: 'The law of England, and of almost all civilized countries, ascribes to each individual at his
 28 birth two distinct legal states or conditions,—one by virtue of which he becomes the subject [NATIONAL] of
 29 some particular country, binding him by the tie of natural allegiance, and which may be called his political 30 status; another by virtue of which he has ascribed to him the character of a citizen of some particular
 31 country, and as such is possessed of certain municipal rights, and subject to certain obligations, which latter
 32 character is the civil status or condition of the individual, and may be quite different from his political 33 status.' And then, while maintaining that the civil status is universally governed by the 34 single principle of domicile (domicilium), the criterion established by 35 international law for the purpose of determining civil status, and the 36 basis on which 'the personal rights of the party—that is to say, the law
 37 which determines his majority or minority, his marriage, succession,
 38 testacy, or intestacy— must depend,' he yet distinctly recognized that a 39 man's political status, his country (patria), and his 'nationality,—that is,
 40 natural allegiance,'—'may depend on different laws in different countries.'
 41 Pages 457, 460. He evidently used the word 'citizen,' not as equivalent to 'subject,' but rather to 42 'inhabitant'; and had no thought of impeaching the established rule that all persons born under British 43 dominion are natural-born subjects.
 44 [United States v. Wong Kim Ark, 169 U.S. 649, 18 S.Ct. 456, 42 L.Ed. 890 (1898) ;
 45 SOURCE: http://scholar.google.com/scholar\_case?case=3381955771263111765]

46 The protections of the Constitution and the common law, on the other hand, attach NOT to your STATUTORY status, but 47 to the LAND you stand on at the time you receive an injury from either the GOVERNMENT or a PRIVATE human being,
 48 respectively:

49 "It is locality that is determinative of the application of the Constitution, in such matters as judicial procedure,
 50 and not the status of the people who live in it."
 51 [Balzac v. Porto Rico, 258 U.S. 298 (1922)]

The thing that we wish to emphasize about this important subject are the following VERY IMPORTANT facts:

1. Your STATUS under the civil STATUTORY law is exclusively determined by the exercise of your PRIVATE, UNALIENABLE right to both contract and associate, which are protected by the First Amendment to the United States Constitution.
2. The highest exercise of your right to sovereignty is the right to determine and enforce the STATUS you have CONSENSUALLY and VOLUNTARILY acquired under the civil laws of the community you are in.
3. Anyone who tries to associate a CIVIL statutory status with you absent your DEMONSTRATED, EXPRESS, WRITTEN consent is:
  - 3.1. Violating due process of law.
  - 3.2. STEALING property or rights to property from you. The “rights” or “public rights” that attach to the status are the measure of WHAT is being “stolen”.
  - 3.3. Exercising eminent domain without compensation against otherwise PRIVATE property in violation of the state constitution. The property subject to the eminent domain are all the rights that attach to the status they are FORCING upon you. YOU and ONLY YOU have the right to determine the compensation you are willing to accept in exchange for your private rights and private property.
  - 3.4. Compelling you to contract with the government that created the franchise status, because all franchises are contracts.
  - 3.5. Kidnapping your legal identity and moving it to a foreign state, if the STATUS they impute to you arises under the laws of a foreign state. This, in turn is an act of INTERNATIONAL TERRORISM in criminal violation of 18 U.S.C. §2331(1)(B)(iii).
4. All de jure government civil law is TERRITORIAL in nature and attaches ONLY to the territory upon which they have EXCLUSIVE or GENERAL jurisdiction. It does NOT attach and CANNOT attach to places where they have only SUBJECT matter jurisdiction, such as in states of the Union.

“The canon of construction which teaches that legislation of Congress, unless a contrary intent appears, is meant to apply only within the territorial jurisdiction of the United States, Blackmer v. United States, supra, at 437, is a valid approach whereby unexpressed congressional intent may be ascertained. It is based on the assumption that Congress is primarily concerned with domestic conditions.”
[Foley Brothers, Inc. v. Filardo, 336 U.S. 281 (1949)]

“The laws of Congress in respect to those matters [outside of Constitutionally delegated powers] do not extend into the territorial limits of the states, but have force only in the District of Columbia, and other places that are within the exclusive jurisdiction of the national government.”
[Caha v. U.S., 152 U.S. 211 (1894)]

“There is a canon of legislative construction which teaches Congress that, unless a contrary intent appears [legislation] is meant to apply only within the territorial jurisdiction of the United States.”
[U.S. v. Spelar, 338 U.S. 217 at 222.]

5. The prerequisite to having ANY statutory STATUS under the civil law of any de jure government is a DOMICILE within the EXCLUSIVE jurisdiction of the that specific government that enacted the statute.
6. You CANNOT lawfully acquire a statutory STATUS under the CIVIL laws of a foreign jurisdiction if you have either:
  - 6.1. Never physically been present within the exclusive jurisdiction of the foreign jurisdiction.
  - 6.2. Never EXPRESSLY consented to be treated as a “citizen”, “resident”, or “inhabitant” within that jurisdiction, even IF physically present there.
  - 6.3. NOT been physically present in the foreign jurisdiction LONG ENOUGH to satisfy the residency requirements of that jurisdiction.
7. Any government that tries to REMOVE the domicile prerequisite from any of the franchises it offers by any of the following means is acting in a purely private, commercial capacity using PRIVATE and not PUBLIC LAW and the statutes then devolve essentially into an act of PRIVATE contracting. Methods of acting in such a capacity include, but are not limited to the following devious methods by dishonest and criminal and treasonous public servants:
  - 7.1. Treating EVERYONE as “persons” or “individuals” under the franchise statutes, INCLUDING those outside of their territory.
  - 7.2. Saying that EVERYONE is eligible for the franchise, no matter where they PHYSICALLY are, including in places OUTSIDE of their exclusive or general jurisdiction.
  - 7.3. Waiving the domicile prerequisite as a matter of policy, even though the statutes describing it require that those who participate must be “citizens”, “residents”, or “inhabitants” in order to participate. The Social Security does this by unconstitutional FIAT, in order to illegally recruit more “taxpayers”.

- 1 8. When any so-called "government" waives the domicile prerequisite by the means described in the previous step, the
 2 following consequences are inevitable and MANDATORY:
 3 8.1. The statutes they seek to enforce are "PRIVATE LAW".
 4 8.2. It is FRAUD to call the statutes "PUBLIC LAW" that applies equally to EVERYONE.

5 "Municipal law, thus understood, is properly defined to be "a rule of civil conduct prescribed by the supreme 6 power in a state, commanding what is right and prohibiting what is wrong."

7 [. . .]

8 *It is also called a rule to distinguish it from a compact or agreement; for a compact is a promise proceeding
 9 from us, law is a command directed to us. The language of a compact is, "I will, or will not, do this"; that of 10 a law is, "thou shalt, or shalt not, do it." It is true there is an obligation which a compact carries with it,
 11 equal in point of conscience to that of a law; but then the original of the obligation is different. In compacts
 12 we ourselves determine and promise what shall be done, before we are obliged to do it; in laws, we are 13 obliged to act without ourselves determining or promising anything at all. Upon these accounts law is defined 14 to be "a rule."*

15 [Readings on the History and System of the Common Law, Second Edition, Roscoe Pound, 1925, p. 4]

- 16 8.3. They agree to be treated on an equal footing with every other PRIVATE business.
 17 8.4. Their franchises are on an EQUAL footing to every other type of private franchise such as McDonalds franchise
 18 agreements.
 19 8.5. They implicitly waive sovereign immunity and agree to be sued in the courts within the extraterritorial
 20 jurisdiction they are illegally operating under the Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act (F.S.I.A.), 28 U.S.C. Chapter
 21 97. Sovereign immunity is ONLY available as a defense against DE JURE government activity in the PUBLIC
 22 interest that applies EQUALLY to any and every citizen.
 23 8.6. They may not enforce federal civil law against the party in the foreign jurisdiction that they are illegally offering 24 the franchise in.
 25 8.7. If the foreign jurisdiction they are illegally enforcing the franchise within is subject to the constraint that the 26 members of said community MUST be treated equally under the requirements of their constitution, then the 27 franchise cannot make them UNEQUAL in ANY respect. This would be discrimination and violate the 28 fundamental law.

29 Consistent with the above, below is how the U.S. Supreme Court describes attempts to enforce income taxes against 30 NONRESIDENT parties domiciled in a legislatively foreign state, such as either a state of the Union or a foreign country:

31 *"The power of taxation, indispensable to the existence of every civilized government, is exercised upon the 32 assumption of an equivalent rendered to the taxpayer in the protection of his person and property, in adding
 33 to the value of such property, or in the creation and maintenance of public conveniences in which he shares --
 34 such, for instance, as roads, bridges, sidewalks, pavements, and schools for the education of his children. If the 35 taxing power be in no position to render these services, or otherwise to benefit the person or property taxed,
 36 and such property be wholly within the taxing power of another state, to which it may be said to owe an
 37 allegiance, and to which it looks for protection, the taxation of such property within the domicile of the owner
 38 partakes rather of the nature of an extortion than a tax, and has been repeatedly held by this Court to be
 39 beyond the power of the legislature, and a taking of property without due process of law. Railroad Company
 40 v. Jackson, 7 Wall. 262; State Tax on Foreign-Held Bonds, 15 Wall. 300; Tappan v. Merchants' National 41 Bank, 19 Wall. 490, 499; Delaware &c. R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 198 U.S. 341, 358. In Chicago &c. R. Co. v.
 42 Chicago, 166 U.S. 226, it was held, after full consideration, that the taking of private property [199 U.S. 203]
 43 without compensation was a denial of due process within the Fourteenth Amendment. See also Davidson v.
 44 New Orleans, 96 U.S. 97, 102; Missouri Pacific Railway v. Nebraska, 164 U.S. 403, 417; Mt. Hope Cemetery
 45 v. Boston, 158 Mass. 509, 519."*

46 [Union Refrigerator Transit Company v. Kentucky, 199 U.S. 194 (1905)]

47 An example of how the government cannot assign the statutory status of "taxpayer" upon you per 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(14) is 48 found in 28 U.S.C. §2201(a), which reads:

49 United States Code
 50 TITLE 28 - JUDICIARY AND JUDICIAL PROCEDURE
 51 PART VI - PARTICULAR PROCEEDINGS
 52 CHAPTER 151 - DECLARATORY JUDGMENTS
 53 Sec. 2201. Creation of remedy

(a) In a case of actual controversy within its jurisdiction, EXCEPT with respect to Federal taxes other than actions brought under section 7428 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, a proceeding under section 505 or 1146 of title 11, or in any civil action involving an antidumping or countervailing duty proceeding regarding a class or kind of merchandise of a free trade area country (as defined in section 516A(f)(10) of the Tariff Act of 1930), as determined by the administering authority, any court of the United States, upon the filing of an appropriate pleading, may declare the rights and other legal relations of any interested party seeking such declaration, whether or not further relief is or could be sought. Any such declaration shall have the force and effect of a final judgment or decree and shall be reviewable as such.

Consistent with the federal Declaratory Judgments Act, federal courts who have been petitioned to declare a litigant to be a "taxpayer" have declined to do so and have cited the above act as authority:

*Specifically, Rowen seeks a declaratory judgment against the United States of America with respect to "whether or not the plaintiff is a taxpayer pursuant to, and/or under 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(14)." (See Compl. at 2.) This Court lacks jurisdiction to issue a declaratory judgment "with respect to Federal taxes other than actions brought under section 7428 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986," a code section that is not at issue in the instant action. See 28 U.S.C. §2201; see also Hughes v. The implications of the above are that:

1. The federal courts have no lawful delegated authority to determine or declare whether you are a "taxpayer".
2. If federal courts cannot directly declare you a "taxpayer", then they also cannot do it indirectly by, for instance:
  - 2.1. Presuming that you are a "taxpayer". This is a violation of due process of law that renders a void judgment. Presumptions are not evidence and may not serve as a SUBSTITUTE for evidence.
  - 2.2. Calling you a "taxpayer" before you have called yourself one.
  - 2.3. Arguing with or penalizing you if you rebut others from calling you a "taxpayer".
  - 2.4. Quoting case law as authority relating to "taxpayers" against a "nontaxpayer". That's FRAUD and it also violates Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 17(b).
  - 2.5. Quoting case law from a franchise court in the Executive rather than Legislative branch such as the U.S. Tax Court against those who are not franchisees called "taxpayers".
  - 2.6. Treating you as a "taxpayer" if you provide evidence to the contrary by enforcing any provision of the I.R.C., Subtitle A "taxpayer" franchise agreement against you as a "nontaxpayer".

"Revenue Laws relate to taxpayers [instrumentalities, officers, employees, and elected officials of the national Government] and not to non-taxpayers [state nationals domiciled within the exclusive jurisdiction of a state of the Union and not subject to the exclusive jurisdiction of the national Government]. The latter are without their scope. No procedures are prescribed for non-taxpayers and no attempt is made to annul any of their Rights or Remedies in due course of law. With them[non-taxpayers] Congress does not assume to deal and they are neither of the subject nor of the object of federal revenue laws."

Authorities supporting the above include the following:

"It is almost unnecessary to say, that what the legislature cannot do directly, it cannot do indirectly. The stream can mount no higher than its source. The legislature cannot create corporations with illegal powers, nor grant unconstitutional powers to those already granted."

5.4.8.12 People with either no domicile or a domicile outside the government at the place they live

5.4.8.12.1 Divorcing the "state": Persons with no domicile, who create their own "state", or a domicile in the Kingdom of Heaven

If we divorce the society where we were born, do not abandon our nationality and allegiance to the state of our birth, but then choose a domicile in a place other than where we physically live and which is outside of any government that might have jurisdiction in the place where we live, then we become "transient foreigners" and "de facto stateless persons" in relation to the government of the place we occupy.

"Transient foreigner. One who visits the country, without the intention of remaining."
 [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1498]

A "de facto stateless person" is anyone who is not entitled to claim the protection or aid of the government in the place where they live:

Social Security Program Operations Manual System (POMS)
 RS 02640.040 Stateless Persons

[. . .]

DE FACTO—Persons who have left the country of which they were nationals and no longer enjoy its protection and assistance. They are usually political refugees. They are legally citizens of a country because its laws do not permit denaturalization or only permit it with the country's approval.

[. . .]

2. De Facto Status

Assume an individual is de facto stateless if he/she:

a. says he/she is stateless but cannot establish he/she is de jure stateless; and

b. establishes that:

- he/she has taken up residence [chosen a legal domicile] outside the country of his/her nationality;
- there has been an event which is hostile to him/her, such as a sudden or radical change in the government, in the country of nationality; and

NOTE: In determining whether an event was hostile to the individual, it is sufficient to show the individual had reason to believe it would be hostile to him/her.

- he/she renounces, in a sworn statement, the protection and assistance of the government of the country of which he/she is a national and declares he/she is stateless. The statement must be sworn to before an individual legally authorized to administer oaths and the original statement must be submitted to SSA.

De facto [stateless] status stays in effect only as long as the conditions in b. continue to exist. If, for example, the individual returns [changes their domicile back] to his/her country of nationality, de facto statelessness ends.

Notice the key attribute of a "de facto stateless person" is that they have abandoned the protection of their government because they believe it is hostile to him or her and is not only not protective, but is even injurious. Below is how the Supreme Court describes such persons:

*The writers upon the law of nations distinguish between a temporary residence in a foreign country for a special purpose and a residence accompanied with an intention to make it a permanent place of abode. The latter is styled by Vattel [in his book The Law of Nations as] "domicile," which he defines to be "a habitation fixed in any place, with an intention of always staying there." Such a person, says this author, becomes a member of the new society at least as a permanent inhabitant, and is a kind of citizen of the inferior order from the native citizens, but is, nevertheless, united and subject to the society, without participating in all its advantages. This right of domicile, he continues, is not established unless the person makes sufficiently known his intention of fixing there, either tacitly or by an express declaration. Vatt. Law Nat. pp. 92, 93. Grotius nowhere uses the word "domicile," but he also distinguishes between those who stay in a foreign country by the necessity of their affairs, or from any other temporary cause, and those who reside there from a permanent cause. The former he denominates "strangers," and the latter, "subjects." The rule is thus laid down by Sir Robert Phillimore:*

*There is a class of persons which cannot be, strictly speaking, included in either of these denominations of naturalized or native citizens, namely, the class of those who have ceased to reside [maintain a domicile] in their native country, and have taken up a permanent abode in another. These are domiciled inhabitants. They have not put on a new citizenship through some formal mode enjoined by the law or the new country. They are de facto, though not de jure, citizens of the country of their [new chosen] domicile. Fong Yue Ting v. United States, [149 U.S. 698 (1893)]

We must remember that in America, the People, and not our public servants, are the Sovereigns. We The People, who are the Sovereigns, choose our associations and govern ourselves through our elected representatives.

"The words 'people of the United States' and 'citizens,' are synonymous terms, and mean the same thing. They both describe the political body who, according to our republican institutions, form the sovereignty, and who hold the power and conduct the government through their representatives. They are what we familiarly call the 'sovereign people,' and every citizen is one of this people, and a constituent member of this sovereignty. ..." Boyd v. State of Nebraska, [143 U.S. 135 (1892)]

When those representatives cease to have our best interests or protection in mind, then we have not only a moral right, but a duty, according to our Declaration of Independence, 1776, to alter our form of self-government by whatever means necessary to guarantee our future security.

"But when a long train of abuses and usurpations, pursuing invariably the same Object evinces a design to reduce them under absolute Despotism, it is their right, it is their duty, to throw off such Government, and to provide new Guards for their future security." [Declaration of Independence]

The lawful and most peaceful means of altering that form of government is simply to do one of the following:

1. Form our own self-government based on the de jure constitution and change our domicile to it. See:

Self Government Federation: Articles of Confederation, Form #13.002
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

2. Choose an existing government or country that is already available elsewhere on the planet as our protector.
3. Choose a domicile in a place that doesn't have a government. For instance, choose a domicile somewhere you have been in the past that doesn't have a government. For example, if you have legal evidence that you took a cruise, then choose your domicile in the middle of the ocean somewhere where the ship went.
4. Use God's laws as the basis for your own self-government and protection, as suggested in this book.

By doing one of the above, we are "firing" our local servants in government because they are not doing their job of protection adequately, and when we do this, we cease to have any obligation to pay for their services through taxation and they cease to have any obligation to provide any services. If we choose God and His laws as our form of government, then we choose Heaven as our domicile and our place of primary allegiance and protection. We then become:

1. "citizens of Heaven".
2. "nationals but not citizens" of the country in which we live.
3. Transient foreigners.
4. Ambassadors and ministers of a foreign state called Heaven.

Below is how one early state court described the absolute right to "divorce the state" by choosing a domicile in a place other than where we physically are at the time:

"When a change of government takes place, from a monarchical to a republican government, the old form is dissolved. Those who lived under it, and did not choose to become members of the new, had a right to refuse their allegiance to it, and to retire elsewhere. By being a part of the society subject to the old government, they had not entered into any engagement to become subject to any new form the majority might think proper to adopt. That the majority shall prevail is a rule posterior to the formation of government, and results from it. It is not a rule upon mankind in their natural state. There, every man is independent of all laws, except those prescribed by nature. He is not bound by any institutions formed by his fellowmen without his consent"
 [Cruden v. Neale, 2 N.C., 2 S.E. 70 (1796)]

How do we officially and formally notify the "state" that we have made a conscious decision to legally divorce it by moving our domicile outside its jurisdiction? That process is documented in the references below:

4. After accomplishing either of the above items, which are the same, making sure that all future government forms we fill out properly and accurately describe both our domicile and our citizenship status, in accordance with section 5.4.8.13.1 later.
5. By making sure that at all times, we use the proper words to describe our status so that we don't create false presumptions that might cause the government to believe we are "residents" with a domicile in the "United States" (federal territory):
  - 5.1. Do not describe ourselves with the following words:
    - 5.1.1. "individual" as defined in 5 U.S.C. §552a(a)(2) and 26 C.F.R. §1.1441-1(c)(3).
    - 5.1.2. "taxpayer" as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(14).
    - 5.1.3. "U.S. person" as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(30).
    - 5.1.4. "resident" as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(A).
    - 5.1.5. "alien"
  - 5.2. Describe ourselves with the following words and phrases:

- 1 5.2.1. “nontaxpayer” not subject to the Internal Revenue Code. See:
 2 5.2.1.1. “Taxpayer” v. “Nontaxpayer”, Which One Are You?:
 3 <http://famguardian.org/Subjects/Taxes/Articles/TaxpayerVNontaxpayer.htm>
 4 5.2.1.2. Your Rights as a “nontaxpayer”, item 5.8
 5 <http://sedm.org/LibertyU/LibertyU.htm>
 6 5.2.2. “nonresident alien” as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(B) IF AND ONLY IF you are engaged in a public
 7 office. Otherwise you are a “non-resident non-person” or “transient foreigner”.
 8 5.2.3. The type of “nonresident alien” defined in 26 C.F.R. §1.871-1(b)(1)(i) ONLY IF YOU ARE ENGAGED IN
 9 A PUBLIC OFFICE. Otherwise, there is no regulation that describes your status.
 10 5.2.4. “national” under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21), but not “citizen” as defined in 8 U.S.C. §1401. This person is also 11 described in 8 U.S.C. §1452 if they were born in a U.S. possession.
 12 5.2.5. Not engaged in a “trade or business” as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26).
 13 5.2.6. Have not made any “elections” under 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(4)(B), 26 U.S.C. §6013(g) or (h), or 26 C.F.R.
 14 §1.871-1(a).
 15 5.2.7. A “stateless person” who does not satisfy any of the criteria for diversity of citizenship described in 28
 16 U.S.C. §1332 and who therefore cannot be sued in federal court. See Newman-Green v. Alfonso Larrain,
 17 490 U.S. 826 \(1989\):

18 “In order to be a citizen of a State within the meaning of the diversity statute, a natural person must both be a
 19 citizen of the United States and be domiciled within the State. See Robertson v. Cease, 97 U.S. 646, 648-649
 20 (1878); Brown v. Keene, 8 Pet. 112, 115 (1834). The problem in this case is that Bettison, although a United
 21 States citizen, has no domicile in any State. He is therefore “stateless” for purposes of § 1332(a)(3). Subsection
 22 1332(a)(2), which confers jurisdiction in the District Court when a citizen of a State sues aliens only, also could 23 not be satisfied because Bettison is a United States citizen. [490 U.S. 829]”
 24 [Newman-Green v. Alfonso Larrain, 490 U.S. 826 (1989)]

25 We emphasize that it isn't one's citizenship but one's choice of legal “domicile” that makes one sovereign and a
 26 “nontaxpayer”. The way we describe our citizenship status is affected by and a result of our choice of legal “domicile”, but 27 changing one's citizenship status is not the nexus for becoming either a “sovereign” or a “nontaxpayer”.

28 The only legal requirement for changing our domicile is that we must reside on the territory of the sovereign to whom we
 29 claim allegiance, and must intend to make membership in the community established by the sovereign permanent. In this
 30 context, the Bible reminds us that the Earth was created by and owned by our Sovereign, who is God, and that those vain
 31 politicians who claim to “own” or control it are simply “stewards” over what actually belongs to God alone. To wit:

32 The heavens are Yours [God's], the earth also is Yours;
 33 The world and all its fullness, You have founded them.
 34 The north and the south, You have created them;
 35 Tabor and Hermon rejoice in Your name.
 36 You have a mighty arm;
 37 Strong is Your hand, and high is Your right hand.”
 38 [Psalm 89:11-13, Bible, NKJV]
 39

40 “I have made the earth,
 41 And created man on it.
 42 I—My hands—stretched out the heavens,
 43 And all their host I have commanded.”
 44 [Isaiah 45:12, Bible, NKJV]
 45

46 “Indeed heaven and the highest heavens belong to the Lord your God, also the earth with all that is in it.”
 47 [Deuteronomy 10:14, Bible, NKJV]

48 Some misguided Christians will try to quote Jesus, when He said of taxes the following in relation to “domicile”:

49 “Render therefore to Caesar the things that are Caesar's, and to God the things that are God's.”
 50 [Matt. 22:15-22, Bible, NKJV]

51 However, based on the scriptures above, which identify God as the owner of the Earth and the Heavens, we must ask 52 ourself:

1 "What is left that belongs to Caesar if EVERYTHING belongs to God?"

2 The answer is NOTHING, except that which he STEALS from the Sovereign people and which they don't force him to
3 return. Jesus knew this, but he gave a very indirect answer to keep Himself out of trouble when asked about taxes in the 4 passage above. Therefore, when we elect or consent to change our domicile to the Kingdom of Heaven, we are
5 acknowledging the Truth and the Authority of the Scripture and Holy Law above and the sovereignty of the Lord in the 6 practical affairs of our daily lives. We are acknowledging our stewardship over what ultimately and permanently belongs
7 ONLY to Him, and not to any man. Governments and civilizations come and go, but God's immutable laws are eternal.
8 To NOT do this as a Christian amounts to mutiny against God. Either we honor the first four commandments of the Ten
9 Commandments by doing this, or we will be dethroned as His Sovereigns and Stewards on earth.

10 "Because you [Solomon, the wisest man who ever lived] have done this , and have not kept My covenant and 11 My statutes [violated God's laws], which I have commanded you, I will surely tear the kingdom [and all your 12 sovereignty] away from you and give it to your [public] servant."
13 [1 Kings 11:9-13, Bible, NKJV]

14 By legally and civilly divorcing the "state" in changing our domicile to the Kingdom of Heaven or to someplace on earth
15 where there is not man-made government, we must consent to be governed exclusively by God's laws and express our 16 unflinching allegiance to Him as the source of everything we have and everything that we are. In doing so we:

- 17 1. Are following God's mandate not to serve foreign gods, laws, or civil rulers.

18 "You shall make no covenant [contract or franchise] with them [foreigners, pagans], nor with their [pagan
19 government] gods [laws or judges]. They shall not dwell in your land [and you shall not dwell in theirs by
20 becoming a "resident" or domiciliary in the process of contracting with them], lest they make you sin against
21 Me [God]. For if you serve their [government] gods [under contract or agreement or franchise], it will surely
22 be a snare to you."
23 [Exodus 23:32-33, Bible, NKJV]

- 24 2. Escape the constraints of earthly civil statutory law. This type of law is law exclusively for government and public 25 officers, so in a sense we are abandoning civil government, any duties under it, and any privileges, public rights, or 26 "benefits" that it conveys based on our civil "status" under it. See:

Why Civil Statutory Law is Law for Government and Not Private Persons, Form #05.037
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

- 27 3. Cease to be a statutory "citizen", "resident", or "inhabitant". Instead we become transient foreigners and nonresidents 28 under the civil statutory law.
29 4. Retain the protections of the Constitution and the common law for our natural rights.
30 5. Retain the protections of the criminal law. These laws are enforced whether we consent or not.
31 6. Are not "lawless" or an anarchist in a legal sense, because we are still subject to God's law, the common law, and the 32 criminal law.
33 7. Protect and retain our equality, sovereignty, and dignity in relation to every other person under the civil law. The 34 Declaration of Independence calls this our "separate and equal station".

35 The above is the nirvana described by the Apostle Paul when he very insightfully said of this process of submission to God
36 the following:

37 "But if you are led by the Spirit, you are not under the law [man's law]."
38 [Gal. 5:18, Bible, NKJV]

39 The tendency of early Christians to do the above was precisely the reason why the Romans persecuted the Christians when 40 Christianity was in its infancy: It lead to anarchy because Christians, like the Israelites, refused to be governed by anything
41 but God's laws:

42 "Then Haman said to King Ahasuerus, "There is a certain people [the Jews, who today are the equivalent of
43 Christians] scattered and dispersed among the people in all the provinces of your kingdom; their laws are
44 different from all other people's [because they are God's laws!], and they do not keep the king's [unjust] laws.
45 Therefore it is not fitting for the king to let them remain. If it pleases the king, let a decree be written that they
46 be destroyed, and I will pay ten thousand talents of silver into the hands of those who do the work, to bring it
47 into the king's treasuries."
48 [Esther 3:8-9, Bible, NKJV]

1 Christians who are doing and following the will of God are “anarchists”. An anarchist is simply anyone who refuses to
 2 have an earthly ruler and who instead insists on either self-government or a Theocracy in which God, whichever God you
 3 believe in, is our only King, Ruler, Lawgiver and Judge:

4 Main Entry: an-ar-chy
 5 Function: noun

 7 from an- + archos ruler -- more at ARCH-

9 “For the Lord is our Judge, the Lord is our Lawgiver, The Lord is our King; He will save us.”
 10 [Isaiah 33:22, Bible, NKJV]

11 For a fascinating read on this subject, see:

Jesus Is an Anarchist
<http://famguardian.org/Subjects/Spirituality/ChurchvState/JesusAnarchist.htm>

12 Christians who are doing the will of God by changing their domicile to Heaven and divorcing the “state” are likely to be
 13 persecuted by the government and privileged 501(c)(3) corporate churches just as Jesus was because of their anarchistic
 14 tendencies because they render organized government irrelevant and unnecessary:

15 “If the world hates you, you know that it hated Me before it hated you. If you were of the world, the world
 16 would love its own. Yet because you are not of the world, but I chose you out of the world, therefore the 17 world hates you. Remember the word that I said to you, ‘A servant is not greater than his master.’ If they
 18 persecuted Me, they will also persecute you. If they kept My word, they will keep yours also. But all these 19 things they will do to you for My name’s sake, because they do not know Him who sent Me. If I had not
 20 come and spoken to them, they would have no sin, but now they have no excuse for their sin. He who hates
 21 me hated My father also. If I had not done among them the works which no one else did, they would have no
 22 sin; but now they have seen and also hated both Me and My Father. But this happened that the word might 23 be fulfilled which is written in their law, “They hated Me without a cause.”
 24 [John 15:18-25, Bible, NKJV]

25 Being “chosen out of the world” simply means, in legal terms, that we do not have a domicile here and are “transient 26 foreigners”.

27 Those who do choose God as their sole source of law and civil (not criminal) government:

- 28 1. Become a “foreign government” in respect to the United States government and all other governments.
- 29 2. Are committing themselves to the ultimate First Amendment protected religious practice, which is that of adopting 30 God and His sovereign laws as their only form of self-government.
- 31 3. Are taking the ultimate step in personal responsibility, by assuming responsibility for every aspect of their lives by 32 divorcing the state and abandoning all government franchises:

Government Instituted Slavery Using Franchises, Form #05.030
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

- 33 4. Effectively become their own self-government and fire the government where they live in the context of all civil 34 matters.
- 35 5. Are protected by the Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act \(F.S.I.A.\), 28 U.S.C. Part IV, Chapt. 97.
- 36 6. Are protected by the Minimum Contacts Doctrine and therefore exempt from the jurisdiction of federal and state courts
 37 except as they satisfy the provisions of the Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act or the “Longarm Statute” passed by the 38 state where they temporarily inhabit.
- 39 7. Are internationally protected persons pursuant to 18 U.S.C. §112.
- 40 8. Are on an equal footing with any other nation and may therefore assert sovereign immunity in any proceeding against 41 the government. This implies that:
  - 42 8.1. Any attempt to drag you into court by a government must be accompanied by proof that you consented in writing
 43 to the jurisdiction of the government attempting to sue you. Such consent becomes the basis for satisfying the 44 criteria within the Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act \(F.S.I.A.\), 28 U.S.C. Part IV, Chapt. 97.
  - 45 8.2. You may use the same defense as the government in proving a valid contractual obligation, by showing the 46 government the delegation of authority order constraining your delegated authority as God’s “public officer”.

1 Anything another government alleges you consented in writing to must be consistent with the delegation of
 2 authority order or else none of the rights accrued to them are defensible in court. In this sense, you are using the
 3 same lame excuse they use for getting out of any obligations that you consented to, but were not authorized to 4 engage in by the Holy Bible. This is explained in the document below:

<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>
 Delegation of Authority Order from God to Christians, Form #13.007

- 5 9. Become ministers, ambassadors, “employees”, “public officers”, and officers of a foreign state called Heaven.
 6 10. May not simultaneously act as “public officers” for any other foreign government, which would represent a conflict of 7 interest.

8 “No one can serve two masters [two employers, for instance]; for either he will hate the one and love the other,
 9 or else he will be loyal to the one and despise the other. You cannot serve God and mammon [government].”
 10 [Matt. 6:24, Bible, NKJV. Written by a tax collector]

- 11 11. Are expressly exempt from taxation pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §892(a)(1).
 12 12. May file IRS Form W-8EXP as a “non-resident non-person” and exempt all of their earnings from federal and state
 13 income taxation.
 14 13. May use IRS Publication 515 to control their withholding as “nonresident aliens” if engaged in a public office, or must 15 modify all existing forms if not engaged in a public office.

16 The other very interesting consequences of the above status which makes it especially appealing are the following:

- 17 1. Nowhere in the Internal Revenue Code are any of the following terms defined:
 18 1.1. “foreign”.
 19 1.2. “foreign government”.
 20 1.3. “government”.
 21 Therefore, it would be impossible for the IRS to prove that you aren't a “foreign government”.
 22 2. The most important goal of the Constitutional Convention, and the reasons for the adoption of the Ninth and Tenth
 23 Amendment to the United States Constitution was to preserve as much self-government to the people and the states as 24 possible. Any attempt to compel anyone to become a “subject” or accept more government than they need therefore 25 violates the legislative intent of the United States Constitution.

26 The determination of the Framers Convention and the ratifying conventions to preserve complete and 27 unimpaired state self-government in all matters not committed to the general government is one of the 28 plainest facts which emerges from the history of their deliberations. And adherence to that determination is
 29 incumbent equally upon the federal government and the states. State powers can neither be appropriated on 30 the one hand nor abdicated on the other. As this court said in Texas v. White, 7 Wall. 700, 725, 'The 31 preservation of the States, and the maintenance of their governments, are as much within the design and 32 care of the Constitution as the preservation of the Union and the maintenance of the National government.
 33 The Constitution, in all its provisions, looks to an indestructible Union, composed of indestructible States.'
 34 Every journey to a forbidden end begins with the first step; and the danger of such a step by the federal 35 government in the direction of taking over the powers of the states is that the end of the journey may find the 36 states so despoiled of their powers, or-what may amount to the same thing-so [298 U.S. 238, 296] relieved of 37 the responsibilities which possession of the powers necessarily enjoins, as to reduce them to little more than 38 geographical subdivisions of the national domain. It is safe to say that if, when the Constitution was under 39 consideration, it had been thought that any such danger lurked behind its plain words, it would never have been 40 ratified.

41 And the Constitution itself is in every real sense a law-the lawmakers being the people themselves, in whom 42 under our system all political power and sovereignty primarily resides, and through whom such power and 43 sovereignty primarily speaks. It is by that law, and not otherwise, that the legislative, executive, and judicial 44 agencies which it created exercise such political authority as they have been permitted to possess. The 45 Constitution speaks for itself in terms so plain that to misunderstand their import is not rationally possible.
 46 'We the People of the United States,' it says, 'do ordain and establish this Constitution.' Ordain and establish!
 47 These are definite words of enactment, and without more would stamp what follows with the dignity and 48 character of law. The framers of the Constitution, however, were not content to let the matter rest here, but 49 provided explicitly-'This Constitution, and the Laws of the United States which shall be made in Pursuance
 50 thereof; ... shall be the supreme Law of the Land.' (Const. art. 6, cl. 2.) The supremacy of the Constitution as 51 law is thus declared without qualification. That supremacy is absolute; the supremacy of a statute enacted by 52 Congress is not absolute but conditioned upon its being made in pursuance of the Constitution. And a 53 judicial tribunal, clothed by that instrument with complete judicial power, and, therefore, by the very nature of 54 the power, required to ascertain and apply the law to the facts in every case or proceeding properly brought for 55 adjudication, must apply the supreme law and reject the inferior stat- [298 U.S. 238, 297] ute whenever the two 56 conflict. In the discharge of that duty, the opinion of the lawmakers that a statute passed by them is valid must be given great weight, Adkins v. Children's Hospital, 261 U.S. 525, 544, 43 S.Ct. 394, 24 A.L.R. 1238; but their opinion, or the court's opinion, that the statute will prove greatly or generally beneficial is wholly irrelevant to the inquiry. Schechter Poultry Corp. v. United States, 295 U.S. 495, 549, 550 S., 55 S.Ct. 837, 97 A.L.R. 947. Carter v. Carter Coal Co., [298 U.S. 238 (1936)]

3. If another government attempts to interfere with the affairs of your own foreign self-government, then they:
  - 3.1. Are violating your First Amendment right to practice your religion by living under the laws of your God. This tort is cognizable under the Religious Freedom Restoration Act, 42 U.S.C. Chapter 21B and constitutes a tort against the foreign invader.
  - 3.2. Are hypocrites, because they are depriving others equal right to the same authority that they themselves have. No legitimate government can claim to be operating lawfully which interferes with the equal right of others to self-government.
  - 3.3. Are in a sense attempting to outlaw the ultimate form of personal responsibility, which is entirely governing your own life and supporting yourself. The outlawing of personal responsibility and replacing or displacing it with collective responsibility of the "state" can never be in the public interest, especially considering how badly our present government mismanages and bankrupts nearly everything it puts its hands on.

5.4.8.12.2 How do "transient foreigners" and "nonresidents" protect themselves in state court?

Now that we understand the differences between those who have contracted to be protected, called "citizens", "residents", and "inhabitants", and those who have not, called "transient foreigners" or "nonresidents", the next issue we must deal with is to determine how those who are "nonresidents" or "transient foreigners" in relation to a specific state government can achieve a remedy for the protection of their rights in state court. It will interest the reader to learn that "transient foreigners" have the same constitutional protections for their rights as citizens or residents. Here is what the U.S. Supreme Court said on this subject. The one who are "transient foreigners" are STATUTORY "non-resident non-persons" in respect to the governments identified in the cite below. The "aliens" they are talking about are foreign nationals born in foreign countries.

