 44 [Miller Brothers Co. v. Maryland, 347 U.S. 340 (1954)]

- 45 3. Domicile cannot be established without a coincidence of living or having lived in a place and voluntarily consenting to
- 46 live there "permanently".
- 47 4. Domicile is a protected First Amendment choice of political association. Since the government may not lawfully
- 48 interfere with your right of association, they cannot lawfully select a domicile for you or interfere with your choice of
- 49 domicile.
- 50 5. Domicile is what is called the "seat" of your property. It is the "state" and the "government" you voluntarily nominate
- 51 to protect your property and your rights. In effect, it is the "weapon" you voluntarily choose that will best protect your
- 52 property and rights, not unlike the weapons that early cavemen crafted and voluntarily used to protect themselves and
- 53 their property.
- 54 6. The government cannot lawfully coerce you to choose a domicile in a place. A government that coerced you into choosing a domicile in their jurisdiction is engaging in a “protection racket”, which is highly illegal. A coerced domicile it is not a domicile of your choice and therefore lawfully confers no jurisdiction or rights upon the government:

7. Domicile is a method of lawfully delegating authority to a “sovereign” to protect you. That delegation of authority causes you to voluntarily surrender some of your rights to the government in exchange for “protection”. That protection comes from the civil and criminal laws that the sovereign passes, because the purpose of all government and all law is “protection”. The U.S. Supreme Court calls this delegation of authority “allegiance”. To wit:

8. All allegiance must be voluntary, which is why only consenting adults past the age of majority can have a legal domicile. The following facts confirm this conclusion:

8.2. Incompetent or insane persons assume the domicile of their caregivers.

9. It is perfectly lawful to have a domicile in a place OTHER than the place you currently live. Those who find themselves in this condition are called “transient foreigners”, and the only laws they are subject to are the criminal laws in the place they are at.

[Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1498]

10. There are many complicated rules of “presumption” about how to determine the domicile of an individual:

<http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/CitesByTopic/Domicile-28CJS-20051203.pdf>

10.2. The reason that the above publication about domicile is so complicated and long, is that its main purpose is to disguise the voluntary, consensual nature of domicile or remove it entirely from the decisions of courts and governments so that simply being present on the king's land makes one into a “subject” of the king. This is not how a republican form of government works and we don't have a monarchy in this country that would allow this abusive approach to law to function.

“Yet, it is to be remembered, and that whether in its real origin, or in its artificial state, allegiance, as well as fealty, rests upon lands, and it is due to persons. Not so, with respect to Citizenship, which has arisen from the dissolution of the feudal system and is a substitute for allegiance, corresponding with the new order of things. Allegiance and citizenship, differ, indeed, in almost every characteristic. Citizenship is the effect of compact [CONTRACT!]; allegiance is the offspring of power and necessity. Citizenship is a political tie; allegiance is a territorial tenure. Citizenship is the charter of equality; allegiance is a badge of inferiority. Citizenship is constitutional; allegiance is personal. Citizenship is freedom; allegiance is servitude. Citizenship is communicable; allegiance is repulsive. Citizenship may be relinquished; allegiance is perpetual. With such essential differences, the doctrine of allegiance is inapplicable to a system of citizenship; which it can neither serve to controul, nor to elucidate. And yet, even among the nations, in which the law of allegiance is the most firmly established, the law most pertinaciously enforced, there are striking deviations that demonstrate the invincible power of truth, and the homage, which, under every modification of government, must be paid to the inherent rights of man.....The doctrine is, that allegiance cannot be due to two sovereigns; and taking an oath of allegiance to a new, is the strongest evidence of withdrawing allegiance from a previous, sovereign....”

10.3. These rules of presumption relating to domicile may only lawfully act in the absence of express declaration of your domicile provided to the government in written form or when various sources of evidence conflict with each other about your choice of domicile.

"This [government] right of domicile, he continues, is not established unless the person makes sufficiently known his intention of fixing there, either tacitly or by an express declaration." Vatt. Law Nat. pp. 92, 93."

10.4. The purpose for these rules are basically to manufacture the "presumption" that courts can use to "ASSUME" or "PRESUME" that you consented to their jurisdiction, even if in fact you did not explicitly do so. All such prejudicial presumptions which might adversely affect your Constitutionally guaranteed rights are unconstitutional, according to the U.S. Supreme Court:

1) [8:4993] Conclusive presumptions affecting protected interests: A conclusive presumption may be defeated where its application would impair a party's constitutionally-protected liberty or property interests. In such cases, conclusive presumptions have been held to violate a party's due process and equal protection rights. Vlandis v. Kline (1973) [412 U.S. 441, 449, 93 S.Ct. 2230, 2235; Cleveland Bd. of Ed. v. LaFleur (1974) 414 U.S. 632, 639-640, 94 S.Ct. 1208, 1215-presumption under Illinois law that unmarried fathers are unfit violates process]

10.5. The purpose for these complicated rules of presumption is to avoid the real issue, which is whether you voluntarily consent to the civil statutory jurisdiction of the government and the courts in an area, because they cannot proceed civilly without your express consent manifested as a voluntary choice of domicile. In most cases, if litigants knew that all they had to do to avoid the jurisdiction of the court was to not voluntarily select a domicile within the jurisdiction of the court, most people would become "transient foreigners" so the government could do nothing other than just "leave them alone".

11. You can choose a domicile any place you want, so long as you have physically been present in that place at least once in the past. The only requirement is that you must ensure that the government or sovereign who controls the place where you live has received "reasonable notice" of your choice of domicile and of their corresponding obligation to protect you.

The writers upon the law of nations distinguish between a temporary residence in a foreign country for a special purpose and a residence accompanied with an intention to make it a permanent place of abode. The latter is styled by Vattel [in his book The Law of Nations as] "domicile," which he defines to be "a habitation fixed in any place, with an intention of always staying there." Such a person, says this author, becomes a member of the new society at least as a permanent inhabitant, and is a kind of citizen of the inferior order from the native citizens, but is, nevertheless, united and subject to the society, without participating in all its advantages. This right of domicile, he continues, is not established unless the person makes sufficiently known his intention of fixing there, either tacitly or by an express declaration. Vatt. Law Nat. pp. 92, 93. Grotius nowhere uses the word "domicile," but he also distinguishes between those who stay in a foreign country by the necessity of their affairs, or from any other temporary cause, and those who reside there from a permanent cause. The former he denominates "strangers," and the latter, "subjects." The rule is thus laid down by Sir Robert Phillimore:

There is a class of persons which cannot be, strictly speaking, included in either of these denominations of naturalized or native citizens, namely, the class of those who have ceased to reside [maintain a domicile] in their native country, and have taken up a permanent abode in another. These are domiciled inhabitants. They have not put on a new citizenship through some formal mode enjoined by the law or the new country. They are de facto, though not de jure, citizens of the country of their [new chosen] domicile.
Fong Yue Ting v. United States, [149 U.S. 698 (1893)]

Notice the phrase "This right of domicile. . . is not established unless the person makes sufficiently known his intention of fixing there, either tacitly or by an express declaration."

12. The process of notifying the government that you have nominated them as your protector occurs based on how you fill out usually government and financial forms that you fill out such as:

12.1. Driver's license applications. You cannot get a driver's license in most states without selecting a domicile in the place that you want the license from. See:

Defending Your Right to Travel, Form #06.010

12.2. Voter registration. You cannot register to vote without a domicile in the place you are voting.

12.3. Jury summons. You cannot serve as a jurist without a domicile in the jurisdiction you are serving in.

12.4. On financial forms, any form that asks for your "residence", "permanent address", or "domicile".

13. If you want provide unambiguous legal notice to the state of your choice to disassociate with them and become a “transient foreigner” in the place where you live who is not subject to the civil laws, you can use the following free form:

Legal Notice of Change in Domicile/Citizenship Records and Divorce from the United States, Form #10.001
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

We emphasize that there is no method OTHER than domicile available in which to consent to the civil statutory laws of a specific place. None of the following conditions, for instance, may form a basis for a prima facie presumption that a specific human being consented to be civilly governed by a specific municipal government:

1. Simply being born and thereby becoming a statutory “national” (per 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21)) of a specific country is NOT an exercise of personal discretion or an express act of consent.
2. Simply living in a physical place WITHOUT choosing a domicile there is NOT an exercise of personal discretion or an express act of consent.

The subject of domicile is a complicated one. Consequently, we have written a separate memorandum of law on the subject if you would like to investigate this fascinating subject further:

4.10.2 “reside” in the Fourteenth Amendment

“reside” in the Fourteenth Amendment means DOMICILE, not mere physical presence.

That newly arrived citizens “have two political capacities, one state and one federal,” adds special force to their claim that they have the same rights as others who share their citizenship.<sup>17</sup> Neither mere rationality nor some intermediate standard of review should be used to judge the constitutionality of a state rule that discriminates against some of its citizens because they have been domiciled in the State for less than a year. The appropriate standard may be more categorical than that articulated in Shapiro, see supra, at 8 9, but it is surely no less strict.

A bona fide residence requirement simply requires that the person does establish residence before demanding the services that are restricted to residents.” The Martinez Court explained that “residence” requires “both physical presence and an intention to remain [domicile].” see id., at 330, and approved a Texas law that restricted eligibility for tuition-free education to families who met this minimum definition of residence, id., at 332 333.

While the physical presence element of a bona fide residence is easy to police, the subjective intent element is not. It is simply unworkable and futile to require States to inquire into each new resident’s subjective intent to remain. Hence, States employ objective criteria such as durational residence requirements to test a new resident’s resolve to remain before these new citizens can enjoy certain in-state benefits. Recognizing the practical appeal of such criteria, this Court has repeatedly sanctioned the State’s use of durational residence requirements before new residents receive in-state tuition rates at state universities. Starns v. Malkerson, 401 U.S. 985 (1971), summarily aff’g 326 F. Supp. 234 (Minn. 1970) (upholding 1-year residence requirement for in-state tuition); Sturgis v. Washington, 414 U.S. 1057, summarily aff’g 368 F. Supp. 38 (WD Wash. 1973) (same). The Court has declared: “The State can establish such reasonable criteria for in-state status as to make virtually certain that students who are not, in fact, bona fide residents of the State, but have come there solely for educational purposes, cannot take advantage of the in-state rates.” See Vlandis v. Kline, 412 U.S. 441, 453 454 (1973). The Court has done the same in upholding a 1-year residence requirement for eligibility to obtain a divorce in state courts, see Sosna v. Iowa, 419 U.S. 393, 406 409 (1975), and in upholding political party registration restrictions that amounted to a durational residency requirement for voting in primary elections, see Rosario v. Rockefeller, 410 U.S. 752, 760 762 (1973). [Saenz v. Roe, 526 U.S. 473, 119 S.Ct. 1430, 143 L.Ed.2d. 635 (1999)]

The implication of the above is that since DOMICILE is voluntary, even CONSTITUTIONAL nationality and state citizenship is voluntary. It also implies that one can be BORN in a place without being a STATUTORY “citizen” there, if one does not have a domicile there. See:

Why Domicile and Becoming a "Taxpayer" Require Your Consent, Form #05.002

4.10.3 "Domicile" and "residence" compared

Now we'll examine and compare the word "domicile" with "residence" to put it into context within our discussion:

domicile. A person's legal home. That place where a man has his true, fixed, and permanent home and principal establishment, and to which whenever he is absent he has the intention of returning. Smith v. Smith, 206 Pa.Super. 310, 213 A.2d. 94. Generally, physical presence within a state and the intention to make it one's home are the requisites of establishing a "domicile" therein. The permanent residence of a person or the place to which he intends to return even though he may actually reside elsewhere. A person may have more than one residence but only one domicile. The legal domicile of a person is important since it, rather than the actual residence, often controls the jurisdiction of the taxing authorities and determines where a person may exercise the privilege of voting and other legal rights and privileges. The established, fixed, permanent, or ordinary dwellingplace or place of residence of a person, as distinguished from his temporary and transient, though actual, place of residence. It is his legal residence, as distinguished from his temporary place of abode; or his home, as distinguished from a place to which business or pleasure may temporarily call him. See also Abode; Residence.

"Citizenship," "habitaney," and "residence" are severally words which in particular cases may mean precisely the same as "domicile," while in other uses may have different meanings.

"Residence" signifies living in particular locality while "domicile" means living in that locality with intent to make it a fixed and permanent home. Schreiner v. Schreiner, Tex.Civ.App., 502 S.W.2d. 840, 843.

*For purpose of federal diversity jurisdiction, "citizenship" and "domicile" are synonymous. Hendry v. Masonite Corp., C.A.Miss., 455 F.2d. 955.
 [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 485]*

Note the word "permanent" used in several places above. Note also that in the above definition that the taxes one pays are based on their "domicile" and "residence". Here is what it says again:

"The legal domicile of a person is important since it, rather than the actual residence, often controls the jurisdiction of the taxing authorities and determines where a person may exercise the privilege of voting and other legal rights and privileges."

Below is what a famous legal publisher has to say about the term "residence" in relation to "domicile" and "citizenship":

The general rule is that a person can maintain as many residences in as many states or nations as he pleases, and can afford, but that only place can qualify as that person's "domicile". This is because the law must often have, or in any event has come to insist on, one place to point to for any of a variety of legal purposes.

A person's "domicile" is almost always a question of intent. A competent adult can, in our free society, live where she pleases, and we will take her "domicile" to be wherever she does the things that we ordinarily associate with "home": residing, working, voting, schooling, community activity, etc.

One resides in one's domicile indefinitely, that is, with no definite end planned for the stay. While we hear "permanently" mentioned, the better word is "indefinitely". This is best seen in the context of a change of domicile.

In the United States, "domicile" and "residence" are the two major competitors for judicial attention, and the words are almost invariably used to describe the relationship that the person has to the state rather than the nation. We use "citizenship" to describe the national relationship, and we generally eschew "nationality" (heard more frequently among European nations) as a descriptive term.

[Conflicts in a Nutshell, Second Edition; David D. Siegel, West Publishing, 1994, ISBN 0-314-02952-4, pp. 14-15]

These issues are very important. To summarize the meaning of "domicile" succinctly then, one's "domicile" is their "legal home". One's "domicile" is the place where we claim to have political and legal allegiance to the courts and the laws. Since allegiance must be exclusive, then we can have only one "domicile", because no man can serve more than one master as revealed in Luke 16:13. Since the first four Commandments of the Ten Commandments say that Christians can only have allegiance to "God" and His laws in the Holy Book, then their only "domicile" is Heaven based on allegiance alone.

4.10.4 Christians cannot have an earthly “domicile” or “residence”

We said earlier that the word “domicile” implied a “permanent legal home”. Now for the $64,000 question: “If you are a Christian and God says you are a citizen of heaven and not of earth, then where is your permanent domicile from a legal perspective? Where is it that you should ‘intend’ to live as a Christian?” The answer is that it is in heaven, and not anywhere on earth! Here are some reasons why:

*“Now, therefore, you are no longer strangers and foreigners, but fellow citizens with the saints and members of the household of God.”
[Ephesians 2:19, Bible, NKJV]*

[Hebrews 11:13]*

*“Beloved, I beg you as sojourners and pilgrims, abstain from fleshly lusts which war against the soul...”
[1 Peter 2:11]*

Furthermore, if “the wages of sin is death” (see Romans 6:23) and you are guaranteed to die eventually and soon because of your sin, then can anything here on earth be called “permanent” in the context of God’s eternal plan? Why would anyone want to “intend” to reside permanently in a place controlled mainly by Satan and which is doomed to eventual destruction? If you look in the book of Revelation, you will find that the earth will be completely transformed when Jesus returns to become a new and different earth, so can our present earth even be called “permanent”? The answer is NO. To admit that your physical or spiritual “domicile” or your “residence” is here on earth and/or is “permanent” is to admit that there is no God and no Heaven and that life ends both spiritually and physically when you die! You are also admitting that the only thing even close to being permanent is the short life that you have while you are here. Therefore, as a Christian, you can’t have a “domicile” or a “residence” anywhere on the present earth from a legal perspective without blaspheming God. Consequently, it also means that you can’t be subject to taxes upon your person based on having a “domicile” or “residence” in any earthly jurisdiction: state or federal. You are a child of God and you are His “bondservant” and “fiduciary” while you are here. Unless the government can tax “God”, then it can’t tax you acting as His agent and fiduciary:

*“For this is the will of God, that by doing good you may put to silence the ignorance of foolish men— as free, yet not using liberty as a cloak for vice, but as bondservants of God.”
[1 Peter 2:15-16, Bible, NKJV]*

You are “just passing through”. This life is only a temporary test to see whether you will evidence by your works the saving faith you have which will allow you to gain entrance into Heaven and the new earth God will create for you to dwell in mentioned in Rev. 21:1.

The definition of “domicile” above establishes also that “intent” is an important means of determining domicile as follows:

*“...the place to which he intends to return even though he may actually reside elsewhere”.
[Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 485, under “domicile”]*

So once again as a Christian, the only place you should want to inhabit or “intend” to return to is Heaven, because the present earth is a temporal place full of sin and death that is ruled exclusively by Satan. Your proper biblical and legal “intent” as a person whose exclusive allegiance is to God should therefore be to return to Heaven and to leave the present corrupted earth as soon as possible and as God in His sovereignty allows. God has prepared a mansion for you to live in with the Father, and that mansion cannot be part of the present corrupted earth:

*“In My [Jesus’] Father’s house are many mansions; if it were not so, I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you. And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again and receive you to Myself; that where I am, there you may be also. And where I go you know, and the way you know.”
[John 14:2-4, Bible, NKJV]*

So why don’t they teach these things in school? Remember who runs the public schools?: Your wonderful state government. Do you think they are going to volunteer to clue you in to the fact that you’re the sovereign in charge of the

1 government and don't have to put up with being their slave, which is what their legal treachery has made you into? The
 2 only kind of volunteering they want you to do is to volunteer to be subject to their corrupt laws and become a "taxpayer",
 3 which is a person who voluntarily enlisted to become a whore for the government as you will find out in chapter 5. Even
 4 many of our Christian schools have lost sight of the great commission and awesome responsibility they have to teach our
 5 young people the profound truths in the Bible and this book in a way that honors and glorifies God and allows them to be 6 the salt and light of the world.

7 4.11 "Citizen" and "Resident"

8 Next, we must analyze the civil status of people in states of the Union. We will prove that they are not "citizens" or 9 "residents" under the laws of Congress and consequently, that the only thing left for them to be is "non-resident non-
 10 persons".

11 4.11.1 "Resident" defined generally

12 We are all the time being asked "are you a resident of the state of Illinois?" (or whatever State) and we always answer
 13 "yes". But are we really? Let us take a much closer look and see.

14 Black's Law Dictionary Sixth Edition, page 1309:

15 Resident. "Any person who occupies a dwelling within the State, has a present intent to remain within the State
 16 for a period of time, and manifests the genuineness of that intent by establishing an ongoing physical presence
 17 within the State together with indicia that his presence within the State is something other than merely 18 transitory in nature. The word "resident" when used as a noun means a dweller, habitant or occupant; one who 19 resides or dwells in a place for a period of more, or less, duration; it signifies one having a residence, or one
 20 who resides or abides. Hanson v. P.A. Peterson Home Ass'n, 35 Ill.App2d. 134, 182 N.E.2d. 237, 240
 21 [Underlines added]

22 Word "resident" has many meanings in law, largely determined by statutory context in which it is used. Kelm v.
 23 Carlson, C.A.Ohio, 473, F.2d. 1267, 1271 [Underline added]

24 Did you notice the distinct use of "the State" in the above definition? That was no accident. Below are a few clues to its

26 26 U.S.C. Sec. 7701\(a\)\(10\): State

27 The term "State" shall be construed to include the District of Columbia, where such construction is necessary to

30 [8 U.S.C. Sec. 1101\(a\)\(36\): State \[citizenship and naturalization\]](#)

31 The term "State" includes the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, Guam, and the Virgin Islands of the United

34 8 U.S.C. Sec. 1101\(a\)\(36\)
 35

36 TITLE 4 - FLAG AND SEAL, SEAT OF GOVERNMENT, AND THE STATES
 37 CHAPTER 4 - THE STATES
 38 Sec. 110. Same; definitions

39 (d) The term "State" includes any Territory or possession of the United States.

40 The above cites are definitions of "State" from federal law, but even most state income tax statutes agree with this 41 definition! Below is the California Revenue and Taxation Code definition of "State":

42 California Revenue and Taxation Code

43 6017. "In this State" or "in the State" means within the exterior [outside] limits of the [Sovereign] state of 44 California and includes [only] all territory within these limits owned by or ceded to the United States

1 17018. "State" includes the District of Columbia, and the possessions of the United States.
2 [which don't include the 50 sovereign states but do include federal areas within those states]

3 The sovereign 50 Union states are NOT territories or possessions of the "United States". The states are sovereign over their
4 own territories. The "State" mentioned above in the California Revenue and Taxation Code is a federal enclave within the
5 exterior boundaries of the California Republic. People living within these areas are "residents" under the Internal Revenue
6 Code and in that condition, they live in the "federal zone".

7 The document upon which the founders wrote our Constitution, and which is mentioned in Article 1, Section 8, Clause 10,
8 confirms that the term "resident" refers ONLY to aliens domiciled within the territory of a nation. Below is what it says in
9 Book 1, Chapter 19, section 213, page 87:

10 "Residents, as distinguished from citizens, are aliens who are permitted to take up a permanent abode in the
11 country. Being bound to the society by reason of their dwelling in it, they are subject to its laws so long as they
12 remain there, and, being protected by it, they must defend it, although they do not enjoy all the rights of citizens.
13 They have only certain privileges which the law, or custom, gives them. Permanent residents are those who
14 have been given the right of perpetual residence. They are a sort of citizen of a less privileged character, and 15 are subject to the society without enjoying all its advantages. Their children succeed to their status; for the

19 <http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/CitesByTopic/Resident-LawOfNations.pdf>

20 4.11.2 You're NOT a STATUTORY "resident" if you were born or naturalized in America and are domiciled in a 21 state of the Union protected by the Constitution

22 There is much which can be said about our earlier legally acceptable definition of the term "resident" from Black's Law
23 Dictionary, but one thing which is perfectly clear, nowhere does it say a word about a "resident" being a Citizen, of 24 anything. As a matter of fact if you are not a citizen, then there is only one other thing you can be, and that is an alien. It
25 does not matter what other name they might decide to call it. Here then is an example of its usage:

26 Let's say, for whatever reason, you move to France for a time. First, it is obvious you are an alien to France. Right? After 27 having moved to France you then become a resident of France.

28 Why are you a resident of France? Because you are now living there, but you still are not a citizen. Why are you not a
29 citizen of France? Because you are an alien. So, it goes that a resident is an alien. Why? Because he is not a citizen,
30 hence the term resident alien. Get it?

31 Now, the question becomes: what are you when you answer to the question "are you a resident of the state of Illinois?" like
32 we do when we go to the Motor Vehicle Dept. Are you not declaring that you are an privileged person domiciled on 33 federal territory or representing an office domiciled on federal territory and therefore devoid of rights? Well that is exactly
34 what you are doing. Why is this important? Because, by either wrongfully declaring your domicile or citizenship or 35 signing up for franchises only available to those who are ALREADY public offices in the government, we are surrendering
36 all of our constitutional rights. [Whoops]

37 So, if you are a Citizen of any one of the several states of the Union, then you are not an alien and therefore not a 38 "resident". You then have your full Constitutional Rights, which includes the Right to "Liberty", which is the Right to 39 travel FREELY amongst the several States, untaxed and unlicensed.

40 You simply cannot regulate a Right. If you could it wouldn't be a Right, it would be a privilege. Our Creator granted these 41 Rights to us, and no man or government can legislate or regulate an (unalienable) Right. The government can only legislate
42 and regulate the exercise of benefits offered by their "statutes", which can only offer immunities and privileges, but not
43 bona fide Rights. Hence all the trickery to coerce you into saying you are something you are not.

44 We must stop looking to Webster's Dictionary for the legal definitions. Buy a copy of Black's Law Dictionary – it is there
45 that you will find a whole new world of meaning. The biggest trick of all has been to redefine common, every day terms to

1 mean something else within the statute-laws, and you didn't know they did it [to you], did you.. that is, until you read this
2 book?

3 *"The sovereignty has been transferred from one man to the collective body of the people - and he who before
4 was a 'subject of the king' is now 'a citizen of the State.'"*
5 [State v. Manuel, North Carolina, Vol. 20, Page 121 (1838)] [Underline added]

6 Think about it. The Constitution talks about Citizens. Why then do state governments feel the need to change it to 7 "residents"? It just seems that to be clear and unambiguous, they would have used the same words and phrases already
8 understood and accepted and stated as part of the Constitution and the Bill of Rights.

9 Oh, by the way, here is the definition of a resident alien:

10 Resident alien. "One, not yet a citizen of this country, who has come into the country from another with the 11 intent to abandon his former citizenship and to reside here."
12 [Black's Law Dictionary Sixth Edition, p. 1309, underlines added]

13 Remember the phrase "transitory in nature" in the above definition of a resident? The nature part is the Creator. As a child
14 of God we are merely traveling through life ("Liberty"), hopefully on our way to the great beyond, which is the transitory
15 part. But, if you claim to be a "resident" you are not a child of God and therefore not a Sovereign American of the State,
16 and therefore an alien of God, who has NO CONSTITUTIONAL RIGHTS. This is accomplished when we accept the term
17 "person" as underlined in the above definition of the term "resident", and as you will also come to realize, this too is a trick
18 to coerce you into subjection to government regulation.

19 4.11.3 You're not a STATUTORY "citizen" under the Internal Revenue Code<sup>132</sup>

20 *"Unless the defendant can prove he is not a citizen of the United States** [under 8 U.S.C. §1401 and NOT the 21 constitution], the IRS has the right to inquire and determine a tax liability."*
22 [U.S. v. Slater, 545 Fed.Supp. 179,182 (1982).]

23 There are TWO contexts in which one may be a "citizen", and these two contexts are mutually exclusive and not 24 overlapping:

- 25 1. Statutory: Relies on statutory definitions of "United States", which mean federal territory that is no part of any state of 26 the Union.
- 27 2. Constitutional. Relies on the Constitutional meaning of "United States", which means states of the Union and excludes 28 federal territory.

29 Within the field of citizenship, CONTEXT is everything in discerning the meaning of geographical terms. By "context",
30 we mean ONE of the two contexts as indicated above:

31 *"Citizenship of the United States is defined by the Fourteenth Amendment and federal statutes, but the 32 requirements for citizenship of a state generally depend not upon 33 definition but the constitutional or statutory context in which the term is 34 used. Risewick v. Davis, 19 Md. 82, 93 (1862); Halaby v. Board of 35 Directors of University of Cincinnati, 162 Ohio St. 290, 293, 123 N.E.2d 36 *3 (1954) and authorities therein cited.

37 *The decisions illustrate the diversity of the term's usage. In Field v. Adreon, 7 Md. 209 (1854), our 38 predecessors held that an unnaturalized foreigner, residing and doing business in this State, was a citizen of 39 Maryland within the meaning of the attachment laws. The Court held that the absconding debtor was a citizen
40 of the State for commercial or business purposes, although not necessarily for political purposes. Dorsey v.
41 Kyle, 30 Md. 512, 518 (1869), is to the same effect. Judge Alvey, for the Court, said in that case, that 'the term
42 citizen, used in the formula of the affidavit prescribed by the 4th section of the Article of the Code referred to, is

Other jurisdictions have equated residence with citizenship of the state for political and other non-commercial purposes. In re Wehlitz, 16 Wis. 443, 446 (1863), held that the Wisconsin statute designating 'all able-bodied, white, male citizens' as subject to enrollment in the militia included an unnaturalized citizen who was a resident of the state. 'Under our complex system of government,' the court said, 'there may be a citizen of a state, who is not a citizen of the United States in the full sense of the term.' McKenzie v. Murphy, 24 Ark. 155, 159 (1863), held that an alien, domiciled in the state for over ten years, was entitled to the homestead exemptions provided by the Arkansas statute to 'every free white citizen of this state, male or female, being a householder or head of a family * * *.' The court said: 'The word 'citizen' is often used in common conversation and writing, as meaning only an inhabitant, a resident of a town, state, or county, without any implication of political or civil privileges; and we think it is so used in our constitution.' Halaby v. Board of Directors of University, supra, involved the application of a statute which provided free university instruction to citizens of the municipality in which the university is located. The court held that the plaintiff, an alien minor whose parents were residents of and conducted a business in the city, was entitled to the benefits of that statute, saying: 'It is to be observed that the term, 'citizen,' is often used in legislation where 'domicile' is meant and where United States citizenship has no reasonable relationship to the subject matter and purpose of the legislation in question.'

Closely in point to the interpretation of the constitutional provision here involved is a report of the Committee of Elections of the House of Representatives, made in 1823. A petitioner had objected to the right of a Delegate to retain his seat from what was then the Michigan Territory. One of the objections was that the Delegate had not resided in the Territory one year previous to the election in the status of a citizen of the United States. An act of Congress passed in 1819, 3 Stat. 483 provided that 'every free white male citizen of said Territory, above the age of twenty-one years, who shall have resided therein one year next preceding' an election shall be entitled to vote at such election for a delegate to Congress. An act of 1823, 3 Stat. 769 provided that all citizens of the United States having the qualifications set forth in the former act shall be eligible to any office in the Territory. The Committee held that the statutory requirement of citizenship of the Territory for a year before the election did not mean that the aspirant for office must also have been a United States citizen during that period. The report said: 'It is the person, the individual, the man, who is [221 A.2d 435] spoken of, and who is to possess the qualifications of residence, age, freedom, &c. at the time he offers to vote, or is to be voted for * * *.' Upon the filing of the report, and the submission of a resolution that the Delegate was entitled to his seat, the contestant of the Delegate's election withdrew his protest, and the sitting Delegate was confirmed. Biddle v. Richard, Clarke and Hall, Cases of Contested Elections in Congress (1834) 407, 410.

There is no express requirement in the Maryland Constitution that sheriffs be United States citizens. Voters must be, under Article I, Section 1, but Article IV, Section 44 does not require that sheriffs be voters. A person does not have to be a voter to be a citizen of either the United States or of a state, as in the case of native-born minors. In Maryland, from 1776 to 1802, the Constitution contained requirements of property ownership for the exercise of the franchise; there was no exception as to native-born citizens of the State. Steiner, Citizenship and Suffrage in Maryland (1895) 27, 31.

The Maryland Constitution provides that the Governor, Judges and the Attorney General shall be qualified voters, and therefore, by necessary implication, citizens of the United States. Article II, Section 5, Article IV, Section 2, and Article V, Section 4. The absence of a similar requirement as to the qualifications of sheriffs is significant. So also, in our opinion, is the absence of any period of residence for a sheriff except that he shall have been a citizen of the State for five years. The Governor, Judges and Attorney General in addition to being citizens of the State and qualified voters, must have been a resident of the State for various periods. The conjunction of the requisite period of residence with state citizenship in the qualifications for sheriff strongly indicates that, as in the authorities above referred to, state citizenship, as used in the constitutional qualifications for this office, was meant to be synonymous with domicile, and that citizenship of the United States is not required, even by implication, as a qualification for this office. The office of sheriff, under our Constitution, is ministerial in nature; a sheriff's function and province is to execute duties prescribed by law. See Buckeye Dev. Corp. v. Brown & Schilling, Inc., Md., 220 A.2d. 922, filed June 23, 1966 and the concurring opinion of Le Grand, C. J. in Mayor & City Council of Baltimore v. State, ex rel. Bd. of Police, 15 Md. 376, 470, 488-490 (1860).

It may well be that the phrase, 'a citizen of the State,' as used in the constitutional provisions as to qualifications, implies that a sheriff cannot owe allegiance to another nation. By the naturalization act of 1779, the Legislature provided that, to become a citizen of Maryland, an alien must swear allegiance to the State. The oath or affirmation provided that the applicant renounced allegiance 'to any king or prince, or any other State or Government.' Act of July, 1779, Ch. VI; Steiner, op. cit. 15. In this case, on the admitted facts, there can be no question of the appellant's undivided allegiance.

The court below rested its decision on its conclusion that, under the Fourteenth Amendment, no state may confer state citizenship upon a resident alien until such resident alien becomes a naturalized citizen of the United States. The court relied, as does not Board in this appeal, upon City of Minneapolis v. Reum, 56 F. 576, 581 (8th Cir. 1893). In that case, an alien resident of Minnesota, who had declared his intention to become a citizen of the United States but had not been naturalized, brought a suit, based on diversity of citizenship, against the city in the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Minnesota under Article III, Section 2 of the United States Constitution which provides that the federal judicial power shall extend to 'Controversies between * * * a State, or the Citizens thereof, and foreign States, Citizens or Subjects.' At the close of the evidence, the defendant moved to dismiss the action for want of jurisdiction, on the [221 A.2d 436] ground that the evidence failed to establish the allegation that the plaintiff was an alien. The court denied the motion, the plaintiff recovered judgment, and the defendant claimed error in the ruling on jurisdiction. The Circuit Court of Appeals affirmed. Judge Sanborn, for the court, stated that even though the plaintiff were a citizen of the state, that fact could not enlarge or restrict the jurisdiction of the federal courts over controversies between aliens and citizens of the state. The court said: 'It is not in the power of a state to denationalize a foreign subject who has not complied with the federal naturalization laws, and constitute him a citizen of the United States or of a state, so as to deprive the federal courts of jurisdiction * * *.'

Reum dealt only with the question of jurisdiction of federal courts under the diversity of citizenship clause of the federal Constitution. That a state cannot affect that jurisdiction by granting state citizenship to an unnaturalized alien does not mean it cannot make an alien a state citizen for other purposes. Under the Fourteenth Amendment all persons born or naturalized in the United States are citizens of the United States and of the state in which they reside, but we find nothing in Reum of any other case which requires that a citizen of a state must also be a citizen of the United States, if no question of federal rights or jurisdictions is involved. As the authorities referred to in the first portion of this opinion evidence, the law is to the contrary.

Absent any unconstitutional discrimination, a state has the right to extend qualification for state office to its citizens, even though they are not citizens of the United States. This, we have found, is what Maryland has done in fixing the constitutional qualifications for the office of sheriff. The appellant meets the qualifications which our Constitution provides."

The confusion over citizenship prevalent today is caused by a deliberate confusion of the above two contexts with each other so as to make every American appear to be a statutory citizen and therefore an public officer of the "United States Inc" government corporation. This fact was first identified by the U.S. Supreme Court as follows:

"Under our own systems of polity, the term 'citizen', implying the same or similar relations to the government and to society which appertain to the term, 'subject' in England, is familiar to all. Under either system, the term used is designed to apply to man in his individual character and to his natural capacities -- to a being or agent [PUBLIC OFFICER!] possessing social and political rights and sustaining social, political, and moral obligations. It is in this acceptance only, therefore, that the term 'citizen', in the article of the Constitution, can be received and understood. When distributing the judicial power, that article extends it to controversies between 'citizens' of different states. This must mean the natural physical beings composing those separate communities, and can by no violence of interpretation be made to signify artificial, incorporeal, theoretical, and invisible creations. A corporation, therefore, being not a natural person, but a mere creature of the mind, invisible and intangible, cannot be a citizen of a state, or of the United States, and cannot fall within the terms or the power of the above mentioned article, and can therefore neither plead nor be impleaded in the courts of the United States."

"Sir Edward Coke has declared, that a corporation cannot commit treason, felony, or other crime; neither is it capable of suffering a traitor's or felon's punishment, for it is not liable to corporeal penalties -- that it can perform no personal duties, for it cannot take an oath for the due execution of an office; neither can it be arrested or committed to prison, for its existence being ideal, no man can arrest it; neither can it be excommunicated, for it has no soul. But these doctrines of Lord Coke were founded upon an apprehension of the law now treated as antiquated and obsolete. His lordship did not anticipate an improvement by which a corporation could be transformed into a citizen, and by that transformation be given a physical existence, and endowed with soul and body too. The incongruities here attempted to be shown as necessarily deducible from the decisions of the cases of Bank of the United States v. Deveaux and of Cincinnati & Louisville Railroad Company v. Letson afford some illustration of the effects which must ever follow a departure from the settled principles of the law. These principles are always traceable to a wise and deeply founded experience; they are therefore ever consentaneous and in harmony with themselves and with reason, and whenever abandoned as guides to the judicial course, the aberration must lead to bewildering uncertainty and confusion."

The U.S. Supreme Court has held in Hoooven & Allison Co. v. Evatt, 324 U.S. 652 \(1945\) that there are THREE different meanings and contexts for the word "United States". Hence, there are THREE different types of "citizens of the United States" as used in federal statutes and the Constitution. All three types of citizens are called "citizens of the United States", but each relies on a different meaning of the "United States". The meaning that applies depends on the context. For instance, the meaning of "United States" as used in the Constitution implies states of the Union and excludes federal territory, while the term "United States" within federal statutory law means federal territory and excludes states of the Union. Here is an example demonstrating the Constitutional context. Note that they use "part of the United States within the meaning of the Constitution", and the word "the" and the use of the singular form of "meaning" implies only ONE meaning, which means states of the Union and excludes federal territory:

"As the only judicial power vested in Congress is to create courts whose judges shall hold their offices during good behavior, it necessarily follows that, if Congress authorizes the creation of courts and the appointment of judges for limited time, it must act independently of the Constitution upon territory which is not part of the United States within the meaning of the Constitution."
 O'Donoghue v. United States, [289 U.S. 516, 53 S.Ct. 740 (1933)]

The U.S. Supreme Court and lower courts have also held specifically that:

1. The statutes conferring citizenship in Title 8 of the U.S. Code are a PRIVILEGE and not a CONSTITUTIONAL RIGHT, and are therefore not even necessary in the case of state citizens.

 [Tuana v. U.S.A., Case No. 12-01143 (D.D.C., 2013)]

2. A citizen of the District of Columbia is NOT equivalent to a constitutional citizen. Note also that the "United States" as defined in the Internal Revenue Code, for instance, includes the "District of Columbia" and nowhere expressly includes states of the Union in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10). We therefore conclude that the statutory term "citizen of the United States" as used in 8 U.S.C. §1401 includes District of Columbia citizens and all those domiciled on federal territory "statutory citizens" and EXCLUDES those domiciled within states of the Union:

*"The 1st section of the 14th article [Fourteenth Amendment], to which our attention is more specifically invited, opens with a definition of citizenship—not only citizenship of the United States[***], but citizenship of the states. No such definition was previously found in the Constitution, nor had any attempt been made to define it by act of Congress. It had been the occasion of much discussion in the courts, by the executive departments and in the public journals. It had been said by eminent judges that no man was a citizen of the United States[***] except as he was a citizen of one of the states composing the Union. Those therefore, who had been born and resided always in the District of Columbia or in the territories, though within the United States[*], were not citizens."*

3. An the 8 U.S.C. §1401 "national and citizen of the United States** at birth" born on federal territory is NOT a CONSTITUTIONAL citizen mentioned in the Fourteenth Amendment when it said:

"The Court today holds that Congress can indeed rob a citizen of his citizenship just so long as five members of this Court can satisfy themselves that the congressional action was not 'unreasonable, arbitrary,' ante, at 831; 'misplaced or arbitrary,' ante, at 832; or 'irrational or arbitrary or unfair,' ante, at 833. My first comment is that not one of these 'tests' appears in the Constitution. Moreover, it seems a little strange to find such 'tests' as these announced in an opinion which condemns the earlier decisions it overrules for their resort to cliches, which it describes as 'too handy and too easy, and, like most cliches, can be misleading'. Ante, at 835. That description precisely fits those words and clauses which the majority uses, but which the Constitution does not.

The Constitution, written for the ages, cannot rise and fall with this Court's passing notions of what is 'fair,' or 'reasonable,' or 'arbitrary.' [ . . ]

*The Court today holds that the Citizenship Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment has no application to Bellei. The Court first notes that Afroyim was essentially a case construing the Citizenship Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment. Since the Citizenship Clause declares that: 'All persons born or naturalized in the United States * * * are citizens of the United States * * *,' the Court reasons that the protections against involuntary expatriation declared in Afroyim do not protect all American citizens, but only those 'born or naturalized in the United States.' Afroyim, the argument runs, was naturalized in this country so he was protected by the Citizenship Clause, but Bellei, since he acquired his American citizenship at birth in Italy as a foreignborn child of an American citizen, was neither born nor naturalized in the United States and, hence, falls*

outside the scope of the Fourteenth Amendment guarantees declared in Afroyim. One could hardly call this a generous reading of the great purposes the Fourteenth Amendment was adopted to bring about. While conceding that Bellei is an American citizen, the majority states: 'He simply is not a Fourteenth-Amendment-first-sentence citizen.' Therefore, the majority reasons, the congressional revocation of his citizenship is not barred by the Constitution. I cannot accept the Court's conclusion that the Fourteenth Amendment protects the citizenship of some Americans and not others. [ . . . ]

The Court today puts aside the Fourteenth Amendment as a standard by which to measure congressional action with respect to citizenship, and substitutes in its place the majority's own vague notions of 'fairness.' The majority takes a new step with the recurring theme that the test of constitutionality is the Court's own view of what is 'fair, reasonable, and right.' Despite the concession that Bellei was admittedly an American citizen, and despite the holding in Afroyim that the Fourteenth Amendment has put citizenship, once conferred, beyond the power of Congress to revoke, the majority today upholds the revocation of Bellei's citizenship on the ground that the congressional action was not 'irrational or arbitrary or unfair.' The majority applies the 'shock-the-conscience' test to uphold, rather than strike, a federal statute. It is a dangerous concept of constitutional law that allows the majority to conclude that, because it cannot say the statute is 'irrational or arbitrary or unfair,' the statute must be constitutional.

Since the Court this Term has already downgraded citizens receiving public welfare, Wyman v. James, 400 U.S. 309, 91 S.Ct. 381, 27 L.Ed.2d. 408 (1971), and citizens having the misfortune to be illegitimate, Labine v. Vincent, 401 U.S. 532, 91 S.Ct. 1917, 28 L.Ed.2d. 288, I suppose today's decision downgrading citizens born outside the United States should have been expected. Once again, as in James and Labine, the Court's opinion makes evident that its holding is contrary to earlier decisions. Concededly, petitioner was a citizen at birth, not by constitutional right, but only through operation of a federal statute. [Rogers v. Bellei, 401 U.S. 815 (1971)]

The Internal Revenue Code relies on the statutory definition of "United States", which means federal territory. The term "citizen" is nowhere defined within the Internal Revenue Code and is defined twice within the implementing regulations at 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1 and 26 C.F.R. §31.3121(e)-1 . Below is the first of these two definitions:

26 C.F.R. §1.1-1 Income tax on individuals

(c) Who is a citizen.

Every person born or naturalized in the United States and subject to its jurisdiction is a citizen. For other rules governing the acquisition of citizenship, see chapters 1 and 2 of title III of the Immigration and Nationality Act (8 U.S.C. 1401-1459). For rules governing loss of citizenship, see sections 349 to 357, inclusive, of such Act (8 U.S.C. 1481-1489), Schneider v. Rusk, (1964) 377 U.S. 163, and Rev. Rul. 70-506, C.B. 1970-2, 1. For rules pertaining to persons who are nationals but not citizens at birth, e.g., a person born in American Samoa, see section 308 of such Act (8 U.S.C. 1408). For special rules applicable to certain expatriates who have lost citizenship with a principal purpose of avoiding certain taxes, see section 877. A foreigner who has filed his declaration of intention of becoming a citizen but who has not yet been admitted to citizenship by a final order of a naturalization court is an alien.

Notice the term "born or naturalized in the United States and subject to its jurisdiction", which means the exclusive legislative jurisdiction of the federal government within the District of Columbia and its territories and possessions under Article 1, Section 8, Clause 17 of the Constitution and Title 48 of the U.S. Code. If they meant to include states of the Union, they would have used "their jurisdiction" or "the jurisdiction" as used in section 1 of the Fourteenth Amendment instead of "its jurisdiction".

"The 13th Amendment to the Constitution, prohibiting slavery and involuntary servitude 'within the United States, or in any place subject to their jurisdiction,' is also significant as showing that there may be places within the jurisdiction of the United States that are no part of the Union. To say that the phraseology of this amendment was due to the fact that it was intended to prohibit slavery in the seceded states, under a possible interpretation that those states were no longer a part of the Union, is to confess the very point in issue, since it involves an admission that, if these states were not a part of the Union, they were still subject to the jurisdiction of the United States.

Upon the other hand, the 14th Amendment, upon the subject of citizenship, declares only that 'all persons born or naturalized in the United States, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the United States, and of the state wherein they reside.' Here there is a limitation to persons born or naturalized in the United States, which is not extended to persons born in any place 'subject to their jurisdiction.'" [Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 (1901)]

 2 §1401, which we said earlier in section 4.11.3 and its subsections means a human being and NOT artificial person born
 3 anywhere in the country but domiciled in the federal United States**/federal zone, which includes territories or possessions
 4 and excludes states of the Union. These people possess a special "non-constitutional" class of citizenship that is not
 5 covered by the Fourteenth Amendment or any other part of the Constitution.

6 We also showed in section 4.11.4 that people born in states of the Union are technically not STATUTORY “citizens and
 7 nationals of the United States” under 8 U.S.C. §1401, but instead are STATUTORY “non-resident non-persons” with a
 8 legislative but not constitutionally foreign domicile under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21). The term "national" is defined in 8

10 (a) (21) The term "national" means a person owing permanent allegiance to a state.

11 In the case of "nationals" who are also statutory “non-resident non-persons” under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21), these are people
 12 who owe their permanent allegiance to the confederation of states in the Union called the "United States of America***"
 13 and NOT the "United States****", which is the government and legal person they created to preside ONLY over
 14 community property of states of the Union and foreign affairs but NOT internal affairs within the states..

15 The definition of “citizen of the United States” found in 26 C.F.R. §31.3121(e)-1 corroborates the above conclusions,
 16 keeping in mind that “United States” within that definition means the federal zone instead of the states of the Union.
 17 Remember: “United States” or “United States of America” in the Constitution means the states of the Union while “United 18 States” in federal statutes means the federal zone only and excludes states of the Union.

19 26 C.F.R. §31.3121(e)-1 State, United States, and citizen

20 (e)...The term 'citizen of the United States' includes a citizen of the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico or the Virgin
 21 Islands, and, effective January 1, 1961, a citizen of Guam or American Samoa.

22 Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, Guam, and American Samoa are all U.S. territories and federal “States” that are within the 23 federal zone. They are not “states” under the Internal Revenue Code. The proper subjects of Internal Revenue Code,
 24 Subtitle A are only the people who are born in these federal “States”, and these people are the only people who are in fact
 25 “citizens and nationals of the United States” under 8 U.S.C. §1401 and under 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1(c).

26 The basis of citizenship in the United States is the English doctrine under which nationality meant “birth within allegiance

29 “The supreme court of North Carolina, speaking by Mr. Justice Gaston, said: 'Before our Revolution, all free
 30 persons born within the dominions of the king of Great Britain, whatever their color or complexion, were 31 native-born British subjects; those born out of his allegiance were aliens.' Upon the Revolution, no other
 32 change took place in the law of North Carolina than was consequent upon the transition from a colony
 33 dependent on an European king to a free and sovereign [169 U.S. 649, 664] state.' 'British subjects in 34 North Carolina became North Carolina freemen;' and all free persons born within the state are born citizens of 35 the state.' The term 'citizen,' as understood in our law, is precisely analogous to the term 'subject' in the 36 common law, and the change of phrase has entirely resulted from the change of government. The 37 sovereignty has been transferred from the man to the collective body of the people; and he who before was a
 38 'subject of the king' is now 'a citizen of the state.'” State v. Manuel (1838) 4 Dev. & b. 20, 24-26. “
 39 [U.S. v. Wong Kim Ark, 169 U.S. 649 (1898)]

40 In our country following the victorious Revolution of 1776, the “king” was therefore replaced by “the people”, who are 41 collectively and individually the “sovereigns” within our republican form of government. The group of people within 42 whatever “body politic” one is referring to who live within the territorial limits of that “body politic” are the thing that you
 43 claim allegiance to when you claim “nationality” to any one of the following three distinctive political bodies:

- 44 1. A state the Union.
- 45 2. The country “United States”, as defined in our Constitution.
- 46 3. The municipal government of the federal zone called the “District of Columbia”, which was chartered as a federal 47 corporation under 16 Stat. 419 §1 and 28 U.S.C. §3002(15)(A).

Each of the three above political bodies have “citizens” who are distinctively their own. When you claim to be a “citizen” of any one of the three, you aren’t claiming allegiance to the government of that “body politic”, but to the people (the sovereigns) that the government serves. If that government is rebellious to the will of the people, and is outside the boundaries of the Constitution that defines its authority so that it becomes a “de facto” government rather than the original “de jure” government it was intended to be, then your allegiance to the people must be superior to that of the government that serves the people. In the words of Jesus Himself in John 15:20:

“Remember the word that I said to you, ‘A servant is not greater than his master.’”

The “master” or “sovereign” in this case, is the people, who have expressed their sovereign will through a written and unchangeable Constitution.

“The glory of our American system of government is that it was created by a written constitution which protects the people against the exercise of arbitrary, unlimited power, and the limits of which instrument may not be passed by the government it created, or by any branch of it, or even by the people who ordained it, except by amendment or change of its provisions.”
[Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244, 21 S.Ct. 770 (1901)]

This is a crucial distinction you must understand in order to fully comprehend the foundations of our republican system of government. Let’s look at the definition of “citizen” according to the U.S. Supreme Court in order to clarify the points we have made so far on what it means to be a “citizen” of our glorious republic:

“There cannot be a nation without a people. The very idea of a political community, such as a nation is, implies an [88 U.S. 162, 166] association of persons for the promotion of their general welfare. Each one of the persons associated becomes a member of the nation formed by the association. He owes it allegiance and is entitled to its protection. Allegiance and protection are, in this connection, reciprocal obligations. The one is a compensation for the other; allegiance for protection and protection for allegiance.”

“For convenience it has been found necessary to give a name to this membership. The object is to designate by a title the person and the relation he bears to the nation. For this purpose the words ‘subject,’ ‘inhabitant,’ and ‘citizen’ have been used, and the choice between them is sometimes made to depend upon the form of the government. Citizen is now more commonly employed, however, and as it has been considered better suited to the description of one living under a republican government, it was adopted by nearly all of the States upon their separation from Great Britain, and was afterwards adopted in the Articles of Confederation and in the Constitution of the United States. When used in this sense it is understood as conveying the idea of membership of a nation, and nothing more.”

“To determine, then, who were citizens of the United States before the adoption of the amendment it is necessary to ascertain what persons originally associated themselves together to form the nation, and what were afterwards admitted to membership.”

“Looking at the Constitution itself we find that it was ordained and established by ‘the people of the United States,’<sup>3</sup> and then going further back, we find that these were the people of the several States that had before dissolved the political bands which connected them with Great Britain, and assumed a separate and equal station among the powers of the earth,<sup>4</sup> and that had by Articles of Confederation and Perpetual Union, in which they took the name of ‘the United States of America,’ entered into a firm league of [88 U.S. 162, 167] friendship with each other for their common defence, the security of their liberties and their mutual and general welfare, binding themselves to assist each other against all force offered to or attack made upon them, or any of them, on account of religion, sovereignty, trade, or any other pretence whatever. <sup>5</sup>”

“Whoever, then, was one of the people of either of these States when the Constitution of the United States was adopted, became ipso facto a citizen—a member of the nation created by its adoption. He was one of the persons associating together to form the nation, and was, consequently, one of its original citizens. As to this there has never been a doubt. Disputes have arisen as to whether or not certain persons or certain classes of persons were part of the people at the time, but never as to their citizenship if they were.”

The thing to focus on in the above is the phrase “he owes allegiance and is entitled to its protection”. People domiciled in states of the Union have dual allegiance and dual nationality: They owe allegiance to two governments not one, so they are “dual-nationals”. They are “dual nationals” because the states of the Union are independent nations<sup>133</sup>:

Dual citizenship. Citizenship in two different countries. Status of citizens of United States who reside within a state; i.e., person who are born or naturalized in the U.S. are citizens of the U.S. and the state wherein they reside.
[Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 498]

Likewise, those people who live in a federal "State" like Puerto Rico also owe dual allegiance: one to the District of Columbia, which is their municipal government and which possesses the police powers that protect them, and the other allegiance to the government of the United States of America, which is the general government for the whole country. As we said before, Congress wears two hats and operates in two capacities or jurisdictions simultaneously, each of which covers a different and mutually exclusive geographical area:

1. As the municipal government for the District of Columbia and all U.S. territories. All "acts of Congress" or federal statutes passed in this capacity are referred to as "private international law". This political community is called the "National Government".
2. As the general government for the states of the Union. All "acts of Congress" or federal statutes passed in this capacity are called "public international law". This political community is called the "Federal Government."