*"There are literally millions of aliens within the jurisdiction of the United States[*]. The Fifth Amendment, as well as the Fourteenth Amendment, protects every one of these persons from deprivation of life, liberty, or property without due process of law. Wong Yang Sung v. McGrath, 339 U.S. 33, 48-51, 70 S.Ct. 445, 453-455, 94 L.Ed. 616, 627-629; Wong Wing v. United States, 163 U.S. 228, 238, 16 S.Ct. 977, 981, 41 L.Ed. 140, 143; see Russian Fleet v. United States, 282 U.S. 481, 489, 51 S.Ct. 229, 231, 75 L.Ed. 473, 476. Even one whose presence in this country is unlawful, involuntary, or transitory is entitled to that constitutional protection. Wong Yang Sung, supra ; Wong Wing, supra.*

The fact that all persons, aliens and citizens alike, are protected by the Due Process Clause does not lead to the further conclusion that all aliens are entitled to enjoy all the advantages of citizenship or, indeed, to the conclusion that all aliens must be placed in a single homogeneous legal classification. For a host of constitutional and statutory provisions rest on the premise that a legitimate distinction between citizens and aliens may justify attributes and benefits for one class not accorded to the other; 12 and the class of aliens is itself a heterogeneous multitude of persons with a wide-ranging variety of ties to this country.13"

In order to get to the point where we can identify how remedies for constitutional rights violations are achieved, we must first describe the TWO types of jurisdictions that the state courts exercise, because it is mainly state courts where such rights violations would be vindicated. We don't have space here to cover all the nuances of this subject, but we will summarize these differences and point you to more information if you want to look into it. There are two types of jurisdictions within each state government:

1. The de jure republic under the Articles of Confederation called the "Republic of ____". This jurisdiction controls everything that happens on land protected by the Constitution. It protects EXCLUSIVELY PRIVATE property using ONLY the Common law and NOT civil law.
2. The federal corporation under the United States Constitution called the "State of ____". This jurisdiction handles everything that deals with government agency, office, employment, "benefits", "public rights", and territory and its legislation is limited to those domiciled on federal territory or contracting with either the state or federal governments. Collectively, the subject of legislation aimed at this jurisdiction is the "public domain" or what the courts call "publici juris".

The differences between the two jurisdictions above are exhaustively described in the following fascinating document:

Corporatization and Privatization of the Government, Form #05.024
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

In the above document, a table is provided comparing the two types of jurisdictions which we repeat here, extracted from section 14.7. Understanding this table is important in determining how we achieve a remedy in a state court for an injury to our constitutional PRIVATE rights.

Table 5-37: Comparison of Republic State v. Corporate State

#	Attribute	Republic State	Corporate State
1	Nature of government	De jure	De facto if offered, enforced, or forced against those domiciled outside of federal territory.
2	Name	"Republic of "	"State of "
3	Name of this entity in federal law	Called a "state" or "foreign state"	Called a "State" as defined in 4 U.S.C. §110(d)
4	Territory over which "sovereign"	All land not under exclusive federal jurisdiction within the exterior borders of the Constitutional state.	Federal territory within the exterior limits of the state borrowed from the federal government under the Buck Act, 4 U.S.C. §110(d).
5	Protected by the Bill of Rights, which is the first ten amendments to the United States Constitution?	Yes	No (No rights. Only statutory "privileges")
6	Form of government	Constitutional Republic	Legislative totalitarian socialist democracy
7	A corporation?	Yes	Yes
8	A federal corporation?	No	Yes
9	Exclusive jurisdiction over its own lands?	Yes	No. Shared with federal government pursuant to Buck Act, Assimilated Crimes Act, and ACTA Agreement.
10	"Possession" of the United States?	No (sovereign and "foreign" with respect to national government)	Yes
11	Subject to exclusive federal jurisdiction?	No	Yes
12	Subject to federal income tax?	No	Yes
13	Subject to state income tax?	No	Yes
14	Subject to state sales tax?	No	Yes
15	Subject to national military draft? (See SEDM Form #05.030 http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm )	No	Yes
16	Citizenship of those domiciled therein	3. Constitutional but not statutory citizen. 4. "national" or "state national" pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) . Not a statutory "U.S. citizen" pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1401 .	Statutory "U.S. citizen" pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1401
17	Licenses such as marriage license, driver's license, business license required in this jurisdiction?	No	Yes
18	Voters called	"Electors"	"Registered voters"
19	How you declare your domicile in this jurisdiction	4. Describing yourself as a "state national" but not a statutory "U.S. citizen" on all government forms. 5. Registering as an "elector" rather than a voter. 6. Terminating participation in all federal benefit programs.	4. Describing yourself as a statutory "U.S. citizen" on any state or federal form. 5. Applying for a federal benefit. 6. Applying for and receiving any kind of state license.
20	Standing in court to sue for injury to rights	Constitution and the common law.	Statutory civil law
21	"Rights" within this jurisdiction are based upon	The Bill of Rights	Statutory franchises
22	"Citizens", "residents", and "inhabitants" of this jurisdiction are	Private human beings	Public entities such as government employees, instrumentalities, and corporations (franchisees of the government) ONLY

#	Attribute	Republic State	Corporate State
23	Civil jurisdiction originates from	Voluntary choice of domicile on the territory of the sovereign AND your consent. This means you must be a "citizen" or a "resident" BEFORE this type of law can be enforced against you.	Your right to contract by signing up for government franchises/"benefits". Domicile/residence is a prerequisite but is often ILLEGALLY ignored as a matter of policy rather than law.

1 When we say that we are a "transient foreigner" or "nonresident" within a court pleading or within this document, we must
 2 be careful to define WHICH of the TWO jurisdictions above that status relates to in order to avoid ambiguity and avoid
 3 being called "frivolous" by the courts. Within this document and elsewhere, the term "transient foreigner" or "nonresident"
 4 relates to the jurisdiction in the right column above but NOT to the column on the left. You can be a "nonresident" of the 5 Corporate state on the right and yet at the same time ALSO be a "citizen" or "resident" of the Republic/De Jure State on the
 6 left above. This distinction is critical. If you are at all confused by this distinction, we strongly suggest reading the 7 Corporatization and Privatization of the Government document referenced above so that the distinctions are clear.

8 The Corporate state on the right above enacts statutes that can and do only relate to those who are public entities (called 9 "publici juris") that are government instrumentalities, employees, officers, and franchisees of the government called
 10 "corporations", all of whom are consensually associated with the government by virtue of exercising their right to contract
 11 with the government. Technically speaking, all such statutes are franchises implemented using the civil law. This is 12 explained further in the following:

Government Instituted Slavery Using Franchises, Form #05.030

<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

13 The U.S. Supreme Court has held that the ability to regulate private conduct is repugnant to the Constitution.
 14 Consequently, the government cannot enact statutes or law of any kind that would regulate the conduct of private parties.
 15 Therefore, nearly all civil statutes passed by any state or municipal government, and especially those relating to licensed
 16 activities, can and do only relate to public and not private parties that are all officers of the government and not human 17 beings. This is exhaustively analyzed and proven in the following:

Why Statutory Civil Law is Law for Government and Not Private Persons, Form #05.037

<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

18 We will now spend the rest of this section applying these concepts to how one might pursue a remedy for an injury to so-
 19 called "right" within a state court by invoking the jurisdiction of the Republic/De Jure state on the left and avoiding the 20 jurisdiction of the Corporate state on the right.

21 Civil law attaches to one's voluntary choice of domicile/residence. Criminal law does not. De jure criminal law depends
 22 only on physical presence on the territory of the sovereign and the commission of an injurious act against a fellow
 23 sovereign on that territory. Laws like the vehicle code do have criminal provisions, but they are not de jure criminal law,
 24 but rather civil law that attaches to the domicile/residence of the party within a franchise agreement, which is the "driver
 25 license" and all the rights it confers to the government to regulate your actions as a "driver" domiciled in the Corporate
 26 state.

27 Within the forms and publications on this website there are two possible statuses that one may declare as a sovereign:

- 28 1. You are a transient foreigner and a citizen of ONLY the Kingdom of Heaven on earth. "My state" in this context means 29 the Holy Bible.
- 30 2. You are a state national with a domicile in the Republic/De Jure state but not the Corporate state. "My state" in this 31 context means the de jure state and excludes just about everything passed by the corporate state government, including
 32 all franchises such as marriage licenses, income taxes, etc. Franchises cannot lawfully be implemented in the De Jure
 33 State but can only occur in the Corporate State.

34 Both of the above statuses have in common that those who declare themselves to be either cannot invoke the statutory law
 35 of the Corporate State, but must invoke only the common law and the Constitution in their defense. There is tons of 36 reference material on the common law in the following:

Sovereignty and Freedom Page, Section 8: Self Government, Family Guardian Fellowship
<http://famguardian.org/Subjects/Freedom/Freedom.htm>

The following book even has sample pleadings for the main common law actions:

Handbook of Common Law Pleading, Benjamin J. Shipman
<http://books.google.com/books?id=7gk-AAAIAAJ&printsec=titlepage>

Transient foreigners may not have a domicile or be subject to the civil laws in relation only to the place they have that status, but they don't need the civil laws to be protected. The Constitution attaches to the land, and not the status of the persons on that land.

"It is locality that is determinative of the application of the Constitution, in such matters as judicial procedure, and not the status of the people who live in it."
 [Balzac v. Porto Rico, 258 U.S. 298 (1922)]

The Constitution and the common law are the only thing one needs to protect oneself as a PRIVATE and not PUBLIC entity. That is why we place so much emphasis on the common law on this website. Englishman John Harris explains why in the following wonderful video:

It's an Illusion, John Harris
<http://tpuc.org/node/558>

Those who are believers AND transient foreigners but not "citizens", "residents" or "inhabitants" of either the Republic/De Jure State or the Corporate State DO in fact STILL have a state, which is the Kingdom of Heaven on Earth. That state has all the elements necessary to be legitimate: territory, people, and laws. The territory is the Earth, which the Bible says belongs to the Lord and not Caesar. It has people, which are your fellow believers. The laws are itemized in the Holy Bible and enumerated below:

Laws of the Bible, Form #13.001
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

In conclusion, those who are "transient foreigners" or "Nonresidents" in relation to the Corporate state can use the state court for protection, but they must:

1. Be careful to define which of the two possible jurisdictions they are operating within using the documents referenced in this section.
2. Avoid federal court. All federal circuit and district courts are Article IV territorial courts in the executive and not judicial branch of the government that may only officiate over franchises. They are not Article III constitutional courts that may deal with rights protected by the constitution. This is exhaustively proven with thousands of pages of evidence in:

What Happened to Justice?, Form #06.012
<http://sedm.org/ItemInfo/Ebooks/WhatHappJustice/WhatHappJustice.htm>

3. Properly declare their status consistent with this document in their complaint. See the following forms as an example how to do this:

- 3.1. Affidavit of Citizenship, Domicile, and Tax Status, Form #02.001
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>
- 3.2. Federal Pleading/Motion/Petition Attachment, Litigation Tool #01.002
<http://sedm.org/Litigation/LitIndex.htm>
- 3.3. Rules of Presumption and Statutory Interpretation, Litigation Tool #01.006
<http://sedm.org/Litigation/LitIndex.htm>

4. Respond to discovery relating to their status and standing with the following:

Citizenship, Domicile, and Tax Status Options, Form #10.003
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

5. Invoke the common law and not statutory law to be protected.
6. Be careful to educate the judge and the jury to prevent common injurious presumptions that would undermine their status. See:

Presumption: Chief Weapon for Unlawfully Enlarging Federal Jurisdiction, Form #05.017
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

- 1 7. Follow the rules of pleading and practice for the common law.
- 2 8. Ensure that those who sit on the jury have the same status as them by ensuring that those who are statutory “U.S.
- 3 citizens” or franchise participants are excluded as having a financial conflict of interest.

4 5.4.8.12.3 Serving civil legal process on nonresidents is the crime of “simulating legal process”

5 Some freedom lovers try to form their own private courts or grand juries to try or indict offenses against their rights by 6 actors within the de facto government. Such private courts are sometimes called:

- 7 1. Common law courts.
- 8 2. Ecclesiastical courts in the case of churches.
- 9 3. Franchise courts for the regulation of specific activities such as “driving”. This would include family courts, traffic
 10 courts, and social security administrative courts.

11 Those who convene such courts must be careful how they describe their activities to those outside the group, or the 12 participants could be indicted for simulating legal process. Legal process served by these groups can be called by a number 13 of different names, such as the following:

- 14 1. Non-statutory abatement.
- 15 2. Private Administrative Process (PAP).

16 Below is a definition of “simulating legal process”:

17 “A person commits the offense of simulating legal process if he or she “recklessly causes to be delivered to 18 another any document that simulates a summons, complaint, judgment, or other court process with the intent to 19 ... cause another to submit to the putative authority of the document; or take any action or refrain from taking 20 any action in response to the document, in compliance with the document, or on the basis of the document.”
 21 [Texas Penal Code Annotated, § 32.48(a)(2)]

22 Therefore, those forming common law courts or ecclesiastical courts may not use the words “complaint”, “judgment”,
 23 “summons” when issuing documents to parties OUTSIDE the group of people who expressly consented to their 24 jurisdiction. In other words, those who are not in the group or who are not “citizens” within whatever community they
 25 have formed, may not receive documents that are connected with any existing state or municipal court or which could be 26 confused with such courts.

27 Below is one ruling by a Texas court relating to a “simulating legal process” charge against an ecclesiastical court:

28 Free Exercise of Religion

29 Government action may burden the free exercise of religion, in violation of the First Amendment,73[10] in two 30 quite different ways: by interfering with a believer's ability to observe the commands or practices of his faith
 31 and by encroaching on the ability of a church to manage its internal affairs. Westbrook v. Penley, 231 S.W.3d.
 32 389, 395 (Tex. 2007). In appellant's pro se motions, he refers to the “exercise of one's faith.” More specifically,
 33 he raised the issue of ecclesiastical abstention in the trial court and cites to cases concerning this doctrine on 34 appeal. His arguments are directed at the trial court's jurisdiction over this matter, not the constitutionality of 35 section 32.48. So, it appears the judiciary's exercise of jurisdiction over the matter, rather than the 36 Legislature's enactment of section 32.48, is the target of his challenge. We, then, will address that aspect of the 37 constitutional issue he now presents on appeal; we will determine whether the trial court's exercise of 38 jurisdiction violated appellant's right to free exercise of religion by encroaching on the ability of his church to 39 manage its internal affairs.

40 The Constitution forbids the government from interfering with the right of hierarchical religious bodies to 41 establish their own internal rules and regulations and to create tribunals for adjudicating disputes over
 42 religious matters. See Serbian E. Orthodox Diocese v. Milivojevich, 426 U.S. 696, 708–09, 724–25, 96 S.Ct.
 43 2372, 49 L.Ed.2d. 151 (1976). Based on this constitutionally-mandated abstention, secular courts may not 44 intrude into the church's governance of “religious” or “ecclesiastical” matters, such as theological controversy, church discipline, ecclesiastical government, or the conformity of members to standards of morality. See In re Godwin, 293 S.W.3d. 742, 748 (Tex.App.—San Antonio 2009, orig. proceeding).

The record shows that Coleman, to whom the “Abatement” was delivered, was not a member of appellant’s church. That being so, the church’s position on the custody matter is not a purely ecclesiastical matter over which the trial court should have abstained from exercising its jurisdiction. This is not an internal affairs issue because the record conclusively establishes that the recipient is not a member of the church. The ecclesiastical abstention doctrine does not operate to prevent the trial court from exercising its jurisdiction over this matter. We overrule appellant’s final issue.

SOURCE: http://scholar.google.com/scholar\_case?case=13768262149764043927]

Therefore, if you form a common law or ecclesiastical court you should be careful to:

1. Draft a good membership or citizenship agreement.
2. Require all members to sign the membership or citizenship agreement.
3. Keep careful records that are safe from tampering.
4. NOT serve “legal process” of any kind against those who are NOT consenting members or citizens.

We take the same position in protecting OUR members from secular courts as the secular courts take toward private courts. The First Amendment requires that you have a right to either NOT associate or to associate with any group you choose INCLUDING, but not limited to the “state” having general jurisdiction where you live. That means you have a RIGHT to NOT be:

1. A “citizen” or “resident” in the area where you physically are.
2. A “driver” under the vehicle code.
3. A “spouse” under the family code.
4. A “taxpayer” under the tax code.

The dividing line between who are “members” and who are NOT members is who has a domicile in that specific jurisdiction. The subject of domicile is extensively covered in the following insightful document:

Why Domicile and Becoming a “Taxpayer” Require Your Consent, Form #05.002
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

We allege that secular franchise courts such as tax court, traffic court, family court, social security administrative court, and even civil court in your area are equally culpable for the SAME crime of “simulating legal process” if they serve legal process upon anyone who is NOT a “member” of their “state” and who has notified them of that fact. As such, any at least CIVIL process served upon them by secular courts of the de facto government is ALSO a criminal simulation of legal process because instituted against non-consenting parties who are non-residents and “non-members”, just as in the above case. Membership has to be consensual.

The record shows that Coleman, to whom the “Abatement” was delivered, was not a member of appellant’s church. That being so, the church’s position on the custody matter is not a purely ecclesiastical matter over which the trial court should have abstained from exercising its jurisdiction. This is not an internal affairs issue because the record conclusively establishes that the recipient is not a member of the church. The ecclesiastical abstention doctrine does not operate to prevent the trial court from exercising its jurisdiction over this matter. We overrule appellant’s final issue.

We also argue that just like the above ruling, the secular government in fact and in deed is ALSO a church, as described in the following exhaustive proof of that fact:

Socialism: The New American Civil Religion, Form #05.016
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

1 In support of the above, Black's Law Dictionary defines "franchise courts" such as traffic court and family court as
2 PRIVATE courts:

3 "franchise court. Hist. A privately held court that (usu.) exists by virtue of a royal grant [privilege], with 4 jurisdiction over a variety of matters, depending on the grant and whatever powers the court acquires over
5 time. In 1274, Edward I abolished many of these feudal courts by forcing the nobility to demonstrate by what
6 authority (quo warranto) they held court. If a lord could not produce a charter reflecting the franchise, the 7 court was abolished. - Also termed courts of the franchise.

8 Dispensing justice was profitable. Much revenue could come from the fees and dues, fines and amercements.
9 This explains the growth of the second class of feudal courts, the Franchise Courts. They too were private 10 courts held by feudal lords. Sometimes their claim to jurisdiction was based on old pre-Conquest grants ... But 11 many of them were, in reality, only wrongful usurpations of private jurisdiction by powerful lords. These were

13 Legal History 56-57 (2d ed. 1949)."

14 [Black's Law Dictionary, Seventh Edition, p. 668]

15 As a BARE minimum, we think that if you get summoned into any franchise court for violations of the franchise, such as 16 tax court, traffic court, and family court, then the government as moving party who summoned you should at LEAST have 17 the burden of proving that you EXPRESSLY CONSENTED in writing to become a "member" of the group that created the 18 court, such as "taxpayer", "driver", "spouse", etc. and that if they CANNOT satisfy that burden of proof, then:

- 19 1. All charges should be dismissed.
- 20 2. The franchise judge and government prosecutor should BOTH be indicted and civilly sued for simulating legal process 21 under the common law and not statutory civil law.

22 5.4.8.13 How the corrupt government kidnaps your identity and your domicile and moves it to the federal zone 23 or interferes with your choice of domicile

24 Based on the foregoing discussion, it ought to be obvious that the government doesn't want you to know any of the 25 following facts:

- 26 1. That all civil jurisdiction originates from your choice of domicile.
- 27 2. That all income taxation is a civil liability that originates from your choice of domicile.
- 28 3. That domicile requires your consent and is the equivalent of your consent to be civilly governed as required by the 29 Declaration of Independence.
- 30 4. That because they need your consent to choose a domicile, they can't tax or even govern you civilly without your 31 consent.
- 32 5. That domicile is based on the coincidence of physical presence and intent/consent to permanently remain in a place.
- 33 6. That unless you choose a domicile within the jurisdiction of the government that has general jurisdiction where you 34 live, they have no authority to institute income taxation upon you.
- 35 7. That no one can determine your domicile except you.
- 36 8. That if you don't want the protection of government, you can fire them and handle your own protection, by changing
37 your domicile to a different place or group or government or choosing no domicile at all. This then relieves you of an 38 obligation to pay income taxes to support the protection that you no longer want or need.

39 Therefore, governments have a vested interest in hiding the relationship of "domicile" to income taxation by removing it or 40 at least obfuscating it in their "codes". We call this "The hide the presumption and hide the consent game."

41 5.4.8.13.1 Compelled domicile generally

42 A number of irreconcilable conflicts of law are created by COMPELLING EVERYONE to have either a specific domicile
43 or an earthly domicile. For instance:

- 44 1. If the First Amendment gives us a right to freely associate and also implies a right to DISASSOCIATE, how can we be 45 compelled to associate with a "state" or the people in the locality where we live without violating the First
46 Amendment? It may not be presumed that we moved to a place because we wanted to associate with the people there.
- 47 2. Domicile creates a duty of allegiance, according to the cite above. All allegiance MUST be voluntary. How can the 48 state compel allegiance by compelling a person to have or to choose an earthly domicile? What gives them the right to

- 1 insist that the only legitimate type of domicile is associated with a government? Why can't it be a church, a religious
 2 group, or simply an association of people who want to have their own police force or protection service separated from
 3 the state? Since the only product that government delivers is "protection", why can't people have the right to fire the 4 government and provide their own protection with the tax money they would have paid the government?
- 5 3. When one chooses a domicile, they create a legal or contractual obligation to support a specific government, based on 6 the above. By compelling everyone to choose an earthly domicile whose object is a specific government or state, isn't 7 the state interfering with our right to contract by compelling us to contract with a specific government for our
 8 protection? The Constitution, Article 1, Section 10 says no state shall make any law impairing the obligation of 9 contracts. Implicit in this right to contract is the right NOT to contract. Every right implies the opposite right.
 10 Therefore, how can everyone be compelled to have a domicile without violating their right to contract?
- 11 4. The U.S. Supreme Court also said that income taxation based on domicile is "quasi-contractual" in nature.

12 "Even if the judgment is deemed to be colored by the nature of the obligation whose validity it establishes, and
 13 we are free to re-examine it, and, if we find it to be based on an obligation penal in character, to refuse to
 14 enforce it outside the state where rendered, see Wisconsin v. Pelican Insurance Co., 127 U.S. 265, 292, et seq.

 21 and see Stockwell v. United States, 13 Wall. 531, 542; Meredith v. United States, 13 Pet. 486, 493. This was

 26 [Milwaukee v. White, 296 U.S. 268 (1935)]

27 The "quasi-contract" they are referring to above is your voluntary choice of "domicile", no doubt. How can they 28 compel such a contract if the person who is the object of the compulsion refuses to "do business" with the state and 29 also refuses to avail themselves of any of the benefits of membership in said state? Wouldn't that amount to slavery,
 30 involuntary servitude, and violate the Thirteenth Amendment prohibition against involuntary servitude?

31 Do you see how subtle this domicile thing is? It's a very sneaky way to draw you into the world system and force you to 32 adopt and comply with earthly laws and a government that are hostile towards and foreign to God's laws. All of the above
 33 deceptions and ruses are designed to keep you enslaved and entrapped to support a government that does nothing for you
 34 and which you may even want to abandon or disassociate with.

35 We allege that whenever anyone from a state or federal government, or acting as an agent of same such as a "withholding 36 agent", compels you to either have a specific domicile in a specific place or PRESUMES you have a domicile without 37 producing evidence of consent on the record to that specific domicile then they are:

- 38 1. "purposefully availing themselves" of commerce within OUR jurisdiction.
 39 2. STEALING, where the thing being STOLEN are the public rights associated with the statutory civil "status" they are 40 presuming we have but never expressly consented to have. You ought to specify in advance the PRICE or COST of 41 the things stolen as being TWICE what they want to collect from you. This is Biblical. See Exodus 22:7.
 42 3. Engaging in criminal identity theft, because the civil status is associated with a domicile in a place we are not 43 physically in and do not consent to a civil domicile in.
 44 4. Waiving official, judicial, and sovereign immunity.
 45 5. Acting in a private and personal capacity beyond the statutory jurisdiction of their government employer.
 46 6. Compelling us to contract with the state under the civil statutory "social compact".
 47 7. Interfering with our First Amendment right to freely and civilly DISASSOCIATE with the state.
 48 8. Engaged in a constitutional tort.

49 You should insist on the above terms on any form you fill out and submit to the government that has a block for 50 "residence", "permanent address", or "domicile".

5.4.8.13.2 Domicile on government forms

You should view every opportunity to complete a government form or any form that indicates a “domicile”, “residence”, or “permanent address” as:

1. A waiver of sovereign immunity under 28 U.S.C. §1603(b)(3) and 28 U.S.C. §1605(b)(2).
2. A change in status from "foreign" to "domestic" in relation to the government that created the form.
3. An agreement to become a “customer” of government protection called a “citizen”, “resident”, and/or “inhabitant” within a specific jurisdiction.
4. The conveyance of “consent to be governed” as the Declaration of Independence indicates.
5. An attempt to nominate a protector and delegate to them the authority to supervise and even penalize your activities under the authority of the civil law.
6. An agreement to pay for the protection of the specific government you have nominated to protect you.
7. A voluntary attempt on your part to surrender rights recognized in the Constitution in exchange for privileges and “benefits” under a franchise agreement and to change your status from a “transient foreigner” to a “person” subject to federal statutes. The most privileged status you can be in is to be a resident alien participating in federal franchises. The Declaration of Independence says that rights protected by the Constitution are “unalienable”, meaning that they CAN'T be sold, transferred, or bargained away in relation to any government by any commercial process, including a government franchise or application. Therefore, you are recognizing that the grantor of the benefit is not a government, but a private corporation.
8. An attempt to destroy equal protection mandated by the Constitution and make a specific government your "parens patriae", or government parent.

In short, anyone who asks you to fill out a government form or indicate a “domicile”, “residence”, or “permanent address” on their own private form is asking you the following question:

“Who’s your daddy and where does he live? We want to notify him that you have selected him as your protector and agreed to become liable to subsidize his protection racket and his supervision of your otherwise private affairs. We don’t trust you so we want you to agree to sign this protection contract, nominate a protector, and agree to become his privileged employee or officer so he will ensure you won’t become a burden, bother, or injury to us.”

There are several ways that you are often deceived into inadvertently declaring a domicile on federal territory on government forms.

1. By declaring that you maintain a domicile or live in the “United States”, which is defined as federal territory and excludes states of the Union pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §7701\(a\)\(9\) and (a)(10). This is done by filling out anything in the block labeled “permanent address” or “residence” and indicating anything in that block other than the de jure republic you were born within or the Kingdom of Heaven on Earth.

The term "State" shall be construed to include the District of Columbia, where such construction is necessary to carry out provisions of this title.

People born and domiciled within the de jure states of the Union are domiciled in the “United States of America” or in the name of their state. For instance, under “country” put “California Republic” instead of “United States”.

- 1 2. By filling out a government form and indicating that you are a statutory “U.S. citizen” pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1401 or 2 “resident” or “permanent resident” pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §7701\(b\)\(4\)\(B\). All such persons have a legal domicile on
 3 federal territory. Collectively, these people are called “U.S. persons” pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §7701\(a\)\(30\).
 4 3. By filling out a form that presumes you are a “U.S. person”, such as IRS Form 1040. That form is ONLY for use by
 5 “U.S. persons” pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §7701\(a\)\(30\) who have a legal domicile on federal territory. If you are not
 6 domiciled on federal territory, the only correct form to use is the IRS Form 1040NR. Even the 1040NR is a statutory
 7 “taxpayer” form and therefore needs either modification or an attachment to clarify that it is being submitted by a
 8 NONTAXPAYER.

- 44 5. By requesting or using a Taxpayer Identification Number on any government form, which makes you into a statutory 45 “resident alien” as described in 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(A) domiciled on federal territory. The only people who need
 46 them are “taxpayers” who are engaged in a “trade or business”/“public office” in the District of Columbia and therefore 47 partaking of federal franchises. All such persons have an effective domicile in the District of Columbia because they 48 are representing a federal corporation, the “United States” pursuant to 28 U.S.C. §3002\(15\)\(A\) and are officers of that
 49 corporation. 26 U.S.C. §7701\(a\)\(39\), 26 U.S.C. §7408\(d\), and Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 17(b) all place their
 50 effective domicile in the District of Columbia and not within the place they physically occupy by virtue of the fact that 51 they are acting in a representative capacity as a “public officer”.

23 We will now spend the rest of the section talking about how to avoid the problem described in item 1 above. There are 24 many occasions on government forms, and especially tax forms, where we will be asked if we are “residents” and what our
 25 “residence” is and we must be very careful what we put on these forms. If a “residence” must be established on a 26 government form for any reason, the safest way to handle this situation as a Christian is as follows:

- 27 1. Line out the word “residence” and replace it with “domicile”.
- 28 2. In the block declaring “residence” or “permanent address”, put one of the following:
  - 29 2.1. “Kingdom of Heaven on Earth (not within any man made government)”.
  - 30 2.2. A geographical place that has no owner and no government, such as the middle of the ocean.
- 31 3. At the end of the address line put in parenthesis: “Not a domicile or residence.”
- 32 4. If they ask you if you are a “resident”, simply say “NO”.
- 33 5. Put a note at the bottom saying:

34 “See and rebut the following web address for details, if you disagree:
 35 <http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/Forms/Emancipation/ChangeOfAddressAttachment.htm>”

36 A person who does all the above is what we call “civilly dead”. The status of being “civilly dead” is the only proper status
 37 for a devout Christian, and it is thoroughly described in:

Delegation of Authority Order from God to Christians, Form #13.007, Section 3.3
 DIRECT LINK: <http://sedm.org/Forms/13-SelfFamilyChurchGovnce/DelOfAuthority.pdf>
 FORMS PAGE: <http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

38 Any location of “residence” other than “Kingdom of Heaven on Earth” or a place not within the jurisdiction of any man-
 39 made government, however, will prejudice your rights, violate the Bible, and result in idolatry towards man/government.
 40 In fact, we believe the word “residence” and “resident” were invented by the legal profession as a way to separate intent
 41 from the word “domicile” so that people would no longer have a choice of their legal home. Christians should be very wary 42 of this devious legal trap and avoid it as indicated above.

43 “And have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, but rather expose [rebuke] them.”
 44 [Eph. 5:11, Bible]

45 There are also BIG advantages to declaring our domicile as being outside of federal jurisdiction in either the Kingdom of 46 Heaven on Earth or a state of the Union, which is legislatively but not Constitutionally “foreign” with respect to the federal

1 government. For instance, one's domicile determines the rules of decision of every court in which a person is sued. Below
2 is an excerpt from the Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 17(b) which proves this:

3 IV. PARTIES > Rule 17.

4 Rule 17. Parties Plaintiff and Defendant; Capacity

5 (b) Capacity to Sue or be Sued.

6 Capacity to sue or be sued is determined as follows:

7 (1) for an individual who is not acting in a representative capacity, by the law of the individual's domicile;

8 (2) for a corporation[the "United States", in this case, or its officers on official duty representing the
9 corporation], by the law under which it was organized; and

10 (3) for all other parties, by the law of the state where the court is located, except that:

11 (A) a partnership or other unincorporated association with no such capacity under that state's law may sue
12 or be sued in its common name to enforce a substantive right existing under the United States Constitution
13 or laws; and

14 (B) 28 U.S.C. §§ 754 and 959(a) govern the capacity of a receiver appointed by a United States court to sue
15 or be sued in a United States court.

16 [SOURCE: <http://www.law.cornell.edu/rules/frcp/Rule17.htm>]

17 The above may not seem like a big deal, until you consider that if a person declares "heaven" as their domicile, then the 18 court has to use God's laws in the Holy Bible as the only rules of decision! They cannot quote ANY federal statute or even 19 court ruling as authority for what they are doing. The only thing they can apply is God's law and the rulings of 20 ecclesiastical courts on the subject. We would LOVE to see this in a tax trial. The government would get CREAMED!
21 This tactic is what we affectionately call "courtroom evangelism". In the case of Christians, the Common Law is the 22 nearest equivalent of God's law and that is the ONLY thing we can allow ourselves to be protected by as a devout
23 Christian. Statutory law, on the other hand, is only law for GOVERNMENT actors and not private persons:

Why Statutory Civil Law is Law for Government and Not Private Persons, Form #05.037

<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

24 Below is an example of how to fill this out for the state of California to remove any presumptions about "residence". If you
25 don't do this, the state will essentially legally "presume" that you are an "alien", a "resident", and a "taxpayer", and this
26 will grossly prejudice your Constitutional rights:

27 <http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/Forms/Emancipation/ChangeOfAddressAttachment.htm>

28 A number of legal factors are used in determining one's domicile. The following facts and circumstances, although not 29 necessarily conclusive, have probative value to support a claim of domicile within a particular state:

- 30 1. Continuous presence in the state.
- 31 2. Payment of ad valorem (property) taxes.
- 32 3. Payment of personal income taxes.
- 33 4. Reliance upon state sources for financial support.
- 34 5. Domicile in the state of family, or other relatives, or persons legally responsible for the person.
- 35 6. Former domicile in the state and maintenance of significant connections therein while absent.
- 36 7. Ownership of a home or real property.
- 37 8. Admission to a licensed practicing profession in the state.
- 38 9. Long term military commitments in the state.
- 39 10. Commitments to further education in the state indicating an intent to stay here permanently.
- 40 11. Acceptance of an offer of permanent employment in the state.
- 41 12. Location of spouse's employment, if any.
- 42 13. Address of student listed on selective service (draft or reserves) registration.

43 Other factors indicating an intent to make a state one's domicile may be considered. Normally, the following circumstances
44 do not constitute evidence of domicile sufficient to effect classification as a domiciliary:

- 45 1. Voting or registration for voting.
- 46 2. The lease of living quarters.

- 1       3. A statement of intention to acquire a domicile in state.
- 2       4. Automobile registration; address on driver's license; payment of automobile taxes.
- 3       5. Location of bank or saving accounts.

4       To conclude this section, you may wish to look at a few of the government's forms that effectively ask you what your
5       “domicile” is, so you can see what we are talking about in this section. Before we do, we must emphasize that in some
6       cases, the version of a form we choose to file, even if it says nothing on the form about domicile, may determine our
7       “residence”! This is VERY important. For instance, if we file a 1040NR form, we are claiming that we are not a “resident
8       alien” and that we do not maintain a domicile in the “United States” (federal territory). Whereas, if we file a 1040 form, we 9       are claiming that we are either a “resident” with a domicile in the “United States) (federal territory), or are a “U.S. citizen”
10      who is described as a “alien” coming under a tax treaty with the United States if we attach a form 2555 to the 1040 form.
11      Also keep in mind that only a “resident” can have a “residence”, and that all “residents” are aliens under the tax code, as far
12      as we understand it. This is confirmed by our quote of 26 C.F.R. §1.871-2 earlier in this section, which you may want to go
13      back and read. With these important considerations, below are a few of the forms that determine our “domicile”:

14

Table 5-38: Example forms that determine domicile

#	Issuing agency	Form number	Form name	"Domicile"	Blocks that determine domicile	Amplification
1	IRS	1040 , 1040EZ , 1040A	U.S. Individual Income Tax Return	"United States" (federal territory)	None. Just filing the form does this.
2	IRS	1040NR	U.S. Nonresident Alien Income Tax Return	State of the Union or foreign country	None. Just filing the form does this.
3	IRS	2555	Foreign Earned Income Exclusion	Abroad (foreign country)	None. Just filing the form does this.
4	IRS	W-8BEN		Place indicated in Block 4	Block 4: "Permanent address"	Make sure you put "Heaven" here!
5	Dept. of State	DS-11	Application for U.S. Passport or Registration	Place indicated in Block 13.	Block 13: "Permanent address"	Make sure you put "Heaven" here!
6	States	Change of address	Example: California DMV-14 form	Place indicated in "New Correct Residence Address"	"New Correct residence address"	Make sure you put "Heaven" here!
7	States	Voter registration	Voter registration	State where filed
8	States	Driver's license application	Driver's license application	State where filed (some states, not all)		In Oregon, you declare yourself to be a "resident" just by getting a state Driver's License. However, not all states do this.

Items 4 and 5 above are noteworthy, because they mention the phrase "Permanent address". Why do they use the phrase "permanent"? Because they want to DECEIVE you into thinking that you can't revoke or withdraw your request to be protected and are therefore FORCED to keep subsidizing them to protect you without your continuing consent. That way, they are the only ones who can unilaterally terminate the CONTRACTUAL protection arrangement. SCAM!

When you fill out government forms to reflect a domicile that is in Heaven, some ignorant or wicked or atheist clerks may decide to argue with you. Below are the three most popular arguments you will hear, which are each accompanied by tactics that are useful in opposing them:

1. If you submit the government form to a private company or organization, they may say that they as have an unofficial "policy" of not accepting such forms. In response to such tactics, find another company that will accept it. If all companies won't accept it, then sue the companies for discrimination and violation of First Amendment rights.
2. They may say that "domicile" is based on a physical place and that Heaven is not a physical place. In response to this, we must remember that the First Amendment prevents the government from "establishing a religion". Because of this prohibition, the government can't even "define" what a religion is:

A problem common to both religion clauses of the First Amendment is the dilemma of defining religion. To define religion is in a sense to establish it--those beliefs that are included enjoy a preferred constitutional status. For those left out of the definition, the definition may prove coercive. Indeed, it is in this latter context, which roughly approximates the area covered by the free exercise clause, where the cases and discussion of the meaning of religion have primarily centered. Professor Kent Greenawalt challenges the effort, and all efforts, to define religion: "No specification of essential conditions will capture all and only the benefits, practices, and organizations that are regarded as religious in modern culture and should be treated as such under the Constitution."

[First Amendment Law, Barron-Dienes, West Publishing, ISBN 0-314-22677-X, p. 432]

To even define what "Heaven" is or to say that it doesn't physically exist is effectively to establish a religion. In order to determine that "Heaven" is not a physical place, they would be violating the separation of church and state and infringing upon your First Amendment right to practice your religion.

3. They may say that no place can qualify as a domicile that you didn't occupy at one point or another. When they do this, the proper response is to say that they are interfering with your First Amendment religious rights and then to quote them the following scriptures, which suggest that we had an existence in Heaven before we ever came to earth and before time began:

"But God, who is rich in mercy, because of His great love with which He loved us, even when we were dead in trespasses, made us alive together with Christ (by grace you have been saved), and raised us up together, and made us sit together in the heavenly places in Christ Jesus,"

1 [\[Eph. 2:4-6, Bible, NKJV\]](#)

3 "Before I formed you in the womb I knew you;
4 Before you were born I sanctified you;
5 I ordained you a prophet to the nations."
6 [\[Jeremiah 1:5, Bible, NKJV\]](#)

8 "Therefore do not be ashamed of the testimony of our Lord, nor of me His prisoner, but share with me in the 9 *sufferings for the gospel according to the power of God, who has saved us and called us with a holy calling,
10 not according to our works, but according to His own purpose and grace which was given to us in Christ Jesus
11 before [earthly] time began."
12 [\[2 Tim. 1:8-9, Bible, NKJV\]](#)
13

14 "For we are His workmanship, created in Christ Jesus for good works, which God prepared beforehand that 15 we should walk in them."
16 [\[Eph. 2:10, Bible, NKJV\]](#)
17

18 I will praise You, for I am fearfully and wonderfully made;
19 Marvelous are Your works,
20 And that my soul knows very well.
21 My frame was not hidden from You,
22 When I was made in secret,
23 And skillfully wrought in the lowest parts of the earth.
24 Your eyes saw my substance, being yet unformed.
25 And in Your book they all were written,
26 The [earthly] days fashioned for me,
27 When as yet there were none of them.
28 How precious also are Your thoughts to me, O God!
29 How great is the sum of them!
30 [\[Psalm 139:14-17, Bible, NKJV\]](#)

31 Another approach that is useful against this tactic is to point out that the federal courts have ruled that:

32 "Similarly, when a person is prevented from leaving his domicile by circumstances not of his doing and
33 beyond his control, he may be relieved of the consequences attendant on domicile at that place. In Roboz
34 (USDC D.C. 1963) [Roboz v. Kennedy, 219 F.Supp. 892 (D.D.C. 1963), p. 24], a federal statute was involved
35 which precluded the return of an alien's property if he was found to be domiciled in Hungary prior to a certain 36 date. It was found that Hungary was Nazi-controlled at the time in question and that the persons involved
37 would have left Hungary (and lost domicile there) had they been able to. Since they had been precluded from 38 leaving because of the political privations imposed by the very government they wanted to escape (the father 39 was in prison there), the court would not hold them to have lost their property based on a domicile that 40 circumstances beyond their control forced them to retain."
41 [\[Conflicts in a Nutshell, Second Edition, David D. Seigel, West Publishing, 1994, ISBN 0-314-02952-4, p. 24\]](#)

42 We should always remember that we never chose to come here to earth, and our presence is involuntary. Therefore,
43 everything we do while here is a matter of compulsion rather than true choice. This subject is covered more
44 thoroughly earlier in sections 4.11.6 through 4.11.6.4 if you wish to investigate. Therefore, we can be relieved of the 45 consequences attendant to domicile if we do not wish to have one here.

46 If all the above arguments are ineffective or when the government refuses to recognize your choice of Heaven as a
47 domicile, remember also that the First Amendment STILL prevents them from compelling you to associate with any group,
48 including a state, and that they can't compel you to belong to or consent to any earthly government or civil law, to accept or
49 pay for protection you don't want and don't need, and which you can even prove is harmful to you. In effect, they cannot 50 violate the very reason for their establishment, which is protecting you the way YOU, not THEM want to be protected.

51 5.4.8.13.3 How the tax code compels choice of domicile

52 The government has compelled domicile or interfered with receiving the benefits of your choice by any of the following
53 means:

1. Nowhere in Internal Revenue Code is the word “domicile” admitted to be the source of the government’s jurisdiction to impose an income tax, even though the U.S. Supreme Court admitted this in Miller Brothers Co. v. Maryland, 347 U.S. 340 (1954). The word “domicile”, in fact, is only used in two sections of the entire 9,500 page Internal Revenue Code, Title 26. This is no accident, but a very devious way for the government to avoid getting into arguments with persons who it is accusing of being “taxpayers”. It avoids these arguments by avoiding showing Americans the easiest way to challenge federal jurisdiction, which is demanding proof from the government required by 5 U.S.C. §556(d), who is the moving party, that you maintain a domicile in the “United States” (federal territory). The two sections below are the only places where domicile is mentioned:
- 1.1. 26 U.S.C. §7448(j)(1)(B)(vi): Annuities to surviving spouses and dependent children of judges.
  - 1.2. 26 U.S.C. §6091: Defines where returns shall be submitted in the case of deceased “taxpayers”, which is the “domicile” of the decedent when he died.
2. They renamed the word “domicile” on government tax forms. They did this so that income taxation “appears” to be based entirely on physical presence, when in fact is also requires voluntary consent as well. If you knew that the government needed your consent to become a “taxpayer”, then probably everyone would “un-volunteer” and the government would be left scraping for pennies. Below are some examples of other names they gave to “domicile”:
- 2.1. “permanent address”
  - 2.2. “permanent residence”
  - 2.3. “residence”: defined above, and only applying to “aliens”. There is no definition of “residence” anywhere in the I.R.C. in the case of a “citizen”. Below is how Volume 28 of the Corpus Juris Secundum (C.J.S.) legal encyclopedia, Domicile, describes the distinction between “residence” and “domicile”:

Corpus Juris Secundum
§4 Domicile and Residence Distinguished

b. Use of Terms in Statutes

The terms “domicile” and “residence,” as used in statutes, are commonly, although not necessarily, construed as synonymous. Whether the term “residence,” as used in a statute, will be construed as having the meaning of “domicile,” or the term “domicile” construed as “residence,” depends on the purpose of the statute and the nature of the subject matter, as well as the context in which the term is used. 32 It has been declared that the terms “residence” and “domicile” are almost universally used interchangeably in statute, and that since domicile and legal residence are synonymous, the statutory rules for determining the place of residence are the rules for determining domicile.34 However, it has been held that “residence,” when used in statutes, is generally interpreted by the courts as meaning “domicile,” but with important exception.

Accordingly, whenever the terms “residence” and “domicile” are used in connection with subjects of domestic policy, the terms are equivalent, as they also are, generally, where a statute prescribes residence as a qualification for the enjoyment of a privilege or the exercise of a franchise. “Residence” as used in various particular statutes has been considered synonymous with “domicile.” 39 However, the terms are not necessarily synonymous.40
[28 Corpus Juris Secundum, Domicile, §4 Domicile and Resident Distinguished]

3. By telling you that you MUST have a “domicile”. For instance, the Volume 28 of the Corpus Juris Secundum (C.J.S.) section on “Domicile” says the following on this subject:

Corpus Juris Secundum
§5 Necessity and Number

“It is a settled principle that every person must have a domicile somewhere.3 The law permits no individual to be without a domicile,42 and an individual is never without a domicile somewhere.13 Domicile is a continuing thing, and from the moment a person is born he must, at all times, have a domicile .”
[28 Corpus Juris Secundum, Domicile, §5 Necessity and Number]

Corpus Juris Secundum
§9 Domicile by Operation of Law

“Whenever a person does not fix a domicile for himself, the law will fix one for him in accordance with the facts and circumstances of the case; 12 and an infant’s domicile will be fixed by operation of law where it cannot be determined from that of the parents.73”
[28 Corpus Juris Secundum, Domicile, §9 Domicile by Operation of Law]

The above requirement can and does apply ONLY to civil statutory “persons” and the choice to become such a “person” is voluntary or else it would violate the First Amendment right of freedom from compelled association. Also note that such “persons” are all public officers. Indirectly, what they are also suggesting in the above by FORCING you to have a domicile is that:

3.1. You cannot choose God as your sole CIVIL Protector, but MUST have an earthly protector who cannot be yourself.

3.2. Although the First Amendment gives you the right to freely associate, it does not give you the right to CIVILLY disassociate with ALL governments. This is an absurdity.

3.3. Government has a monopoly on CIVIL protection and that individuals are not allowed to fire the government and provide their own protection, either individually or collectively.

4. By inventing new words that allow them to avoid mentioning “domicile” in their vague “codes” while giving you the impression that an obligation exists that actually is consensual. For instance, in 26 U.S.C. §911 is the section of the I.R.C. entitled “Citizens or residents of the United States living abroad”. This section identifies the income tax liabilities of persons domiciled in the “United States” (federal zone) who are living temporarily abroad. We showed earlier that if they have a domicile abroad, then they cannot be either “citizens” or “residents” under the I.R.C., because domicile is a prerequisite for being either. In that section, they very deceptively:

4.1. Use the word “abode” in 26 U.S.C. §911\(d\)\(3\) to describe one’s domicile so as to remove the requirement for “intent” and “consent” from consideration of the subject, even though they have no authority to ignore this requirement for consent in the case of anything but an “alien”.

4.2. Don't even use the word “domicile” at all, and refuse to acknowledge that what “citizens” or “residents” both have in common is a “domicile” within the United States. They did this to preserve the illusion that even after one changes their domicile to a foreign country while abroad, the federal tax liability continues, when in fact, it legally is not required to. After domicile is changed, those Americans who changed it while abroad then are no longer called “citizens” under federal law, but rather “nationals” and “non-resident non-persons”. If they are engaged in a public office, they also become statutory “nonresident aliens”.

4.3. They invented a new word called a “tax home”, as if it were a substitute for “domicile”, when in fact it is not. A “tax home” is defined in 26 U.S.C. §911 as a place where a person who has a temporary presence abroad treats himself or herself as a privileged “resident” in the foreign country but still also maintains a privileged “resident” and “domicile” status in the “United States”.

TITLE 26 > Subtitle A > CHAPTER 1 > Subchapter N > PART III > Subpart B > § 911
§ 911. Citizens or residents of the United States living abroad

(d) Definitions and special rules For purposes of this section—

(3) Tax home

*The term “tax home” means, with respect to any individual, such individual’s home for purposes of section 162 (a)(2) (relating to traveling expenses while away from home). An individual shall not be treated as having a tax home in a foreign country for any period for which his abode [domicile] is within the United States [federal zone].

The only way the government can maintain your status as a “taxpayer” is to perpetuate you in a “privileged” state, so they simply don’t offer any options to leave the privileged state by refusing to admit to you that the terms “citizen” and “resident” presume you made a voluntary choice of domicile within their exclusive jurisdiction on federal territory. I.R.C. section 162 mentioned above is the section for privileged deductions, and the only persons who can take deductions are those engaged in the privileged “trade or business” excise taxable franchise. Therefore, the only person who would derive any benefit from deductions is a person with a domicile in the “United States” (federal territory) and who has earnings from that place which are connected with a “trade or business”, which means U.S. government (corporation) source income as a “public officer”.

5.4.8.13.4 How the Legal Encyclopedia compels choice of domicile

Even the legal encyclopedia tries to hide the nature of domicile. For instance, Volume 28 of the Corpus Juris Secundum (C.J.S.) at:

<http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/CitesByTopic/Domicile-28CJS-20051203.pdf>

1 which we quoted in the previous section does not even mention the requirement for “allegiance” as part of domicile or the
 2 fact that allegiance must be voluntary and not compelled, even though the U.S. Supreme Court said this was an essential
 3 part of it:

4 “Since the Fourteenth Amendment makes one a citizen of the state wherein he resides, the fact of residence
 5 creates universally reciprocal duties of protection by the state and of allegiance and support by the citizen.
 6 The latter obviously includes a duty to pay taxes, and their nature and measure is largely a political matter.”
 7 [Miller Brothers Co. v. Maryland, 347 U.S. 340 (1954)]

8 The legal encyclopedia in the above deliberately and maliciously omits mention of any of the following key concepts, even 9 though the U.S. Supreme Court has acknowledged elements of them as we have shown:

- 10 1. That allegiance that is the foundation of domicile must be voluntary and cannot be coerced.
- 11 2. That external factors such as the withdrawal of one’s right to conduct commerce for failure to give allegiance causes 12 domicile choice to no longer be voluntary.
- 13 3. That a choice of domicile constitutes an exercise of your First Amendment right of freedom of association and that a 14 failure to associate with a specific government is an exercise of your right of freedom from compelled association.
- 15 4. That you retain all your constitutional rights even WITHOUT choosing a domicile within a specific government 16 because rights attach to the land you are standing on and not the civil status you choose by exercising your right to 17 associate and becoming a member of a “state” or municipality.

18 The result of maliciously refusing to acknowledge the above concepts is a failure to acknowledge the foundation of all just 19 authority of every government on earth, which is the consent of the governed mentioned in our Declaration of 20 Independence.

21 “We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator
 22 with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness.--That to
 23 secure these rights, Governments are instituted among Men, deriving their just powers from the consent of 24 the governed. --That whenever any Form of Government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the Right of the 25 People to alter or to abolish it, and to institute new Government, laying its foundation on such principles and 26 organizing its powers in such form, as to them shall seem most likely to effect their Safety and Happiness.”
 27 [Declaration of Independence]

28 A failure to acknowledge that requirement results in a complete destruction of the sovereignty of the people, because the 29 basis of all your sovereignty is that no one can do anything to you without your consent, unless you injured the equal rights
 30 of others. This concept is exhaustively described in the following document:

Requirement for Consent, Form #05.003
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

31 5.4.8.13.5 How governments compel choice of domicile: Government ID

32 In order to do business within any jurisdiction, and especially with the government and financial institutions, one usually 33 needs identification documents. Such documents include:

- 34 1. State driver’s license. Issued by the Dept. of Motor Vehicles in your state.
- 35 2. State ID card. Issued by the Dept. of Motor Vehicles in your state.
- 36 3. Permanent resident green card.
- 37 4. National passport. Issued by the U.S. Dept. of State.
- 38 5. U.S. Citizen Card. Issued by the Dept. of State. These are typically used at border crossings.

39 All ID issued by the state governments, and especially the driver’s license, requires that the applicant be a “resident” of the 40 “State of_____”. If you look up the definition of “resident” and “State of” or “State” or “in this State” within the state tax 41 code, these terms are defined to mean a privileged alien with a domicile on federal territory not protected by the 42 Constitution.

43 USA passports also require that you provide a domicile. The Dept. of State DS-11 Form in Block 17 requires you to 44 specify a “Permanent Address”, which means domicile. See:

<http://famguardian.org/Subjects/Taxes/Citizenship/DOS-DS11-20080320.pdf>

Domicile within the country is not necessary in order to be issued a national passport. All you need is proof of birth within that country. If you would like tips on how to obtain a national passport without a domicile within a state and without government issued identifying numbers that connect you to franchises, see:

Getting a USA Passport As a "state national", Form #09.007

<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

State ID, however, always requires domicile within the state in order to be issued either a state driver's license or a state ID. Consequently, there is no way to avoid becoming privileged if you want state ID. This situation would seem at first to be a liability until you also consider that they can't lawfully issue a driver's license to non-residents. Imagine going down to the DMV and telling them that you are physically on state land but do not choose a domicile here and that you can't be compelled to and that you would like for them to certify that you came in to request a license and that you were refused and don't qualify. Then you can show that piece of paper called a "Letter of Disqualification" to the next police officer who stops you and asks you for a license. Imagine having the following dialog with the police officer when you get stopped:

Officer: May I see your license and registration please?

You: I'm sorry, officer, but I went down to the DMV to request a license and they told me that I don't qualify because I am a non-resident of this state. I have a Letter of Disqualification they gave me while I was there stating that I made application and that they could not lawfully issue me a license. Here it is, officer.

Officer: Well, then do you have a license from another state?

You: My domicile is in a place that has no government. Therefore, there is no one who can issue licenses there. Can you show me a DMV office in the middle of the ocean, which is where my domicile is and where my will says my ashes will be PERMANENTLY taken to when I die. My understanding is that domicile or residence requires an intention to permanently remain at a place and I am not here permanently and don't intend to remain here. I am a perpetual traveler, a transient foreigner, and a vagrant until I am buried.

Officer: Don't get cute with me. If you don't produce a license, then I'm going to cite you for driving without a license.

You: Driving is a commercial activity and I am not presently engaged in a commercial activity. Do you have any evidence to the contrary? Furthermore, I'd love to see you explain to the judge how you can punish me for refusing to have that which the government says they can't even lawfully issue me. That ought to be a good laugh. I'm going to make sure the whole family is there for that one. It'll be better than Saturday Night Live!

We allege that the purpose of the vehicle code in your state is NOT the promotion of public safety, but to manufacture "residents" and "taxpayers". The main vehicle by which states of the Union, in fact, manufacture "residents", who are privileged "public officers" that are "taxpayers" and aliens with respect to the government is essentially by compelling everyone to obtain and use state driver's licenses. This devious trap operates as follows:

1. You cannot obtain a state driver's license without being a "resident". If you go into any DMV office and tell them you are not a "resident", then they are not allowed to issue you a license. You can ask from them what is called a "Letter of Disqualification", which states that you are not eligible for a driver's license. You can keep that letter and show it to any police officer who stops you and wants your "license". He cannot then cite you for "driving without a license" that the state refuses to issue you, nor can he impound your car for driving without a license!

California Vehicle Code

"14607.6. (a) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, and except as provided in this section, a motor vehicle is subject to forfeiture as a nuisance if it is driven on a highway in this state by a driver with a suspended or revoked license, or by an unlicensed driver, who is a registered owner of the vehicle at the time of impoundment and has a previous misdemeanor conviction for a violation of subdivision (a) of Section 12500 or Section 14601, 14601.1, 14601.2, 14601.3, 14601.4, or 14601.5.

(b) A peace officer shall not stop a vehicle for the sole reason of determining whether the driver is properly licensed.

1 (c) (1) If a driver is unable to produce a valid driver's license on the demand of a peace officer enforcing
2 the provisions of this code, as required by subdivision (b) of Section 12951, the vehicle shall be impounded
3 regardless of ownership, unless the peace officer is reasonably able, by other means, to verify that the driver
4 is properly licensed. Prior to impounding a vehicle, a peace officer shall attempt to verify the license status
5 of a driver who claims to be properly licensed but is unable to produce the license on demand of the peace
6 officer.

7 (2) A peace officer shall not impound a vehicle pursuant to this subdivision if the license of the driver expired
8 within the preceding 30 days and the driver would otherwise have been properly licensed.

9 (3) A peace officer may exercise discretion in a situation where the driver without a valid license is an
10 employee driving a vehicle registered to the employer in the course of employment. A peace officer may also 11 exercise discretion in a situation where the driver without a valid license is the employee of a bona fide
12 business establishment or is a person otherwise controlled by such an establishment and it reasonably appears
13 that an owner of the vehicle, or an agent of the owner, relinquished possession of the vehicle to the business
14 establishment solely for servicing or parking of the vehicle or other reasonably similar situations, and where 15 the vehicle was not to be driven except as directly necessary to accomplish that business purpose. In this event,
16 if the vehicle can be returned to or be retrieved by the business establishment or registered owner, the peace
17 officer may release and not impound the vehicle.

18 (4) A registered or legal owner of record at the time of impoundment may request a hearing to determine the 19 validity of the impoundment pursuant to subdivision (n).

20 (5) If the driver of a vehicle impounded pursuant to this subdivision was not a registered owner of the 21 vehicle at the time of impoundment, or if the driver of the vehicle was a registered owner of the vehicle at the 22 time of impoundment but the driver does not have a previous conviction for a violation of subdivision (a) of 23 Section 12500 or Section 14601, 14601.1, 14601.2, 14601.3, 14601.4, or 14601.5, the vehicle shall be released
24 pursuant to this code and is not subject to forfeiture.

25 (d) (1) This subdivision applies only if the driver of the vehicle is a registered owner of the vehicle at the time
26 of impoundment. Except as provided in paragraph (5) of subdivision (c), if the driver of a vehicle impounded
27 pursuant to subdivision (c) was a registered owner of the vehicle at the time of impoundment, the impounding
28 agency shall authorize release of the vehicle if, within three days of impoundment, the driver of the vehicle at 29 the time of impoundment presents his or her valid driver's license, including a valid temporary California
30 driver's license or permit, to the impounding agency. The vehicle shall then be released to a registered owner
31 of record at the time of impoundment, or an agent of that owner authorized in writing, upon payment of towing
32 and storage charges related to the impoundment, and any administrative charges authorized by Section
33 22850.5, providing that the person claiming the vehicle is properly licensed and the vehicle is properly
34 registered. A vehicle impounded pursuant to the circumstances described in paragraph (3) of subdivision (c)
35 shall be released to a registered owner whether or not the driver of the vehicle at the time of impoundment
36 presents a valid driver's license.

37 (2) If there is a community property interest in the vehicle impounded pursuant to subdivision (c), owned at 38 the time of impoundment by a person other than the driver, and the vehicle is the only vehicle available to the 39 driver's immediate family that may be operated with a class C driver's license, the vehicle shall be released to a 40 registered owner or to the community property interest owner upon compliance with all of the following
41 requirements:

42 (A) The registered owner or the community property interest owner requests release of the vehicle and the 43 owner of the community property interest submits proof of that interest.

44 (B) The registered owner or the community property interest owner submits proof that he or she, or an 45 authorized driver, is properly licensed and that the impounded vehicle is properly registered pursuant to this 46 code.

47 (C) All towing and storage charges related to the impoundment and any administrative charges authorized
48 pursuant to Section 22850.5 are paid.

49 (D) The registered owner or the community property interest owner signs a stipulated vehicle release
50 agreement, as described in paragraph (3), in consideration for the nonforfeiture of the vehicle. This 51 requirement applies only if the driver requests release of the vehicle.

52 (3) A stipulated vehicle release agreement shall provide for the consent of the signator to the automatic future
53 forfeiture and transfer of title to the state of any vehicle registered to that person, if the vehicle is driven by a
54 driver with a suspended or revoked license, or by an unlicensed driver. The agreement shall be in effect for 55 only as long as it is noted on a driving record maintained by the department pursuant to Section 1806.1.

(4) The stipulated vehicle release agreement described in paragraph (3) shall be reported by the impounding agency to the department not later than 10 days after the day the agreement is signed.

(5) No vehicle shall be released pursuant to paragraph (2) if the driving record of a registered owner indicates that a prior stipulated vehicle release agreement was signed by that person.

(e) (1) The impounding agency, in the case of a vehicle that has not been redeemed pursuant to subdivision (d), or that has not been otherwise released, shall promptly ascertain from the department the names and addresses of all legal and registered owners of the vehicle.

(2) The impounding agency, within two days of impoundment, shall send a notice by certified mail, return receipt requested, to all legal and registered owners of the vehicle, at the addresses obtained from the department, informing them that the vehicle is subject to forfeiture and will be sold or otherwise disposed of pursuant to this section. The notice shall also include instructions for filing a claim with the district attorney, and the time limits for filing a claim. The notice shall also inform any legal owner of its right to conduct the sale pursuant to subdivision (g). If a registered owner was personally served at the time of impoundment with a notice containing all the information required to be provided by this paragraph, no further notice is required to be sent to a registered owner. However, a notice shall still be sent to the legal owners of the vehicle, if any. If notice was not sent to the legal owner within two working days, the impounding agency shall not charge the legal owner for more than 15-days' impoundment when the legal owner redeems the impounded vehicle.

(3) No processing charges shall be imposed on a legal owner who redeems an impounded vehicle within 15 days of the impoundment of that vehicle. If no claims are filed and served within 15 days after the mailing of the notice in paragraph (2), or if no claims are filed and served within five days of personal service of the notice specified in paragraph (2), when no other mailed notice is required pursuant to paragraph (2), the district attorney shall prepare a written declaration of forfeiture of the vehicle to the state. A written declaration of forfeiture signed by the district attorney under this subdivision shall be deemed to provide good and sufficient title to the forfeited vehicle. A copy of the declaration shall be provided on request to any person informed of the pending forfeiture pursuant to paragraph (2). A claim that is filed and is later withdrawn by the claimant shall be deemed not to have been filed.

(4) If a claim is timely filed and served, then the district attorney shall file a petition of forfeiture with the appropriate juvenile, municipal, or superior court within 10 days of the receipt of the claim. The district attorney shall establish an expedited hearing date in accordance with instructions from the court, and the court shall hear the matter without delay. The court filing fee, not to exceed fifty dollars ($50), shall be paid by the claimant, but shall be reimbursed by the impounding agency if the claimant prevails. To the extent practicable, the civil and criminal cases shall be heard at the same time in an expedited, consolidated proceeding. A proceeding in the civil case is a limited civil case.”
[California Vehicle Code, Section 14607.6, Sept. 20, 2004]

Below is evidence showing how one person obtained a “Letter of Disqualification“ that resulted in being able to drive perpetually without having a state -issued driver's license.

<http://famguardian.org/Subjects/Taxes/Articles/DomicileBasisTaxationDL-20060522.pdf>

2. Most state vehicle codes define “resident” as a person with a domicile in the “State”. Below is an example from the California Vehicle Code:

California Vehicle Code

516. “Resident” means any person who manifests an intent to live or be located in this state on more than a temporary or transient basis. Presence in the state for six months or more in any 12-month period gives rise to a rebuttable presumption of residency.

The following are evidence of residency for purposes of vehicle registration:

(a) Address where registered to vote.

(b) Location of employment or place of business.

(c) Payment of resident tuition at a public institution of higher education.

(d) Attendance of dependents at a primary or secondary school.

(e) Filing a homeowner's property tax exemption.

(f) Renting or leasing a home for use as a residence.

(g) Declaration of residency to obtain a license or any other privilege or benefit not ordinarily extended to a nonresident.

(h) Possession of a California driver's license.

(i) Other acts, occurrences, or events that indicate presence in the state is more than temporary or transient.

California Vehicle Code

12505. (a) (1) For purposes of this division only and notwithstanding Section 516, residency shall be determined as a person's state of domicile. "State of domicile" means the state where a person has his or her true, fixed, and permanent home and principal residence and to which he or she has manifested the intention of returning whenever he or she is absent.

Prima facie evidence of residency for driver's licensing purposes includes, but is not limited to, the following:

(A) Address where registered to vote.

(B) Payment of resident tuition at a public institution of higher education.

(C) Filing a homeowner's property tax exemption.

(D) Other acts, occurrences, or events that indicate presence in the state is more than temporary or transient.

(2) California residency is required of a person in order to be issued a commercial driver's license under this code.

(b) The presumption of residency in this state may be rebutted by satisfactory evidence that the licensee's primary residence is in another state.

(c) Any person entitled to an exemption under Section 12502, 12503, or 12504 may operate a motor vehicle in this state for not to exceed 10 days from the date he or she establishes residence in this state, except that he or she shall obtain a license from the department upon becoming a resident before being employed for compensation by another for the purpose of driving a motor vehicle on the highways.

3. The term "State" is then defined in the revenue codes to mean the federal areas within the exterior limits of the state. Below is an example from the California Vehicle Code:

California Revenue and Taxation Code

17017. "United States," when used in a geographical sense, includes the states, the District of Columbia, and the possessions of the United States.

17018. "State" includes the District of Columbia, and the possessions of the United States.

4. You must surrender all other state driver's licenses in order to obtain one from most states. This is consistent with the fact that you can only have a domicile in ONE place at a time. Below is an example from the California Vehicle Code:

1 California Vehicle Code

2 12805. The department shall not issue a driver's license to, or renew a driver's license of, any person:

3 [. . .]

4 (f) Who holds a valid driver's license issued by a foreign jurisdiction unless the license has been surrendered to 5 the department, or is lost or destroyed.

7 12511. No person shall have in his or her possession or otherwise under his or her control more than one
8 driver's license.

9 Consequently, the vehicle code in most states, in the case of individuals not involved in “commercial activity”, applies
10 mainly to “public officers” who are effectively “residents” of the federal zone with an effective “domicile” or “residence”
11 there:

12 26 U.S.C. §7701

13 (a) When used in this title, where not otherwise distinctly expressed or manifestly incompatible with the intent
14 thereof—

15 (39) Persons residing outside United States

16 If any citizen or resident of the United States does not reside in (and is not found in) any United States judicial
17 district, such citizen or resident shall be treated as residing in the District of Columbia for purposes of any 18 provision of this title relating to—

19 (A) jurisdiction of courts, or

20 (B) enforcement of summons.

22 These persons are “taxpayers”. They are Americans who have contracted away their Constitutional rights in exchange for 23 government “privileges” and they are the only “persons” who inhabit or maintain a “domicile” or “residence” in the “State”
24 as defined above. Only people with a domicile in such “State” can be required to obtain a “license” to drive on the 25 “highways”. While they are exercising “agency” on behalf of or representing the government corporation, they are
26 “citizens” of that corporation and “residents”, because the corporation itself is a “citizen” and therefore a person with a
27 domicile in the place where the corporation was formed, which for the “United States” is the District of Columbia:

28 “Corporations are also of all grades, and made for varied objects; all governments are corporations, created
29 by usage and common consent, or grants and charters which create a body politic for prescribed purposes;
30 but whether they are private, local or general, in their objects, for the enjoyment of property, or the exercise
31 of power, they are all governed by the same rules of law, as to the construction and the obligation of the
32 instrument by which the incorporation is made. One universal rule of law protects persons and property. It is
33 a fundamental principle of the common law of England, that the term freemen of the kingdom, includes 'all
34 persons,' ecclesiastical and temporal, incorporate, politique or natural; it is a part of their magna charta (2
35 Inst. 4), and is incorporated into our institutions. The persons of the members of corporations are on the same
36 footing of protection as other persons, and their corporate property secured by the same laws which protect
37 that of individuals. 2 Inst. 46-7. 'No man shall be taken,' 'no man shall be disseised,' without due process of law,
38 is a principle taken from magna charta, infused into all our state constitutions, and is made inviolable by the
39 federal government, by the amendments to the constitution.”
40 [Proprietors of Charles River Bridge v. Proprietors of Warren Bridge, 36 U.S. 420 (1837)]

42 “A corporation is a citizen, resident, or inhabitant of the state or country by or under the laws of which it was 43 created, and of that state or country only.”
44 [19 Corpus Juris Secundum (C.J.S.), Corporations, §886 (2003)]

47 IV. PARTIES > Rule 17.
48 Rule 17. Parties Plaintiff and Defendant; Capacity

1 (b) Capacity to Sue or be Sued.

2 Capacity to sue or be sued is determined as follows:

3 (1) for an individual who is not acting in a representative capacity, by the law of the individual's domicile;
 4 (2) for a corporation or one REPRESENTING a PUBLIC CORPORATION called the government as a
 5 "public officer", by the law under which it was organized; and
 6 (3) for all other parties, by the law of the state where the court is located, except that:
 7 (A) a partnership or other unincorporated association with no such capacity under that state's law may sue
 8 or be sued in its common name to enforce a substantive right existing under the United States Constitution
 9 or laws; and
 10 (B) 28 U.S.C. §§ 754 and 959(a) govern the capacity of a receiver appointed by a United States court to sue
 11 or be sued in a United States court.
 12 [SOURCE: <http://www.law.cornell.edu/rules/frcp/Rule17.htm>]

13 If you don't want to be a "public officer" who has an effective "domicile" or "residence" in the District of Columbia, then
 14 you have to divorce the state, create your own "state", and change your domicile to that new "state". For instance, you can
 15 form an association of people and choose a domicile within that association. This association would be referred to as a
 16 "foreign jurisdiction" within the vehicle code in most states. The association can become the "government" for that group,
 17 and issue its own driver's licenses and conduct its own "courts". In effect, it becomes a competitor to the corporate state
 18 for the affections, allegiance, and obedience of the people. This is capitalism at its finest, folks!

19 California Vehicle Code

20 12502. (a) The following persons may operate a motor vehicle in this state without obtaining a driver's license
 21 under this code:

22 (1) A nonresident over the age of 18 years having in his or her immediate possession a valid driver's license
 23 issued by a foreign jurisdiction of which he or she is a resident, except as provided in Section 12505.
 24 [SOURCE:
 25 <http://www.leginfo.ca.gov/cgi-bin/displaycode?section=veh&group=12001-13000&file=12500-12527>]

26 As long as the driver's licenses issued by the government you form meet the same standard as those for the state you are in,
 27 then it doesn't matter who issued it.

28 California Vehicle Code

29 12505. (a) (1) For purposes of this division only and notwithstanding Section 516, residency shall be
 30 determined as a person's state of domicile. "State of domicile" means the state where a person has his or her
 31 true, fixed, and permanent home and principal residence and to which he or she has manifested the 32 intention of returning whenever he or she is absent.

33 [ . . . ]

34 (e) Subject to Section 12504, a person over the age of 16 years who is a resident of a foreign jurisdiction other
 35 than a state, territory, or possession of the United States, the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of 36 Puerto Rico, or Canada, having a valid driver's license issued to him or her by any other foreign jurisdiction
 37 having licensing standards deemed by the Department of Motor Vehicles equivalent to those of this state,
 38 may operate a motor vehicle in this state without obtaining a license from the department, except that he or 39 she shall obtain a license before being employed for compensation by another for the purpose of driving a
 40 motor vehicle on the highways.

43 As long as you take and pass the same written and driver's tests as the state uses, even your church could issue it! As a
 44 matter of fact, below is an example of a church that issues "Heaven Driver's Licenses" called "Embassy of Heaven":

45 <http://www.embassyofheaven.com/>

46 You can't be compelled by law to grant to your public "servants" a monopoly that compels you into servitude to them as a
 47 "public officer". In the United States, WE THE PEOPLE are the government, and not their representatives and "servants"
 48 who work for them implementing the laws that they pass. Consequently, you and your friends or church, as a "self-governing body” can make your own driver’s license and in fact and in law, those licenses will by definition be “government-issued”. To wit:

“The words ‘people of the United States’ and ‘citizens,’ are synonymous terms, and mean the same thing. They both describe the political body who, according to our republican institutions, form the sovereignty, and who hold the power and conduct the government through their representatives [they are the government, not their servants]. They are what we familiarly call the ‘sovereign people,’ and every citizen is one of this people, and a constituent member of this sovereignty. ...”
 [Boyd v. State of Nebraska, 143 U.S. 135 (1892)]

“From the differences existing between feudal sovereignties and Government founded on compacts, it necessarily follows that their respective prerogatives must differ. Sovereignty is the right to govern; a nation or State-sovereign is the person or persons in whom that resides. In Europe the sovereignty is generally ascribed to the Prince; here it rests with the people; there, the sovereign actually administers the Government; here, never in a single instance; our Governors are the agents of the people, and at most stand in the same relation to their sovereign, in which regents in Europe stand to their sovereigns. Their Princes have personal powers, dignities, and pre-eminences, our rulers have none but official; nor do they partake in the sovereignty otherwise, or in any other capacity, than as private citizens.”
 [Chisholm, Ex'r. v. Georgia, 2 Dall. (U.S.) 419, 1 L.ed. 454, 457, 471, 472 (1794)]

Anyone who won't accept such a driver's license should be asked to contradict the U.S. Supreme Court and to prove that you AREN'T part of the government as a person who governs his own life and the lives of other members of the group you have created. The following article also emphasizes that “We The People” are the government, and that our servants have been trying to deceive us into believing otherwise:

Chances are good that you as a reader at one time or another procured government ID without knowing all the legal consequences described in this document. The existence of that ID and the evidence documenting your request for it can and probably will be used by the government against you as evidence that you are subject to their civil laws and a customer of their "protection racket". The best technique for rebutting such evidence is that appearing in the following document. The submission of this document is a MANDATORY part of becoming a Member of this fellowship, and hopefully you now understand why it is mandatory:

5.4.8.13.6      How employers and financial institutions compel choice of domicile

Whenever you open a financial account or start a new job these days, some companies, banks, or investment companies will require you to produce “government ID”. Their favorite form of ID is the state issued ID. Unfortunately, unless you are an alien (foreign national) domiciled on federal territory within the exterior limits of the state who is not protected by the Constitution, you don't qualify for state ID or even a state driver's license. By asking for “government ID”, employers and financial institutions indirectly are forcing you to do the following as a precondition of doing business with them:

1. Surrender the benefits and protections of being a Constitutional “citizen” in exchange for being a privileged statutory alien, and to do so WITHOUT consideration and without recourse.

2. Become a statutory “resident alien” pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(A) domiciled on federal territory and subject to federal jurisdiction, who is a public officer within the federal government engaged in the “trade or business” franchise.

See:

The “Trade or Business” Scam, Form #05.001
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

3. Become a privileged statutory “resident alien” franchisee who is compelled to participate in what essentially amounts to a “protection racket”.