Each of the two capacities above has different types of "citizens" within it and each is a unique and separate "body politic". Most laws that Congress writes pertain to the first jurisdiction above only. Below is a summary of these two classes of "citizens":

Table 22: Types of citizens

#	Jurisdiction	Land area	Name of "citizens"
1	Municipal government of the District of Columbia and all U.S. territories. Also called the "National Government"	"Federal zone" (District of Columbia + federal "States")	"Statutory citizens" or "citizens and nationals of the United States" as defined in 8 U.S.C. §1401
2	General government for the states of the Union. Also called the "Federal Government"	"United States of America " ( 50 Union "states" )	"Constitutional citizens", "nationals but not citizens of the United States" as defined in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21), "non-resident non-persons" under federal law

The U.S. Supreme Court recognized the above two separate political and legislative jurisdictions and their respective separate types of "citizens" when it held the following:

*"The 1st section of the 14th article [Fourteenth Amendment], to which our attention is more specifically invited, opens with a definition of citizenship—not only citizenship of the United States[***], but citizenship of the states. No such definition was previously found in the Constitution, nor had any attempt been made to define it by act of Congress. It had been the occasion of much discussion in the courts, by the executive departments and in the public journals. It had been said by eminent judges that no man was a citizen of the United States[***] except as he was a citizen of one of the states composing the Union. Those therefore, who had been born and resided always in the District of Columbia or in the territories, though within the United States[*], were not citizens. Whether this proposition was sound or not had never been judicially decided."*
[Slaughter-House Cases, 83 U.S. (16 Wall.) 36, 21 L.Ed. 394 (1873)]

Federal statutes and "acts of Congress" do not and cannot prescribe the STATUTORY citizenship status of human beings born in and domiciled in states of the Union and outside of the exclusive or general legislative jurisdiction of Congress. 8 U.S.C. §1408(2) comes the closest to defining their citizenship status, but even that definition doesn't address most persons born in states of the Union neither of whose parents ever resided in the federal zone. No federal statute or "act of Congress" directly can or does prescribe the citizenship status of people born in states of the Union because state law, and not federal law, prescribes their status under the Law of Nations.<sup>134</sup> The reason is because no government may write civil laws that apply outside of their subject matter or exclusive territorial jurisdiction, and states of the Union are STATUTORILY but not CONSTITUTIONALLY "foreign" to the United States government for the purposes of police powers and legislative jurisdiction. Here is confirmation of that fact which the geographical definitions within federal also CONFIRM:

"The States between each other are sovereign and independent. They are distinct and separate sovereignties, except so far as they have parted with some of the attributes of sovereignty by the Constitution. They continue to be nations, with all their rights, and under all their national obligations, and with all the rights of nations in every particular; except in the surrender by each to the common purposes and objects of the Union, under the Constitution. The rights of each State, when not so yielded up, remain absolute."

1 “Judge Story, in his treatise on the Conflict of Laws, lays down, as the basis upon which all reasonings on the
 2 law of comity must necessarily rest, the following maxims: First, ‘that every nation possesses an exclusive
 3 sovereignty and jurisdiction within its own territory’; secondly, ‘that no state or nation can by its laws directly
 4 affect or bind property out of its own territory, or bind persons not resident therein, whether they are natural
 5 born subjects or others.’ The learned judge then adds: ‘From these two maxims or propositions there follows
 6 a third, and that is that whatever force and obligation the laws of one country have in another depend solely 7 upon the laws and municipal regulation of the matter; that is to say, upon its own proper jurisdiction and polity,
 8 and upon its own express or tacit consent.’ Story on Conflict of Laws, §23.”
 9 [Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Co. v. Chambers, 73 Ohio.St. 16, 76 N.E. 91, 11 L.R.A., N.S., 1012 (1905)]

10 Congress is given the authority under the Constitution, Article 1, Section 8, Clause 4 to write “an uniform Rule of 11 Naturalization” and they have done this in Title 8 of the U.S. Code called the "Aliens and Nationality", but they were never
 12 given any authority under the Constitution to prescribe laws for the states of the Union relating to citizenship by birth
 13 rather than naturalization. That subject is, and always has been, under the exclusive jurisdiction of states of the Union.
 14 Naturalization is only one of two ways by which a person can acquire citizenship, and Congress has jurisdiction only over 15 one of the two ways of acquiring citizenship.

16 “The question, now agitated, depends upon another question; whether the State of Pennsylvania, since the 26th
 17 of March, 1790, (when the act of Congress was passed) has a right to naturalize an alien? And this must 18 receive its answer from the solution of a third question; whether, according to the constitution of the United
 19 States, the authority to naturalize is exclusive, or concurrent? We are of the opinion, then, that the States, 20 individually, still enjoy a concurrent authority upon this subject; but that their individual authority cannot be 21 exercised so as to contravene the rule established by the authority of the Union.

22 “The true reason for investing Congress with the power of naturalization has been assigned at the Bar: --It
 23 was to guard against too narrow, instead of too liberal, a mode of conferring the rights of citizenship. Thus,
 24 the individual States cannot exclude those citizens, who have been adopted by the United States; but they can
 25 adopt citizens upon easier terms, than those which Congress may deem it expedient to impose.

26 “But the act of Congress itself, furnishes a strong proof that the power of naturalization is concurrent. In the
 27 concluding proviso, it is declared, ‘that no person heretofore proscribed by any State, shall be admitted a
 28 citizen as aforesaid, except by an act of the Legislature of the State, in which such person was proscribed.’
 29 Here, we find, that Congress has not only circumscribed the exercise of its own authority, but has recognized
 30 the authority of a State Legislature, in one case, to admit a citizen of the United States; which could not be
 31 done in any case, if the power of naturalization, either by its own nature, or by the manner of its being vested
 32 in the Federal Government, was an exclusive power.”
 33 [Collet v. Collet, 2 U.S. 294, 1 L.Ed. 387 (1792)]

34 Many freedom fighters overlook the fact that the STATUTORY “citizen” mentioned in 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1 can also be a
 35 corporation, and this misunderstanding is why many of them think that they are the only proper subject of the Subtitle A
 36 federal income tax. In fact, a corporation is also a STATUTORY “person” and an “individual” and a “citizen” within the 37 meaning of the Internal Revenue Code.

38 “A corporation is a citizen, resident, or inhabitant of the state or country by or under the laws of which it was 39 created, and of that state or country only.”
 40 [19 Corpus Juris Secundum (C.J.S.), Corporations, §886 (2003); Legal encyclopedia]

41 Corporations, however, cannot be either a CONSTITUTIONAL “person” or “citizen” nor can they have a legal existence 42 outside of the sovereignty that they were created in.

43 “Citizens of the United States within the meaning of this Amendment must be natural and not artificial
 44 persons; a corporate body is not a citizen of the United States.<sup>14</sup>

 14 Insurance Co. v. New Orleans, 13 Fed.Cas. 67 (C.C.D.La. 1870). Not being citizens of the United States, corporations accordingly have been declared unable “to claim the protection of that clause of the Fourteenth Amendment which secures the privileges and immunities of citizens of the United States against abridgment or impairment by the law of a State.” Orient Ins. Co. v. Daggs, 172 U.S. 557, 561 (1869) . This conclusion was in harmony with the earlier holding in Paul v. Virginia, 75 U.S. (8 Wall.) 168 (1869), to the effect that corporations were not within the scope of the privileges and immunities clause of state citizenship set out in Article IV, Sec. 2. See also Selover, Bates & Co. v. Walsh, 226 U.S. 112, 126 (1912) ; Berea College v.

3 Consequently, the only corporations who are “citizens” and the only “corporate profits” that are subject to tax under
4 Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A are those that are formed under the laws of the District of Columbia, and not those under
5 the laws of states of the Union. Congress can ONLY tax or regulate that which it creates as a VOLUNTARY franchise,
6 and corporations are just such a franchise. Here is why:

7 “Now, a grant of corporate existence is a grant of special privileges to the corporators, enabling them to act for 8 certain designated purposes as a single individual, and exempting them (unless otherwise specifically provided)
9 from individual liability. The corporation being the mere creation of local law, can have no legal existence
10 beyond the limits of the sovereignty where created. As said by this court in Bank of Augusta v. Earle, ‘It must
11 dwell in the place of its creation and cannot migrate to another sovereignty.’ The recognition of its existence
12 even by other States, and the enforcement of its contracts made therein, depend purely upon the comity of those
13 States—a comity which is never extended where the existence of the corporation or the exercise of its powers 14 are prejudicial to their interests or repugnant to their policy.”
15 [Paul v. Virginia, 8 Wall. (U.S.) 168, 19 L.Ed. 357 (1868)]

16 In conclusion, you aren’t the STATUTORY “citizen” described in 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1 who is the proper subject of Internal 17 Revenue Code, Subtitle A, nor are you a “resident” of the “United States” defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) if you were
18 born in a state of the Union and are domiciled there. Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A only applies to persons domiciled
19 in the federal zone and payments originating from within the United States government. If you are domiciled in a state of 20 the Union, then you aren’t domiciled in the federal zone. Consequently, the only type of person you can be as a person born 21 in a state of the Union is:

- 22 1. A “national” as defined in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21).
- 23 2. A CONSTITUTIONAL "person".
- 24 3. A statutory “non-resident non-person”.
- 25 4. NOT any of the following:
  - 26 4.1. A STATUTORY "person".
  - 27 4.2. A statutory "national and citizen of the United States** at birth” as defined in 8 U.S.C. §1401.
  - 28 4.3. A "National but not citizen of the United States** at birth" under 8 U.S.C. §1408.
  - 29 4.4. "a person who, though not a citizen of the United States, owes permanent allegiance to the United States[**]"
  - 31 4.5. A "U.S.[**] non-citizen national" under 8 U.S.C. §1452.

32 We call the confluence of the above a "non-citizen national", not to be confused with anything in items 4.3 through 4.5
33 above. You only become a statutory "nonresident alien" as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(B) when you surrender your 34 PRIVATE, sovereign status and sovereign immunity by entering into contracts with the government, such as accepting a 35 public office or a government "benefit".

36 The reason most Americans falsely think they owe income tax and why they continue to illegally be the target of IRS
37 enforcement activity is because they file the wrong tax return form and thereby create false presumptions about their status
38 in relation to the federal government. IRS Form 1040 is only for use by resident aliens, not those who are non-residents
39 such as state nationals. The "individual" mentioned in the upper left corner of the form is defined in 26 C.F.R. §1.1441-
40 1(c)(3) as a STATUTORY but not CONSTITUTIONAL "alien" or a "nonresident alien". STATUTORY "citizens" are not 41 included in the definition and this is the only definition of "individual" anywhere in the I.R.C. or the Treasury Regulations.
42 It also constitutes fraud for a state national to declare themselves to be a resident alien. A state national who chooses a
43 domicile in the federal zone is classified as a statutory "U.S.** citizen" pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22)(A) and NOT a
44 "resident" (alien). It is furthermore a criminal violation of 18 U.S.C. §911 for a state national to impersonate a statutory
45 "U.S. citizen". The only tax return form a state national can file without committing fraud or a crime is IRS Form 1040NR,
46 and even then he or she is committing a fraud unless lawfully serving in a public office in the national government.

47 If you still find yourself confused or uncertain about citizenship in the context of the Internal Revenue Code after having 48 read this section, you might want to go back and reread the following to refresh your memory, because these resources are

Fourteenth Amendment

Some tax protesters argue that all Americans are citizens of individual states as opposed to citizens of the United States, and that the United States therefore has no power to tax citizens or impose other federal laws outside of Washington D.C. and other federal enclaves[7][20] The first sentence of Section 1 of the Fourteenth Amendment states:

All persons born or naturalized in the United States, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the United States and of the State wherein they reside.

The power to tax of the national government extends to wherever STATUTORY "citizens" or federal territory are found, including states of the Union. HOWEVER, those domiciled in states of the Union are NOT STATUTORY "citizens" under 8 U.S.C. §1401 or 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1 and the ONLY statutory "citizens" or STATUTORY "taxpayers" described in the Internal Revenue Code Subtitles A or C are in fact PUBLIC OFFICERS within the national but not state government. We contend that Wikipedia, like most federal judges and prosecutors, are deliberately confusing and perpetuating the confusion between STATUTORY and CONSTITUTIONAL contexts in order to unlawfully enforce federal law in places that they KNOW they have no jurisdiction. #### 4.11.4 Why all people domiciled in states of the Union are "non-resident non-persons"

As is explained in later in section 4.13, people born anywhere in America and domiciled or resident within states of the Union are all of the following:

1. Statutory status under federal law:

1.1. "nationals" or "state nationals" under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21).

1.2. Not statutory "nationals and citizens of the United States** at birth" under 8 U.S.C. §1401.

1.3. NOT "nationals but not citizens of the United States** at birth" under 8 U.S.C. §1408 if not born in a federal possession.

1.4. If they were born in a federal possession, they are

1.4.1. "national, but not a citizen, of the United States" under 8 U.S.C. §1452 if they are domiciled in a federal possession.

1.4.2. "national of the United States***" under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22)(B).

1 1.5. Statutory “non-resident non-persons” relative to the legislative/statutory jurisdiction of the national and not
 2 federal government under Titles 4, 5, 26, 42, and 50 of the United States Code, but only if legally or physically
 3 present on federal territory. Statutory “non-resident non-person” status is a result of the separation of powers
 4 between the state and federal governments. One is “legally present” if they are either consensually conducting
 5 commerce within the United States government, have the statutory status of “citizen” or “resident, or are filling a
 6 public office within said government.

7 2. Constitutional status:

8 2.1. “citizens of the United States***” per the Fourteenth Amendment.

9 2.2. Not “aliens”

Why You are a “national”, “state national”, and Constitutional but not Statutory Citizen, Form #05.006
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

11 The U.S. Supreme Court recognized that state citizens are non-resident non-persons under titles of the U.S. Code OTHER
 12 than Title 8 in the following ruling. What they are talking about below is welfare and franchise policy under Title 42 rather 13 than Title 8 of the U.S. Code. The same would be true for “persons” under Title 26, which is a “trade or business”
 14 franchise that uses a different statutory definition for “United States” than Title 8:

15 The fact that all persons, aliens and citizens alike, are protected by the Due Process Clause does not lead to the 16 further conclusion that all aliens are entitled to enjoy all the advantages of citizenship or, indeed, to the 17 conclusion that all aliens must be placed in a single homogeneous legal classification. For a host of 18 constitutional and statutory provisions rest on the premise that a legitimate distinction between citizens and
 19 aliens may justify attributes and benefits for one class not accorded to the other;<sup>[12]</sup> and the class of aliens is 20 *itself a heterogeneous 79*79 multitude of persons with a wide-ranging variety of ties to this country.<sup>[13]</sup>*

22 “Insofar as state welfare policy is concerned,<sup>24</sup> there is little, if any, basis for treating persons who are citizens
 23 of another State differently from persons who are citizens of another country. Both groups are noncitizens as 24 far as the State’s interests in administering its welfare programs are concerned. Thus, a division by a State of 25 the category of persons who are not citizens of that State into subcategories of United States citizens and
 26 aliens has no apparent justification, whereas, a comparable classification by the Federal Government is a
 27 routine and normally legitimate part of its business. Furthermore, whereas the Constitution inhibits every
 28 State’s power to restrict travel across its own borders, Congress is explicitly empowered to exercise that type of 29 control over travel across the borders of the United States.<sup>25</sup>

In addition to lawfully admitted aliens, there are, of course, aliens who have entered illegally.

[24] We have left open the question whether a State may prohibit aliens from holding elective or important nonelective positions or whether a State may, in some circumstances, consider the alien status of an applicant or employee in making an individualized employment decision. See Sugarman v. Dougall, 413 U.S. 634, 646-649; In re Griffiths, 413 U.S. 717, 728-729, and n. 21.

For tax purposes, state nationals domiciled in states of the Union are classified as "non-resident non-persons". They become "nonresident alien individuals" as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701\(b\)\(1\)\(B\) only if they occupy a public office within the national government.

26 U.S.C. §7701\(b\)\(1\)\(B\) Nonresident alien

An individual is a nonresident alien if such individual is neither a citizen of the [federal] United States nor a resident of the [federal] United States (within the meaning of subparagraph (A)).

Sec. 7701. - Definitions

(a) When used in this title, where not otherwise distinctly expressed or manifestly incompatible with the intent thereof—

(9) United States

The term "United States" when used in a geographical sense includes only the States and the District of Columbia.

(10) State

The term "State" shall be construed to include the District of Columbia, where such construction is necessary to carry out provisions of this title.

A "nonresident alien" is "nonresident" to the statutory "United States**" as defined in the Internal Revenue Code at 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10), which simply means that they do not maintain a domicile in the District of Columbia or any federal territory. We call this area the "federal United States", the "United States**", or simply the "federal zone" for short, in this book. Some payroll people and accountants will try to tell you that it is nonsense to expect that the words mean what they say in the Internal Revenue Code, but you can see that there is no way to interpret the definition of "United States" any way other than federal territory for the purposes of Subtitle A federal income taxes. The reason why this also must be the case is that the Constitution and federal law both confine all persons holding public office to reside in the District of Columbia:

U.S. Constitution, Article I, Section 8, Clause 17

To exercise exclusive Legislation in all Cases whatsoever, over such District (not exceeding ten Miles square) as may, by Cession of Particular States, and the Acceptance of Congress, become the Seat of the Government of the United States, and to exercise like Authority over all Places purchased by the Consent of the Legislature of the State in which the Same shall be, for the Erection of Forts, Magazines, Arsenals, dock-Yards and other needful Buildings;--And

Sec. 72. - Public offices: at seat of Government

All offices attached to the seat of government shall be exercised in the District of Columbia, and not elsewhere, except as otherwise expressly provided by law

A “nonresident” who does not hold a public office in the United States government is not a statutory “person” or “individual” and is not responsible for income tax withholding under Subtitle C of the Internal Revenue Code or for federal income taxes under Subtitle A of the Internal Revenue Code. People or entities not holding public office also cannot be levied upon under 26 U.S.C. §6331(a). Those in the IRS who argue with this perspective are violating the following rules of statutory construction and must produce the statute that EXPRESSLY INCLUDES what they want to include within 26 U.S.C. §6331(a):

 [Bailey v. Alabama, 219 U.S. 219 (1911)]

“Expressio unius est exclusio alterius. A maxim of statutory interpretation meaning that the expression of one thing is the exclusion of another. Burgin v. Forbes, 293 Ky. 456, 169 S.W.2d. 321, 325; Newblock v. Bowles, 170 Okl. 487, 40 P.2d. 1097, 1100. Mention of one thing implies exclusion of another. When certain persons or things are specified in a law, contract, or will, an intention to exclude all others from its operation may be inferred. Under this maxim, if statute specifies one exception to a general rule or assumes to specify the effects of a certain provision, other exceptions or effects are excluded.”
 [Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 581]

“When a statute includes an explicit definition, we must follow that definition, even if it varies from that term’s ordinary meaning. Meese v. Keene, 481 U.S. 465, 484-485 (1987) (“It is axiomatic that the statutory definition of the term excludes unstated meanings of that term”); Colautti v. Franklin, 439 U.S. at 392-393, n. 10 (“As a rule, a definition which declares what a term “means” . . . excludes any meaning that is not stated”); Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Lenroot, 323 U.S. 490, 502 (1945); Fox v. Standard Oil Co. of N.J., 294 U.S. 87, 95-96 (1935) (Cardozo, J.); see also 2A N. Singer, Sutherland on Statutes and Statutory Construction § 47.07, p. 152, and n. 10 (5th ed. 1992) (collecting cases). That is to say, the statute, read “as a whole,” post at 998 [530 U.S. 943] (THOMAS, J., dissenting), leads the reader to a definition. That definition does not include the Attorney General’s restriction -- “the child up to the head.” Its words, “substantial portion,” indicate the contrary.”
 [Stenberg v. Carhart, 530 U.S. 914 (2000)]

Those who refuse to produce legal evidence that the statutes expressly include in 26 U.S.C. §6331(a) what they want to include are:

1. Violating the constitutional requirement for reasonable notice. See:

Requirement for Reasonable Notice, Form #05.022
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

2. Abusing statutory presumptions to injure constitutional rights, which the U.S. Supreme Court held is a tort. See:

Presumption: Chief Weapon for Unlawfully Enlarging Federal Jurisdiction, Form #05.017

(1) [8:4993] Conclusive presumptions affecting protected interests:

A conclusive presumption [that a “code” is in fact a “law”, for instance] may be defeated where its application would impair a party’s constitutionally-protected liberty or property interests. In such cases, conclusive presumptions have been held to violate a party’s due process and equal protection rights. [Vlandis v. Kline (1973) 412 U.S. 441, 449, 93 S.Ct. 2230, 2235; Cleveland Bed. of Ed. v. LaFleur (1974) 414 U.S. 632, 639-640, 94 S.Ct. 1208, 1215-presumption under Illinois law that unmarried fathers are unfit violates process] [Federal Civil Trials and Evidence, Rutter Group, paragraph 8:4993, p. 8K-34]

To verify the conclusions of this section, we investigated a prominent payroll compliance education book and found the following comments in the book about “nonresident alien” tax withholding:

“In general, if an employer pays wages to nonresident aliens, it must withhold income tax (unless excepted by regulations), Social Security, and Medicare taxes as it would for a U.S. citizen. A Form W-2 must be delivered to the nonresident alien and filed with the Social Security Administration. Nonresident aliens' wages are subject to FUTA tax as well."

 [Quick Reference Guide to Payroll Compliance (2002), Payroll Technical Support Services, Panel Publishers, a Division of Aspen Publishers, Inc, p. IV-54. Available at: <http://panelpublishers.com/>]

The above is true, but very misleading. The above advice says “unless excepted by regulations”, and doesn’t mention what those regulations might be. It also uses the term “must be delivered and filed”. That is true for a public employer, but not a private employer, and it still does not obligate a private employee to do anything. The facts below clarify the comments above and the applicable regulations so that their meaning is crystal clear to the reader:

1. There are several regulations that DO exempt income of nonresident aliens. Most of these are documented later in section 5.6.13 and following. All income not “effectively connected with a trade or business in the United States” or earned from labor outside the District of Columbia or federal United States is exempt from inclusion as “gross income” by regulation and exempt from withholding, but of course the above book conveniently didn’t mention that:

26 C.F.R. §31.3401(a)(6)-1 Remuneration for services of nonresident alien individuals.

All remuneration paid after December 31, 1966, for services performed by a nonresident alien individual, if such remuneration otherwise constitutes wages within the meaning of §31.3401(a)-1 and if such remuneration is effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business within the United States, is subject to withholding under section 3402 unless excepted from wages under this section. In regard to wages paid under this section after February 28, 1979, the term “nonresident alien individual” does not include a nonresident alien individual treated as a resident under section 6013 (g) or (h).

(b) Remuneration for services performed outside the [federal] United States.

Remuneration paid to a nonresident alien individual (other than a resident of Puerto Rico) for services performed outside the [federal] United States is excepted from wages and hence is not subject to withholding.

Sec. 861. - Income from sources within the United States

(a) Gross income from sources within United States

The following items of gross income shall be treated as income from sources within the United States:

(3) Personal services

Compensation for labor or personal services performed in the United States; except that compensation for labor or services performed in the United States shall not be deemed to be income from sources within the United States if-

(A) the labor or services are performed by a nonresident alien individual temporarily present in the United States for a period or periods not exceeding a total of 90 days during the taxable year,

(B) such compensation does not exceed $3,000 in the aggregate, and

(C) the compensation is for labor or services performed as an employee of or under a contract with -

(i) a nonresident alien, foreign partnership, or foreign corporation, not engaged in trade or business within the United States, or

2. That word “trade or business” above is statutorily defined in the Internal Revenue Code as the “functions of a public office”. This public office essentially amount to a business partnership with the federal government, whether as a federal “employee” or otherwise. These observations confirm once again that the only proper subject of the income tax

1 are government employees who hold a public office.

2 26 U.S.C. Sec. 7701\(a\)\(26\) : Definitions

3 "The term 'trade or business' includes the performance of the functions of a public office."

5 Public Office:

8 (2) Fixed tenure of office, and

10 (4) Key element of such test is that "officer is carrying out a sovereign function".

11 (5) Essential elements to establish public position as 'public office' are:

12 (a) Position must be created by Constitution, legislature, or through authority conferred by legislature.

13 (b) Portion of sovereign power of government must be delegated to position,

14 (c) Duties and powers must be defined, directly or implied, by legislature or through legislative authority.

15 (d) Duties must be performed independently without control of superior power other than law, and

16 (e) Position must have some permanency."

17 [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1230]

- 18 3. 26 C.F.R. §31.3401(a)-1 mentioned above also says that a person can only earn "wages" if they are an "employee", 19 which is a person holding a "public office" in the United States government" under 26 C.F.R. §31.3401(c)-1.

- 29 4. Absent a person literally holding a "public office" in the United States government, then the only other way they can 30 earn "wages" is to have a voluntary withholding agreement in place called an IRS Form W-4. If they never 31 volunteered, then they don't earn "wages".

33 (a) In general.

34 Notwithstanding the exceptions to the definition of wages specified in section 3401(a) and the regulations
35 thereunder, the term "wages" includes the amounts described in paragraph (b)(1) of this section with respect

41 (a) In general.

42 An employee and his employer may enter into an agreement under section 3402(b) to provide for the 43 withholding of income tax upon payments of amounts described in paragraph (b)(1) of §31.3401(a)-3, made
44 after December 31, 1970. An agreement may be entered into under this section only with respect to amounts
45 which are includible in the gross income of the employee under section 61, and must be applicable to all
46 such amounts paid by the employer to the employee. The amount to be withheld pursuant to an agreement
47 under section 3402(p) shall be determined under the rules contained in section 3402 and the regulations

thereunder. See §31.3405(c)-1, Q&A-3 concerning agreements to have more than 20-percent Federal income tax withheld from eligible rollover distributions within the meaning of section 402.

5. If the private employer coerces the worker who is NOT a PUBLIC or statutory “employee” to sign an IRS Form W-4, that doesn’t count as “volunteering”, because in that instance, they had a choice of either starving to death or committing perjury under penalty of perjury on an IRS Form W-4. They would be committing perjury because they would be submitting a W-4 that misrepresented their status as a federal “employee” and also misrepresented the fact that they “volunteered”, when in fact they were simply coerced under threat of being fired or not being hired by their employer. Here is what Alexander Hamilton said on this subject:

“In the general course of human nature, A POWER OVER A MAN’S SUBSISTENCE AMOUNTS TO A POWER OVER HIS WILL.”
[Alexander Hamilton, Federalist Paper No. 79]

The tendency of employers to coerce their employees essentially into becoming liars just so they can feed their face may explain the following comment by Will Rogers:

“Income tax has made more liars out of the American people than golf.”
[Will Rogers]

6. The regulations say a nonresident alien with no earnings connected with a “trade or business” and which do not originate from federal territory is not subject to tax and not includible in “gross income”.::

Title 26: Internal Revenue
PART 1—INCOME TAXES
nonresident alien individuals
§ 1.872-2 Exclusions from gross income of nonresident alien individuals.

(f) Other exclusions.

Income which is from sources without [outside] the United States [federal territory per 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10)], as determined under the provisions of sections 861 through 863, and the regulations thereunder, is not included in the gross income of a nonresident alien individual unless such income is effectively connected for the taxable year with the conduct of a trade or business in the United States by that individual. To determine specific exclusions in the case of other items which are from sources within the United States, see the applicable sections of the Code. For special rules under a tax convention for determining the sources of income and for excluding, from gross income, income from sources without the United States which is effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business in the United States, see the applicable tax convention. For determining which income from sources without the United States is effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business in the United States, see section 864(c)(4) and §1.864-5.

Examining the above Quick Reference to Payroll Compliance \(2002\) book once again, we find the following comments:

“In some cases, an Internal Revenue Code (IRC) section or a U.S. tax treaty provision will exclude payments to a nonresident alien from wages. Such payments are not subject to the regular income tax withholding, so a Form W-2 is not required. Instead, the payments are subject to withholding at a flat 30 percent or lower treaty rate, unless exempt from tax because of a Code or treaty provision.”
[Quick Reference Guide to Payroll Compliance (2002), Payroll Technical Support Services, Panel Publishers, a Division of Aspen Publishers, Inc, p. IV-54. Available at: <http://panelpublishers.com/>]

The above comment is based on the content of 26 U.S.C. §871(a), which “appears” to impose a 30% flat rate on the “taxable income” of nonresident aliens not “effectively connected with a trade or business” in the United States, which we said means a “public office” in the United States government. As we said above, however, the underlying regulations at 26 C.F.R. §1.872-2 exclude earnings of nonresident aliens originating outside federal territory. Therefore, such persons would be “nontaxpayers” who do not need to withhold.

A number of other payroll reference books have exactly the same problem as this one. There are two other primary payroll reference books recommended by the American Payroll Association (APA), which are listed below, and both of them have exactly the same problem as the one we examined in this section.

1. The American Payroll Association \(APA\) publishes information for payroll clerks that is flat out wrong on the subject of nonresident withholding in the case of those not engaged in a “trade or business”. See the book entitled: The

1 Payroll Source, 2002; American Payroll Association; Michael P. O'Toole, Esq.; ISBN 1-930471-24-6.

- 2 2. The other main source of payroll trade publications is RIA, which also publishes flat out wrong information about the 3 subject of "nonresident aliens" not engaged in a "trade or business" in the following publications:
 4 Principles of Payroll Administration; 2004 Edition; Debra J. Salam, CPA & Lucy Key Price, CPP; RIA, 117 West
 5 Stevens Ave; Valhalla, NY 10595; ISBN 0-7913-5230-7.

6 Why don't most payroll industry compliance books properly or completely address nonresident aliens not engaged in a
 7 "trade or business" with no earnings from federal territory or the United States government so as to tell the WHOLE truth
 8 about their lack of liability to withhold or report? Below are some insightful reasons that you will need to be intimately
 9 familiar with if you wish to educate the payroll department at your job without making enemies out of them:

- 10 1. They are bowing to IRS pressure and taking the least confrontational approach. If they told the WHOLE truth, they 11 would probably be audited and attacked, so they omit the WHOLE truth from their manuals.
 12 2. They are trying to make the payroll clerk's job easy (cook book), so that everyone looks the same. Many payroll
 13 software programs don't know what to do about nonresident aliens who have no Social Security Number, which can 14 add considerably to the workload of the payroll clerk by forcing them to process these people manually.
 15 3. The IRS Form W-8BEN can be used to stop withholding, but those who use it for this purpose must read and 16 understand the regulations, which few payroll clerks have either the time or interest to do. The W-4, however, is the 17 easiest and most convenient to use for the payroll clerks.
 18 4. The IRS Publications conveniently do not discuss the loopholes in the regulations, because they want people to pay tax.
 19 Therefore, you must read, study, and understand the law yourself if you want to be free from the system, which few 20 Americans are willing or even able to do.
 21 5. Few Americans read or study the law and even among those who do bring up the issues raised in this book with payroll
 22 clerks and bosses. Therefore, those informed private employees who bring up such issues are looked upon as 23 troublemakers and brushed off by payroll and management personnel.
 24 6. Those payroll personnel who call the IRS to ask about the issues in this pamphlet are literally lied to by malicious and
 25 uninformed IRS personnel and told that they have to withhold at single zero rate. In fact, IRS employees are not even 26 allowed to give advice and the federal courts have said that you can be penalized for relying on ANYTHING the IRS
 27 says, including on the subject of withholding. Read the fascinating truth for yourself:

*Federal Courts and the IRS' Own IRM Say IRS is NOT RESPONSIBLE for Its Actions or Its Words or For Following
 Its Own Written Procedures*, Family Guardian Fellowship
<http://famguardian.org/Subjects/Taxes/Articles/IRSNotResponsible.htm>

28 Therefore, those non-resident non-persons who do not hold public office in the United States government and receive no
 29 payments from the U.S. government originating from federal territory do not earn taxable income, need not withhold, and
 30 need not file any federal tax return. Some people hear the word "nonresident alien" and assume that it means only
 31 "foreigners". But we must ask the question how a foreigner from another country can serve in a public office of the United 32 States government when the Constitution requires that the President can only be a "Natural Born Citizen" and senators and 33 representatives must be "Citizens of the United States****"?

34 U.S. Constitution, Article II, Section 1, Clause 5

35 No Person except a natural born Citizen, or a Citizen of the United States, at the time of the Adoption of this
 36 Constitution, shall be eligible to the Office of President; neither shall any person be eligible to that Office who 37 shall not have attained to the Age of thirty five Years, and been fourteen Years a Resident within the United
 38 States.

4 Based on the foregoing discussion, the income taxes collected under the authority of Subtitle A of the Internal Revenue
 5 Code are simply a federal public officer kickback program disguised to “look” like a lawful tax. But in fact, the legislative
 6 intent of the Sixteenth Amendment revealed by President Taft’s written address before Congress clearly shows the purpose
 7 of Subtitle A of the Internal Revenue Code as simply a tax on federal government “employees” and nothing more. This
 8 federal employee kickback program disguised as a legitimate “income tax” on everyone was begun in 1862 during the 9 exigencies of the Civil War and has continued with us since that day:

28 The Pharisees who wrote the rather deceptive 2002 Quick Reference Guide to Payroll Compliance manual above weren’t 29 telling a lie, but they also certainly left the most important points about tax liability of nonresident aliens undisclosed, and
 30 did not explain that people born in states of the Union are nonresident aliens under the tax code IF ANY ONLY IF they
 31 lawfully occupy an office in the United States government. This results in a constructive fraud and leaves the average
 32 reader, who is a “nonresident alien” and who was born in a state of the Union, with the incorrect presumption that he has a
 33 legal obligation to “volunteer” to participate in a corrupt and usurious federal “employee” kickback program. I would also 34 be willing to bet that if you called up the author of the above article and asked him why he didn’t mention all the other
 35 details in this section, he would tell you that if he told the truth, he would have his license to practice law or his CPA
 36 certification pulled by the IRS or by a federal judge whose retirement benefits depend on maintaining the fraudulent and 37 oppressive tax system we live under.

 10 [26 C.F.R. §1.1-1(a)(1)]

11 The statutory term “individual” includes ONLY “aliens” and “nonresident aliens” but not statutory “citizens. Therefore, a 12 “citizen” only becomes an “individual” when they are an “alien” or “nonresident alien”:

15 (3) Individual.

16 (i) Alien individual.

17 The term alien individual means an individual who is not a citizen or a national of the United States. See
 18 Sec. 1.1-1(c).

19 (ii) Nonresident alien individual.

20 The term nonresident alien individual means a person described in section 7701(b)(1)(B), an alien individual
 21 who is a resident of a foreign country under the residence article of an income tax treaty and Sec.
 22 301.7701(b)-7(a)(1) of this chapter, or an alien individual who is a resident of Puerto Rico, Guam, the 23 Commonwealth of Northern Mariana Islands, the U.S. Virgin Islands, or American Samoa as determined under 24 Sec. 301.7701(b)-1(d) of this chapter. An alien individual who has made an election under section 6013 (g) or 25 (h) to be treated as a resident of the United States is nevertheless treated as a nonresident alien individual for 26 purposes of withholding under chapter 3 of the Code and the regulations thereunder.

27 We must then ask ourselves WHEN can a statutory “citizen” (under 8 U.S.C. §1401 and identified in 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1(c))
 28 ALSO be statutory “resident” in the same place at the same time, keeping in mind that a “resident” is an ALIEN domiciled
 29 in a place under the law of nations:

30 “Residents, as distinguished from citizens, are aliens who are permitted to take up a permanent abode in the 31 country. Being bound to the society by reason of their [intention of] dwelling in it, they are subject to its laws
 32 so long as they remain there, and, being protected by it, they must defend it, although they do not enjoy all the 33 rights of citizenship. They have only certain privileges which the law, or custom, gives them. Permanent
 34 residents are those who have been given the right of perpetual residence. They are a sort of citizen of a less
 35 privileged character, and are subject to the society without enjoying all its advantages. Their children succeed

 38 added.]

39 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1(b) disproves the assertion that everything a person domiciled in any of the 50 states makes is statutory 40 “income” subject to tax, when it states that “All citizens of the United States, wherever resident,” are liable to tax. This is 41 because:

- 42 1. One cannot be a statutory “resident” without ALSO being a statutory “alien”. See 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(A).
- 43 2. “residence” is ONLY defined in the I.R.C. to include statutory “aliens” and NOT “citizens”. Nowhere is it defined to 44 include “citizens”. Therefore, a “citizen” cannot have a “residence” or be “resident” in a place without being a 45 statutory alien in relation to that place.

46 Title 26: Internal Revenue
 47 PART 1—INCOME TAXES
 48 nonresident alien individuals
 49 § 1.871-2 Determining residence of alien individuals.

(b) Residence defined.

An alien actually present in the United States who is not a mere transient or sojourner is a resident of the United States for purposes of the income tax. Whether he is a transient is determined by his intentions with regard to the length and nature of his stay. A mere floating intention, indefinite as to time, to return to another country is not sufficient to constitute him a transient. If he lives in the United States and has no definite intention as to his stay, he is a resident. One who comes to the United States for a definite purpose which in its nature may be promptly accomplished is a transient; but, if his purpose is of such a nature that an extended stay may be necessary for its accomplishment, and to that end the alien makes his home temporarily in the United States, he becomes a resident, though it may be his intention at all times to return to his domicile abroad when the purpose for which he came has been consummated or abandoned. An alien whose stay in the United States is limited to a definite period by the immigration laws is not a resident of the United States within the meaning of this section, in the absence of exceptional circumstances.

3. One cannot simultaneously be a statutory “citizen” and a statutory “alien” in relation to the same political entity at the same time. Therefore:
  - 3.1. More than one political entity must be involved AND
  - 3.2. Those who are simultaneously “citizens” and “aliens” must be outside the country and in a legislatively foreign country.
4. One can not have a civil status under the civil statutes of a place such as “citizen” or “resident” WITHOUT a DOMICILE in that place.
  - 4.1. This includes statutory “citizen” or statutory “resident”.
  - 4.2. This is a requirement of Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 17 and the law of domicile itself.

§ 29. Status

It may be laid down that the, status- or, as it is sometimes called, civil status, in contradistinction to political status - of a person depends largely, although not universally, upon domicile. The older jurists, whose opinions are fully collected by Story I and Burge, maintained, with few exceptions, the principle of the ubiquity of status, conferred by the lex domicilii with little qualification. Lord Westbury, in Udny v. Udny, thus states the doctrine broadly: "The civil status is governed by one single principle, namely, that of domicile, which is the criterion established by law for the purpose of determining civil status. For it is on this basis that the personal rights of the party - that is to say, the law which determines his majority and minority, his marriage, succession, testacy, or intestacy-must depend." Gray, C. J., in the late Massachusetts case of Ross v. Ross, speaking with special reference to capacity to inherit, says: "It is a general principle that the status or condition of a person, the relation in which he stands to another person, and by which he is qualified or made capable to take certain rights in that other's property, is fixed by the law of the domicile; and that this status and capacity are to be recognized and upheld in every other State, so far as they are not inconsistent with its own laws and policy." [A Treatise on the Law of Domicil, National, Quasi-National, and Municipal, M.W. Jacobs, Little, Brown, and Company, 1887, p. 89]

Therefore, the only practical way that a statutory “citizen” can ALSO be statutory “resident” under the civil laws of a place is when they are abroad as identified in 26 U.S.C. §911: Citizens or residents of the United States living abroad. That section of code, in fact, groups STATUTORY “citizens” and “residents” together because they are both “resident” when in a foreign country outside the United States* the country:

1. They are a statutory “citizen” under 8 U.S.C. §1401 if they were born on federal territory or abroad and NOT a constitutional state. See Rogers v. Bellei, 401 U.S. 815 (1971).
2. If they avail themselves of a “benefit” under a tax treaty with a foreign country, then they are also “resident” in the foreign country they are within under the tax treaty. At that point, they ALSO interface to the United States government as a “resident” under that tax treaty.

Moreover, there are two fairly instructive Revenue Rules that clarify the phrase "wherever resident" found in 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1(b) above. See Rev.Rul. 489 and Rev.Rul. 357 as follows:

"No provision of the Internal Revenue Code or the regulations thereunder holds that a citizen of the United States is a resident of the United States for purposes of its tax. Several sections of the Code provide Federal income tax relief or benefits to citizens of the United States who are residents without the United States for some specified period. See sections 911, 934, and 981. These sections give recognition to the fact that not all the citizens of the United States are residents of the United States."

1 “Sections 1.1-1(b) and 1.871-1 of the Income Tax Regulations provide that all citizens of the United States,
 2 wherever resident, and all resident alien individuals are liable to the income taxes imposed by the Internal
 3 Revenue Code whether the income is received from sources within or without the United States. See, however,
 4 section 911 of the Code. (Emphasis added.)”
 5 [Rev.Rul. 75-357, p. 5]

6 Being that Rev.Rul. 75-357 quotes 26 C.F.R. § 1.1-1(b) directly, and duly informs every reader to see 26 U.S.C. §911, we
 7 believe an examination of 26 U.S.C. §911 and its regulations is in order to locate the appropriate application of the 8 “wherever resident” phrase in 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1(b). See 26 U.S.C. §911(d)(1)(A) as follows:

9 (d) Definitions and special rules — For purposes of this section —

10 (1) Qualified individual — The term “qualified individual” means an individual whose tax home is in a 11 foreign country and who is —

12 (A) a citizen of the United States and establishes to the satisfaction of the Secretary that he has been a bona 13 fide resident of a foreign country or countries for an uninterrupted period which includes an entire taxable
 14 year.
 15 [26 U.S.C. §911(d)(1)(A)]

16 There you have it. The “citizen of the United states” must be a bona-fide “resident of a foreign country” to be a qualified 17 individual subject to tax.

18 Additionally, as we know, 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1(b) states:

19 “All citizens of the United States, wherever resident, are liable to the income taxes imposed by the Internal 20 Revenue Code whether the income is received from sources within or without the United States.”

21 The regulations for section 911 make the distinction between where income is received as opposed to where services are

23 26 C.F.R. §1.911-3 Determination of amount of foreign earned income to be excluded.

24 (a) Definition of foreign earned income.

25 For purposes of section 911 and the regulations thereunder, the term “foreign earned income” means earned 26 income (as defined in paragraph (b) of this section) from sources within a foreign country (as defined in 27 §1.911-2(h)) that is earned during a period for which the individual qualifies under §1.911-2(a) to make an 28 election. Earned income is from sources within a foreign country if it is attributable to services performed by 29 an individual in a foreign country or countries. The place of receipt of earned income is immaterial in 30 determining whether earned income is attributable to services performed in a foreign country or countries.

31 Note the phrase “foreign country” above. That phrase obviously does not include states of the Union. We are therefore 32 inescapably lead to the following conclusions based on the above analysis:

- 33 1. One cannot earn “income” as a statutory “citizen” under 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1(c), 26 U.S.C. §911, and 8 U.S.C. §1401
 34 unless they are abroad in a foreign country.
- 35 2. No statute EXPRESSLY imposes a tax upon statutory “citizens” when they are NOT “abroad”, meaning in a foreign 36 country. Therefore, under the rules of statutory construction, tax is not owed under ANY other circumstance:

 38 thing is the exclusion of another. Burgin v. Forbes, 293 Ky. 456, 169 S.W.2d 321, 325; Newblock v. Bowles,
 39 170 Okl. 487, 40 P.2d. 1097, 1100. Mention of one thing implies exclusion of another. When certain persons
 40 or things are specified in a law, contract, or will, an intention to exclude all others from its operation may be
 41 inferred. Under this maxim, if statute specifies one exception to a general rule or assumes to specify the effects
 42 of a certain provision, other exceptions or effects are excluded.”
 43 [Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 581]

- 44 3. A state citizen under the Fourteenth Amendment is NOT a statutory “citizen” under the Internal Revenue Code at 26
 45 C.F.R. §1.1-1(c), even when they are abroad. Rather, they are statutory “non-resident non-persons” when abroad. See 46 and rebut section 4.11.5 later and the following and answer the questions at the end of the following if you disagreed:

47 Why You are a “national”, “state national”, and Constitutional but not Statutory Citizen, Form #05.006
 48 <http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

- 1 4. Even when one is “abroad” as a statutory “citizen”, they can cease to be a statutory “citizen” at any time by:
- 2 4.1. Changing their domicile to the foreign country. This is because the civil status of “citizen” is a product of
- 3 domicile on federal territory, not their birth...AND
- 4 4.2. Surrendering any and all tax “benefits” of the income tax treaty. The receipt of the “benefit” makes them subject
- 5 to Internal Revenue Code Subtitle A “trade or business” franchise and a public officer in receipt, custody, and
- 6 control of government property, which itself IS the “benefit”.
- 7 5. It is a CRIME for a state citizen to claim the civil status of STATUTORY “citizen” under 8 U.S.C. §1401. That crime
- 8 is documented in 18 U.S.C. §911.
- 9 6. The claim that all state citizens domiciled in states of the Union are “citizens of the United States” under the Internal
- 10 Revenue Code and that they owe a tax on ANY of their earnings is categorically false and fraudulent.

11 Below is a table that succinctly summarizes everything we have learned in this section in tabular form. The left column

12 shows what you are now and the two right columns show what you can “elect” or “volunteer” to become under the

13 authority of the Internal Revenue Code based on that status:

14 Table 23: Convertibility of citizenship or residency status under the Internal Revenue Code

	“Individuals” (see 26 C.F.R. §1.1441-1(c)(3))
	“Alien” (see 26 C.F.R. §1.1441-1(c)(3)(i))	“Nonresident alien” (see 26 C.F.R. §1.1441-1(c)(3)(ii) and 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(B))
“citizen of the United States” (see 8 U.S.C. §1401)	“citizen” may unknowingly elect to be treated as an “alien” by filing 1040, 1040A, or 1040EZ form. This election, however, is not authorized by any statute or regulation, and consequently, the IRS is not authorized to process such a return! It amounts to constructive fraud for a “citizen” to file as an “alien”, which is what submitting a 1040 or 1040A form does.	No “citizen of the United States” can be a “nonresident alien”, nor is he authorized under the I.R.C. to “elect” to become one. Likewise, no “nonresident alien” is authorized by the I.R.C. to elect to become a “citizen of the United States” under 8 U.S.C. §1401.
“resident” (not defined anywhere in the Internal Revenue Code)	All “residents” are “aliens”. “Resident”, “resident alien”, and “alien” are equivalent terms.	A “nonresident alien” may elect to be treated as an “alien” and a “resident” under the provisions of 26 U.S.C. §6013(g) or (h).

15 4.12 The TWO types of “residents”: FOREIGN NATIONAL under the common law or GOVERNMENT

16 CONTRACTOR/PUBLIC OFFICER under a franchise

17 4.12.1 Introduction

18 As we pointed out earlier in section 4.13:

- 19 1. CONTEXT is extremely important in the legal field.
- 20 2. There are TWO main contexts in which legal terms can be used:
- 21 2.1. CONSTITUTIONAL or common law: This law protects exclusively PRIVATE rights.
- 22 2.2. STATUTORY: This law protects primarily PUBLIC rights and franchises.

23 CONTEXT therefore has a HUGE impact upon the meaning of the legal term “resident”. Because there are two main

24 contexts in which “resident” can be used, then there are TWO possible meanings for the term.

- 25 1. CONSTITUTIONAL or COMMON LAW meaning: A foreign national domiciled within the jurisdiction of the
- 26 municipal government to which the term “resident” relates. One can be a “resident” under constitutional state law and

- a “nonresident” in relation to the national government because their civil domicile is FOREIGN in relation to that government. This is a product of the Separation of Powers Doctrine, U.S. Supreme Court.
2. STATUTORY meaning: Means a man or woman who consented to a voluntary government civil franchise and by virtue of volunteering, REPRESENTS a public office exercised within and on behalf of the franchise. While on official duty on behalf of the government grantor of the franchise, they assume the effective domicile of the public office they are representing, which is the domicile of the government grantor, pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 17(b). For instance, the effective domicile of a state franchisee is within the granting state and the domicile of a federal franchisee is within federal territory.

Most of the civil law passed by state and federal governments are civil franchises, such as Medicare, Social Security, driver licensing, marriage licensing, professional licensing, etc. All such franchises are actually administered as FEDERAL franchises, even by the state governments. Men and women domiciled within a constitutional state have a legislatively foreign domicile outside of federal territory and they are therefore treated as statutory “non-resident non-persons” in relation to the national government. Once they volunteer for a franchise, they consent to represent a public office within that civil franchise and their civil statutory status changes from being a statutory “nonresident alien” (26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(B)) to being a statutory “resident” (26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(A)) in relation to federal territory and the national government under the specific franchise they signed up for.

Resident. “Any person who occupies a dwelling within the State, has a present intent to remain within the State for a period of time, and manifests the genuineness of that intent by establishing an ongoing physical presence within the State together with indicia that his presence within the State is something other than merely transitory in nature. The word “resident” when used as a noun means a dweller, habitant or occupant; one who resides or dwells in a place for a period of more, or less, duration; it signifies one having a residence, or one who resides or abides. Hanson v. P.A. Peterson Home Ass’n, 35 Ill.App.2d. 134, 182 N.E.2d. 237, 240.

Word “resident” has many meanings in law, largely determined by statutory context in which it is used. [Kelm v. Carlson, C.A.Ohio, 473, F.2d. 1267, 1271]
[Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1309]

Note the following critical statement in the above, admitting that sleight of hand is involved:

[Kelm v. Carlson, C.A.Ohio, 473, F.2d. 1267, 1271]”

1. A PHYSICAL or GEOGRAPHICAL place. This is the meaning that ignorant people with no legal training would naturally PRESUME that it means.
2. A LEGAL place, meaning a LEGAL PRESENCE as a “person” within a legal fiction called a corporation. For instance, an OFFICER of a federal corporation becomes a “RESIDENT” within the corporation at the moment he or she volunteers for the position and thereby REPRESENTS the corporation. Once they volunteer, Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 17(b) says they become “residents” of the government grantor of the corporation, but only while REPRESENTING said corporation:

IV. PARTIES > Rule 17.
Rule 17. Parties Plaintiff and Defendant: Capacity

(b) Capacity to Sue or be Sued.

Capacity to sue or be sued is determined as follows:

(1) for an individual who is not acting in a representative capacity, by the law of the individual's domicile;

(2) for a corporation, by the law under which it was organized; and

(3) for all other parties, by the law of the state where the court is located, except that:

(A) a partnership or other unincorporated association with no such capacity under that state's law may sue or be sued in its common name to enforce a substantive right existing under the United States Constitution or laws; and

(B) 28 U.S.C. §§ 754 and 959(a) govern the capacity of a receiver appointed by a United States court to sue or be sued in a United States court.

[SOURCE: <http://www.law.cornell.edu/rules/frcp/Rule17.htm>]

Sec. 7701. - Definitions

(a) When used in this title, where not otherwise distinctly expressed or manifestly incompatible with the intent thereof—

(4) Domestic

The term “domestic” when applied to a corporation or partnership means created or organized in the United States or under the law of the United States or of any State unless, in the case of a partnership, the Secretary provides otherwise by regulations.

It is also important to emphasize that ALL governments are corporations as held by the U.S. Supreme Court:

“Corporations are also of all grades, and made for varied objects; all governments are corporations, created by usage and common consent, or grants and charters which create a body politic for prescribed purposes; but whether they are private, local or general, in their objects, for the enjoyment of property, or the exercise of power, they are all governed by the same rules of law, as to the construction and the obligation of the instrument by which the incorporation is made. One universal rule of law protects persons and property. It is a fundamental principle of the common law of England, that the term freemen of the kingdom, includes ‘all persons,’ ecclesiastical and temporal, incorporate, politique or natural; it is a part of their magna charta (2 Inst. 4), and is incorporated into our institutions. The persons of the members of corporations are on the same footing of protection as other persons, and their corporate property secured by the same laws which protect that of individuals. 2 Inst. 46-7. ‘No man shall be taken,’ ‘no man shall be disseised,’ ‘without due process of law, is a principle taken from magna charta, infused into all our state constitutions, and is made inviolable by the federal government, by the amendments to the constitution.”
[Proprietors of Charles River Bridge v. Proprietors of Warren Bridge, 36 U.S. 420 (1837)]

Consequently, when one volunteers to become a public officer within a government corporation, then they acquire a “LEGAL PRESENCE” in the LEGAL AND NOT PHYSICAL PLACE called “United States” as an officer of the corporation. In effect, they are “assimilated” into the corporation as a legal “person” as its representative.

Earlier versions of the Treasury Regulations reveal the operation of the SECOND method for creating “residents”, which is that of converting statutory aliens into statutory residents using government franchises:

A domestic corporation is one organized or created in the United States, including only the States (and during the periods when not States, the Territories of Alaska and Hawaii), and the District of Columbia, or under the law of the United States or of any State or Territory. A foreign corporation is one which is not domestic. A domestic corporation is a resident corporation even though it does no business and owns no property in the United States. A foreign corporation engaged in trade or business within the United States is referred to in the regulations in this chapter as a resident foreign corporation, and a foreign corporation not engaged in trade or business within the United States, as a nonresident foreign corporation. A partnership engaged in trade or business within the United States is referred to in the regulations in this chapter as a resident partnership, and a partnership not engaged in trade or business within the United States, as a nonresident partnership. Whether a partnership is to be regarded as resident or nonresident is not determined by the nationality or residence of its members or by the place in which it was created or organized.