“Residents, as distinguished from citizens, are aliens who are permitted to take up a permanent abode in the country. Being bound to the society by reason of their [intention of] dwelling in it, they are subject to its laws so long as they remain there, and, being protected by it, they must defend it, although they do not enjoy all the rights of citizenship. They have only certain privileges which the law, or custom, gives them. Permanent residents are those who have been given the right of perpetual residence. They are a sort of citizen of a less privileged character, and are subject to the society without enjoying all its advantages. Their children succeed to their status; for the right of perpetual residence given them by the State passes to their children.”
[The Law of Nations, p. 87, E. De Vattel, Volume Three, 1758, Carnegie Institution of Washington; emphasis added.]

4. Serving two masters and being subject simultaneously to state and federal jurisdiction. The federal government has jurisdiction over Constitutional aliens, including those within a state.

“No one can serve two masters [two employers, for instance]; for either he will hate the one and love the other, or else he will be loyal to the one and despise the other. You cannot serve God and mammon [government].”
[Matt. 6:24, Bible, NKJV. Written by a tax collector]

Those who use OTHER than a driver license for ID may be told by some institutions that they need TWO forms of government ID in order to open the account. They do this because what they are REALLY looking for is at least one document that evidences a domicile or residence in a specific location. Here is an example of what you might hear on this subject:

“I’m sorry, but the Patriot Act [or some other obscure regulation] requires you to produce TWO forms of government issued ID to open an account with us.”

Most people falsely presume that the above statement means that they ALSO need state ID in addition to the passport but this isn’t true. It is a maxim of law that the law cannot require an impossibility. If they are going to impose a duty upon you under the color of law by saying that you need TWO forms of ID, they must provide a way to comply without:

1. Compelling you to politically associate with a specific government in violation of the First Amendment.
2. Compelling you to participate in government franchises by providing an identifying number.
3. Misrepresenting your status as a privileged statutory “resident alien”.
4. Violating your religious beliefs by nominating an Earthly protector and thereby firing God as your only protector.

There are lots of ways around this trap. For instance, the U.S. Supreme Court said WE are the government and that we govern ourselves through our elected representatives.

“The words ‘people of the United States’ and ‘citizens,’ are synonymous terms, and mean the same thing. They both describe the political body who, according to our republican institutions, form the sovereignty, and who hold the power and conduct the government through their representatives. They are what we familiarly call the ‘sovereign people,’ and every citizen is one of this people, and a constituent member of this sovereignty. ...”
[Boyd v. State of Nebraska, 143 U.S. 135 (1892)]

So what does “government id” really mean? A notary public is also a public officer and therefore part of the government.

Chapter 1
 Introduction
 §1.1 Generally

A notary public (sometimes called a notary) is a public official appointed under authority of law with power, among other things, to administer oaths, certify affidavits, take acknowledgments, take depositions, perpetuate testimony, and protect negotiable instruments. Notaries are not appointed under federal law; they are appointed under the authority of the various states, districts, territories, as in the case of the Virgin Islands, and

1 the commonwealth, in the case of Puerto Rico. The statutes, which define the powers and duties of a notary
 2 public, frequently grant the notary the authority to do all acts justified by commercial usage and the "law
 3 merchant".

4 [Anderson's Manual for Notaries Public, Ninth Edition, 2001, ISBN 1-58360-357-3]

5 If you hand the financial institution any of the following, you have satisfied their requirement for secondary ID without 6 violating the law or being compelled to associate with or contract with the government:

- 7 1. Notarized piece of paper with your picture and your birth certificate on it. The notary is a government officer and 8 therefore it is government ID.
- 9 2. Certified copy of your birth certificate by itself. The certification is from the government so its government ID.
- 10 3. ID issued by a government you formed and signed by the "Secretary of State" of that government. The people are the 11 government according to the Supreme Court, so you can issue your own ID.

12 You have to be creative at times to avoid their attempts to compel you to sign up for government franchises, but it is still 13 doable.

14 Another thing that nearly all financial institutions and private employers habitually do is PRESUME, usually wrongfully, 15 that:

- 16 1. You are a "citizen" or a "resident" of the place you live or work. What citizens and residents have in common is a 17 domicile within a jurisdiction. Otherwise, you would be called "nonresidents" or "transient foreigners".
- 18 2. Whatever residence or mailing address you give them is your domicile or residence address.

19 By making such a false presumption, employers and financial institutions in effect are causing you to make an "invisible
 20 election" to become a citizen or resident or domiciliary and to provide your tacit consent to be CIVILLY governed
 21 without even realizing it.

22 If you want to prevent becoming a victim of the false presumption that you are a statutory domiciled "citizen", "resident",
 23 and therefore domiciliary of the place you live or work, you must take special precautions to notify all of your business
 24 associates by providing a special form to them describing you as a "nonresident" of some kind. At the federal level, that 25 form is the IRS Form W-8BEN or a suitable substitute, which identifies the holder as a "nonresident alien". IRS does not
 26 make a form for "nonresidents" who are not "aliens" (foreign nationals) or public officers, unfortunately, so you must
 27 therefore modify their form or make your own form. For an article on how to fill out tax forms to ensure that you are not
 28 PRESUMED, usually prejudicially and falsely, to be a resident or citizen or domiciliary, see the following article:

About IRS Form W-8BEN, Form #04.202

29 Sometimes, those receiving your declaration of "non-resident non-person" or "transient foreigner" status may try to 30 interfere with that choice. For such cases, the following pamphlet proves that the only one who can lawfully declare or 31 establish your civil status, including your "nonresident" status, is you. If anyone tries to coerce you to declare a civil status
 32 for yourself that you don't want to accept and don't consent to, you should provide an affidavit indicating that you were
 33 under duress and that they threatened to financially penalize you or not contract with you if you don't LIE on government
 34 forms and declare a status you don't want. The following pamphlet is also useful in proving that they have no authority to 35 coerce you to declare any civil status you don't want:

Your Exclusive Right to Declare or Establish Your Civil Status, Form #13.008

<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

36 We should always keep in mind that whenever a financial institution or employer asks for a tax form, they are doing so
 37 under the color of law as a "withholding agent" (26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(16)) who is usually illegally acting as a public officer
 38 of the government. Because they are a public officer of the government in their capacity as a withholding agent, they still 39 have a legal duty not to violate your rights, even if they otherwise are a private company. The Constitution applies to all
 40 officers and agents of the government, including "withholding agents" while acting in that capacity. Financial institutions
 41 especially are aware of this fact, which is why if you ask them to give you their criteria for what ID they will accept in 42 writing, they will say that it is a confidential internal document that they can't share with the public. They know they are

1 discriminating unlawfully as a public officer by rejecting your ID and they want to limit the legal liability that results from
 2 this by preventing you from having evidence to prove that they are officially discriminating. They keep such policies on
 3 their computer, protected by a password, and they will tell you that the computer doesn't let them print it out or that there
 4 isn't a field in their system for them to accept the type of ID that you have. THIS is a SCAM! Take a picture of the screen
 5 with your cellphone, page by page, in response to such a SCAM.

6 5.4.8.13.7 How corrupt courts, judges, and government attorneys try to CHANGE your domicile

7 There are many ways in which corrupt judges, prosecutors, and courts compel a change in your domicile to federal 8 territory. Below are a few of the ways, followed by further explanation:

- 9 1. The court rules will not require you to specify that you are a citizen or resident. This allows the judge to PRESUME
 10 that you are, even though this presumption is a violation of due process of law. Consent to BECOME a citizen or 11 resident domiciled within their jurisdiction cannot confer personal jurisdiction upon a court if you did not ALREADY 12 have such status.
- 13 2. Your opponent may accuse you of having a "domicile", "residence", or "permanent address" at a specific location and 14 if you don't rebut it, then you are unconstitutionally PRESUMED to have that status.
- 15 3. You may claim that you do NOT have a civil domicile in the jurisdiction of the court and the judge may illegally try to 16 exclude the pleading or the evidence claiming so. This is criminal tampering with a witness and you should 17 vociferously oppose it.
- 18 4. The judge or prosecutor may ASK you if you are "citizen", create the PRESUMPTION that they are talking about your 19 POLITICAL status, and when you answer, PRESUME that it is a civil statutory status. This happens all the time on 20 government forms and its identity theft. Leave no room for such tricks in your pleadings!
- 21 5. The judge or prosecutor may try to confuse citizenship terms and fool you into admitting that you have a domicile as 22 shown below.

23 To avoid all the above malicious traps in court, we recommend the following attachments to your complaint or response:

28 It is very important to understand that there are THREE separate and distinct CONTEXTS in which the term "United
 29 States" can be used, and each has a mutually exclusive and different meaning. These three definitions of "United States"
 30 were described by the U.S. Supreme Court in Hooven and Allison v. Evatt, 324 U.S. 652 \(1945\):

31 Table 5-39: Geographical terms used throughout this page

Term	# in diagrams	Meaning
United States*	1	The country "United States" in the family of nations throughout the world.
United States	2	The "federal zone".
United States	3	Collective states of the Union mentioned throughout the Constitution.

32 In addition to the above GEOGRAPHICAL context, there is also a legal, non-geographical context in which the term
 33 "United States" can be used, which is the GOVERNMENT as a legal entity. Throughout this page and this website, we 34 identify THIS context as "United States****" or "United States<sup>4</sup>". The only types of "persons" within THIS context are 35 public offices within the national and not state government. It is THIS context in which "sources within the United States"
 36 is used for the purposes of "income" and "gross income" within the Internal Revenue Code, as proven by:

Non-Resident Non-Person Position, Form #05.020, Sections 8 through 11
 DIRECT LINK: <http://sedm.org/Forms/05-MemLaw/NonresidentNonPersonPosition.pdf>
 FORMS PAGE: <http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

37 The reason these contexts are not expressly distinguished in the statutes by the Legislative Branch or on government forms
 38 crafted by the Executive Branch is that they are the KEY mechanism by which:

1. Federal jurisdiction is unlawfully enlarged by abusing presumption, which is a violation of due process of law. See:

Presumption: Chief Weapon for Unlawfully Enlarging Federal Jurisdiction, Form #05.017

DIRECT LINK: <http://sedm.org/Forms/05-MemLaw/Presumption.pdf>

FORMS PAGE: <http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

2. The separation of powers between the states and the national government is destroyed, in violation of the legislative intent of the Constitution. See:

Government Conspiracy to Destroy the Separation of Powers, Form #05.023

DIRECT LINK: <http://sedm.org/Forms/05-MemLaw/SeparationOfPowers.pdf>

FORMS PAGE: <http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

3. A "society of law" is transformed into a "society of men" in violation of Marbury v. Madison, 5 U.S. 137 \(1803\):

"The government of the United States has been emphatically termed a government of laws, and not of men. It will certainly cease to deserve this high appellation, if the laws furnish no remedy for the violation of a vested legal right."

[Marbury v. Madison, 5 U.S. 137, 163 \(1803\)]

4. Exclusively PRIVATE rights are transformed into public rights in a process we call "invisible eminent domain using presumption and words of art".

5. Judges are unconstitutionally delegated undue discretion and "arbitrary power" to unlawfully enlarge federal jurisdiction. See:

Federal Jurisdiction, Form #05.018

FORMS PAGE: <http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

DIRECT LINK: <http://sedm.org/Forms/05-MemLaw/FederalJurisdiction.pdf>

The way a corrupted Executive Branch or judge accomplish the above is to unconstitutionally:

1. PRESUME that ALL of the four contexts for "United States" are equivalent.
2. PRESUME that CONSTITUTIONAL citizens and STATUTORY citizens are EQUIVALENT under federal law. They are NOT. A CONSTITUTIONAL citizen is a "non-resident" under federal civil law and NOT a STATUTORY "national and citizen of the United States** at birth" per 8 U.S.C. §1401. See the document below:

Why You are a "national", "state national", and Constitutional but not Statutory Citizen, Form #05.006

FORMS PAGE: <http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

DIRECT LINK: <http://sedm.org/Forms/05-MemLaw/WhyANational.pdf>

3. PRESUME that "nationality" and "domicile" are equivalent. They are NOT. See:

Why Domicile and Becoming a "Taxpayer" Require Your Consent, Form #05.002

FORMS PAGE: <http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

DIRECT LINK: <http://sedm.org/Forms/05-MemLaw/Domicile.pdf>

4. Use the word "citizenship" in place of "nationality" OR "domicile", and refuse to disclose WHICH of the two they mean in EVERY context.
5. Confuse the POLITICAL/CONSTITUTIONAL meaning of words with the civil STATUTORY context. For instance, asking on government forms whether you are a POLITICAL/CONSTITUTIONAL citizen and then FALSELY PRESUMING that you are a STATUTORY citizen under 8 U.S.C. §1401.
6. Confuse the words "domicile" and "residence" or impute either to you without satisfying the burden of proving that you EXPRESSLY CONSENTED to it and thereby illegally kidnap your civil legal identity against your will. One can have only one "domicile" but many "residences" and BOTH require your consent. See:

Why Domicile and Becoming a "Taxpayer" Require Your Consent, Form #05.002

FORMS PAGE: <http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

DIRECT LINK: <http://sedm.org/Forms/05-MemLaw/Domicile.pdf>

7. Add things or classes of things to the meaning of statutory terms that do not EXPRESSLY appear in their definitions, in violation of the rules of statutory construction. See:

Meaning of the Words "includes" and "including", Form #05.014

FORMS PAGE: <http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

DIRECT LINK: <http://sedm.org/Forms/05-MemLaw/Includes.pdf>

8. Refuse to allow the jury to read the definitions in the law and then give them a definition that is in conflict with the statutory definition. This substitutes the JUDGES will for what the law expressly says and thereby substitutes PUBLIC POLICY for the written law.

9. Publish deceptive government publications that are in deliberate conflict with what the statutes define "United States" as and then tell the public that they CANNOT rely on the publication. The IRS does this with ALL of their publications and it is FRAUD. See:

Reasonable Belief About Income Tax Liability, Form #05.007
 FORMS PAGE: <http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>
 DIRECT LINK: <http://sedm.org/Forms/05-MemLaw/ReasonableBelief.pdf>

This kind of arbitrary discretion is PROHIBITED by the Constitution, as held by the U.S. Supreme Court:

"When we consider the nature and the theory of our institutions of government, the principles upon which they are supposed to rest, and review the history of their development, we are constrained to conclude that they do not mean to leave room for the play and action of purely personal and arbitrary power."
 Yick Wo v. Hopkins, [118 U.S. 356, 369, 6 S.Sup.Ct. 1064, 1071]

Thomas Jefferson, our most revered founding father, precisely predicted the above abuses when he said:

"It has long been my opinion, and I have never shrunk from its expression,... that the germ of dissolution of our Federal Government is in the constitution of the Federal Judiciary--an irresponsible body (for impeachment is scarcely a scare-crow), working like gravity by night and by day, gaining a little today and a little tomorrow, and advancing its noiseless step like a thief over the field of jurisdiction until all shall be usurped from the States and the government be consolidated into one. To this I am opposed."
 [Thomas Jefferson to Charles Hammond, 1821. ME 15:331]

"Contrary to all correct example, [the Federal judiciary] are in the habit of going out of the question before them, to throw an anchor ahead and grapple further hold for future advances of power. They are then in fact the corps of sappers and miners, steadily working to undermine the independent rights of the States and to consolidate all power in the hands of that government in which they have so important a freehold estate."
 [Thomas Jefferson: Autobiography, 1821. ME 1:121]

"The judiciary of the United States is the subtle corps of sappers and miners constantly working under ground to undermine the foundations of our confederated fabric. They are construing our Constitution from a coordination of a general and special government to a general and supreme one alone. This will lay all things at their feet, and they are too well versed in English law to forget the maxim, 'boni judicis est ampliari jurisdictionem.'"
 [Thomas Jefferson to Thomas Ritchie, 1820. ME 15:297]

"When all government, domestic and foreign, in little as in great things, shall be drawn to Washington as the center of all power, it will render powerless the checks provided of one government on another and will become as venal and oppressive as the government from which we separated."
 [Thomas Jefferson to Charles Hammond, 1821. ME 15:332]

"What an augmentation of the field for jobbing, speculating, plundering, office-building ["trade or business scam"] and office-hunting would be produced by an assumption [PRESUMPTION] of all the State powers into the hands of the General Government!"
 [Thomas Jefferson to Gideon Granger, 1800. ME 10:168]

5.4.8.14 A Breach of Contract<sup>74</sup>

Imagine that you have agreed with an auto dealer to purchase the luxurious Belchfire X-1 automobile, for which you agree to pay $45,000, with monthly payments to extend over a period of three years. You sign the sales agreement, and are then told to return the following day to sign the formal contract, which you do. When you arrive two days later to pick up the car, the dealer presents you with the title and keys to a much lesser model, the Klunkermobile J. When you ask the dealer to explain the switch, he points to a provision in the contract that reads: "Dealer shall be entitled to make 'reasonable' adjustments it considers to be 'necessary and proper' to further the 'general welfare' of the parties hereto." He also tells you that the amount of the payments will remain the same as for the Belchfire X-1; that to provide otherwise would be to impair the obligations of the contract. You strongly object, arguing that the dealer is making a fundamental alteration of the contract. The dealer then informs you that this dispute will be reviewed by a third party – his brother-in-law – who will render a decision in the matter.

Welcome to the study of Constitutional Law!

1 The rationalization for the existence of political systems has, at least since the Enlightenment, depended upon the illusion of
2 a "social contract"; that governments come into existence only through the "consent of the governed" as expressed in a
3 written constitution. I know of no state system that ever originated by a contract among individuals. This is particularly true
4 in America, where the detailed history of the drafting and ratification of the Constitution illustrates the present system
5 having been coercively imposed by some upon others. If you doubt this, a reading of the history of Rhode Island will 6 provide you with one example.

7 By its very nature, a contract depends upon a voluntary commitment by two or more persons to bind themselves to a
8 clearly-expressed agreement. The common law courts have always held that agreements entered into through coercion,
9 fraud, or any other practice that does not reflect a "meeting of the minds" of individuals are wholly unenforceable. Nor have 10 the courts looked favorably upon transactions that purport to bind parties forever. If I should agree to work for you for 11 $5,000 a month and, after two years of such employment, choose to go work elsewhere, no court of law – not even in Texas
12 – would compel me to continue working for you.

13 The idea that contractual obligations can arise other than through voluntary undertakings has been firmly established in our 14 culture. Statist efforts to impose duties upon others are often promoted under the myth of an "implied" contract (e.g., by 15 driving a car, you "impliedly consent" to purchase insurance; by living in America you "impliedly consent" to be bound to 16 obligations to which you never agreed). By this logic, if I lived in a high-crime area, it could be argued that I had "impliedly
17 consented" to be mugged, or to be bound by the rules of the local street-corner gang. The idea that the government can 18 force people into contractual relationships is at the heart of the current Supreme Court case dealing with "Obamacare." The 19 enactment of such a form of "involuntary servitude" is what leads a few thoughtful minds to question whether it violates the 20 13th Amendment!

21 Even accepting the fantasy of a "social contract" theory of the state creates more fundamental problems. The legitimacy of 22 a contract depends upon the existence of "consideration." This means that the party seeking enforcement must demonstrate 23 a changing of one's legal position to their detriment (e.g., giving up something of value, making a binding promise,
24 foregoing a right, etc.) Statists may argue that their system satisfies this requirement – by supposedly agreeing to protect the 25 lives and property of the citizenry, and agreeing to respect those rights of people that are spelled out in the "Bill of Rights."
26 The problem is that – thanks to the opinions of numerous brothers-in-law who comprise the Supreme Court – the powers
27 given to the state have been given expansive definitions, and the rights protected by the "Bill of Rights" are given an 28 increasingly narrow interpretation.

29 Thus, Congress' exclusive authority to declare war is now exercised by presidential whim; while its power to legislate does
30 not depend upon any proposed law having been either fully drafted or read! Fourth and Fifth Amendment "guarantees" re
31 "searches and seizures" or "due process of law" are so routinely violated as to arouse little attention from Boobus
32 Americans. First Amendment rights of "speech" allow the state to confine speakers to wire cages kept distant from their 33 intended audiences, while the right of "peaceable assembly" is no hindrance to police-state brutalities directed against 34 peaceful protestors. With very little criticism from Boobus, one president declared his support for a dictatorship, while his 35 successor proclaimed to the world his unilateral authority to kill anyone of his choosing – including Americans!
36 Meanwhile, torture and the indefinite detention of people without trial continue to be accepted practices.

37 Having been conditioned to believe that the Constitution exists to limit the powers of the state and to guarantee your liberty,
38 you try employing such reasoning with the car dealer. You direct his attention to another contractual provision that reads:
39 "All rights under this agreement not reserved to the Dealer shall belong to the Buyer." But he tells you that he is adhering to 40 the specific terms of the contract by making "reasonable adjustments" that are "necessary and proper" to "further the 41 general welfare of the parties." Whatever "rights" you have are, by definition, limited by this broad grant of authority.

42 This is where conservatives get so confused over the inherently repressive nature of the Constitution. They tend to believe
43 that the 10th Amendment "guarantees" to them – and/or the states – "powers not delegated to the United States." But the 44 federal government powers enumerated in this document are overly broad (e.g., "general welfare," "necessary and proper,"
45 and "reasonable") and must be interpreted. This authority to provide the government with such powers to interpret its own
46 powers is nowhere spelled out in the Constitution; but was usurped by the Supreme Court in the case of Marbury v.
47 Madison.

48 Once the courts – or the car dealer's brother-in-law – define the range of the parties' respective authorities, the mutually-
49 exclusive logic of the 10th Amendment applies: if the government or the dealer is recognized as having expansive
50 definitions of authority, there is very little that remains inviolate for the individual. The language of the 9th Amendment is

1 more suitable to the argument on behalf of a broader definition of liberty. This provision reads: "The enumeration in the 2 Constitution, of certain rights, shall not be construed to deny or disparage others retained by the people." This catch-all
 3 language suggests that the Ninth Amendment protections are far broader than the combined "rights" of all the other
 4 amendments. A reading of judicial history reveals only a very small handful of cases ever having been decided under this
 5 section. Of course, the words in this amendment are also subject to interpretation by state officials. This fact is what
 6 conservatives fail to understand when they bleat about wanting "to get back to the Constitution." The government has never
 7 strayed from the Constitution; these words have been in that document from the beginning. They have, however, been 8 interpreted according to the ever-changing preferences of those in power.

9 As the state continues to not simply eat away at – but to gluttonously devour – the liberty its defenders still pretend it is its 10 purpose to protect, it is timely to consider the remedies available to individuals. As one who prefers the peaceful processes
 11 of a civilized society – rather than the violent and destructive means that define the state – my thoughts return to contract
 12 theory. I must admit, at the outset, that the make-believe "social contract" foundations of the state, reveal the wholesale
 13 breach of the obligations of both parties. The failure of the state to restrain its voracious and ruinous appetites is already a
 14 matter of record, even to its defenders whose intellectual dishonesty and/or cowardice will not permit them to express the 15 fact. But there is a concurrent obligation on the part of those subject to state rule that finds expression in words carved onto 16 the entrance to the Nebraska state capitol building: "The Salvation of the State is Watchfulness in the Citizen." It was the
 17 failure of most people to live up to this standard that led me to write, a few years ago, about the need to impeach the 18 American people! The "watchfulness" of most Americans is confined to such television programs as "American Idol" or 19 "Dancing With the Stars."

20 The breaches on both sides of this alleged contract are of such enormity as would lead any competent court of law to regard
 21 any such "agreement" as a nullity; subject to enforcement by neither party. Such defenses as "frustration of purpose," 22 "impossibility of performance," "unconscionability," "unequal bargaining power," "fraud in the inducement," and other
 23 concepts have regularly been used by the courts to excuse further performance by the parties to a contract.

24 I propose that we respond to our alleged obligations to the state – duties we never agreed to in the first place – in the same
 25 manner by which we would treat our hypothetical car dealer in the marketplace: to walk away and take our business
 26 elsewhere! Whatever goods or services we desire in our lives, and which we have been conditioned to believe can only be 27 provided by the state, can be found in the willingness of our neighbors to freely and genuinely contract with us in ways that
 28 do not depend upon predation, restraint, or violence. It is time for us to discover the peaceful and creative nature of a
 29 society grounded in a voluntary "meeting of the minds" of free men and women!

30 How would we express our intention to invalidate the contract, from a legal perspective? By generating legal evidence of 31 all the following in the government's own records:

- 32 1. Changing our citizenship status in government records to that of a "non-resident non-person" and CONSTITUTIONAL
- 33 citizen rather than a statutory citizen.
- 34 2. Quitting all government franchises and licenses.
- 35 3. Stop filling out government forms and rescind all forms we have filled out.
- 36 4. Changing our tax status to that of a non-resident non-person.

37 All of the above are accomplished by:

Path to Freedom, Form #09.017, Section 2

38 5.4.8.15 Summary of rules relating to domicile

39 Based on the foregoing analysis and legally admissible evidence, we can safely conclude the following:

- 40 1. Think of the "state" as a club:
  - 41 1.1. The "state" is the collection of all the sovereigns that occupy a specific territorial land mass.
  - 42 1.2. The "government" are the people contracted and under oath to service the needs of the "state" and execute the 43 business of the "state". They are "protection contractors". The "government" and the "state" are two separate 44 and distinct groups that are NOT synonymous or the same. The "state" is the sovereign, while the "government"
 45 is the SERVANT of the sovereign.

- 1.3. Those who are members of the club are called "citizens" if they were born somewhere within the country and "residents" if they were born in a different country.
- 1.4. Those who are not members of the club are called "nonresidents" or "transient foreigners".
- 1.5. Whether you are a "member" or a "nonmember" is determined by how you describe your "residence", "permanent address", or "domicile" on usually government and financial forms. No one but you can decide or control what you put on these forms.
- 1.6. Taxes are your "club membership dues".
- 1.7. In return for membership, you are entitled to demand "services" or "benefits" from the government that serves the "state".
- 1.8. No one can force you to join the club. The First Amendment protects your right to NOT join the club by prohibiting "compelled association". That is why the First Amendment is the first amendment: Because the first and most important thing you must do when forming any "state" is to give everyone the right to NOT join!
- 1.9. Since no one can force you to join the club, no one can compel you to accept the liabilities associated with membership in the club and they must prove that you voluntarily consented to join the club before they can legally enforce those liabilities against you. Such liabilities include the duty to pay income taxes, to vote, and to serve as a jurist when summoned.
- 1.10. Membership in the club confers civil jurisdiction of the courts in order to protect your civil rights.
- 1.11. You do not need to be a member of the club in order for the government to enforce the criminal laws of the state against you. All that must be proven in order to enforce the criminal laws is that you were physically situated on the territory associated with the "state" and that you committed a criminal or harmful act that injured a specific other fellow sovereign.
- 1.12. There are TWO levels of club membership: Premium and Unleaded. The "Unleaded" version is basic domicile in the republic and not the "State" and this level buys you basic criminal protection and nothing more. The "Premium" level of membership requires you to become a "public officer" of the government so they can lawfully pay you bribes called "benefits" with money they stole from your neighbor. Because there are two levels of membership, then the "Premium" level violates the Constitution because it confers a "Title of Nobility". The only other way to view this level and still be consistent with the Constitution is to view all those who participate as employees of a PRIVATE corporation that is NOT a de jure government. See:

Why Your Government is Either a Thief or You are a "Public Officer" for Income Tax Purposes, Form #05.008
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

2. Domicile is legally defined as the coincidence of physical presence in a place now or in the past, and the intention to return to and permanently inhabit that place. The Bible says that no place on earth is permanent and that the present earth will be destroyed, and therefore it is against God's law to declare a domicile within any man-made political group on earth.
3. The place where a person "lives" and their legal "domicile" can be and often are two completely different places. Many people incorrectly confuse these two terms, and in so doing, unknowingly forfeit their right to choose whether they want to be subject to the civil laws where they are located.
4. Domicile is ordinarily associated with "citizens", while "residence" is associated with privileged "aliens". You can have only one "domicile" but as many "residences" as you want. Residence, in turn, is a product of your right to contract. When you sign up for a franchise such as the "trade or business"/income tax franchise, you become a "resident" within the statutes granting the privilege or franchise:

26 C.F.R. §301.7701-5 Domestic, foreign, resident, and nonresident persons.

*A domestic corporation is one organized or created in the United States, including only the States (and during the periods when not States, the Territories of Alaska and Hawaii), and the District of Columbia, or under the law of the United States or of any State or Territory. A foreign corporation is one which is not domestic. A domestic corporation is a resident corporation even though it does no business and owns no property in the United States. A foreign corporation engaged in trade or business within the United States is referred to in the regulations in this chapter as a resident foreign corporation, and a foreign corporation not engaged in trade or business within the United States, as a nonresident foreign corporation. A partnership engaged in trade or business within the United States is referred to in the regulations in this chapter as a resident partnership, and a partnership not engaged in trade or business within the United States, as a nonresident partnership. Whether a partnership is to be regarded as resident or nonresident is not determined by the nationality or residence of its members or by the place in which it was created or organized.

5. Those who have chosen a legal domicile outside of the place or state that they occupy at any given time are called "transient foreigners" or simply "nonresidents". When you go on vacation temporarily to a place, you are a "transient foreigner" with respect to the government of that place. It is perfectly lawful to ALSO choose to be a transient foreigner in the place of your birth and the place where you live or to choose a domicile within a political group of your own making, such as a church, family, or political group. Those who do so have made a protected First Amendment choice to disassociate with what oftentimes is a corrupted government or state that is more harmful than protective of their personal interests.

6. The purpose of selecting a domicile is to nominate a king or ruler to provide a substitute for God's protection. A choice of domicile amounts essentially to a contract to procure "protection" from a king or ruler to whom those protected owe "tribute" and "allegiance". Serving anyone but God is idolatry and idolatry is condemned as the most serious sin a believer can commit in the Bible.

*"No servant can serve two masters; for either he will hate the one and love the other, or else he will be loyal to the one and despise the other. You cannot serve God and mammon."
[Jesus [God] speaking in Luke 16:13, Bible, NKJV]*

7. You can only have a legal domicile in ONE PLACE at a time, because you can only owe undivided allegiance to one ruler at a time. As a consequence:
- 7.1. You can only be a "citizen" in ONE PLACE at a time.
  - 7.2. If you are physically present in a place outside of your legal domicile, you are a "transient foreigner" and a "national" but not "citizen" in that place. For instance, Mexicans visiting the United States for temporary and who have not changed their "domicile" to the United States are called "Mexican Nationals" while they are here. When they return to the place of their domicile, they are called "Mexican citizens".
  - 7.3. You cannot be a "citizen" under federal statutory law without having a domicile on federal territory. States of the Union are NOT federal territory.
  - 7.4. You can only owe income taxes to one government at a time. This is consistent with the fact that you must have a federal tax liability before you can have a state liability. It is also consistent with the conclusion that the states, when they collect state income taxes, are doing so in the capacity as federal territories and instrumentalities and not sovereign or independent governments. This type of abuse is facilitated by the unconstitutionally administered Buck Act, 4 U.S.C. §106, and its implementation found in 5 U.S.C. §5517. No state or federal constitution authorizes any state of the Union to act as a federal corporation, agency, territory, or instrumentality as described in 4 U.S.C. §110(d) and any attempt to do so is a violation of the separation of powers doctrine and an act of TREASON punishable by death under 18 U.S.C. §2381.
8. Domicile constitutes your voluntary choice of the civil law system and the government you choose to live under. The purpose of law is to protect people by preventing harm but not mandating good. The purpose of government is to enforce and implement the law. Therefore, the purpose of government is to protect. You cannot be held responsible for obeying any civil law unless you voluntarily choose a legal domicile where it applies. This includes the civil code and the family code in your state.
9. Domicile is a First Amendment voluntary choice of political affiliation. The government cannot change your domicile without your consent. What the law dictionary calls "intent" really amounts to consent, and they are trying to hide the voluntary nature of the transaction by choosing different words to describe it. For instance:
- 9.1. Only adults who have reached the age of majority can lawfully choose a legal domicile.
  - 9.2. Insane or incompetent persons cannot have a chosen domicile and take on the domicile of their caretakers.
  - 9.3. Children assume the domicile of their parents.
  - 9.4. Every government tax form in one way or another causes you to choose a domicile, and since the choice of form or the way you fill it out is your choice, then the domicile is also your choice. For instance, IRS Form 1040 causes you to choose a domicile in the "United States" (federal territory). IRS Form 1040NR is filled out by persons who do not have a domicile in the "United States" (federal territory).
10. No court of law or government official may lawfully interfere with your choice of domicile because:
- 10.1. Courts of justice may not lawfully involve themselves in "political questions".
  - 10.2. Public servants in the political branches of the government, including the Executive and Legislative branches, may not interfere with your First Amendment right to freely associate or disassociate.
11. A government that compels you to choose a domicile within their jurisdiction is engaging in unlawful slavery in violation of 42 U.S.C. §1994, involuntary servitude in violation of the Thirteenth Amendment, extortion, racketeering in violation of 18 U.S.C. §1951, and violating your First Amendment right of freedom from compelled association.
12. Because choice of domicile is voluntary, income taxes based on it are also entirely voluntary and avoidable. The government does NOT want you to know that you can avoid income taxes, and so they will avoid discussing this and persecute all those who reveal it to the public.

13. Your domicile is whatever you say it is on a government form. Other evidentiary methods of determining legal domicile are ordinarily only employed where evidence of your direct declaration of domicile on a government form is not available. On government forms, "domicile" is synonymous with the terms "permanent address".
14. Within the Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A and all state revenue codes, a "resident" is an alien with a domicile, presence, or existence on federal territory. A person who is not physically present on federal territory can become a "resident" there by engaging in "commerce" within the legislative jurisdiction of that forum. This, in fact, is the main method by which the federal government manufactures "taxpayers" out of sovereign Americans domiciled in states of the Union. The Social Security system causes them to conduct commerce within the legislative jurisdiction of the United States and thereby surrender sovereign immunity and become "resident aliens" pursuant to 28 U.S.C. §1605\(a\)\(2\). Those engaging in such commerce are called "public officers" who are "effectively connected with a trade or business in the United States". All those engaged in a "trade or business" are "resident aliens" of the United States. Older versions of the Treasury Regulations show this scam below:

26 C.F.R. §301.7701-5 Domestic, foreign, resident, and nonresident persons

A domestic corporation is one organized or created in the United States, including only the States (and during the periods when not States, the Territories of Alaska and Hawaii), and the District of Columbia, or under the law of the United States or of any State or Territory. A foreign corporation is one which is not domestic. A domestic corporation is a resident corporation even though it does no business and owns no property in the United States. A foreign corporation engaged in trade or business within the United States is referred to in the regulations in this chapter as a resident foreign corporation, and a foreign corporation not engaged in trade or business within the United States, as a nonresident foreign corporation. A partnership engaged in trade or business within the United States is referred to in the regulations in this chapter as a resident partnership, and a partnership not engaged in trade or business within the United States, as a nonresident partnership. Whether a partnership is to be regarded as resident or nonresident is not determined by the nationality or residence of its members or by the place in which it was created or organized.
 [Amended by T.D. 8813, Federal Register: February 2, 1999 (Volume 64, Number 21), Page 4967-4975]

15. Driver's licenses issued by state governments are the method of choice for compelling persons to declare a legal domicile within a state. Because the government cannot compel you to choose a domicile, they also cannot compel you to obtain or use a state driver's license.
16. Domicile is an abstract term that is difficult to legally prove. Because it is difficult to prove, the government will avoid discussions of the term. That is why the term only appears twice in the entire 9,500 page Internal Revenue Code. They will also avoid discussing the term because they don't want to acknowledge that they need your consent to both enforce the law against you and collect taxes from you.
17. Those who want to divorce the state which controls the place where they live may do so by declaring a domicile outside of their place of abode. Such persons are called:
- 17.1. "Transient foreigners".
  - 17.2. "Stateless persons" (in relation to the place they physically live).
18. Those who do not want to assume the liabilities of "domicile" within a jurisdiction cannot:
- 18.1. Register to vote within that jurisdiction.
  - 18.2. Obtain a state driver's license within that jurisdiction.
  - 18.3. Serve as a jurist within that jurisdiction.
  - 18.4. Indicate a "permanent address" on any government form that is within the jurisdiction of that government.
  - 18.5. Apply for any government benefit, including Social Security, Medicare, etc.
  - 18.6. Submit any form that implies a domicile there, such as the IRS Form 1040, which is only for use by STATUTORY "U.S. persons" with a legal domicile in the "United States" (federal territory). Instead, the 1040NR is the only proper form for "stateless persons" and "transient foreigners" to use in the context of federal taxation.
19. The only laws that may be enforced against "transient foreigners" or "nonresidents" are criminal laws and the common law. Civil statutory laws require a legal domicile within the jurisdiction where the law applies. This is a result of the fact that the Declaration of Independence says that all just powers in a free government derive from the "consent of the governed" and that the only legitimate reason for the state to proceed against a person without his consent is when he is criminally injuring someone.
20. The Bible commands believers to be separate and sanctified, and to come out of the corrupted government that has become Satan's whore, which the Bible calls "Babylon the Great Harlot". In effect, God commands us to DISASSOCIATE. We can do this legally and peacefully only by changing our domicile.

After these things I saw another angel coming down from heaven, having great authority, and the earth was illuminated with his glory.

1 And he cried mightily with a loud voice saying, 'Babylon the great is fallen, is fallen, and has become a
2 dwelling place of demons, a prison for every foul spirit, and a cage for every unclean and hated bird!'

3 "For all the nations have drunk of the wine of the wrath of her fornication, the kings [politicians, who load us
4 with debt] of the earth have committed fornication with her, and the merchants of the earth have become rich
5 through the abundance of her luxury.'

6 And I heard another voice from heaven saying, 'Come out of her, my people, lest you share in her sins, and 7 lest you receive her plagues.

8 "For her sins have reached to heaven, and God has remembered her iniquities.

9 "Render to her just as she rendered to you, and repay her double according to her works; in the cup which she 10 has mixed, mix double for her.

11 "In the measure that she glorified herself and lived luxuriously, in the same measure give her torment and 12 sorrow; for she says in her heart, 'I sit as queen, and am no widow, and will not see sorrow.'

13 "Therefore her plagues [economic or stock market collapses] will come in one day—death and mourning and 14 famine. And she will be utterly burned with fire [looting from all the greedy people who mortgaged themselves
15 to the hilt and put their children into debt slavery to pay for their luxuries], for strong is the Lord God who 16 judges her."

17 [Rev. 18:1-8, Bible, NKJV]

- 18 21. If you want to divorce the state and become a "transient foreigner" wherever you go, we suggest the following 19 resource:

Legal Notice of Change in Domicile/Citizenship Records and Divorce from the United States, Form #10.001
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

- 20 22. The government is just like any other corporation. The only product it delivers is "protection". Government does not 21 have a monopoly on "protection". A government that compels you to procure or pay for its protection against your 22 will is engaged in racketeering and organized crime. If the cost of government protection exceeds its benefits, any 23 person or group are free to divorce the state by abandoning their domicile, and to provide their own more cost effective
24 protection. Anyone may compete directly with the government in "the protection business" or elect to fire all 25 protectors and instigate "front door justice". This is a direct result of the fact that the U.S. Supreme Court said the 26 essential purpose of the Constitution was to confer upon We the People the right to be LEFT ALONE by the
27 government.

28 "The only protection I need is my Smith and Wesson."

29 "The makers of our Constitution undertook to secure conditions favorable to the pursuit of happiness. They
30 recognized the significance of man's spiritual nature, of his feelings and of his intellect. They knew that only a
31 part of the pain, pleasure and satisfactions of life are to be found in material things. They sought to protect
32 Americans in their beliefs, their thoughts, their emotions and their sensations. They conferred, as against the 33 Government, the right to be let alone - the most comprehensive of rights and the right most valued by 34 civilized men."

35 [Olmstead v. United States, 277 U.S. 438, 478 (1928) (Brandeis, J., dissenting); see also Washington v.
36 Harper, 494 U.S. 210 (1990)]

- 37 23. All income taxes are based on legal "domicile". Income taxes support the police powers of the state, and the police
38 powers of the state implement and enforce the CRIMINAL law ONLY. If you don't have a domicile in a place, then 39 you can't be liable for income taxes in that place because you are not being personally protected by the laws of that 40 place.
- 41 24. Persons with a legal domicile on federal territory, which is called the "United States" in the Internal Revenue Code at 42 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10) and 4 U.S.C. §110(d), are called "U.S. persons". Persons with a domicile in a place
43 are also called "inhabitants". Under the Internal Revenue Code Sections 7701(a)(39) and 7408(d), persons who
44 declare a domicile in the "United States" are treated as virtual residents of the District of Columbia and "taxpayers"
45 there regardless of where they physically live. "U.S. persons" include statutory "citizens of the United States" under 8
46 U.S.C. §1401 and "residents" as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(A).
- 47 25. Both STATUTORY "citizens" and STATUTORY "residents" have in common a "domicile" in a place and collectively
48 are called "inhabitants". Those without a domicile are called "transient foreigners". IRS does NOT like people
49 claiming they are "transient foreigners" because it destroys their ability to tax. They therefore omit this as an option on 50 ALL their tax forms so you can't properly declare your status as a "nontaxpayer". The only time that either "citizens" or “residents” can have a tax liability under I.R.C. Subtitle A is when they are temporarily abroad pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §911. The U.S. Supreme Court confirmed that taxation of “U.S. persons” abroad was permissible in Cook v. Tait, 265 U.S. 47 (1924). We have been able to identify NO provision of law that makes any statutory “citizen” or “resident” responsible for an income tax who is NOT temporarily abroad. Even then, they must be voluntarily engaged in a “trade or business”, which is a “public office”, in most cases to have any tax liability at all.

26. An “alien” or a “nonresident alien” with a domicile in the “United States**” (federal territory) is called a “resident” in the Internal Revenue Code. You cannot lawfully be a “resident” and a “citizen” within the same jurisdiction at the same time.
27. In effect, the civil statutory law functions as a “protection franchise”, “compact”, and/or social compact. All compacts and franchises are contracts or agreements that activate or acquire the “force of law” ONLY upon MUTUAL consent of BOTH parties to them. That is why most enactments of governments are called “the code” instead of simply “law”.
28. Anyone invoking “the code” or any civil statutory law against you should be DEMANDED to satisfy the burden of proof as the moving party to provide the following evidence on the record of any proceeding:
  - 28.1. That you EXPRESSLY consented to have a civil domicile in the place where the “code” they seek to enforce applies.
  - 28.2. That your consent was NOT the product of duress. Duress renders any contract of compact VOIDABLE but not VOID. The minute you indicate the duress, it becomes void.
  - 28.3. That you were physically present within the specific territory where the laws apply. You cannot have a domicile in a place without FIRST having a physical presence there either now or at some time in the past.
  - 28.4. That the author of the laws sought to be enforced OWNED the land you were on as territory and therefore had the authority to make the rules for that land under Article 4, Section 3, Clause 2 of the United States Constitution. Hence, they have to prove that the land was not PRIVATE property and instead was lawfully converted to a public use or purpose. Otherwise, the only thing that can be enforced is the common law.
  - 28.5. That if you were not domiciled on the land to which the “codes” apply, that you were representing an entity or public office that WAS domiciled on their land as required by Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 17.

5.4.9 The IRS is NOT authorized to perform enforcement actions

By consulting Treasury Directive 27-03, Organization and Functions of the Office of the Assistant Secretary (Enforcement), we find that the Internal Revenue Service isn't included in the list of Department of the Treasury enforcement agencies. You can view this order yourself on the Treasury website at:

<http://www.ustreas.gov/regs/td27-03.htm>

We also find that 26 C.F.R. §1.274-5T(k)(6)(ii) says that Internal Revenue Service special agents are specifically excluded from designation of law enforcement officers. If we then examine the Department of the Treasury organization chart, page 339 of the 2002-04 U.S. Government Manual available at:

we find that the Internal Revenue Service is not under authority of the Assistance Secretary (Enforcement), like all other enforcement arms of the Treasury. Therefore, the IRS is not an enforcement agency and has no lawful authority whatsoever to adversely affect the people or the rights of persons within states of the Union.

5.4.10 I.R.C., Subtitle A is voluntary for those with no domicile in the federal zone and who are not a federal instrumentality

This section will show that Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A, in the context of natural persons, is entirely voluntary for people domiciled within a state of the Union and who have not engaged in any contracts or employment with the federal government. Another way of saying this is that the explicit consent of all natural persons is required in some form before they can be called “taxpayers” by the IRS. Black's Law Dictionary says under the definition of the term “excise tax”:

“excise tax: In current usage the term has been extended to include various license fees and practically every internal revenue tax EXCEPT THE INCOME TAX.”.

What they are implying is that income taxes are really voluntary donations, but because the authors of the dictionary (who were lawyers) don't want to undermine “voluntary compliance” with the Internal Revenue Code, they can't be honest and

1 just come out and say it, so they define what it isn't and leave it up to you to figure out what it is! We even tried looking up
 2 the term “income tax” in that same Black’s Law dictionary and they don’t classify it as either a “direct tax” or an “indirect
 3 excise” there either. Sneaky, huh? That’s the way lawyers and the legal profession work, and it is precisely this kind of 4 treacherous deceit that is behind why we recommend defending yourself primarily and only relying on lawyers as legal
 5 “coaches” when you get tripped up. See section 6.10 for more evidence of scandalous games like this by the legal
 6 profession. The preceding discussion helps to explain some of the following statements:

7 "Our tax system is based upon voluntary assessment and payment, not upon distraint".
 8 [Flora v. United States, 362 U.S. 145 (1960)]

10 "Our tax system is based on individual self-assessment and voluntary compliance".
 11 [Mortimer Caplin, Internal Revenue Audit Manual (1975)]

13 "Let me point this out now. Your income tax is 100 percent voluntary tax, and your liquor tax is 100 percent
 14 enforced tax. Now, the situation is as different as night and day. Consequently, your same rules just will not 15 apply...".
 16 [Dwight E. Avis, former head of the Alcohol and Tobacco Tax Division of the IRS, testifying before a House
 17 Ways and Means subcommittee in 1953]

19 "The purpose of the IRS is to collect the proper amount of tax revenues at the least cost to the public, and in a
 20 manner that warrants the highest degree of public confidence in our integrity, efficiency and fairness. To 21 achieve that purpose, we will encourage and achieve the highest possible degree of voluntary compliance in 22 accordance with the tax laws and regulations...".
 23 [Internal Revenue Manual, Chapter 1100, section 1111.1]

24 This raises a lot of questions indeed! Let’s try to answer a few. Here is the definition of the word “tax” from Black’s Law
 25 Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1457:

26 "Tax: A charge by the government on the income of an individual, corporation, or trust, as well as the value
 27 of an estate or gift. The objective in assessing the tax is to generate revenue to be used for the needs of the
 28 public.

29 A pecuniary [relating to money] burden laid upon individuals or property to support the government, and is a
 30 *payment exacted by legislative authority. In re Mytinger, D.C.Tex. 31 F.Supp. 977,978,979. Essential
 31 characteristics of a tax are that it is NOT A VOLUNTARY
 32 PAYMENT OR DONATION, BUT AN ENFORCED
 33 CONTRIBUTION, EXACTED PURSUANT TO
 34 LEGISLATIVE AUTHORITY. Michigan Employment Sec. Commission v. Patt, 4*
 35 Mich.App. 228, 144 N.W.2d. 663, 665. ..."

 37 constitution.” We say this because if the legislative authority to tax within states of the Union does not ultimately derive
 38 from the Constitution, then it is null and void because all powers not delegated to the government by the Sovereign People
 39 are reserved to the people (per the Tenth Amendment and Article VI, Clause 2 of the Constitution)<sup>75</sup>, which is the case with 40 income taxes on Natural Born Persons.

41 Notice that you can’t call it a “tax” if it is “voluntary”! You have to call it a “donatio” and “donation”:

42 "Donatio: A gift. A transfer of the title of property to one who receives it without paying for it. The act by 43 which the owner of a thing voluntarily transfers the title and possession of the same from 44 himself to another person, without any consideration."

<sup>75</sup> See the Tenth Amendment to the U.S. Constitution, which says: “The powers not delegated to the United States by the Constitution, nor prohibited by it to the States, are reserved to the States respectively, or to the people.” See also U.S. Constitution, Article VI, Clause 2, which says: “This Constitution, and the Laws of the United States which shall be made in Pursuance thereof; and all Treaties made, or which shall be made, under the Authority of the United States, shall be the supreme Law of the Land; and the Judges in every State shall be bound thereby, any Thing in the Constitution or Laws of any State to the Contrary notwithstanding.”

1                    “Voluntary: “Unconstrained by interference; unimpelled by another’s influence; spontaneous; acting of
 2                    oneself. Coker v. State, 199 Ga. 20, 33 S.E.2d. 171, 174. Done by design or intention. Proceeding from the
 3                    free and unrestrained will of the person. Produced in or by an act of choice. Resulting from free choice,
 4                    without compulsion or solicitation. The word, especially in statutes, often implies knowledge of essential facts.
 5                    Without valuable consideration; gratuitous, as a voluntary conveyance. Also, having a merely nominal
 6                    consideration; as, a voluntary deed.”
 7                    [Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1575]

8 We then have to go back to table 5-1 at the beginning of this chapter and ask ourselves:

9                    “What kind of Constitutional tax is described by Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A in relation to states of the
 10                    Union?”

11 As you read through most of the federal appellate and district court cases dealing with income tax, they take great pains
 12 NOT to identify which of the five constitutional taxes the income tax is from Table 5-1. This is because:

- 13 1. They don’t want you to know which of the two legislative jurisdictions they are operating within: The federal zone or 14 the states of the Union. If they said anything more than the above, they would generate a flurry of questions and 15 inquiry that would destroy the tax system as we know it.
- 16 2. They don’t want you to know that the tax is on income derived from a taxable activity, because if you knew what the 17 activity was, you would avoid it and thereby avoid the tax.
- 18 3. They know that the I.R.C., Subtitle A operates primarily within the District of Columbia and attaches to the person 19 through private law or contract, instead of through positive and public law. Because it attaches through private
 20 voluntary contract in the form of an SS-5, W-4, or 1040 form, all of which must be signed and submitted by the party,
 21 then public or positive law is not required to enforce it. If they revealed how it attaches to the individual, then they
 22 would undermine its operation and deprive the government of revenues. Lawyers who are licensed by the government
 23 are not about to bite the hands that feed them.
- 24 4. They don’t want to admit that Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A only applies to legal “persons” domiciled within the 25 federal zone on land under exclusive federal jurisdiction. If they did, few people would pay it and few CPA’s,
 26 attorneys, or even payroll people would be left with anything to do. The whole economy would have to shift to more 27 honest endeavors.

28 The I.R.C., Subtitle A income tax, in the context of states of the Union, is therefore an indirect excise tax on other than 29 natural persons when it is mandatory or involuntary. That means the proper subject of it is corporations and partnerships,
 30 and trusts and not biological people. The corporations and other artificial entities to which it applies must be engaged in 31 one of the following corporate, excise taxable activities before they can have any taxable “sources” of income:

- 32 1. Employment and/or agency with the federal government called a “trade or business” within the District of Columbia.
 33 Signing or submitting either the W-4, the 1040, or the SSA Form SS-5 all create a presumption that the submitter
 34 maintains a legal domicile in the District of Columbia, or that he is acting as a federal “employee” or trustee on behalf
 35 of a corporation defined in 28 U.S.C. §3002(15)(A) called the “United States”. This corporation has a legal domicile
 36 in the District of Columbia, and therefore, when he is acting in that capacity, he too has a legal domicile there. See 37 section 5.6.12 and following for further details.
- 38 2. “foreign commerce” coming under Article 1, Section 8, Clause 3 of the Constitution.

39 Excise taxes are taxes on government privileges. The average American is NOT in receipt of taxable privileges relating to 40 the subjects above. However, because most Americans have been deceived by a lying IRS using their deceptive
 41 publications into misrepresenting their status on government forms, they have created a false presumption that they are
 42 “taxpayers”. American “nationals” everywhere, however, who know the law and the nature of this deception are free to 43 earn as much money or goods as they please from outside of the District of Columbia without payment of any income tax
 44 under Subtitle A, so long as they don’t:

- 45 1. Forget to promptly correct all erroneous reports of receipt of excise taxable “income” received on forms 1099 or W-2.
- 46 2. Use a Social Security Number on any government form or in response to any tax collection notice. They must 47 vociferously argue with anyone who tries to use such a number to refer to them. This is because anyone who has a
 48 Social Security Number is a federal “employee”. 26 C.F.R. §422.104 falls under Title 20, which is entitled “Employee
 49 Benefits”, and it describes the only authority for issuing SSNs. These numbers can only be issued to federal 50 “employees” and can only be used in conjunction with their official duties. See the following article for details:
 51 <http://sedm.org/Forms/05-MemLaw/AboutSSNsAndTINs.pdf>

- 1 3. Describe themselves as "taxpayers"
- 2 4. Describe their earnings as being associated with an excise taxable activity such as a "trade or business" or with
- 3 "foreign commerce" coming under Article 1, Section 8, Clause 3 of the Constitution.
- 4 5. Claim that their earnings originate from the "United States", which is defined as the District of Columbia in 26 U.S.C.
- 5 §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10).
- 6 6. File an IRS Form W-4 or an SSA Form SS-5. The regulations at 26 C.F.R. §31.3402(p)-1 and elsewhere say that both
- 7 of these forms are contracts. You can't keep your sovereignty if you contract it away to the federal government.
- 8 7. File the form 1040, which is the wrong form for most Americans. The 1040 can only be used by those with a domicile
- 9 in the District of Columbia. IRS Document 7130 says it is only for use by "citizens" and "residents" of the "United
- 10 States", which is defined as the District of Columbia in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10).
- 11 8. Maintain a legal domicile anywhere in the District of Columbia or "United States". Instead, you must agree to govern,
- 12 support, and protect yourself instead of nominating a government to be your protector.

13 A person who has done all the above is under no duty to account for their earnings or report them to anyone. It is easier for 14 states to enact excises because they have the police power. The privileged excise activity is what establishes the legal duty
 15 to account for income produced as the result of the exercise of an excise. Income is the measure of the excise. An
 16 occupation tax is an excise measured by the amount of income the person in the occupation produces and that occupation
 17 must be licensed or privileged in some way to be the object of an income tax. A fuel tax is an excise tax on foreign 18 commerce disguised as a consumption tax. The dollar amount of the fuel tax is a factor or percentage of the total amount of 19 fuel sold or delivered. No matter how it is expressed, the excise is a tax on gross income. The only difference between a
 20 tax on gross income and net income is the certainty of the tax. In either case, there is an absolute requirement of sufficient
 21 police power to require the necessary record keeping to calculate either the gross or net income. The "national 22 government" of the District of Columbia does not possess the general police power and without police power in the 50
 23 Union states and outside of the federal zone. The federal government therefore has not authority to attempt to collect the 24 equivalent of unapportioned direct taxes within states of the Union.

QUESTION FOR DOUBTERS: If I.R.C., Subtitles A and C income taxes are NOT indirect excise taxes upon foreign commerce or a "trade or business", then why are the ONLY activities and persons upon which the tax "imposed" in receipt of privileges or associated mainly with foreign commerce and federal employment? Here are just a few examples of those privileges an entity or person must be in receipt of in order to be the subject of the income tax, and we'd like to emphasize that if your situation isn't in this list, then you aren't under the jurisdiction of the Internal Revenue Code!:

1. They must be a public official of the U.S. government in receipt of the privileges of public office and residing in the District of Columbia:
  - 1.1. 26 C.F.R. §301.6671-1 Rules for application of assessable penalties: "(b) Person defined. For purposes of subchapter B of chapter 68, the term "person" includes an officer or employee of a corporation, or a member or employee of a partnership, who as such officer, employee, or member is under a duty to perform the act in respect of which the violation occurs."
  - 1.2. 26 C.F.R. §31.3401(c) Employee: "...the term [employee] includes officers and employees, whether elected or appointed, of the United States, a [federal] State, Territory, Puerto Rico or any political subdivision, thereof, or the District of Columbia, or any agency or instrumentality of any one or more of the foregoing. The term 'employee' also includes an officer of a corporation."
  - 1.3. 26 U.S.C. §3401(c) Employee: For purposes of this chapter, the term "employee" includes [is limited to] an officer, employee, or elected official of the United States, a State, or any political subdivision thereof, or the District of Columbia, or any agency or instrumentality of any one or more of the foregoing. The term "employee" also includes an officer of a corporation.
  - 1.4. 8 Federal Register, Tuesday, September 7, 1943, §404.104, pg. 12267: Employee: "The term employee specifically includes officers and employees whether elected or appointed, of the United States, a state, territory, or political subdivision thereof or the District of Columbia or any agency or instrumentality of any one or more of the foregoing."
  - 1.5. Office (Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, page 1082): A right, and correspondent duty, to exercise a public trust. A public charge or employment. An employment on behalf of the government in any station or public trust, not merely transient, occasional, or incidental. The most frequent occasions to use the word arise with reference to a duty and power conferred on an individual by the government; and, when this is the connection, "public office" is a usual and more discriminating expression. But a power and duty may exist without immediate grant from government, and may be properly called an "office;" as the office of executor. Here the individual acts towards legatees in performance of a duty, and in exercise of a power not derived from their consent, but devolved on him by an authority which quoad hoc is superior....

- 1.6. Appointment (Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, page 99): The designation of a person, by the person or persons having authority therefor, to discharge the duties of some office or trust. In re Nicholson's Estate, 104 Colo. 561, 93 P.2d. 880, 884...

Office or public function. The selection or designation of a person, by the person or persons having authority therefor, to fill an office or public function and discharge the duties of the same. The term "appointment" is to be distinguished from "election." "Election" to office usually refers to vote of people, whereas "appointment" relates to designation by some individual or group. Board of Education of Boyle County v. McChesney, 235 Ky. 692, 32 S.W.2d. 26, 27.

- 1.7. Public Office, pursuant to Black's Law Dictionary, Abridged Sixth Edition, p. 1230 means:

"Essential characteristics of a 'public office' are:

- (1) Authority conferred by law,
- (2) Fixed tenure of office, and
- (3) Power to exercise some of the sovereign functions of government.
- (4) Key element of such test is that "officer is carrying out a sovereign function'.
- (5) Essential elements to establish public position as 'public office' are:
  - (a) Position must be created by Constitution, legislature, or through authority conferred by legislature.
  - (b) Portion of sovereign power of government must be delegated to position,
  - (c) Duties and powers must be defined, directly or implied, by legislature or through legislative authority.
  - (d) Duties must be performed independently without control of superior power other than law, and
  - (e) Position must have some permanency."

- 1.8. 26 U.S.C. §6331: Subchapter D-Seizure of Property for Collection of Taxes

Section 6331 Levy and Distraint.

Section 6331(a) Authority of Secretary. - If any person liable to pay any tax neglects or refuses to pay the same within 10 days after notice and demand, it shall be lawful for the Secretary to collect such tax (and such further sum as shall be sufficient to cover the expenses of the levy) by levy upon all property and rights to property (except such property as is exempt under section 6334 (9)) belonging to such person or on which there is a lien provided in this chapter for the payment of such tax. Levy may be made upon the accrued salary or wages of any officer, employee, or elected official of the United States, District of Columbia, or any agency or instrumentality of the United States or the District of Columbia, by serving a notice of levy on the employer of such officer, employee or elected official. If the Secretary makes a finding that the collection of such tax is in jeopardy, notice and demand for immediate payment of such tax may be made by the secretary and, upon failure or refusal to pay such tax, collection thereof by levy shall be lawful without regard to the 10-day period provided in this section.

You will note that the above describes the ONLY persons upon which a levy or garnishment may be executed, and this activity applies ONLY to Title 27 Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms and NOT to Subtitle A income taxes, as there are no implementing regulations written by the Secretary of the Treasury that would apply the above section to Subtitle A Income Taxes.

2. Taxable sources: All taxable sources identified in 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(f)(1) are either privileged sources or involved with foreign commerce (see the Constitution, Art. 1, Section 8, Clause 3, which authorizes regulating foreign trade). The I.R.C., Subtitle A income tax is a tax on the source as measured by income, NOT a tax on income. The taxable sources identified in 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(f)(1) of the treasury regulations apply to ALL income, both from within the United States (federal zone) and without and include:
- 2.1. Domestic International Sales Corporation (DISC) taxable income. Corporations are fictitious entities created by the government and therefore in receipt of government privileges.
  - 2.2. Foreign Sales Corporation (FSC) taxable income. Corporations are fictitious entities created by the government and therefore in receipt of government privileges.
  - 2.3. Nonresident alien individuals and foreign corporations engaged in a trade or business within the United States.

26 U.S.C. §7701 (a)(26)

The term "trade or business" includes the performance of the functions of a public office.

You will note that holding of a public office is a privilege associated with government service.

- 2.4. Foreign base company income. These companies operate on U.S. territory/property abroad and are therefore in receipt of government privileges and must pay taxes on that privilege.
- 2.5. Other operative sections relating to foreign income, including:

(vi) Other operative sections. The rules provided in this section also apply in determining--

- (A) The amount of foreign source items...
- (B) The amount of foreign mineral income...
- (C) [Reserved]
- (D) The amount of foreign oil and gas extraction income...
- (E) (deals with Puerto Rico tax credits)
- (F) (deals with Puerto Rico tax credits)
- (G) (deals with Virgin Islands tax credits)
- (H) The income derived from Guam by an individual...
- (I) (deals with China Trade Act corporations)
- (J) (deals with foreign corporations)
- (K) (deals with insurance income of foreign corporations)
- (L) (deals with countries subject to international boycott)
- (M) (deals with the Merchant Marine Act of 1936)" [26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(f)(1)]

1 Now do you understand? With this remarkable realization in mind, is it any wonder why the IRS won't give you a good
2 straight definition of "voluntary compliance" on its website and tries to intimidate ignorant people into paying income taxes
3 they aren't liable for? They operate on bluff and our own ignorance is how they can continue to victimize us. As one
4 Senator put it:

5 *"In a recent conversation with an official at the Internal Revenue Service, I was amazed when he told me that 'If 6 the taxpayers of this country ever discover that the IRS operates on 90% bluff the entire system will collapse' ".
7 [Henry Bellmon, Senator (1969)]*

8 It is precisely the above situation that is the reason why we wrote this book: to eliminate the ignorance of Americans 9 everywhere.

10 One question we get often from our readers about the I.R.C. along these lines is the following:

11 *"I am making my way through your book, The Great IRS Hoax. Anyway it is gigantic, but extremely interesting.
12 I am only a few hundred pages into it. I am confused on one issue though. From what I have read, a natural
13 born citizen of the United States of America is not required by law to pay income tax, but foreigners, DC
14 residents, corporations, etc do. What about if you are an American National who works for a corporation, are 15 you required to pay taxes then?"*

16 Good question! When we work for a corporation (e.g. a corporation registered in the District of Columbia only), the 17 corporation's income is taxable by the government that granted the privilege of its existence but not by other governments.
18 For instance, in order to be liable for federal corporate income taxes, a corporation must have been incorporated and have a
19 physical presence in the District of Columbia, a federal territory, or other part of the federal zone. If the corporation is a 20 state only corporation, then it is liable to pay income taxes on its earnings to the state that granted its charter to exist, but 21 not to the federal government.

22 But what about people who work for a state-chartered corporation that is not registered or incorporated under federal law?
23 As we say later in this chapter, in section 5.6.7, the only people who can earn "wages" are federal "employees" working
24 within exclusive federal legislative jurisdiction and who consent or volunteer under the provisions of 26 C.F.R.
25 §31.3401(a)-3 to participate in federal withholding. Therefore, it doesn't matter who we work for as long as it isn't the 26 U.S. government and as long as we never consent to participate in payroll withholding by submitting a W-4. If we use the 27 right payroll withholding forms, which not the W-4, and maintain the correct citizenship status, which is that of a
28 "national", then we would be "non-resident non-persons" who are not the proper subject of nearly all federal revenue
29 "schemes" described by Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A. This is confirmed by examining 26 U.S.C. §871(a) , which 30 describes all taxable subjects for those domiciled in states of the Union who are "nationals" and "nonresident aliens". Note
31 that the list DOES NOT include "wages", "salaries" and only includes earnings from within the "United States", which is
32 the District of Columbia. 26 U.S.C. §861(a)(3)(C)(i) confirms that nonresident aliens who are working for nonresident
33 aliens and whose earnings are not connected with a political office, which is nearly everyone in states of the Union, do not
34 need to include earnings from labor in their "gross income".

The people working for a state corporation are therefore not liable for extortion to either the state or federal government, because federal liability is universally a prerequisite to state income tax liability. The corporation in this case is the direct recipient of state (but not federal) government privileges, but the employees of the corporation are indirect recipients of these privileges through the earnings they receive from their labor. If the company is employee owned and the employees get stock options and there is appreciation on either their stock or the options, then the employees have a realized gain or profit that is “unearned income” from the appreciation on the corporate stock. This profit or appreciation is a direct result of their labor but is “unearned income” NOT considered part of their earnings from labor. If they were a corporation in receipt of these earnings, then they could be liable for income tax on such profit, but once again, they can only be taxed as a sovereign American National if the VOLUNTEER, because the constitution prohibits unapportioned DIRECT TAXES upon individuals. Only STATES can be taxed directly, and not the individuals in them, under Article 1, Section 9, Clause 4, and Article 1, Section 2, Clause 3 of the Constitution.

What about licenses to pursue certain occupations? What kinds of licenses can be taxed? The only licenses subject to federal income taxes are those coming under 27 U.S.C., which is for Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms and which only apply within the federal zone. Receipt of any other occupational license or government privilege, so far as we know, does not make one liable for the payment of 26 U.S.C. Subtitles A and C personal income taxes. Here is what one Oregon court said about privileges as they pertain to natural born persons:

“The individual, unlike the corporation, cannot be taxed for the mere privilege of existing. The corporation is an artificial entity which owes its existence and charter power to the State, but the individual’s right to live and own property are natural rights for the enjoyment of which an excise cannot be imposed.”
[Redfield v. Fisher, 292 Oregon 814, 817]

To summarize this section then, what you should have learned is that the notion of calling the income tax described in Subtitles A through C of the Internal Revenue Code a “tax” in reality constitutes fraud on the part of the federal government. The other part of the fraud is not clarifying what is meant in the statutes by “tax” (either a tax OR a donation), “United States” (the federal United States) or “employee” (a public official of the U.S. government), “trade or business” (the holding of public office), or “indirect excise tax” in IRS publications and the Internal Revenue Code. “The big lie” therefore begins with the distortions of our language by the government that deprives us of our liberties as described below.

“When words lose their meaning, people will lose their liberty.”
[Confucius, 500 B.C.]

5.4.11 The money you send to the IRS is a Gift to the U.S. government

31 U.S.C. §321(d)

(1) The Secretary of the Treasury may accept, hold, administer, and use gifts and bequests of property, both real and personal, for the purpose of aiding or facilitating the work of the Department of the Treasury. Gifts and bequests of money and the proceeds from sales of other property received as gifts or bequests shall be deposited in the Treasury in a separate fund and shall be disbursed on order of the Secretary of the Treasury. Property accepted under this paragraph, and the proceeds thereof, shall be used as nearly as possible in accordance with the terms of the gift or bequest.

(2): “For the purposes of the Federal income, estate, and gift taxes, property accepted under paragraph (1) shall be considered as a gift or bequest to or for the use of the United States.”

Now let’s look at the surprising definition of the word “gift” in Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, page 688:

Gift: A voluntary transfer of property to another made gratuitously and without consideration. Bradley v. Bradley, Tex.Civ.App., 540 S.W.2d. 504, 511. Essential requisites of “gift” are capacity of donor, intention of donor to make gift, completed delivery to or for donee, and acceptance of gift by donee.

In tax law, a payment is a gift if it is made without conditions, from detached and disinterested generosity, out of affection, respect, charity or like impulses, and not from the constraining force of any moral or legal duty or from the incentive of anticipated benefits of an economic nature.

And finally, let’s look up the word “voluntary” from Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1575:

1                    "Unconstrained by interference; unimpelled by another's influence; spontaneous; acting of oneself. Coker v.
 2                    State, 199 Ga. 20, 33 S.E.2d. 171, 174. Done by design or intention. Proceeding from the free and
 3                    unrestrained will of the person. Produced in or by an act of choice. Resulting from free choice,
 4                    without compulsion or solicitation. The word, especially in statutes, often implies
 5                    knowledge of essential facts. Without valuable consideration; gratuitous, as a voluntary conveyance. Also,
 6                    having a merely nominal consideration; as, a voluntary deed."

7 The above considerations might explain why the Congress created 31 U.S.C. §321(d)(2), which says that income taxes,
 8 estate taxes, and gift taxes are "gifts" to the U.S. government. Therefore, because "gifts" and "bequests" are never
 9 mandatory and must always be a product of choice and not compulsion, then they aren't "taxes" in a legal sense and
 10 Subtitles A and C actually describe a voluntary donation program for the municipal government of the District of 11 Columbia! There can be no other rational conclusion you can reach after reading this section. You can read this amazing 12 statute for yourself at:

13 <http://www4.law.cornell.edu/uscode/31/321.html>

14 Because the monies paid the government and IRS under the guise of a lawful income tax are actually gifts, then the 15 Supreme Court has said that such gifts are non-refundable if voluntarily paid, even if they are mistakenly paid. The only 16 way to maintain the ability to get these gifts back is to pay them "under protest":

17                    "If the duties demanded of Nicholl & Co. had been paid under protest, their payment, in the sense of the law,
 18                    would have been compulsory, but as they were paid without protest it was a voluntary payment, doubtless made
 19                    and received in mutual mistake of the law; but in such a case, as was decided in Elliott v. Swartwout, no action
 20                    will lie to recover back the money."

21                    [...at page 129]

22                    Besides, if there had been a regulation of the department on the subject, it could not affect the rights of the 23                    appellants, for such a regulation cannot change a law of Congress.
 24                    [Nichols v. U.S., 74 U.S. 122 (1868), p. 128]

25 How do we pay something under protest? Well, simply put, we indicate the words "under protest" near our signature or 26 somewhere on the tax return or letter attached to it. Once we have done this, we have reserved our right to recover the 27 coerced "gift" in a court of law.

28 Getting back to our friends at the Department of Plunder, the IRS depends not only upon its highly publicized actions but 29 upon its perceived power in order to instill fear into honest Americans and, according to the agency itself, to: "Maintain a 30 sense of presence."

31 Quoting from a book called IRS In Action by Santo Presti, we read:

32                    "Fear is the key element for the IRS in achieving its mission. Without fear, the IRS would have a difficult time 33                    maintaining our so-called system of voluntary compliance..."

34 And what exactly does "voluntary compliance" really mean?

35 In 1953, Mr. Dwight E. Avis, head of the Alcohol and Tobacco Division of the Bureau of Internal Revenue, made the 36 following remarkable statement to a subcommittee of the Committee on Ways and Means in the House of Representatives:

37                    "Let me point this out now: Your income tax is 100 percent voluntary tax, and your liquor tax is 100 percent
 38                    enforced tax. Now, the situation is as different as day and night."

39 In 1971, the following quote was found in the IRS instruction booklet for Form 1040:

40                    "Each year American taxpayers voluntarily file their tax returns and make a special effort to pay the taxes they 41                    owe."

42 In 1974, Donald C. Alexander, Commissioner of Internal Revenue, published the following statement in the March 29 issue
 43 of The Federal Register:

1                   "The mission of the Service is to encourage and achieve the highest possible degree of voluntary compliance
 2                   with the tax laws and regulations..."

3                   [emphasis added]

4 One year later, in 1975, his successor, Mortimer Caplin authored the following statement in the Internal Revenue Audit
 5 Manual:

6                   "Our system is based on individual self-assessment and voluntary compliance."

7 In 1980, yet another IRS commissioner, Jerome Kurtz (their turnover is high) issues a similar statement in their Internal 8 Revenue Annual Report:

9                   "The IRS's primary task is to collect taxes under a voluntary compliance system."

10 Even the Supreme Court of the United States has held that the system of federal income taxation is voluntary, starting in
 11 Flora v. United States, 362 U.S. 145 (1960):

12                   "...the government can collect the tax from a district court suitor by exercising its power of distraint.. but we
 13                   cannot believe that compelling resort to this extraordinary procedure is either wise or in accord with
 14                   congressional intent. Our tax system is based upon voluntary assessment and payment, not upon distraint.

15                   If the government is forced to use these remedies (distraint) on a large scale, it will affect adversely the 16                   taxpayers willingness to perform under our VOLUNTARY assessment system."

17 The dictionary defines "distraint" to mean the act or action of distraining, that is, seizing property to distress or taking by 18 force. One way to determine for whom the income tax is mandatory is to look at the section of the code that talks about the 19 types of levy and distraint that are authorized and how they may be instituted. The only section of the entire Internal 20 Revenue Code that talks about levy and distraint is 26 U.S.C. Section. 6331, and it plainly states that only the Secretary of 21 the Treasury (not the IRS) may institute levy and distraint and that he has the authority to do so ONLY on instrumentalities
 22 of the federal government, such as officers or elected officials of the United States situated in the federal zone. The 23 Secretary of the Treasury may NOT therefore effect levy or distraint outside of the federal zone or in nonfederal areas in the 24 50 Union states on other than its own officers. Here is that section of the Internal Revenue Code:

25                   (a) Authority of Secretary

26                   If any person liable to pay any tax neglects or refuses to pay the same within 10 days after notice and demand,
 27                   it shall be lawful for the Secretary to collect such tax (and such further sum as shall be sufficient to cover the 28                   expenses of the levy) by levy upon all property and rights to property (except such property as is exempt under 29                   section 6334) belonging to such person or on which there is a lien provided in this chapter for the payment of
 30                   such tax. Levy may be made upon the accrued salary or wages of any officer, employee, or elected official, of
 31                   the United States, the District of Columbia, or any agency or instrumentality of the United States or the 32                   District of Columbia, by serving a notice of levy on the employer (as defined in section 3401(d)) of such 33                   officer, employee, or elected official. If the Secretary makes a finding that the collection of such tax is in
 34                   jeopardy, notice and demand for immediate payment of such tax may be made by the Secretary and, upon
 35                   failure or refusal to pay such tax, collection thereof by levy shall be lawful without regard to the 10-day period
 36                   provided in this section.

37 The IRS' definition of "employee" is also consistent with the above conclusions on the limitations on liability for paying 38 the federal income tax:

39                   26 C.F.R. §31.3401(c ) Employee: "...the term [employee] includes officers and employees, whether elected or
 40                   appointed, of the United States, a [federal] State, Territory, Puerto Rico or any political subdivision, thereof, or
 41                   the District of Columbia, or any agency or instrumentality of any one or more of the foregoing. The term
 43

44                   26 U.S.C. Sec. 3401(c )

45                   Employee

46                   For purposes of this chapter, the term "employee" includes [is limited to] an officer, employee, or elected
 47                   official of the United States, a State, or any political subdivision thereof, or the District of Columbia, or any agency or instrumentality of any one or more of the foregoing. The term "employee" also includes an officer of a corporation.

26 C.F.R. §31.3401(c)-1

Generally, physicians, lawyers, dentists, veterinarians, contractors, subcontractors, public stenographers, auctioneers, and others who follow an independent trade, business, or profession, in which they offer their services to the public, are not employees.