The key statement in the above is that the status of “resident” does NOT derive from either nationality or domicile, but rather from whether one is “purposefully and consensually” engaged in the FRANCHISE ACTIVITY called a “trade or business”. This is consistent with the Minimum Contacts Doctrine of the U.S. Supreme Court, which requires “purposeful availment” in order to waive sovereign immunity under the Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act (F.S.I.A.), 28 U.S.C. Part 4, Chapter 97:

“A foreign corporation engaged in trade or business within the United States is referred to in the regulations in this chapter as a resident foreign corporation, and a foreign corporation not engaged in trade or business within the United States, as a nonresident foreign corporation. A partnership engaged in trade or business within the United States is referred to in the regulations in this chapter as a resident partnership, and a partnership not engaged in trade or business within the United States, as a nonresident partnership. Whether a partnership is to be regarded as resident or nonresident is not determined by the nationality or residence of its members or by the place in which it was created or organized.”

Incidentally, we were the first people we know of who discovered the above mechanisms and as soon as we exposed them on this website, the above regulation was quickly replaced with a temporary regulation to hide the truth. Scum bags!

The deliberately confusing and evasive definition of “resident” earlier in Black’s Law Dictionary is trying to obfuscate or cover up the above process by inventing new terms called “the State”, which they then refuse to define because if they did, they would probably start the second American revolution and destroy the profitability of the government franchise scam that subsidizes the authors within the legal profession! They are like Judas: Selling the truth for 20 pieces of silver.

What we want to emphasize in this section is that:

1. The word “resident” within most government civil law and ALL franchises actually means a government contractor, and has nothing to do with the domicile or nationality of the parties.
2. The “residence” of the franchisee is that of the OFFICE he or she occupies as a statutory “person”, “citizen”, or “resident”, and not his or her personal or physical location.

Finally, if you would like to know more about how VOLUNTARY participation in government franchises makes one a “resident”, see:

Government Instituted Slavery Using Franchises, Form #05.030, Sections 6.3, 8, and 11.5.2
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

4.12.2 Definition of “residence” within civil franchises such as the Internal Revenue Code

The Treasury Regulations define the meaning of “resident” and “residence” as follows:

*Title 26: Internal Revenue
PART 1—INCOME TAXES
nonresident alien individuals
§ 1.871-2 Determining residence of alien individuals.*

(B) Residence defined.

*An alien actually present in the United States<sup>**</sup> who is not a mere transient or sojourner is a resident of the United States for purposes of the income tax.* Whether he is a transient is determined by his intentions with regard to the length and nature of his stay. A mere floating intention, indefinite as to time, to return to another country is not sufficient to constitute him a transient. If he lives in the United States and has no definite intention as to his stay, he is a resident. One who comes to the United States for a definite purpose which in its nature may be promptly accomplished is a transient but, if his purpose is of such a nature that an extended stay may be necessary for its accomplishment, and to that end the alien makes his home temporarily in the United States, he becomes a resident, though it may be his intention at all times to return to his domicile abroad when the purpose for which he came has been consummated or abandoned. An alien whose stay in the United States is limited to a definite period by the immigration laws is not a resident of the United States within the meaning of this section, in the absence of exceptional circumstances.

One therefore may only be a “resident” and file resident tax forms such as IRS Form 1040 if they are “present in the United States”, and by “present” can mean EITHER:

1. PHYSICALLY present: meaning within the geographical “United States” as defined by STATUTE and as NOT commonly understood. This would be the United States**, which we also call the federal zone. Furthermore:
  - 1.1. Only human “persons” can physically be ANYWHERE. These are called “natural persons”.
  - 1.2. Artificial entities, legal fictions, or other “juristic persons” such as corporations and public offices are NOT physical things, and therefore cannot be physically present ANYWHERE.
2. LEGALLY present: meaning that:

- 1 2.1. You have CONSENSUALLY contracted with the government as an otherwise NONRESIDENT party to acquire
 2 an office within the government as a public officer and a legal fiction. This can ONLY lawfully occur by availing
 3 oneself of 26 U.S.C. §6013(g) and (h) , which allows NONRESIDENTS to “elect” to be treated as RESIDENT
 4 ALIENS, even though not physically present in the “United States”, IF and ONLY IF they are married to a
 5 STATUTORY but not CONSTITUTIONAL “U.S. citizen” per 8 U.S.C. §1401, 26 U.S.C. §3121(e), and 26
 6 C.F.R. §1.1-1(c). If you are married to a CONSTITUTIONAL citizen who is NOT a STATUTORY citizen, this
 7 option is NOT available. Consequently, most of the IRS Form 1040 returns the IRS receives are FRAUDULENT
 8 in this regard and a criminal offense under 26 U.S.C. §§7206 and 7207.
- 9 2.2. The OFFICE is legally present within the “United States” as a legal fiction and a corporation. It is NOT 10 physically present. Anyone representing said office is an extension of the “United States” as a legal person.

11 For all purposes other than those above, a nonresident cannot lawfully acquire any of the following “statuses” under the 12 civil provisions of the Internal Revenue Code, Subtitles A through C because: 1. Domiciled OUTSIDE of the forum in a
 13 legislatively foreign state such as either a state of the Union or a foreign country; AND 2. Protected by the Foreign 14 Sovereign Immunities Act (F.S.I.A.), 28 U.S.C. Part 4, Chapter 97.

- 15 1. “person”.
 17 3. “taxpayer”.
 18 4. “resident”.
 19 5. “citizen”.

20 For more details on the relationship between STATUTORY civil statuses such as those above and one’s civil domicile, see:

Why Domicile and Becoming a “Taxpayer” Require Your Consent, Form #05.002, Section 11

21 4.12.3 “Resident” in the Internal Revenue Code “trade or business” civil franchise

23 26 U.S.C. §7701\(b\)\(1\)\(A\) Resident alien

24 (b) Definition of resident alien and nonresident alien

25 (1) In general

26 For purposes of this title (other than subtitle B) -

27 (A) Resident alien

28 An alien individual shall be treated as a resident of the United States with respect to any calendar
 29 year if (and only if) such individual meets the requirements of clause (i), (ii), or (iii):

30 (i) Lawfully admitted for permanent residence

31 Such individual is a lawful permanent resident of the United States at any time during such

33 (ii) Substantial presence test

34 Such individual meets the substantial presence test of paragraph (3).

37 Therefore, the terms “resident”, “alien”, and “resident alien” are all synonymous terms within the Internal Revenue Code.
 38 Most state income taxation statutes also use the same definition of “resident”, and therefore the same definition applies for 39 state income taxes as well.

QUESTION FOR DOUBTERS: If you believe we are wrong, then please show us a definition of the term “resident” within either the Internal Revenue Code or the implementing regulations that includes “citizens of the United States” as defined under 8 U.S.C. §1401. There simply isn’t one! You are not free to “presume” or “assume” that “citizens of the United States” are also “residents” without the authority of a positive law that authorizes it. We’ll also give you the hint, that even the Internal Revenue Code is neither “positive law” nor does it have the “force of law” for most people, so you can’t use it as legally evidence of anything. Presumptions are NOT legal evidence and violate due process of law when they become evidence without at least your consent in some form. To make this or any other assumption in a court of law would violate our right to “due process or law”, because “presumption” or “assumption” of anything in the legal realm is a violation of due process. Everything must be proven with evidence, and that which is neither law nor which is explicitly stated cannot be presumed.

The only way you can come under the jurisdiction of Subtitle A of the Internal Revenue Code is to meet one or more of the following criterias below:

1. A “U.S. person” domiciled within the “federal zone” as defined under 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(30):

Sec. 7701. - Definitions

(a)(30) United States person

The term “United States person” means -

(A) a citizen or resident of the United States,

(B) a domestic partnership,

(C) a domestic corporation,

(D) any estate (other than a foreign estate, within the meaning of paragraph (31)), and

(E) any trust if -

(i) a court within the United States is able to exercise primary supervision over the administration of the trust, and

(ii) one or more United States persons have the authority to control all substantial decisions of the trust.

The above “U.S. person” is technically either an “alien” or a federal corporation only. A corporation can also be an “alien” if it was incorporated outside of federal jurisdiction but has a presence inside the federal zone. Under 26 C.F.R. §301.6109-1, these are the only entities who are required to provide any kind of identifying number on their tax return! That regulation requires the furnishing of a “Taxpayer Identification Number” for these legal “persons”, but 26 C.F.R. §301.6109-1(d)(3) says that Social Security Numbers are not to be treated as “Taxpayer Identification Numbers”. Consequently, natural persons with a Social Security Number do not have to provide any kind of identifying number on their return because they aren’t the proper subject of Subtitle A of the Internal Revenue Code. See section 5.4.17 later for further details on this scandal.

2. A “nonresident alien” under 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1(a)(2)(ii) or 26 C.F.R. §1.1441-1(c)(3) who has income “effectively connected with a trade or business”, which means a political office in the United States government under 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26). See 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1(a)(2)(ii).

Under item 1 above, the term “citizen of the United States” is used in describing a “U.S. person”, but that “person” is technically only a federal corporation, as confirmed by the following:

1. The legal encyclopedia, Corpus Juris Secundum confirms that corporations are treated in law as “citizens of the United States”:

“A corporation is a citizen, resident, or inhabitant of the state or country by or under the laws of which it was created, and of that state or country only.”

[19 Corpus Juris Secundum (C.J.S.), Corporations, §886 (2003)]

2. The definition of “income” as including only “corporate profit” under our Constitution limits the entire Internal Revenue Code to corporations only. See section 5.6.5 later for complete details on this subject.

Natural persons (people) who are “citizens of the United States” under the provisions of 8 U.S.C. §1401 are born only in the District of Columbia or federal territories or possessions. Federal territories and possessions are the only “States” within the Internal Revenue Code as confirmed by 4 U.S.C. §110(d). These statutory “citizens of the United States” cannot legally be classified as “residents”/“aliens” under the Internal Revenue Code and are not authorized by the code to “elect” to be treated as one either. The reason is because the purpose of law is to protect, and a person cannot elect to lose their constitutional rights and protection, even if they want to! However, by filing an IRS form 1040 or 1040A, they in effect make this illegal election anyway, and the IRS looks the other way and does not prosecute such unintentional deceit because they benefit financially from it. The pronouncements of the U.S. Supreme Court also identify this kind of constructive fraud on the part of the IRS as an invalid election if this unwitting choice did not involve fully informed consent. Did you know that you were agreeing to be treated as an “alien” by the IRS when you signed and sent in your first Form 1040 or 1040A?:

1 "Waivers of Constitutional rights not only must be voluntary, but must be knowing, intelligent acts done with
 3 [Brady v. U.S., 397 U.S. 742 (1970)]

4 The reason Constitutional rights are being waived is because people who are "residents"/"aliens" within the federal zone
 5 have no constitutional rights in law. The only way to avoid this involuntary election is to instead either file nothing or to
 6 file a 1040NR form with the IRS instead of a 1040 or 1040A form. You will learn starting in the next section that people
 7 who are born in states of the Union are not "nationals and citizens of the United States** at birth" under 8 U.S.C. §1401,
 8 but are instead the equivalent of "nationals" under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21). They are also "nonresident aliens" under the 9 Internal Revenue Code if serving in a public office and non-resident non-persons if not serving in a public office in the 10 national government. "nonresident aliens" file only the 1040NR form if they file anything with the IRS. The rules for 11 electing to be treated as a "resident" or "resident alien" are found in IRS Publication 54: Tax Guide for U.S. citizens and 12 Resident Aliens Abroad. See the following sections for amplification on this subject: 5.5.2, 5.5.3, and 5.4.12.

IMPORTANT: If you were born in a state of the Union, NEVER, EVER file a 1040, 1040A, or 1040EZ form unless you want to throw your Constitutional rights in the toilet! If you determine that you must file a tax form with the IRS, then only send in a 1040NR form in order to preserve your status as a "national" under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) and "non-resident non-person" who is outside of federal jurisdiction! Nonresident aliens cannot be penalized under the Internal Revenue Code because they don't reside there! When you send in the 1040NR form, make sure to change the perjury statement at the end to put yourself outside of federal jurisdiction as follows:

"I declare under penalty of perjury under the laws of the United States of America in accordance with 28 U.S.C. §1746(1) that the foregoing facts are true, correct, and complete to the best of my knowledge and ability, but only when litigated with a jury in a court of a state of the Union and not a federal court."

You will learn later in section 5.4.5 that the IRS has no legal authority to institute penalties against natural persons because of the prohibition against Bills of Attainder found in Article 1, Section 10 of the Constitution, but they will try to illegally do it anyway. Since IRS likes to try to illegally penalize people for changing the "jurat" or perjury statement at the end of the 1040NR form, then you can accomplish the equivalent of physically modifying the words in the perjury statement by redefining the words in the statement or redefining the whole statement in its entirety in an attached letter. Physically changing the words in the statement is the only thing IRS incorrectly "thinks" they can penalize for, and especially if the return was completed and submitted outside of federal jurisdiction in a state of the Union and the perjury statement accurately reflects that fact. Remember that crimes can only be punished based on where they are committed, and if your perjury statement reflects the fact that you are outside of federal jurisdiction, then IRS can't penalize you no matter how hard they try or how many threats they make.

13 So being a "resident of the State" under federal statutes above makes you a nonresident alien in your own state and an
 14 "alien" under federal jurisdiction who is the proper subject of both state and federal income taxes codes! Because as a
 15 "resident of the State" you are presumed to reside inside the federal zone, you don't have any constitutional rights
 16 according to the U.S. supreme Court. Listen to the dissenting opinion from Justice Harlan in the case of Downes v. Bidwell,
 17 182 U.S. 244 (1901) which ruled that the federal zone doesn't have constitutional protections:

18 "The idea prevails with some, indeed it has found expression in arguments at the bar, that we have in this
 19 country substantially two national governments; one to be maintained under the Constitution, with all of its
 20 restrictions; the other to be maintained by Congress outside the independently of that instrument, by exercising
 21 such powers [of absolutism] as other nations of the earth are accustomed to.. I take leave to say that, if the
 22 principles thus announced should ever receive the sanction of a majority of this court, a radical and
 23 mischievous change in our system of government will result. We will, in that event, pass from the era of 24 constitutional liberty guarded and protected by a written constitution into an era of legislative absolutism.. It
 25 will be an evil day for American liberty if the theory of a government outside the supreme law of the land
 26 finds lodgment in our constitutional jurisprudence. No higher duty rests upon this court than to exert its full
 28 [Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 (1901)]

29 When you accept the false notion that you are "liable" for federal income taxes under Subtitle A of the Internal Revenue
 30 Code and subsequently file a 1040 tax return (bad idea!), you are admitting under penalty of perjury that you are an alien
 31 "individual" of your own country (not a "national" or "citizen") who lives in the federal zone. The only definitions of

1 “individual” found in 26 C.F.R. §1.1441-1(c)(3) and 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1(a)(2)(ii) confirm that the only people who are
 2 “individuals” in the context of federal income taxes are “aliens”/“residents” residing in the federal “United States” or
 3 “nonresident aliens”. That lie or mistake on the tax return you never should have submitted to begin with caused you to
 4 become the equivalent of a “virtual inhabitant” of the federal zone in law and from that point on you are treated as such by
 5 both the federal government and the state government, even if you don’t want to be and never intended to do this! Here is
 6 more proof showing that even if you weren’t located in the federal zone when you submitted the false 1040 return, you
 7 gave your tacit permission to be treated as a resident of the District of Columbia:

 9 Sec. 7701. – Definitions

10 (a)(39) Persons residing outside [the federal] United States

11 If any citizen or resident of the United States does not reside in (and is not found in) any United States judicial
 12 district, such citizen or resident shall be treated as residing in the District of Columbia for purposes of any 13 provision of this title relating to -

14 (A) jurisdiction of courts, or
 15 (B) enforcement of summons.

16 What the above means is that if you filed a 1040 or 1040A form, you are telling the federal government that you are an 17 “alien”/“resident” who lives in the federal zone and consequently, the courts will treat you like you have a domicile in the 18 District of Columbia, which we call the District of Criminals. A similar provision appears under 26 U.S.C. §7408\(d\):

 20 §7408. Action to enjoin promoters of abusive tax shelters, etc.

21 (d) Citizens and residents outside the United States If any citizen or resident of the United States does not reside
 22 in, and does not have his principal place of business in, any United States judicial district, such citizen or 23 resident shall be treated for purposes of this section as residing in the District of Columbia.

24 Here is what the 2003 IRS Published Products Catalog says about the proper use of the form 1040A on page F-15, and
 25 notice is says it is only for “citizens” and “residents”, neither of which describe those born in and inhabiting states of the 26 Union on land not under federal ownership:

35 Those who file that false 1040 form are admitting that they are living in the King’s Castle and from that point on, they 36 better bow down to the king as slaves by paying “tribute” with all their earnings! Important about the above is the fact that 37 “nationals” and “nonresident aliens” are not included in the phrase “citizens or residents”, because they are outside the 38 jurisdiction of the federal courts! One more big reason why we don’t want to be a “U.S. citizen” in the context of federal 39 statutes such as 8 U.S.C. §1401! That false 1040 tax return they submitted, which said “U.S. individual” at the top, became 40 a contract with criminals from the “District of Criminals” (the “D.C.” in “Washington D.C.”) to take themselves out of the 41 Constitutional Republic and out of the protections of the Bill of Rights. They united with or “married” Babylon the Great
 42 Harlot mentioned in Rev. 17 and 18 and they live where she lives: inside of a totalitarian socialist democracy devoid of 43 constitutional rights and predicated solely on the love of money and luxury. They declared themselves to be an “employee” of the Harlot, and the false W-4 form they submitted proves that, because the upper left corner says “employee”, and the only people who are statutory “employees” as defined in 26 U.S.C. §3401(c) work for the federal government. It is repugnant to the constitution, as held by the U.S. Supreme Court and therefore they can only be referring to PUBLIC “employees”. They have therefore joined the “Matrix” and become a socialist federal serf. Welcome, comrade!”

Who says we don’t live in a police state, and not many people even know about this because we have been so deceived by our public “dis-servants”. Can you see how insidious this lawyer deception is? The American people and our media are asleep at the wheel folks!...and it’s going to take a lot more to fix than blind and ignorant patriotism and putting an idiotic flag or bumper sticker on your car. That’s right: if you are a “resident of the United States” or of “the State”, then you’re a federal serf and a ward of the socialist government who is nonresident to his own state! You better to do what you’re told, pay your taxes, and shut up, BOY, or we’ll confiscate all your property, give you 40 lashes and send you to bed without dinner or a blanket. Watch out!

To summarize the preceding discussion of “resident”, for the purposes of taxation, one establishes that they are a “resident” of the federal zone by any of the following techniques:

1. Filing a form 1040 or 1040a or 1040EZ
2. Filling out a W-4 form, which is only for use by federal statutory “employees”, all of whom work only in the federal zone.
3. Claiming to be “U.S. citizen”, “U.S. resident”, or “U.S. person” on any federal form.

If you never did any of the above, then it can’t be said that you ever consented to participate in the federal income tax system and the federal government has no jurisdiction or proof of jurisdiction over you for the purposes of Subtitle A of the Internal Revenue Code. If they wrongfully proceed at that point over your objections by attempting unlawful collection and/or assessment actions against you in violation of 26 U.S.C. §6020(b) or the Constitution, then they:

1. Are involved in identity theft because they moved your legal identity under the I.R.C. to a physical place where you neither intend to live or actually live, which is the District of Columbia.
2. Are involved in:
  - 2.1. Racketeering in violation of 18 U.S.C. §1951.
  - 2.2. Extortion in violation of 18 U.S.C. §872.
  - 2.3. Conspiracy against rights in violation of, 18 U.S.C. §241.
3. Can and should be prosecuted individually for fraud in violation of 18 U.S.C. §1001, kidnapping in violation of 18 U.S.C. §1201, and all of the above crimes under both state and federal law.

4.12.4 “resident”=government employee, contractor, or agent

The discussion in the preceding section brings out a very subtle point we would like to further expound upon, which is that “residence” is created ONLY through the operation of private law and your right to contract. We allege that the term “permanent” found in the definition of “domicile” in the previous section really means “consent” to the jurisdiction of the government. Below is the proof, right from the definitions within Title 8 of the U.S. Code, which is entitled “Aliens and Nationality”:

§ 1101. Definitions

(a) As used in this chapter—

(31) The term “permanent” means a relationship of continuing or lasting nature, as distinguished from temporary, but a relationship may be permanent even though it is one that may be dissolved eventually at the instance either of the United States or of the individual, in accordance with law.

Note that the term “permanent” as used above has no relationship as to time, but instead can exist only in the presence of your voluntary consent. This is one of the implications of the Declaration of Independence, which states that “to secure

1 these rights, governments are instituted among men, deriving their JUST powers from the CONSENT of the governed.”
 2 What they are pointing out above is that what really makes the relationship “permanent” is your voluntary consent. This
 4 consenting to a “domicile” within the jurisdiction of a specific “state”:

5 “Thus, the Court has frequently held that domicile or residence, more substantial than mere presence in
 6 transit or sojourn, is an adequate basis for taxation, including income, property, and death taxes. Since the
 7 Fourteenth Amendment makes one a [STATUTORY] citizen of the state wherein he resides [IS DOMICILED],
 8 the fact of residence creates universally reciprocal duties [e.g. CONTRACTUAL DUTIES!!] of protection by 9 the state and of allegiance and support by the citizen. The latter obviously includes a duty to pay taxes, and
 10 their nature and measure is largely a political matter. Of course, the situs of property may tax it regardless of 11 the citizenship, domicile, or residence of the owner, the most obvious illustration being a tax on realty laid by 12 the state in which the realty is located.”
 13 Miller Brothers Co. v. Maryland, [347 U.S. 340 (1954)]

14 The only legitimate purpose of all law and government is “protection”. A person who selects or consents to have a 15 “domicile” or “residence” has effectively contracted to procure “protection” of the “sovereign” or “state” within its 16 jurisdiction. In exchange for the promise of protection by the “state”, they are legally obligated to give their allegiance and
 17 support. All allegiance must be voluntary and any consequences arising from compelled allegiance may not be enforced in 18 a court of law. When you revoke your voluntary consent to the government’s jurisdiction and the “domicile” or “residence”
 19 contract, you change your status from that of a “domiciliary” or “resident” or “inhabitant” or “U.S. person” to that of a

 22 [Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1498]

23 Note again the language within the definition of “domicile” from Black’s Law Dictionary found in the previous section
 24 relating to the word “transient”, which confirms that what makes your stay “permanent” is consent to the jurisdiction of the 25 “state” located in that place:

26 “Domicile. [ . . . ] The established, fixed, permanent, or ordinary dwellingplace or place of residence of a
 27 person, as distinguished from his temporary and transient, though actual, place of residence. It is his legal 28 residence, as distinguished from his temporary place of abode; or his home, as distinguished from a place to 29 which business or pleasure may temporarily call him. See also Abode; Residence.”
 30 [Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 485]

31 Since your Constitutional right to contract is unlimited, then you can have as many “residences” as you like, but you can 32 have only one legal “domicile”, because your allegiance must be undivided or you will have a conflict of interest and 33 allegiance.

34 “No one can serve two masters; for either he will hate the one and love the other, or else he will be loyal to the 35 one and despise the other. You cannot serve God and mammon.”
 36 [Matt. 6:24, Bible, NKJV]

37 Remember, “resident” is a combination of two word roots: “res”, which is legally defined as a “thing”, and “ident”, which 38 stands for “identified”.

39 Res. Lat. The subject matter of a trust or will. In the civil law, a thing; an object. As a term of the law, this*
 40 word has a very wide and extensive signification, including not only things which are objects of property, but
 41 also such as are not capable of individual ownership. And in old English law it is said to have a general
 42 import, comprehending both corporeal and incorporeal things of whatever kind, nature, or species. By “res,” 43 according to the modern civilians, is meant everything that may form an object of rights, in opposition to
 44 “persona,” which is regarded as a subject of rights. “Res,” therefore, in its general meaning, comprises actions
 45 of all kinds; while in its restricted sense it comprehends every object of right, except actions. This has reference
 46 to the fundamental division of the Institutes that all law relates either to persons, to things, or to actions.

47 Res is everything that may form an object of rights and includes an object, subject-matter or status. In re
 48 Riggle’s Will, 11 A.D.2d 51 205 N.Y.S.2d. 19, 21, 22. The term is particularly applied to an object, subject-
 49 matter, or status, considered as the defendant in an action, or as an object against which, directly, proceedings
 50 are taken. Thus, in a prize case, the captured vessel is “the res”; and proceedings of this character are said to 51 be in rem. (See In personam; In Rem.) “Res” may also denote the action or proceeding, as when a cause,
 53 [Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, pp. 1304-1306]

1 When you become a “resident” in the eyes of the government, you become a “thing” that is now “identified” and which is
 2 within their legislative jurisdiction and completely subject to it. Notice that a “res” is defined as the object of a trust above.
 3 That trust is the “public trust” created by the Constitution and all laws passed pursuant to it.

6 "Section 101. Principles of Ethical Conduct. To ensure that every citizen can have complete confidence in the

 30 financial gain from a discharge of their trusts.<sup>136</sup> That is, a public officer occupies a fiduciary relationship
 31 to the political entity on whose behalf he or she serves,<sup>137</sup> and owes a fiduciary duty to the public.<sup>138</sup> It has 32 been said that the fiduciary responsibilities of a public officer cannot be less than those of a private people, by whom and for whom all government exists and acts. And the law is the definition and limitation of power."

[Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U.S. 356 (1886)]

The implication is that you cannot be sovereign if you have a "domicile" or "residence" in any earthly place or in any place other than Heaven or the Kingdom of Heaven on Earth. If you choose a "domicile" or "residence" any place on earth, then you become a "subject" in relation to that place and voluntarily forfeit your sovereignty. This is NOT the status you want to have! A "resident" by definition MUST therefore be within the legislative jurisdiction of the government, because the government cannot lawfully write laws that will allow them to recognize or act upon anything that is NOT within their legislative jurisdiction. All law is territorial in nature, and can act only upon the territory under the exclusive control of the government or upon its franchises and contracts, which are "property" under its management and control. The only lawful way that government laws can reach beyond the territory of the sovereign who controls them is through explicit, informed, mutual consent of the individual parties involved, and this field of law is called "private law".

"Judge Story, in his treatise on the Conflicts of Laws, lays down, as the basis upon which all reasonings on the law of comity must necessarily rest, the following maxims: First 'that every nation possesses an exclusive sovereignty and jurisdiction within its own territory'; secondly, 'that no state or nation can by its laws directly affect or bind property out of its own territory, or bind persons not resident therein, whether they are natural born subjects or others.' The learned judge then adds: 'From these two maxims or propositions there follows a third, and that is that whatever force and obligation the laws of one country have in another depend solely upon the laws and municipal regulation of the latter; that is to say, upon its own proper jurisdiction and polity, and upon its own express or tacit consent.'" Story on Conflict of Laws §23.

The very same principles as government operates under with respect to "resident" also apply to Christianity as well. When we become Christians, we consent to the contract or covenant with God called the Bible. That covenant requires us to accept Jesus Christ as our Lord and Savior. This makes us a "resident" of Heaven and "pilgrims and sojourners" (transient foreigners) on earth:

"For our citizenship is in heaven, from which we also eagerly wait for the Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ"

[Philippians 3:20, Bible, NKJV]

[Ephesians 2:19, Bible, NKJV]

"These all died in faith, not having received the promises, but having seen them afar off were assured of them, embraced them and confessed that they were strangers and pilgrims [transient foreigners] on the earth."

[Hebrews 11:13, Bible, NKJV]

[1 Peter 2:11, Bible, NKJV]

For those who consent to the Bible covenant with God the Father, Jesus becomes our protector, spokesperson, Counselor, and Advocate before the Father. We become a Member of His family!

Jesus' Mother and Brothers Send for Him

While He was still talking to the multitudes, behold, His mother and brothers stood outside, seeking to speak with Him. Then one said to Him, "Look, Your mother and Your brothers are standing outside, seeking to speak with You."

But He answered and said to the one who told Him, "Who is My mother and who are My brothers?" 49 And He stretched out His hand toward His disciples and said, "Here are My mother and My brothers! For whoever does the will of My Father in heaven is My brother and sister and mother."

By doing God's will on earth and accepting His covenant or private contract with us, which is the Bible, He becomes our Father and we become His children. The law of domicile says that children assume the same domicile as their parents and are legally dependent on them:

The legal dependence they are talking about is God's Law, which then becomes our main source of protection and dependence on God. We as believers then recognize Jesus' existence as a "thing" we "identify" in our daily life and in return, He recognizes our existence before the Father. Here is what He said on this subject as proof:

Confess Christ Before Men

*"Therefore whoever confesses Me [recognizes My legal existence under God's law, the Bible, and acknowledges My sovereignty] before men, him I will also confess before My Father who is in heaven. But whoever denies Me before men, him I will also deny before My Father who is in heaven."
 [Matt. 10:32-33, Bible, NKJV]*

Let's use a simple example to illustrate our point in relation to the world. You want to open a checking account at a bank. You go to the bank to open the account. The clerk presents you with an agreement that you must sign before you open the account. If you won't sign the agreement, then the clerk will tell you that they can't open an account for you. Before you sign the account agreement, the bank doesn't know anything about you and you don't have an account there, so you are the equivalent of an "alien". An "alien" is someone the bank will not recognize or interact with or help. They can only lawfully help "customers", not "aliens". After you exercise your right to contract by signing the bank account agreement, then you now become a "resident" of the bank. You are a "resident" because:

1. You are a "thing" that they can now "identify" in their computer system and their records because you have an "account" there. They now know your name and "account number" and will recognize you when you walk in the door to ask for help.
2. They issued you an ATM card and a PIN so you can control and manage your "account". These things that they issued you are the "privileges" associated with being party to the account agreement. No one who is not party to such an agreement can avail themselves of such "privileges".
3. The account agreement gives you the "privilege" to demand "services" from the bank of one kind or another. The legal requirement for the bank to perform these "services" creates the legal equivalent of "agency" on their part in doing what you want them to do. In effect, you have "hired" them to perform a "service" that you want and need.
4. The account agreement gives the bank the legal right to demand certain behaviors out of you of one kind or another. For instance, you must pay all account fees and not overdraw your account and maintain a certain minimum balance. The legal requirement to perform these behaviors creates the legal equivalent of "agency" on your part in respect to the bank.
5. The legal obligations created by the account agreement give the two parties to it legal jurisdiction over each other defined by the agreement or contract itself. The contract fixes the legal relations between the parties. If either party violates the agreement, then the other party has legal recourse to sue for exceeding the bounds of the "contractual agency" created by the agreement. Any litigation that results must be undertaken consistent with what the agreement authorizes and in a mode or "forum" (e.g. court) that the agreement specifies.

The government does things exactly the same way. The only difference is the product they deliver. The bank delivers financial services, and the government delivers “protection” and “social” services. The account number is the social security number. You can’t have or use a social security number and avail yourself of its benefits without consenting to the jurisdiction of the “contract” that authorized its’ issuance, which is the Social Security Act found in Title 42 of the U.S. Code.

CALIFORNIA CIVIL CODE
 DIVISION 3. OBLIGATIONS
 PART 2. CONTRACTS
 CHAPTER 3. CONSENT

1589. A voluntary acceptance of the benefit of a [government benefit] transaction is equivalent to a consent to all the obligations [and legal liabilities] arising from it, so far as the facts are known, or ought to be known, to the person accepting.

Therefore, you can’t avail yourself of the “privileges” associated with the Social Security account agreement without also being a “resident” of the “United States”, which means an alien who has signed a contract to procure services from the government. That contract can be explicit, which means a contract in writing, or implicit, meaning that it is created through your behavior. For instance, if you drive on the roads within a state, that act implied your consent to be bound by the vehicle code of that state. In that sense, driving a car became a voluntary exercise of your right to contract.

A mere innocent act can imply or trigger “constructive consent” to a legal contract, and in many cases, you may not even be aware that you are exercising your right to contract. Watch out! For instance, the criminal code in your state behaves like a contract. The “police” are simply there to enforce the contract. As a matter of fact, their job was created by that contract. This is called the “police power” of the state. If you do not commit any of the acts in the criminal or penal code, then you are not subject to it and it is “foreign” to you. You become the equivalent of a “resident” within the criminal code and subject to the legislative jurisdiction of that code ONLY by committing a “crime” identified within it. That “crime” triggers “constructive consent” to the terms of the contract and all the obligations that flow from it, including prison time and a court trial. This analysis helps to establish that in a free society, all law is a contract of one form or another, because it can only be passed by the consent of the majority of those who will be subject to it. The people who will be subject to the laws of a “state” are those with a “domicile” or “residence” within the jurisdiction of that “state”. Those who don’t have such a “domicile” or “residence” and who are therefore not subject to the civil laws of that state are called “transient foreigners”. We will build extensively upon this concept further, in sections 5.4 through 5.4.4.5 later. This is a very interesting subject that we find most people are simply fascinated with, because it helps to emphasize the “voluntary nature” of all law.

4.12.5 Why was the statutory “resident” under civil franchises created instead of using a classical constitutional “citizen” or “resident” as its basis?

After looking at the “resident” government contractor franchise scam, we wondered why they had to do this instead of simply using a classical constitutional “citizen” or “resident” with a domicile within the territory protected by a specific government as the basis for franchises. After careful thought and research, we found that there are many reasons they had to do this:

1. The Constitution forbids what is called “class legislation” relating to constitutional “citizens” or “residents”. The reason is that it violates the requirement for equal protection and equal treatment that is at the heart of the Constitution. Governments are NOT allowed to treat any subset of constitutional citizens or residents differently, or confer or grant “benefits”, and by implication “franchises”, to any SUBSET of them. If participation is in fact voluntary, there is no way they could even offer franchises to constitutional citizens without favoring one group over another and thereby creating an unconstitutional “title of nobility”. Below is how the U.S. Supreme Court described this violation after the first income tax was enacted and declared UNCONSTITUTIONAL by the U.S. Supreme Court:

“The present assault upon capital is but the beginning. It will be but the stepping stone to others larger and more sweeping, until our political contest will become war of the poor against the rich; a war of growing intensity and bitterness. ‘If the court sanctions the power of discriminating taxation, and nullifies the uniformity mandate of the constitution,’ as said by one who has been all his life a student of our institutions, ‘it will mark the hour when the sure decadence of our present government will commence.’

The legislation, in the discrimination it makes, is class legislation. Whenever a distinction is made in the burdens a law imposes or in the benefits it confers on any citizens by reason of their birth, or wealth, or religion, it is class legislation, and leads inevitably to oppression and abuses, and to general unrest and disturbance in society.”

[Pollock v. Farmers Loan and Trust, 157 U.S. 429 \(1895\)]

2. It has always been unconstitutional to abuse the government’s taxing power to pay private individuals. Classical constitutional citizens and residents are inherently PRIVATE individuals.

“His [the individual’s] rights are such as existed by the law of the land long antecedent to the organization of the State, and can only be taken from him by due process of law, and in accordance with the Constitution. Among his rights are a refusal to incriminate himself, and the immunity of himself and his property from arrest or seizure except under a warrant of the law. He owes nothing to the public so long as he does not trespass upon their rights.”

Hence, the government cannot lawfully create any franchise “benefit” offered to PRIVATE constitutional citizens or residents that could be used to redistribute wealth between different groups of otherwise private individuals. For instance, they cannot tax the rich to give to the poor, as the U.S. Supreme Court indicated above and hence, cannot offer franchises to constitutional citizens or residents, or tie eligibility for the franchise to the status of constitutional citizen or resident.

“A tax, in the general understanding of the term and as used in the constitution, signifies an exaction for the support of the government. The word has never thought to connote the expropriation of money from one group for the benefit of another.”

[U.S. v. Butler, 297 U.S. 1 \(1936\)]

[Loan Association v. Topeka, 20 Wall. 655 \(1874\)]

“The king establishes the land by justice, But he who receives bribes [socialist handouts, government “benefits”, or PLUNDER stolen from nontaxpayers] overthrows it. ”

[Prov. 29:4, Bible, NKJV]

3. It has been repeatedly held as unconstitutional for governments to establish a “poll tax”. Poll taxes are fees required to be paid before one may vote in any election. Voting, in turn, is described as a “franchise”. Eligibility to vote is established by the coincidence of both nationality and domicile. If domicile instead of “residence” under a franchise were used as the criteria for income tax obligation, then indirectly the income tax would act for all intents and purposes as a “poll tax” and thereby quickly be declared as unconstitutional.

We conclude that a State violates the Equal Protection Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment whenever it makes the affluence of the voter or payment of any fee an electoral standard. Voter qualifications have no relation to wealth nor to paying or not paying this or any other tax.<sup>151</sup> Our cases demonstrate that the Equal Protection Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment restrains the States from fixing voter qualifications which invidiously discriminate. Thus without questioning the power of a State to impose reasonable residence restrictions on the availability of the ballot (see Pope v. Williams, 193 U.S. 621, 24 S.Ct. 573, 48 L.Ed. 817), we held in Carrington v. And see [Louisiana v. United States, 380 U.S. 145, 85 S.Ct. 817. Sanders, 372 U.S. 368, 380, 83 S.Ct. 801, 808, 9 L.Ed.2d. 821](#). We think the same must be true of requirements of wealth or affluence or payment of a fee.

right of suffrage is a fundamental matter in a free and democratic society. Especially since the right to exercise the franchise in a free and unimpaired manner is preservative of other basic civil and political rights, any alleged infringement of the right of citizens to vote must be carefully and meticulously scrutinized.' There were considering charges that voters in one part of the State had greater representation per person in the State Legislature than voters in another part of the State. We concluded:

A citizen, a qualified voter, is no more nor no less so because he lives in the city or on the farm. This is the clear and strong command of our Constitution's Equal Protection Clause. This is an essential part of the concept of a government of laws and not men. This is at the heart of Lincoln's vision of 'government of the people, by the people, (and) for the people.' The Equal Protection Clause demands no less than substantially equal state legislative representation for all citizens, of all places as well as of all races.' Id., at 568, 84 S.Ct. at 1385.

We say the same whether the citizen, otherwise qualified to vote, has $1.50 in his pocket or nothing at all, pays the fee or fails to pay it. The principle that denies the State the right to dilute a citizen's vote on account of his economic status or other such factors by analogy bars a system which excludes those unable to pay a fee to vote or who fail to pay.

4. Corrupt politicians through abuse of legal “words of art” had to make franchise participation at least “LOOK” like it was somehow connected to citizenship, even though technically it is not, in order to fool people into thinking that participation was mandatory by virtue of their nationality or domicile, even though in fact it is NOT. Therefore they confused the word “resident” and “residence” with a statutory status of a constitutional or classical “alien”, even though they are NOT the same.
5. Since you can only have a domicile in one place at a time, then if income taxes were based on domicile alone, you could only pay the tax to ONE municipal government at a time. Hence, you could NOT simultaneously owe both STATE and FEDERAL income tax at the same time. The only way to reconcile the conflict under such circumstances is to pay it to the state government only. On the other hand, if taxes are based on “residence” you could owe it to more than one government at a time if you had multiple “residences”. Therefore, they HAD to base the tax upon “residence” and not “domicile” and to make “residence” a product of your consent to contract with a specific government for services or protection under a specific franchise.

4.12.6 How the TWO types of “RESIDENTS” are deliberately confused

As we pointed out in the previous section, there is a vested financial interest in covetous governments deliberately confusing FOREIGN NATIONALS under the common law with CONTRACTORS under government franchises. Great pains have been taken over time to confuse these two because of these strong motivations to recruit more government franchisee contractors and thus increase revenues. We will discuss these mechanisms in this section.

“Residence” is deliberately confused with “domicile”, even though they are NOT equivalent and mutually exclusive under franchise statutes. “Residence” under the Internal Revenue Code “trade or business” franchise, for instance, means the abode of a statutory “alien” and DOES NOT include either “citizens” or even “nonresident aliens”.

The second technique is to confuse the word “reside” with “residence” or “domicile”. Reside simply means where one sleeps at night and has NOTHING to do with either their domicile OR their residence:

[Black’s Law Dictionary, Fourth Edition, p. 1473]

You can RESIDE somewhere WITHOUT having EITHER a domicile or a residence there. Here is an example:

*There are no cases in California deciding whether a foreign corporation can “reside” in a county within the meaning of the recordation sections of the Code. There are cases, however, on the question whether a foreign corporation doing business in California can acquire a county residence within the state for the purpose of venue. The early cases held that such residence could not be acquired. These cases were explained in Bohn v. Better Biscuits, Inc., 26 Cal.App.2d. 61, 78 P.2d. 1177,2 wherein it was finally established that a foreign corporation doing business in California, having designated its principal office pursuant to Section 405 of the California Civil Code provision (passed in 1929), could acquire a county residence in the state for the purpose of venue. The court in that case construed the venue provision of Section 395 of the Code of Civil Procedure which reads as follows: “In all other cases, * * * the county in which the defendants, or some of them, reside at the commencement of the action, is the proper county for the trial of the action. * * * If none of the defendants resides in the State, * * * the action may be tried in any county which the plaintiff may designate in his complaint."

*In relation to this section, the court held: "The plaintiff stresses the word 'reside.' It then contends that as the defendant is a foreign corporation having its principal place of business at Grand Rapids, Mich., that place is its residence and it may not be heard to claim that it resides at any other place. If by the use of the word 'reside' one means 'domicil' that contention would be sound. * * * It is not claimed that there is anything in the context showing the word 'reside' was intended to mean 'domicil.' By approved usage of the language 'reside' means: 'Live, dwell, abide, sojourn, stay, remain, lodge.' * * * By a long line of decisions it has been held that a domestic corporation resides at the place where its principal place of business is located. Walker v. Wells Fargo Bank, etc., Co., 8 Cal.2d. 447, 65 P.2d. 1299. The designation of the principal place of business of a domestic corporation is contained in its articles. Civ.Code, § 290 * * *. The designation of the principal place of business of a foreign corporation in this state is contained in the statement which it is required to file in the office of the secretary of state before it may legally transact business in this state. Civ.Code, § 405 * * *. Prior to the enactment of sections 405-406a * * * a foreign corporation had no locus in this state. No statute required it to designate, by a written statement duly filed in the office of the secretary of state, the location of its principal place of business in the state. After the enactment of said sections, the principal place of business of foreign corporations as well as domestic corporations was fixed by law. When the reason is the same, the rule should be the same. Civ.Code, § 3511. It follows * * * by reason of the enactment of section 405 et seq. of the Civil Code * * * said section 395 of the Code of Civil Procedure * * * applies to persons both natural and artificial and whether the corporation is a domestic or a foreign corporation." Bohn v. Better Biscuits, Inc., 26 Cal.App.2d. 61, 64, 65, 78 P.2d. 1177, 1179, 80 P.2d. 484. [Western-Knapp Engineering Co. v. Gilbank, 129 F.2d. 135 (9th Cir., 1942)]*

Keep in mind the following important facts about the above case:

1. "Reside" is where the corporation physically does business, not the place of its civil domicile.
2. One can "do business" in a geographic region without having a civil domicile there.
3. The corporation is a creation of and therefore component LEGALLY WITHIN the government that granted it, regardless of where it is physically located or where it does business. This is reflected in Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 17(b).
4. Those "doing business" in a specific geographical region are "deemed to be LEGALLY present" within the forum or civil laws they are doing business in, regardless of whether they have offices in that region under:
  - 4.1. The Minimum Contacts Doctrine, U.S. Supreme Court in International Shoe Co. v. Washington, 326 U.S. 310 (1945).
  - 4.2. The Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act (F.S.I.A.), 28 U.S.C. Part 4, Chapter 97.
5. The fact that one "does business" within a specific region does not necessarily mean that you are "purposefully availing yourself" under the laws of that region, and especially if the parties doing business have a contract between them REMOVING the government and its protections from their CIVIL relationship. How might this be done? They could have a "binding arbitration" agreement or contract that relegates all disputes to a private third party, for instance.
6. The civil statutory laws of a place are a social compact, and it would constitute eminent domain without compensation over those who have neither a "domicile" nor a "residence" in the region to impose or enforce these laws against them. That is the foundation of the Minimum Contacts Doctrine, U.S. Supreme Court itself, in fact.
7. One can be legally present UNDER THE COMMON LAW while being NOT PRESENT under civil statutory law. That would be the condition of a nonresident foreign corporation such as the one in the case above.
8. "Residing" somewhere implies an effective legal "residence" under the Minimum Contacts Doctrine, U.S. Supreme Court ONLY if one is ALSO "doing business", and ONLY for that specific transaction and for NO other purpose.

4.12.7 PRACTICAL EXAMPLE 1: Opening a bank account

Let us give you a practical business example of this phenomenon in action whereby a person becomes a "resident" from a legal perspective by exercising their right to contract. You want to open a checking account at a bank. You go to the bank to open the account. The clerk presents you with an agreement that you must sign before you open the account. If you won't sign the agreement, then the clerk will tell you that they can't open an account for you. Before you sign the account agreement, the bank doesn't know anything about you and you don't have an account there, so you are the equivalent of an "alien". An "alien" is someone the bank will not recognize or interact with or help. They can only lawfully help "customers", not "aliens". After you exercise your right to contract by signing the bank account agreement, then you now become a "resident" of the bank. You are a "resident" because:

1. You are a “thing” that they can now “identify” in their computer system and their records because you have an “account” there. A “res” is legally defined as a “thing”. They now know your name and “account number” and will recognize you when you walk in the door to ask for help. Hence “res-ident”.
2. You are the “person” described in their account agreement. Before you signed it, you were a “foreigner” not subject to it.
3. They issued you an ATM card and a PIN so you can control and manage your “account”. These things that they issued you are the “privileges” associated with being party to the account agreement. No one who is not party to such an agreement can avail themselves of such “privileges”.
4. The account agreement gives you the “privilege” to demand “services” from the bank of one kind or another. The legal requirement for the bank to perform these “services” creates the legal equivalent of “agency” on their part in doing what you want them to do. In effect, you have “hired” them to perform a “service” that you want and need.
5. The account agreement gives the bank the legal right to demand certain behaviors out of you of one kind or another. For instance, you must pay all account fees and not overdraw your account and maintain a certain minimum balance. The legal requirement to perform these behaviors creates the legal equivalent of “agency” on your part in respect to the bank.
6. The legal obligations created by the account agreement give the two parties to it legal jurisdiction over each other defined by the agreement or contract itself. The contract fixes the legal relations between the parties. If either party violates the agreement, then the other party has legal recourse to sue for exceeding the bounds of the “contractual agency” created by the agreement. Any litigation that results must be undertaken consistent with what the agreement authorizes and in a mode or “forum” (e.g. court) that the agreement specifies.

4.12.8 PRACTICAL EXAMPLE 2: Creation of the “resident” under a government civil franchise

When two parties execute a franchise agreement or contract between them, they are engaging in “commerce”. The practical consequences of the franchise agreement are the following:

1. The main source of jurisdiction for the government is over commerce.
2. The mutual consideration passing between the parties provides the nexus for government jurisdiction over the transaction.
3. If the exchange involves a government franchise offered by the national government:
  - 3.1. An “alienation” of private rights has occurred. This alienation:
    - 3.1.1. Turns formerly private rights into public rights.
    - 3.1.2. Accomplishes the equivalent of a “donation” of private property to a public use, public purpose, and public office in order to procure the “benefits” of the franchise by the former owner of the property.
  - 3.2. Parties to the franchise agreement cannot engage in a franchise without implicitly surrendering governance over disputes to the government granting the franchise. In that sense, their effective domicile shifts to the location of the seat of the government granting the franchise.
  - 3.3. The parties to the franchise agreement mutually and implicitly surrender their sovereign immunity under the Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act, 28 U.S.C. §1605\(a\)\(2\), which says that commerce within the legislative jurisdiction of the “United States” constitutes constructive consent to be sued in the courts of the United States. This is discussed in more detail in the previous section.

Another surprising result of engaging in franchises and public “benefits” that most people overlook is that the commerce it represents, in fact, can have the practical effect of making an “alien” or “nonresident” party into a “resident” for the purposes of statutory jurisdiction. Here is the proof:

In International Shoe Co. v. Washington, 326 U.S. 310 (1945), the Supreme Court held that a court may exercise personal jurisdiction over a defendant consistent with due process only if he or she has "certain minimum contacts" with the relevant forum "such that the maintenance of the suit does not offend 'traditional notions of fair play and substantial justice.'" Id. at 316 (quoting Milliken v. Meyer, 311 U.S. 457, 463 (1940)).
Unless a defendant's contacts with a forum are so substantial, continuous, and systematic that the defendant can be deemed to be "present" in that forum for all purposes, a forum may exercise only "specific" jurisdiction - that is, jurisdiction based on the relationship between the defendant's forum contacts and the plaintiff's claim. The parties agree that only specific jurisdiction is at issue in this case.

In this circuit, we analyze specific jurisdiction according to a three-prong test:

- (1) The non-resident defendant must purposefully direct his activities or consummate some transaction with the forum or resident thereof; or perform some act by which he purposefully avails himself of the privilege of conducting activities in the forum, thereby invoking the benefits and protections of its laws;
- (2) the claim must be one which arises out of or relates to the defendant's forum-related activities; and
- (3) the exercise of jurisdiction must comport with fair play and substantial justice, i.e. it must be reasonable.

Schwarzenegger v. Fred Martin Motor Co., 374 F.3d. 797, 802 (9th Cir. 2004) (quoting Lake v. Lake, 817 F.2d. 1416, 1421 (9th Cir. 1987)). The first prong is determinative in this case. We have sometimes referred to it, in shorthand fashion, as the "purposeful availment" prong. Schwarzenegger, 374 F.3d. at 802. Despite its label, this prong includes both purposeful availment and purposeful direction. It may be satisfied by purposeful availment of the privilege of doing business in the forum; by purposeful direction of activities at the forum; or by some combination thereof.

We have typically treated "purposeful availment" somewhat differently in tort and contract cases. In tort cases, we typically inquire whether a defendant "purposefully direct[s] his activities" at the forum state, applying an "effects" test that focuses on the forum in which the defendant's actions were felt, whether or not the actions themselves occurred within the forum. See Schwarzenegger, 374 F.3d. at 803 (citing Calder v. Jones, 465 U.S. 783, 789-90 (1984)). By contrast, in contract cases, we typically inquire whether a defendant "purposefully avails itself of the privilege of conducting activities" or "consummate[s] [a] transaction" in the forum, focusing on activities such as delivering goods or executing a contract. See Schwarzenegger, 374 F.3d. at 802. However, this case is neither a tort nor a contract case. Rather, it is a case in which Yahoo! argues, based on the First Amendment, that the French court's interim orders are unenforceable by an American court. [Yahoo! Inc. v. La Ligue Contre Le Racisme Et L'Antisemitisme, 433 F.3d. 1199 (9th Cir. 01/12/2006) ]

Legal treatises on domicile also confirm that those who are "wards" or "dependents" of the state or the government assume the same domicile or "residence" as their care giver. The practical effect of this is that by participating in government franchises, we become "wards" of the government in receipt of welfare payments such as Social Security, Medicare, etc. As "wards" under "guardianship" of the government, we assume the same domicile as the government who is paying us the "benefits", which means the District of Columbia. Our domicile is whatever the government, meaning the "court" wants it to be for their convenience:

§ 24. Wards

While it appears that an infant ward's domicile or residence ordinarily follows that of the guardian it does not necessarily do so,<sup>152</sup> as so a guardian has been held to have no power to control an infant's domicile as against her mother.<sup>153</sup> Where a guardian is permitted to remove the child to a new location, the child will not be held to have acquired a new domicile if the guardian's authority does not extend to fixing the child's domicile. Domicile of a child who is a ward of the court is the location of the court.<sup>154</sup>

Since a ward is not sui juris, he cannot change his domicile by removal,<sup>155</sup> nor does the removal of the ward to another state or county by relatives or friends, affect his domicile.<sup>156</sup> Absent an express indication by the court, the authority of one having temporary control of a child to fix the child's domicile is ascertained by interpreting the court's orders.<sup>157</sup>

This change in domicile of those who participate in government franchises and thereby become "wards" of the government is also consistent with the U.S. Supreme Court's view of the government's relationship to those who participate in government franchises. It calls the government a "parens patriae" in relation to them!:

"The proposition is that the United States, as the grantor of the franchises of the company [a corporation, in this case], the author of its charter, and the donor of lands, rights, and privileges of immense value, and as parens patriae, is a trustee, invested with power to enforce the proper use of the property and franchises granted for the benefit of the public."

One Congressman during the debates over the proposal of the Social Security Act in 1933 criticized the very adverse effects of the franchise upon people's rights, including that upon the domicile of those who participate, when he said:

Mr. Logan: "...Natural laws cannot be created, repealed, or modified by legislation. Congress should know there are many things which it cannot do..."

"It is now proposed to make the Federal Government the guardian of its citizens. If that should be done, the Nation soon must perish. There can only be a free nation when the people themselves are free and administer the government which they have set up to protect their rights. Where the general government must provide work, and incidentally food and clothing for its citizens, freedom and individuality will be destroyed and eventually the citizens will become serfs to the general government..."

The Internal Revenue Code franchise agreement itself contains provisions which recognize this change in effective domicile to the District of Columbia within 26 U.S.C. §7408(d) and 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(39).

§ 7701. Definitions

(a) When used in this title, where not otherwise distinctly expressed or manifestly incompatible with the intent thereof—

(39) Persons residing outside United States

If any citizen or resident of the United States does not reside in (and is not found in) any United States judicial district, such citizen or resident shall be treated as residing [“domiciled”] in the District of Columbia for purposes of any provision of this title relating to—
(A) jurisdiction of courts, or
(B) enforcement of summons.

(d) Citizens and residents outside the United States If any citizen or resident of the United States does not reside in, and does not have his principal place of business in, any United States judicial district, such citizen or resident shall be treated for purposes of this section as residing in the District of Columbia.

Since your Constitutional right to contract is unlimited, then you can have as many temporary and transient “residences” as you like, but you can have only one legal “domicile”, because your allegiance must be undivided or you will have a conflict of interest and allegiance.

“No one can serve two masters; for either he will hate the one and love the other, or else he will be loyal to the one and despise the other. You cannot serve God and mammon.”

Now do you understand the reasoning behind the following maxim of law? You become a “subject” and a “resident” under the jurisdiction of a government’s civil law by demanding its protection! If you want to “fire” the government as your “protector”, you MUST quit demanding anything from it by filling out government forms or participating in its franchises:

Protection draws to it subjection, subjection, protection. Co. Litt. 65.
[Bouvier's Maxims of Law, 1856;
SOURCE: <http://famguardian.org/Publications/BouvierMaximsOfLaw/BouvierMaxims.htm>]

Res. Lat. The subject matter of a trust or will. In the civil law, a thing; an object. As a term of the law, this word has a very wide and extensive signification, including not only things which are objects of property, but also such as are not capable of individual ownership. And in old English law it is said to have a general import, comprehending both corporeal and incorporeal things of whatever kind, nature, or species. By “res,” according to the modern civilians, is meant everything that may form an object of rights, in opposition to “persona,” which is regarded as a subject of rights. “Res,” therefore, in its general meaning, comprises actions of all kinds; while in its restricted sense it comprehends every object of right, except actions. This has reference to the fundamental division of the Institutes that all law relates either to persons, to things, or to actions.

Res is everything that may form an object of rights and includes an object, subject-matter or status. In re Riggle's Will, 11 A.D.2d. 51 205 N.Y.S.2d. 19, 21, 22. The term is particularly applied to an object, subject-matter, or status, considered as the defendant in an action, or as an object against which, directly, proceedings are taken. Thus, in a prize case, the captured vessel is “the res”; and proceedings of this character are said to be in rem. (See In personam; In Rem.) “Res” may also denote the action or proceeding, as when a cause, which is not between adversary parties, is entitled “In re _____”. [Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, pp. 1304-1306]

The “object, subject matter, or status” they are talking about above is the ALL CAPS incarnation of your legal birth name and the government-issued number, usually an SSN, that is associated with it. Those two things constitute the “straw man” or “trust” or “res” which you implicitly agree to represent at the time you sign up for any franchise, benefit, or “public right”. When the government attacks someone for a tax liability or a debt, they don’t attack you as a private person, but rather the collection of rights that attach to the ALL CAPS trust name and associated Social Security Number trust. They start by placing a lien on the number, which actually is THEIR number and not YOURS. That number associates PRIVATE property with PUBLIC TRUST property. Merriam-Webster’s Dictionary definition 5(b) for “Trust” is “office”:

“Trust: 5a(1): a charge or duty imposed in faith or confidence or as a condition of some relationship (2): something committed or entrusted to one to be used or cared for in the interest of another b: responsible charge or office c: CARE, CUSTODY <the child committed to her trust>.” [Merriam-Webster’s 11th Collegiate Dictionary]

20 C.F.R. §422.103(d) says the number is THEIR property. They can lien their property, which is public property in your temporary use and custody as a “trustee” of the “public trust”. Everything that number is connected to acts as private property donated temporarily to a public use to procure the “benefits” of the franchise. It is otherwise illegal to mix public property, such as the Social Security Number, with private property, because that would constitute illegal and criminal embezzlement in violation of 18 U.S.C. §912.

“Men are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable rights, -life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness;’ and to ‘secure,’ not grant or create, these rights, governments are instituted. That property for income] which a man has honestly acquired he retains full control of, subject to these limitations: First, that he shall not use it to his neighbor's injury, and that does not mean that he must use it for his neighbor's benefit; second, that if he devotes it to a public use, he gives to the public a right to control that use; and third, that whenever the public needs require, the public may take it upon payment of due compensation. Budd v. People of State of New York, [143 U.S. 517 (1892)]

Below is how the U.S. Supreme Court describes the practical effect of creating the trust and placing its “residence” or “domicile” within the jurisdiction of the specific government or “state” granting the franchise:

“Thus, the Court has frequently held that domicile or residence, more substantial than mere presence in transit or sojourn, is an adequate basis for taxation, including income, property, and death taxes. Since the Fourteenth Amendment makes one a citizen of the state wherein he resides, the fact of residence creates universally reciprocal duties [e.g. CONTRACTUAL DUTIES!:] of protection by the state and of allegiance and support by the citizen. The latter obviously includes a duty to pay taxes, and their nature and measure is largely a political matter. Of course, the situs of property may tax it regardless of the citizenship, domicile, or residence of the owner, the most obvious illustration being a tax on realty laid by the state in which the realty is located.” Miller Brothers Co. v. Maryland, [347 U.S. 340 (1954)]

The implication is that you cannot be sovereign if either you or the entities you voluntarily represent have a “domicile” or “residence” in any man-made government or in any place other than Heaven or the Kingdom of Heaven on Earth. If you

1 choose a “domicile” or “residence” any place on earth, then you become a “subject” in relation to that place and voluntarily
 2 forfeit your sovereignty. This is NOT the status you want to have! A “resident” by definition MUST therefore be within
 3 the legislative jurisdiction of the government, because the government cannot lawfully write laws that will allow them to
 4 recognize or act upon anything that is NOT within their legislative jurisdiction.

5 All law is prima facie territorial in nature, and can act only upon the territory under the exclusive control of the government
 6 or upon its franchises, contracts, and real and chattel property, which are “property” under its management and control
 7 pursuant to Article 4, Section 3, Clause 2 of the United States Constitution. The only lawful way that government laws can 8 reach beyond the territory of the sovereign who controls them is through explicit, informed, mutual consent of the 9 individual parties involved, and this field of law is called “private law”.

10 “Judge Story, in his treatise on the Conflicts of Laws, lays down, as the basis upon which all reasonings on the
 11 law of comity must necessarily rest, the following maxims: First ‘that every nation possesses an exclusive
 12 sovereignty and jurisdiction within its own territory’; secondly, ‘that no state or nation can by its laws directly
 13 affect or bind property out of its own territory, or bind persons not resident therein, whether they are natural
 14 born subjects or others.’ The learned judge then adds: ‘From these two maxims or propositions there follows a
 15 third, and that is that whatever force and obligation the laws of one country have in another depend solely upon 16 the laws and municipal regulation of the latter; that is to say, upon its own proper jurisdiction and polity, and 17 upon its own express or tacit consent.” Story on Conflict of Laws §23.”

19 4.13 Citizenship Generally

20 Citizenship is something that very few Americans fully understand. We’ll therefore devote the next twelve subsections to 21 covering this most important subject. The Supreme Court has said about citizenship the following, to emphasize the 22 importance of learning about this most important subject:

23 “Nobody can deny that the question of citizenship in a nation is of the most vital importance. It is a precious 24 heritage, as well as an inestimable acquisition;”
 25 [U.S. v. Wong Kim Ark, 169 U.S. 649 (1898)]

26 Before we begin, let us clarify some important aspects about citizenship in general, whether it be state or federal. First of 27 all, statutory citizenship results directly from a combination of two coinciding and interacting factors: domicile and intent.
 28 In order to legally be a statutory “citizen”, we must simultaneously be domiciled within the jurisdiction of a political body
 29 and do so with the specific intent of becoming a statutory “citizen” of that political body. Here is how one early federal 30 court describes it:

31 “The fourteenth amendment does not make a resident in a state a citizen of such state, unless he intends, by 32 residence therein, to become a citizen.”

 35 3 Sup.Ct.Rep. 207; Prentiss v. Barton, 1 Brock. 389. Citizenship is a status or condition, and is the result of 36 both act and intent. An adult person cannot become a citizen of a state by simply intending to, nor does 37 anyone become such citizen by mere residence. The residence and the intent must co-exist and correspond;
 38 and though, under ordinary circumstances, the former may be sufficient evidence of the latter, it is not
 39 conclusive, and the contrary may always be shown; and when the question of citizenship turns on the 40 intention with which a person has resided in a particular state, his own testimony, under ordinary

43 “But, certainly, it was not the intention of the [Fourteenth] amendment to make any citizen of the United States
 44 a citizen of any particular state against his will, in which the exigencies of his business, his social relations or 45 obligations, or other cause, might require his presence for a greater or less length of time, without any intention 46 on his part to become such citizen.

47 “The better opinion seems to be that a citizen of the United States is, under the amendment, prima facie a
 48 citizen of the state wherein he resides, and cannot arbitrarily be excluded therefrom by such state, but that he
 49 does not become a citizen of the state against his will, and contrary to his purpose and intention to retain an
 50 already acquired citizenship elsewhere. The amendment is a restraining on the power of the state, but not on
 51 the right of the person to choose and maintain his citizenship or domicile; but it protects him in the exercise of 52 that right by making him a citizen of that state in which he may choose to reside with such intention. In
 53 Robertson v. Cease, 97 U.S. 648, the court held that, for the purpose of giving the jurisdiction to the circuit

1 court, an allegation that a party is a resident of a particular state is not equivalent to an allegation that he is a
 2 citizen thereof, for the reason, as suggested by Mr. Justice Harlan, that, even under the amendment, mere
 3 residence in a state does not necessarily or conclusively prove one to be a citizen thereof. And if an allegation
 4 of residence in a state is not necessarily, even under the amendment, the equivalent of an allegation of 5 citizenship, then the mere fact of residence in a state is not necessarily the equivalent of citizenship."
 6 [Sharon v. Hill, 26 F. 337 (1885), Emphasis added]

7 The most important aspect of the citizenship equation above is intent, which is synonymous with consent, and the reason
 8 there must be intent is because citizenship must result from a voluntary and free choice. There is a lot of needless
 9 contention in the freedom movement revolving around a misunderstanding of this fundamental issue of the voluntary nature
 10 of citizenship. People in the freedom movement argue all the time about being "subject to the jurisdiction of the United 11 States" and how the Fourteenth Amendment forced them to become "citizens of the United States" as defined in section 1
 12 of the Fourteenth Amendment. This is all hogwash if you ask us, because in America, you are entitled by law to acquire 13 and maintain whatever citizenship status you choose as an adult and can voluntarily renounce whatever aspects of your
 14 citizenship that you don't want without the consent of your government, as long as you properly notify them of your choice
 15 with the appropriate forms and correspondence.<sup>158</sup> This isn't true in many other countries such as England, where subjects
 16 of the Queen cannot renounce their British citizenship, but it is true here. The bottom line is that in America, you can be
 17 whatever type of citizen you choose so it's meaningless to argue that the government forced you to do anything or invaded
 18 your rights. The ability to choose one's citizenship status, as a matter of fact, is the essence of what it means to live in a
 19 free country. The only basis that people have to complain in the context of citizenship is usually that their relative
 20 ignorance about citizenship issues has eliminated choices that they thought they were entitled to by right, and we have no
 21 one to blame but ourselves for that problem.

22 Citizenship cannot be compelled and cannot be either accepted or expatriated under duress, because it amounts to a
 23 voluntary personal commitment of allegiance to a political body called a "state". Those who are minors or mentally
 24 incompetent are technically unable to legally make such an informed and voluntary choice to have allegiance.
 25 Consequently, the citizenship of minors who are traveling with their parents or family is legally "presumed" to be the same
 26 as that of their parents. However, one important exception to this rule is that for the purposes of federal diversity
 27 jurisdiction, citizenship and domicile are equivalent:

28 "For purpose of federal diversity jurisdiction, "citizenship" and "domicile" are synonymous."
 29 [Hendry v. Masonite Corp., 455 F.2d. 955 (1972)]

30 Based on what we just learned, if we simply live somewhere but do not intend to be a "citizen" or a "resident", then we are 31 considered to be an "foreigner" or sometimes an "alien" where we are living and a "citizen" in the state we "intend" to live.
 32 For instance, if we are citizens of California but not a "citizen of the United States**" and then we take temporary
 33 employment in Arizona but intend to remain California citizens, then we are "aliens" in Arizona and "citizens" in 34 California so far as our state citizenship. Understanding this critical distinction will become important in later sections.

35 After reading about the "federal zone" and the terms "United States" v. "United States of America" in the last few sections,
 36 you may be a little confused. You may, for instance, now be saying to yourself:

37 "This is all just a little crazy. How can there be two jurisdictions within the a single federal government? How 38 can these two distinct jurisdictions have their own types of citizenship?"

39 The fact is, even most of the legal profession doesn't know or fully understand this simple truth. There are those who do
 40 understand this, for as you will come to see and realize, this is part of the scheme to trick us into accepting federal 41 regulation, which in turn gives them federal jurisdiction over us in the courts. This causes us to be outside the protection of 42 our Constitutional Rights and destroys the separation of powers between the States and the federal government that our 43 founding fathers put there for the protection of our liberties.

44 First, we must look at the legal facts of the matter. So, let us take a moment to review the Constitution. For a legally
 45 acceptable copy please refer to the back of Black's Law Dictionary (6th addition) (available at your local library or

Note the capitalization of the term Citizen all the way through the Constitution and the first thirteen Amendments. Thereafter (from the Fourteenth Amendment on), it is shown in lower case only. Why? Some people explain this by saying that the former is a sovereign American of the several States (“We the People...”) with Unalienable Rights granted to us by our Creator and protected by the Constitution, while the latter is a Federal citizen of the United States with legislative Immunities and Privileges only (No Rights). We do not agree with this assessment, however, because the term “United States” is not redefined in the Fourteenth or subsequent amendments to mean something different.

Our federal government knows and understands this difference and so should we. Again, refer to Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, for the definition of the Fourteenth Amendment:

“The Fourteenth Amendment of the Constitution of the United States, ratified in 1868, creates or at least recognizes for the first time a citizenship of the United States, as distinct from that of the states; forbids the making or enforcement by any state of any law abridging the privileges and immunities of citizens of the United States; and secures all “persons” against any state action which results in either deprivation of life, liberty, or property without due process of law....”

Some people believe that the Fourteenth Amendment created a new and inferior status of citizenship (that of the federal United States) but this is simply untrue, as you will learn by reading the following subsections. In fact, people born in states of the Union are and always were “citizens of the United States***” under the Constitution and the Fourteenth Amendment because of the following very significant consideration that most freedom fighters overlook:

The term “United States” in the Constitution means the states of the Union collectively and excludes the federal zone whereas “United States” in federal statutes and “acts of Congress”, including the Internal Revenue Code, means the federal zone and excludes the states of the Union in most cases.”

Most of the confusion that people have over their citizenship status derives very simply from a difference in meaning between the term “United States” in the Constitution and “United States” in federal statutes. These two contexts have completely different and opposing meanings. The context is so very important and is most often overlooked. This ignorance of the law leads the freedom community to many irrational and unwarranted conclusions that have made it the deserving object of ridicule and defeat in courts, the media, and political communities for decades. We must eliminate this ignorance and confusion and demonstrate unity of purpose and understanding if we are to make any headway in the future to restore our society to its de jure Constitutional foundation.

The implications of the confusion over the term “United States” appearing in the Constitution and federal statutes leads people to false and very damaging conclusions, such as the following, none of which are true:

1. If a person is a “citizen of the United States” under section 1 of the Fourteenth Amendment, then they must also be a “citizen of the United States” under 8 U.S.C. §1401 and under the Internal Revenue Code. In fact, these two types of citizens are completely different and opposite, even though they have the same name.
2. If a person lives in a state of the Union, then they reside in the “United States” under the Internal Revenue Code and under Title 8 of the U.S. Code.
3. Those people who are born outside the “United States” under federal statutes are “U.S. citizens” under 8 U.S.C. §1401. This is simply not true. They are “nationals” under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21)(2) because “United States” means the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, Guam, and the Virgin Islands under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(38), 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(36), and 8 C.F.R. §215.1.

Note: It is significant that the word “persons” is in quotations. You will come to notice that they use the word “person” in all government (local, state and federal) applications and other documents to insinuate a living being, when in fact they are referring to a legislative, statutory entity, a “citizen of the United States”, a “federal citizen”, to be precise. It does not refer to a Sovereign American of any one of the several States. We should all remember this, because it is everywhere and it is the difference between your Rights and Freedoms guaranteed by the Constitution and those Legislative Privileges under Statute Laws, which are merely private contracts we are being coerced into with the government.

While the United States has no direct authority over a Sovereign American, neither does a state of the Union have authority over a “U.S. citizen” as defined in the federal statutes. This in part explains the difference in the term “STATE of ILLINOIS” with respect to the term Illinois Republic. The former is also a corporate entity created under the Buck Act of

1 1940 and is a possession of the United States. Meanwhile, the Illinois Republic is the Sovereign State, one amongst the 2 several states.

3 When Cornwallis surrendered on Oct 17, 1781 at the end of the Revolutionary War, did he surrender to THE UNITED
 4 STATES? No, in fact he surrendered 13 times, to the regiment leaders of each of the states. In 1783, Benjamin Franklin
 5 went to France. There, a treaty was signed by King George's representative, which came to be known as The Treaty of 6 Paris. In it, King George relinquished his sovereignty and passed it to The 13 FREE AND INDEPENDENT STATES, THE 7 PEOPLE AND THEIR POSTERITY, FOREVER! Independent from England, and Independent from each other. They
 8 were then, and are now, Republics, technically NATIONS. I recently found a copy of the Treaty of Paris on the United 9 States Congress web page of international treaties. It is STILL recognized by International Law!

10 The Articles of Confederation had been written and approved in June of 1776, One month before Thomas Jefferson wrote
 11 the Declaration of Independence. Here is how some have described the purpose of both the Articles of Confederation and 12 the Constitution which followed it:

13 "The idea of State sovereignty was to ensure that the federal government would be kept in a box. The power of 14 the United States was to be scattered to the four corners of the country, to ensure that no man would have 15 enough power to be a tyrant."
 16 [Howard, Webmaster of Freedom Hall]

17 "The capital and leading object of the Constitution was to leave with the States all authorities which respected
 18 their citizens only, and to transfer to the United States those which respected citizens of foreign or other States,
 19 to make us several as to ourselves, but one as to all others"
 20 [Thomas Jefferson; Letter to Judge William Johnson, June 12, 1823]

21 The important thing to note about the Articles of Confederation is that the sovereign states were referred to collectively as 22 the "United States of America" while the federal government they created was referred to as the "United States". The 23 sovereign states, however, subsequently deemed that the Articles of Confederation needed refinement, so they convened the 24 First Constitutional Convention. After the Constitution was written, 9 of the 13 states were required to ratify it. Eleven
 25 ratified it in 1787, two did not until 1789.

26 In the Constitution, congress was GRANTED 17 specific powers having to do with the states. Things like lay and collect
 27 taxes, coin money, declare war, establish post offices, and regulate commerce. For some of these items, like COLLECT
 28 TAXES, there are very specific rules that congress MUST follow.

29 There was another power granted to the congress, having to do with the seat of government. The continental congress did
 30 not want the federal government located in a particular state, lest that state gain some advantage. So it was written, that a
 31 ten mile square area of land be the seat of government, which is what we call today, the District of Columbia.

32 Congress was granted EXCLUSIVE LEGISLATIVE AUTHORITY over this area. This meant that, for District of Columbia,
 33 congress was kind of like a city government. It could pass laws, speed limits or what have you, but these laws were not
 34 binding on ordinary Americans outside the District.

35 But something SINISTER happened..

36 In 1884 there had been a case dealing with citizenship. The Fourteenth amendment had been ratified, and said, in part: All
 37 persons born or naturalized in the United States, AND SUBJECT TO THE JURISDICTION THEREOF, are citizens of the 38 United States and of the state wherein they reside. The case was called Elk v. Wilkins, 112 U.S. 94 (1884) and the court
 39 said:

40 "The persons declared to be citizens are ALL PERSONS BORN OR NATURALIZED IN THE UNITED STATES
 41 AND SUBJECT TO THE JURISDICTION THEREOF. The evident meaning of these last words is, not merely
 42 subject in some respect or degree to the jurisdiction of the United States, but COMPLETELY SUBJECT..."
 43 [Elk v. Wilkins, 112 U.S. 94 (1884)]

44 Got that? COMPLETELY SUBJECT! What does "completely subject" mean? It means subject to the POLITICAL and not
 45 LEGISLATIVE jurisdiction:

46 "To be 'completely subject' to the political jurisdiction of the United States is to be in no respect or degree 47 subject to the political jurisdiction of any other government."

1 [United States v. Wong Kim Ark 169 U.S. 649, 18 S.Ct. 456, 42 L.Ed. 890 (1898)]

2 As we said in section 4.6, in 1901 there was a case that came up in front of the Supreme Court called Downes v. Bidwell,
3 182 U.S. 244 (1901). It was a case about exports from Puerto Rico, which was a territory, and part of the area congress
4 had exclusive legislative authority over. The Court said:

5 "CONSTITUTIONAL RESTRICTIONS AND LIMITATIONS [Bill of Rights] WERE NOT APPLICABLE
6 to the areas of lands, enclaves, territories, and possessions over which Congress had EXCLUSIVE

9 "The idea prevails with some -- indeed, it found expression in arguments at the bar -- that we have in this
10 country substantially or practically two national governments; one, to be maintained under the Constitution,
11 with all its restrictions; the other to be maintained by Congress outside and independently of that instrument, by 12 exercising such powers as other nations of the earth are accustomed to exercise."

14 was confirmed by another case called Hooven & Allison Co. v. Evatt, 324 U.S. 652 (1945).

15 SO, IF YOU ARE DOMICILED IN THE FEDERAL "UNITED STATES**", OR ARE A STATUTORY 16 "CITIZEN OF THE "UNITED STATES**", THE CONSTITUTION AND BILL OF RIGHTS DO NOT APPLY
17 TO YOU!

18 So I ask again... ARE YOU A "CITIZEN OF THE UNITED STATES"?

19 If you say YES(!)...you have THROWN YOUR BILL OF RIGHTS IN THE TOILET!!!

20 The answer most likely is NO! The Fourteenth Amendment says ... "and subject to the jurisdiction thereof". If they meant
21 the jurisdiction of the 50 Union states, it would have read "and subject to their jurisdiction" as the Thirteenth Amendment
22 says regarding slavery. The jurisdiction of the United States** has been held over and over by the courts to be the District
23 of Columbia, territories, enclaves, any area of land the Federal government "OWNS". The Federal government does not
24 "OWN" the 50 Union states, it was CREATED by these States! If you are a regular AMERICAN, born in one of the 50
25 Union states, you are a NATURAL BORN CITIZEN, a Citizen of the state you were born in and a national of the 26 United States***, one of "We The People".

27 3C American Jurisprudence 2d, Aliens and Citizens, §2689 (1999), Who is born in United States and subject to
28 United States jurisdiction

29 "A person is born subject to the jurisdiction of the United States, for purposes of acquiring citizenship at birth,
30 if his or her birth occurs in territory over which the United States is sovereign, even though another
31 country provides all governmental services within the territory, and the territory is subsequently ceded to the 32 other country."
33 [3C American Jurisprudence 2d, Aliens and Citizens, §2689 (1999)]

34 The 50 Union states ARE NOT TERRITORIES and the UNITED STATES IS NOT SOVEREIGN OVER THEM!! Why
35 would anyone want to be a federal citizen anyway? Some people say they can't vote in a national election without being a
36 U.S. citizen, but if they aren't paying income taxes, who cares if they have representation?

37 (If we elect people in our state to REPRESENT US in the federal government anyway!!)

38 "Since in common usage the term 'person' does not include the SOVEREIGN, statutes employing that term are 39 ordinarily construed to exclude it"

40 U.S. v. Cooper, 312 U.S. 600 (1941)

41 U.S. v. General Motors, 2 F.R.D. 528

42 U.S. v. United Mine Workers, 330 U.S. 258 (1947)

1 Here we have 3 cites that ADMIT THERE IS SOMETHING CALLED SOVEREIGN, IMPLY THAT PEOPLE CAN BE 2 SOVEREIGN, AND ADMIT THAT STATUTORY LAW IS NOT BINDING ON THEM.

3 We have prepared a series of deposition questions that focus on citizenship for use in an administrative due process hearing
4 or an IRS deposition. You can use this series of questions to reveal the truth to the IRS and defeat most of their bogus
5 arguments. These questions are found at:

8 4.13.1 Introduction

9 The purpose of the following subsections relating to citizenship is to establish with evidence the following facts:

- 10 1. That deception is often times caused by abuse, misuse, and purposeful misapplication of “words of art” and failing to 11 distinguish the context in which such words are used on government forms and in legal proceedings.
- 12 2. That there are two different jurisdictions and contexts in which the word “citizen” can be applied: statutory v.
13 constitutional.
- 14 3. That the government purposefully tries to deceive constitutional citizens into falsely identifying themselves through 15 willful abuse of “words of art” into declaring themselves as statutory citizens on government forms and in legal
16 pleadings. This causes a surrender of all constitutional rights and operates to their extreme detriment by creating
17 lifetime indentured financial servitude and surety in relation to the government. This occurs because a statutory citizen
18 maintains a domicile on federal territory, and the Bill of Rights does not apply on federal territory.

19 “CONSTITUTIONAL RESTRICTIONS AND LIMITATIONS [Bill of Rights] WERE NOT APPLICABLE to the 20 areas of lands, enclaves, territories, and possessions over which Congress had EXCLUSIVE LEGISLATIVE

22 [Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 (1901)]

- 23 4. That once you falsely or improperly declare your status as that of statutory citizen, you are also declaring your 24 domicile to be within the District of Columbia pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(39) and 26 U.S.C. §7408(d).
- 25 5. That 8 U.S.C. §1401 defines a statutory “citizen of the United States”, where “United States” means the federal zone
26 and excludes states of the Union.
- 27 6. That the Fourteenth Amendment, Section 1 defines a constitutional “citizen of the United States”, where “United 28 States” means states of the Union and excludes the federal zone.
- 29 7. That the term “citizen of the United States” as used in the Fourteenth Amendment, Section 1 of the constitution is NOT 30 equivalent and mutually exclusive to the statutory “citizen of the United States” defined in 8 U.S.C. §1401. Another
31 way of restating this is that you cannot simultaneously be a constitutional “citizen of the United States” (Fourteenth 32 Amendment) and a statutory “citizen of the United States” (8 U.S.C. §1401).

34 *opens with a definition of citizenship—not only citizenship of the United States[***], but citizenship of the*
35 states. No such definition was previously found in the Constitution, nor had any attempt been made to define
36 it by act of Congress. It had been the occasion of much discussion in the courts, by the executive departments
37 and in the public journals. It had been said by eminent judges that no man was a citizen of the United
38 *States[***] except as he was a citizen of one of the states composing the Union. Those therefore, who had*
39 been born and resided always in the District of Columbia or in the territories, though within the United
40 *States[*], were not citizens. Whether this proposition was sound or not had never been judicially decided.”*
41 [Slaughter-House Cases, 83 U.S. (16 Wall.) 36, 21 L.Ed. 394 (1873)]

- 42 8. That the term “U.S. citizen” as used on federal and state forms means a statutory “citizen of the United States” as 43 defined in 8 U.S.C. §1401.
- 44 9. That a human being born within and domiciled within a state of the Union and not within a federal territory or 45 possession is:

9.1. A Fourteenth Amendment section 1 constitutional “citizen of the United States”.

“It is impossible to construe the words ‘subject to the jurisdiction thereof,’ in the opening sentence, as less comprehensive than the words ‘within its jurisdiction,’ in the concluding sentence of the same section; or to hold that persons ‘within the jurisdiction’ of one of the states of the Union are not ‘subject to the jurisdiction of the United States.’”

U.S. v. Wong Kim Ark, [169 U.S. 649, 18 S.Ct. 456, 42 L.Ed. 890 (1898), emphasis added]

9.2. A “national” but not a “citizen” as defined in 8 U.S.C. §1101\(a\)\(21\) in respect to the federal government.

9.3. Not a statutory “citizen of the United States” pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1401.

10. That a person born within and domiciled within a state of the Union is a non-resident non-person and a “foreign sovereign” and part of a “foreign state” with respect to the United States Government. If they are engaged in a public office, they instead are a “nonresident alien” as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701\(b\)\(1\)\(B\).
11. That the federal government uses the exceptions to the Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act found in 28 U.S.C. §1605\(a\)\(2\) to turn “nonresident aliens” into “resident aliens” as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701\(b\)\(1\)\(A\). It does this by offering commercial benefits to persons outside its jurisdiction and thereby making them “residents”.
12. That our government has a financial interest to deceive us about our true citizenship status in order to:
  - 12.1. Encourage and expand the flow of unlawfully collected income tax revenues (commerce).
  - 12.2. Expand its jurisdiction and control over the populace.
13. That the purpose of deliberate government deceptions about citizenship is to destroy the separation of powers between the states and the federal government that is the foundation of the Constitution of the United States of America and to destroy the protections of the Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act. It does this by:
  - 13.1. Using “social insurance” as a form of commerce that makes Americans into “resident aliens” of the District of Columbia, which is what “United States” is defined as in 26 U.S.C. §7701\(a\)\(9\) and (a)(10).
  - 13.2. Misleading Americans into falsely declaring their status on government forms as that of a “U.S. citizen”, and thereby losing their status as a “foreign state” under the provisions of 28 U.S.C. §1603\(b\)\(3\).
14. That if you are a concerned American, you cannot let this fraud continue and must act to remedy this situation immediately by taking some of the steps below.

If, after reading this document, you decide that you want to do something positive with the information you read here to improve your life and restore your sovereignty, the following options are available:

1. If you want to take an activist role in fighting this fraud, see: <http://famguardian.org/Subjects/Activism/Activism.htm>
2. If you want to contact the government to correct all their records describing your citizenship and tax status in order to remove all the false information about your status that you have submitted to them in the past, you may use the following excellent form for this purpose:

Legal Notice of Change in Domicile/Citizenship Records and Divorce from the United States, Form #10.001

4.13.2 Sovereignty

Sovereignty is the status fought for and won by our forefathers from the British Empire, and has since become the birthright of all Natural Born Americans, and via our Constitution, we extend this status to foreign-born persons as well through our naturalization laws.

The term Sovereign is defined in Webster's Dictionary as:

"sovereign. 1. a: one possessing or held to possess sovereignty b: one that exercises supreme authority within a limited sphere c: an acknowledged leader: ARBITER ""
[Webster's Ninth New Collegiate Dictionary, ISBN 0-87779-510-X, 1983, p. 1128]

In Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, the word "Sovereign" is defined as

"Sovereign. A person, body, or state in which independent and supreme authority is vested; a chief ruler with supreme power; a king or other ruler in a monarchy."
[Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1395]

At the time of the Revolution, the King of England was the sovereign and the people within the Colonies were his subjects. After the colonies won the war with Britain, the people wanted a different status, which did not call for them to serve any man, King or body government:

"The sovereignty has been transferred from one man to the collective body of the people - and he who before was a 'subject of the king' is now 'a citizen of the State.'"

There is a movement within our country by persons who are reclaiming the sovereignty that is rightfully inherent in the people of this land. By definition, as sovereigns, we are free to be and do anything we want. At first glance this seem to imply that the sovereign is free of all social and moral constraints. Without qualification this could lead to what might be termed Sovereign Immunity Syndrome, i.e., a condition whereby one believes he/she is the only sovereign and therefore is above the law, as opposed to a sovereign who is surrounded by a whole world of other sovereigns, each having been endowed with the same unalienable rights.

Common Law has two major governing precepts. First, as a sovereign one is free to be and do anything he/she pleases as long as whatever is done does not injure another sovereign in his/her person, character or property; and second, that the sovereign honor all contracts and agreements that were entered into knowingly, voluntarily and willingly. Here is the way one spirited Libertarian party member described this responsibility of those who are "sovereign":

"Your freedom to use your fist ends where my nose begins."

To have freedom as a sovereign requires ultimate personal responsibility. Because one becomes aware of his/her sovereignty does not grant license to ride rough shod over whoever gets in the way or whoever doesn't have the same awareness of his/her sovereignty. The genuine sovereign will give respect to all other sovereigns, even those who may not be currently aware that they are sovereign. There is no asking permission to be sovereign. If you were born and are a real flesh and blood human, you are sovereign. That does not however guarantee that the sovereignty potential has been actualized. There is a Latin term in law, res ipsa loquitur, which means the thing speaks for itself. If one is truly living as a sovereign, it will speak for itself. Unfortunately, in our land the vast majority are sovereigns who have yet to realize and actualize their potential.

Prior to the statutory maze that now curses the citizenry of this land we were subject to the law of the land. The United States, by way of the Constitution, adopted the Common Laws of England. Caldwell v. Hill, 176 S.E. 383 (1934). The Law of the Land means the Common Law Taylor v. Porter, (4 Hill) 140, 146, State v. Simon, (2 Spears) 761, 767.

The Constitution was adopted and made by people in their capacity as Sovereigns. They described themselves as “We the People” in the document, and they capitalized all references to their name. Sovereigns are always capitalized within written law. The words “We the People”, “Person”, and “Citizen” are all capitalized throughout the Constitution of the United States. Therefore, as a whole, the United States emanates from the people and the laws and constitutions of the several states are subordinate to the Constitution of the United States and the laws made pursuant to it.

The words 'people of the United States' and 'citizens,' are synonymous terms, and mean the same thing. They both describe the political body who, according to our republican institutions, form the sovereignty, and who hold the power and conduct the government through their representatives. They are what we familiarly call the 'sovereign people,' and every citizen is one of this people, and a constituent member of this sovereignty. ..."
 Boyd v. State of Nebraska, [143 U.S. 135 (1892)]

"Here [in America] sovereignty rests with the People."
 [Chisholm v. Georgia, (2 Dall) 415, 472]

"To the Constitution of the United States the term SOVEREIGN is totally unknown. There is but one place where it could have been used with propriety. But, even in that place it would not, perhaps, have comported with the delicacy of those who ordained and established that Constitution. They might have announced themselves 'SOVEREIGN' people of the United States. But serenely conscious of the fact, they avoided the ostentatious declaration."

Thus, the People themselves, both singly or collectively, are sovereign, supra at 456, over both the State and the federal government and are the true SOVEREIGNS within our society.

"It will be admitted on all hands that with the exception of the powers granted to the states and the federal government, through the Constitutions, the people of the several states are unconditionally sovereign within their respective states."
 [Ohio L. Ins. & T. Co. v. Debolt, 16 How. 416, 14 L.Ed. 997 ]

"The people of the state, as the successors of its former sovereign, are entitled to all the rights which formerly belonged to the king by his own prerogative."
 [Lansing v. Smith, (1829) 4 Wendell 9, (NY)]

The Privileges and Immunities of a Citizen of a state of the Union are completely different than those of a "citizen of the United States", see K. Tashiro v Jordan, 201 Cal. 236, 246, 256 p. 545 (1927). The United States Supreme Court in National City Bank v. Republic of China, 348 U.S. 356, 99 L.Ed. 389, 75 S.Ct. 423 (1955) stated at page 363:

"(a) The Court of Claims is available to foreign nationals (or their governments)..."

The Executive Branch's agency, the Internal Revenue Service, has also recognized this by stating in the Internal Revenue Manual (I.R.M.), Section 35.18.10.1 that those who are “nationals” and therefore “nonresident aliens” and who wish to sue the government for violations of the tax code MUST do so only in the Court of Claims and cannot file suit in Federal District Court:

Internal Revenue Manual (I.R.M.), Section 35.18.10.1 (08-31-1982) District Courts

*Section 1402(a)(1) of the Judicial Code (28 U.S.C. §1402(a)(1)) provides that if an action is brought against the United States under section 1346(a) of the Judicial Code by an entity other than a corporation, it must be brought in the judicial district where the plaintiff resides. Accordingly, where an individual resides outside of the [federal] United States (e.g., a nonresident alien), he or she may not bring a refund suit in a district court. Malajalian v. United States, 504 F.2d. 842 (1st Cir. 1974). These cases may be brought only in the Court of Claims.*

This premise is based on the legal maxim that Sovereigns enjoy judicial immunity under the Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act (F.S.I.A.) and that no enforceable right exists against the Sovereign [the people] who makes the laws:

"A sovereign is exempt from suit, not because of any formal conception or obsolete theory, but on the logical and practical ground that there can be no legal right as against the authority that makes the law on which the right depends."
 [Kawananakoa v. Polybank, 205 U.S. 349, 353]

1 It is undisputable that the Citizens of the several states United granted limited powers to the federal government, because
 2 the people are vested with complete sovereignty. The Constitution of each state created the state, and the federal
 3 Constitution created the federal government. The creation, which is the government so formed, cannot be greater than the
 4 Creator, which is the sovereign People. State and federal governments, through the IRS or state revenue agencies, cannot
 5 destroy or embarrass the sovereign people, whether it be their property, by takings, or their credit ratings, by manufacturing
 6 false debts without legal authority. Only by voluntary consent and no enforcement authority whatsoever may they proceed
 7 against the Sovereign People, or they proceed unlawfully and commit a tort.

8 "The great principle is this: because the constitution will not permit a state to destroy, it will not permit a law 9 involving the power to destroy."
 10 [Providence Bank v. Billings, 29 U.S. 514 (1830)]

11 Those who are truly "sovereign" cannot be the subject of any federal statute or "act of Congress" and in fact, their rights
 12 can't even be defined or circumscribed by any law. The main purpose of law is to protect people's rights by controlling and 13 limiting and defining the delegated authority of public servants. Laws keep our "public servants" inside a box, but do not
 14 regulate or control the People, who are their Masters. To even define rights is to limit them. Furthermore, all federal 15 statutes that apply to these public servants only have jurisdiction inside the federal zone anyway by default. Recall from 16 our earlier discussion that the federal zone is not covered by the Bill of Rights, so Congress had to write federal laws as a
 17 substitute for the Bill Of Rights within the federal zone only. We should always remember who those laws exclusively 18 apply to: those domiciled in the federal zone, federal instrumentalities, public officers, and federal statutory "employees".
 19 This isn't you, my friend! Laws control, and sovereigns can't be controlled, because according to the Supreme Court as 20 stated above in Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U.S. 356 (1886), sovereignty is the source of law, not the object of it.

21 "When we consider the nature and the theory of our institutions of government, the principles on which they are
 22 supposed to rest, and review the history of their development, we are constrained to conclude that they do not
 23 mean to leave room for the play and action of purely personal and arbitrary power. Sovereignty itself is, of 24 course, not subject to law, for it is the author and source of law; but in our system, while sovereign powers
 25 are delegated to the agencies of government, sovereignty itself remains with the people, by whom and for 26 whom all government exists and acts. And the law is the definition and limitation of power. It is, indeed, quite 27 true that there must always be lodged somewhere, and in some person or body, the authority of final decision;
 28 and in many cases of mere administration, the responsibility is purely political, no appeal lying except to the 29 ultimate tribunal of the public judgment, exercised either in the pressure of opinion, or by means of the 30 suffrage. But the fundamental rights to life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness, considered as individual
 31 possessions, are secured by those maxims of constitutional law which are the monuments showing the victorious
 32 progress of the race in securing to men the blessings of civilization under the reign of just and equal laws, so
 33 that, in the famous language of the Massachusetts bill of rights, the government of the commonwealth 'may be a
 34 government of laws and not of men.' For the very idea that one man may be compelled to hold his life, or the
 35 means of living, or any material right essential to the enjoyment of life, at the mere will of another, seems to 36 be intolerable in any country where freedom prevails, as being the essence of slavery itself."
 37 [Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U.S. 356 (1886)]

38 Remember who wrote the Constitution: "We the People". The Constitution is law, and you are a part of the group of 39 sovereign people it was written by and for: We the People.

40 "And the Constitution itself is in every real sense a law-the lawmakers being the people themselves, in whom
 41 under our system all political power and sovereignty primarily resides, and through whom such power and
 42 sovereignty primarily speaks. It is by that law, and not otherwise, that the legislative, executive, and judicial
 43 agencies which it created exercise such political authority as they have been permitted to possess. The
 44 Constitution speaks for itself in terms so plain that to misunderstand their import is not rationally possible.
 45 'We the People of the United States,' it says, 'do ordain and establish this Constitution.' Ordain and establish!
 46 These are definite words of enactment, and without more would stamp what follows with the dignity and
 47 character of law. The framers of the Constitution, however, were not content to let the matter rest here, but
 48 provided explicitly-'This Constitution, and the Laws of the United States which shall be made in Pursuance
 49 thereof; ... shall be the supreme Law of the Land.' (Const. art. 6, cl. 2.) The supremacy of the Constitution as
 50 law is thus declared without qualification. That supremacy is absolute; the supremacy of a statute enacted by
 51 Congress is not absolute but conditioned upon its being made in pursuance of the Constitution. And a
 52 judicial tribunal, clothed by that instrument with complete judicial power, and, therefore, by the very nature of
 53 the power, required to ascertain and apply the law to the facts in every case or proceeding properly brought for 54 adjudication, must apply the supreme law and reject the inferior stat- [298 U.S. 238, 297] ute whenever
 55 the two conflict. In the discharge of that duty, the opinion of the lawmakers that a statute passed by them is 56 *valid must be given great weight, Adkins v. Children's Hospital, 261 U.S. 525, 544, 43 S.Ct. 394, 24 A.L.R. 1238; but their opinion, or the court's opinion, that the statute will prove greatly or generally beneficial is*
 58 [Carter v. Carter Coal Co., 298 U.S. 238 (1936)]

You are a Sovereign. The constitution excludes you from federal jurisdiction in all but a very few minor cases and protects your rights with the Bill of Rights. As you will learn later in section 4.13.12 et seq, this condition of “sovereign immunity” is exactly a condition of citizenship called “national” or “state national”, which is defined in section 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21). The rights and privileges of “nationals” are nowhere limited in title 8 of the U.S. Code, and this is definitely no accident. Nowhere in the U.S. Code are duties or liabilities imposed upon “nationals” because they are sovereign. Do a search of the U.S. Code for the word “national of the United States” and verify this for yourself if you like. The method for becoming a “national” and a “nonresident alien” under federal law as a person born outside of federal jurisdiction (the “United States” in federal law) and in a state of the Union is nowhere described in federal law and this is no accident. These people are NOT subject to federal law or federal jurisdiction! That is what makes them sovereign to begin with. The only way a sovereign can ever lose his or her sovereignty is one of the following four methods:

1. By injuring the equal rights of another sovereign, thereby forfeiting their own rights in the process, which then subjects them to criminal and civil liability only towards the person they injured, and not towards the government.
2. By electing as a “nonresident alien” to be treated as an “alien” subject to federal jurisdiction, who is called a “resident” within the Internal Revenue Code. This election is done under the authority of 26 U.S.C. §6013(g).
3. By misrepresenting our status to the government, and claiming to be “U.S. citizens” or “resident” on a government form, both of which do not describe those born in states of the Union. Under the Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act (F.S.I.A.), 28 U.S.C. §§1602-1611, “U.S. citizens” are exempted from being classified as “foreign sovereigns” and enjoying the benefits of sovereign immunity. See 28 U.S.C. §1603(b) and 28 U.S.C. §1332(c) and (d).
4. Signing or consenting verbally to any contract with the government that causes us to surrender our rights. For instance, anyone who has or uses a Socialist Security Number is “presumed” to be a “U.S. citizen”:

26 C.F.R. §301.6109-1(g)

(g) Special rules for taxpayer identifying numbers issued to foreign persons--(1) General rule--(i) Social security number. A social security number is generally identified in the records and database of the Internal Revenue Service as a number belonging to a U.S. citizen or resident alien individual. A person may establish a different status for the number by providing proof of foreign status with the Internal Revenue Service under such procedures as the Internal Revenue Service shall prescribe, including the use of a form as the Internal Revenue Service may specify. Upon accepting an individual as a nonresident alien individual, the Internal Revenue Service will assign this status to the individual's social security number.

The last three methods of losing our sovereignty above are usually done because of ignorance or stupidity. The first one is accomplished through malice and violation of God’s Holy laws. When we violate God’s laws, our punishment is an eye for an eye, and a tooth for a tooth, just as the Bible says. When you take away or violate other people’s equal rights, you lose yours also. This loss of rights executed in the interests of public protection is the main source of most government jurisdiction over sovereigns. This approach, in fact, is the essence of equal protection of the laws that is the foundation of our system of jurisprudence and of Jesus’ “Golden Rule”:

*“Therefore, whatever you want men to do to you, do also to them, for this is the Law and the Prophets.”
[Jesus in Matt. 7:12, Bible, NKJV]*

[Exodus 21:23-25, Bible, NKJV]*

When we injure the rights of a fellow sovereign, then we violate our contract or covenant with God Himself in the Bible to love our neighbor. Those who love their neighbor don’t hurt him. The essence of justice is not hurting our neighbor, and its purpose is making sure we take responsibility when we do. This is a duty owed to God. Since our rights come from God and He protects them as the Divine judge, then we owe allegiance and have a personal duty to love and honor Him. As attorney Eduardo Rivera said:

[Eduardo Rivera]*

Therefore, don’t foolishly go searching in federal statutes for a statute that limits or even defines your rights or duties as a Sovereign. The closest any federal statute can come is to give a name to your status. You don’t need a federal statute to define your rights. The Bill of Rights and the Constitution afford all the definition necessary for your rights, and no vain statute (written by a covetous politician) is necessary to file a claim in any court for invasion of those rights by any government official. Remember? Your rights as a Sovereign don’t come from any vain law passed by a bunch of greedy

1 lawyers in the District of Columbia (Washington, D.C.) who sit around all day trying to invent new ways to steal more of 2 your money. They come from God Himself!

3 "What right have you [in Congress, any judge in a federal court, or in any legislative body for that matter]
4 to declare My [God's] statutes [write man's vain law], or take My covenant [the Bible] in your mouth, seeing
5 you hate instruction and cast My words behind you? When you saw a thief [another politician or a greedy
6 voter], you consented with him, and have been a partaker with adulterers. You give your mouth to evil, and 7 your tongue frames deceit [in the tax code]. You [in the Department of Justice, see:
8 <http://www.usdoj.gov/tax/TEN.htm>] sit and speak against your brother; you slander your own mother's son.
9 These things you have done, and I kept silent; you thought that I was altogether like you; but I will reprove you,
10 and set them in order before your eyes. Now consider this, you who forget God, lest I tear you in pieces, and 11 there be none to deliver: Whoever offers praise glorifies Me; and to him who orders his conduct aright I will 12 show the salvation of God."
13 [Psalm 50:16-23, Bible, NKJV]

14 A true "sovereign" is immune from the jurisdiction of laws and courts. This immunity results mainly from any one of the 15 following three factors:

- 16 1. Coming under the provisions of the "Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act" of 1976, codified in 28 U.S.C. Chapter 97 at:
17 http://assembler.law.cornell.edu/uscode/html/uscode28/usc\_sup\_01\_28\_10\_IV\_20\_97.html
- 18 2. Diplomatic immunity found in 4 U.S.C. §112.
- 19 3. Being "foreign" to, or outside of the legislative and territorial and subject matter jurisdiction of the United States
20 government.

21 A person who is a sovereign but doesn't know what his rights are and doesn't understand or read the law will quickly
22 become a slave and a victim of shysters in the legal profession and be bilked of all of his property and wealth.

23 "A fool and his money are soon parted." [Benjamin Franklin]

24 That is why it is absolutely crucial for you to read and understand at least chapters 3 through 5 of this book: as protection
25 for your rights:

26 "Only the educated are free."
27 [Epicetus, Discourses]

28 "Knowledge will forever govern ignorance, and people who mean to be their own governors, must arm 29 themselves with the power which knowledge gives."
30 [James Madison]

31 "...the greatest menace to freedom is an inert [passive, ignorant, and uneducated] people [who refuse, as 32 jurists and voters and active citizens, to expose and punish evil in our government]"
33 Whitney v. California, [274 U.S. 357 (1927)]

34 "The American people have always regarded education and acquisition of knowledge as matters of supreme 35 importance which should be diligently promoted in order to maintain and protect their [liberty]. The Ordinance
36 of 1787 declares: 'Religion, morality and knowledge being necessary to good government and the happiness
37 [and liberty] of mankind, schools and the means of education shall forever be encouraged.'
38 Meyer v. State of Nebraska, [262 U.S. 390 (1923)]

39 "And thou shalt teach them ordinances and laws of both [God and man], and shalt shew them the way wherein 40 they must walk, and the work [of obedience to God] that they must do."
41 [Exodus 18:20, Bible, NKJV]

42 "My [God's] people are destroyed [and enslaved] for lack of knowledge [and the lack of education that 43 produces it]."
44 [Hosea 4:6, Bible, NKJV]

45 4.13.3 "Statutory" v. "Constitutional" Citizens

46 Understanding the distinction between nationality and domicile is absolutely critical.

- 47 1. Nationality:
- 48 1.1. Is a political status.

- 1.2. Is defined by the Constitution, which is a political document.
- 1.3. Is synonymous with being a “national” within statutory law.
- 1.4. Is associated with a specific COUNTRY.
2. Domicile:
  - 2.1. Is a civil status.
  - 2.2. Is not even addressed in the constitution.
  - 2.3. Is defined by civil statutory law RATHER than the constitution.
  - 2.4. Is in NO WAY connected with one’s nationality.
  - 2.5. Is usually connected with the word “citizen”, “resident”, or inhabitant in statutory law.
  - 2.6. Is associated with a specific COUNTY and a STATE rather than a COUNTRY.

Nationality and domicile, TOGETHER determine the political AND civil status of a human being. These important distinctions are recognized in Black’s Law Dictionary:

The U.S. Supreme Court also confirmed the above when they held the following. Note they key phrase “political jurisdiction”, which is NOT the same as legislative/statutory jurisdiction. One can have a political status of “citizen” under the constitution while NOT being a “citizen” under federal statutory law because not domiciled on federal territory. To have the status of “citizen” under federal statutory law, one must have a domicile on federal territory:

“This section contemplates two sources of citizenship, and two sources only,—birth and naturalization. The persons declared to be citizens are 'all persons born or naturalized in the United States, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof.' The evident meaning of these last words is, not merely subject in some respect or degree to the jurisdiction of the United States, but completely subject to their [plural, not singular, meaning states of the Union] political jurisdiction, and owing them [the state of the Union] direct and immediate allegiance. And the words relate to the time of birth in the one case, as they do [169 U.S. 649, 725] to the time of naturalization in the other. Persons not thus subject to the jurisdiction of the United States at the time of birth cannot become so afterwards, except by being naturalized, either individually, as by proceedings under the naturalization acts, or collectively, as by the force of a treaty by which foreign territory is acquired.”
 [U.S. v. Wong Kim Ark, 169 U.S. 649, 18 S.Ct. 456; 42 L.Ed. 890 (1898)]

 [Fong Yue Ting v. United States, 149 U.S. 698 (1893)]

Notice in the last quote above that they referred to a foreign national born in another country as a “citizen”. THIS is the “citizen” that judges and even tax withholding documents are really talking about, rather than the “national” described in the constitution.

Domicile and NOT nationality is what imputes a status under the tax code and a liability for tax. Tax liability is a civil liability that attaches to civil statutory law, which in turn attaches to the person through their choice of domicile. When you CHOOSE a domicile, you elect or nominate a protector, which in turn gives rise to an obligation to pay for the civil protection demanded. The method of providing that protection is the civil laws of the municipal (as in COUNTY) jurisdiction that you chose a domicile within.