IRS Publication 21 is widely distributed to high schools. It acknowledges that compliance with a Law that requires the filing of returns is voluntary. Get to those young minds early, and it's easier to wash their brains later on in life.

At the same time, Publication 21 suggests that the filing of a return is mandatory, as follows:

"Two aspects of the Federal income tax system--voluntary compliance with the Law and self-assessment of tax--make it important for you to understand your rights and responsibilities as a taxpayer. Voluntary compliance places on the taxpayer the responsibility for filing an income tax return. You must decide whether the Law requires you to file a return. If it does, you must file your return by the date it is due."

Perhaps one of the most famous quotes on this question of the voluntary nature of income taxes came from Roger M. Olsen, Assistant Attorney General, Tax Division, Department of Justice, Washington, D.C., on Saturday, May 9, 1987, when Olsen told an assemblage of tax lawyers:

"We encourage voluntary compliance by scaring the heck out of you!"

Meaning, "Assess yourself and volunteer to comply or we'll seize your property and you may go to jail" (exercise "distrain", that is, which the Supreme Court said in Flora v. United States, 362 U.S. 145 (1960) was NOT to be used as part of our tax system!)

What is the difference between the voluntary filing of a tax return and the voluntary paying of income tax on taxable income? A world of difference. Millions of people don't file income tax returns. For instance, below is a clip from a GAO report on nonfilers published in 1996 (see http://www.deevy.com/abra\_19991021.html):

Internal Revenue Service: Results of Nonfiler Strategy and Opportunities to Improve Future Efforts (Chapter Report, 05/13/96, GAO/GGD-96-72).

GAO reviewed the results of the Internal Revenue Service's (IRS) nonfiler strategy and opportunities to improve any similar future efforts.

Skip down to the section on Introduction and you will find this rather amazing statement:

"In 1993, IRS received about 114 million individual income tax returns. Almost all of those returns were for tax year 1992. For that same tax year, IRS identified 59.6 million potential individual nonfilers. Of the 59.6 million, IRS took no enforcement action on 54.1 million (91 percent), primarily because IRS subsequently determined that the individual or business had no legal requirement to file."

So as we can see, LOTS of people don't file returns and no enforcement action is taken against them. Why, as we see above, would the IRS not want to institute enforcement action? Because:

5.4.12 Taxes Paid on One's Own Labor are Slavery

1 “You were bought at a price; do not become slaves of men [and government is 2 made up of men].”
3 [1 Cor. 7:23, Bible, NKJV]

4 “Stand fast therefore in liberty by which Christ has made us free, and do not be entangled again with a yoke of 5 bondage [to the IRS or the government].”
6 [Gal. 5:1, Bible, NKJV]

7 “Masters [tyrants in Washington, D.C. who are public servants that vainly think themselves to be masters], give 8 your servants what is just and fair, knowing that you also have a Master in heaven.”
9 [Colossians 4:1, Bible, NKJV]

10 Slavery, we are reminded incessantly these days, was a terrible thing. In today's politically correct society, some blacks are 11 demanding reparations for slavery because their remote ancestors were slaves. Slavery is routinely used to bash the South,
12 although the slave trade began in the North, and slavery was once practiced in every state in the Union. Today's historians
13 assure us that the War for Southern Independence was fought primarily if not exclusively over slavery, and that by winning 14 that war, the North put an end to the peculiar institution once and for all.

15 Whoa! Time out! Shouldn't we back up and ask: what is slavery? It has been a while since those ranting on the subject
16 have offered us a working definition of it. They will all claim that we know good and well what it is; why play games with 17 the word? But given the adage that those who can control language can control policy, it surely can't hurt to revisit the 18 definition of slavery. There are good reasons to suspect the motives of those who won't allow their basic terms to be 19 defined or scrutinized. Here is a definition, one that will make sense of the instincts telling us that slavery is indeed an 20 abomination:

21 Slavery is non-ownership of one's Person and Labor.

22 Slavery is the opposite of “liberty” or the absence of liberty. We have an excellent animation on our website that very 23 clearly and simply defines what liberty is, which helps us understand what slavery is at the address below:

24 <http://famguardian.org/Subjects/Freedom/Articles/PhilosophyOfLiberty-english.swf>

25 Slavery, therefore, is involuntary servitude. When a slave is working to pay off a debt, he is called a “peon”. A slave must 26 work under a whip, real or figurative, wielded by other persons, his owners, with no say in how (or even if) his labors are 27 compensated. His is a one-way contract he cannot opt out of. A slave is tied to his master (and to the land where he 28 labors). He cannot simply quit if he doesn't like it. Moreover, a slave can be bought and sold like any other commodity.
29 Justice Brewer of the U.S. Supreme Court helped us to understand exactly what slavery is in the case of Clyatt v. U.S., 197
30 U.S. 207 (1905):

31 “The constitutionality and scope of sections 1990 and 5526 present the first questions for our consideration.
32 They prohibit peonage. What is peonage? It may be defined as a state or condition of compulsory service,
33 based upon the indebtedness of the peon to the master. The basal fact is indebtedness. As said by Judge
34 Benedict, delivering the opinion in Jaremillo v. Romero, 1 N.Mex. 190, 194: ‘One fact existed universally; all 35 were indebted to their masters. This was the cord by which they seemed bound to their masters’ service.
36 Upon this is based a condition of compulsory service. Peonage is sometimes classified as voluntary or 37 involuntary, but this implies simply a difference in the mode of origin, but not in the character of the 38 servitude. The one exists where the debtor voluntarily contracts to enter the service of his creditor. The other
39 is forced upon the debtor by some provision of law. But peonage, however created, is compulsory service,
40 involuntary servitude. The peon can release himself therefrom, it is true, by the payment of the debt, but 41 otherwise the service is enforced. A clear distinction exists between peonage and the voluntary performance of 42 labor or rendering of services in payment of a debt. In the latter case the debtor, though contracting to pay his 43 indebtedness by labor or service, and subject like any other contractor to an action for damages for breach of 44 that contract, can elect at any time to break it, and no law or force compels performance or continuance of the 45 service.”
46 [Clyatt v. U.S., 197 U.S. 207 (1905)]

47 Here's another example of what slavery means, again from the U.S. Supreme Court in Plessy v. Ferguson, 163 U.S. 537,
48 542 (1896):

49 “That it does not conflict with the Thirteenth Amendment, which abolished slavery and involuntary servitude,
50 except as a punishment for crime, is too clear for argument. Slavery implies involuntary servitude—a state of 51 bondage; the ownership of mankind as a chattel, or at least the control of the labor and services of one man

1 for the benefit of another, and the absence of a legal right to the disposal of his own person, property, and
 2 services [in their entirety]. This amendment was said in the Slaughter House Cases, 16 Wall, 36, to have been
 3 intended primarily to abolish slavery, as it had been previously known in this country, and that it equally
 4 forbade Mexican peonage or the Chinese coolie trade, when they amounted to slavery or involuntary servitude
 5 and that the use of the word 'servitude' was intended to prohibit the use of all forms of involuntary slavery, of 6 whatever class or name."
 7 [Plessy v. Ferguson, 163 U.S. 537, 542 (1896)]

8 When the IRS fabricates a bogus tax liability without the authority of enacted positive law creating a "liability", if they lie
 9 to you about what the tax Code says, or if they try to enforce an excise tax against activities that that you aren't involved in
 10 and which you have informed them under penalty of perjury that you aren't involved in, then they effectively are recruiting
 11 or returning you into debt slavery and "peonage" and their activities are a federal offense in violation of 42 U.S.C. §1994
 12 and 18 U.S.C. §1581. These two statutes, incidentally, unlike most other federal legislation and statutes, DO apply within
 13 states of the union according to the U.S. Supreme Court in the above mentioned case. 18 U.S.C. §1593 also mandates
 14 restitution for all those persons who have been recruited into slavery or involuntary servitude by their slave masters, which
 15 means that we must be compensated fairly for the labor of ours that was in effect stolen from us. Why hasn't the Supreme 16 Court attempted to prevent the unconstitutional implementation of an otherwise constitutional tax law that only operates (as 17 written) within the District of Columbia and other federal territories? Because they are bought and paid for with money
 18 they are STEALING from you! By acquiescing to the illegal enforcement of the Internal Revenue Code, which is 19 otherwise constitutional, you are bribing them to maintain the status quo, friends!

20 In the case of the way the corrupt IRS and an even more corrupted federal judiciary mis-enforces our laws or pretends that
 21 there is a positive law federal taxing statute when in fact there isn't one, the very real slavery that results is at odds with
 22 libertarian social ethics, in which all human beings have a natural right to ownership of Person and Labor. According to
 23 libertarian social ethics, contracts should be voluntary and not coerced. This is sufficient for us to oppose slavery with all
 24 our might. However, notice that this clear definition of slavery is a double-edged sword. There is no reference to race in 25 the above definition. That whites enslaved blacks early in our history is an historical accident; there is nothing inherently
 26 racial about slavery. Many peoples have been enslaved in the past, including whites. The South, too, has no intrinsic
 27 connection with slavery, given how we already noted that it was practiced in the North as well. No slaves were brought 28 into the Confederacy during its brief, five-year existence, and it is very likely that the practice would have died out in a
 29 generation or two had the Confederacy won the war. The Emancipation Proclamation, in fact, freed all the slaves over 30 which Lincoln had NOT JURISDICTION.

31 It is instructive at this point to compare the status of being a "negro slave" to that of being a "taxpayer" to show you just 32 how similar they are, in fact. We have prepared a table comparing each of these two statuses to show you that they are 33 indeed synonymous:

1 Finally, it is clear that when most people talk about slavery, they are referring to chattel slavery, the overt practice of
 2 buying, selling and owning people like farm animals or beasts of burden. Are there other forms of slavery besides chattel
 3 slavery?

4 Before answering, let's review our definition above and contrast slavery with sovereignty, in the sense of sovereignty over
 5 one's life. Slavery, we said, is non-ownership of Person and Labor. In that case, sovereignty is ownership of Person and
 6 Labor. The basic contrast, then, is between slavery and sovereignty, and the issue is ownership. And there are two basic
 7 things one can own: one's Person (one's life), and one's Labor (the fruits of one's labors, including personal wealth
 8 resulting from productive labors).

9 Let us quantify the situation. A plantation slave owned neither himself nor the fruits of his labors. That is, he owned 0% of 10 Person and 0% of Labor. In an ideal libertarian order, ownership of Person and Labor would be just the opposite: 100% of 11 both. In this case, we have a method allowing us to describe other forms of slavery by ascribing different percentages of 12 ownership to Person and Labor. For example, we might say that a prison inmate owns 5% of Person and 50% of Labor.
 13 Inmates are highly confined in person yet they are allowed to own wealth both inside the prison and outside. Some,
 14 moreover, are allowed to work at jobs for which they are paid. When slavery was abolished, ownership of Person and Labor
 15 was transferred to the slave, and he became mostly free. So let us define the following categories in terms of individual 16 percentage ownership:

Table 5-41: Percent Ownership of Person and Labor

#	Category	Characteristics	Equivalent political system
1	Perfect Liberty	100% ownership of Person and Labor	Pure Capitalism/Republic
2	Partial Slavery	Some % ownership of Person and Labor	Socialism/democracy
3	Chattel Slavery	0% ownership of Person and Labor	Communism/dictatorship

With this in mind, here is an intriguing question for our readers:

How much ownership do you have in your person and your labor?

Are you really free? Or are you a partial slave or peon? We are not, of course, talking about arrangements that cede a portion of ownership of Person and Labor to others through voluntary contract.

We submit that forcible taxation on your personal income makes you a partial slave and makes the government a socialist government. For if you are legally bound to hand a certain percentage of your income (the fruits of your labors) over to federal, state and local governments, then from the legal standpoint you only have "some % ownership" of your person and labor. The pivotal point is whether or not ownership is ceded through voluntary contract. Have you any recollection of any deals you signed with the IRS promising them payment of part of your income? If not, then if 30% of your income is paid in income taxes, then you have only 70% ownership of Labor. You are a slave from January through April – a very conservative estimate at best, today!

If one wants to stand on the U.S. Constitution as one's foundation, then the 13th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution can be used as an ironclad argument against a forcible direct tax on the labor of a human being. The 13th Amendment says:

"Neither slavery nor involuntary servitude, except as a punishment for a crime whereof the party shall have been duly convicted, shall exist within the United States, or any place subject to their jurisdiction. Congress shall have the power to enforce this article by appropriate legislation."

The 13th Amendment makes it very clear that we cannot legally or Constitutionally be forced into involuntary servitude. It doesn't make any distinction between whether the slavery is physical or financial, but says that any kind of involuntary servitude is prohibited.

As such, we maintain that a human being has an inalienable right to own 100 % of Person and 100% of Labor, including control over how the fruits of his actions are dispensed. A human being has an inalienable right to control the compensation for his labor while in the act of any service in the marketplace – e.g., digging ditches, flipping burgers, word-processing documents for a company, programming computers, preparing court cases, performing surgery, preaching sermons, or writing novels.

A forcible direct tax on the labor of a human being is in violation of this right as stated in the 13th Amendment. If we work 40 hours a week, and another entity forcibly conscripts 25 % of our compensation, then we argue that we have been forced into involuntary servitude – slavery – for 10 of those 40 hours, and we were free for the other 30. If we could freely choose to work just the 30 hours and decline to work the 10 hours, then our wills would not be violated and the 13th Amendment would be honored.

However, Congress and the IRS claim that their Internal Revenue Code (IRC) lay direct claim to those ten hours (or some stated percentage) without our consent.

In other words, in a free and just society, a society in which there is no slavery of any form:

- Human beings are not forced to work for free, in whole or in part.
- Human beings are not slaves to anything or anyone.
- Anyone who attempts to force us to work for free, without compensation, has violated our rights under the 13th Amendment.

1 This, of course, is not the state of affairs in the United States of America at the turn of the millennium, in which:

- 2 • We labor involuntarily for at least four months out of every year for the government.
- 3 • We are, therefore, slaves for that period of time.
- 4 • The government, having forced us to work for free, without compensation, has violated the 13th Amendment.

5 Of course, what follows from all this discussion is that there is an issue about slavery. But it is not the issue politically
6 correct historians and activists are raising. As for reparations, we suspect many of us might be willing to let bygones be
7 bygones if we never had to pay out another dime to the IRS. We often read about how great the economy is supposedly
8 doing. Just imagine how it would flourish if human beings owned 100% of Person and Labor, and could voluntarily invest
9 the capital we currently pay to the government in our businesses, our homes, our schools, and our communities!

10 For those of you who believe that the 16th Amendment repealed, replaced, modified, appended, amended or superseded the 11 13th Amendment, you are mistaken. For an Amendment to be changed, in any way, there must be an Amendment that 12 emphatically declares this action. There is absolutely nothing in the Constitution that alters the efficacy of the 13th
13 Amendment in even the slightest way. The 16th merely allowed the government to enter the "National Social Benefits"
14 business where it finances the system with the mandatory contributions of voluntary participants. While all Americans
15 certainly understand the concept of mandatory contributions, they fail to understand the concept of voluntary participation,
16 largely due to a very effective marketing campaign on the part of our central government for several generations now since
17 the Great Depression. The 16th gave the government the power to legally enter a contractual relationship with its citizens
18 wherein the citizen voluntarily contributes a portion of his labor in exchange for social benefits. In order for both 19 Amendments to peacefully coexist, the contractual relationships in the system created by the 16th cannot be forced upon the 20 citizens. For to do so would be to contradict the 13th completely.

21 Two final questions, and a few final thoughts. Can we really take seriously the carpings of politically correct historians
22 about an arrangement (chattel slavery) that hasn't existed for 140 years when they completely ignore the structurally similar
23 arrangements (tax slavery) that have existed right under their noses during most of the years since. And does a 24 governmental system which systematically violates its own founding documents, and then oversees the imprisoning of 25 those who refuse to recognize the legitimacy of the violations, really have a claim on the loyalty of those who would be 26 loyal to the ideals represented in those founding documents?

27 Eventually, we have to make a decision. How long are we going to continue to put up with the present hypocritical
28 arrangements? In the Declaration of Independence is found these remarks:

29 "... [a]nd accordingly all Experience hath shewn, that Mankind are more disposed to suffer, while Evils are 30 sufferable, than to right themselves by abolishing the Forms to which they are accustomed."

31 We are accustomed to the income tax. Most people take it for granted, and don't look at fundamental issues. Yet some 32 have indeed opted out of the tax system. It is necessary, at present, to become self-employed and hire oneself out based on 33 a negotiated contract in which you determine your hourly rate and then bill for your time. Then you send your client an 34 invoice, they write a check directly to you in response, and you take the check and deposit it in your bank account; you may 35 wish to open a bank account with a name like John Smith Enterprises DBA (DBA stands for 'Doing Business As'). If the 36 bank asks for a tax-ID number, you may give your social security number. This is perfectly legal since you are not a
37 corporation nor are you required to be. Nor does the use of a government issued number contractually obligate you to 38 participate in their system.

39 We should specify here that we are discussing taxes on income resulting from personal labor, to be carefully distinguished
40 from taxes for the sale of material items, or excise taxes, both of which are usually indirect taxes on artificial entities like
41 corporations. These are an entirely separate, and voluntary matter, because if you don't want to pay the tax, you either don't 42 buy the good or don't register as a corporation that sells the good.

43 By advocating opting out of the income tax slavery system, we are not advocating anything illegal here; that is the most
44 surprising thing of all. The Treasury Department nailed Al Capone not because of failure to pay taxes on his personal labor
45 but for his failure to pay the excise tax on the sale of alcoholic beverages. So a plan to be self-employed that includes profit
46 from the sale of material goods should include a plan to pay all the excise taxes; you risk a prison sentence if you don't. But 47 the 13th Amendment directly prohibits anything or anyone from conscripting your person or the fruits of your physical or 48 cognitive labors; to do so is make a slave of you. You may, of course, voluntarily participate in the SSA-W2 system by free

1 choice. In this case you are required to submit to the rules as outlined in the Internal Revenue Code (IRC). And this means
2 that you will contribute a significant fraction of your labor to pay for the group benefits of the system in which you are
3 voluntarily participating.

4 Your relationship with the system technically begins with the assignment of a Social Security Number (Personal Tax ID
5 Number). This government-issued number, however, does not contractually obligate you to anything. The government
6 cannot conscript its citizens simply by assigning a number to them. Assigning the number is perfectly fine. But conscripting
7 them in the process is a serious no-no. Some people that feel strongly about the last chapters of the book of Revelation
8 might view this as pure – evil.

9 The critical point in the relationship begins when a citizen accepts a job with an IRS registered corporation. Accepting the 10 government owned SSA-W2 job marries you to the system. The payroll department has the employee fill out a W4. This
11 W4 officially notifies the employee that the job in question is officially part of the SSA-W2 system and that all job-income
12 is subject first to the rules and regulations of the IRC and then secondly to the employee. When you sign that W4 you are at 13 that point very, very married to the system.

14 So why not just decline to sign the W4?

15 You can decline to sign a W4 but this does not accomplish much nor does it un-marry you from the system. Your payroll
16 office will merely use the IRC defaults already present in the payroll software and all deductions will be based on those 17 parameters.

18 Okay, you might say, fine, I'll sign a W4 but I'll direct my payroll department to withhold zero. (You can do this for federal 19 withholding but not for social security tax.) This still does not un-marry you from the system. Your payroll department still 20 reports the gross income and deductions for your SSA-W2 job to the IRS each and every quarter. And at the end of the 21 year you will probably end up being asked to write a large check to the IRS for the group contributions you declined to pay
22 during the year. With skill and the resources in this book, you may escape this assumed but nonexistent liability.

23 You then might say, Okay, then I'll just direct my payroll office to decline to report income to the IRS.

24 Reply: they cannot legally decline to report your SSA-W2 income because of their contractual obligations under the IRC
25 that were agreed to when they established their official IRS registered corporation. The corporation can get into deep 26 trouble by violating their contract.

27 Okay, you reply in turn, I'll just get the corporation to create a non-SSA-W2 job for me.

28 Response this time: the corporation cannot do this either; their contract under the IRC requires every single employee-job in 29 that corporation to be an SSA-W2 job. This is similar to labor union practices of insisting that all jobs in a plant be union 30 jobs.

31 You retort: isn't this a government monopoly on every corporate job in America???

32 The short answer is YES.

33 So how can I legally decline to work for free?

34 The answer is to decline to be an 'employee' of an official IRS registered corporation.

35 How is that possible?

36 The answer is simple. You become an independent contractor. The Supreme Court upholds the sovereignty of the 37 individual and has declared that your "...power to contract is unlimited." Corporations hire the labors of non-employees 38 each and every day.

39 If there is an infestation of cockroaches near the employee break-room, the corporation doesn't create an SSA-W2
40 employee exterminator job. They hire a contract exterminator to kill the bugs. When the bug-man arrives they don't hand
41 him a W4 and ask him to declare his allowances, they lead him straight to the big-fat-ugly roaches and implore him to

1 vanquish the vermin immediately. When the bug-man finishes the job he hands them an invoice for his services. And the
2 company sends him a check to pay the invoice. And nowhere on that check will you find a federal, state, county or city
3 withholding deduction or a social security deduction or a medical or dental deduction or a garnishment or an "I'll-be-
4 needing-an-accountant-to-figure-all-this-out" deduction or a "Tuesday-Save-The-Turnips-Tax" deduction. On the contrary,
5 the bug-man receives full remuneration for his service. This simple arrangement is completely legal and the IRC has zero
6 contractual claim to any part of this check (assuming the bug-man has made no contract under the IRC). And anyone or 7 anything that attempts to forcibly conscript any part of that check is violating the bug-man's rights under the 13th
8 Amendment.

9 Supreme Court Ruling on Individual Sovereignty

10 "There is a clear distinction in this particular case between an individual and a corporation, and that the latter
11 has no right to refuse to submit its books and papers for an examination at the suit of the State. The individual
12 may stand upon his constitutional rights as a citizen. He is entitled to carry on his private business in his own
13 way. His power to contract is unlimited. He owes no such duty to the State, since he receives nothing therefrom,
14 beyond the protection of his life and property. His rights are such as existed by the law of the land long
15 antecedent to the organization of the State, and can only be taken from him by due process of law, and in 16 accordance with the constitution. Among his rights are a refusal to incriminate himself, and the immunity of 17 himself and his property from arrest or seizure except under a warrant of the law. He owes nothing to the 18 public so long as he does not trespass upon their rights."
19 [Hale v. Henkel, 201 U.S. 43, 74 (1906)]

20 What does the bug-man do with his check?

21 The short answer is ... he keeps it ... all of it.

22 What about filing a tax return?

23 The bug-man declines to file a return since he has nothing to report that is under the jurisdiction of the IRC. Since he does
24 not work in a government owned SSA-W2 job he is out of the system and under no contractual obligation to make 25 contributions. The corporation that wrote him a check for his service legally reports it as an internal business expense. He 26 is legally classified as a non-participant.

27 If you are in the SSA-W2 system:

28 The purpose of an individual year-end tax-return is to settle the exact amount of contractually required contributions to the 29 SSA-W2 system as determined by the IRC. Filing is purely voluntary. You can decline to file but doing so does not release
30 you from your contractual obligations under the IRC. In the absence of a tax-return, the IRS falsely believes that the IRC
31 permits them to file a tax-return on your behalf and they are allowed to file a return that maximally favors them. Most 32 people don't challenge their illegal attempt to make a return if you don't provide them with one. And this they will do if it
33 creates a receivable – accounting lingo for – "you owe them money." They will decline to file a return if it would create a
34 payable – accounting lingo for "they owe you money." If the IRS files a return and creates a receivable against you they 35 will send you a notice declaring their claim. If you decline to pay, the IRC permits the IRS to file a tax-lien against you if 36 you are a "public officer" of the U.S. government. This of course will be seen on your credit report. And the end result is 37 your credit is damaged. The IRS computers will see to it that the lien remains on your credit report until the lien is paid.
38 You can't beat a computer.

39 What if I file a return but cheat like crazy?

40 This is a very bad idea. The Treasury Department nailed Leona Helmsley not because she failed to pay taxes on her
41 personal labor but because she filed a fraudulent tax return. Filing a dishonest tax return puts you at risk. The IRS is very
42 astute at defending itself. Basically the IRS is responsible for enforcing the IRC rules. If you are in the SSA-W2 system
43 you have to live by the IRC. If you decide to stay in the system, we recommend securing the services of a highly qualified
44 CPA or tax attorney that can assist you in filing the most advantageous return possible without committing fraud or risking
45 an audit.

46 In the end, the law does allow you to opt-out because you can't be forced to work for free. If you do opt-out there are at 47 least 2 potential inconveniences you need to understand:

- 1 1. Difficulty with conventional loans. You will have a far more difficult time getting loans from conventional banks,
2 because so often these depend on verifying your income with signed tax returns you no longer have. You can hire an
3 accountant to compose a certified financial statement that some loan institutions may accept as valid proof of income.
- 4 2. No unemployment benefits. This benefit is part of the SSA-W2 system and since you're not in the system you can't
5 use the benefits. If you have no contracts you only have yourself to complain to, you can't complain to the government
6 because you can't get anyone to do business with you.

7 Moreover, some who have opted out have moved all their physical assets into a trust. This measure makes it almost
8 impossible for the IRS to touch the assets. The IRS, after all, cannot simply decide to go after a person's wealth. They have
9 to obey IRC rules as well. If there is no income over which they have jurisdiction then they can legally do nothing.

10 It is worth noting, finally, that the government is in the "National Social Benefits" business. The government entered this
11 business with the ratification of the 16th Amendment and has achieved a near perfect monopoly in this market (a violation
12 of anti-trust laws). If you don't believe this, try finding a non-SSA-W2 job with a U.S. corporation. As such, it is in the
13 interest of any business that has a monopoly to get the customers to believe that there is no alternative to the present
14 business relationship. The government is not about to provide any of its customers (you and I) with any information
15 suggesting otherwise. In obtaining such information, we are clearly on our own; no government agency will assist you in 16 opting out of the income tax system or the social security system, with the possible exception of the U.S. Supreme Court, 17 should the right case one day come before them.

18 So one's best weapon is still the Declaration of Independence, the U.S. Constitution, the 13th Amendment, and information.
19 Whatever the inconveniences, the reward is personal sovereignty – otherwise known as freedom. If you would like to know
20 more about the subject of the taxability of wages, we have prepared a whole line of deposition questions on the subject
21 useful in an IRS audit or deposition that basically backs the government into the corner of admitting based on facts and 22 evidence and their own words that wages of natural persons and not corporations cannot be taxable. It is at:

Tax Deposition Questions, Family Guardian Fellowship
<http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/Forms/Discovery/Deposition/Deposition.htm>

23 Look under section 2 of the questions entitled "Right to Labor" for some rather compelling evidence showing that what we 24 are saying here is true.

25 Lastly, if you want to investigate this matter even further, we recommend the following:

26 5.4.13 The word "shall" in the tax code actually means "may"

27 Many people who read the tax code are deceived by the word "shall". When they see that word, they assume it creates a
28 mandatory obligation on their part to obey. In this section, we will explore further exactly what this important word means
29 from a legal perspective to show that it really means "may". This conclusion then reinforces our hypothesis that the 30 Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A is indeed completely "voluntary".

31 The first place to check on how the word "shall" is being used in the Code, starts with where all construction begins, that is,
32 within the statute itself. The word 'shall' is not defined in the Code. The next step would be to see, or how, in general, is 33 the word 'shall' defined by the courts. There are very few judicial precedents that deal directly with on the definition of this
34 important word, but we will review what we have found so far to conclusively prove the hypothesis of this section.

35 In Fort Howard Paper Company v. Fox River Heights Sanitary District, 26 N.W.2nd. 661, the court defined the word 'shall'
36 in the following way:

37 "The word 'shall' in a statute may be construed to mean may, particularly in order to avoid a constitutional 38 doubt."

39 The court in Gow v. Consolidated Coopermines Corp, 165 Atl. 136, defined it this way:

"If necessary, to avoid unconstitutionality of a statute, 'shall' will be deemed as equivalent to 'may'."

George Williams College v. Village of William Bay, 7 N.W.2d. 6, is another case that defined the word 'shall' as 'may' as well. Here is what they said:

"'Shall' in a statute may be construed to mean 'may' in order to avoid constitutional doubt."

Here is another one. Ballou v. Kemp, 92 F.2d. 556:

"The word 'shall' in a statute may be construed as 'may' where the connection in which it is used or the relation to which it is put with other parts of the same statute indicates that the legislature intended that it should receive such a construction."

The reasonable but unformed or misinformed man, when reading the statutes might "assume" and say "THE WORD SHALL MEANS MUST". On the contrary, the word "shall" means "may" - so there is no constitutional contradiction with the legislative statutes. Furthermore, as you can see from the above judicial citation, notice how each case is a "lower court". It is either an appellate case or some state supreme Court giving the citation. Ladies and gentlemen - of course, the best is for last. Our united States supreme Court HAS EVEN STATED that the word "shall" means "may"!!! Take a look at what the supreme Court case in Cairo and Fulton Railroad Company v. Hect, 92 U.S. 170, stated within its decision:

"As against the government the word 'shall' when used in statutes is to be construed as 'may', unless a contrary intention is manifest."
[Cairo and Fulton Railroad Company v. Hect, 92 U.S. 170]

The reasonable question is - Has the word "shall" been defined otherwise in the Internal Revenue Code as to mean "must"? The answer is NO, therefore the logic is simple: There is no CONTRARY INTENTION that is manifest within the Internal Revenue Code! This is another argument on why we can DISCURSIVELY prove that the Internal Revenue Code is voluntary - it is because each time the word "shall" is used within a statute that which applies to alleged "people", the word "shall" means "may" and when something is a "may" or "perhaps" then we can say SUCH ACTION IS VOLUNTARY.

5.4.14 Constitutional Due Process Rights in the Context of Income Taxes

26 C.F.R. §601.106

(1) Rule 1.

An exaction by the U.S. Government, which is not based upon law, statutory or otherwise, is a taking of property without due process of law, in violation of the Fifth Amendment to the U.S. Constitution. Accordingly, an Appeals representative in his or her conclusions of fact or application of the law, shall hew to the law and the recognized standards of legal construction. It shall be his or her duty to determine the correct amount of the tax, with strict impartiality as between the taxpayer and the Government, and without favoritism or discrimination between taxpayers." (4-1-96 Edition)

As we described earlier in section 3.11.8.3, the Fifth Amendment guarantees that we shall NOT be deprived of our property without due process of law.

No person shall be held to answer for a capital, or otherwise infamous crime, unless on a presentment or indictment of a Grand Jury, except in cases arising in the land or naval forces, or in the Militia, when in actual service in time of War or public danger; nor shall any person be subject for the same offence to be twice put in jeopardy of life or limb; nor shall be compelled in any criminal case to be a witness against himself, nor be deprived of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law; nor shall private property be taken for public use, without just compensation.
[Fifth Amendment, Emphasis added]

In most cases, due process of law means a judicial trial and a resulting warrant issued by the court. The U.S. supreme court in Hale v. Henkel, 201 U.S. 43 (1906) clearly reveals the need for a warrant:

"...we are of the opinion that there is a clear distinction in this particular between an individual and a corporation, and that the latter has no right to refuse to submit its books and papers for an examination at the suit of the state. The individual may stand upon his constitutional rights as a citizen. He is entitled to carry on his private business in his own way. His power to contract is unlimited. He owes no duty to the state [including the payment of income taxes] or to his neighbors to divulge his business, or to open his doors to an investigation [by filling out a tax return, for instance], so far as it may tend to criminate him. He owes no such duty to the state, since he receives nothing therefrom, beyond the protection of his life and property. His rights are such as existed by the law of the land long antecedent to the organization of the state, and can only be taken from him by due process of law, and in accordance with the Constitution. Among his rights are a refusal to incriminate himself, and the immunity of himself and his property from arrest or seizure except under a warrant of the law. He owes nothing to the public so long as he does not trespass upon their rights.

Upon the other hand, the corporation is a creature of the state. It is presumed to be incorporated for the benefit of the public. It receives certain special privileges and franchises, and holds them subject to the laws of the state and the limitations of its charter. Its powers are limited by law. It can make no contract not authorized by its charter. Its rights to [201 U.S. 43, 75] act as a corporation are only preserved to it so long as it obeys the laws of its creation. There is a reserved right in the legislature to investigate its contracts and find out whether it has exceeded its powers. It would be a strange anomaly to hold that a state, having chartered a corporation to make use of certain franchises, could not, in the exercise of its sovereignty, inquire how these franchises had been employed, and whether they had been abused, and demand the production of the corporate books and papers for that purpose. The defense amounts to this: That an officer of a corporation which is charged with a criminal violation of the statute, may plead the criminality of such corporation as a refusal to produce its books. To state this proposition is to answer it. While an individual may lawfully refuse to answer incriminating questions unless protected by an immunity statute, it does not follow that a corporation, vested with special privileges and franchises, may refuse to show its hand when charged with an abuse of such privileges. “ [Hale v. Henkel, 201 U.S. 43 (1906)]

Note that it says

“Among his rights are a refusal to incriminate himself, and the immunity of himself and his property from arrest or seizure except under a warrant of the law”.

This is what “due process of law” is all about. The IRS routinely violates this legal requirement by issuing “Levies”, Notice of levies”, “Notice of liens”, and “Liens” that are NOT issued by a judicial trial and have no basis in law whatsoever for a legal duty or legal liability. For such cases, the collection agent responsible for doing this can be held personally liable for his tort (injurious act). We describe how to do this later in Chapter 3 of the Tax Fraud Prevention Manual, Form #06.008.

Returning again to our Henkel cite above, I have a simple question for the IRS. When the Supreme Court says:

“He owes nothing to the public so long as he does not trespass upon their rights.”

The question for the government and the IRS then becomes:

“What part of NOTHING do you not understand?”

The answer to this question, or in the case of the IRS, its repeated and chronic failure to answer, is the heart of the hypocrisy, arrogance, fraud, and evil avarice that perpetuates the tyranny we all live under to this day in the context of the federal and state income tax.

5.4.14.1 What is Due Process of Law?

The Fifth Amendment establishes that the government can't take our property without just compensation and without a court trial. The mere existence of such a right is evidence that the payment of federal income taxes cannot be anything other than voluntary and the deduction from our pay of these federal donations must be instituted voluntarily and without compulsion. That is why we have to fill out an IRS Form W-4 to institute withholding and why our private (not federal) employer can't lawfully deduct taxes from our earnings from labor if we don't authorize it. But the question arises, what is “due process of law”? Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, page 500 defines “due process of law” as follows:

Due process of law. Law in its regular course of administration through courts of justice. Due process of law in each particular case means such an exercise of the powers of the government as the settled maxims of law permit and sanction, and under such safeguards for the protection of individual rights as those maxims prescribe for the class of cases to which the one in question belongs. A course of legal proceedings according to those rules and principles which have been established in our systems of jurisprudence for the enforcement and protection of private rights. To give such proceedings any validity, there must be a tribunal competent by its constitution—that is, by the law of the creation—to pass upon the subject-matter of the suit; and, if that involves merely a determination of the personal liability of the defendant, he must be brought within its jurisdiction by service of process within the state, or his voluntary appearance. Pennoyer v. Neff, 95 U.S. 714, 24 L.Ed. 565. Due process of law implies the right of the person affected thereby to be present before

1 the tribunal which pronounces judgment upon the question of life, liberty, or property, in its most
 2 comprehensive sense; to be heard, by testimony or otherwise, and to have the right of controverting, by proof,
 3 every material fact which bears on the question of right in the matter involved. If any question of 4 fact or liability be conclusively be presumed [rather than proven] against
 5 him, this is not due process of law.

6 An orderly proceeding wherein a person with notice, actual or constructive, and has an opportunity to be heard
 7 and to enforce and protect his rights before a court having the power to hear and determine the case.
 8 Kazubowski v. Kazubowski, 45 Ill.2d. 405, 259 N.E.2d. 282, 290. Phrase means that no person shall be 9 deprived of life, liberty, property or of any right granted him by statute, unless matter involved first shall have 10 been adjudicated against him upon trial conducted according to established rules regulating judicial 11 proceedings, and it forbids condemnation without a hearing. Pettit v. Penn, LaApp., 180 So.2d. 66, 69. The 12 concept of "due process of law" as it is embodied in the Fifth Amendment demands that a law shall not be 13 unreasonable, arbitrary, or capricious and that the means selected shall have a reasonable and substantial
 14 relation to the object being sought. U.S. v. Smith, D.C.Iowa, 249 F.Supp. 515, 516. Fundamental requisite of 15 "due process of law" is the opportunity to be heard, to be aware that a matter is pending, to make an informed
 16 choice whether to acquiesce or contest, and to assert before the appropriate decision-making body the reasons
 17 for such choice. Trinity Episcopal Corp. v. Romney, D.C.N.Y., 387 F.Supp. 1044, 1084. Aside from all else,
 18 "due process" means fundamental fairness and substantial justice. Vaughn v. State, 3 Tenn.Crim.App. 54, 456
 19 S.W.2d. 879, 883.

20 Embodied in the due process concept are the basic rights of a defendant in criminal proceedings and the 21 requisites for a fair trial. These rights and requirements have been expanded by Supreme Court decisions and 22 include, timely notice of a hearing or trial which informs the accused of the charges against him or her; the 23 opportunity to confront accusers and to present evidence on one's own behalf before an impartial jury or judge;
 24 the presumption of innocence under which guilt must be proven by legally obtained evidence and the verdict
 25 must be supported by the evidence presented; rights at the earliest stage of the criminal process; and the 26 guarantee that an individual will not be tried more than once for the same offence (double jeopardy).