“domicile. A person's legal home. That place where a man has his true, fixed, and permanent home and principal establishment, and to which whenever he is absent he has the intention of returning. Smith v. Smith, 206 Pa.Super. 310, 213 A.2d. 94. Generally, physical presence within a state and the intention to make it one's home are the requisites of establishing a "domicile" therein. The permanent residence of a person or the place to which he intends to return even though he may actually reside elsewhere. A person may have more than one residence but only one domicile. The legal domicile of a person is important since it, rather than the actual residence, often controls the jurisdiction of the taxing authorities and determines where a person may exercise the privilege of voting and other legal rights and privileges.”
 [Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 485]

1 Later versions of Black's Law Dictionary attempt to cloud this important distinction between nationality and domicile in
 2 order to unlawfully and unconstitutionally expand federal power into the states of the Union and to give federal judges
 3 unnecessary and unwarranted discretion to kidnap people into their jurisdiction using false presumptions. They do this by 4 trying to make you believe that domicile and nationality are equivalent, when they are EMPHATICALLY NOT. Here is an
 5 example:

6 "nationality – The relationship between a citizen of a nation and the nation itself, customarily involving
 7 allegiance by the citizen and protection by the state; membership in a nation. This term is often used
 8 synonymously with citizenship."
 9 [Black's Law Dictionary (8th ed. 2004)]

10 Federal courts regard the term "citizenship" as equivalent to domicile, meaning domicile on federal territory.

 12 Co. v. Petrowsky, C.C.A.N.Y., 250 F. 554, 557;"
 13 [Black's Law Dictionary, Fourth Edition, p. 310]

14 Hence:

- 15 1. The term "citizenship" is being stealthily used by government officials as a magic word that allows them to hide their 16 presumptions about your status. Sometimes they use it to mean NATIONALITY, and sometimes they use it to mean
 17 DOMICILE.
- 18 2. The use of the word "citizenship" should therefore be AVOIDED when dealing with the government because its 19 meaning is unclear and leaves too much discretion to judges and prosecutors.
- 20 3. When someone from any government uses the word "citizenship", you should:
  - 21 3.1. Tell them NOT to use the word, and instead to use "nationality" or "domicile".
  - 22 3.2. Ask them whether they mean "nationality" or "domicile".
  - 23 3.3. Ask them WHICH political subdivision they imply a domicile within: federal territory or a constitutional state of 24 the Union.

25 A failure to either understand or apply the above concepts can literally mean the difference between being a government pet
 26 in a legal cage called a franchise, and being a free and sovereign man or woman.

27 4.13.3.1 LEGAL/STATUTORY CIVIL status v. POLITICAL/CONSTITUTIONAL Status

28 The following cite from U.S. v. Wong Kim Ark confirms our research on citizenship, by admitting that there are TWO 29 components that determine citizenship status: NATIONALITY and DOMICILE.

 31 question whether the domicile of the father was in England or in Scotland, he being in either alternative a
 32 British subject. Lord Chancellor Hatherley said: 'The question of naturalization and of allegiance is distinct
 33 from that of domicile.' Page 452. Lord Westbury, in the passage relied on by the counsel for the United States,
 34 began by saying: 'The law of England, and of almost all civilized countries, ascribes to each individual at his
 35 birth two distinct legal states or conditions,—one by virtue of which he becomes the subject [NATIONAL] of
 36 some particular country, binding him by the tie of natural allegiance, and which may be called his political
 37 status; another by virtue of which he has ascribed to him the character of a citizen of some particular
 38 country, and as such is possessed of certain municipal rights, and subject to certain obligations, which latter
 39 character is the civil status or condition of the individual, and may be quite different from his political
 40 status.' And then, while maintaining that the civil status is universally governed by the single principle of
 41 domicile (domicilium), the criterion established by international law for the purpose of determining civil
 42 status, and the basis on which 'the personal rights of the party—that is to say, the law which determines his
 43 majority or minority, his marriage, succession, testacy, or intestacy— must depend,' he yet distinctly
 44 recognized that a man's political status, his country (patria), and his 'nationality,—that is, natural
 45 allegiance,—'may depend on different laws in different countries.' Pages 457, 460. He evidently used the word
 46 'citizen,' not as equivalent to 'subject,' but rather to 'inhabitant'; and had no thought of impeaching the
 47 established rule that all persons born under British dominion are natural-born subjects.

50 So:

1. The Constitution is a POLITICAL and not a LEGAL document. It therefore determines your POLITICAL status rather than your LEGAL/STATUTORY status.
2. Nationality determines your POLITICAL STATUS and whether you are a "subject" of the country.
3. DOMICILE determines your CIVIL and LEGAL and STATUTORY status. It DOES NOT determine your POLITICAL status or nationality.
4. Being a constitutional "citizen" per the Fourteenth Amendment is associated with nationality, not domicile.
5. Allegiance is associated with nationality, not domicile. Allegiance is what makes one a "subject" of a country.
6. Your municipal rights, meaning statutory CIVIL rights, associate with your choice of legal domicile, not your nationality or what country you are a subject of or have allegiance to.
7. Being a statutory "citizen" is associated with domicile, not nationality, because it is associated with being an inhabitant RATHER than a "subject".
8. A statutory "alien" under most acts of Congress is a person with a foreign DOMICILE, not a foreign NATIONALITY. By "foreign", we mean:
  - 8.1. Constitutional context: OUTSIDE of COUNTRY United States*.
  - 8.2. Statutory context: OUTSIDE of federal territory and the exclusive federal jurisdiction, and NOT outside the Constitutional United States*** (states of the Union).

The above is also completely consistent with the following article on this website:

Why Domicile and Becoming a "Taxpayer" Require Your Consent, Form #05.002

We know that "nationality" per 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) and 14th Amendment Constitutional citizenship are NOT the same. So, much like the "Chicken and the Egg" analogy -- what happens first, nationality or 14th Amendment Constitutional citizenship? Or does that occur simultaneously? It might at first appear from the analysis in this pamphlet that 14th Amendment Constitutional citizenship also applies to inhabitants of unincorporated and unorganized territory, but as pointed out by the court in Wong Kim Ark, supra., the domicile determines civil status, thus 14th Amendment Constitutional citizenship on U.S. Territory is inferior to that of 14th Amendment Constitutional citizenship on the Union -- but only by virtue of domicile. Change domicile and improve/denigrate your legal status either for the better or worse, as the case may be.

"Nationality" therefore cannot be the same thing as Constitutional citizenship, because citizens of American Samoa and Swains Island are not Constitutional Citizens according to the courts, yet they have the following statuses:

1. Political Status:
  - 1.1. "national" of the United States* - 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21).
  - 1.2. "national of the United States**" – 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22).
  - 1.3. "a person who, though not a citizen of the United States, owes permanent allegiance to the United States" per 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22)(B).
2. Civil Status: "national but not citizen of the United States** at birth" - 8 U.S.C. §1408 and 8 U.S.C. §1452.

So it must be concluded that nationality and Constitutional (e.g. Fourteenth Amendment) citizenship are NOT the same.

From the above article and the Supreme Court's own analysis above, it follows that that a "national of the United States***" (state citizen) cannot be a "citizen" or "resident" under federal statutory law without one of the following two conditions existing:

1. You are physically present on federal territory AT SOME POINT, AND legally domiciled there. This means the government as moving party has the burden of proving that you submitted a form indicating a "permanent address" in the statutory but not constitutional "United States", and that YOU MEANT that the "United States" indicated meant federal territory not within any state of the Union. This is impossible if you attach the following to every government form that you sign:

Affidavit of Citizenship, Domicile, and Tax Status, Form #02.001

2. You are representing a government entity that is domiciled on federal territory, such as a federal and not state corporation, as a public officer, for instance. Hence, Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 17(b) MUST apply. BUT they must produce evidence that you are lawfully occupying said public office and may not PRESUME that you do. Simply

1 citing a provision of the I.R.C. and thereby claiming the "benefits" of that franchise, for instance, is insufficient to
 2 CREATE said office. It must be created by some OTHER means because the I.R.C. doesn't authorize the CREATION
 3 of any new public offices, but regulates EXISTING public offices.

4 There is NO OTHER WAY for federal law from a legislatively foreign jurisdiction to be applied against a state citizen
 5 domiciled within a constitutional and not statutory state. Option 2 is the method most frequently used to legally but not
 6 physically KIDNAP most people and move their legal identity to federal territory.

7 4.13.3.2 Statutory citizen status is entirely voluntary and discretionary. Constitutional citizen status is NOT

8 An important distinction that needs to be understood by the reader is that no one can force you to acquire or retain statutory 9 "national and citizen of the United States" civil status. That status is entirely voluntary and discretionary. That is one of 10 the conclusions of the following pamphlet.

Your Exclusive Right to Declare or Establish Your Civil Status, Form #13.008

11 Why? Because the LEGAL status you use to describe yourself is how you:

- 12 1. Contract with other parties, including the government. The purpose of establishing government, in fact, is to protect 13 your right to both CONTRACT and NOT CONTRACT as you see fit. You don't become a "person" under a private 14 contract until you SIGN or consent in some way to the contract or agreement.
- 15 2. Politically and legally associate with groups you choose to associate with. The right of freedom of association and 16 freedom from COMPELLED association is protected by the First Amendment to the United States Constitution.
- 17 3. Choose or nominate the civil government that you want to protect your right to life, liberty, and property.
  - 18 3.1. Choosing a domicile is an act of political association that has legal consequences in which you nominate a 19 specific municipal government to protect your rights and property.
  - 20 3.2. If you never nominate such a government, then you retain the right to protect yourself and are not entitled to the

22 This is why the Declaration of Independence says that all just powers of government are derived from the consent of 23 the people. Those who don't consent can't be civilly governed. Yes, they are still liable for criminal infractions
 24 because the criminal laws do not require consent. Civil laws, however DO require consent of the governed, and all
 25 such civil laws attach to and associate with your choice of legal domicile.

26 Domicile is how you exercise right numbers 2 and 3 above. You can't be a statutory citizen without CHOOSING and 27 CONSENTING TO a civil domicile in the federal zone. You get to decide where your domicile is and you can change it at 28 ANY TIME! If you don't want to be a statutory citizen under federal law, change your domicile to a state of the Union and 29 correctly reflect that fact on government forms and correspondence.

30 The legal definition of "citizen" confirms that the status is voluntary. Notice the phrase "in their associated capacity",
 31 which is a First Amendment, voluntary act of political association. What the government doesn't want you to know is 32 WHAT status would you describe yourself with if you DO NOT consent to volunteer and yet did not expatriate your 33 nationality to become a constitutional alien?

34 citizen. One who, under the Constitution and laws of the United States[***], or of a particular state, is a
 35 member of the political community, owing allegiance and being entitled to the enjoyment of full civil rights.
 36 All persons born or naturalized in the United States[***], and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of 37 the United States[***] and of the state wherein they reside. U.S. Const., 14th Amend. See Citizenship.

38 "Citizens" are members of a political community who, in their associated capacity, have established or
 39 submitted themselves to the dominion of a government [by giving up their rights] for the promotion of their
 40 general welfare and the protection of their individual as well as collective rights. Herriott v. City of Seattle,
 41 81 Wash.2d. 48, 500 P.2d. 101, 109.
 42 [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 244]

43 The "full civil rights" they are talking about above are enforced through municipal CIVIL law, which in turn can only 44 attach to one's choice of legal domicile. Here is how the courts describe this process of volunteering to become a statutory
 45 "citizen":

"The people of the United States resident within any State are subject to two governments: one State, and the other National; but there need be no conflict between the two. The powers which one possesses, the other does not. They are established for different purposes, and have separate jurisdictions. Together they make one whole, and furnish the people of the United States with a complete government, ample for the protection of all their rights at home and abroad. True, it may sometimes happen that a person is amenable to both jurisdictions for one and the same act. Thus, if a marshal of the United States is unlawfully resisted while executing the process of the courts within a State, and the resistance is accompanied by an assault on the officer, the sovereignty of the United States is violated by the resistance, and that of the State by the breach of peace, in the assault. So, too, if one passes counterfeited coin of the United States within a State, it may be an offence against the United States and the State: the United States, because it discredits the coin; and the State, because of the fraud upon him to whom it is passed. This does not, however, necessarily imply that the two governments possess powers in common, or bring them into conflict with each other. It is the natural consequence of a citizenship [92 U.S. 542, 551] which owes allegiance to two sovereignties, and claims protection from both.

The citizen cannot complain, because he has voluntarily submitted himself to such a form of government. He owes allegiance to the two departments, so to speak, and within their respective spheres must pay the penalties which each exacts for disobedience to its laws. In return, he can demand protection from each within its own jurisdiction."

If the status is voluntary, then there MUST be some way to "un-volunteer", right? How is it that the "citizen" CANNOT complain? Because if he DIDN'T voluntarily submit himself to a specific state or national government by choosing a civil domicile within that specific government and thereby become subject to the civil laws of that place, he wouldn't call himself a statutory "citizen" under the civil law to begin with! Instead, he would call himself or herself any of the following terms in relation to that specific government and on all government forms he or she fills out. This is the HUGE secret that no one in the government or the courts want to talk about, in fact and will HIDE at every opportunity, because it renders them COMPLETELY powerless to govern you civilly.

- 1 "nonresident"
- 2 "transient foreigner"
- 3 "stateless person"
- 4 "in transitu"
- 5 "transient"
- 6 "sojourner"

The state courts recognize that calling oneself a "U.S. citizen" is voluntary and hence, that you can instead refer to yourself as simply a "non-resident non-person" so as to avoid being confused with a statutory citizen as follows:

"[W]e find nothing...which requires that a citizen of a state must also be a citizen of the United States, if no question of federal rights or jurisdiction is involved."
[Crosse v. Bd. of Supvrs of Elections, 221 A.2d. 431 (1966)]

The U.S. Department of State Foreign Affairs Manual also confirms that calling oneself a "U.S. citizen" or "citizen of the United States" is voluntary with the following language:

"7 Foreign Affairs Manual (F.A.M.), Section 012(a)

a. U.S. Nationals Eligible for Consular Protection and Other Services:

Nationality is the principal relationship that connects an individual to a State. International law recognizes the right of a State to afford diplomatic and consular protection to its nationals and to represent their interests. Under U.S. law the term "national" is inclusive of citizens but "citizen" is not inclusive of nationals. All U.S. citizens are U.S. nationals. Section 101(a)(22) INA (8 U.S.C. 1101(a)(22)) provides that the term "national of the United States" means (A) a citizen of the United States, or (B) a person who, though not a citizen of the United States, owes permanent allegiance to the United States. U.S. nationals are eligible for U.S. consular protection.

Below is an example of a case involving a party who had no civil domicile in either a statutory "States", meaning federal territory, or a constitutional state of the Union, and hence was classified by the court as a "stateless person" who had to be dismissed from a class action lawsuit because he was BEYOND the civil jurisdiction of federal court.

In order to be a citizen of a State within the meaning of the diversity statute, a natural person must both be a citizen of the United States and be domiciled within the State. See Robertson v. Cease, 97 U.S. 646, 648-649 (1878); Brown v. Keene, 8 Pet. 112, 115 (1834). The problem in this case is that Bettison, although a United States citizen, has no domicile in any State. He is therefore "stateless" for purposes of § 1332(a)(3). Subsection 1332(a)(2), which confers jurisdiction in the District Court when a citizen of a State sues aliens only, also could not be satisfied because Bettison is a United States citizen. [490 U.S. 829]

When a plaintiff sues more than one defendant in a diversity action, the plaintiff must meet the requirements of the diversity statute for each defendant or face dismissal. Strawbridge v. Curtiss, 3 Cranch 267 (1806).{1} Here, Bettison's "stateless" status destroyed complete diversity under § 1332(a)(3), and his United States citizenship destroyed complete diversity under § 1332(a)(2). Instead of dismissing the case, however, the Court of Appeals panel granted Newman-Green's motion, which it had invited, to amend the complaint to drop Bettison as a party, thereby producing complete diversity under § 1332(a)(2). 832 F.2d. 417 (1987). The panel, in an opinion by Judge Easterbrook, relied both on 28 U.S.C. §1653 and on Rule 21 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure as sources of its authority to grant this motion. The panel noted that, because the guarantors are jointly and severally liable, Bettison is not an indispensable party, and dismissing him would not prejudice the remaining guarantors. 832 F.2d. at 420, citing Fed.Rule Civ.Proc. 19(b). The panel then proceeded to the merits of the case, ruling in Newman-Green's favor in large part, but remanding to allow the District Court to quantify damages and to resolve certain minor issues.{2} [Newman-Green v. Alfonso Larrain, 490 U.S. 826 (1989) ]

Only those who are constitutional aliens WHEN PHYSICALLY PRESENT WITHIN A FOREIGN COUNTRY can be forced to submit themselves to the civil jurisdiction of that country absent their consent and voluntary choice of domicile. Those who are not constitutional aliens, such as a state nationals, CANNOT be forced and must consent to be governed by choosing a domicile. The U.S. Supreme Court describes the process of FORCING aliens into a privileged status to have a residence in that place and be subject to the civil laws as an “implied license”:

The reasons for not allowing to other aliens exemption 'from the jurisdiction of the country in which they are found' were stated as follows: 'When private individuals of one nation [states of the Unions are "nations" under the law of nations] spread themselves through another as business or caprice may direct, mingling indiscriminately with the inhabitants of that other, or when merchant vessels enter for the purposes of trade, it would be obviously inconvenient and dangerous to society, and would subject the laws to continual infraction, and the government to degradation, if such individuals or merchants did not owe temporary and local allegiance, and were not amenable to the jurisdiction of the country. Nor can the foreign sovereign have any motive for wishing such exemption. His subjects thus passing into foreign countries are not employed by him, nor are they engaged in national pursuits. Consequently, there are powerful motives for not exempting persons of this description from the jurisdiction of the country in which they are found, and no one motive for requiring it. The implied license, therefore, under which they enter, can never be construed to grant such exemption.' 7 Cranch, 144.

In short, the judgment in the case of The Exchange declared, as incontrovertible principles, that the jurisdiction of every nation within its own territory is exclusive and absolute, and is susceptible of no limitation not imposed by the nation itself; that all exceptions to its full and absolute territorial jurisdiction must be traced up to its own consent, express or implied; that upon its consent to cede, or to waive the exercise of, a part of its territorial jurisdiction, rest the exemptions from that jurisdiction of foreign sovereigns or their armies entering its territory with its permission, and of their foreign ministers and public ships of war; and that the implied license, under which private individuals of another nation enter the territory and mingle indiscriminately with its inhabitants, for purposes of business or pleasure, can never be construed to grant to them an exemption from the jurisdiction of the country in which they are found. See, also, Carlisle v. U.S. (1872) 16 Wall. 147, 155; Radich v. Hutchins (1877) 95 U.S. 210; Wildenhuis' Case (1887) 120 U.S. 1, 7 Sup.Ct. 385; Chae Chan Ping v. U.S. (1889) 130 U.S. 581, 603, 604, 9 Sup.Ct. 623. [United States v. Wong Kim Ark, 169 U.S. 649, 18 S.Ct. 456, 42 L.Ed. 890 (1898)]

If you are not physically present in a legislatively foreign civil jurisdiction, even if you are a constitutional alien in relation to that jurisdiction, then the above method of enfranchisement and enslavement CANNOT be employed. Only a corrupt government can or would waive these rules and make EVERYONE privileged. Furthermore, under the concept of equal protection and equal treatment, if they can force anyone to be subject to THEIR civil laws, then you are allowed to make your own law and force ANYONE else, including the court, to be subject to YOUR laws against their consent.

NATIONALITY, on the other hand, is NOT discretionary. Nationality is a product of the circumstances of your birth or the requirements for naturalization, which you in turn have no control over and cannot change. One can be a “national” of a country under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21), have “nationality”, and call themselves a constitutional citizen and statutory “national” WITHOUT being a statutory citizen because their political status is separate and distinct from their civil legal status. YES, you can “expatriate” your constitutional citizenship and abandon your nationality, so your GIVING UP your nationality discretionary.

"...municipal [civil] law determines how citizenship may be acquired..."

"The renunciations not being given a result of free and intelligent choice, but rather because of mental fear, intimidation and coercion, they were held void and of no effect."
[Tomoya Kawakita v. United States, 190 F.2d. 506 (1951)]

But acquiring nationality and constitutional citizen status, for most of us, is NOT discretionary in most cases because:

1. You have no control over WHERE you were born or the citizenship of your parents at the time of birth.
2. You HAVE to be a "national" and constitutional citizen of SOME country on Earth. Otherwise, you would be an "alien" in EVERY country on Earth akin to a fugitive whose rights would be protected by NO ONE.

4.13.3.3 Comparison

Congress enjoys two species of legislative power, and each has its own "citizens":

"It is clear that Congress, as a legislative body, exercise two species of legislative power: the one, limited as to its objects, but extending all over the Union: the other, an absolute, exclusive legislative power over the District of Columbia. The preliminary inquiry in the case now before the Court, is, by virtue of which of these authorities was the law in question passed?"
[Cohens v. Virginia, 19 U.S. 264, 6 Wheat. 265; 5 L.Ed. 257 (1821)]

The above distinction is a product of what is called the separation of powers doctrine that is the heart of the United States Constitution and which is thoroughly described in the document below:

Government Conspiracy to Destroy the Separation of Powers, Form #05.023
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

Based on the above and the foregoing section, there are TWO mutually exclusive and independent types of "citizens": Statutory v. Constitutional. The U.S. Supreme Court sternly warned Americans not to confuse the two jurisdictions when it held the following:

"The idea prevails with some, indeed it has found expression in arguments at the bar, that we have in this country substantially two national governments; one to be maintained under the Constitution, with all of its restrictions; the other to be maintained by Congress outside the independently of that instrument, by exercising such powers [of absolutism] as other nations of the earth are accustomed to.. I take leave to say that, if the principles thus announced should ever receive the sanction of a majority of this court, a radical and mischievous change in our system of government will result. We will, in that event, pass from the era of constitutional liberty guarded and protected by a written constitution into an era of legislative absolutism.. It will be an evil day for American liberty if the theory of a government outside the supreme law of the land finds lodgment in our constitutional jurisprudence. No higher duty rests upon this court than to exert its full authority to prevent all violation of the principles of the Constitution."

Constitutional citizenship derives from and is dependent upon being a constitutional citizen within your state, which the U.S. Supreme Court also calls a state citizen.

"It would be the vainest show of learning to attempt to prove by citations of authority, that up to the adoption of the recent Amendments [the Thirteenth and Fourteenth Amendment], no claim or pretense was set up that those rights depended on the Federal government for their existence or protection, beyond the very few express limitations which the Federal Constitution imposed upon the states—such as the prohibition against ex post facto laws, bill of attainder, and laws impairing the obligation of contracts. But with the exception of these and a few other restrictions, the entire domain of the privileges and immunities of citizens of the states, as above defined, lay within the constitutional and legislative power of the states, and without that of the Federal government. Was it the purpose of the 14th Amendment, by the simple declaration that no state should make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges and immunities of citizens of the United States, to transfer the security and protection of all the civil rights which we have mentioned, from the states to the Federal government? And where it is declared that Congress shall have the power to enforce that article, was it intended to bring within the power of Congress the entire domain of civil rights heretofore belonging exclusively to the states?"

We are convinced that no such result was intended by the Congress which proposed these amendments, nor by the legislatures of the states, which ratified them. Having shown that the privileges and immunities relied on in the argument are those which belong to citizens of the states as such, and that they are left to the state governments for security and protection, and not by this article placed under the special care of the Federal government, we may hold ourselves excused from defining the privileges and immunities of citizens of the United States which no state can abridge, until some case involving those privileges may make it necessary to do so.

Statutory citizenship, however, does not derive from citizenship under the constitution of a state of the Union. The types of "citizens" spoken of in the United States Constitution are biological people and not artificial creations such as corporations. Here is what the Annotated Fourteenth Amendment published by the Congressional Research Service has to say about this subject

"Citizens of the United States within the meaning of this Amendment must be natural and not artificial persons; a corporate body is not a citizen of the United States.14

14 Insurance Co. v. New Orleans, 13 Fed.Cas. 67 (C.C.D.La. 1870). Not being citizens of the United States, corporations accordingly have been declared unable "to claim the protection of that clause of the Fourteenth Amendment which secures the privileges and immunities of citizens of the United States against abridgment or impairment by the law of a State." Orient Ins. Co. v. Daggs, 172 U.S. 557, 561 (1869). This conclusion was in harmony with the earlier holding in Paul v. Virginia, 75 U.S. (8 Wall.) 168 (1869), to the effect that corporations were not within the scope of the privileges and immunities clause of state citizenship set out in Article IV, Sec. 2. See also Selover, Bates & Co. v. Walsh, 226 U.S. 112, 126 (1912); Berea College v. Kentucky, 211 U.S. 45 (1908); Liberty Warehouse Co. v. Tobacco Growers, 276 U.S. 71, 89 (1928); Grosjean v. American Press Co., 297 U.S. 233, 244 (1936).

Fourteenth Amendment Conspiracy Theorists who deny that they are "citizens of the United States***" as described in the Fourteenth Amendment, indirectly, are admitting that the ONLY thing they can be or are is a corporation or artificial entity. Why? Because:

1. There are only two types of American citizens: Statutory and Constitutional.
2. The ONLY one of the two types of "citizens" who is, in fact, expressly identified by the U.S. Supreme Court as a human being and emphatically NOT an artificial entity or corporation IS a constitutional or Fourteenth Amendment "citizen of the United States***".
3. If you are born or naturalized here and deny being a constitutional citizen, the only other thing you can be is a statutory citizen.

We talk about this common freedom fighter fallacy in more detail in:

Flawed Tax Arguments to Avoid, Form #08.004, Section 8.1

Seems ironic that ignorant freedom lovers who don't read the law and who even want to avoid being associated with a corporation would do that to themselves, don't you think? Some people might try to escape this logic by saying that there are TWO types of Constitutional citizens: “citizen of the United States***” as identified in the Fourteenth Amendment and the “Citizen” of the original Constitution. However, the following case holds that the Fourteenth Amendment “citizen of the United States***” is a SUPERSET that includes EVERYONE, including the white capital “C” males of the original constitution, so this assertion is clearly flawed:

“By the language ‘citizens of the United States’ was meant all such citizens; and by ‘any person’ was meant all persons within the jurisdiction of the state. No distinction is intimated on account of race or color. This court has no authority to interpolate a limitation that is neither expressed nor implied. Our duty is to execute the law, not to make it. The protection provided was not intended to be confined to those of any particular race or class, but to embrace equally all races, classes, and conditions of men.” Id. 128, 129.

The fourteenth amendment, by the language, ‘all persons born in the United States, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof,’ was intended to bring all races, without distinction of color, within the rule which prior to that time pertained to the white race.”

[United States v. Wong Kim Ark, 169 U.S. 649, 18 S.Ct. 456, 42 L.Ed. 890 (1898) ]

The U.S. Supreme Court also described WHAT is meant by “subject to the jurisdiction”, and it means DOMICILED somewhere within the country or what they call the “territory of the nation” rather than the statutory “United States”:

“The amendment, in clear words and in manifest intent, includes the children born within the territory of the United States of all other persons, of whatever race or color, domiciled within the United States. Every citizen or subject of another country, while domiciled here [the COUNTRY, not the statutory “United States”], is within the allegiance and the protection, and consequently subject to the jurisdiction, of the United States. His allegiance to the United States is direct and immediate, and, although but local and temporary, continuing only so long as he remains within our territory, is yet, in the words of Lord Coke in Calvin’s Case, 7 Coke, 6a, ‘strong enough to make a natural subject, for, if he hath issue here, that issue is a natural-born subject’; and his child, as said by Mr. Binney in his essay before quoted, ‘If born in the country, is as much a citizen as the natural-born child of a citizen, and by operation of the same principle.’ It can hardly be denied that an alien is completely subject to the political jurisdiction of the country in which he resides, seeing that, as said by Mr. Webster, when secretary of state, in his report to the president on Thrasher’s case in 1851, and since repeated by this court: ‘Independently of a residence with intention to continue such residence; independently of any domiciliation; independently of the taking of any oath of allegiance, or of renouncing any former allegiance,—it is well known that by the public law an alien, or a stranger born, for so long a time as he continues within the dominions of a foreign government, owes obedience to the laws of that government, and may be punished for treason or other crimes as a native-born subject might be, unless his case is varied by some treaty stipulations.’ Executive Documents H. R. No. 10, 1st Sess. 32d Cong. p. 4; 6 Webster’s Works, 526; U.S. v. Carlisle, 16 Wall. 147, 155; Calvin’s Case, 7 Coke, 6a; Ellesmere, Postnati, 63; 1 Hale, P. C. 62; 4 Bl. Comm. 74, 92.”

“As the mind cannot conceive an army without the men to compose it, on the face of the Constitution the objection that it does not give power to provide for such men would seem to be too frivolous for further notice. It is said, however, that since under the Constitution as originally framed state citizenship was primary and United States citizenship but derivative and dependent thereon, therefore the power conferred upon Congress to raise armies was only coterminous with United States citizenship and could not be exerted so as to cause that citizenship to lose its dependent character and dominate state citizenship. But the proposition simply denies to Congress the power to raise armies which the Constitution gives. That power by the very terms of the Constitution, being delegated, is supreme. Article 6. In truth the contention simply assails the wisdom of the framers of the Constitution in conferring authority on Congress and in not retaining it as it was under the Confederation in the several states.”

[Arver v. United States, 245 U.S. 366 (1918)]

Below are a few additional case cites that prove that those who are NOT citizens of a state of the Union such as those domiciled on federal territory in the District of Columbia, are Statutory and not Constitutional citizens:

“... citizens of the District of Columbia were not granted the privilege of litigating in the federal courts on the ground of diversity of citizenship. Possibly no better reason for this fact exists than such citizens were not thought of when the judiciary article [III] of the federal Constitution was drafted. ... citizens of the United States[**] ... were also not thought of; but in any event a citizen of the United States[**], who is not a citizen of any state, is not within the language of the [federal] Constitution.”

[Pannill v. Roanoke, 252 F. 910, 914]

1 “There are, then, under our republican form of government, two classes of citizens, one of the United
 2 States[***] and one of the state. One class of citizenship may exist in a person, without the other, as in the 3 case of a resident of the District of Columbia; but both classes usually exist in the same person.”
 4 [Gardina v. Board of Registrars, 160 Ala. 155]

5 Below is a table comparing the two contexts to make the differences perfectly clear. We will build on these distinctions
 6 throughout the remainder of this pamphlet.

4.13.3.4 How one transitions from being a constitutional citizen to a statutory citizen/resident

The U.S. Supreme Court indirectly identified how one transitions from being a Constitutional to a Statutory citizen in the following holdings.

1. First they said and continue to say that a corporation is NOT a citizen as used in the CONSTITUTION:

“That by no sound or reasonable interpretation, can a corporation—a mere faculty in law, be transformed into a citizen, or treated as a citizen [within the Constitution]. 2d. That the second section of the third article of the Constitution, investing the courts of the United States with jurisdiction in controversies between citizens of different States, cannot be made to embrace controversies to which corporations and not citizens are parties; and that the assumption, by those courts, of jurisdiction in such cases, must involve a palpable infraction of the article and section just referred to. 3d. That in the cause before us, the party defendant in the Circuit Court having been a corporation aggregate, created by the State of New Jersey, the Circuit Court could not properly take cognizance thereof; and, therefore, this cause should be remanded to the Circuit Court, with directions that it be dismissed for the want of jurisdiction.”
[Rundle v. Delaware & Raritan Canal Co., 55 U.S. 80 (1852)]

2. But on the OTHER hand, they held that a corporation IS a citizen under federal STATUTORY law.

[State of Wisconsin v. Pelican Insurance Co., 127 U.S. 265 (1888)]

So, in the CONSTITUTION, corporations or other artificial entities are NOT “citizens”, but under federal STATUTORY law granting jurisdiction to federal courts, they ARE. And what statutory law is THAT? See 28 U.S.C. §1332:

§ 1332. Diversity of citizenship; amount in controversy; costs

(a) The district courts shall have original jurisdiction of all civil actions where the matter in controversy exceeds the sum or value of $75,000, exclusive of interest and costs, and is between—

(1) citizens of different States;

(2) citizens of a State and citizens or subjects of a foreign state;

(3) citizens of different States and in which citizens or subjects of a foreign state are additional parties; and

(4) a foreign state, defined in section 1603 \(a\) of this title, as plaintiff and citizens of a State or of different States.

(e) The word “States”, as used in this section, includes the Territories, the District of Columbia, and the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico.

We can see from the above that the “State” they are talking about is NOT a constitutional state of the Union, but rather is identified in 28 U.S.C. §1332(e) as a federal territory NOT within any state of the Union. Hence, this is obviously a STATUTORY rather than CONSTITUTIONAL “State”, and hence a STATUTORY and not CONSTITUTIONAL “citizen”. Therefore, a person who claims to be a constitutional citizen or a human being could not partake of the statutory “privilege” granted by the above franchise. And YES, that is what it is: A franchise, “Congressionally created right”, or “public right”. All franchises presume that the actors, who are all public officers of “U.S. Inc.”, are domiciled upon and therefore citizens of federal territory and NOT a state of the Union. This analysis also clearly explains the following, because you can’t be a “citizen” under federal statutory law unless you are domiciled on federal territory not within a CONSTITUTIONAL state of the Union:

[Black’s Law Dictionary, 4th Ed., p. 311]

All federal District Courts are Article IV, Section 3, Clause 2 franchise courts that manage government territory, property, and franchises. This is proven with thousands of pages of evidence in the following. Therefore, the ONLY type of “domicile” they could mean above is domicile on federal territory not within any state of the Union.

What Happened to Justice?, Form #06.012

<http://sedm.org/ItemInfo/Ebooks/WhatHappJustice/WhatHappJustice.htm>

We also know based on the previous section that corporations are not constitutional citizens, so they can’t be “born or naturalized” like a human being. BUT they are “born or naturalized” by other methods to become citizens of a particular jurisdiction. For instance:

1. The act of FORMING a corporation gives it “birth”, in a legal sense.
2. The place or jurisdiction that the corporation is legally formed becomes the effective civil domicile of that corporation.

“A corporation is a citizen, resident, or inhabitant of the state or country by or under the laws of which it was created, and of that state or country only.”
[19 Corpus Juris Secundum (C.J.S.), Corporations, §886 (2003)]

3. A corporation can only be domiciled in ONE place at a time. Hence, it can only be a “citizen” of one jurisdiction at a time. The place where the corporate headquarters is located usually is treated as the effective domicile of the corporation.
4. If a corporation is formed in a specific state of the Union, then it is a statutory but not constitutional citizen in THAT state only and a statutory alien in every OTHER state AND also alien in respect to federal jurisdiction.

“A foreign corporation is one that derives its existence solely from the laws of another state, government, or country, and the term is used indiscriminately, sometimes in statutes, to designate either a corporation created by or under the laws of another state or a corporation created by or under the laws of a foreign country.”

[19 Corpus Juris Secundum (C.J.S.), Corporations, §883 (2003)]

Therefore, whenever you hear a judge or government prosecutor use the word “citizen” in federal court, they really are referring to domicile on federal territory not within any state of the Union. They are setting a trap to exploit your legal ignorance using “words of art”. If they referring to your “nationality” rather than whether you are a “citizen”, they are referring to CONSTITUTIONAL citizenship and whether you are a “national” under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21). If they ask you whether you are a “citizen” or a “citizen of the United States”, you should always respond by asking:

1. Which of the three “United States” defined by the U.S. Supreme Court in Hooven & Allison Co. v. Evatt, 324 U.S. 652 \(1945\) do you mean?
2. Do you mean my nationality or my domicile in that place?

..and then you should say you are:

1. Domiciled outside the statutory “United States” and therefore a statutory alien in relation to federal jurisdiction.
2. A CONSTITUTIONAL citizen
3. NOT a STATUTORY citizen under any federal statute or regulation, including but not limited to 8 U.S.C. §1401, 26 U.S.C. §3121(e) , and 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1(c), all of which are STATUTORY and not CONSTITUTIONAL citizens:

TITLE 26 > Subtitle C > CHAPTER 21 > Subchapter C > § 3121
§ 3121. Definitions

(e) State, United States, and citizen

For purposes of this chapter—

(1) State

The term “State” includes the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, Guam, and American Samoa.

(2) United States [FEDERAL TERRITORY NOT PART OF ANY STATE]

The term “United States” when used in a geographical sense includes the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, Guam, and American Samoa.

We should point out that 18 U.S.C. §911 makes it a CRIME for a constitutional citizen to claim to be the statutory citizen described in 8 U.S.C. §1401. People who begin as a “constitutional” citizen commonly commit this crime and unwittingly in most cases transform themselves into a privileged “statutory” citizen by performing any one of the following unlawful acts. These unlawful acts at least make them appear to be a legal “person” under federal law with an effective domicile in the District of Columbia/federal zone and a “SUBJECT citizen”:

1. Opening up bank or financial accounts WITHOUT using the proper form, which is an AMENDED IRS Form W-8BEN. If you don’t use this form or a derivative and invoke the protection of the law for your correct status as a “non-resident non-person” not engaged in a “trade or business”, the financial institution will falsely and prejudicially “presume” that you are both a statutory “U.S. citizen” pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1401 and a “U.S. person” pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §7701\(a\)\(30\). To prevent this problem, see the following article:

About IRS Form W-8BEN, Form #04.202

2. Filing the WRONG tax form, the IRS Form 1040, rather than the correct 1040NR form. This constitutes an election to become a “resident alien” engaged in a “trade or business”, pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §7701\(b\)\(4\)\(B\) and 26 U.S.C. §6013\(g\) and (h). This can be prevented using the following form, for instance:

Federal Nonresident Nonstatutory Claim for Return of Funds Unlawfully Paid to the Government, Form #15.001
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

3. Applying for or accepting a government benefit, privilege, or license, such as Social Security, Medicare, or TANF. This would require them to fill out an SSA Form SS-5. This causes a waiver of sovereign immunity under 28 U.S.C. §1605\(a\)\(2\) and makes you into a “resident alien” who is a “public officer” within the government granting the privilege or benefit. See:

Government Instituted Slavery Using Franchises, Form #05.030
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

4. Filling out a federal or state government form incorrectly by describing yourself as a statutory “U.S. citizen” pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1401 rather than a “national but not a citizen” pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1101\(a\)\(21\). This can be prevented by attaching the following form:

Affidavit of Citizenship, Domicile, and Tax Status, Form #02.001

5. Improperly declaring your citizenship status to a federal court or not declaring it at all. If you describe yourself as a “citizen” or a “U.S. citizen” without further clarification, or if you don’t describe your citizenship at all in court pleadings, then federal courts will self-servingly “presume” that you are a statutory rather than constitutional citizen pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1401 who has a domicile on federal territory. This is also confirmed by the following authorities:

"The term 'citizen', as used in the Judiciary Act with reference to the jurisdiction of the federal courts, is substantially synonymous with the term 'domicile': Delaware, L. & W.R. Co. v. Petrowsky, 2 Cir., 250 F. 554, 557."

[Earley v. Hershey Transit Co., 55 F.Supp. 981, D.C.PA. (1944)]

"Domicile and citizen are synonymous in federal courts, Earley v. Hershey Transit Co., D.C. Pa., 55 F.Supp. 981, 982; inhabitant, resident and citizen are synonymous, Standard Stoker Co. v. Lower, D.C.Md., 46 F.2d. 678, 683."

[Black's Law Dictionary, Fourth Edition, p 311]

6. Accepting employment with the federal government. This causes you to act in a representative capacity representing the federal corporation called the "United States" as defined in 28 U.S.C. §3002\(15\)\(A\). Pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 17\(b\), you assume the same domicile and citizenship of the party you represent. All corporations are "citizens" with a domicile where they were created, which is the District of Columbia in the case of the United States.

4.13.3.5 Who started the STATUTORY v. CONSTITUTIONAL citizen confusion SCAM

The deliberate scheme to confuse STATUTORY and CONSTITUTIONAL "persons" was first enacted by none other than Franklin Delano Roosevelt immediately after he took office in 1933. The law he enacted to confiscate all gold was the Emergency Banking Relief Act, 48 Stat. 1 and that act ONLY applied to STATUTORY "persons" WITHIN the EXCLUSIVE jurisdiction of the national government and NOT to CONSTITUTIONAL "persons" or "citizens". Of course, none of the thieves in government were honest enough to admit the differences in these two types of "persons" or "citizens" and they exploited this confusion to STEAL all the gold of Americans, and move it to the then new Fort Knox in seven railcars packed to the brim with gold.

Let's go back to March 6-9, 1933 and find out what FDR did. Instead of formulating a plan demanding that the Federal Reserve honor their contractual obligations to the People he instead consulted the Federal Reserve as to how they believed the crisis should be solved! Remember the REAL emergency was that the bankers did not want to honor their contractual obligation to convert the People's gold certificates to gold. The cats were consulted about what their punishment should be for eating mice. Of course, the cats ruled that they should be fed more mice! What did the private federal reserve conclude that their punishment should be for embezzling the People's gold and dishonoring their fiduciary responsibilities and legitimate contractual obligations? The cats at the FED decided that they should be fed more mice and the President was instructed to pass a law demanding that the People return ALL of their gold to the bankers or be subjected to a stiff fine and jail time. Roosevelt's Proclamations were taken word for word from the Resolution adopted by Federal Reserve.

1                   “Whereas, in the opinion of the Board of Directors of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, the continued and
2                   increasing withdrawal of currency and gold from the banks of the country has now created a national
3                   emergency...”

4 Remember, the controllers of the Federal Reserve were extremely well educated in law. History has shown them to be the
5 brains behind all major Wars throughout the world. They create a conflict and then fund all sides. War is big business for
6 banks. The fed understood how Congress can legislate for its Territorial subject “persons” through Art. I, Sec, 8, Clause
7 17, without regards to the Constitution (see also Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 (1901)). These same scoundrels
8 probably created the loophole! They also knew the difference between the CONSTITUTIONAL citizens and 9 STATUTORY citizens and they were well aware of the War Powers. Following is the original October 6, 1917 combined
10 with the Amendments of March 9, 1933:

Note: Bold faced and single underlines are added by the author for emphasis and understanding. Double underlines and ~~strike through deletions~~ are Amendments to the original “Trading With the Enemy Act” made in the Act of March 9, 1933.

11                   SIXTY FIFTH CONGRESS Sess. I Chapter 106, Page 411, October 6, 1917, 48 Stat. 1

12                   CHAP 106—An Act To define, regulate, and punish trading with the enemy, and for other purposes.

13                   Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress
14 assembled, that this Act shall be known as the “Trading With the Enemy Act.”

15                   SEC. 2. That the word “enemy” as used herein shall be deemed to mean, for the purposes of such trading and
16 of this Act—

17                   (a) Any individual, partnership, or other party of individuals, or any nationality, resident within the territory
18 (including that occupied by the military and naval forces of any nation with which the United States is at war
19 or resident outside the United States and doing business within such territory and any corporation incorporated
20 within any country other than the United States and doing business with such [enemy] territory, and any 21 corporation incorporated within such territory with which the United States is at war or incorporated within 22 any country other than the United States.

23                   (b) The government of any nation with which the United States is at war, or any political or municipal 24 subdivision thereof.

25                   (c ) Such other individuals or body or class of individuals, as may be natives, citizens, or subjects of any nation
26 with which the United States is at war, other than citizens of the United States, wherever resident or wherever 27 doing business, as the President, if he shall find the safety of the United States or the successful prosecution of 28 the war shall so require may, by proclamation, include within the term enemy”

29                   [this section then continues to define an “ally of an enemy” in the same terms as the “enemy” and again states,
30 “other than citizens of the United States.”]

31                   Public Laws of the Seventy-Third Congress, Chapter 1, Title I, March 9, 1933 Sec. 2

32                   Subdivision (b) of Section 5 of the Act of October 6, 1917 (40 Stat. L. 411), as amended, is hereby amended
33 read as follows:

34                   SEC. 5(b) “During time of war or during any other period of national emergency declared by the President, the 35 President may through any agency that he may designate, or otherwise, investigate, regulate, or prohibit, under 36 such rules and regulations as he may prescribe, by means of licenses or otherwise, any transactions of foreign
37 exchange, export or earmarkings of gold or silver coin or bullion or currency, transfers of credits in any form
38 (other than credits relating solely to transactions to be executed wholly within the United States) between or 39 payments by banking institutions as defined by the President, and export, hoarding melting, or earmarking of 40 gold or silver coin or bullion or currency by any person within the United States or any place subject to the 41 jurisdiction thereof; and transfers of evidences of indebtedness or of ownership of property between the United 42 States and any foreign country, whether enemy, ally of enemy or otherwise, or between residents of one or and 43 he the President may require any such person engaged in any such transaction referred to in this subdivision to 44 furnish under oath, complete information relative thereto, including the production of any books of account,
45 contracts, letters or other papers, in connection therewith in the custody or control of such person, either before
46 or after such transaction is completed. Whoever willfully violates any of the provisions of this subdivision or 47 of any license, order, rule or regulation issued thereunder, shall, upon conviction be fined not more than 48 $10,000, or, if a natural person, may be imprisoned for not more than ten years, or both;’...”

Following the above act, socialist FDR then signed Executive Order 6102 ordering “citizens of the United States” to turn in their gold. Information on Executive Order 6102:

The only “individuals” or “persons” he could lawfully be referring to in Executive Order 6102 are STATUTORY citizens who are ALSO public officers in the government, because the ability to regulate exclusively private rights is repugnant to the Constitution. Furthermore, even in times of national emergency, it is illegal to violate such a constitutional limitation:

THE AMERICAN CONSTITUTION IS NON-SUSPENDIBLE!

“No emergency justifies the violation of any of the provisions of the United States Constitution.”<sup>159</sup> An emergency, however, while it cannot create power, increase granted power, or remove or diminish the restrictions imposed upon the power granted or reserved, may allow the exercise of power already in existence, but not exercised except during an emergency.<sup>160</sup>

The circumstances in which the executive branch may exercise extraordinary powers under the Constitution are very narrow.<sup>161</sup> The danger must be immediate and impending, or the necessity urgent for the public service, such as will not admit of delay, and where the action of the civil authority would be too late in providing the means which the occasion calls for.<sup>162</sup> For example, there is no basis in the Constitution for the seizure of steel mills during a wartime labor dispute, despite the President’s claim that the war effort would be crippled if the mills were shut down.<sup>163</sup>”

4.13.3.6 STATUTORY and CONSTITUTIONAL “aliens” are equivalent under U.S.C. Title 8

Many people mistakenly try to apply the STATUTORY and CONSTITUTIONAL context dichotomy to the term “alien” and this is a mistake. The distinction between STATUTORY citizens v. CONSTITUTIONAL citizens does not apply to the term “alien”. We don’t think we have confused people by using the term "statutory citizen" and then excluding "alien" from the statutory context in Title 8 because.

1. Title 8 covers TWO opposites based on its name: "Aliens and nationality". You are either an "alien" or a "national". Statutory citizens under 8 U.S.C. §1401 and 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22)(A) are a SUBSET of "nationals". A "citizen" under U.S. Code Titles 8, 26, and 42 is a “national of the United States**” domiciled on federal territory.
2. A “nonresident alien” under 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(B) is someone who is:
  - 2.1. Neither a STATUTORY “national and citizen of the United States** at birth” under 8 U.S.C. §1401 nor a “resident” (alien) of the United States**).

The Constitution was adopted in a period of grave emergency and its grants of power to the Federal Government and its limitations of the power of the states were determined in the light of emergency, and are not altered by emergency. 2.2. A foreign domiciled party or a “non-citizen national of the United States***” under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22)(B), 8 U.S.C. §§1408, 1452. .AND

2.3. A public officer in the national government. If they are not a public officer, they would be a “non-resident non-person”.

3. The context for whether one is a "national" is whether they were born or naturalized "within allegiance to the sovereign" or on territory within a country or place that has allegiance. That is what the "pledge of allegiance" is about, in fact. The flag flies in lots of places, not just on federal territory or even constitutional states. As described in the United States v. Curtiss-Wright Export Corporation, 299 U.S. 304 (1936), the "United States of America" is THAT country, and that entity is a POLITICAL and not a GEOGRAPHIC entity. The U.S. supreme court calls this entity "the body politic". It is even defined politically as a CORPORATION and not a geographic region in United States v. Curtiss-Wright Export Corporation, 299 U.S. 304 (1936). "States" are not geography, but political groups. "citizens" are political members of this group. Physical presence on territory protected by a "state" does not imply political membership. Rather, the coincidence of DOMICILE and NATIONALITY together establish membership. Without BOTH, you can't be a member of the political group. THIS group is called "We the People" in the USA constitution and it is PEOPLE, not territory or geography.
4. The terms "CONSTITUTIONAL" and "STATUTORY" only relate to the coincidence of DOMICILE and the GEOGRAPHY it is tied to. It has nothing to do with nationality, because nationality is not a source of civil jurisdiction or civil status. "national", in fact, is a political status, not a civil status. The allegiance that gives rise to nationality is, in fact, political and not territorial in nature. Abandoning that allegiance is an expatriating act according to 8 U.S.C. §1481.

HOWEVER, the STATUTORY and CONSTITUTIONAL contexts DO apply to the term “nonresident alien” as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(B) because:

1. “nonresident aliens” are NOT a SUBSET of “aliens” but a SUPERSET.
2. Those who are state nationals per 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) or “non-citizen nationals” under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22)(B) can be “nonresident aliens” under 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(B) but STILL not be STATUTORY “aliens” as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(A). This exception would apply to both “non-citizen nationals of the United States***” defined in 8 U.S.C. §1408 as well as state citizens/nationals.

4.13.4 Proof that Statutory citizens/residents are a franchise status that has nothing to do with your domicile

The following subsections will prove that statutory “U.S. citizen” or “citizen and national of the United States” status found in 8 U.S.C. §1401, 26 U.S.C. §3121(e), and 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1(c) is a franchise status that has nothing to do with one’s domicile. If you would like to know more about the devious abuse of franchises to destroy your rights and break the chains of the Constitution that bind your public servants and protect your rights, see:

Government Instituted Slavery Using Franchises, Form #05.030

4.13.4.1 “national and citizen of the United States at birth” in 8 U.S.C. §1401 is a PUBLIC PRIVILEGE, not a PRIVATE RIGHT

Many people wrongfully presume that “national and citizen of the United States” described in 8 U.S.C. §1401 governs the rules for extending CONSTITUTIONAL citizenship. This is not true because:

1. STATUTORY citizenship within 8 U.S.C. §1401 is a PRIVILEGE/FRANCHISE, rather than a CONSTITUTIONAL right.

[Tuana v. U.S.A., Case No. 12-01143 (D.D.C., 2013)]

2. THE PUBLIC PRIVILEGE is revocable. PRIVATE rights are NOT revocable. PUBLIC rights ARE revocable.
  - 2.1. Afroyim v. Rusk, 387 U.S. 253, 87 S.Ct. 1660, 18 L.Ed.2d. 757 (1967) declared that constitutional citizenship was NOT revocable without the consent of the citizen.

“The Court today holds that Congress can indeed rob a citizen of his citizenship just so long as five members of this Court can satisfy themselves that the congressional action was not 'unreasonable, arbitrary,' ante, at 831; 'misplaced or arbitrary,' ante, at 832; or 'irrational or arbitrary or unfair,' ante, at 833. My first comment is that not one of these 'tests' appears in the Constitution. Moreover, it seems a little strange to find such 'tests' as these announced in an opinion which condemns the earlier decisions it overrules for their resort to cliches, which it describes as 'too handy and too easy, and, like most cliches, can be misleading'. Ante, at 835. That description precisely fits those words and clauses which the majority uses, but which the Constitution does not.

The Constitution, written for the ages, cannot rise and fall with this Court's passing notions of what is 'fair,' or 'reasonable,' or 'arbitrary.'

The Court today holds that the Citizenship Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment has no application to Bellei. The Court first notes that Afroyim was essentially a case construing the Citizenship Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment. Since the Citizenship Clause declares that: 'All persons born or naturalized in the United States * * * are citizens of the United States * * *,' the Court reasons that the protections against involuntary expatriation declared in Afroyim do not protect all American citizens, but only those 'born or naturalized in the United States.' Afroyim, the argument runs, was naturalized in this country so he was protected by the Citizenship Clause, but Bellei, since he acquired his American citizenship at birth in Italy as a foreignborn child of an American citizen, was neither born nor naturalized in the United States and, hence, falls outside the scope of the Fourteenth Amendment guarantees declared in Afroyim. One could hardly call this a generous reading of the great purposes the Fourteenth Amendment was adopted to bring about.

While conceding that Bellei is an American citizen, the majority states: 'He simply is not a Fourteenth-Amendment-first-sentence citizen.' Therefore, the majority reasons, the congressional revocation of his citizenship is not barred by the Constitution. I cannot accept the Court's conclusion that the Fourteenth Amendment protects the citizenship of some Americans and not others.

The Court today puts aside the Fourteenth Amendment as a standard by which to measure congressional action with respect to citizenship, and substitutes in its place the majority's own vague notions of 'fairness.' The majority takes a new step with the recurring theme that the test of constitutionality is the Court's own view of what is 'fair, reasonable, and right.' Despite the concession that Bellei was admittedly an American citizen, and despite the holding in Afroyim that the Fourteenth Amendment has put citizenship, once conferred, beyond the power of Congress to revoke, the majority today upholds the revocation of Bellei's citizenship on the ground that the congressional action was not 'irrational or arbitrary or unfair.' The majority applies the 'shock-the-conscience' test to uphold, rather than strike, a federal statute. It is a dangerous concept of constitutional law that allows the majority to conclude that, because it cannot say the statute is 'irrational or arbitrary or unfair,' the statute must be constitutional.

Since the Court this Term has already downgraded citizens receiving public welfare, Wyman v. James, 400 U.S. 309, 91 S.Ct. 381, 27 L.Ed.2d. 408 (1971), and citizens having the misfortune to be illegitimate, Labine v. Vincent, 401 U.S. 532, 91 S.Ct. 1917, 28 L.Ed.2d. 288, I suppose today's decision downgrading citizens born outside the United States should have been expected. Once again, as in James and Labine, the Court's opinion makes evident that its holding is contrary to earlier decisions. Concededly, petitioner was a citizen at birth, not by constitutional right, but only through operation of a federal statute.
[Rogers v. Bellei, 401 U.S. 815 (1971)]

3. Like all other government granted franchises, the effective domicile or residence of those participating is federal territory. The geographical place within which it can be granted does not expressly include constitutional states of the Union and therefore purposefully excludes them. The term “State”, “United States”, and “continental United States” defined in Title 8 of the U.S. Code EXCLUDE constitutional states. The “United States” definition came from the Immigration and Nationality Act of 1940, before Alaska and Hawaii became CONSTITUTIONAL states, and they never bothered to go back and change it, even though it needs to be changed. However, the definitions in 8 C.F.R. §215.1 were published AFTER Alaska and Hawaii became CONSTITUTIONAL states and are more accurate.

1 8 C.F.R. §215.1(f)
2 Section 215.1: Definitions

3 (f) The term continental United States means the District of Columbia and the several States, except Alaska
4 and Hawaii.

6 [8 U.S.C. §1101\(a\)\(36\): State \[Aliens and Nationality\]](#)

7 The term "State" includes the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, Guam, and the Virgin Islands of the United
8 States.

10 [TITLE 8 > CHAPTER 12 > SUBCHAPTER I > Sec. 1101. \[Aliens and Nationality\]](#)
11 Sec. 1101. - Definitions

12 (a)(38) The term "United States", except as otherwise specifically herein provided, when used in a geographical 13 sense, means the continental United States, Alaska, Hawaii, Puerto Rico, Guam, and the Virgin Islands of the 14 United States.

15 In summary, the CREATOR of the right establishes who the OWNER of the right is. 8 U.S.C. §1401 is a statutory
16 privilege created and granted by Congress. It is a FRANCHISE and a PUBLIC right, not a PRIVATE right. The "citizen"
17 status it created was NOT created by the Constitution or even the Fourteenth Amendment. All POLITICAL statuses
18 granted by the Constitution are PRIVATE. All CIVIL statuses granted by Congressional enactment are PUBLIC,
19 franchises, and PRIVILEGES. Hence, the 8 U.S.C. §1401 "national and citizen of the United States at birth" is a PUBLIC
20 right rather than a PRIVATE right and continues to be property loaned to the "benefit" recipient which can be revoked at 21 any time.

22 *"The rich rules over the poor,
23 And the borrower is servant [SUBJECT] to the lender."*
24 [Prov. 22:7, Bible, NKJV]

25 Anyone accepting the "benefits" of this privilege has to suffer all the disabilities that go with invoking or using it, including 26 its complete revocation as documented in 8 U.S.C. §1481(a). There are therefore, in fact and in deed, MULTIPLE classes
27 of "citizens" in our country in SPITE of the following FRAUDULENT holding:

28 9. Classes of citizens--Generally

29 In regard to the protection of our citizens in their rights at home and abroad, we have in the United States no
30 law which divides them into classes or makes any difference whatever between them. 1859, 9 Op.Atry.Gen. 357.
31 [8 U.S.C.A. §1401 (2009), p. 18]

32 You are a SECOND CLASS citizen under legal disability if you use, benefit from, or invoke any Congressionally created
33 status, public right, privilege, or franchise, INCLUDING "national and citizen of the United States** at birth" in 8 U.S.C.
34 §1401. The government is SCHIZOPHRENIC to state in 8 U.S.C.A. §1401 that there are not multiple classes of citizens,
35 and then turn around and treat any one citizen different than any other as they did above in Rogers v. Bellei, 401 U.S. 815
36 (1971). Earth calling the U.S. Supreme Court! George Orwell called this kind of deception "doublethink":

37 "Doublethink is the act of ordinary people simultaneously accepting two mutually contradictory beliefs as 38 correct, often in distinct social contexts.<sup>111</sup> Doublethink is related to, but differs from, hypocrisy and neutrality.
39 Somewhat related but almost the opposite is cognitive dissonance, where contradictory beliefs cause conflict in 40 one's mind. Doublethink is notable due to a lack of cognitive dissonance — thus the person is completely 41 unaware of any conflict or contradiction."
42 [Wikipedia topic: Doublethink, Downloaded 6/14/2014]

43 The U.S. Supreme Court in Bellei was engaging in doublethink because they either ignored the facts presented here or are 44 willfully concealing their knowledge of them. Either way, whether through omission or malicious commission, they are a
45 threat to your liberty and freedom. The foundation of your freedom is absolute equality, and yet they refuse to treat all 46 "citizens" equally.

"No duty rests more imperatively upon the courts than the enforcement of those constitutional provisions intended to secure that equality of rights which is the foundation of free government."

Gulf, C. & S.F.R. Co. v. Ellis, [165 U.S. 150 (1897) ]

"[l]aw . . . must be not a special rule for a particular person or a particular case, but . . . the general law . . . ' so that every citizen shall hold his life, liberty, property and immunities under the protection of the general rules which govern society."

Therefore, Title 8 is not "law" as defined above in Hurtado v. California, but a voluntary civil compact and civil franchise that the U.S. Supreme Court called "class legislation" in Pollock v. Farmers' Loan and Trust, 157 U.S. 429. Title 8 would have to treat ALL "citizens" absolutely equally to be REAL "law". You don't need to invoke 8 U.S.C. §1401 to attain CONSTITUTIONAL citizenship and those who do are state-worshipping idolaters. Any attempt to treat anyone unequally under the civil law or subject them to any legal disability is an exercise in idolatry, where the grantor of the privilege, who is always the one with superior or "supernatural" rights or privileges, is always the thing being "worshipped".

The goal of all collectivists is to abuse civil franchises as a means to create, protect, or perpetuate INEQUALITY and class legislation, and then to use the inequality to persecute, plunder, or enslave the very people that they are supposed to be protecting by treating them equally. For more about how collectivism abuses franchises to enslave all and make itself the owner and controller of EVERYTHING, see:

4.13.4.2 Legal Dictionary

The legal dictionary confirms that statutory "citizen" status equates with being a "subject", AND that said "subject" status is, indeed a voluntary franchise:

"Subject. Constitutional law. One that owes allegiance to a sovereign and is governed by his laws. The natives of Great Britain are subjects of the British government. Men in free governments are subjects as well as citizens; as citizens they enjoy rights and franchises; as subjects they are bound to obey the laws. The term is little used, in this sense, in countries enjoying a republican form of government. Swiss Nat. Ins. Co. v. Miller, 267 U.S. 42, 45 S.Ct. 213, 214, 69 L.Ed. 504.

Legislation. The matter of public or private concern for which law is enacted. Thing legislated about or matters on which legislature operates to accomplish a definite object or objects reasonably related one to the other. Crouch v. Benet, 198 S.C. 185, 17 S.E.2d. 320, 322. The matter or thing forming the groundwork of the act. McCombs v. Dallas County, Tex.Civ.App., 136 S.W.2d. 975,982.

The constitutions of several of the states require that every act of the legislature shall relate to but one subject, which shall be expressed in the title of the statute. But term "subject" within such constitutional provisions is to be given a broad and extensive meaning so as to allow legislature full scope to include in one act . all matters having a logical or natural connection. Jaffee v. State, 76 Okl.Cr. 95, 134 P.2d. 1027, 1032. [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1425]

Note from the above that:

1. Republican governments such as that in America DO NOT have "subjects". You cannot be a "taxpayer" WITHOUT being a "subject".

"The term is little used, in this sense, in countries enjoying a republican form of government. Swiss Nat. Ins. Co. v. Miller, 267 U.S. 42, 45 S.Ct. 213, 214, 69 L.Ed. 504."

2. Being a statutory "citizen" is identified as a voluntary franchise:

"Men in free governments are subjects as well as citizens; as citizens they enjoy rights and franchises".

The above admissions are deliberate double speak to cloud the issues, but they do state some of the truth plainly. They are using double speak because they know they are abusing the law to destroy rights and enslave people they are supposed to be protecting through the abuse of "words of art" and oxymorons.

1 “For where envy and self-seeking [by a corrupted de facto government towards YOUR property] exist
 2 [manufactured] confusion and every evil thing are there. But the wisdom that is from above is first pure, then
 3 peaceable, gentle, willing to yield, full of mercy and good fruits, without partiality and without hypocrisy.”
 4 [James 3:16-17, Bible, NKJV]

5 Here is some of the double speak designed to enforce the stealthful and unconstitutional GOVERNMENT PLUNDER of 6 your rights and property using “words of art”:

- 7 1. They say “men in free governments”, implying that the GOVERNMENT is free but the “men” are NOT. No “subject”
 8 who is subservient to anyone can ever truly be “free”. In any economic system, there are only two roles you can fill:
 9 predator or prey, sovereign or subject.
- 10 2. They admit that governments that are “republican in form” cannot have “subjects”, but:
 11 2.1. They don’t mention that America, in Constitution, Article 4, Section 4, is republican in form.
 12 2.2. They deliberately don’t explain how you can “govern” people who are not “subjects” but sovereigns such as those 13 in America.

14 In fact, if they dealt with the above two issues, their FRAUD would have to come to an IMMEDIATE end. It is a
 15 maxim of law that when TWO rights exist in the same person, it is as if there were TWO PERSONS. This means that 16 the statutory “citizen” or “subject” they are REALLY talking about is a SEPARATE LEGAL PERSON who is, in fact,
 17 a public office in the U.S. government. 4 U.S.C. §72 says that office cannot lawfully exist in a constitutional state of 18 the Union without permission from Congress and that has never expressly been given and CANNOT lawfully be given
 19 without violating the separation of powers doctrine which is the foundation of the U.S. Constitution:

 21 When two rights [or a RIGHT and a PRIVILEGE] concur in one person, it is the same as if they were in two 22 separate persons. 4 Co. 118.”
 23 [Bouvier’s Maxims of Law, 1856;
 24 SOURCE: <http://famguardian.org/Publications/BouvierMaximsOfLaw/BouviersMaxims.htm>]

- 25 3. They use the phrase “rights and franchises”. These two things cannot rationally coexist in the same person. Rights are 26 unalienable, meaning that they cannot lawfully be surrendered or bargained away. Franchises are alienable and can be 27 taken away at the whim of the legislature. You cannot sign up for a franchise without alienating an unalienable right.
 28 Therefore, no one who has rights can also at the same time have privileges, and the only people who can lawfully sign
 29 up for franchises are those who HAVE no rights because domiciled on federal territory not protected by the 30 constitution and not within any state of the Union.

31 *“We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator
 32 with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness.--That to* 33 secure these rights, Governments are instituted among Men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the 34 governed, -“
 35 [Declaration of Independence]

 37 [Black’s Law Dictionary, Fourth Edition, p. 1693]

- 38 4. They don’t address how the national government can lawfully implement franchises within a Constitutional state, and 39 therefore deliver the “rights and franchises” associated with being a statutory but not constitutional “citizen”. The U.S.
 40 Supreme Court has held more than once that Congress CANNOT lawfully establish or enforce ANY franchise within 41 the borders of a constitutional state of the Union. The following case has NEVER been overruled.

42 “Thus, Congress having power to regulate commerce with foreign nations, and among the several States, and
 43 with the Indian tribes, may, without doubt, provide for granting coasting licenses, licenses to pilots, licenses to
 44 trade with the Indians, and any other licenses necessary or proper for the exercise of that great and extensive
 45 power; and the same observation is applicable to every other power of Congress, to the exercise of which the
 46 granting of licenses may be incident. All such licenses confer authority, and give rights to the licensee.

47 But very different considerations apply to the internal commerce or domestic trade of the States. Over this
 48 commerce and trade Congress has no power of regulation nor any direct control. This power belongs
 49 exclusively to the States. No interference by Congress with the business of citizens transacted within a State is
 50 warranted by the Constitution, except such as is strictly incidental to the exercise of powers clearly granted to
 51 the legislature. The power to authorize a business within a State is plainly repugnant to the exclusive power of* 52 the State over the same subject. It is true that the power of Congress to tax is a very extensive power. It is given
 53 in the Constitution, with only one exception and only two qualifications. Congress cannot tax exports, and it
 54 must impose direct taxes by the rule of apportionment, and indirect taxes by the rule of uniformity. Thus limited,

1 and thus only, it reaches every subject, and may be exercised at discretion. But, it reaches only existing
 2 subjects. Congress cannot authorize [LICENSE] a trade or business within a State in order to tax it.
 3 [License Tax Cases, 72 U.S. 462, 18 L.Ed. 497, 5 Wall. 462, 2 A.F.T.R. 2224 (1866)]

4 And here is yet another example from Black's Law Dictionary proving that statutory citizenship is a franchise:

5 FRANCHISE. A special privilege conferred by government on individual or corporation, and which does not
 6 belong to citizens of country generally of common right. Elliott v. City of Eugene, 135 Or. 108, 294 P. 358,
 7 360. In England it is defined to be a royal privilege in the hands of a subject.

8 A "franchise," as used by Blackstone in defining quo warranto, (3 Com. 262 [4th Am. Ed.] 322), had reference
 9 to a royal privilege or branch of the king's prerogative subsisting in the hands of the subject, and must arise
 10 from the king's grant, or be held by prescription, but today we understand a franchise to be some special
 11 privilege conferred by government on an individual, natural or artificial, which is not enjoyed by its citizens in 12 general. State v. Fernandez, 106 Fla. 779, 143 So. 638, 639, 86 A.L.R. 240.

13 In this country a franchise is a privilege or immunity of a public nature, which cannot be legally exercised
 14 without legislative grant. To be a corporation is a franchise. The various powers conferred on corporations
 15 are franchises. The execution of a policy of insurance by an insurance company [e.g. Social 16 Insurance/Socialist Security], and the issuing a bank note by an incorporated bank [such as a Federal Reserve
 17 NOTE], are franchises. People v. Utica Ins. Co., 15 Johns., N.Y., 387, 8 Am.Dec. 243. But it does not embrace
 18 the property acquired by the exercise of the franchise. Bridgeport v. New York & N. H. R. Co., 36 Conn. 255, 4
 19 Am.Rep. 63. Nor involve interest in land acquired by grantee. Whitbeck v. Funk, 140 Or. 70, 12 P.2d. 1019,
 20 1020. In a popular sense, the political rights of subjects and citizens are franchises, such as the right of

24 [Black's Law Dictionary, Fourth Edition, pp. 786-787]

25 Note the phrase "a franchise is a privilege or immunity of a public nature", meaning that those who exercise it are public
 26 officers. They also say "In a popular sense, the political rights of subjects and citizens are franchises, such as the right of 27 suffrage" and by this:

- 28 1. They refer to franchises as having a "public nature", meaning that those who exercise them are public officers.
- 29 2. They can only mean STATUTORY citizens and not CONSTITUTIONAL citizens.
- 30 3. They are referring to a "Congressionally created right" and therefore statutory privilege available only to those subject
 31 to the exclusive jurisdiction of Congress because domiciled on federal territory.

32 It therefore appears to us that:

- 33 1. The only "subjects" within a republican form of government are public officers IN the government and not private 34 human beings.
- 35 2. In order to create "subjects" within a republican form of government, you must create a statutory franchise called "U.S.
 36 citizen" or "U.S. resident" that is a public office in the government, and fool people through the abuse of "words of art" 37 into volunteering into the franchise.
- 38 3. A government that abuses its legislative authority to create franchises that alienate rights that are supposed to be 39 unalienable is engaging in TREASON and violating the Constitution. Any government that makes a profitable
 40 business or franchise out of alienating rights that are supposed to be unalienable is not a de jure government, but a de

42 4.13.4.3 Criminalization of being a "citizen of the United States" in 18 U.S.C. §911

43 You may also wonder as we have how it is that Congress can make it a crime to falsely claim to be a statutory "U.S.
 44 citizen" in 18 U.S.C. §911.

 46 § 911. Citizen of the United States

47 *Whoever falsely and willfully represents himself to be a citizen of the United States[**] shall be fined under* 48 this title or imprisoned not more than three years, or both.

The reason is that you cannot tax or regulate something until abusing it becomes harmful. A “license”, after all, is legally defined as permission from the state to do that which is otherwise illegal or harmful or both. And of course, you can only tax or regulate things that are harmful and licensed. Hence, they had to:

1. Create yet another franchise.
2. Attach a “status” to the franchise called “citizen of the United States**”, where “United States” implies the GOVERNMENT and not any geographical place.
3. Criminalize the abuse of the “status” and the rights that attach to the status. See, for instance, 18 U.S.C. §911, which makes it a crime to impersonate a statutory “citizen of the United States**”.
4. Make adopting the status entirely discretionary on the part of those participating. Hence, invoking the “status” and the “benefits” and “privileges” associated with the status constitutes constructive consent to abide by all the statutes that regulate the status.

California Civil Code
 DIVISION 3. OBLIGATIONS
 PART 2. CONTRACTS
 TITLE 1. NATURE OF A CONTRACT
 CHAPTER 3. CONSENT

1589. A voluntary acceptance of the benefit of a transaction is equivalent to a consent to all the obligations arising from it, so far as the facts are known, or ought to be known, to the person accepting.

5. Impose a tax or fine or “licensing fee” for those adopting or invoking the status. That tax, in fact, is the federal income tax codified in I.R.C., Subtitle A.

Every type of franchise works and is implemented exactly the same way, and the statutory “U.S. citizen” or “citizen of the United States**” franchise is no different. This section will prove that being a “citizen of the United States**” under the I.R.C. is, in fact, a franchise, that the franchise began in 1924 by judicial pronouncement, and that because the status is a franchise and all franchises are voluntary, you don’t have to participate, accept the “benefits”, or pay for the costs of the franchise if you don’t consent.

As you will learn in the next section, one becomes a “citizen” in a statutory sense by being born or naturalized in a country and exercising their First Amendment right of political association by voluntarily choosing a national and a municipal domicile in that country. How can Congress criminalize the exercise of the First Amendment right to politically and legally associate with a “state” and thereby become a citizen? After all, the courts have routinely held that Congress cannot criminalize the exercise of a right protected by the Constitution.

[People of Territory of Guam v. Fegurgur, 800 F.2d. 1470 (9th Cir. 1986)]

Even the U.S. Code recognizes the protected First Amendment right to not associate during the passport application process. Being a statutory and not constitutional “citizen” is an example of type of membership, because domicile is civil membership in a territorial community usually called a county, and you cannot be a “citizen” without a domicile:

A passport may not be denied issuance, revoked, restricted, or otherwise limited because of any speech, activity, belief, affiliation, or membership, within or outside the United States, which, if held or conducted within the United States, would be protected by the first amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

The answer to how Congress can criminalize the exercise of a First Amendment protected right of political association that is the foundation of becoming a “citizen” therefore lies in the fact that the statutory “U.S.** citizen” mentioned in 18 U.S.C. §911 is not a constitutional citizen protected by the Constitution, but rather is:

1. Not a human being or a private person but a statutory creation of Congress. The ability to regulate private conduct, according to the U.S. Supreme Court, is repugnant to the U.S. Constitution and therefore Congress can ONLY regulate public conduct and the public offices and franchises that it creates.

"The power to "legislate generally upon" life, liberty, and property, as opposed to the "power to provide modes of redress" against offensive state action, was "repugnant" to the Constitution. Id., at 15. See also United States v. Reese, 92 U.S. 214, 218 (1876); United States v. Harris, 106 U.S. 629, 639 (1883); James v. Bowman, 190 U.S. 127, 139 (1903). Although the specific holdings of these early cases might have been superseded or modified, see, e.g., Heart of Atlanta Motel, Inc. v. United States, 379 U.S. 241 (1964); United States v. Guest, 383 U.S. 745 (1966), their treatment of Congress' §5 power as corrective or preventive, not definitional, has not been questioned."

2. A statutory franchise and a federal corporation created on federal territory and domiciled there. Notice the key language "Whenever the public and private acts of the government seem to commingle [in this case, through the offering and enforcement of PRIVATE franchises to the public at large such as income taxes], a citizen or corporate body must by supposition be substituted in its place..." What Congress did was perform this substitution in the franchise agreement itself (the I.R.C.) BEFORE the controversy ever even reached the court such that this judicial doctrine could be COVERTLY applied! They want to keep their secret weapon secret.

See also Clearfield Trust Co. v. United States, 318 U.S. 363, 369 (1943) ("The United States does business on business terms") (quoting United States v. National Exchange Bank of Baltimore, 270 U.S. 527, 534 (1926)); Perry v. United States, supra at 352 (1935) ("When the United States, with constitutional authority, makes contracts [or franchises], it has rights and incurs responsibilities similar to those of individuals who are parties to such instruments. There is no difference . . . except that the United States cannot be sued without its consent") (citation omitted); United States v. Bostwick, 94 U.S. 53, 66 (1877) ("The United States, when they contract with their citizens, are controlled by the same laws that govern the citizen in that behalf"); Cooke v. United States, 91 U.S. 389, 398 (1875) (explaining that when the United States "comes down from its position of sovereignty, and enters the domain of commerce, it submits itself to the same laws that govern individuals there").

See Jones, 1 Cl.Ct. at 85 ("Wherever the public and private acts of the government seem to commingle, a citizen or corporate body must by supposition be substituted in its place, and then the question be determined whether the action will lie against the supposed defendant"); O'Neill v. United States, 231 Ct.Cl. 823, 826 (1982) (sovereign acts doctrine applies where, "[w]ere [the] contracts exclusively between private parties, the party hurt by such governing action could not claim compensation from the other party for the governing action"). The dissent ignores these statements (including the statement from Jones, from which case Horowitz drew its reasoning literally verbatim), when it says, post at 931, that the sovereign acts cases do not emphasize the need to treat the government-as-contractor the same as a private party.
[United States v. Winstar Corp., 518 U.S. 839 (1996)]

3. Property of the U.S. government. All franchises and statuses incurred under franchises are property of the government grantor. The government has always had the right to criminalize abuses of its property.
4. A public office in the government like all other franchise statuses.
5. An officer of a corporation, which is "U.S. Inc." and is described in 28 U.S.C. §3002(15)(A). All federal corporations are "citizens", and therefore a statutory "U.S. citizen" is really just the corporation that you are representing as a public officer.

"A corporation is a citizen, resident, or inhabitant of the state or country by or under the laws of which it was created, and of that state or country only."
[19 Corpus Juris Secundum (C.J.S.), Corporations, §886 (2003)]

Ordinarily, and especially in the case of states of the Union, domicile within that state by the state "citizen" is the determining factor as to whether an income tax is owed to the state by that citizen:

"domicile. A person's legal home. That place where a man has his true, fixed, and permanent home and principal establishment, and to which whenever he is absent he has the intention of returning. Smith v. Smith, 206 Pa.Super. 310, 213 A.2d. 94. Generally, physical presence within a state and the intention to make it one's home are the requisites of establishing a "domicile" therein. The permanent residence of a person or the place to which he intends to return even though he may actually reside elsewhere. A person may have more than one residence but only one domicile. The legal domicile of a person is important since it, rather than the actual residence, often controls the jurisdiction of the taxing authorities and determines where a person may exercise the privilege of voting and other legal rights and privileges."

[Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 485]

"Thus, the Court has frequently held that domicile or residence, more substantial than mere presence in transit or sojourn, is an adequate basis for taxation, including income, property, and death taxes. Since the Fourteenth Amendment makes one a citizen of the state wherein he resides, the fact of residence creates universally reciprocal duties of protection by the state and of allegiance and support by the citizen. The latter obviously includes a duty to pay taxes, and their nature and measure is largely a political matter. Of course, the situs of property may tax it regardless of the citizenship, domicile, or residence of the owner, the most obvious illustration being a tax on realty laid by the state in which the realty is located."

[Miller Brothers Co. v. Maryland, 347 U.S. 340 (1954)]

We also establish the connection between domicile and tax liability in the following article.

Why Domicile and Becoming a "Taxpayer" Require Your Consent, Form #05.002

4.13.4.4 U.S. Supreme Court: Murphy v. Ramsey

Below is how the U.S. Supreme Court describes the political rights of those domiciled on federal territory and therefore statutory "U.S. citizens" and "U.S. residents" as follows:

The counsel for the appellants in argument seem to question the constitutional power of Congress to pass the Act of March 22, 1882, so far as it abridges the rights of electors in the territory under previous laws. But that question is, we think, no longer open to discussion. It has passed beyond the stage of controversy into final judgment. The people of the United States, as sovereign owners of the national territories, have supreme power over them and their inhabitants. In the exercise of this sovereign dominion, they are represented by the government of the United States, to whom all the powers of government over that subject have been delegated, subject only to such restrictions as are expressed in the Constitution or are necessarily implied in its terms or in the purposes and objects of the power itself, for it may well be admitted in respect to this, as to every power of society over its members, that it is not absolute and unlimited. But in ordaining government for the territories and the people who inhabit them, all the discretion which belongs to legislative power is vested in Congress, and that extends beyond all controversy to determining by law, from time to time, the form of the local government in a particular territory and the qualification of those who shall administer it. It rests with Congress to say whether in a given case any of the people resident in the territory shall participate in the election of its officers or the making of its laws, and it may therefore take from them any right of suffrage it may previously have conferred, or at any time modify or abridge it, as it may deem expedient. The right of local self-government, as known to our system as a constitutional franchise, belongs under the Constitution to the states and to the people thereof, by whom that Constitution was ordained, and to whom, by its terms, all power not conferred by it upon the government of the United States, was expressly reserved. The personal and civil rights of the inhabitants of the territories are secured to them, as to other citizens, by the principles of constitutional liberty, which restrain all the agencies of government, state and national; their political rights are franchises which they hold as privileges in the legislative discretion of the Congress of the United States. This doctrine was fully and forcibly declared by THE CHIEF JUSTICE, delivering the opinion of the Court in National Bank v. County of Yankton, 101 U.S. 129. See also American Ins. Co. v. Canter, 1 Pet. 511; United States v. Gratiot, 14 Pet. 526; Cross v. Harrison, 16 How. 164; Dred Scott v. Sandford, 19 How. 393. [Murphy v. Ramsey, 114 U.S. 15 (1885)]

So in other words, those domiciled on federal territory are exercising "privileges" and franchises. The above case, however, does not refer and cannot refer to those domiciled within states of the Union.

4.13.4.5 U.S. Supreme Court: Cook v. Tait

The U.S. Supreme Court confirmed that the statutory "citizen of the United States**" mentioned in the Internal Revenue Code at 26 U.S.C. §911 and at 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1(c) is not associated with either domicile OR with constitutional citizenship (nationality) of the human being who is the "taxpayer" in the following case. The party they mentioned, Cook, was domiciled within Mexico at the time, which meant he was NOT a statutory "citizen of the United States**" under the Internal Revenue Code but rather a "nonresident alien". He was a "nonresident alien" rather than a "non-resident non-person" because he was a stockholder in a federal corporation and therefore a contractor with the government and an agent or office of the government. However, because he CLAIMED to be a statutory "citizen of the United States**" and the Supreme Court colluded with that FRAUD, they treated him as one ANYWAY.

We may make further exposition of the national power as the case depends upon it. It was illustrated at once in United States v. Bennett by a contrast with the power of a state. It was pointed out that there were limitations upon the latter that were not on the national power. The taxing power of a state, it was decided, encountered at its borders the taxing power of other states and was limited by them. There was no such limitation, it was pointed out, upon the national power, and that the limitation upon the states affords, it was said, no ground for constructing a barrier around the United States, 'shutting that government off from the exertion of powers which inherently belong to it by virtue of its sovereignty.'

"The contention was rejected that a citizen's property without the limits of the United States derives no benefit from the United States. The contention, it was said, came from the confusion of thought in 'mistaking the scope and extent of the sovereign power of the United States as a nation and its relations to its citizens and their relation to it.' And that power in its scope and extent, it was decided, is based on the presumption that government by its very nature benefits the citizen and his property wherever found, and that opposition to it holds on to citizenship while it 'belittles and destroys its advantages and blessings by denying the possession by government of an essential power required to make citizenship completely beneficial.' In other words, the principle was declared that the government, by its very nature, benefits the citizen and his property wherever found, and therefore has the power to make the benefit complete. Or, to express it another way, the basis of the power to tax was not and cannot be made dependent upon the situs of the property in all cases, it being in or out of the United States, nor was not and cannot be made dependent upon the domicile of the citizen, that being in or out of the United States, but upon his relation as citizen to the United States and the relation of the latter to him as citizen. The consequence of the relations is that the native citizen who is taxed may have domicile, and the property from which his income is derived may have situs, in a foreign country and the tax be legal—the government having power to impose the tax."
[Cook v. Tait, 265 U.S. 47 (1924)]

How can they tax someone without a domicile in the statutory United States and with no earnings from the statutory United States in the case of Cook, you might ask? Well, the REAL “taxpayer” is a public office in the U.S. government. That office REPRESENTS the United States federal corporation. All corporations are “citizens” of the place of their incorporation, and therefore under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 17(b), the effective domicile of the “taxpayer” is the District of Columbia.<sup>164</sup> All taxes are a civil liability that are implemented with civil law. The only way they could have reached extraterritorially with civil law to tax Cook without him having a domicile or residence anywhere in the statutory “United States**” was through a private law franchise contract in which he was a public officer. It is a maxim of law that debt and contract know no place, meaning that they can be enforced anywhere.

SOURCE: <http://famguardian.org/Publications/BouvierMaximsOfLaw/BouvierMaxims.htm>]

The feds have jurisdiction over their own public officers wherever they are but the EFFECTIVE civil domicile of all such offices and officers is the District of Columbia pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 17(b). Hence, the ONLY thing such a statutory “citizen of the United States**” could be within the I.R.C. is a statutory creation of Congress that is actually a public office which is domiciled in the statutory but not constitutional “United States**” in order for the ruling in Cook to be constitutional or even lawful. AND, according to the Cook case, having that status is a discretionary choice that has NOTHING to do with your circumstances, because Cook was NOT a statutory “citizen of the United States**” as someone not domiciled in the statutory but not constitutional “United States**”. Instead, he was a nonresident alien but the court allowed him to accept the voluntary “benefit” of the statutory status and hence, it had nothing to do with his circumstances, but rather his CHOICE to nominate a “protector” and join a franchise. Simply INVOKING the status of being a statutory “citizen of the United States**” on a government form is the only magic word needed to give one’s consent to become a “taxpayer” in that case. It is what the court called a “benefit”, and all “benefits” are voluntary and the product of a franchise contract or agreement. It was a quasi-contract as all taxes are, because the consent was implied rather than explicit, and it manifested itself by using property of the government, which in this case was the STATUS he claimed.

*"Even if the judgment is deemed to be colored by the nature of the obligation whose validity it establishes, and we are free to re-examine it, and, if we find it to be based on an obligation penal in character, to refuse to enforce it outside the state where rendered, see *Wisconsin v. You might reasonably ask of the Cook case, as we have, the following question:

“HOW did the government create the public office that they could tax and which Cook apparently occupied as a franchisee?”

Well, apparently the “citizen of the United States**” status he claimed is a franchise and an office in the U.S. government that carries with it the “public right” to make certain demands upon those who claim this status. Hence, it represents a “property interest” in the services of the United States federal corporation. In law, all rights are property, anything that conveys rights is property, contracts convey rights and are therefore property, and all franchises are contracts and therefore property. A “public officer” is legally defined as someone in charge of the property of the public, and the property Cook was in possession of was the public rights that attach to the status of being a statutory “citizen of the United States**”.

“Public office. The right, authority, and duty created and conferred by law, by which for a given period, either fixed by law or enduring at the pleasure of the creating power, an individual is invested with some portion of the sovereign functions of government for the benefit of the public. Walker v. Rich, 79 Cal.App. 139, 249 P. 56, 58. An agency for the state, the duties of which involve in their performance the exercise of some portion of the sovereign power, either great or small. Yaselli v. City of Elkhart, 75 Ind.App. 493, 129 N.E. 878. State ex rel. Colorado River Commission v. Frohmüller, 46 Ariz. 413, 52 P.2d. 483, 486. Where, by virtue of law, a person is clothed, not as an incidental or transient authority, but for such time as de- notes duration and continuance, with Independent power to control the property of the public, or with public functions to be exercised in the supposed interest of the people, the service to be compensated by a stated yearly salary, and the occupant having a designation or title, the position so created is a public office. State v. Brenman, 49 Ohio.St. 33, 29 N.E. 593. [Black's Law Dictionary, Fourth Edition, p. 1235]

For Cook, the statutory status of being a “citizen of the United States**” was the “res” that “identified” him within the jurisdiction of the federal courts, and hence made him a “res-ident” or “resident” subject to the tax with standing to sue in a territorial franchise court, which is what all U.S. District Courts are. In effect, he waived sovereign immunity and became a statutory “resident alien” by invoking the services of the federal courts, and as such, he had to pay for their services by paying the tax. Otherwise, he would have no standing to sue in the first place because he would be a “stateless person” and they would have had to dismiss either his case, or him as a party to it as the U.S. Supreme Court correctly did in Newman-Green v. Alfonso Larrain, 490 U.S. 826 (1989) in the case of an American National domiciled in Venezuela and therefore OUTSIDE the statutory but not constitutional “United States”.

“At oral argument before a panel of the Seventh Circuit Court of Appeals, Judge Easterbrook inquired as to the statutory basis for diversity jurisdiction, an issue which had not been previously raised either by counsel or by the District Court Judge. In its complaint, Newman-Green had invoked 28 U.S.C. §1332(a)(3), which confers jurisdiction in the District Court when a citizen of one State sues both aliens and citizens of a State (or States) different from the plaintiff's. In order to be a citizen of a State within the meaning of the diversity statute, a natural person must both be a citizen of the United States and be domiciled within the State. See Robertson v. Cease, 97 U.S. 646, 648-649 (1878); Brown v. Keene, 8 Pet. 112, 115 (1834). The problem in this case is that Bettison, although a [CONSTITUTIONAL] United States citizen, has no domicile in any State [FEDERAL STATE, meaning a federal TERRITORY per 28 U.S.C. §1332(e)]. He is therefore "stateless" for purposes of § 1332(a)(3). Subsection 1332(a)(2), which confers jurisdiction in the District Court when a citizen of a State sues aliens only, also could not be satisfied because Bettison is a United States citizen. [490 U.S. 829]”

When a plaintiff sues more than one defendant in a diversity action, the plaintiff must meet the requirements of the diversity statute for each defendant or face dismissal. Strawbridge v. Curtiss, 3 Cranch 267 (1806).[1]

1 Here, Bettison's "stateless" status destroyed complete diversity under § 1332(a)(3), and his United States
 2 citizenship destroyed complete diversity under § 1332(a)(2). Instead of dismissing the case, however, the Court
 3 of Appeals panel granted Newman-Green's motion, which it had invited, to amend the complaint to drop
 4 Bettison as a party, thereby producing complete diversity under § 1332(a)(2). 832 F.2d. 417 (1987). The panel,
 5 in an opinion by Judge Easterbrook, relied both on 28 U.S.C. §1653 and on Rule 21 of the Federal Rules of 6 Civil Procedure as sources of its authority to grant this motion. The panel noted that, because the guarantors
 7 are jointly and severally liable, Bettison is not an indispensable party, and dismissing him would not prejudice
 8 the remaining guarantors. 832 F.2d. at 420, citing Fed.Rule Civ.Proc. 19(b). The panel then proceeded to the 9 merits of the case, ruling in Newman-Green's favor in large part, but remanding to allow the District Court to 10 quantify damages and to resolve certain minor issues.[2]
 11 [\[Newman-Green v. Alfonso Larrain, 490 U.S. 826 \(1989\)\]](#)

12 Notice the above case dealt with federal franchises instead of constitutional rights, because they invoked STATUTORY 13 diversity under 28 U.S.C. §1332 instead of Constitutional diversity under Article III, Section 2. Statutory diversity under 14 28 U.S.C. §1332 is for STATUTORY "U.S. citizens". Constitutional diversity under Article III, Section 2 is for 15 CONSTITUTIONAL "citizens of the United States" under the Fourteenth Amendment.

16 If you would like a much more thorough discussion of all of the nuances of the Cook case, we strongly recommend the

Federal Jurisdiction, Form #05.018, Section 6
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

18 Here is another HUGE clue about what they think a "U.S. citizen" really is in federal statutes. Look at the definition below,
 19 and then consider that you CAN'T own a human being as property. That's called slavery:

20 TITLE 46 > Subtitle V > Part A > CHAPTER 505 > § 50501
 21 § 50501. Entities deemed citizens of the United States

22 (a) In General.—

23 *In this subtitle, a corporation, partnership, or association is deemed to be a citizen of the United States only if
 24 the controlling interest is owned by citizens of the United States. However, if the corporation, partnership, or* 25 association is operating a vessel in the coastwise trade, at least 75 percent of the interest must be owned by 26 citizens of the United States.

27 Now look at what the U.S. Supreme Court said about "ownership" of human beings. You can't "own" a human being as 28 chattel. The Thirteenth Amendment prohibits that. Therefore, the statutory "U.S. citizen" they are talking about above is 29 an instrumentality and public office within the United States. They can only tax, regulate, and legislate for PUBLIC objects
 30 and public offices of the United States under Article 4, Section 3, Clause 2. The ability to regulate PRIVATE conduct of 31 human beings has repeatedly been held by the U.S. Supreme Court to be "repugnant to the constitution" and beyond the 32 jurisdiction of Congress.

33 "It [the contract] is, in substance and effect, a contract for servitude, with no limitation but that of time;
 34 leaving the master to determine what the service should be, and the place where and the person to whom it
 35 should be rendered. Such a contract, it is scarcely necessary to say, is against the policy of our institutions
 36 and laws. If such a sale of service could be lawfully made for five years, it might, from the same reasons, for 37 ten, and so for the term of one's life. The door would thus be opened for a species of servitude inconsistent
 38 with the first and fundamental article of our declaration of rights, which, proprio vigore, not only abolished
 39 every vestige of slavery then existing in the commonwealth, but rendered every form of it thereafter legally
 40 impossible. That article has always been regarded, not simply as the declaration of an abstract principle, but as*
 41 *having the active force and conclusive authority of law.' Observing that one who voluntarily subjected himself
 42 to the laws of the state must find in them the rule of restraint as well as the rule of action, the court
 43 proceeded: 'Under this contract the plaintiff had no claim for the labor of the servant for the term of five
 44 years, or for any term whatever. She was under no legal obligation to remain in his service. There was no
 45 time during which her service was due to the plaintiff, and during which she was kept from such service by 46 the acts of the defendants.'

48 Under the contract of service it was at the volition of the master to entail service upon these appellants for an
 49 indefinite period. So far as the record discloses, it was an accident that the vessel came back to San Francisco
 50 when it did. By the shipping articles, the appellants could not quit the vessel until it returned to a port of the 51 *296 United States, and such return depended absolutely upon the will of the master. He had only to land at foreign ports, and keep the vessel away from the United States, in order to prevent the appellants from leaving his service.

The supreme law of the land now declares that involuntary servitude, except as a punishment for crime, of which the party shall have been duly convicted, shall not exist any where within the United States.
[Robertson v. Baldwin, 165 U.S. 275, 17 S.Ct. 326 (U.S. 1897)]

Federal courts also frequently use the phrase “privileges and immunities of citizens of the United States”. Below is an example:

“The privileges and immunities of citizens of the United States do not necessarily include all the rights protected by the first eight amendments to the Federal Constitution against the powers of the Federal Government.”

The trial of a person accused as a criminal by a jury of only eight persons instead of twelve, and his subsequent imprisonment after conviction do not abridge his privileges and immunities under the Constitution as a citizen of the United States and do not deprive him of his liberty without due process of law.”
[Maxwell v. Dow, 176 U.S. 581 (1900)]

Note that the “citizen of the United States**” described above is a statutory rather than constitutional citizen, which is why the court admits that the rights of such a person are inferior to those possessed by a “citizen” within the meaning of the United States Constitution. A constitutional but not statutory citizen is, in fact, NOT “privileged” in any way and none of the rights guaranteed by the Constitution can truthfully be called “privileges” without violating the law. It is a tort and a violation of due process, in fact, to convert rights protected by the Constitution and the common law into “privileges” or franchises or “public rights” under statutory law without at least your consent, which anyone in their right mind should NEVER give.

“Constitutional rights would be of little value if they could be indirectly denied,” Smith v. Allwright, 321 U.S. 649, 644, or manipulated out of existence [by converting them into statutory “privileges”/franchises],
[Harman v. Forssenius, 380 U.S. 528 at 540, 85 S.Ct. 1177, 1185 (1965)]

It is furthermore proven in the following memorandum of law that civil statutory law pertains almost exclusively to government officers and employers and cannot and does not pertain to human beings or private persons not engaged in federal franchises/privileges:

Why Statutory Civil Law is Law for Government and Not Private Persons, Form #05.037

<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

Consequently, if a court refers to “privileges and immunities” in relation to you, chances are they are presuming, usually FALSELY, that you are a statutory “U.S. citizen” and NOT a constitutional citizen. If you want to prevent them from making such false presumptions, we recommend attaching the following forms at least to your initial complaint and/or response in any action in court:

4.13.4.6 Summary

It therefore appears to us that a statutory “citizen” or “resident” is really just a public office in the U.S. government. That office is a franchisee with an effective domicile on federal territory not within any state of the Union. The corrupt courts are unlawfully allowing the creation of this public office, legal “person”, “res”, and franchisee using your consent. They have thus made a profitable business out of alienating rights that are supposed to be unalienable, in violation of the legislative intent of the Declaration of Independence and the U.S. Constitution. The money changers., who are priests of the civil religion of socialism called “judges”, have taken over the civic temple called government and made it into a WHOREHOUSE for their own lucrative PERSONAL gain:

“But those who desire to be rich fall into temptation and a snare, and into many foolish and harmful lusts which drown men in destruction and perdition. For the love of money is a root of all kinds of evil, for which some have strayed from the faith in their greediness, and pierced themselves through with many sorrows.”
[1 Tim. 6: 9-10, Bible, NKJV]

“franchise court. Hist. A privately held court that (usu.) exists by virtue of a royal grant [privilege], with jurisdiction over a variety of matters, depending on the grant and whatever powers the court acquires over time. In 1274, Edward I abolished many of these feudal courts by forcing the nobility to demonstrate by what authority (quo warrant) they held court. If a lord could not produce a charter reflecting the franchise, the court was abolished. - Also termed courts of the franchise.

Dispensing justice was profitable. Much revenue could come from the fees and dues, fines and amercements. This explains the growth of the second class of feudal courts, the Franchise Courts. They too were private courts held by feudal lords. Sometimes their claim to jurisdiction was based on old pre-Conquest grants ... But many of them were, in reality, only wrongful usurpations of private jurisdiction by powerful lords. These were put down after the famous Quo Warranto enquiry in the reign of Edward I.” W.J.V. Windeyer, Lectures on Legal History 56-57 (2d ed. 1949).”
[Black’s Law Dictionary, Seventh Edition, p. 668]

Notice the above language: “private courts held by feudal lords”. Judges who enforce their own franchises within the courtroom by imputing a franchise status against those protected by the Constitution who are not lawfully allowed to alienate their rights or give them away are acting in a private capacity to benefit themselves personally. That private capacity is associated with a de facto government in which greed is the only uniting factor. Contrast this with love for our neighbor, which is the foundation of a de jure government. When judges act in such a private, de facto capacity, the following results:

1. The judge is the “feudal lord” and you become his/her personal serf.
2. Rights become privileges, and the transformation usually occurs at the point of a gun held by a corrupt officer of the government intent on enlarging his/her pay check or retirement check. And he/she is a CRIMINAL for proceeding with such a financial conflict of interest:

§ 208. Acts affecting a personal financial interest

(a) Except as permitted by subsection (b) hereof, whoever, being an officer or employee of the executive branch of the United States Government, or of any independent agency of the United States, a Federal Reserve bank director, officer, or employee, or an officer or employee of the District of Columbia, including a special Government employee, participates personally and substantially as a Government officer or employee, through decision, approval, disapproval, recommendation, the rendering of advice, investigation, or otherwise, in a judicial or other proceeding, application, request for a ruling or other determination, contract, claim, controversy, charge, accusation, arrest, or other particular matter in which, to his knowledge, he, his spouse, minor child, general partner, organization in which he is serving as officer, director, trustee, general partner or employee, or any person or organization with whom he is negotiating or has any arrangement concerning prospective employment, has a financial [or personal/private] interest—

Shall be subject to the penalties set forth in section 216 of this title.

3. Equality and equal protection are replaced with the following consequences under a franchise:
  - 3.1. Privilege.
  - 3.2. Partiality.
  - 3.3. Bribes.
  - 3.4. Servitude and slavery.
4. The franchise statutes are the “bible” of a pagan state-sponsored religion. The bible isn’t “law” for non-believers, and franchise statutes aren’t “law” for those who are not consensually occupying a public office in the government as a franchisee called a “citizen”, “resident”, “taxpayer”, “driver”, etc. See:

Socialism: The New American Civil Religion, Form #05.016

5. You join the religion by “worshipping”, and therefore obeying what are actually voluntary franchises. The essence of “worship”, in fact, is obedience to the dictates of a superior being. Franchises make your public servants into superior

1 beings and replace a republic with a dulocracy. “Worship” and obedience becomes legal evidence of consent to the 2 franchise.

3 “And the Lord said to Samuel, ‘Heed the voice of the people in all that they say to you; for they have rejected
4 Me [God], that I should not reign over them. According to all the works which they have done since the day
5 that I brought them up out of Egypt, even to this day—with which they have forsaken Me and served [as
6 PUBLIC OFFICERS/FRANCHISEES] other gods [Rulers or Kings, in this case]—so they are doing to you
7 also [government becoming idolatry].”
8 [1 Sam 8:4-20, Bible, NKJV]

9 6. “Presumption” serves as a substitute for religious “faith” and is employed to create an unequal relationship between 10 you and your public servants. It turns the citizen/public servant relationship with the employer/employee relationship, 11 where you are the employee of your public servant. See:

Presumption: Chief Weapon for Unlawfully Enlarging Federal Jurisdiction, Form #05.017
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

12 7. “Taxes” serve as a substitute for “tithes” to the state-sponsored church of socialism that worships civil rulers, men and 13 creations of men instead of the true and living God.

14 8. The judge’s bench becomes:

15 8.1. An altar for human sacrifices, where YOU and your property are the sacrifice. All pagan religions are based on 16 sacrifice of one kind or another.

17 8.2. What the Bible calls a “throne of iniquity”:

18 “Shall the throne of iniquity, which devises evil by law, have fellowship with You? They gather
19 together against the life of the righteous, and condemn innocent blood. But the Lord has been my defense, and 20 my God the rock of my refuge. He has brought on them their own iniquity, and shall cut them off in their own
21 wickedness; the Lord our God shall cut them off.”
22 [Psalm 94:20-23, Bible, NKJV]

23 9. All property belongs to this pagan god and you are just a custodian over it as a public officer. You have EQUITABLE
24 title but not LEGAL title to the property you FALSELY BELIEVE belongs to you. The Bible franchise works the 25 same way, because the Bible says the Heavens and the Earth belong the LORD and NOT to believers. Believers are 26 “trustees” over God’s property under the Bible trust indenture. Believers are the “trustees”:

27 “Indeed heaven and the highest heavens belong to the LORD your God, also the earth with all that is in it.”
28 [Deut. 10:15, Bible, NKJV]

29 “The ultimate ownership of all property is in the State; individual so-called “ownership” is only by virtue of 30 Government, i.e., law, amounting to mere user; and use must be in accordance with law and subordinate to the 31 necessities of the State.”

34 10. The court building is a “church” where you “worship”, meaning obey, the pagan idol of government.

35 “Now, Mr. Speaker, this Capitol is the civic temple of the people, and we are here by direction of the people to 36 reduce the tariff tax and enact a law in the interest of all the people. This was the expressed will of the people
37 at the polls, and you promised to carry out that will, but you have not kept faith with the American people.”
38 [44 Cong.Rec. 4420, July 12, 1909; Congressman Heflin talking about the enactment of the Sixteenth
39 Amendment]

40 11. The licensed attorneys are the “deacons” of the state sponsored civil religion who conduct the “worship services”
41 directed at the judge at his satanic altar/bench. They are even ordained by the “chief priests” of the state supreme 42 court, who are the chief priests of the civil religion.

43 12. Pleadings are “prayers” to this pagan deity. Even the U.S. Supreme Court still calls pleadings “prayers”, and this is no 44 accident.

45 13. Like everything that SATAN does, the design of this state-sponsored satanic church of socialism that worships men
46 instead of God is a cheap IMITATION of God’s design for de jure government found throughout the Holy Bible.

47 NOW do you understand why in Britain, judges are called “your worship”? Because they are like gods:

48 “worship 1. chiefly Brit: a person of importance—used as a title for various officials (as magistrates and 49 some mayors) 2: reverence offered a divine being or supernatural power; also: an act of expressing such 50

1 reverence 3: a form of religious practice with its creed and ritual 4: extravagant respect or admiration for or
 2 devotion to an object of esteem <~ the dollar>.”

16 I said, You are gods [since you judge on My behalf, as My representatives]; indeed, all of you are children of 17 the Most High.

18 But you shall die as men and fall as one of the princes.

19 Arise, O God, judge the earth! For to You belong all the nations.

21 4.13.5 “Citizens” v. “Nationals”

22 4.13.5.1 Introduction

23 Two words are used to describe citizenship: “citizen” and “national”. There is a world of difference between these two 24 terms and it is extremely important to understand the distinctions before we proceed further. Below is a law dictionary
 25 definition of “citizen” that deliberately tries to confuse these two components of citizenship. We will use this definition as 26 a starting point for our discussion of the differences between “citizens” and “nationals”:

27 citizen. One who, under the Constitution and laws of the United States[***], or of a particular state, is a
 28 member of the political community, owing allegiance and being entitled to the enjoyment of full civil rights.
 29 All persons born or naturalized in the United States[***], and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of 30 the United States[***] and of the state wherein they reside. U.S. Const., 14th Amend. See Citizenship.*

31 "Citizens" are members of a political community who, in their associated capacity, have established or
 32 submitted themselves to the dominion of a government [by giving up their rights] for the promotion of their
 33 general welfare and the protection of their individual as well as collective rights. Herriott v. City of Seattle,
 34 81 Wash.2d. 48, 500 P.2d. 101, 109.

35 *The term may include or apply to children of alien parents from in United States[***], Von Schwerdtner v.
 36 Piper, D.C.Md., 23 F.2d. 862, 863; U.S. v. Minoru Yasui, D.C.Or., 48 F.Supp. 40, 54; children of American
 37 citizens born outside United States, Haaland v. Attorney General of United States, D.C.Md., 42 F.Supp. 13, 22;
 38 Indians, United States v. Hester, C.C.A.Okl., 137 F.2d. 145, 147; National Banks, American Surety Co. v. Bank
 39 of California, C.C.A.Or., 133 F.2d. 160, 162; nonresident who has qualified as administratrix of estate of 40 deceased resident, Hunt v. Noll, C.C.A.Tenn., 112 F.2d. 288, 289. However, neither the United States nor a
 41 state is a citizen for purposes of diversity jurisdiction. Jizemerjian v. Dept of Air Force, 457 F.Supp. 820. On
 42 the other hand, municipalities and other local governments are deemed to be citizens. Rieser v. District of
 43 Columbia, 563 F.2d. 462. A corporation is not a citizen for purposes of privileges and immunities clause of the
 44 Fourteenth Amendment. D.D.B. Realty Corp. v. Merrill, 232 F.Supp. 629, 637.*

45 *Under diversity statute [28 U.S.C. §1332], which mirrors U.S. Const, Article III's diversity clause, a person is a
 46 "citizen of a state" if he or she is a citizen of the United States[***] and a domiciliary of a state of the United
 47 States[***]. Gibbons v. Udaras na Gaeltachta, D.C.N.Y., 549 F.Supp. 1094, 1116. “
 48 [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 244]*

Based on the above definition, being a “citizen” therefore involves the following FOUR individual components, EACH of which require your individual consent in some form. Any attempt to remove the requirement for consent in the case of EACH SPECIFIC component makes the government doing so UNJUST as defined by the Declaration of Independence, and produces involuntary servitude in violation of the Thirteenth Amendment:

#	Characteristic	How consented to	What happens when you don't consent
1	Allegiance to the sovereign within the community, which in our country is the “state” and is legally defined as the PEOPLE occupying a fixed territory RATHER than the government or anyone serving them IN the government.	Requesting to be naturalized and taking a naturalization oath.	Allegiance acquired by birth is INVOLUNTARY.
2	VOLUNTARY political association and membership in a political community.	Registering to vote or serve on jury duty.	If you don't register to vote or serve on jury duty, you are NOT a “citizen”, even if ELIGIBLE to do either.
3	Enjoyment of full CIVIL rights.	Choosing a domicile	You can't be a statutory “citizen” unless you voluntarily choose a domicile.
4	Submission to CIVIL authority.	Choosing a domicile	You can't be a statutory “citizen” unless you voluntarily choose a domicile.