27 Note above that the existence of any kind of "presumption of liability" implies the absence of due process! This is very
 28 important because when Americans are hauled into court on criminal or civil tax charges, the government tries to use false
 29 or unsubstantiated presumptions of liability to convict nonfilers and "nontaxpayers" of "willful failure to file" under 26
 30 U.S.C. §7203, for instance, in direct violation of the due process rights of the accused. Judges will also routinely violate
 31 the defendant's due process rights by refusing to admit any evidence prejudicial to the government regarding the lack of 32 any liability statute for Subtitle A federal income taxes.

33 The U.S. supreme Court says the following about "due process of law":

34 "A fundamental requisite of due process of law is the opportunity to be heard."
 35 [McDonald v. Mabee, 243 U.S. 90, 91, 37 S.Ct. 343, 61 L.Ed. 608, L.R.A.1917F, 458 (1950)]

36 But guess what?: federal judges violate this requirement of due process all the time as follows:

- 37 1. They will not allow the citizen litigant to take all the time he needs to properly present his case, which gives the jury an 38 incomplete at best and downright wrong understanding of the facts and evidence. They will repeatedly disrupt and 39 interrupt him. This is called "crazy-making" and it's a sinister verbal abuse tactic to discredit and interfere with 40 people's train of thought and the logical and ethical presentation of their materials. They want to get you in a reactive
 41 mode so you look dogmatic and abusive. That way the jury can throw the book at you!
- 42 2. They will not allow evidence against the government to be admitted into evidence so that the jury can't see the whole
 43 picture. This is generally done by granting a motion in limine by the U.S. attorney prior to trial granting the 44 government's request to suppress your evidence.
- 45 3. They will grant a motion by the U.S. attorney against you to strike your pleadings, so you have absolutely nothing left
 46 to argue. The most frequent reason for doing this is because they will say your arguments are "frivolous" and they will
 47 do this even if they indeed are not frivolous. They also do not even need to substantiate why they are frivolous or even 48 what their definition of frivolous is, because the main goal is censorship of your free speech and keeping their friends
 49 and the IRS federal mafia employed and rich with your cash so they can pay judicial salaries and give the judge his 50 next pay raise.
- 51 4. They filter and sensor the proposed jury instructions submitted by the citizen litigant so the jury can't hear the truth that 52 you want to communicate to them in violation of your First Amendment rights.
- 53 5. They make pleadings, dockets, and their own rulings unpublished so that no one can even find out what you said in 54 your pleadings against the government. They might even seal the court record if your case has some really compelling arguments or evidence against the government, and they don't even have to explain why they are doing this or obtain anyone's permission to do it! See section 2.8.13.8 for further details on this scandal.

6. They issue protective orders to interfere with your discovery of the truth and with your communicating that discovery to the jury or tribunal hearing your case. This also keeps evidence of government and judicial wrongdoing out of the court record, which is the number one goal of most corrupt federal judges. See section 2.8.13.5 for further details on this scandal.

Do you still think that we don't live in a communist or socialist country? This is a police state and our government is at war against our God-given rights! Sit in any federal courtroom during one of your vacations and listen to a few tax trials as we have and please tell us we are wrong!

Another key thing to consider is that the purpose of "due process of law" is to protect individual rights deriving from the Bill of Rights. However, 28 U.S.C. §2201 specifically says that federal courts may not rule on rights in the context of federal tax cases, which ought to be a clue that the Internal Revenue Code subtitles A and C only apply where the Bill of Rights does not apply, and this can only be in the federal zone and abroad as we pointed out in section 4.8 earlier. Even if the case is being heard in an Article III (of the Constitution) court such as a District Court, in the context of federal taxes, these courts are actually performing an Article I function because of the above statute preventing them from ruling on rights. There is no other conclusion a reasonable person could reach on this matter.

5.4.14.2 Violation of Due Process using "Presumptions"

As we said in the previous section, anything that involves presumption of liability is a violation of the Fifth Amendment due process of law. The purpose of a presumption is therefore to shift the burden of proof from the government to the sovereign Americans so that the rights of that citizen are prejudiced by the law. Where a presumption exists, the burden of proof rests squarely on us as defenders of our rights to rebut such a presumption:

"presumption. For example, a criminal defendant is presumed to be innocent until the prosecuting attorney proves beyond a reasonable doubt that she is guilty. Presumptions are used to relieve a party from having to actually prove the truth of the fact being presumed. Once one party relies on a presumption, however, the other party is normally allowed to offer evidence to disprove (rebut) the presumption. The presumption is known as a rebuttable presumption. In essence, then, what a presumption really does is place the obligation of presenting evidence concerning a particular fact on a particular party."
[See <http://www.lectlaw.com/def2/p149.htm>]

The mere existence of presumption clearly violates a well established principle of the U.S. supreme Court, which states:

"Keeping in mind the well-settled rule that the citizen is exempt from taxation unless the same is imposed by clear and unequivocal language, and that where the construction of a tax law is doubtful, the doubt is to be resolved in favor of those upon whom the tax is sought to be laid."
[Spreckels Sugar Refining Co. v. McClain, 192 U.S. 397 (1904)]

Presumptions can also be used to violate a canon of American criminal jurisprudence, which says that we are innocent until proven guilty. In America, all persons accused of a crime are legally presumed to be innocent until they are convicted, either in a trial or as a result of pleading guilty. This presumption means not only that the prosecutor must convince the jury of the defendant's guilt, but also that the defendant need not say or do anything in his own defense. If the prosecutor can't convince the jury that the defendant is guilty using evidence and testimony other than his own (attorneys aren't allowed to be witnesses), the defendant goes free. The presumption of innocence, coupled with the fact that the prosecutor must prove the defendant's guilt beyond a reasonable doubt, makes it difficult for the government to put people behind bars.

But with sneaky statutes that are not positive law such as the Internal Revenue Code, the government can prejudice the case of the criminally accused by creating presumptions about the evidence or lack thereof. For instance, our greedy legislators can and often do write regulations and statutes that violate due process of law in the hopes that it will slip by an ignorant judge or jury so they make you into a "taxpayer" or a statutory "U.S. citizen" by false presumption and thereby pick your pocket and extort money out of you in clear violation of the RICO statute, 18 U.S.C. §255. Let's look at an example to show what we mean:

26 C.F.R. §301.6109-1\(g\)

(g) Special rules for taxpayer identifying numbers issued to foreign persons—

1 (1) General rule—

2 (i) Social security number. A social security number is generally identified in the records and database of the 3 Internal Revenue Service as a number belonging to a U.S. citizen or resident alien individual. A person may
 4 establish a different status for the number by providing proof of foreign status with the Internal Revenue Service
 5 under such procedures as the Internal Revenue Service shall prescribe, including the use of a form as the 6 Internal Revenue Service may specify. Upon accepting an individual as a nonresident alien individual, the 7 Internal Revenue Service will assign this status to the individual's social security number.

8 Above, a presumption is created by law which leads one to incorrectly conclude that if you have a Social Security Number,
 9 then you must be a statutory “U.S. citizen” under 8 U.S.C. §1401 or “resident alien” of the federal United States under 26
 10 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(A). But we will establish later in section 5.6.13 that “nationals” living outside the federal United States
 11 are non-resident non-persons can also have Social Security Numbers. We also established earlier in section 5.3.4 that most 12 Americans are “nationals”. If the above regulation were just and truthful, it would establish the opposite presumption,
 13 which is that a person who has an SSN is a nonresident alien unless the government can provide evidence to the contrary.
 14 This would be the only way to meet the intent of the above supreme Court ruling in Spreckels and the “innocent until 15 proven guilty” principle, whereby all doubt is in favor of the person against whom a tax is to be laid. If we aren't aware of 16 the above presumption by the government, then when we go into court to litigate our rights, we will not meet the burden of 17 proof to establish our correct status and incorrectly be assumed to be a statutory “U.S. person” who is “completely subject
 18 to the jurisdiction of the United States” as we pointed out in section 4.11. Here is what one court said when one sovereign
 19 American failed to rebut the presumption that he was a statutory “U.S. citizen” with the necessary evidence:

20 Defendant's protestations to effect that he derived no benefit from United States government had no bearing on 21 his legal obligation to pay income taxes; unless he could establish that he was not a [statutory] citizen of the 22 United States [under 8 U.S.C. §1401], IRS possessed authority to attempt to determine his federal tax liability.
 23 U.S.C.A. Const. Art. I, Sec. 8, Cl. 1; Amend. 16; 26 U.S.C.A. Sec. 1. [!]
 24 [United States v. Slater, 545 F.Supp. 179 (1982)] [emphasis added]

25 See what we mean? This is important stuff, folks, and that is why we tell you in section 2.5.3.13 of the Sovereignty Forms
 26 and Instructions Manual, Form #10.005 that THE MOST IMPORTANT THING YOU CAN DO is amend or correct the 27 governments records relating to your citizenship status so you that they properly reflect your correct status as a “national”
 28 in order to prevent incorrect government presumptions about your citizenship that might inadvertently make you
 29 responsible to pay a tax you don't owe. That way you will have admissible evidence you can present in court of your 30 status as a “non-resident non-person” with no tax liability!

31 Another very common presumption you will have to overcome in court and in your dealings with the IRS is the 32 presumption that you are a “taxpayer”, who is a person who is liable for Subtitle A federal income taxes. You won't read
 33 any statute or regulation anywhere that creates a presumption that you are a “taxpayer” but this myth is so firmly planted in
 34 the minds of most Americans by our government-run educational system and the media that it can be very difficult to 35 overcome and MUST be overcome if you are going to win in court against the IRS. Below are some of the facts relating to 36 the status of being a “taxpayer” that will be extremely helpful in assisting you to overcome the presumption and meet the 37 burden of proof that you are a “nontaxpayer”:

- 38 1. We showed in section 1.5 that the only place the word “liable” is used in Subtitle A is in the context of withholding
- 39 agents for nonresident aliens, and this regulation made the withholding agent responsible to pay the taxes he deducts
- 40 from the pay of people who volunteer to pay the federal income tax. This withholding agent is none other than the
- 41 federal government itself, and of course the federal government has jurisdiction over its own employees!
- 42 2. We will show later in section 5.6.1 that there is no statute that makes anyone liable for Subtitle A income taxes.
- 43 3. We show you the court's interpretation of the word “taxpayer” and “nontaxpayer” in section 5.3.1.
- 44 4. In section 5.4.27 we will show that most persons are not liable to file returns.
- 45 5. In section 5.6 and following we will show that most persons are not liable to pay income taxes.
- 46 6. It is shown in section 2.5.2.6 of the Sovereignty Forms and Instructions Manual, Form #10.005 that it is extremely
- 47 important for you to watch your language when communicating with the government to remove the word “taxpayer”
- 48 from your vocabulary and to contradict the presumption that you are one whenever you hear government employees
- 49 using that word.

50 Understanding the above information is extremely important and will give you the ammunition you will need to fight this
 51 unreasonable presumption by the average American that you are a “taxpayer”.

Another very important aspect of the presumed use of the word "taxpayer" is that you need to be very careful when you are reading government statutes and regulations about the use of that word. We did a search on the U.S.C. and found that the word "taxpayer" is used no less than 479 times in all of title 26, which is the income tax Title! Whenever the code uses that word, you should assume they aren't referring to you! Below is just one example from the Internal Revenue Manual:

Internal Revenue Manual (I.R.M.), Section 35.18.9.1 (08-31-1982)
Taxpayers

1. It has been uniformly held that the waiver of sovereign immunity in section 1346(a)(1) of the Judiciary Code (28 U.S.C. §1346(a)(1)) only applies to taxpayers, and not nontaxpayers or interested parties. Busse v. United States, 542 F.2d. 421 (7th Cir. 1076); Hofheinz v. United States, 511 F.2d. 661 (5th Cir. 1975); Eighth Street Baptist Church v. United States, 431 F.2d. 1193 (10th Cir. 1970); Phillips v. United States, 346 F.2d. 999 (2d Cir. 1965); First Nat'l Bank of Emlenton v. United States, 165 F.2d. 297 (3rd Cir. 1959). Accordingly, where a party not liable for the tax has brought a refund suit, a motion to dismiss should be recommended.

So what the above cite from the Internal Revenue Manual is saying is that the government, that is the "state", can assert a sovereign immunity if you are a "nontaxpayer" who is suing the government for a refund. However, such a waiver does not apply to employees of the government who performed illegal collection or assessment of income taxes, who it is said in section 2.5.5.12 of the Sovereignty Forms and Instructions Manual, Form #10.005 can be prosecuted under a Bivens action for their injurious actions not authorized by law. Keep in mind that the above citation is NOT the law, and the courts can't enforce it. The Internal Revenue Manual, or IRM, is simply an internal directive used only within the IRS to govern its employees and is not binding on sovereign Americans because it is not published in the Federal Register.

5.4.14.3 Substantive Rights and Essentials of Due Process Background

What is a "substantive due process right?"

The Sixth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States establishes several "substantive" or constitutionally-secured due process rights within federal jurisdiction inside the 50 Union states and outside the federal zone. This right can be broken down into three components:

1. The right to know the nature and cause of action against you
2. The right to confront adverse witnesses
3. The right to compel testimony by whoever has relevant knowledge.

The Fourth, Fifth and Sixth Amendments secure due process in the course of the common law. This, too, is a substantive right, with one of the more important distinctions between due process in the course of the common law and due process in the course of the civil law being that an case or controversy must clearly set out fact and law.

Bills of rights in our respective state constitutions secure corresponding rights within state jurisdiction, including rights to access to courts and redress of wrongs. All states other than Louisiana are common law states. Louisiana implemented the civil law system. Insular possessions of the United States also retained civil law process.

Government, government agencies, and corporations are creatures of law. Collectively they are known as "juristic" entities. As creatures of law, they may exercise only powers specifically enumerated to them by the Constitution, the statutes which implement the powers granted by the Constitution, and the regulations which implement the statutes. Where government departments and agencies are concerned, the scope of authority and procedure are detailed in statutes, regulations and intra-departmental policy. Officers, employees and agents of governmental entities must act within procedural bounds prescribed by statutes and the regulations they implement as well as published policy for that agency. In a manner of speaking, procedural requirements prescribed for the governmental agency secures public rights. If and when government personnel fail to comply with procedural mandates and prohibitions, they become personally liable to whoever is the object of their actions, they are subject to agency discipline, and in the event of knowing and willful abuse, may be criminally prosecuted.

Supreme courts of the United States and our respective states have articulated government personnel accountability principles time and again, but there has been a tendency for government prosecutors not to prosecute government personnel, particularly in tax agencies, when they've exceeded authority. The problem has caused enough furor that via the Internal Revenue Service restructuring and reform act of 1998, Congress enacted a new Internal Revenue Code section that

1 specifically makes IRS personnel accountable to the Internal Revenue Code, Treasury regulations, and published policy,
2 i.e., the Internal Revenue Manual, added a new administrative discipline section, and created the office of Treasury
3 Inspector General for Tax Administration to investigate complaints against IRS personnel.

4 Another aspect of dealing with government is that government always has the burden of proof either in civil or criminal
5 forums and at both administrative and judicial levels. In the new Internal Revenue Code section 7491, Congress spelled this
6 out, too, by specifying that when a Citizen (notice we didn't say "taxpayer") presents credible evidence of non-liability for 7 Subtitle A & B taxes, the Secretary, i.e., IRS bears the burden of proof.

8 Treasury regulations in Title 31 of the Code of Federal Regulations spell out the right to discovery in dealings with Internal 9 Revenue Service personnel. Per § 2 of 31 C.F.R. Part 1, Appendix B of Subpart C, whoever has dealings with IRS is 10 entitled to whatever evidence of liability the Service has in its systems of records:

11 "Internal Revenue Service procedures permit the examination of tax records during the course of an
12 investigation, audit, or collection activity. Accordingly, individuals should contact the Internal Revenue Service
13 employee conducting an audit or effecting the collection of tax liabilities to gain access to such records, rather 14 than seeking access under the provisions of the Privacy Act."

15 With these basics, we can set out minimum requirements for administrative or judicial liability:

- 16 1. The government agency must have evidence of one sort or another to establish fact.
- 17 2. There must be a competent witness with first-hand knowledge of facts to verify the evidence.
- 18 3. The advocate must prove application of law to verified facts.

19 By utilizing discovery, the target of government initiatives can force disclosure in the context of Sixth Amendment rights.
20 Substantive rights do not begin at the courthouse door. They are ever-present in all dealings with government agencies and
21 personnel. Where tax issues are concerned, knowing the nature and cause of action includes forcing the tax agency, via the 22 revenue officer or whoever the target is dealing with, to disclose taxing and liability statutes, and disclosing whatever
23 competent witness there is. Where authority is concerned, i.e., subject matter jurisdiction, the agency or agent has the 24 burden of proof when authority is challenged and when procedure is challenged.

25 Does a government agency have authority, i.e., statutory or delegated authority, to do whatever it is attempting to do, then
26 is the agency complying with procedural mandates? Where an agency doesn't have statutory or delegated authority over the 27 "subject matter", any action by that agency is unlawful and void, and where the agency doesn't comply with procedural
28 mandates, it loses subject matter jurisdiction. Unless a procedurally proper assessment has been executed, there is no tax
29 liability. Various secondary reports may constitute presumptive evidence that an assessment has been made, but only the 30 assessment certificate constitutes conclusive evidence. The actual assessment certificate, or a verified copy, qualifies as 31 self-authenticating evidence.

32 What does a witness do? He testifies to facts he has first-hand knowledge of. Testimony may be in one of three forms: By 33 affidavit (a sworn statement of fact), deposition (sworn testimony outside the court setting in the presence of plaintiff and 34 defendant or their respective representatives), or direct oral examination in open court. The adverse party in all cases has 35 the right to cross-examine the witness. This is fundamental to our adversarial system.

36 Without a competent witness, any administrative ruling or court judgment is void and can be vacated at any time without 37 time limitation.

38 If and when a government agency or officer fails to disclose the nature and cause of action, evidence of liability, and
39 whatever witnesses will verify facts, the controversy shifts from the original issue to the substantive rights the agency or
40 agent may be depriving the target of. In the event a defendant's constitutionally secured rights are abridged, the agency or 41 court loses subject matter jurisdiction regardless of whatever liability the defendant might otherwise have. Government
42 agents and agencies must proceed in whatever A > B > C sequence the law prescribes, they cannot jump from A to C unless 43 the law authorizes elimination of B.

44 One person filed claims for refunds from the Internal Revenue Service based on the gross income "source" position (26
45 C.F.R. §1.861-8(f)(1)(vi)). It took ten months, but a revenue officer finally denied the claim. According to his investigation,
46 the revenue agent claimed, the company is liable for Social Security and employment taxes (Subtitle C, Chapters 21 & 24).

1 However, the agent didn't specify fact nor did he disclose what testimony his decision was based on. He certainly didn't
2 prove application of law.

3 This is one of the few instances I've seen where IRS personnel have disclosed the "nature and cause" of the action, i.e., the
4 specific tax at issue. However, his disclosure presents a few problems that afford the opportunity to challenge subject
5 matter jurisdiction in addition to procedure particulars.

6 The social welfare taxes in Chapters 21-23 and government personnel tax in Chapter 24 or the Internal Revenue Code are
7 collectively classified as employment taxes, which is a classification distinct from Subtitle A & B income taxes. The 8 Internal Revenue Service serves as delegate of the Secretary for administration of Chapter 1, 2 & 21 taxes in insular
9 possessions (See 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(12)(B)), and administers Subtitle A & B taxes in the several States (See 26 U.S.C.
10 §7491, added by the 1998 act), but the Treasury Financial Management Service and the General Accounting Office have 11 primary responsibility for administration and enforcement of Chapter 21 & 24 employment taxes in States of the Union.
12 The Internal Revenue Service merely maintains records, provides accounting services, and distributes information, it does 13 not have direct administrative enforcement authority, particularly for Chapter 24 government personnel tax.

14 The Financial Management Service must notify and train government agencies responsible for withholding at the source,
15 and issue Form 8655 Reporting Agent Authorization certificates to whatever agency is required to withhold at the source.
16 (See Internal Revenue Manual §3.0.258.4 (11/21/97), January 1999 edition)

17 Tax freedom fighters should submit into their administrative record an affidavit addressing the extent of their liability for 18 normal tax and other species of income in Subtitles A & B, employment taxes in Subtitle C, and assorted taxes in Subtitles
19 D & E and Title 19. The affidavit should include statements that they have never been contacted by the Treasury Financial 20 Management Service and has never received a Form 8655 Reporting Agent Authorization certificate.

21 By submitting the disclosure affidavit into their IRS administrative record, tax freedom fighters can enter testimony
22 concerning their financial circumstance into record. In order to overcome the affidavit, the government adverse party must 23 (1) disprove stated fact or prove alternative fact, then (2) prove application of law to stated or alternative facts. In addition
24 to these requirements, in this case the Internal Revenue Service must prove subject matter jurisdiction by citing and/or
25 providing properly executed delegations of authority that vest the agency with authority to administer Subtitle C
26 employment taxes in States of the Union.

27 "My research verifies that your company is liable for" any given tax isn't sufficient. When challenged, IRS and other
28 government personnel must prove authority and liability within the framework of and to the satisfaction of constitutionally 29 secured due process rights. In this particular case, the agent must

- 30 1) Provide verified copies of whatever documentary evidence he has.
- 31 2) Provide copies of whatever affidavits he has.
- 32 3) Disclose whatever other fact witnesses he is relying on.
- 33 4) Provide a list of prospective witnesses.
- 34 5) Prove application of law to whatever facts he is relying on, and
- 35 6) Prove subject matter jurisdiction.
- 36 7) Rebut any affidavits submitted by an accused party with more authoritative evidence.

37 It is important to understand that government personnel, particularly tax agency personnel, for the most part rely on 38 documents prepared by third parties. They are rarely if ever competent witnesses with first-hand knowledge of facts.
39 Further, the various documents they work from are for the most part "hearsay evidence" and declarations, not affidavits, as 40 there are seldom signatures on these documents and they rarely if ever verified by notary publics or the number of 41 witnesses required by common law standards. Consequently, third parties who submit documents are technically 42 prospective witnesses, they have not submitted testimony as such that can be admitted into evidence in a court of law.

43 Somewhat the same disclosure is required for most criminal investigations where the government is the alleged victim due
44 to someone failing to comply with or doing something prohibited by statute other than what are classified as common law
45 crimes. For example, 26 C.F.R. §601.107 generally secures rights of those being investigated for offenses relating to 46 income, estate, gift, employment, and certain excise taxes. General disclosure requirements are outlined where there is a 47 conference with the Chief of the Criminal Investigation Division of any given district at 26 C.F.R. §601.107(b)(2):

1 26 C.F.R. §601.107(b)(2)

2 "At the conference, the IRS representative will inform the taxpayer by a general oral statement of the alleged
3 fraudulent features of the case, to the extent consistent with protecting the Government's interests, and, at the 4 same time, making available to the taxpayer sufficient facts and figures to acquaint him with the basis, nature,
5 and other essential elements of the proposed criminal charges against him."

6 As researchers and advocates increasingly master due process essentials and continue to unravel proper application of law,
7 administrative and judicial remedies will become considerably more reliable and government encroachment in general can
8 be pushed back. Procedure is particularly important.

9 5.4.14.4 Due process principles and tax collection

10 Via the due process clauses of the 5th and 14th Amendments, both the state and federal governments must provide certain 11 fundamental procedures before life, liberty or property are taken. For those interested in this subject, reading the cases of ,
12 Sniadach v. Family Finance Corp., 395 U.S. 337 (1969), 89 S.Ct. 1820 (1969), Fuentes v. Shevin, 407 U.S. 67, 92 S.Ct.
13 1983 (1972), and North Georgia Finishing, Inc. v. Di-Chem Inc., 419 U.S. 601, 95 S.Ct. 719 (1975), are important in 14 understanding the views of the Supreme Court regarding the due process procedures to which the states are bound.
15 However, one cannot ignore the fact that there are two different due process standards; one standards is applicable to us and 16 the states under the 14th Amendment, and quite another exists for Uncle Sam under the Fifth Amendment.

17 There is a popular position of late, Goldberg v. Kelly, 397 U.S. 254, 90 S.Ct. 1011 (1970), that is the "key" due process case
18 regarding the collection of taxes. If you wish to understand principles of due process in reference to tax matters, the cases
19 of , Phillips v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, 283 U.S. 589 (1931), 51 S.Ct. 608 (1931), and , Commissioner v.
20 Shapiro, 424 U.S. 614 (1976), 96 S.Ct. 1062 (1976), are the ones to be read.

21 5.4.15 IRS has NO Legal Authority to Assess You With an Income Tax Liability

22 "There is no worse tyranny than to force a man to pay for what he does not want merely because you think it 23 would be good for him."
24 [Robert Heinlein]

25 As per 26 U.S.C. §6201(a)(1), only the person paying the tax may make an assessment of tax liability on himself. The 26 Secretary of the Treasury may not make assessments of the liability of individuals under Subtitles A and C personal income
27 taxes. It is quite common for IRS agents to "estimate" the liability of a "taxpayer", especially as an intimidation
28 mechanism during an exam or audit. However, unless the "taxpayer" voluntarily signs the return forms presented by the 29 agent authorizing the assessment or settlement, the assessment is not valid. Without a valid assessment, collection activity
30 cannot be commenced!

31 Furthermore, under 26 C.F.R. §301.6211-1, either making no return or a return showing no tax amounts to a zero return.
32 Any amount imputed by the IRS to be owed above the amount on the return is referred to as a "deficiency" under that 33 regulation. However, 26 C.F.R. §301.6211-1 is based on the repealed 1939 Internal Revenue Code that is no longer in 34 effect! If you look at the bottom of this regulation, it cites NO statutory authority and therefore is NOT a legislative 35 regulation and cannot be enforced by the courts! To confirm this conclusion, this regulation also does NOT appear in the 36 Parallel Table of Authorities cross-referencing regulations to statutes. See section 5.4.16 for a look at the Parallel Table of 37 Authorities. See also:

38 http://www.access.gpo.gov/nara/cfr/parallel/parallel\_table.html

39 26 U.S.C. §6020 says the following about returns prepared by the Secretary of the Treasury:

40 Subtitle F - Procedure and Administration
41 CHAPTER 61 - INFORMATION AND RETURNS
42 Subchapter A - Returns and Records
43 PART II - TAX RETURNS OR STATEMENTS
44 Subpart D - Miscellaneous Provisions §6020 Returns prepared for or executed by Secretary

45 (a) Preparation of return by Secretary

If any person shall fail to make a return required by this title or by regulations prescribed thereunder, but shall consent to disclose all information necessary for the preparation thereof, then, and in that case, the Secretary may prepare such return, which, being signed by such person, may be received by the Secretary as the return of such person.

So you can see that once again, the IRS and the Secretary of Treasury rely on the tax payer's self-assessment in order to establish a tax liability. Agents do not have delegated authority to prepare a tax form on behalf of an American without the signature of the person. This is clearly shown on their Pocket Commission (see Internal Revenue Manual (I.R.M.), Section [1.16.4] 3.1 through [1.16.4] 3.2). Their pocket commission must indicate that they have Enforcement commission (the last letter of the serial number of the pocket commission must be "E") in order to complete a 23C Assessment form, for instance, and none of the revenue officers associated with Subtitles A and C have such commissions. Revenue officer must also have a Delegation Order showing their authority specifically to sign the IRS Form 23C and/or the 1040. No revenue officers who administer Subtitles A and C have such delegation orders and are acting outside their lawful authority to sign such forms. You should demand a copy of their Delegation Order and their Pocket Commission if any agent tries to exceed their authority by signing a return for you or a 23C Assessment form.

If you argue with the revenue officer over their authority to assess you, they like to point to regulation 26 C.F.R. §301.6201-1, which is an explanatory but not implementing regulation for 26 U.S.C. §6201. They will try to say that this authorizes them to make an assessment, but this is simply false! This regulation simply reiterates what was found in 26 U.S.C. §6201 and exists for informational purposes only:

[Code of Federal Regulations]
[Title 26, Volume 17]
[Revised as of April 1, 2001]
From the U.S. Government Printing Office via GPO Access
[CITE: 26CFR301.6201-1]
Sec. 301.6201-1 Assessment authority.

(a) IN GENERAL.

The district director is authorized and required to make all inquiries necessary to the determination and assessment of all taxes imposed by the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 or any prior internal revenue law. The district director is further authorized and required, and the director of the regional service center is authorized, to make the determinations and the assessments of such taxes. However, certain inquiries and determinations are, by direction of the Commissioner, made by other officials, such as assistant regional commissioners. The term "taxes" includes interest, additional amounts, additions to the taxes, and assessable penalties. The authority of the district director and the director of the regional service center to make assessments includes the following:

(1) TAXES SHOWN ON RETURN. The district director or the director of the regional service center shall assess all taxes determined by the taxpayer or by the district director or the director of the regional service center and disclosed on a return or list.

(2) UNPAID TAXES PAYABLE BY STAMP.

(i) If without the use of the proper stamp:

(a) Any article upon which a tax is required to be paid by means of a stamp is sold or removed for sale or use by the manufacturer thereof, or

(b) Any transaction or act upon which a tax is required to be paid by means of a stamp occurs; The district director, upon such information as he can obtain, must estimate the amount of the tax which has not been paid and the district director or the director of the regional service center must make assessment therefor upon the person the district director determines to be liable for the tax. However, the district director or the director of the regional service center may not assess any tax which is payable by stamp unless the taxpayer fails to pay such tax at the time and in the manner provided by law or regulations.

(ii) If a taxpayer gives a check or money order as a payment for stamps but the check or money order is not paid upon presentment, then the district director or the director of the regional service center shall assess the amount of the check or money order against the taxpayer as if it were a tax due at the time the check or money order was received by the district director.

3 It's very important to realize that the above regulation is NOT an implementing regulation and does not apply the ability to
4 assess a tax liability to income taxes in I.R.C., Subtitles A and C! It is simply an explanatory regulation. If the IRS had
5 authority to assess Subtitle A personal income taxes under 26 U.S.C. §6201, then there would be an implementing
6 regulation number 26 C.F.R. §1.6201, which there is not! A statute cannot be applied to a particular tax until the Secretary
7 of the Treasury writes an implementing regulation, and 26 C.F.R. §301.6201 does not implement or enforce Subtitle A income taxes.

8 The section above clearly shows that the only thing the district director can do is make assessments of taxes collected by 9 stamp under 26 C.F.R. §301.6201-1(a)(2) but NOT personal income taxes coming under Subtitles A and C. Notice that this
10 regulation does NOT give the revenue officer authority to estimate tax nor sign a return or list on behalf of a person, or it
11 would have said so. Subtitles A and C personal income taxes must instead appear on a tax return, and the 1040, 2555, or 12 1040NR are the only things that qualify as legitimate returns upon which to base an assessment of Subtitle A and C
13 personal income taxes. 26 C.F.R. §301.6201-1(a)(1) says the taxes assessed by the district director MUST be “disclosed on 14 a return or list”. Even the title says that: “TAXES SHOWN ON RETURN”. If the agent has no Delegation Order or 15 delegated authority to prepare such a return, then he is acting outside his lawful delegated authority and can be prosecuted
16 for violation of 26 U.S.C. §7214! The Government Accountability Office (GAO) published a surprising audit report, report
17 number GAO/GGD-00-60R on the IRS Substitute for Return program. This report confirms that Substitute For Returns are 18 not really returns! The report says, and I quote:

19 “[IRS] Customer Service Division official commented on the phrase ‘Substitute for Return.’ They asked us to 20 emphasize that even though the program is commonly referred to as the SFR program, no actual tax return is 21 prepared.”

22 You know what that means, folks? If the IRS doesn't prepare an actual return as required above in order to create a valid
23 self-assessment, then they pull it out of their ass and then falsify their IDRS computer system IMF records by putting the 24 system in manual override mode and creating a bogus backdated and fraudulent assessment so they fall within the
25 statutorily allowed date period. You can confirm this if you FOIA your complete unsanitized master file for the years in 26 question. It's financial terrorism and extortion, folks and these criminals should be locked up in jail and have the key
27 thrown away for doing it! Our politicians look the other way because they want your money so bad that they condone
28 extortion to get it. Below is a direct link to the GAO report if you would like to read it for yourself on our website:

29 <http://famguardian.org/PublishedAuthors/Govt/GAO/GAO-GGD-00-60R-SFR.pdf>

30 Furthermore, there are no regulations implementing 26 U.S.C. §6201 against the IRC Section 1 income tax. Therefore 31 these statutes cannot be applied against Subtitle A income taxes. If there were implementing regulations for personal
32 income taxes, then the regulation number would have to be 26 C.F.R. §1.6201, and there is no such regulation:

33 *“...the Act's civil and criminal penalties attach only upon violation of the regulation promulgated by the
34 Secretary; if the Secretary were to do nothing, the Act itself would impose no penalties on anyone...The*
35 Government urges that since only those who violate these regulates (not the Code) may incur civil or criminal
36 penalties, it is the actual regulation issued by the Secretary of the Treasury and not the broad authorizing 37 language of the statute, which is to be tested against the standards of the 4th Amendment.”
38 [Calif. Bankers Assoc. v. Shultz, 416 U.S. 21, 44, 39 L.Ed.2d. 812, 94 S.Ct. 1494]

39 With these kinds of shenanigans going on, we need to ask ourselves:

40 “If the income tax isn't voluntary, then why don't they just assess us without our permission and send us a bill
41 *like they do with property taxes? Why do they need us to snitch on ourselves and send in a 'confession'
42 called a tax return if it's a mandatory 'tax'?”*

43 The answer, once again, is that it is and always has been a voluntary tax, which is why the IRS has no authority to assess
44 you and why only you can assess yourself! If all you ever put on your tax return is a zero, then you have no liability and no
45 one other than a judge can determine otherwise. The IRS will try to scare you by sending a bogus Notice and Demand for 46 tax, but they can't do this either, because the regulation they rely on, 26 C.F.R. §301.6303-1, to send it is not the law so
47 they are acting outside their authority in doing so. This is confirmed by the absence of a reference at the bottom of the 48 regulation pointing to an authorizing statute, which means the regulation is NOT a legislative regulation. Don't let the IRS

1 scare you with a trick Notice and Demand for tax following an examination or with a bogus assessment, because they do
2 not have the authority to issue either.

3 5.4.16 IRS Has NO Legal Authority to Assess Penalties on Subtitles A and C Income Taxes on Natural Persons

4 *"By the blessing of God, may our country become a vast and splendid monument, not of oppression and terror,
5 but of wisdom, of peace, and of liberty upon which the world may gaze with admiration forever."
6 [First Bunker Hill Oration, Daniel Webster [inscribed on a bronze plaque on the quarterdeck of the USS
7 Bunker Hill, CG-52]*

8 The Congress and the 50 state governments are prohibited by the Constitution from imposing any kind of punishment or 9 penalty against natural persons without a judicial proceeding. This includes financial penalties associated with ensuring
10 compliance with the Internal Revenue Code. This requirement derives from the U.S. Constitution, which in Articles 1,
11 Section 9, Clause 3 prevents Congress from passing any kind of Bill of Attainder law. Likewise, Article 1, Section 10
12 applies the same requirement to the 50 Union states. Below is the Constitutional restriction:

13 Article I, Section 9, Clause 3: "No Bill of Attainder or ex post facto Law shall be passed." (with respect to the 14 U.S. Congress)

15 Article I, Section 10, Clause 1: "No State shall enter into any Treaty, Alliance, or Confederation; grant
16 Letters of Marque and Reprisal; coin Money; emit Bills of Credit; make any Thing but gold and silver Coin a
17 Tender in Payment of Debts; pass any Bill of Attainder, ex post facto Law, or Law impairing the Obligation of 18 Contracts, or grant any Title of Nobility."

19 Below is the definition of a Bill of Attainder for your reference:

20 Bill of attainder: Legislative acts, no matter what their form, that apply either to named individuals or to 21 easily ascertainable members of a group in such a way as to inflict punishment on them without a judicial 22 trial. United States v. Brown, 381 U.S. 437, 448-49, 85 S.Ct. 1707, 1715, 14 L.Ed. 484, 492; United States v.
23 Lovett, 328 U.S. 303, 315, 66 S.Ct. 1073, 1079, 90 L.Ed. 1252. An act is a "bill of attainder" when the 24 punishment is death and a "bill of pains and penalties" when the punishment is less severe; both kinds of 25 punishment fall within the scope of the constitutional prohibition. U.S.Const. Art. I, Sect 9, Cl. 3 (as to 26 Congress);' Art. I, Sec. 10 (as to state legislatures).
27 [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 165, Emphasis added]

28 The above restrictions form the basis of why the U.S. Congress and the states cannot write statutes and the executive branch
29 cannot write implementing regulations authorizing the IRS to impose financial penalties on natural persons for 30 noncompliance with Subtitle A income taxes absent a judicial trial, nor can they collect any penalties without a trial. The 31 following easily verifiable facts prove our point:

- 32 • That there is no implementing C.F.R. or Federal Register regulation providing IRS with the authority to assess 33 any kind of financial penalties, including late payment fees, frivolous return fees, etc.
- 34 • The definition of "person" found in Subtitle F also confirms that penalties may not be applied against natural 35 persons. In fact, all such penalties are only applicable to Title 27 taxes relating to Alcohol, Tobacco, and 36 Firearms against corporations under Subtitles D and E!

37 Whenever the government seeks to impose penalties for violations of the Internal Revenue Code, they have the burden of 38 proof to show that the person against whom the penalty is imposed is liable for the penalty:

39 "26 U.S.C. §6703

40 (a) BURDEN OF PROOF.—

41 In any proceeding involving the issue of whether or not any person is liable for a penalty under 6700, 6701, or 42 6702, the burden of proof with respect to such issue shall be on the Secretary."