From the above, we can see that simply calling oneself a “citizen” or not qualifying which SUBSET of each of the above we consent to is extremely hazardous to your freedom! Watch out! The main questions in our mind about the above chart is:

- Must we expressly consent to ALL of the above as indicated in the third column from the left above in order to truthfully be called a “citizen” as legally defined?
- Which components in the above table are MANDATORY in order to be called a “citizen”?
- What if we don't consent to the “benefits” of the domicile protection franchise? Does that NOT make us a “citizen” under the civil statutory laws of that jurisdiction?
- What if we choose a domicile in the place, but refuse to register to vote and make ourselves ineligible to serve on jury duty. Does that make us NOT a “citizen”?
- If we AREN'T a “citizen” as defined above because we don't consent to ALL of the components, then what would we be called on:
  - Government forms?
  - Under the statutes of the jurisdiction we are NOT a “citizen” of?

4.13.5.2 What if I don't consent to receive ANY of the “benefits” or “privileges” of being a “citizen”? What would I be called?

Under maxims of the common law, refusing to consent to ANY ONE OR MORE of the above four prerequisites of BEING a “citizen” makes us ineligible to be called a “citizen” under the laws of that jurisdiction.

No one is obliged to accept a benefit against his consent. Dig. 50, 17, 69. But if he does not dissent he will be considered as assenting. Vide Assent.

Quilibet potest renunciare juri pro se inducto.

Any one may renounce a law introduced for his own benefit. To this rule there are some exceptions. See 1 Bouv. Inst. n. 83.

[Bouvier's Maxims of Law, 1856,

SOURCE: <http://famguardian.org/Publications/BouvierMaximsOfLaw/BouviereMaxims.htm>]

There are many good reasons for the above distinction between NATIONALITY (POLITICAL) status and CITIZEN (CIVIL) status, the most important of which is the ability of the courts to legally distinguish those born in the country but domiciled outside their jurisdiction from those who are domiciled in their jurisdiction. For instance, those domiciled abroad and outside the geographical "United States" are usually called "nationals of the United States" rather than "citizens of the United States". An example of this phenomenon is described in the following U.S. Supreme Court case, in which an American born in the country is domiciled in Venezuela and therefore is referred to as a "stateless person" not subject to and immune from the civil laws of his country!

Petitioner Newman-Green, Inc., an Illinois corporation, brought this state law contract action in District Court against a Venezuelan corporation, four Venezuelan citizens, and William L. Bettison, a United States citizen domiciled in Caracas, Venezuela. Newman-Green's complaint alleged that the Venezuelan corporation had breached a licensing agreement, and that the individual defendants, joint and several guarantors of royalty payments due under the agreement, owed money to Newman-Green. Several years of discovery and pretrial motions followed. The District Court ultimately granted partial summary judgment for the guarantors and partial summary judgment for Newman-Green. 590 F.Supp. 1083 (ND Ill.1984). Only Newman-Green appealed.

*At oral argument before a panel of the Seventh Circuit Court of Appeals, Judge Easterbrook inquired as to the statutory basis for diversity jurisdiction, an issue which had not been previously raised either by counsel or by the District Court Judge. In its complaint, Newman-Green had invoked 28 U.S.C. §1332(a)(3), which confers jurisdiction in the District Court when a citizen of one State sues both aliens and citizens of a State (or States) different from the plaintiff's. In order to be a citizen of a State within the meaning of the diversity statute, a natural person must both be a citizen of the United States and be domiciled within the State. See Robertson v. Cease, 97 U.S. 646, 648-649 (1878); Brown v. Keene, 8 Pet. 112, 115 (1834). The problem in this case is that Bettison, although a United States citizen, has no domicile in any State. He is therefore "stateless" for purposes of § 1332(a)(3). Subsection 1332(a)(2), which confers jurisdiction in the District Court when a citizen of a State sues aliens only, also could not be satisfied because Bettison is a United States citizen. [490 U.S. 829]

When a plaintiff sues more than one defendant in a diversity action, the plaintiff must meet the requirements of the diversity statute for each defendant or face dismissal. Strawbridge v. Curtiss, 3 Cranch 267 (1806).{1} Here, Bettison's "stateless" status destroyed complete diversity under § 1332(a)(3), and his United States citizenship destroyed complete diversity under § 1332(a)(2). Instead of dismissing the case, however, the Court of Appeals panel granted Newman-Green's motion, which it had invited, to amend the complaint to drop Bettison as a party, thereby producing complete diversity under § 1332(a)(2). 832 F.2d. 417 (1987). The panel, in an opinion by Judge Easterbrook, relied both on 28 U.S.C. § 1653 and on Rule 21 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure as sources of its authority to grant this motion. The panel noted that, because the guarantors are jointly and severally liable, Bettison is not an indispensable party, and dismissing him would not prejudice the remaining guarantors. 832 F.2d. at 420, citing Fed.Rule Civ.Proc. 19(b). The panel then proceeded to the merits of the case, ruling in Newman-Green's favor in large part, but remanding to allow the District Court to quantify damages and to resolve certain minor issues.{2} [Newman-Green v. Alfonso Larrain, 490 U.S. 826 (1989)]

The U.S. Supreme Court above was trying to deceive the audience by not clarifying WHAT type of "citizen" Bettison was. They refer to CONSTITUTIONAL citizens and STATUTORY citizens with the same name, which indirectly causes the audience to believe that NATIONALITY and DOMICILE are synonymous. They do this to unlawfully and unconstitutionally expand their importance and jurisdiction. Bettison in fact was a CONSTITUTIONAL citizen but not a STATUTORY citizen, so the CIVIL case against him under the STATUTORY codes had to either be dismissed or he had to be removed because he couldn't lawfully be a defendant! Imagine applying this same logic to a case involving the (illegal) enforcement of the Internal Revenue Code to Americans abroad.

The first thing we notice about the Foreign Affairs Manual cite above is the use of the phrase "privileges of citizenship". Both voting and serving on jury duty are and always have been PRIVILEGES that can be taken away, not RIGHTS that are inalienable. The fact that they are privileges is the reason why convicted felons can't vote or serve on jury duty, in fact.<sup>165</sup>

"In a popular sense, the political rights of subjects and citizens are franchises, such as the right of suffrage, etc. Pierce v. Emery, 32 N.H. 484; State v. Black Diamond Co., 97 Ohio.St. 24, 119 N.E. 195, 199, L.R.A. 1918E, 352.

SOURCE: http://www.ehow.com/facts\_6751209\_felony-conviction-voting-rights.html"

2 Exclusive Franchise. See Exclusive Privilege or Franchise. “
3 [Black’s Law Dictionary, Fourth Edition, pp. 786-787]

4 Those who refuse to be enfranchised or privileged in any way therefore cannot consent to or exercise the obligations or
5 accept the “benefits” of such privileges, and they have a RIGHT to do so. To suggest otherwise is to sanction involuntary
6 servitude in violation of the Thirteenth Amendment.

7 It is clearly an absurd and irrational usurpation to say that “nationality” is synonymous with being a PRIVILEGED
8 STATUTORY “citizen” and that we can abandon or expatriate our nationality to evade or avoid the privileges. Under the 9 English monarchy, “nationality” and “citizen” status are synonymous and EVERYONE is a “subject” whether they want to 10 be or not. In America, they are not synonymous and you cannot be compelled to become a subject without violating the 11 First Amendment and the Fifth Amendment. Forcing people to abandon their nationality to become unenfranchised
12 actually accomplishes the OPPOSITE and makes them MORE enfranchised, in fact. That is because by doing so they 13 become YET ANOTHER type of enfranchised entity called an “alien” who is a slave to a whole different set of 14 “privileges”.

15 “Residents, as distinguished from citizens, are aliens who are permitted to take up a permanent abode in the
16 country. Being bound to the society by reason of their dwelling in it, they are subject to its laws so long as
17 they remain there, and, being protected by it, they must defend it, although they do not enjoy all the rights of 18 citizens. They have only certain privileges which the law, or custom, gives them. Permanent residents are 19 those who have been given the right of perpetual residence. They are a sort of citizen of a less privileged 20 character, and are subject to the society without enjoying all its advantages. Their children succeed to their
22 [The Law of Nations, Vattel, Book 1, Chapter 19, Section 213, p. 87]

23 There MUST be a status that carries with it NO PRIVILEGES or obligations and if there is NOT, then the entire country is 24 just a big FARM for government animals akin to that described below:

<http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=Mp1gJ3iF2Ik&feature=youtu.be>

25 It would therefore seem based on 7 Foreign Affairs Manual (F.A.M.) 1100(b)(1) that those who refuse to register to vote or 26 serve on jury duty would satisfy the requirement above of being a “non-citizen national”. Hence, withdrawing consent to 27 be jurist or voter alone would seem to demote us from being a “citizen” to being a “non-citizen national”. However, there
28 is no congressional act that grants this substandard status to anyone OTHER than those in federal possessions such as
29 American Samoa or Swain’s Island. Hence, claiming the status of “non-citizen national” would have to be done delicately
30 with care so as not to confuse yourself with those born in or domiciled in the federal possessions of American Samoa and 31 Swain’s Island, who are described in 8 U.S.C. §1408 and 8 U.S.C. §1452.

32 STATUTORY “non-citizen nationals” are described in 8 U.S.C. §1408, 8 U.S.C. §1452, and 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22)(B).
33 However, these statutes only define civil statuses of those situated on federal territory. Those physically situated or 34 domiciled in a constitutional state would not be described in those statutes but would still appear to be eligible to be “non-
35 citizen nationals” from a COMMON LAW or CONSTITUTIONAL, rather than a STATUTORY standpoint.

36 “Finally, this Court is mindful of the years of past practice in which territorial citizenship has been treated as
37 a statutory [PRIVILEGE!], and not a constitutional, right. In the unincorporated territories of Puerto Rico,
38 Guam, the U.S. Virgin Islands, and the Northern Mariana Islands, birthright citizenship was conferred upon
39 their inhabitants by various statutes many years after the United States acquired them. See Amicus Br. at 10-
40 11. If the Citizenship Clause guaranteed birthright citizenship in unincorporated territories, these statutes
41 would have been unnecessary. While longstanding practice is not sufficient to demonstrate constitutionality,
42 such a practice requires special scrutiny before being set aside. See, e.g., Jackman v. Rosenbaum Co., 260
43 U.S. 22, 31 (1922) (Holmes, J.) (“If a thing has been practiced for two hundred years by common consent, it
44 will need a strong case for the Fourteenth Amendment to affect it[.]”); Walz v. Tax Comm’n, 397 U.S. 664, 678
45 (1970) (“It is obviously correct that no one acquires a vested or protected right in violation of the Constitution
46 by long use . . . . Yet an unbroken practice . . . is not something to be lightly cast aside.”). And while Congress
47 cannot take away the citizenship of individuals covered by the Citizenship Clause, it can bestow citizenship
48 upon those not within the Constitution’s breadth. See U.S. Const. art. IV, § 3, cl. 2 (“Congress shall have Power
49 to dispose of and make all needful Rules and Regulations respecting the Territory belonging to the United 50 States.”); id. at art. I, § 8, cl. 4 (Congress may “establish an uniform Rule of Naturalization . . .”). To date,

1 Congress has not seen fit to bestow birthright citizenship upon American Samoa, and in accordance with the
 2 law, this Court must and will respect that choice.<sup>16</sup>
 3 [Tuana v. USA, Case No. 12-01143 (District of Columbia District Court)]

4 Those among our readers who do NOT want to be privileged “citizens”, do not want to abandon their nationality, and yet
 5 who also do not want to call themselves “non-citizen nationals” may therefore instead refer to themselves simply as “non-
 6 resident non-persons” under federal law. Below is our definition of that term from the SEDM Disclaimer:

7 4. MEANINGS OF WORDS

8 The term “non-person” as used on this site we define to be a human not domiciled on federal territory, not 9 engaged in a public office, and not “purposefully and consensually availing themselves” of commerce within the 10 jurisdiction of the United States government. We invented this term. The term does not appear in federal 11 statutes because statutes cannot even define things or people who are not subject to them and therefore foreign 12 and sovereign. The term “non-individual” used on this site is equivalent to and a synonym for “non-person” on 13 this site, even though STATUTORY “individuals” are a SUBSET of “persons” within the Internal Revenue Code.
 14 Likewise, the term “private human” is also synonymous with “non-person”. Hence, a “non-person”:

- 15 1. Retains their sovereign immunity. They do not waive it under the Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act, 28
- 16 U.S.C. Chapter 97 or the longarm statutes of the state they occupy.
- 17 2. Is protected by the United States Constitution and not federal statutory civil law.
- 18 3. May not have federal statutory civil law cited against them. If they were, a violation of Federal Rule of
- 19 Civil Procedure 17 and a constitutional tort would result if they were physically present on land protected
- 20 by the United States Constitution within the exterior limits of states of the Union.
- 21 4. Is on an equal footing with the United States government in court. “Persons” would be on an UNEQUAL,
- 22 INFERIOR, and subservient level if they were subject to federal territorial law.

23 Don't expect vain public servants to willingly admit that there is such a thing as a human who satisfies the 24 above criteria because it would undermine their systematic and treasonous plunder and enslavement of people
 25 they are supposed to be protecting. However, the U.S. Supreme Court has held that the “right to be left alone” is 26 the purpose of the constitution. Olmstead v. United States, 277 U.S. 438. A so-called “government” that refuses 27 to leave you alone or respect or protect your sovereignty and equality in relation to them is no government at 28 all and has violated the purpose of its creation described in the Declaration of Independence.
 29 [SEDM Disclaimer, Section 4; SOURCE: <http://sedm.org/disclaimer.htm>]

30 The noteworthy silence of the courts on the VERY important subject of this section is what we affectionately call the 31 following:

32 “The hide the presumption and hide the consent game.”

33 Corrupt judges know that:

- 34 1. All just powers of CIVIL government derive from the CONSENT of the governed per the Declaration of
- 35 Independence.
- 36 2. Any civil statutory power wielded by government against your consent is inherently UNJUST.
- 37 3. You have a RIGHT to NOT participate in franchises or privileges.
- 38 4. You can choose NOT to be a privileged “citizen” WITHOUT abandoning your nationality. Only in a monarchy where
- 39 everyone is a “subject” regardless of their consent can a government NOT allow this.
- 40 5. They can only CIVILLY government people who consent to become “citizens”.
- 41 6. All men and all creations of men such as government are equal. Hence, an entire government of men has no more
- 42 power than a single human as a legal “person”.
- 43 7. If government becomes abusive, you have a RIGHT and a DUTY under the Declaration of Independence to quit your
- 44 public office as a “citizen”, and quit paying for the PRIVILEGE of occupying the position in the form of taxes.

45 “But when a long train of abuses and usurpations, pursuing invariably the same Object evinces a design to
 46 reduce them under absolute Despotism, it is their right, it is their duty, to throw off such Government, and to
 47 provide new Guards for their future security”
 48 [Declaration of Independence; SOURCE:
 49 http://www.archives.gov/exhibits/charters/declaration\_transcript.html]

50 If everyone knew the above, they would abandon a totally corrupted government, quit subsidizing it, and let it starve to 51 death long enough to fire the bastards and PEACEFULLY start over with no bloodshed and no violent revolution. Since
 52 they won't recognize your right to PEACEFULLY institute such reforms and DUTIES under the Declaration of

1 Independence, indirectly you could say they are anarchists because the inevitable final result of not having a peaceful
2 remedy of this kind is and will be violence, social unrest, and bloodshed.

3 Like the Wizard of Oz, it's time to pull back the curtain, ahem, or the "robe", of these corrupt wizards on the federal bench
4 and expose this FRAUD and confidence game for what it is. Let's return to Kansas, Dorothy. There's no place like home,
5 and home is an accountable government that needs your explicit permission to do anything civil to you and which can be
6 literally FIRED by all those who are mistreated.

7 4.13.5.3 Statutory "citizens"

8 The key thing to notice in the definition of "citizen" earlier is that those who are "citizens" within a legislative jurisdiction
9 are also subject to all civil laws within that legislative jurisdiction. Note the phrase above:

10 "Citizens' are members of a political community who, in their associated capacity, have...submitted 11 themselves to the dominion of a government [and all its laws] for the promotion of their general welfare and 12 the protection of their individual as well as collective rights."
13 [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 244]

14 Notice the phrase "for the protection of.. collective rights". Those who want to avoid what we call "collectivism" therefore 15 cannot become a STATUTORY "citizen" under the civil laws of any government, because you can't become a citizen
16 without ALSO protecting COLLECTIVE rights. This may be why the Bible says on this subject the following:

17 *"Where do wars and fights [and tyranny and oppression] come from among you? Do they not come from your 18 desires for pleasure [pursuit of government "privileges" and "benefits" and favors such as Socialist Security]
19 that war in your members?....You ask [from your government and its THIEF the IRS] and do not receive,
20 because you ask amiss, that you may spend it on your own pleasures. Adulterers and adulteresses [and 21 HARLOTS]! Do you not know that friendship with the world [as a "citizen", "resident", "taxpayer", etc] is 22 enmity with God? Whoever therefore wants to be a friend of the world makes himself an enemy of God."*
23 [James 4:3-4, Bible, NKJV]

24 For more on collectivism, see:

Collectivism and How to Resist It, Form #12.024
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

25 A statutory "citizen" is therefore someone who was born somewhere within the country and who and maintains a domicile
26 within a CIVIL jurisdiction, who owes allegiance to the "sovereign" within that jurisdiction, and who participates in the 27 functions of government by voting and serving on jury duty. The only people who are "subject to" federal civil statutory,
28 and therefore "citizens" under federal civil statutory law, are those people who have voluntarily chosen a domicile where
29 the federal government has exclusive legislative/general jurisdiction, which exists only within the federal zone, under 30 Article 1, Section 8, Clause 17 of the Constitution and 40 U.S.C. §§3111 and 3112. Within the Internal Revenue Code, 31 people born in the federal zone or domiciled there are described as being "subject to its jurisdiction" rather than "subject to 32 the jurisdiction" as mentioned in the Fourteenth Amendment. Hence, THIS type of "citizen" is NOT a Constitutional
33 citizen but a Statutory citizen domiciled on federal territory:

34 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1 Income tax on individuals

36 *Every person born or naturalized in the [federal] United States**] and subject to its jurisdiction is a*
37 citizen. For other rules governing the acquisition of citizenship, see chapters 1 and 2 of title III of the
39 [26 C.F.R. §1.1-1(c)]

40 This area includes the District of Columbia, the territories and possessions of the United States**, and the federal areas
41 within states, which are all "foreign" with respect to states of the Union for the purposes of federal legislative jurisdiction.
42 If you were born in a state of the Union and are domiciled there, you are not subject to federal jurisdiction unless the land
43 you maintain a domicile on was ceded by the state to the federal government. Therefore, you are not and cannot be a
44 "citizen" under federal law! If you aren't a "citizen", then you also can't be claiming your children as "citizens" on IRS
45 returns or applying for government numbers for them either!

4.13.5.4 Statutory “nationals”

A “national”, on the other hand, is simply someone who claims allegiance to the political body formed within the geographical boundaries and territory that define a “state”.

8 U.S.C. §1101: Definitions

(a) As used in this chapter—

(21) The term “national” means a person owing permanent allegiance to a state.

A “state” is then defined as follows:

“State. A people permanently occupying a fixed territory bound together by common-law habits and custom into one body politic exercising, through the medium of an organized government, independent sovereignty and control over all persons and things within its boundaries, capable of making war and peace and of entering into international relations with other communities of the globe. United States v. Kusche, D.C.Cal., 56 F.Supp. 201 207, 208. The organization of social life which exercises sovereign power in behalf of the people. Delany v. Moralitis, C.C.A.Md., 136 F.2d. 129, 130. In its largest sense, a “state” is a body politic or a society of men. Beagle v. Motor Vehicle Acc. Indemnification Corp., 44 Misc.2d. 636, 254 N.Y.S.2d. 763, 765. A body of people occupying a definite territory and politically organized under one government. State ex re. Maisano v. Mitchell, 155 Conn. 256, 231 A.2d. 539, 542. A territorial unit with a distinct general body of law. Restatement, Second, Conflicts, §3. Term may refer either to body politic of a nation (e.g. United States) or to an individual government unit of such nation (e.g. California).

[...]

The people of a state, in their collective capacity, considered as the party wronged by a criminal deed; the public; as in the title of a cause, “The State vs. A.B.”
[Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1407]

So when we claim “allegiance” as a “national”, we are claiming allegiance to a “state”, which is:

1. In the case of state/CONSTITUTIONAL citizens, the collection of all people within the constitutional states of the Union, who are the sovereigns within our system of government. This is called the “United States***”. People owing this kind of allegiance are called “subject to THE jurisdiction”.
2. In the case of territorial/STATUTORY citizens, the United States government or United States**. It is NOT any of the people on federal territory, because they are all SUBJECTS within what the U.S. Supreme Court called the equivalent of “a British Crown Colony” in Downes v. Bidwell. People owing this kind of allegiance are called “subject to ITS jurisdiction”. See 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1(c).

The political body we have allegiance to as a “national” is non-geographical and can exist OUTSIDE the physical territory or exclusive jurisdiction of the sovereign to whom we claim allegiance. For instance, Americans born abroad to American nationals take on the citizenship of their parents, no matter where born per 8 U.S.C. §1401 and 8 U.S.C. §1408. Hence, the “United States” we claim allegiance to is non-geographical because even people when abroad are called “subject to THE jurisdiction”.

“All persons born in the allegiance of the king are natural-born subjects, and all persons born in the allegiance of the United States are natural-born citizens. Birth and allegiance go together. Such is the rule of the common law, and it is the common law of this country, as well as of England. There are two exceptions, and only two, to the universality of its application. The children of ambassadors are in theory born in the allegiance of the powers the ambassadors represent, and slaves, in legal contemplation, are property, and not persons.”
[United States v. Rhodes, 1 Abbott, U.S. 28 (Cir. Ct. Ky 1866), Justice Swayne]

Note that as a “national” domiciled in a state of the Union (a “state national”), we are NOT claiming allegiance to the government or anyone serving us within the government in their official capacity as “public servants”. As a “national”, we are instead claiming allegiance to the People within the legislative jurisdiction of the geographic region by virtue of a domicile there. This is because in states of the Union, the People are the Sovereigns, and not the government who serves them. All sovereignty and authority emanates from We the People as human beings and not from the government that serves them:

1 “The words ‘people of the United States[***]’ and ‘citizens,’ are synonymous terms, and mean the same thing.
2 They both describe the political body who, according to our republican institutions, form the sovereignty, and
3 who hold the power and conduct the government through their representatives. They are what we familiarly call
4 the ‘sovereign people,’ and every citizen is one of this people, and a constituent member of this sovereignty. ...”
5 Boyd v. State of Nebraska, [143 U.S. 135 (1892)]

6 “From the differences existing between feudal sovereignties and Government founded on compacts, it
7 necessarily follows that their respective prerogatives must differ. Sovereignty is the right to govern; a nation
8 or State-sovereign is the person or persons in whom that resides. In Europe the sovereignty is generally
9 ascribed to the Prince; here it rests with the people; there, the sovereign actually administers the 10 Government; here, never in a single instance; our Governors are the agents of the people, and at most stand
11 in the same relation to their sovereign, in which regents in Europe stand to their sovereigns. Their Princes
12 have personal powers, dignities, and pre-eminences, our rulers have none but official; nor do they partake in 13 the sovereignty otherwise, or in any other capacity, than as private citizens.”
14 Chisholm, Ex'r. v. Georgia, [2 Dall. \(U.S.\) 419, 1 L.Ed. 454, 457, 471, 472) (1794)]

15 The Supreme Court of the United States** described and compared the differences between “citizenship” and “allegiance”
16 very succinctly in the case of Talbot v. Janson, 3 U.S. 133 (1795):

17 “Yet, it is to be remembered, and that whether in its real origin, or in its artificial state, allegiance, as well as
18 fealty, rests upon lands, and it is due to persons. Not so, with respect to Citizenship, which has arisen from the 19 dissolution of the feudal system and is a substitute for allegiance, corresponding with the new order of things.
20 Allegiance and citizenship, differ, indeed, in almost every characteristic. Citizenship is the effect of compact;
21 allegiance is the offspring of power and necessity. Citizenship is a political tie; allegiance is a territorial 22 tenure. Citizenship is the charter of equality; allegiance is a badge of inferiority. Citizenship is 23 constitutional; allegiance is personal. Citizenship is freedom; allegiance is servitude. Citizenship is 24 communicable; allegiance is repulsive. Citizenship may be relinquished; allegiance is perpetual. With such 25 essential differences, the doctrine of allegiance is inapplicable to a system of citizenship; which it can neither
26 serve to controul, nor to elucidate. And yet, even among the nations, in which the law of allegiance is the most 27 firmly established, the law most pertinaciously enforced, there are striking deviations that demonstrate the 28 invincible power of truth, and the homage, which, under every modification of government, must be paid to the 29 inherent rights of man.....The doctrine is, that allegiance cannot be due to two sovereigns; and taking an oath
30 of allegiance to a new, is the strongest evidence of withdrawing allegiance from a previous, sovereign....”

34 A “national” is not subject to the exclusive legislative civil jurisdiction and general sovereignty of the political body, but 35 indirectly is protected by it and may claim its protection when abroad. For instance, when we travel overseas or change our 36 domicile to abroad, we are known in foreign countries as “American Nationals” or:

- 37 1. “nationals”, or “state nationals”, or “nationals of the United States of America” or “United States***” under 8 U.S.C.
38 §1101(a)(21) if we were born in and are domiciled in a state of the Union.
- 39 2. “nationals of the United States**” but NOT “nationals of the United States***” described in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22).
- 40 3. “nationals but not citizens of the United States at birth” under 8 U.S.C. §1408 and 8 U.S.C. §1452 if we were born in a 41 federal possession, such as American Samoa or Swains Island.

42 Here is the definition of a “national of the United States**” that demonstrates this, and note paragraph (a)(22)(B):

43 TITLE 8 > CHAPTER 12 > SUBCHAPTER I > Sec. 1101.
44 Sec. 1101. - Definitions

45 (a) As used in this chapter—

46 (22) The term “national of the United States[**]” means

47 (A) a citizen of the United States[**], or

48 (B) a person who, though not a citizen of the United States[**], owes permanent [but not necessarily 49 exclusive] allegiance to the United States[**].

50 Consequently, the only time a “national” can also be described as a “citizen” is when he/she is domiciled within the 51 territorial and legislative jurisdiction of the political body to which he/she claims allegiance. Being a “national” is therefore 52 an attribute and a prerequisite of being a STATUTORY “citizen”, and the term can be used to describe STATUTORY

“citizens”, as indicated above in paragraph (A). For instance, 8 U.S.C. §1401 describes the citizenship of those born within or residing within federal jurisdiction, and note that these people are identified as both “citizens” and “nationals”.

TITLE 8 > CHAPTER 12 > SUBCHAPTER III > Part I > Sec. 1401.
[Sec. 1401. - Nationals and citizens of United States\[\*\] at birth](#)

*(a) a person born in the United States[*], and subject to the jurisdiction thereof;*

*(b) a person born in the United States[*] to a member of an Indian, Eskimo, Aleutian, or other aboriginal tribe: Provided, That the granting of citizenship under this subsection shall not in any manner impair or otherwise affect the right of such person to tribal or other property;*

4.13.5.5 Rights Lost By Becoming a statutory “U.S. citizen”

A state Citizen has the right to have any gun he/she wishes without being registered. A “U.S. citizen” under 8 U.S.C. §1401 does not. In the District of Columbia, it is a felony to own a handgun unless you are a police officer or a security guard or the hand gun was registered before 1978. The District of Columbia has not been admitted into the Union. Therefore the people of the District of Columbia are not protected by the Second Amendment or any other part of the Bill of Rights. Despite the lack of legal guns in DC, crime is rampant. It is called Murder Capital of the World. This should prove that gun control/victim disarmament laws do not work in America. Across the country, there is an assault on guns. If you are a “U.S.** citizen” and you are using Second Amendment arguments to protect your rights to keep your guns, I believe you are in for a surprise. First by registering gun owners then renaming guns 'Assault Weapons' and 'Handguns', those in power will take away your civil right to bear arms. Of course, they won't tell you that the right to keep and bear arms is a civil right and not a natural right for a U.S. citizens. The Supreme court has ruled that you as an individual have no right to protection by the police. Their only obligation is to protect "society". The real protection for state Citizens to keep their guns is not the Second Amendment but the Ninth Amendment.

A state Citizen has the right to travel on the public easements (public roads) without being registered. A “U.S. citizen” does not. It is a privilege for a foreigner to travel in any of the several states. If you are a U.S. citizen, you are a foreigner in the state. The state legislators can require foreigners and people involved in commerce (chauffeurs, freight haulers) to be licensed, insured, and to have their vehicles registered. When you register your car, you turn over power of attorney to the state. At that point, it becomes a motor vehicle. If it is not registered then it is not a motor vehicle and there are no motor vehicle statutes to break. There are common law rules of the road. If you don't cause an injury to anybody then you cannot be tried.

If your car is registered, the state effectively owns your car. The state supplies a sticker to put on your license plate every time you re-register the motor vehicle. Look closely at the sticker on your plate right now. You may be surprised to see that it says "OFFICIAL USE ONLY".(Note: In some states, they do not use stickers on the plate) You may have seen municipal vehicles that have signs on them saying "OFFICIAL USE ONLY" on them but why does yours? You do not own your car. You may have a Certificate of Title but you probably do not have the certificate of origin. You are leasing the state's vehicle by paying the yearly registration fee. Because you are using their equipment, they can make rules up on how it can be used. If you break a rule, such as driving without a seatbelt, you have broken the contract and an administrative procedure will make you pay the penalty. A state Citizen must be able to explain to the police officers why they are not required to have the usual paperwork that most people have. They should carry copies of affidavits and other paperwork in their car. The state Citizen should also be prepared to go to traffic court and explain it to the judge.

The right of trial by jury in civil cases, guaranteed by the 7th Amendment (Walker v. Sauvinet, 92 U.S. 90 (1875)), and the right to bear arms, guaranteed by the 2nd Amendment (Presser v. Illinois, 116 U.S. 252 (1886)), have been distinctly held not to be privileges and immunities of “citizens of the United States” guaranteed by the 14th Amendment against abridgment by the states, and in effect the same decision was made in respect of the guarantee against prosecution, except by indictment of a grand jury, contained in the 5th Amendment (Hurtado v. California, 110 U.S. 516 (1884)), and in respect of the right to be confronted with witnesses, contained in the 6th Amendment." West v. Louisiana, 194 U.S. 258 (1904).

The privileges and immunities [civil rights] of the 14th Amendment citizens were derived [taken] from...the Constitution, but are not identical to those referred to in Article IV, sect. 2 of the Constitution [which recognizes the existence of state

Citizens who were not citizens of the United States because there was no such animal in 1787]. Plainly spoken, RIGHTS in the constitution of the United States of America, which are recognized to be grants from our creator, are clearly different from the “civil rights” that were granted by Congress to its own brand of franchised statutory “U.S. citizen” pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1401.

Title 42 of the USC contains the Civil Rights laws. It says "Rights under 42 USCS section 1983 are for citizens of the United States and not of state. Wadleigh v. Newhall (1905, CC Cal) 136 F 941."

In summary, what we are talking about here is a Master-Servant relationship. Being a person with a domicile within federal jurisdiction makes us subject to federal laws and makes us into a statutory “citizen of the United States” under 8 U.S.C. §1401. We become servants to our public servants. Those who file the 1040 form indicate a domicile in the District of Columbia, and have surrendered the protection of state law to become subject citizens. See IRS Document 7130, which says that this form may only be filed by “citizens and residents” of the “United States”, which is defined as the District of Columbia in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10).

4.13.6 Effect of Domicile on Citizenship Status

When “citizens” move their domicile outside of the territorial limits of the “state” to which they are a member and cease to participate directly in the political functions of that “state”, however, they become statutory “nationals” but not “citizens”. This is confirmed by the definition of “citizen of the United States” found in Section 1 of the Fourteenth Amendment:

U.S. Constitution: Fourteenth Amendment

Section. 1. All persons born or naturalized in the United States and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the United States and of the State wherein they reside.

As you will learn later, the Supreme Court said in the case of U.S. v. Wong Kim Ark, 169 U.S. 649 (1898) that the term “subject to the jurisdiction” means “subject to the political jurisdiction”, which is very different from “subject to the legislative jurisdiction”. Note from the above that being a “citizen” has two prerequisites: “born within the [territorial] jurisdiction” and “subject to the [political but not legislative] jurisdiction”. The other noteworthy point to be made here is that the term "citizen" as used above is not used in the context of federal statutes or federal law, and therefore does not imply one is a "citizen" under federal law. The Constitution is what grants the authority to the federal government to write federal statutes, but it is not a “federal statute” or “federal law”. The term "citizen", in the context of the Constitution, simply refers to the political community created by that Constitution, which in this case is the federation of united states called the "United States", and not the United States government itself.

When you move your domicile outside its territorial jurisdiction of the political body and do not participate in its political functions as a jurist or a voter, then you are no longer “subject to the [political] jurisdiction”. Likewise, because you are outside territorial limits of the political body, you are also not subject in any degree to its legislative jurisdiction either:

*"Judge Story, in his treatise on the Conflicts of Laws, lays down, as the basis upon which all reasonings on the law of comity must necessarily rest, the following maxims: First 'that every nation possesses an exclusive sovereignty and jurisdiction within its own territory'; secondly, that no state or nation can by its laws directly affect or bind property out of its own territory, or bind persons not resident therein, whether they are natural born subjects or others.' The learned judge then adds: 'From these two maxims or propositions there follows a third, and that is that whatever force and obligation the laws of one country have in another depend solely upon the laws and municipal regulation of the latter; that is to say, upon its own proper jurisdiction and polity, and upon its own express or tacit consent.'" Story on Conflict of Laws §23.

The word “territory” above needs further illumination. States of the Union are NOT considered “territories” or “territory” under federal law. This is confirmed by the Corpus Juris Secundum legal encyclopedia, which says on this subject the following:

Volume 86, Corpus Juris Secundum Legal Encyclopedia Territories

1 §1. Definitions, Nature, and Distinctions

2 The word 'territory,' when used to designate a political organization has a distinctive, fixed, and legal
 3 meaning under the political institutions of the United States, and does not necessarily include all the
 4 territorial possessions of the United States, but may include only the portions thereof which are organized
 5 and exercise governmental functions under act of congress."

6 While the term 'territory' is often loosely used, and has even been construed to include municipal subdivisions
 7 of a territory, and 'territories of the' United States is sometimes used to refer to the entire domain over which
 8 the United States exercises dominion, the word 'territory,' when used to designate a political organization, has
 9 a distinctive, fixed, and legal meaning under the political institutions of the United States, and the term
 10 'territory' or 'territories' does not necessarily include only a portion or the portions thereof which are organized
 11 and exercise government functions under acts of congress. The term 'territories' has been defined to be
 12 political subdivisions of the outlying dominion of the United States, and in this sense the term 'territory' is not a
 13 description of a definite area of land but of a political unit governing and being governed as such. The question
 14 whether a particular subdivision or entity is a territory is not determined by the particular form of government
 15 with which it is, more or less temporarily, invested.

16 'Territories' or 'territory' as including 'state' or 'states.'" While the term 'territories of the' United States
 17 may, under certain circumstances, include the states of the Union, as used in the federal Constitution and in 18 ordinary acts of congress "territory" does not include a foreign state.

19 As used in this title, the term 'territories' generally refers to the political subdivisions created by congress,
 21 [86 Corpus Juris Secundum (C.J.S.), Territories (2003)]

22 Notice that the above legal encyclopedia definition of “territory” refers to states of the Union as “foreign states”! A
 23 “foreign state” is a state that is not subject to the legislative jurisdiction or laws of the state in question, which in this case is 24 the federal government. The Supreme Court also agreed with the conclusions within this section so far, in the cite next.
 25 Notice how they use the terms “citizenship” and “nationality” or “national” interchangeably, because they are equivalent:

26 "The term 'dual nationality' needs exact appreciation. It refers to the fact that two States make equal claim to 27 the allegiance of an individual at the same time. Thus, one State may claim his allegiance because of his birth
 28 within its territory, and the other because at the time of his birth in foreign territory his parents were its 29 nationals. The laws of the United States purport to clothe persons with American citizenship by virtue of both 30 principles.'

31 "And after referring to the Fourteenth Amendment, U.S.C.A.Const., and the Act of February 10, 1855, R.S.
 32 §1993, 8 U.S.C.A. 6, the instructions continued: [307 U.S. 325, 345] 'It thus becomes important to note how 33 far these differing claims of American nationality are fairly operative with respect to persons living abroad [or
 34 in states of the Union, which are ALSO foreign with respect to federal jurisdiction], whether they were born
 35 abroad or were born in the United States of alien parents and taken during minority to reside in the territory of 36 *States to which the parents owed allegiance. It is logical that, while the child remains or resides in territory of
 37 the foreign State [a state of the Union, in this case] claiming him as a national, the United States should 38 respect its claim to allegiance. The important point to observe is that the doctrine of dual allegiance ceases, in*
 39 American contemplation, to be fully applicable after the child has reached adult years. Thereafter two States
 40 may in fact claim him as a national. Those claims are not, however, regarded as of equal merit, because one of 41 the States may then justly assert that his relationship to itself as a national is, by reason of circumstances that
 42 have arisen, inconsistent with, and reasonably superior to, any claim of allegiance asserted by any other State.
 43 Ordinarily the State in which the individual retains his residence after attaining his majority has the superior
 44 claim. The statutory law of the United States affords some guidance but not all that could be desired, because it
 45 fails to announce the circumstances when the child who resides abroad within the territory of a State
 46 reasonably claiming his allegiance forfeits completely the right to perfect his inchoate right to retain American
 48 [Perkins v. Elg, 307 U.S. 325, 59 S.Ct. 884, 83 L.Ed. 1320 (1939)]

49 So when a person is domiciled outside the exclusive legislative jurisdiction or “general sovereignty” of a political body and
 50 does not participate directly in its political functions, then they are “nationals” but not “citizens” of that political body. This 51 is the condition of people born in and domiciled within states of the Union in regards to their federal citizenship:

- 52 1. State citizens maintain a domicile that is outside the territorial and exclusive legislative jurisdiction of the federal 53 government. They are not subject to the police powers of the federal government.
- 54 2. State citizens do not participate directly in the political functions of the federal government.
 55 2.1. They are not allowed to serve as jurists in federal court, because they don't reside in a federal area within their 56 state. They can only serve as jurists in state courts. Federal district courts routinely violate this limitation by not 57 ensuring that the people who serve on federal courts come from federal areas. If they observed the law on this matter, they wouldn't have anyone left to serve on federal petit or grand juries! Therefore, they illegally use state DMV records to locate jurors and obfuscate the jury summons forms by asking if people are "U.S. citizens" without ever defining what it means!

- 2.2. They do not participate directly in federal elections. There are no separate federal elections and separate voting days and voting precincts for federal elections. State citizens only participate in state elections, and elect representatives who go to Washington to "represent" their interests indirectly.

In the United States, "domicile" and "residence" are the two major competitors for judicial attention, and the words are almost invariably used to describe the relationship that the person has to the state rather than the nation. We use "citizenship" to describe the national relationship, and we generally eschew "nationality" (heard more frequently among European nations) as a descriptive term.
[Conflicts in a Nutshell, Second Edition, David D. Siegel, West Publishing, 1994, ISBN 0-314-02952, p. 15]

A human who is a "national" with respect to a political jurisdiction and who does not maintain a legal domicile within the exclusive legislative or "general" jurisdiction of the political body is treated as a "non-resident non-person" within federal law. If the human is also a public officer, they become a "nonresident alien" but only in the context of their official PUBLIC duties. He is a "non-resident" because he is not "resident" within the territorial limits. He is an alien, because he is "alien" to that jurisdiction and not subject to its legislative jurisdiction.

26 U.S.C. §7701\(b\)\(1\)\(B\) Definitions

An individual is a nonresident alien if such individual is neither a citizen of the United States nor a resident of the United States (within the meaning of subparagraph (A)).

At the same time, a "national" and a "nonresident alien" who is NOT an "individual" is not an "alien" under federal law, because a "nonresident alien" is defined as a person who is neither a "citizen nor a resident", and that is exactly what a "national but not citizen" is. Further confirmation of this conclusion is found in the definition of "resident" in 26 U.S.C. §7701\(b\)\(1\)\(A\), which defines a "resident" as an "alien". Since the definition of "nonresident alien" above excludes "residents", then it also excludes "aliens".

A picture is worth a thousand words. We'll now summarize the results of the preceding analysis to make it crystal clear for visually-minded readers:

Table 4-26: Citizenship summary

Citizenship	Defined in	Domicile in the federal zone?	Subject to legislative jurisdiction/police powers?	Subject to "political jurisdiction"?	A "nonresident alien"?
" citizen "	8 U.S.C. §1401	Yes	Yes	Yes	No

The table below describes the affect that changes in domicile have on citizenship status in the case of both "foreign nationals" and "domestic nationals". A "domestic national" is anyone born anywhere within any one of the 50 states on nonfederal land or who was born in any territory or possession of the United States. A "foreign national" is someone who was born anywhere outside of these areas. The jurisdiction mentioned in the right three columns is the "federal zone".

NOTES:

- “United States” is defined as federal territory within 26 U.S.C. §§7701\(a\)\(9\) and (a)(10), 7701\(a\)\(39\), and 7408\(d\), and 4 U.S.C. §110\(d\). It does not include any portion of a Constitutional state of the Union.
- The “District of Columbia” is defined as a federal corporation but not a physical place, a “body politic”, or a de jure “government” within the District of Columbia Act of 1871, 16 Stat. 419, 426, Sec. 34. See: Corporatization and Privatization of the Government, Form #05.024; <http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>.
- “nationals” of the United States of America who are domiciled outside of federal jurisdiction, either in a state of the Union or a foreign country, are “nationals” but not “citizens” under federal law. They also qualify as “nonresident aliens” under 26 U.S.C. §7701\(b\)\(1\)\(B\) if and only if they are engaged in a public office. See sections 4.11.2 earlier for details.
- Temporary domicile in the middle column on the right must meet the requirements of the “Presence test” documented in IRS publications.
- “FEDERAL ZONE”=District of Columbia and territories of the United States in the above table

1 6. The term “individual” as used on the IRS form 1040 means an “alien” engaged in a “trade or business”. All
 2 “taxpayers” are “aliens” engaged in a “trade or business”. This is confirmed by 26 C.F.R. §1.1441-1(c)(3), 26 C.F.R.
 3 §1.1-1(a)(2)(ii), and 5 U.S.C. §552a(a)(2). Statutory “U.S. citizens” as defined in 8 U.S.C. §1401 are not “individuals”
 4 unless temporarily abroad pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §911 and subject to an income tax treaty with a foreign country. In
 5 that capacity, statutory “U.S. citizens” interface to the I.R.C. as “aliens” rather than “U.S. citizens” through the tax
 6 treaty.

7 When a federal officer asks you if you are a “citizen”, consider the context! The only basis for him asking this is federal
 8 law, because he isn’t bound by state law. If you tell him you are a “citizen” or a “U.S. citizen”, then indirectly, you are
 9 admitting that you are subject to federal law, because that’s what it means to be a “citizen” under federal law! Watch out!
 10 Therefore, as people born in and living within a state of the union on land that is not owned by the federal government, we 11 need to be very careful how we describe ourselves on government forms. Below is what we should say in each of the 12 various contexts to avoid misleading those asking the questions on the forms. In this context, let’s assume you were born in 13 California and live there. This guidance also applies to questions that officers of the government might ask you in each of 14 the two contexts as well:

15 Table 4-28: Describing your citizenship and status

#	Question on form	Context
		State officer or form	Federal officer or form
1	Are you a “citizen”?	Yes. Of California.	No. Not under federal law.
2	Are you a “national”?	Yes. Of California.	Yes. I’m a “national of the United States of America ” under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) but not under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22)
3	Are you a “U.S. citizen”?	No. I’m a California “citizen” or simply a “national”	No. I’m a California citizen or simply a “national”. I am not a federal “citizen” because I don’t reside on federal property.
4	Are you subject to the political jurisdiction of the United States?	Yes. I’m a state voter who influences federal elections indirectly by the representatives I elect.	Yes. I’m a state voter who influences federal elections indirectly by the representatives I elect.
5	Are you subject to the legislative jurisdiction of the United States?	No. I am only subject to the legislative jurisdiction of California but not the “State” of California. The “State of” California is a branch of the federal government that only has jurisdiction in federal areas within the state.	No. I am only subject to the laws and police powers of California, and not the federal government, because I don’t live on federal territory subject to “its” jurisdiction.
6	Are you a “citizen of the United States” under the Fourteenth Amendment?	Yes, but under federal law, I’m a “national”. Being a “citizen” under state law doesn’t make me subject to federal legislative jurisdiction and police powers. That status qualifies me to vote in any state election, but doesn’t make me subject to federal law.	Yes, but under federal law, I’m a “national”. Being a “citizen” under state law doesn’t make me subject to federal legislative jurisdiction and police powers. That status qualifies me to vote in any state election, but doesn’t make me subject to federal law.

- 17 1. A “national” is defined in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) as a person who has allegiance to a “state”. The existence of that 18 allegiance provides legal evidence that a person has politically associated themselves with a “state” in order to procure
 19 its protection. In return for said allegiance, the “national” is entitled to the protection of the state. Minor v. Happersett,
 20 88 U.S. 162 (1874)
- 21 2. The only thing you need in order to obtain a USA passport is “allegiance”. 22 U.S.C. §212. If the federal government
 22 is willing to issue you a passport, then they regard you as a “national”, because the only type of citizenship that carries
 23 with it exclusively allegiance is that of a “national”. 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21). See:
- 25 3. In the constitution, statutory “nationals” are called “citizens”.

- 1 4. Under federal statutory law, both “citizens” and “residents” are persons who have a legal domicile on the territory of 2 the state to which he claims allegiance.
- 3 5. In federal statutory law, all “citizens” are also “nationals” but not all nationals are “citizens”. For proof, see:
 4 5.1. 8 U.S.C. §1401 defines a “citizen and national of the United States”.
 5 5.2. 8 U.S.C. §1452 defines a “non-citizen national”.
- 6 6. Since being a “national” is a prerequisite to being a “citizen”, then “citizens” within a country are a subset of those who 7 are “nationals”.
- 8 7. “subject to the jurisdiction” is found in Section 1 of the Fourteenth Amendment of the Constitution. The Constitution 9 is a political document and the phrase “subject to the jurisdiction” means all of the following:
 10 7.1. Being a member of a political group. Minor v. Happersett, 88 U.S. 162 (1874)

11 “There cannot be a nation without a people. The very idea of a political community, such as a nation is, implies
 12 an [88 U.S. 162, 166] association of persons for the promotion of their general welfare. Each one of the
 13 persons associated becomes a member of the nation formed by the association. He owes it allegiance and is
 14 entitled to its protection. Allegiance and protection are, in this connection, reciprocal obligations. The one is
 15 a compensation for the other; allegiance for protection and protection for allegiance.

16 “For convenience it has been found necessary to give a name to this membership. The object is to designate by
 17 a title the person and the relation he bears to the nation. For this purpose the words ‘subject,’ ‘inhabitant,’ and
 18 ‘citizen’ have been used, and the choice between them is sometimes made to depend upon the form of the
 19 government. Citizen is now more commonly employed, however, and as it has been considered better suited to
 20 the description of one living under a republican government, it was adopted by nearly all of the States upon
 21 their separation from Great Britain, and was afterwards adopted in the Articles of Confederation and in the 22 Constitution of the United States. When used in this sense it is understood as conveying the idea of 23 membership of a nation, and nothing more.”

24 “To determine, then, who were citizens of the United States before the adoption of the amendment it is
 25 necessary to ascertain what persons originally associated themselves together to form the nation, and what
 26 were afterwards admitted to membership.

27 [. . .]

28 “Whoever, then, was one of the people of either of these States when the Constitution of the United States
 29 was adopted, became ipso facto a citizen—a member of the nation created by its adoption. He was one of the 30 persons associating together to form the nation, and was, consequently, one of its original citizens. As to this
 31 there has never been a doubt. Disputes have arisen as to whether or not certain persons or certain classes of 32 persons were part of the people at the time, but never as to their citizenship if they were.”
 33 [Minor v. Happersett, 88 U.S. 162 (1874)]

- 34 7.2. Being subject to the political jurisdiction but not legislative jurisdiction of the state which we are a member of.
 35 U.S. v. Wong Kim Ark, 169 U.S. 649 (1898)

 37 persons declared to be citizens are ‘all persons born or naturalized in the United States, and subject to the
 38 jurisdiction thereof.’ The evident meaning of these last words is, not merely subject in some respect or degree
 39 to the jurisdiction of the United States, but completely subject to their [plural, not singular, meaning states of
 40 the Union] political jurisdiction, and owing them [the state of the Union] direct and immediate
 41 allegiance. And the words relate to the time of birth in the one case, as they do [169 U.S. 649, 725] to the time
 42 of naturalization in the other. Persons not thus subject to the jurisdiction of the United States at the time of birth
 43 cannot become so afterwards, except by being naturalized, either individually, as by proceedings under the
 44 naturalization acts, or collectively, as by the force of a treaty by which foreign territory is acquired.”
 45 [U.S. v. Wong Kim Ark, 169 U.S. 649, 18 S.Ct. 456, 42 L.Ed. 890 (1898)]

- 46 7.3. Being able to participate in the political affairs of the state by being able to elect its members as a voter or direct 47 its activities as a jurist.
- 48 8. “subject to its jurisdiction” is found in federal statutes and regulations and it means all of the following:
 49 8.1. Having a legal domicile within the exclusive jurisdiction of a “state”. Within federal law, this “state” means the 50 “United States” government and includes no part of any state of the Union.
 51 8.2. Being subject to the legislative but not political jurisdiction of a “state”.
- 52 9. Political jurisdiction and political rights are the tools we use to directly run and influence the government as voters and 53 jurists.
- 54 10. Legislative jurisdiction, on the other hand, is how the government controls us using the laws it passes.

Now that we understand the distinctions between “citizens” and “nationals” within federal law, we are ready to tackle the citizenship issue head on.

4.13.7 Four Types of American Nationals

There are four types of American nationals recognized under federal law:

1. Statutory “nationals and citizens of the United States**” (statutory “U.S.** citizen”)

- 1.1. A statutory privileged status defined and found in 8 U.S.C. §1401, in the implementing regulations of the Internal Revenue Code at 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1(c), and in most other federal statutes.
- 1.2. Born anywhere in the United States** but domiciled in the federal zone only. Must inhabit the District of Columbia and the territories and possessions of the United States identified in Title 48 of the U.S. Code.
- 1.3. Subject to the “police power” of the federal government and all “acts of Congress”.
- 1.4. Treated as a citizen of the municipal government of the District of Columbia (see 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(39))
- 1.5. Have no common law rights, because there is no federal common law. See Jones v. Mayer, 392 U.S. 409 (1798).
- 1.6. Also called “federal U.S. citizens” throughout this document.
- 1.7. Owe allegiance to the GOVERNMENT of the United States** and NOT the PEOPLE of the States of the Union, who are called United States***.

2. Statutory “nationals but not citizens of the United States**” at birth (where “United States” or “U.S.” means the federal United States)

- 2.1. Defined in 8 U.S.C. §1408, 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22)(B) , 8 U.S.C. §1452.
- 2.2. Born anywhere American Samoa or Swains Island.
- 2.3. May not participate politically in federal elections or as federal jurists.
- 2.4. Owe allegiance to the GOVERNMENT of the United States** and NOT the PEOPLE of the States of the Union, who are called United States***.

3. “USA nationals” (but not “citizens of the United States**”)

- 3.1. Defined in 8 U.S.C. §1452, 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21)
- 3.2. Is not equivalent to a statutory “national but not citizen of the United States by birth” identified in 8 U.S.C. §1408.
- 3.3. Called a “citizen of the United States” by the Supreme Court and in Section 1 of the Fourteenth Amendment.
- 3.4. Born anywhere in any one of the several states of the Union but not in a federal territory, possession, or the District of Columbia.
- 3.5. Not subject to the “police power” of the federal government or most “acts of Congress”.
- 3.6. Owe allegiance to the PEOPLE of the several constitutional states of the Union, who are called “United States***” or “United States of America”.
- 3.7. May serve as a federal jurist or grand jurist involving only parties with his same citizenship and domicile status.
- 3.8. May vote in federal elections.