43 Most IRS agents are made blissfully unaware of the above facts by their supervisors but they are nevertheless true. You
44 will never hear IRS admit to this, because it is their most important and most secret weapon against the vast majority of 45 Americans, who are natural persons. By way of example, below is the section right out of their own regulations found at
46 the government's own website at <http://frwebgate.access.gpo.gov/cgi->

bin/getcfr.cgi?TITLE=26&PART=301&SECTION=6671-1&YEAR=2000&TYPE=TEXT that describes the ONLY persons who can be assessed penalties related to I.R.C., Subtitle A income taxes:

[Code of Federal Regulations]

 [CITE: 26CFR301.6671-1]
 [Page 402]
 TITLE 26--INTERNAL REVENUE
 Additions to the Tax and Additional Amounts--Table of Contents
 Sec. 301.6671-1 Rules for application of assessable penalties.

 (b) Person defined. For purposes of subchapter B of chapter 68, the term "person" includes an officer or employee of a corporation, or a member or employee of a partnership, who as such officer, employee, or member is under a duty to perform the act in respect of which the violation occurs.

Even more interesting, is that the above not only doesn't apply to most Americans: It also doesn't apply to most corporations or partnerships either! Why?...because the corporations or partnerships mentioned above must be registered in the District of Columbia (the federal zone). State-(only) chartered corporations or partnerships that aren't involved in foreign commerce aren't liable for IRS penalties because they aren't within the territorial jurisdiction of the IRS either. Furthermore, the only type of employee who can be penalized is an employee of a U.S. corporation registered in the District of Columbia and who is involved in reporting and complying with taxes for the corporation, and NOT for himself individually!

Now when the IRS hears this argument, they often try to say that the above definition of "person" uses the word "includes", which is an expansive rather than limiting term. Here is what they will quote, from 26 U.S.C. §7701(c) in making this statement:

"Sec. 7701(c) INCLUDES AND INCLUDING. - The terms 'include' and 'including' when used in a definition contained in this title shall not be deemed to exclude other things otherwise within the meaning of the term defined."

The IRS will say that the phrase in 26 C.F.R. §301.6671-1 "includes an officer or employee of a corporation" does not exclude other uses of the term, like EVERYONE else or ALL Americans, because of the definition of the word "includes" found in section 3.12.1.8 earlier. But we know from statements made in Congressional Research Service Report 97-59A that Subtitles A and C income taxes are excise taxes, and that the "persons" indicated in the above regulations are the only ones in receipt of privileges from the U.S. government. Expanding the operation of penalties beyond these legal fictions called "persons" makes the income tax operate effectively as a direct tax rather than an indirect tax, which is clearly unconstitutional if enforced outside of federal jurisdiction or within states of the Union.

We answer this issue on the abuse of the word "includes" and "including" by the IRS in sections 5.10.1 and 8.2.20. This is a very common and unscrupulous tactic designed to confuse and intimidate Americans and illegally expand the jurisdiction of the taxing power of the federal government for Subtitle A income taxes beyond its clear limits found in the definition of "United States" in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and "State" found in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(10).

Now let's talk about the requirement for implementing regulations. Pursuant to 44 U.S.C.A. §§1504-1507, before a national domiciled in the union states of the United States of America can be bound by, or adversely effected by legislation or an "Act of Congress" having general applicability to such individuals, it must be published in the Federal Register.

5 U.S.C. §552\(a\): Public information; agency rules, opinions, orders, records, and proceedings

Except to the extent that a person has actual and timely notice of the terms thereof, a person may not in any manner be required to resort to, or be adversely affected by, a matter required to be published in the Federal Register and not so published. For the purpose of this paragraph, matter reasonably available to the class of persons affected thereby is deemed published in the Federal Register when incorporated by reference therein with the approval of the Director of the Federal Register.

26 C.F.R. §601.702 Publication and public inspection

(a)(2)(ii) Effect of failure to publish.

Except to the extent that a person has actual and timely notice of the terms of any matter referred to in subparagraph (1) of this paragraph which is required to be published in the Federal Register, such person is not required in any manner to resort to, or be adversely affected by, such matter if it is not so published or is not incorporated by reference therein pursuant to subdivision (i) of this subparagraph. Thus, for example, any such matter which imposes an obligation and which is not so published or incorporated by reference will not adversely change or affect a person's rights.

There are three and only three exceptions to the requirement of publication in the Federal Register of all implementing regulations, which are:

1. A military or foreign affairs function of the United States. 5 U.S.C. §553(a)(1) .
2. A matter relating to agency management or personnel or to public property, loans, grants, benefits, or contracts. 5 U.S.C. §553(a)(2) .
3. Federal agencies or persons in their capacity as officers, agents, or employees thereof. 44 U.S.C. §1505(a)(1).

Note that all of the above three exempted groups are within the government itself. Therefore, if the government directly cites and enforces a statute against you for which there is no enforcement regulation published within the Federal Register, then they are “presuming”, usually wrongfully, that you are a member of one of the three groups within the federal government who are specifically exempted from the requirement. All such presumptions against those who are protected by the Constitution are an unconstitutional violation of due process of law which essentially compel you to accept the legal disabilities associated with a federal franchise which in most cases, you derive no benefit from. This frequent and unconstitutional abuse of presumption to prejudice and destroy your rights is thoroughly documented below:

Presumption: Chief Weapon for Unlawfully Enlarging Federal Jurisdiction, Form #05.017
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

Enforcement regulations published as required within the Federal Register are then categorized pursuant to their applicable Title in the Code of Federal Regulations (CFR). 26 U.S.C. §7805(a) states:

“...the Secretary shall prescribe all needful rules and regulations for the enforcement of this title.”

The Internal Revenue Code is not self-executing. Without an implementing regulation, applicable to a particular type of tax, a statute has no force of law against anyone who is not part of the government as a “public officer” or “employee”, and therefore imposes no duties or penalties. This is confirmed by the definition of “person” found in 26 U.S.C. §6671(b) and by the levy statute which identifies the proper audience for “levy” actions, which are enforcement actions:

Subtitle F > CHAPTER 64 > Subchapter D > PART II > § 6331
§ 6331. Levy and distraint

(a) Authority of Secretary

If any person liable to pay any tax neglects or refuses to pay the same within 10 days after notice and demand, it shall be lawful for the Secretary to collect such tax (and such further sum as shall be sufficient to cover the expenses of the levy) by levy upon all property and rights to property (except such property as is exempt under section 6334) belonging to such person or on which there is a lien provided in this chapter for the payment of such tax. Levy may be made upon the accrued salary or wages of any officer, employee, or elected official, of the United States, the District of Columbia, or any agency or instrumentality of the United States or the District of Columbia, by serving a notice of levy on the employer (as defined in section 3401(d)) of such officer, employee, or elected official. If the Secretary makes a finding that the collection of such tax is in jeopardy, notice and demand for immediate payment of such tax may be made by the Secretary and, upon failure or refusal to pay such tax, collection thereof by levy shall be lawful without regard to the 10-day period provided in this section.

1 According to evidence available to us in the form of a letter provided directly by the Internal Revenue Service in response
2 to a Freedom of Information Act request:

3 “There are no published regulations under Internal Revenue Code Sections 6702 and 6703, which authorize 4 the imposition and collection of penalties for filing frivolous returns.”

5 Furthermore, the Parallel Table Authorities for 26 C.F.R. reveals that the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms is the
6 only authority authorized to use distraint or assess penalties for nonpayment of income taxes under Title 27 ONLY. The
7 following is taken from the Parallel Table of Authorities in the back of the Title 26 Code of Federal Regulations [CFR]. It
8 is a list of the ONLY 26 C.F.R. Part 301 Regulations that derive their Authority for implementation from Title 26 USCS or 9 26 IRC [Income Taxes]. Note the conspicuous absence of any penalty, interest, levy or seizure for the Title 26 Voluntary
10 Income Tax. Again, it is inconceivable that the Congress would legislate penalties for the individual income tax, since the 11 supreme Court and the IRS have both substantiated that such a Tax is voluntary and NOT based upon distraint. It would be 12 absurd to impose penalties for non-compliance, when such an option is what made the tax voluntary to begin with!

§7608	Authority of Internal Revenue enforcement officers	27 C.F.R. Parts 70, 170, 296

2 Most noteworthy of the above is that ALL of the provisions identified in Subtitle F are associated with Title 27, Alcohol,
3 Tobacco, and Firearms, and NOT Subtitle A Income taxes! Why? Because these types of taxes are indirect excise taxes on 4 privileges. If you don't want the penalty, then don't choose the privileged manufacture of alcohol, tobacco, or firearms.

In addition, the following court ruling clearly expresses the lack of IRS authority to assess penalties absent implementing regulations:

*"...the Act's civil and criminal penalties attach only upon the violation of a regulation promulgated by the Secretary; if the Secretary were to do nothing, the Act itself would impose no penalties on anyone...only those who violate the regulations (not the Code) may incur civil or criminal penalties. it is the actual regulation issued by the Secretary of the Treasury and not the broad authorizing language of the statute, which is to be tested against the standards of the 4th Amendment."
[Calif. Bankers Assoc. v. Shultz, 416 U.S. 21, 44, 39 L.Ed.2d. 812, 94 S.Ct. 1494]*

An older version of the Internal Revenue Manual, which is reflective of the ruling case law on this subject, states that the IRS has no delegated authority to issue a civil penalty or to collect penalties without a judgment signed by a magistrate:

IRM 546 §19(b)(2) "the civil penalty for non-compliance may be imposed only by filing a suit in the name of the United States, naming the taxpayer as a defendant and securing a judgment."

The supreme Court agrees with this conclusion in the following case:

*"Our system of taxation is based upon voluntary assessment and payment, not upon distraint."
[Flora v. U.S., 362 U.S. 145 (1960), emphasis added]*

In case you don't understand, "distrain" is defined as follows and is the equivalent of "force" or "coercion" or "compulsion" in the collection of debts and legal liabilities:

*"...the act or process of DISTRAINT whereby a person (the DISTRAINOR), without prior court approval, seizes the personal property of another located upon the distrainor's land in satisfaction of a claim, as a pledge for performance of a duty, or in reparation of an injury. Where goods are seized in satisfaction of a claim, the distrainor can hold the goods until the claim is paid and, failing payment, may sell them in satisfaction."
[Barron's Law Dictionary, Steven H. Gifis, 1996, p. 150, ISBN 0-8120-3096-6]*

Therefore, IRS assessments of penalties and demands for money, without the authority of law, their lawless actions to penalize Americans that have not been legally defended or explained or justified based on their delegated authority, constitutes extortion under the color of law, mail fraud, mailing threatening communications, and conspiracy against the rights of a Citizen, for which they can be help personally liable should legal action become necessary.

5.4.17 No Implementing Regulations Authorizing Collection of Subtitles A and C Income Taxes

Collections is one of three parts of the enforcement process. Enforcement of a tax involves:

1. Assessment (26 U.S.C. §6201, which has no implementing regulation under the tax imposed in section 1 of the I.R.C.).
2. Penalties for noncompliance (26 U.S.C. §§6671-6715, which also has no implementing regulations under the tax imposed in section 1 of the I.R.C.)
3. Collections (26 U.S.C. §6330 and 6331, which has no implementing regulations under the tax imposed in Section 1 of the Internal Revenue Code).

We already covered the first two aspects of enforcement in sections 5.4.15 and 5.4.16 of this book respectively. We noted above that collections of Subtitle A income taxes under 26 U.S.C. §6330 and 6331 also has no implementing regulations like the other two parts of the enforcement process. This is no accident, but a direct result of the fact that personal income taxes are and always have been voluntary, which means that they are donations instead of taxes! For a statute to be realized as an enforceable law, then it must have an implementing regulation that applies it to a specific tax. If you look in the CFR, you will not find either of the following two regulations which would apply the ability to collect to the income tax: 26 C.F.R. §1.6331 or 26 C.F.R. §1.6330. The only implementing regulations for 6330 and 6331 are found in 26 C.F.R. Part 70, which is for Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms, because these taxes are enforced taxes and the BATF is an enforcement agency. The IRS is not an enforcement agency like the BATF, but instead is an administrative agency who cannot use distraint against Citizens to collect personal income taxes because it is a voluntary tax:

*"Our tax system is based upon voluntary assessment and payment, not upon distraint."
[Flora v. U.S., 362 U.S. 145 (1960)]*

1 What the IRS likes to do is point to 26 C.F.R. §301.6330 and 26 C.F.R. §301.6331 and say these are the implementing
 2 regulations that authorize them impose collections for Subtitle A. This claim is pure fraud! These regulations are only
 3 explanatory or amplifying regulations, but they are not implementing regulations that apply the statute to a specific tax.
 4 The “301” in the regulation number simply refers to Part 301 of the Regulations under 26 C.F.R., instead of the section of
 5 the Subtitles A and C tax that is implemented! For instance, if there was a regulation implementing collection of 6 Employment taxes under Subtitle C, then the regulation number would be 26 C.F.R. §31.6330 or 26 C.F.R. §31.6331, but 7 there is no such regulation!

8 “...the Act’s civil and criminal penalties attach only upon violation of the regulation promulgated by the
 9 Secretary; if the Secretary were to do nothing, the Act itself would impose no penalties on anyone...The
 10 Government urges that since only those who violate these regulations [not the Code] may incur civil or 11 criminal penalties, it is the actual regulations issued by the Secretary of the Treasury, and not the broad 12 authorizing language of the statute, which are to be tested against the standards of the Fourth Amendment; and 13 that when so tested they are valid.”

14 [Calif. Bankers Assoc. v. Shultz, 416 U.S. 21, 44, 39 L.Ed.2d. 812, 94 S.Ct. 1494]

15 5.4.18 No Implementing Regulations for “Tax Evasion” or “Willful Failure To File” Under 26 U.S.C. §§7201 or 16 7203!

17 Just like other aspects of enforcement covered earlier for assessment, collections, and penalties, the Secretary of the 18 Treasury also has not written any implementing regulations for the criminal acts of Tax Evasion under 26 U.S.C. §7201 or
 19 Willful Failure to File under 26 U.S.C. §7203. If there were an implementing regulation for these that applied it to Subtitle
 20 A Income Taxes imposed in Section 1, which is in Part 1 of the I.R.C., then the regulation numbers would be 26 C.F.R.
 21 §1.7201 (Tax Evasion) and 26 C.F.R. §1.7203 (Willful Failure to File) respectively, but these regulations do not exist!
 22 Without implementing regulations, these code sections do not apply to the personal income tax and therefore can’t be 23 lawfully enforced!

24 A search of the U.S. Attorneys’ Manual on the Department of Justice website confirms the conclusions of this chapter.
 25 Look in section 9-4.139 entitled “Internal Revenue Code” found at:

26 [http://www.usdoj.gov/usao/eousa/foia\_reading\_room/usam/title9/4mcrim.htm - 9-4.139](http://www.usdoj.gov/usao/eousa/foia_reading_room/usam/title9/4mcrim.htm - 9-4.139)

27 This section comes under the general section entitled “Statutes Assigned by Citation”. The section lists all the criminal
 28 statutes under each title of the U.S. Code and the federal agency authorized by law to investigate the crime. In the right
 29 hand column listed under “Agency With Investigative Jurisdiction” for Internal Revenue Code sections §§7201-7209, it
 30 conspicuously says “None”! The reason is because there are NO IMPLEMENTING REGULATIONS. Either the Internal 31 Revenue Service or the BATF would need to write implementing regulations under these criminal code sections in order for 32 them to be considered enforceable outside of the federal government and the agency that wrote the implementing regulation
 33 would then be the agency listed in the U.S. Attorneys’ Manual as having investigative jurisdiction. Quite a scam, huh?

34 In fact, the only people who can be prosecuted for “failure to file” under 26 U.S.C. §7201 are officers and employees of the 35 United States when acting in their official capacity as an agent of the government. The federal courts have indirectly
 36 confirmed this fact. For instance, here is what one of them said about the fact that there are no implementing regulations
 37 for federal tax crimes:

38 “Federal income tax regulations governing filing of income tax returns do not require Office of Management
 39 and Budget control numbers because requirement to file tax return is mandated by statute, not by regulation.”
 40 [U.S. v. Bartrug, E.D.Va.1991, 777 F.Supp. 1290, affirmed 976 F.2d. 727, certiorari denied 113 S.Ct. 1659,
 41 507 U.S. 1010, 123 L.Ed.2d. 278]

42 Below is what it says about the requirement to publish in the Federal Register, and note that anything that imposes a
 43 “penalty” has a requirement to publish in the Federal Register and is defined as having “general applicability and legal 44 effect”. Certainly the requirement to file a tax return, if it can land a person in jail, would impose a penalty and have 45 “general applicability and legal effect”, and yet it is not published in the Federal Register by the admission of the court
 46 above!:

47 44 U.S.C. §1505 Documents to be Published in the Federal Register

(a) Proclamations and Executive Orders; Documents Having General Applicability and Legal Effect [against persons living in states of the Union]; Documents Required To Be Published by Congress.

There shall be published in the Federal Register -

(1) Presidential proclamations and Executive orders, except those not having general applicability and legal effect or effective only against Federal agencies or persons in their capacity as officers, agents, or employees thereof;

(2) documents or classes of documents that the President may determine from time to time have general applicability and legal effect; and

(3) documents or classes of documents that may be required so to be published by Act of Congress.

For the purposes of this chapter every document or order which prescribes a penalty has general applicability and legal effect

Finally, here is what the implementing regulations for the Internal Revenue Code says about the effect of statutes and regulations that are not published in the Federal Register, and note that they cannot have any effect on the rights of anyone when they are not so published:

26 C.F.R. §601.702 Publication, public inspection, and specific requests for records.

(ii) Effect of failure to publish.

*Except to the extent that a person has actual and timely notice of the terms of any matter referred to in paragraph (a)(1) of this section which is required to be published in the Federal Register, such person is not required in any manner to resort to, or be adversely affected by, such matter if it is not so published or is not incorporated by reference therein pursuant to paragraph (a)(2)(i) of this section. Thus, for example, any such matter which imposes an obligation and which is not so published or incorporated by reference shall not adversely change or affect a person's rights.

In conclusion, the only types of statutes that can impose a penalty and either not have implementing regulations or not have the statute or implementing regulations published in the Federal Register are those that affect only federal employees acting in the official capacity of their employment. Everything else must be published in the F.R. and when it is not, it cannot affect anyone other than federal employees acting in their official capacity as officers and agents of the government. Consequently, nearly all of the people who do not work for the federal government who have ever been prosecuted for Willful Failure to File in violation of 26 U.S.C. §7201 were “assumed” or “presumed” to be “employees” and “officers” of the United States government, and in nearly all cases, this was a violation of their due process rights and produced a “void judgment” that is reversible. It also creates an opportunity for these maliciously prosecuted individuals to seek damages under equity jurisdiction against the judges and prosecutors who wrongfully allowed them to be convicted.

Why do some people get convicted under these statutes anyway? The main reasons are:

1. Ignorant judges who don't know the law.
2. Ignorant Citizens and their legal counsel who don't know about implementing regulations and therefore don't use this knowledge as a defense.
3. Judicial tyranny and conspiracy to protect the income tax. This conspiracy exploits the ignorance of the law by jurors, Citizens, and the legal profession to uphold and expand the operation of the income tax, as we thoroughly documented earlier in section 2.8.13 and later in section 6.6 of this book.

The government loves to make examples out of people whose ignorance of the law allowed them to be convicted of tax evasion and willful failure to file. That is how they keep the “sheeple” (sheep people) scared and “volunteering” to be slaves. But when people do learn the law and use it to defend themselves, the government makes sure that such cases, if they are litigated, go unpublished and never get entered into the court record or case databases, which amounts to fraud, extortion, and a conflict of interest on the part of judges.

5.4.19 The “person” addressed by criminal provisions of the IRC isn't you!

1 26 U.S.C. §7343 defines the legal “person” who may be held criminally liable under the Internal Revenue Code for failure
2 to comply with the code. Below is the content of that statute:

3 26 U.S.C. §7343: Definition of term “person”

4 Person - The term “person” as used in this chapter includes an officer or employee of a corporation, or a
5 member or employee of a partnership, who as such officer, employee, or member is under a duty to perform the 6 act in respect of which the violation occurs.

7 Ah...so when a real-live-flesh-and-blood person (known in law as a “natural person”) is held accountable for criminal non-
8 compliance with the law, he is held accountable only in his capacity as the officer or employee, under a duty to perform,
9 on behalf of the “legal fiction” called a corporation. The same kind of constraint also applies to liability for penalties as 10 well, as we explained earlier in section 5.4.16, where we talked about the definition of “person” found in 26 C.F.R.
11 §301.6671-1. Once again: you are sovereign and the government is the servant and not the master. The only people the 12 government can boss around and abuse in a free country are those who volunteer and consent to such abuse by volunteering
13 to receive taxable government privileges as a corporation!

14 5.4.20 The Secretary of the Treasury Has No Delegated Authority to Collect Income Taxes inside of States of the 15 Union!

16 Earlier in section 4.3.6, we thoroughly described the Separation of Powers Doctrine and showed that it is the essence of our 17 “Republican Form of Government”. We showed that the Separation of Powers Doctrine was the main mechanism
18 envisioned by the Founding Fathers to guarantee the protection of our liberties. In this section, we are going to apply the 19 Separation of Powers Doctrine to show that the Secretary of the Treasury is completely without authority to enforce or 20 collect income taxes from anyone but federal instrumentalities.

21 The power of taxation was granted to the Legislative Branch under Article 1, Section 8, Clauses 1 and 3 of the Constitution.
22 Under the Separation of Powers Doctrine and under Article 4, Section 4 of the Constitution, no branch of government can 23 delegate its powers to any other branch of government. The Supreme Court agreed with this in the case of Butcher’s Union
24 when it said:

25 “Whatever differences of opinion, said the court, [in the case of Beer Co. v. Massachusetts, 97 U.S. 28] ‘may 26 exist as to the extent and boundaries of the police power, and however difficult it may be to render a
27 satisfactory definition of it, there seems to be no doubt that it does extend to the protection of the lives, health,
28 *and property of the citizens, and to the preservation of good order and public morals. The legislature cannot by
29 any contract divest itself of the power to provide for these objects. They belong emphatically to that class of 30 objects which demand the application of the maxim, salus populi suprema lex, and they are to be attained
31 and provided for by such appropriate means as the legislative discretion may devise. That discretion can no
32 more be bargained away than the power itself.’

33 ...

34 “In the still more recent case of Stone v. Mississippi, 101 U.S. 814, the whole subject is reviewed in the opinion
35 delivered [111 U.S. 746, 753] by the chief justice. That also was a case of a chartered lottery, whose charter
36 was repealed by a constitution of the state subsequently adopted. It came here for relief, relying on the clause of 37 the federal constitution against impairing the obligation of contracts. The question is therefore presented, (says 38 the opinion,) whether, in view of these facts, the legislature of a state can, by the charter of a lottery company,
39 defeat the will of the people authoritatively expressed, in relation to the further continuance of such business in 40 *their midst. We think it cannot. No legislature can bargain away the public health or the public morals. The 41 people themselves cannot do it, much less their servants. The supervision of both these subjects of 42 governmental power is continuing in its nature, and they are to be dealt with as the special exigencies of the
43 moment may require. Government is organized with a view to their preservation, and cannot divest itself of 44 the power to provide for them. For this purpose the legislative discretion is allowed, and the discretion cannot 45 be parted with any more than the power itself.’ “*
46 [Butchers’ Union Co. v. Crescent City Co., 111 U.S. 746 (1884)]

47 The power to collect taxes cannot therefore be delegated by the Legislative Branch to the Executive Branch because that 48 would separate the taxation and representation functions. The President, who is in the Executive Branch, cannot oversee or 49 implement the collection of taxes by the Legislative Branch. Recall that the entire American revolution was fought over the 50 issue of taxation with representation. We were being taxed by the British King and we had no representation in the British 51 Parliament. When we formed our new government in 1789 after the American Revolution, we put the taxation and 52 representation functions together and within the Legislative Branch of the new government. The House of Representatives

1 was the place where the will of the people was directly represented. Members of the House were elected every two years to
2 ensure that they would be in close touch with the sentiments of the people because if they weren't, the bastards would be on
3 the street in two short years! The first tax ever passed by the Congress was a tax on imports, which was called a "duty"
4 (see 1 Stat. 24) and the first collectors of these taxes resided at shipping ports of entry. These collectors reported directly to 5 the House of Representatives initially and paid monies they collected directly to the Treasury Department in the Executive
6 Branch. After that first tax was instituted in March 1789, the office of Secretary of the Treasury was created in the act of 7 Sept. 2, 1789 (1 Stat. 65), and he reported directly to the House of Representatives and the Senate in the Legislative Branch,
8 and not to the President in the Executive Branch. The job of the Secretary of the Treasury was to "superintend" or 9 supervise the collection of all revenues by the collectors stationed at each port of entry. Therefore, the taxation and the 10 representation functions were coincident and within the Legislative Branch as required by the Separation of Powers
11 Doctrine.

12 Now let's fast forward to take a look at how things are being done today. The Department of the Treasury and the 13 Secretary of the Treasury are BOTH in the Executive Branch. The Secretary of the Treasury is appointed by the president
14 and not the House of Representatives and serves under the President and not the Congress. This was not the case at the 15 foundation of our country. The Secretary of the Treasury is now responsible for collecting taxes and the IRS works for the 16 Secretary. Public servants in the Executive Branch are not directly accountable to the people because all of them are 17 appointed, not elected. The Congress deceptively whines and complains in its correspondence with constituents who have 18 been abused by the IRS that they cannot control what the IRS does, because it is in the Executive Branch, but we must 19 realize that they are the ones who created this defect to begin with. We cannot have members of the Executive Branch in 20 the role of collecting taxes from people in the states of the Union because it violates the Separation of Powers Doctrine.
21 The fact that members of Congress complain about this situation is their own fault, because they are responsible for fixing
22 it. Does it seem as though the Constitution is being violated in this case? The answer is an emphatic no, but you can only
23 reach that informed conclusion after you take the time to understand the true nature of the Internal Revenue Code as we 24 describe it in this chapter.

25 As we have been saying throughout this entire chapter, the Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A is a tax on only public
26 offices, instrumentalities, and statutory "employees" of the federal government, who are all engaged in some way or
27 another with a "trade or business", which is defined as "the functions of a public office" in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26). This is 28 consistent with the Legislative Intent of the Sixteenth Amendment revealed by President Taft in his written address to 29 Congress found in the Congressional Record at 44 Cong.Rec. 3344 and given June 16, 1909. As a tax on only federal 30 government "employees" and instrumentalities, it is not a direct tax on people in states of the Union nor was it ever
31 intended to be collected outside of the federal zone or outside of the federal government. The Internal Revenue Code was 32 obfuscated (using "words of art") over the years to make it deceptively "appear" like it might apply to people in states of 33 the Union, but in fact it does not and never has. It is instead a tax only on federal instrumentalities, such as "employees"
34 and contractors. Federal "employees" all work in the federal zone, and the federal zone is not a constitutional republic. It
35 is instead a legislative socialist democracy, as we showed earlier in sections 4.7 and 4.8. The requirement found in Article
36 4, Section 4 of the Constitution to guarantee a "Republican form of Government" with separation of powers does not apply
37 to dealings between federal employees and the Congress. There is no need for separation of powers in dealing with federal 38 employees because Article 1, Section 8, Clause 17 of the Constitution says Congress can do whatever it wants inside the 39 federal zone and need not abide by the Bill of Rights there. Consequently, it is perfectly Constitutional for the Legislative 40 Branch to institute a direct, unapportioned tax (actually a "kickback" of federal pay) only on federal "employees" and to 41 have a person who is not part of the Legislative Branch called the Secretary of the Treasury collect the tax. We will now
42 examine the delegated of the authority of the Secretary of the Treasury to prove the conclusions of this section.

43 Treasury Department Order No. 150-42, dated July 27, 1956, appearing in at 21 Fed. Reg. 5852, specifies the following:

44 The Commissioner shall, to the extent of the authority vested in him, provide for the administration of United 45 States internal revenue laws in the Panama Canal Zone, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands.

46 On February 27, 1986 (51 Fed. Reg. 9571), Treasury Department Order No. 150-01 specified the following:

47 The Commissioner shall, to the extent of authority otherwise vested in him, provide for the administration of the 48 United States internal revenue laws in the U.S. Territories and insular possessions and other authorized areas of 49 the world.

1 The point is that the above order does not authorize collection of revenues within the borders of the Union states because
 2 Article 1, Section 9, Clause 4 and Article 1, Section 2, Clause 3 of the U.S. Constitution forbid collection of direct taxes by 3 the federal government from natural persons.

4 Authors note: It should be stated clearly and unambiguously that it is UNCONSTITUTIONAL for any part of the federal
 5 government to collect a revenues from Americans, except for congress! The founding fathers insisted it be that way, so that
 6 if congress tried to impose and collect a tax the people didn't want, they could vote the rascals out!! So how is it that the
 7 current fraud is allowed to continue, where the Internal Revenue Laws are imposed on American Citizens domiciled in the 8 50 Union states with income from within the 50 Union states. Show me the Delegation of Authority Order (DAO) that 9 authorizes this!

10 On September 14, 1787, a motion was proposed in Congress to “strike out” the power of Congress to impose and collect
 11 taxes and, instead, delegate that authority to the Secretary of the Treasury. The Secretary of the Treasury is not elected
 12 but appointed by the President in the Executive Branch of the Government. This motion was denied because it was a direct
 13 violation of the Constitutional “Separation of Power” protections for the American Citizens. Therefore, the Secretary of the 14 Treasury has never formally been delegated the Constitutional Authority to collect any type of tax from the citizens of the 15 50 Union states, even though today he tries to fool everyone into thinking that is his lawful responsibility! Absent a valid
 16 delegation of authority order, the Secretary of the Treasury, under whom the IRS Commissioner serves, is acting entirely
 17 outside the bounds of his Constitutional authority in collecting taxes as he does!

18 Remember, there are two classes of citizens in the United States, (1) state nationals of the 50 Union states, described in the 19 Fourteenth Amendment, Section 1, to the Constitution and (2) statutory “citizens subject to its jurisdiction” described in 8
 20 U.S.C. §1401 who were born in territories over which the United States is exclusively Sovereign (i.e. District of Columbia, 21 Guam, Puerto Rico, etc.). These citizens are not legislated for under constitutional guidelines. The only taxing authority
 22 the Secretary of the Treasury can have would be over these subject federal citizens, in addition to “resident aliens”, who
 23 are under the exclusive territorial jurisdiction of the United States. The Internal Revenue Code Subtitle A is “situs based”
 24 territorial federal legislation. It is only applicable to domiciliaries of the federal zone and to persons receiving federal
 25 payments outside the federal zone. Otherwise the tax is as foreign as the Japanese income tax. That’s why the Treasury
 26 Secretary can NEVER have any delegated authority derived from the constitution to enforce income tax collection upon 27 those domiciled in nonfederal areas of the 50 Union states.

28 “The difficulties arising out of our dual form of government and the opportunities for differing opinions
 29 *concerning the relative rights of state and national governments are many; but for a very long time this court
 30 has steadfastly adhered to the doctrine that the taxing power of Congress does not extend to the states or
 31 their political subdivisions. The same basic reasoning which leads to that conclusion, we think, requires like*
 32 *limitation upon the power which springs from the bankruptcy clause. United States v. Butler, supra.”*
 33 [Ashton v. Cameron County Water Improvement District No. 1, 298 U.S. 513, 56 S.Ct. 892 (1936)]

34 Now let’s look at what the U.S. Supreme Court said about the authority of the Secretary of the Treasury to administratively
 35 enforce the income taxes outside the federal zone. We quote from the Supreme Court case of Brushaber v. Union Pacific
 36 Railroad Company No. 140, 240 U.S. 1, 36 S.Ct. 236, 60 L.Ed. 493 (1916). This case was argued October 14 and 15, 1915
 37 and decided January 24, 1916:

38 “We have not referred to a contention that because certain administrative powers to enforce the act were
 39 conferred by the statute upon the Secretary of the Treasury, therefore it was void as unwarrantedly delegating
 40 legislative authority [to collect taxes inside states of the Union], because we think to state the proposition is to 41 answer it.”

42 The U.S. Supreme Court cited the following cases in reaching this conclusion:

- 43 • Marshall Field & Co. v. Clark, 143 U.S. 649, 36 L.Ed. 294, 12 Sup.Ct.Rep. 495
- 44 • Buttfield v. Stranahan, 192 U.S. 470, 496, 48 L.Ed. 525, 535, 24 Sup.Ct.Rep. 349
- 45 • Oceanic SteamNav. Co. v. Stranahan, 214 U.S. 320, 53 L.Ed. 1013, 29 Sup.Ct.Rep. 671

46 That’s right!: According to the Supreme Court, revenues under I.R.C., Subtitle A can only be collected inside the federal
 47 zone because the Secretary of the Treasury has NO LAWFUL DELEGATED AUTHORITY TO ADMINISTER THE IT
 48 OUTSIDE THE FEDERAL ZONE! When it comes to income taxes, the truth can sometimes be stranger than fiction!

NOTE: The Supreme Court not only referred to the contention but stated it and thus answered it citing case precedent. In answering the contention in the ruling of the Court the Supreme Court Justices rendered the federal income tax VOID. Since no one else to my knowledge has ever cited this fact the Courts may not honor the ruling. Nevertheless it is a factual statement under the Law that the Congress cannot delegate its powers to anyone, or anything, or any entity. Another factual statement in the Law is that the Congress cannot breach the balance of power between branches of government by giving its legislative power to the executive branch. Both of these statements are set in stone. For either one or both of those reasons the federal income tax AND the Internal Revenue Service are unconstitutional.

The Federalist Papers, written by the founding fathers in order to encourage states to join the Union by ratifying the Constitution, confirmed the above conclusions as follows:

"It is true, that the Confederacy is to possess, and may exercise, the power of collecting internal as well as external taxes throughout the States; but it is probable that this power will not be resorted to, except for supplemental purposes of revenue; that an option will then be given to the States to supply their quotas by previous collections of their own; and that the eventual collection, under the immediate authority of the Union, will generally be made by the officers, and according to the rules, appointed by the several States [not by anyone in the federal government!]. Indeed it is extremely probable, that in other instances, particularly in the organization of the judicial power, the officers of the States will be clothed with the correspondent authority of the Union."

[The Federalist Paper #45, James Madison]

Why must state revenue officers collect taxes on behalf of the federal government rather than the federal government doing it directly? The reason is once again that Article 1, Section 2, Clause 3 and Article 1, Section 9, Clause 4 of the U.S. Constitution require that all direct taxes must be apportioned among the states!

5.4.21 The Department of Justice has NO Authority to Prosecute or investigate IRC Subtitle A Income Tax Crimes!

The responsibility of the Department of Justice is to prosecute individuals for violation of the tax code (not "law", but "code"). Their authority is derived from 28 C.F.R. §0.70, which you can read for yourself at:

<http://squid.law.cornell.edu/cgi-bin/get-cfr.cgi?TITLE=28&PART=0&SECTION=70&TYPE=TEXT>

The U.S. Attorneys' Manual, Section 6-1.000 also describes their lawful role in tax prosecutions, which is also available at our website at:

<http://famguardian.org/Publications/USAttyManual/title6/title6.htm>

The Department of Justice prosecutes tax crimes using a document called the Department of Justice, Tax Division, Criminal Tax Manual. The 1994 version of this document is posted on our website in its entirety for you to read and examine at <http://famguardian.org/>. The IRS relies on the Department of Justice to:

1. Decide whether a particular tax case should be litigated.
2. Institute the litigation.
3. Criminally prosecute against tax crimes which they have delegated authority to prosecute.

If you examine the U.S. Attorneys' Manual, the Department of Justice has NO delegated authority to prosecute tax crimes involving U.S. citizens. Here is the section from their manual dealing with their authority to prosecute tax crimes involving the IRS:

*U.S. Attorneys' Manual
6-4.270 Criminal Division Responsibility*

The Criminal Division has limited responsibility for the prosecution of offenses investigated by the IRS. Those offenses are: excise violations involving liquor tax, narcotics, stamp tax, firearms, wagering, and coin-operated gambling and amusement machines; malfeasance offenses committed by IRS personnel; forcible rescue of seized property; corrupt or forcible interference with an officer or employee acting under the internal revenue laws (but not omnibus clause); and unauthorized mutilation, removal or misuse of stamps. See 28 C.F.R. Sec. 0.70.

Section 7801 of the Internal Revenue Code concurs with the above description:

Internal Revenue Code
Sec. 7801. Authority of Department of the Treasury

(a) Powers and duties of Secretary

Except as otherwise expressly provided by law, the administration and enforcement of this title shall be performed by or under the supervision of the Secretary of the Treasury.

(b) Repealed. Pub. L. 97-258, Sec. 5(b), Sept. 13, 1982, 96 Stat. 1068, 1078)

(c) Functions of Department of Justice unaffected

Nothing in this section or section 301(f) of title 31 shall be considered to affect the duties, powers, or functions imposed upon, or vested in, the Department of Justice, or any officer thereof, by law existing on May 10, 1934.

QUESTION FOR DOUBTERS: Do you see anything in the above authority of the DOJ relating to prosecuting tax crimes involving any of the following? We don't!:

1. Tax evasion of income taxes (26 U.S.C. §7201)
2. Frivolous returns (26 U.S.C. §6702)
3. Willful failure to file (26 U.S.C. §7203)