4. “State nationals”

- 4.1. Defined under federal law pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21), under Law of Nations, under state laws, and under USA Constitution.
- 4.2. Is equivalent to the term “state citizen”.
- 4.3. In general, born in any one of the several states of the Union but not in a federal territory, possession, or the District of Columbia. Not domiciled in the federal zone.
- 4.4. Not subject to the “police power” of the federal government or most “acts of Congress”.
- 4.5. Owes Allegiance to the sovereign people, collectively and individually, within the body politic of the constitutional state residing in.
- 4.6. May serve as a state jurist or grand jurist involving only parties with his same citizenship and domicile status.
- 4.7. May vote in state elections.
- 4.8. At this time, all “state Nationals” are also a “USA National”. But not all “USA Nationals” are a “state National” (for example, a USA national not residing nor domiciled in a state of the Union).
- 4.9. Is a man or woman whose unalienable natural rights are recognized, secured, and protected by his state constitution against state actions and against federal intrusion by the Constitution for the United States of America.

Statutory “U.S.** citizens” under 8 U.S.C. §1401 have civil PRIVILEGES (not rights but privileges) under federal law that are similar but inferior to the natural rights that state Citizens have in state courts. I say almost because civil rights are created by Congress and can be taken away by Congress. “U.S. citizens” are privileged subjects/servants of Congress,

1 under their protection as a "resident" and "ward" of a federal State, a person enfranchised to the federal government (the
 2 incorporated United States defined in Article I, Section 8, Clause 17 of the Constitution). The individual Union states may
 3 not deny to these persons any federal privileges or immunities that Congress has granted them within "acts of Congress" or 4 federal statutes. Federal citizens come under admiralty law (International Law) when litigating in federal courts. As such
 5 they do not have inalienable common rights recognized, secured and protected in federal courts by the Constitutions of the 6 States, or of the Constitution for the United States of America, such as "allodial" (absolute) rights to property, the rights to 7 inheritance, the rights to work and contract, and the right to travel among others.

8 Another important element of citizenship is that artificial entities like corporations are citizens for the purposes of taxation
 9 but cannot be citizens for any other purpose.

10 "A corporation is a citizen, resident, or inhabitant of the state or country by or under the laws of which it was
 11 created, and of that state or country only."
 12 [19 Corpus Juris Secundum (C.J.S.), Corporations, §886 (2003)]

14 "A corporation is not a citizen within the meaning of that provision of the Constitution, which declares that the
 15 citizens of each State shall be entitled to all the privileges and immunities of citizens of the several States."
 16 [Paul v. Virginia, 8 Wall (U.S.) 168, 19 L.Ed. 357 (1868)]

17 We have prepared a Venn diagram showing all of the various types of citizens so that you can properly distinguish them.
 18 The important thing to notice about this diagram is that there are multiple types of "citizens of the United States" and
 19 "nationals of the United States" because there are multiple definitions of "United States" according to the Supreme Court,
 20 as we showed earlier in section 4.6. Above the diagram is a table showing the three definitions of "United States"
 21 appearing in the diagram from section 4.6 of the Great IRS Hoax book:

22 Table 4-29: Terms used in the citizenship diagram

2 4.13.8 Legal Basis for “State National” Status

3 The following subsections describe what a “state national” within the context of the title of this document.

4 4.13.8.1 What is a “State national”?

5 An important and often overlooked condition of citizenship is one where the human being is an American national by virtue
6 of being born anywhere in the country and who is also domiciled in either a Constitutional but not Statutory State of the 7 Union. These types of people are referred to with any of the following synonymous names:

- 8 1. Statutory “Nonresident Aliens” (under the Internal Revenue Code, as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701\(b\)\(1\)\(B\)) if engaged 9 in a public office.
- 10 2. Statutory “non-resident non-persons” if not engaged in a public office.
- 11 3. American Citizens.
- 12 4. American Nationals.
- 13 5. Naturalized or born in a Constitutional State of the Union AND domiciled in a Constitutional state of the Union:
- 14 6. “nationals” under 8 U.S.C. §1101\(a\)\(21\).

15 “Nationals” existed under The Law of Nations and international law since long before the passage of the 14th Amendment to 16 the U.S. Constitution in 1868. There are two main types of “nationals” under federal law, as we revealed earlier in section
17 4.11.3.1 of our Great IRS Hoax, Form #11.302 book:

18 Table 4-30: Types of “nationals” under federal law

#	Legal name	Where born	Defined in	Common name	Description
1	“nationals but not citizens of the United States[] at birth ”	1. American Samoa 2. Swains Island	8 U.S.C. §1408 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22); 8 U.S.C. §1452(b)	“U.S. national”	The U.S. Supreme Court and the Constitution call these people “citizens of the United States[]”. See section 4.11.3.8 of the Great IRS Hoax, Form #11.302 later for details. Used on the 1040NR form to describe people who file that form. Does not describe people who are not

#	Legal name	Where born	Defined in	Common name	Description
2	“U.S.A. national” or “state national” or “Constitutional but not statutory U.S. citizen”	states of the Union	8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21); Fourteenth Amendment, Section 1	“state national” or ”USA national” or “national of the United States OF AMERICA”	born in the federal United States[]. The “national” or “state national” is not necessarily the same as the “U.S. national” above, because it includes people who born in states of the Union. Notice that this term does not mention 8 U.S.C. §1408 citizenship nor confine itself only to citizenship by birth in the federal zone. Therefore, it also includes people born in states of the Union.

A “state national”, “national of the United States*** OF AMERICA”, or “USA national” is one who derives his nationality and allegiance to the confederation of states of the Union called the “United States[***] of America” by virtue of being born in a state of the Union. To avoid false presumption, these people should carefully avoid associating their citizenship status with the term “United States***” or “U.S.***”, which means the “federal zone” within Acts of Congress.

*“Federal zone. The area of land over which the United States** government exercises exclusive or general jurisdiction under Article 1, Section 8, Clause 17 of the Constitution. This area includes the District of Columbia and the territories and possessions of the United States**. For the purposes of this discussion, we do not treat the territorial waters of the United States** as “federal land”, but they too are under the exclusive jurisdiction of the U.S. government as well.”*

Therefore, instead of calling themselves “U.S.** nationals”, they call themselves either “state nationals” or “USA nationals”. By “USA” instead of “U.S.”, we mean the states of the Union who are party to the Constitution and exclude any part of the federal zone. In terms of protection of our rights, being a “state national” or a “U.S.** national” are roughly equivalent. The “non-citizen national of the U.S.***” status, however, has several advantages that the “state national” status does not enjoy, as we explained earlier in section 4.11.4 of the Great IRS Hoax, Form #11.302 book:

1. May NOT collect any Social Security benefits, because the Social Security Program Operations Manual System (POMS), Section GN 00303.001 states that only “U.S.** citizens” and “U.S.** nationals” can collect benefits. State citizens are NOT STATUTORY “U.S.** nationals”.
2. May hold a U.S. security clearance, unlike “non-citizen nationals of the United States***”. See SECNAVINST 5510.30A, Appendix I, Department of the Navy.
3. May work for the federal government as a civil servant. See 5 C.F.R. §338.101.

4.13.8.2 CONSTITUTIONAL or State Citizens

The term “State Citizen” and “State National” are equivalent. For instance, if you were born in California, you would be called a “California National”. The basis for this name is found in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21), which says in pertinent part:

*TITLE 8 > CHAPTER 12 > SUBCHAPTER I > Sec. 1101.
Sec. 1101. - Definitions*

A State National owes permanent allegiance to his state. If he also wants to be a U.S.*** national, then he must also have allegiance to the confederation of states called the “United States***” under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21).

“A citizen of the United States is a citizen of the federal government and of the state in which he resided, and one possessing such double citizenship owes allegiance and is entitled to protection from each sovereign to whose jurisdiction he is subject.

“No fortifying authority is necessary to sustain the proposition that in the United States a double citizenship exists. A citizen of the United States is a citizen of the Federal Government and at the same time a citizen of the State in which he resides. Determination of what is qualified residence within a State is not here necessary. Suffice it to say that one possessing such double citizenship owes allegiance and is entitled to the protection from each sovereign to whose [political but not legislative] jurisdiction he is subject.”
[Kitchens v. Steele, 112 F.Supp. 383 (1953)]

We also use the terms “national” or “state national” in this book. These people are those who obtained their federal citizenship by virtue of being born in a state of the Union. “state national” is a term we invented, because there is no standard term to describe these people within the legal field. Since federal statutes cannot and do not recognize events which happen within sovereign states, they do not mention this status but it certainly exists, and it exists under The Law of Nations, Book I, Section 212, Vattel, which is what the founders used to write the U.S. Constitution and which is recognized in Article 1, Section 8, Clause 10 of that document. The reason federal statutes do not and cannot mention the citizenship status of persons born in states of the Union is because these states are “sovereign nations” and “foreign countries” with respect to the federal government under the Law of Nations. Under the Law of Nations, the federal government does not have the authority delegated by the Constitution to prescribe or even define the citizenship status of people born in states of the Union. Here are some examples of cases from the Supreme Court which confirm this conclusion:

[Doc. Lonas v. State, 59 Tenn. 287 (1871)]

“The question, now agitated, depends upon another question; whether the State of Pennsylvania, since the 26th of March, 1790, (when the act of Congress was passed) has a right to naturalize an alien? And this must receive its answer from the solution of a third question; whether, according to the constitution of the United States, the authority to naturalize is exclusive, or concurrent? We are of opinion, then, that the States, individually, still enjoy a concurrent authority upon this subject; but that their individual authority cannot be exercised, so as to contravene the rule established by the authority of the Union.”

“The true reason for investing Congress with the power of naturalization has been assigned at the Bar;--It was to guard against too narrow, instead of too liberal, a mode of conferring the rights of citizenship. Thus, the individual States cannot exclude those citizens, who have been adopted by the United States; but they can adopt citizens upon easier terms, than those which Congress may deem it expedient to impose.

“But the act of Congress itself, furnishes a strong proof that the power of naturalization is concurrent. In the concluding proviso, it is declared, ‘that no person heretofore proscribed by any State, shall be admitted a citizen as aforesaid, except by an act of the Legislature of the State, in which such person was proscribed.’ Here, we find, that Congress has not only circumscribed the exercise of its own authority, but has recognized the authority of a State Legislature, in one case, to admit a citizen of the United States’ which could not be done in any case, if the power of naturalization, either by its own nature, or by the manner of its being vested in the Federal Government, was an exclusive power.”

State Citizens cannot be subjected in state courts to any jurisdiction of law outside the Common Law without their knowing and willing consent after full disclosure of the terms and conditions, and such consent must be under agreement/contract sealed by signature. This is because the Constitution is a compact/contract created and existing in the jurisdiction of the Common Law, therefore, any rights secured thereunder or disabilities limiting the powers of government also exist in the Common Law, and in no other jurisdiction provided for in that compact!

Both State Citizens and federal citizens are Americans. Statutory “U.S. citizens” described within “acts of Congress” are “resident” in the federal zone and are privileged aliens in relation to the state of the Union wherein they reside. State statutory Citizens are domiciled in their state and not aliens in their state. They also do not “reside” in their state: they are instead Citizens domiciled in the state. The only people who are “residents” in regards to the Internal Revenue Code are usually aliens domiciled on federal territory in the state or nonresidents occupying federal enclaves within the state. The distinction may seem insignificant to you but it is not to the court. A state Citizen has the right to travel in each of the 50 Union states. He/she can file papers at any county courthouse in any state and become a Citizen of that state.

Nearly all federal statute laws do not apply to State Citizens/Nationals. If the authority for the statute can be found in the organic Constitution, then the statute is of a National character, as it applies to both state Citizens and aliens. Acts of Congress do not protect the Constitutional rights of State Citizens. Only state law serves this purpose.

“With these decisions, and many others that might be cited, before us, it is vain to contend that the Federal Constitution secures to a citizen of the United States the right to work at a given occupation or particular calling free from injury, oppression, or interference by individual citizens.

[Hodges v. United States, 203 U.S. 1, 27 S.Ct. 6 (1906)]

If the rights of a State Citizen are being violated directly by a federal officer or indirectly by third parties who the federal officer is in contact with, the appropriate place to litigate to protect those rights is ONLY in a state court. Federal courts are Article IV (of the Constitution) territorial and administrative courts which only have jurisdiction over the federal zone for nearly all “acts of Congress”, and the federal zone as we said earlier in section 4.6.3, is not covered by the Bill of Rights. We call the “federal zone” the “plunder zone” throughout this book and state citizens have absolutely no business whatsoever going into these courts because doing so needlessly confers unfounded jurisdiction upon the court over their lives and their fortunes. We will show later in section 6.9 that federal judges are either incompetent or malicious or both when it comes to protecting the rights of “state nationals”, so you ought to distance yourself to be as far away as possible from these tyrants, and this is especially true in regards to matters relating to federal taxation.

The terms “State” and “state” are not equivalent in federal statutes and nearly all “acts of Congress”. When we capitalize the word “State”, we are referring to the “federal zone” areas within the contiguous borders of a state that are subject to the exclusive federal jurisdiction of the U.S. Government under Article 1, Section 8, Clause 17 of the U.S. Constitution. When we don’t capitalize the word “state”, we are referring to the contiguous areas of a state that are under the exclusive jurisdiction of a state government and not the federal government.

Whenever we describe ourselves as “citizens of a State” or a “citizen of the United States” in the context of federal statutes or “acts of Congress”, then we declare ourselves to live in a federal territory as statutory “U.S. citizens” or “citizens of the [federal] United States”. That puts us in the same status as the slaves who were freed after the civil war in 1868. Do you want to be a slave? We should therefore NEVER say “I am a citizen of the State of _____” or “I am a citizen of this State.” Why? Well, because, for instance, the California Revenue and Taxation Code §6017 defines the term “State” as follows:

California Revenue and Taxation Code

6017. “In this State” or “in the State” means within the exterior [outside] limits of the [Sovereign union] state of California and includes [only] all territory within these limits owned by or ceded to the United States

Now do you understand why California has the same definition of “gross income” as the federal government and why they can impose a constitutional income tax? Because by playing with the definition of words, they have deceived you into convincing them (quite incorrectly and unnecessarily) that you are a statutory “citizen of the [federal] United States**” (the federal zone) under the exclusive jurisdiction of Congress and consequently you are not subject to the same Constitutional protections that other Sovereign Americans enjoy! You must rebut this presumption vigorously at all times by watching the language and the words you use. They have effectively deceived and enticed you into the “federal zone” so they could abuse and enslave you with the income tax. This amounts to “enticement into slavery”, which clearly violates 18 U.S.C. §1581 and 14 U.S.C. §1994 and is a felony!

Instead, we should always use the name of the state in our description as follows: “I am a national of California” or “I am a Citizen of the California Republic”. The word “Citizen” should always be capitalized to emphasize that we are a “Sovereign state citizen/national”, and the word “State” should not appear in the name to avoid ambiguity.

You will find out later in section 5.2.13 of this book that the states of the Union are considered to be “foreign countries” and “foreign nations” and “foreign states” with respect to the federal government.

“New states, upon their admission into the Union, become invested with equal rights and are subject only to such restrictions as are imposed upon the states already admitted. There can be no state of the Union whose sovereignty or freedom of action is in any respect different from that of any other state. There can be no restriction upon any state other than one prescribed upon all the states by the Federal Constitution. Congress, in admitting a state, cannot restrict such state by bargain. The state, by so contracting with Congress, is in no way bound by such a contract, however irrevocable it is stated to be. It is said that subject to the restraint and limitations of the Federal Constitution, the states have all the sovereign powers of independent nations over all persons and things within their respective territorial limits.”

Because the 50 Union states are technically “nations” and “foreign states”, then people who are “state nationals” and who are not statutory “nationals and citizens at birth” under 8 U.S.C. §1401:

1. Are “nationals of California”, or simply “nationals”, for instance, and not “U.S. citizens” on their application for a U.S. passport. Several of our readers have obtained U.S. passports by claiming to be, for instance, “CALIFORNIA NATIONAL” in block 16 of their DOS DS-011 Passport Application.
2. Can correctly claim that they are:
  - 2.1. A “non-resident non-persons when they file their federal income tax return if they do not live in a federal enclave within their state and do not lawfully occupy a public office. Money they earn within their state as a nonresident alien will also not be under the jurisdiction of the Internal Revenue Code and need not be entered on their tax return.
  - 2.2. A “nonresident alien” in the context of their official public duties only.
  - 2.3. Nonresidents of the “United States**” as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701\(a\)\(9\).
3. Are not subject to most federal laws or any of the criminal laws in Title 18 of the U.S. Code unless they are physically on federal property, which most people seldom are.
4. If they sue or convict a federal employee for wrongdoing or the federal government tries to convict them under federal law, they can file their claim under “diversity of citizenship”, 28 U.S.C. §1332\(a\)\(2\) in the federal court as “citizens of a foreign state”.
5. May not declare themselves on any federal government form to be “U.S. citizens” because they were not born in the federal “United States**” (federal zone) as required by 8 U.S.C. §1401.
6. May declare themselves to be “nationals” or “nationals of the United States**” under federal law. However, they would not be:
  - 6.1. “nationals of the United States**” under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22).
  - 6.2. “non-citizen nationals of the United States** at birth” under 8 U.S.C. §1452. All of these people are born in federal possessions such as American Samoa and Swains Island.
7. May vote in any election that requires them to be “U.S. citizens” in order to vote, which is the case in most states. They must clarify the meaning of “U.S. citizen” on their voter application form to prevent false assumptions about their citizenship when they register.
8. May not collect any Social Security benefits, because the Social Security Program Operations Manual (POM) section GN 00303.001 states that only “U.S. citizens” and “U.S. nationals” can collect benefits.
9. May not hold a U.S. security clearance unless they become either a “U.S. citizen” or “U.S. national” under federal statutes.

Now a little history. Before the second world war, some states of the Union issued their own passports to their citizens for foreign travel. That’s right, you didn’t need a U.S. passport because each state was the equivalent of an independent nation. The states still have this status, but they act like they don’t and delegate the passport function to the federal government. Our public servants in the federal government are abusing this power to create a presumption that the applicant is a “U.S. citizen” so they can illegally obtain jurisdiction over the applicant and subject them to the Internal Revenue Code and other federal statutes. Most states even require persons who wish to vote in federal elections to be “U.S. citizens”. Such unethical tactics on the part of the states are what we call “cooperative federalism”, where the states help the federal government to “poach” sheep in the states and put them primarily under federal jurisdiction as “U.S. citizens” in a conspiracy against rights that is a federal crime under 18 U.S.C. §241.

If you don’t want to collect Socialist Security Benefits nor serve in the military nor hold a U.S. government security clearance, then citizenship as a statutory “national” pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) and a “non-resident non-person” is the best type of citizenship that provides the best protection for your liberties and complete immunity from both state and federal income taxes in most cases. The statutory “national” and “non-resident non-person” status avoids all the disadvantages of statutory “U.S.** citizen” status, including:

1. Not a “U.S. citizen” under federal statutes or “acts of Congress”. The Internal Revenue Code is an “act of Congress”.
2. Not “subject to the laws” or “under the laws” of the United States or the jurisdiction of the corrupt and covetous federal courts except when on federal property.
3. Can hold a U.S. government security clearance.
4. Can collect Socialist Security benefits.
5. Can vote in states that don’t require you to be a statutory “U.S.** citizen” under “acts of Congress”.

1. Constitutional but not Statutory citizens.
2. Natural Born Citizens

- 1 3. Natural Born Sovereigns
- 2 4. nationals
- 3 5. state nationals
- 4 6. American Citizens
- 5 7. American Nationals
- 6 8. Nonresident Aliens (under the Internal Revenue Code, as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(B)), but only if serving in a
- 7 public office in the national government.
- 8 9. "non-resident non-persons" if not serving in a public office.

9 We will now analyze the legal foundations for state national status:

- 10 1. The term "United States" has 3 separate and distinct meanings in American Law (see Hooven & Allison Co. v. Evatt, 11 324 U.S. 652 (1945)):
- 12 1.1. The name of the sovereign nation, occupying the position of other sovereigns in the family of nations
- 13 1.2. The federal government and the limited territory over which it exercises exclusive sovereign authority
- 14 1.2.1. To be a federal citizen is to be a "citizen of the United States" in this second sense of the term
- 15 1.3. The collective name for the States united by and under the Constitution for the United States of America
- 16 1.3.1. To be a Natural Born state Citizen is to be a "Citizen of the United States" in this third sense of the term (i.e.
17 a "Citizen of one of the States United")
- 18 2. One can be a State National without also being a STATUTORY "U.S.** citizen".
- 19 2.1. See Crosse case from Maryland Supreme Court:

20 "Both before and after the Fourteenth Amendment to the federal Constitution, it has not been necessary for a
21 person to be a citizen of the United States in order to be a citizen of his state." [Crosse v. Board of Elections,
22 221 A.2d. 431 at 433 (1966)]

- 23 2.2. See State v. Fowler case from Louisiana Supreme Court:

24 "But a person may be a citizen of a particular state and not a citizen of the United States. To hold otherwise
25 would be to deny to the state the highest exercise of its sovereignty -- the right to declare who are its citizens."
26 [State v. Fowler, 41 La. Ann. 380 6 S. 602 (1889)]

- 27 2.3. See United States v. Cruikshank, 92 U.S. 542 (1875) for U.S. Supreme Court view:

28 "We have in our political system a Government of the United States and a government of each of the several
29 States. Each of these governments is distinct from the others, and each has citizens of its own who owe it
30 allegiance, and whose rights, within its jurisdiction, it must protect. The same person may be at the same time a
31 citizen of the United States and a citizen of a State, but his rights of citizenship under one of these governments
32 will be different from those he has under the other. Slaughter- House Cases, 16 Wall. 74. ...."
33 [United States v. Cruikshank, 92 U.S. 542 (1875)]

- 34 3. "U.S. citizens" under federal statutes and "acts of Congress" are the object of Subtitle A federal income taxes under 35 section 1 of the IRC; "state nationals" or "nationals" or "state nationals are not. The Internal Revenue Code is an "act 36 of Congress".
- 37 3.1. State Nationals are protected by constitutional limits against direct taxation by the federal government:
- 38 3.1.1. Article 1, Section 2, Clause 3
- 39 3.1.2. Article 1, Section 9, Clause 4
- 40 3.2. "U.S. citizens" under "acts of Congress" are not protected by these same constitutional limits
- 41 3.2.1. Constitution for the "United States" as such does not extend beyond the boundaries of the States which are 42 united by and under it.
- 43 3.2.1.1. The Insular Cases established this dubious precedent at the turn of the century
- 44 3.2.2. A "citizen of the United States" under "acts of Congress" is, effectively, a citizen of the District of 45 Columbia, which never joined the Union
- 46 3.2.3. Congress can enact local, "municipal" law for D.C. which is not constrained by the federal Constitution.
47 See Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 (1901) for further information.

48 4.13.8.3 Why Congress can't define the CIVIL STATUTORY status of those born within constitutional states of 49 the Union

1 There is a good reason why there is no federal statute anywhere that directly prescribes the citizenship status of persons
2 based on birth within states of the Union. The reasons are because lawyers in Congress:

- 3 1. Know that this is the criteria that most Americans born inside states of the Union will meet.
- 4 2. Know that one's CIVIL status, STATUTORY status derives from their DOMICILE and not their NATIONALITY.
5 NATIONALITY is a POLITICAL status. CIVIL OR STATUTORY status is a LEGAL status and NOT a political
6 status. Hence, those not domiciled on federal territory cannot have a CIVIL or STATUTORY status under federal law.

8 question whether the domicile of the father was in England or in Scotland, he being in either alternative a
9 British subject. Lord Chancellor Hatherley said: 'The question of naturalization and of allegiance is distinct
10 from that of domicile.' Page 452. Lord Westbury, in the passage relied on by the counsel for the United States,
11 began by saying: 'The law of England, and of almost all civilized countries, ascribes to each individual at his
12 birth two distinct legal states or conditions,—one by virtue of which he becomes the subject [NATIONAL] of
13 some particular country, binding him by the tie of natural allegiance, and which may be called his political
14 status; another by virtue of which he has ascribed to him the character of a citizen of some particular
15 country, and as such is possessed of certain municipal rights, and subject to certain obligations, which latter
16 character is the civil status or condition of the individual, and may be quite different from his political
17 status.' And then, while maintaining that the civil status is universally governed by the single principle of
18 domicile (domicilium), the criterion established by international law for the purpose of determining civil
19 status, and the basis on which 'the personal rights of the party—that is to say, the law which determines his
20 majority or minority, his marriage, succession, testacy, or intestacy— must depend,' he yet distinctly
21 recognized that a man's political status, his country (patria), and his 'nationality,—that is, natural
22 allegiance,—may depend on different laws in different countries.' Pages 457, 460. He evidently used the word
23 'citizen,' not as equivalent to 'subject,' but rather to 'inhabitant'; and had no thought of impeaching the
24 established rule that all persons born under British dominion are natural-born subjects.
25 [United States v. Wong Kim Ark, 169 U.S. 649, 18 S.Ct. 456, 42 L.Ed. 890 (1898) ;
26 SOURCE: http://scholar.google.com/scholar\_case?case=3381955771263111765]

- 27 3. Know that these people are “sovereign”. Even the U.S. Supreme Court said so:

28 *“The words 'people of the United States[***]' and 'citizens,' are synonymous terms, and mean the same thing.*
29 They both describe the political body who, according to our republican institutions, form the sovereignty, and
30 who hold the power and conduct [run] the government through their representatives [servants]. They are what 31 we familiarly call the 'sovereign people,' and every citizen is one of this people, and a constituent member of 32 this sovereignty. ...”
33 [Boyd v. State of Nebraska, 143 U.S. 135 (1892)]

- 34 4. Know that a “sovereign” is not and cannot be the subject of any law, and therefore cannot be mentioned in the law.

35 “...at the Revolution, the sovereignty devolved on the people; and they are truly the sovereigns of the country,
36 but they are sovereigns without subjects...with none to govern but themselves; the citizens of America are equal 37 as fellow citizens, and as joint tenants in the sovereignty.”
38 [Chisholm v. Georgia, 2 Dall. (U.S.) 419, 454, 1 L.Ed. 440, 455 (1793), pp. 471-472]

39 “Sovereignty itself is, of course, not subject to law, for it is the author and source of law; but in our system,
40 while sovereign powers are delegated to the agencies of government, sovereignty itself remains with the 41 people, by whom and for whom all government exists and acts.”
42 [Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U.S. 356, 6 S.Ct. 1064 (1886)]

43 “In common usage, the term 'person' does not include the sovereign, and statutes employing the word are 44 ordinarily construed to exclude it.”
45 [Wilson v. Omaha Indian Tribe, 442 U.S. 653, 667 (1979)]

46 “Since in common usage the term 'person' does not include the sovereign, statutes employing that term are 47 ordinarily construed to exclude it.”
48 [U.S. v. Cooper, 312 U.S. 600, 604, 61 S.Ct. 742 (1941)]

49 “In common usage, the term 'person' does not include the sovereign and statutes employing it will ordinarily
50 not be construed to do so.”
51 [U.S. v. United Mine Workers of America, 330 U.S. 258, 67 S.Ct. 677 (1947)]

- 52 5. Know that they cannot write a federal statute or act of Congress that prescribes any criteria for becoming a “national”
53 based on birth and perpetual residence outside of federal legislative jurisdiction and within a state of the Union. That is 54 why the circuit court held the following with respect to “U.S. nationals”:

1 “Marquez-Almanzar seeks to avoid removal by arguing that he 3 can demonstrate that he owes “permanent
 2 allegiance” to the United States and thus qualify as a U.S. national under section 101(a)(22)(B) of the
 3 Immigration and Nationality Act (“INA”), 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22)(B). That provision defines “national of the
 4 United States” as “a person who, though not a citizen of the United States, owes permanent allegiance to the
 5 United States.” We hold that § 1101(a)(22)(B) itself does not provide a means by which an individual can
 6 become a U.S. national, and deny Marquez-Almanzar’s petition accordingly.
 7 [Jose Napoleon Marquez-Almanzar v. Immigration and Naturalization Service, Docket # 03-4395, 03-40027,
 8 03-40497, August 8, 2005, <http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/CitesByTopic/USNational-034395p.pdf>]

9 6. Want to deceive most Americans to falsely believe or presume that they are “U.S. citizens” who are “subject to”
 10 federal statutes and jurisdiction, so they interfere in the determination of their true status as “nationals” and “state
 11 nationals”.

12 4.13.8.4 Expatriation: 8 U.S.C. §1481

13 How can you be sure you are a “national” or “state national” if the authority for being so can’t lawfully be put in any
 14 federal statute? There are lots of ways, but the easiest way is to consider that you as a human being who was born in a state
 15 of the Union and outside the federal “United States***” can legally “expatriate” your nationality. All you need in order to 16 do so is your original birth certificate and to follow the procedures prescribed in federal law which we explain in section
 17 4.11.10 of our Great IRS Hoax, Form #11.302 book and 2.5.3.13 of our Sovereignty Forms and Instructions Manual, Form
 18 #10.005. What exactly are you “expatriating”? The definition of expatriation clarifies this:

 20 Perkins v. Elg, [307 U.S. 325, 59 S.Ct. 884, 83 L.Ed. 1320 (1939)]

21 “expatriation. The voluntary act of abandoning or renouncing one’s country, [nation] and becoming the citizen
 22 or subject of another.
 23 [Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 576]

24 Here is the statutory explanation of “expatriation”:

25 TITLE 8 > CHAPTER 12 > SUBCHAPTER III > Part III > § 1481
 26 § 1481. Loss of nationality by native-born or naturalized citizen; voluntary action; burden of proof;
 27 presumptions

28 (a) A person who is a national of the United States[*] whether by birth or naturalization, shall lose his 29 nationality by voluntarily performing any of the following acts with the intention of relinquishing United States
 30 nationality—

31 You can’t abandon your “nationality” unless you had it in the first place, so you must be a “national” or a “state national”!
 32 Here is the clincher:

33 8 U.S.C. §1101: Definitions

34 (a)(21) The term “national” means a person owing permanent allegiance to a state.

35 The term “state” above can mean a state of the Union or it can mean a confederation of states called the “United States***”.
 36 The reason “state” is in lower case is because it refers in most cases to a legislatively foreign state, and all states of the 37 Union are foreign with respect to the federal government for the purposes of legislative (but not CONSTITUTIONAL)
 38 jurisdiction for nearly all subject matters. All upper case “States” in federal law refer to territories or possessions owned by 39 the federal government under 4 U.S.C. §110\(d\):

40 “Foreign States: Nations outside of the United States***...Term may also refer to another state; i.e. a sister
 41 state. The term ‘foreign nations’, ...should be construed to mean all nations and states other than that in which 42 the action is brought; and hence, one state of the Union is foreign to another, in that sense.”
 43 [Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 648]

44 Sneaky, huh? You’ll never hear especially a federal lawyer agree with you on this because it destroys their jurisdiction to
 45 impose an income tax on you, but it’s true!

NOTE: We are NOT suggesting that you SHOULD expatriate, but using the process to illustrate that it is completely consistent with our research. In order to move oneself outside of federal legislative jurisdiction, a human being born in a state of the Union and outside the federal United States** (a “national” of the USA) would want to ONLY move his domicile outside of the federal zone (assuming that they were domiciled in the federal zone to begin with) AND NOT expatriate his nationality. Likewise, a “National and citizen of the United states** at birth” pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1401 would also want to move their domicile outside of the federal zone.

The rulings of the U.S. Supreme Court also reveal that “citizen of the United States***” and “nationality” are equivalent, but only in the context of the Constitution and not any act of Congress. Look at the ruling below and notice how they use “nationality” and “citizen of the United States***” interchangeably:

“Whether it was also the rule at common law that the children of British subjects born abroad were themselves British subjects—nationality being attributed to parentage instead of locality—has been variously determined. If this were so, of course the statute of Edw. III. was declaratory, as was the subsequent legislation. But if not, then such children were aliens, and the statute of 7 Anne and subsequent statutes must be regarded as in some sort acts of naturalization. On the other hand, it seems to me that the rule, ‘Partus sequitur patrem,’ has always applied to children of our citizens born abroad, and that the acts of congress on this subject are clearly declaratory, passed out of abundant caution, to obviate misunderstandings which might arise from the prevalence of the contrary rule elsewhere.

*“Section 1993 of the Revised Statutes provides that children so born ‘are declared to be citizens of the United States***; but the rights of citizenship shall not descend to children whose fathers never resided in the United States***.’ Thus a limitation is prescribed on the passage of citizenship by descent beyond the second generation if then surrendered by permanent nonresidence, and this limitation was contained in all the acts from 1790 down. Section 2172 provides that such children shall ‘be considered as citizens thereof.’ “*

If after examining the charts above, you find that your present citizenship status does not meet your needs, you are perfectly entitled to change it and the government can’t stop you. We explain later in section 4.11.10 of our Great IRS Hoax, Form #11.302 how to abandon any type of citizenship you may find undesirable in order to have the combination of rights and “privileges” that suit your fancy. If a “national” of the USA*** wanted to qualify for Social Security Benefits, they would have to naturalize to the “United States***” to become a statutory “U.S.** national” or move their domicile to the federal zone (BAD IDEA).

4.13.8.5 Statutory geographical definitions

In the following subsections we have an outline of the legal constraints applying to persons who are “state nationals” and who do not claim the status of STATUTORY “national and citizen of the United States** at birth” under 8 U.S.C. §1401. The analysis that follows establishes that for “state nationals”, such persons may in some cases not be allowed to vote in elections without special efforts on their part to maintain their status. They are also not allowed to serve on jury duty without special efforts on their part to maintain their status. These special efforts involve clarifying our citizenship on any government forms we sign to describe ourselves as ONE of the following:

1. “nationals” or “state nationals” but not statutory “citizens of the United States***” as defined in and 8 U.S.C. §1101\(a\)\(21\).
2. Nationals of the “United States of America” (just like our passport says) but not statutory citizens of the federal “United States***” pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1101\(a\)\(21\) if we were born within and domiciled within a constitutional state of the Union.

We said in section 4.12.3 of the Great IRS Hoax, Form #11.302 that all people born in states of the Union are technically “state nationals” or “U.S.*** nationals”. That is: “nationals of the United States*** of America”.

The legal encyclopedia American Jurisprudence helps us define what is meant by “United States” in the context of citizenship under federal (not state) law:

*3C American Jurisprudence 2d, Aliens and Citizens, §2689 (1999), Who is born in United States[**] and subject to United States[**] jurisdiction*

*“A person is born subject to the jurisdiction of the United States[**], for purposes of acquiring citizenship at birth, if his or her birth occurs in territory over which the United States[**] is sovereign, even though another country provides all governmental services within the territory, and the territory is subsequently ceded to the other country.”*

[American Jurisprudence 2d, Aliens and Citizens, Section 2689 (1999)]

The key word in the above definition is “territory” in relationship to the sovereignty word. The only places which are “territories” of the United States<sup>**</sup> government are listed in Title 48 of the United States<sup>\*\*</sup> Code. The states of the union are NOT territories!

*A portion of the United States<sup>**</sup> not within the limits of any state, which has not yet been admitted as a state of the Union, but is organized with a separate legislature, and with executive and judicial powers appointed by the President.”*

[Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1473]

And the rulings of the Supreme Court confirm this:

*“A State does not owe its origin to the Government of the United States<sup>**</sup>, in the highest or in any of its branches. It was in existence before it. It derives its authority from the same pure and sacred source as itself: The voluntary and deliberate choice of the people...A State is altogether exempt from the jurisdiction of the Courts of the United States<sup>**</sup>, or from any other exterior authority, unless in the special instances when the general Government has power derived from the Constitution itself.”*

Chisholm v. Georgia, [2 Dall. \(U.S.\) 419 (Dall.) (1794)]

*“There is no such thing as a power of inherent sovereignty in the government of the United States<sup>**</sup>.... In this country sovereignty resides in the people [living in the states of the Union, since the states created the United States<sup>**</sup> government and they came before it], and Congress can exercise no power which they have not, by their Constitution entrusted to it: All else is withheld.”*

Julliard v. Greenman: [110 U.S. 421 (1884)]

So what is really meant by “United States” for the three types of citizens found in federal statutes such as 8 U.S.C. §1401 and 8 U.S.C. §1408 and 8 U.S.C. §1452 is the “sovereignty of the United States<sup>**</sup>”, which exists in its fullest, most exclusive, and most “general” form inside its “territories”, and in federal enclaves within the states, or more generally in what we call the “federal zone” in this book. The ONLY place where the exclusive sovereignty of the United States<sup>**</sup> exists in the context of its “territories” is under Article 1, Section 8, Clause 17 of the Constitution on federal land. In the legal field, by the way, this type of exclusive jurisdiction is described as “plenary power”. Very few of us are born on federal land under such circumstances, and therefore very few of us technically qualify as “citizens of the United States<sup>**</sup>”. By the way, the federal government does have a very limited sovereignty or “authority” inside the states of the union, but it does not exceed that of the states, nor is it absolute or unrestrained or exclusive like it is inside the “territories” of the United States<sup>**</sup> listed in Title 48 of the United States<sup>\*\*</sup> Code.

Let’s now see if we can confirm the above conclusions with the weasel words that the lawyers in Congress wrote into the statutes with the willful intent to deceive common people like you. The key phrase in 8 U.S.C. §1101\(a\)\(38\) above is “*the continental United States<sup>**</sup>*”. The definition of this term is hidden in the regulations as follows:

[Revised as of January 1, 2002]

[CITE: 8CFR215]

TITLE 8--ALIENS AND NATIONALITY CHAPTER 1--IMMIGRATION AND NATURALIZATION SERVICE,

DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE

PART 215--CONTROLS OF ALIENS DEPARTING FROM THE UNITED STATES<sup>**</sup>

Section 215.1: Definitions

(f) The term continental United States<sup>**</sup> means the District of Columbia and the several States, except Alaska and Hawaii.

The term “States”, which is suspiciously capitalized and is then also defined elsewhere in Title 8 as follows:

The term “State” includes the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, Guam, and the Virgin Islands of the United States<sup>**</sup>.

1 Do you see the sovereign Union states in the above definition? They aren't there. Note that there are several entities listed
 2 in the above definition of "State", which collectively are called "several States". But when Congress really wants to clearly
 3 state the 50 Union states that are "foreign states" relative to them, they have no trouble at all, because here is another
 4 definition of "State" found under an older version of Title 40 of the U.S. Code prior to 2005 which refers to easements on
 5 Union state property by the federal government:

6 TITLE 40 > CHAPTER 4 > Sec. 319c
 7 Sec. 319c. - Definitions for easement provisions

8 As used in sections 319 to 319c of this title -

9 (a) The term "State" means the States of the Union, the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto
 10 *Rico, and the possessions of the United States[**].*

11 The above section, after we found it in 2002 and documented it here, was REWRITTEN in 2005 and REMOVED from 12 Title 40 of the U.S. Code in order to cover up the distinctions we are trying to make here. Does that surprise you? In fact,
 13 this kind of "word smithing" by covetous lawyers is at the heart of how the separation of powers between the state and 14 federal governments is being systematically destroyed, as documented below:

Government Conspiracy to Destroy the Separation of Powers, Form #05.023
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

15 Did you notice in the now repealed 40 U.S.C. §319c that they used the term "means" instead of "includes" and that they
 16 said "States of the Union" instead of "several States"? You can tell they are playing word games and trying to hide their
 17 limited jurisdiction whenever they throw in the word "includes" and do not use the word "Union" in their definition of 18 "State". As a matter of fact, section 5.6.15 of the Great IRS Hoax, Form #11.302 reveals that there is a big scandal
 19 surrounding the use of the word "includes". That word is abused as a way to illegally expand the jurisdiction of the federal 20 government beyond its clear Constitutional limits. The memorandum of law below thoroughly rebuts any lies or deception
 21 the government is likely to throw at you regarding the word "includes" and you might want to read it:

Meaning of the Words "includes" and "including", Form #05.014
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

22 Moving on, if we then substitute the definition of the term "State" from 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(36) into the definition of 23 "continental United States[**]" in 8 C.F.R. §215.1, we get:

24 8 C.F.R. §215.1

25 *The term continental United States[**] means the District of Columbia and the District of Columbia, Puerto* 26 *Rico, Guam, and the Virgin Islands of the United States[**], except Alaska and Hawaii.*

27 We must then conclude that the "continental United States**" means essentially the federal areas within the real (not 28 statutorily defined) continental United States**. We must also conclude based on the above analysis that:

- 29
- 30 1. The term "continental United States**" is redundant and unnecessary within the definition of "United States**" found 31 in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(38).
  - 32 2. The use of the term "continental United States**" is introduced mainly to deceive and confuse the average American 33 about his true citizenship status as a "national" or a "state national" and not a "U.S. national".

34 The above analysis also leaves us with one last nagging question: why do Alaska and Hawaii appear in the definition of 35 "United States**" in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(38), since we showed that the other "States" mentioned as part of this statutory
 36 "United States**" are federal "States"? If our hypothesis is correct that the "United States**" means "the federal zone"
 37 within federal statutes and regulations and "the states of the Union" collectively within the Constitution, then the definition
 38 from the regulation above can't include any part of a Union state that is not a federal enclave. In the case of Alaska and 39 Hawaii, they were only recently admitted as Union states (1950's). The legislative notes for Title 8 of the U.S. Code
 40 (entitled "Aliens and Nationality") reveal that the title is primarily derived from the Immigration and Nationality Act of 41 1940, which was written and codified BEFORE Alaska and Hawaii joined the Union. Before that, they were referred to as
 42 the Territories of Alaska and Hawaii, which belonged to the "United States**" or simply "Alaska and Hawaii". Note that 8

1 U.S.C. §1101(a)(38) adds the phrase “of the United States***” after the names of these two former territories and groups
 2 them together with other federal territories, which to us implies that they are referring to Alaska and Hawaii when they were
 3 territories rather than Union states. At the time they were federal territories, then they were federal “States”. These
 4 conclusions are confirmed by a rule of statutory construction known as “eiusdem generis”, which basically says that items
 5 of the same class or general type must be grouped together. The other items that Alaska and Hawaii are grouped with are 6 federal territories in the list of enumerated items:

7 “Eiusdem generis. Of the same kind, class, or nature. In the construction of laws, wills, and other instruments,
 8 the “eiusdem generis rule” is, that where general words follow an enumeration of persons or things, by words
 9 of a particular and specific meaning, such general words are not to be construed in their widest extent, but are
 10 to be held as applying only to persons or things of the same general kind or class as those specifically
 11 mentioned. U.S. v. LaBrecque, D.C. N.J., 419 F.Supp. 430, 432. The rule, however, does not necessarily 12 require that the general provision be limited in its scope to the identical things specifically named. Nor does it
 13 apply when the context manifests a contrary intention.

14 Under “eiusdem generis” canon of statutory construction, where general words follow the enumeration of 15 particular classes of things, the general words will be construed as applying only to things of the same general
 16 class as those enumerated. Campbell v. Board of Dental Examiners, 53 Cal.App.3d. 283, 125 Cal.Rptr. 694,

19 4.13.8.6 The Fourteenth Amendment

20 Many freedom lovers allow themselves to be confused by the content of the Fourteenth Amendment so that they do not
 21 believe the distinctions we are trying to make here about the differences in meaning of the term “United States” between 22 the Constitution and federal statutes. Here is what section 1 of that Amendment says:

23 Fourteenth Amendment

24 *“Section 1. All persons born or naturalized in the United States[***] and subject to the jurisdiction thereof,*
 25 *are citizens of the United States[***] and of the State wherein they reside.”*

26 The U.S. Supreme Court clarifies exactly what the phrase “subject to the jurisdiction” above means. It means the “political 27 jurisdiction” of the United States** and NOT the “legislative jurisdiction”(!):

28 “This section contemplates two sources of citizenship, and two sources only,-birth and naturalization. The
 29 *persons declared to be citizens are ‘all persons born or naturalized in the United States[***], and subject to the*
 30 jurisdiction thereof.’ The evident meaning of these last words is, not merely subject in some respect or degree
 31 *to the jurisdiction of the United States[***], but completely subject to their political jurisdiction, and* 32 owing them direct and immediate allegiance. And the words relate to the time of birth in the one case, as they
 33 do [169 U.S. 649, 725] to the time of naturalization in the other. Persons not thus subject to the jurisdiction of 34 *the United States[***] at the time of birth cannot become so afterwards, except by being naturalized, either*
 35 individually, as by proceedings under the naturalization acts, or collectively, as by the force of a treaty by 36 which foreign territory is acquired.”
 37 [U.S. v. Wong Kim Ark, 169 U.S. 649, 18 S.Ct. 456; 42 L.Ed. 890 (1898)]

38 “Political jurisdiction” is NOT the same as “legislative jurisdiction”. “Political jurisdiction” was defined by the Supreme
 39 Court in Minor v. Happersett:

40 “There cannot be a nation without a people. The very idea of a political community, such as a nation is, implies
 41 an [88 U.S. 162, 166] association of persons for the promotion of their general welfare. Each one of the
 42 persons associated becomes a member of the nation formed by the association. He owes it allegiance and is
 43 entitled to its protection. Allegiance and protection are, in this connection, reciprocal obligations. The one is
 44 a compensation for the other; allegiance for protection and protection for allegiance.

45 “For convenience it has been found necessary to give a name to this membership. The object is to designate by
 46 a title the person and the relation he bears to the nation. For this purpose the words ‘subject,’ ‘inhabitant,’ and
 47 ‘citizen’ have been used, and the choice between them is sometimes made to depend upon the form of the
 48 government. Citizen is now more commonly employed, however, and as it has been considered better suited to
 49 the description of one living under a republican government, it was adopted by nearly all of the States upon
 50 their separation from Great Britain, and was afterwards adopted in the Articles of Confederation and in the
 51 *Constitution of the United States[***]. When used in this sense it [the word*

“citizen”] is understood as conveying the idea of membership of a nation, and nothing more.”

“To determine, then, who were citizens of the United States[***] before the adoption of the amendment it is necessary to ascertain what persons originally associated themselves together to form the nation, and what were afterwards admitted to membership.”
 Minor v. Happersett, [88 U.S. 162 (1874)]

Notice how the Supreme court used the phrase “and nothing more”, as if to emphasize that citizenship doesn’t imply legislative jurisdiction, but simply political membership. We described in detail the two political jurisdictions within our country in section 4.7 of our Great IRS Hoax, Form #11.302 book. “Political jurisdiction” implies only the following:

1. Membership in a community (see Minor v. Happersett, 88 U.S. 162 (1874))
2. Right to vote.
3. Right to serve on jury duty.

“Legislative jurisdiction”, on the other hand, implies being “completely subject” and subservient to federal laws and all “Acts of Congress”, which only people in the District of Columbia and the territories and possessions of the United States[**] can be. You can be “completely subject to the political jurisdiction” of the United States*** without being subject in any degree to a specific “Act of Congress” or the Internal Revenue Code, for instance. The final nail is put in the coffin on the subject of what “subject to the jurisdiction” means in the Fourteenth Amendment, when the Supreme Court further said in the above case:

“It is impossible to construe the words ‘subject to the jurisdiction thereof,’ in the opening sentence, as less comprehensive than the words ‘within its jurisdiction,’ in the concluding sentence of the same section; or to hold that persons ‘within the jurisdiction’ of one of the states of the Union are not ‘subject to the jurisdiction of the United States[***].”
 U.S. v. Wong Kim Ark, [169 U.S. 649, 18 S.Ct. 456; 42 L.Ed. 890 (1898), emphasis added]

So “subject to the jurisdiction” in the context of citizenship within the Fourteenth Amendment means “subject to the [political] jurisdiction” of the United States*** and not legislative jurisdiction, and the Fourteenth Amendment definitely describes only those people born in states of the Union. Another very interesting conclusion reveals itself from reading the following excerpt from the above case:

“And Mr. Justice Miller, delivering the opinion of the court [legislating from the bench, in this case], in analyzing the first clause, observed that “the phrase ‘subject to the jurisdiction thereof’ was intended to exclude from its operation children of ministers, consuls, and citizens or subjects of foreign states, born within the United States[***].”
 U.S. v. Wong Kim Ark, [169 U.S. 649, 18 S.Ct. 456; 42 L.Ed. 890 (1898)]

When we first read that, an intriguing question popped into our head:

*Is “Heaven” or any religious group for that matter a “foreign state” with respect to the United States** government and are we God’s “ambassadors” and “ministers” of the Sovereign (“God”) in that “foreign state”?*

Based on the way our deceitful and wicked public servants have been acting lately, we think so and here are the scriptures to back it up!

“For our citizenship is in heaven, from which we also eagerly wait for the Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ”—
 [Philippians 3:20, Bible, NKJV]

 [Ephesians 2:19, Bible, NKJV]

“These all died in faith, not having received the promises, but having seen them afar off were assured of them, embraced them and confessed that they were strangers and pilgrims on the earth.”
 [Hebrews 11:13, Bible, NKJV]

1 [Peter 2:11, Bible, NKJV]

Furthermore, if you read section 5.2.11 of the Great IRS Hoax, Form #11.302, you will also find that the 50 Union states are considered “foreign states” and “foreign countries” with respect to the U.S. government as far as Subtitle A income taxes are concerned:

Foreign courts: “The courts of a foreign state or nation. In the United States[**], this term is frequently applied to the courts of one of the states when their judgments or records are introduced in the courts of another.”
[Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 647]

Foreign Laws: “The laws of a foreign country or sister state.”
[Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 647]

4.13.8.7 Department of State Foreign Affairs Manual (FAM)

Another place you can look to find confirmation of our conclusions is the Department of State Foreign Affairs Manual, section 7 Foreign Affairs Manual \(F.A.M.\), Section 1116.1-1, available on our website at:

<http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/Evidence/Citizenship/7FAM1100,1110,1111-DeptOfState.pdf>

and also available on the Dept. of State website at:

Department of State
<http://foia.state.gov/REGS/Search.asp>

“d. Prior to January 13, 1941, there was no statutory definition of “the United States” for citizenship purposes. Thus there were varying interpretations. Guidance should be sought from the Department (CA/OCS) when such issues arise.” [emphasis added]

If our own government hadn’t defined the meaning of the term “United States” up until 1941, then do you think there might have been some confusion over this and that this confusion was deliberate? Can you also see how the ruling in Wong Kim Ark might have been somewhat ambiguous to the average American without a statutory (legal) reference for the terms it was using? Once again, the government likes to confuse people about its jurisdiction in order to grab more of it. Here is how Thomas Jefferson explained it:

“Contrary to all correct example, [the Federal judiciary] are in the habit of going out of the question before them, to throw an anchor ahead and grapple further hold for future advances of power. They are then in fact the corps of sappers and miners, steadily working to undermine the independent rights of the States and to consolidate all power in the hands of that government in which they have so important a freehold estate.”
[Thomas Jefferson: Autobiography, 1821. ME 1:121]

“We all know that permanent judges acquire an esprit de corps; that, being known, they are liable to be tempted by bribery; that they are misled by favor, by relationship, by a spirit of party, by a devotion to the executive or legislative; that it is better to leave a cause to the decision of cross and pile than to that of a judge biased to one side; and that the opinion of twelve honest jurymen gives still a better hope of right than cross and pile does.”
[Thomas Jefferson to Abbe Arnoux, 1789. ME 7:423, Papers 15:283]

“It is not enough that honest men are appointed judges. All know the influence of interest on the mind of man, and how unconsciously his judgment is warped by that influence. To this bias add that of the esprit de corps, of their peculiar maxim and creed that ‘it is the office of a good judge to enlarge his jurisdiction,’ and the absence of responsibility, and how can we expect impartial decision between the General government, of which they are themselves so eminent a part, and an individual state from which they have nothing to hope or fear?”
[Thomas Jefferson: Autobiography, 1821. ME 1:121]

“At the establishment of our Constitutions, the judiciary bodies were supposed to be the most helpless and harmless members of the government. Experience, however, soon showed in what way they were to become the most dangerous; that the insufficiency of the means provided for their removal gave them a freehold and irresponsibility in office; that their decisions, seeming to concern individual suitors only, pass silent and

1 unheeded by the public at large; that these decisions nevertheless become law by precedent, sapping by little
 2 and little the foundations of the Constitution and working its change by construction before any one has
 3 perceived that that invisible and helpless worm has been busily employed in consuming its substance. In truth,
 4 man is not made to be trusted for life if secured against all liability to account."
 5 [Thomas Jefferson to A. Coray, 1823. ME 15:486]

6 "I do not charge the judges with wilful and ill-intentioned error; but honest error must be arrested where its
 7 toleration leads to public ruin. As for the safety of society, we commit honest maniacs to Bedlam; so judges
 8 should be withdrawn from their bench whose erroneous biases are leading us to dissolution. It may, indeed,
 9 injure them in fame or in fortune; but it saves the republic, which is the first and supreme law."
 10 [Thomas Jefferson: Autobiography, 1821. ME 1:122 ]

11 "The original error [was in] establishing a judiciary independent of the nation, and which, from the citadel
 12 of the law, can turn its guns on those they were meant to defend, and control and fashion their proceedings
 13 to its own will."
 14 [Thomas Jefferson to John Wayles Eppes, 1807. FE 9:68]

15 "It is a misnomer to call a government republican in which a branch of the supreme power [the Federal 16 Judiciary] is independent of the nation."
 17 [Thomas Jefferson to James Pleasants, 1821. FE 10:198]

18 "It is left... to the juries, if they think the permanent judges are under any bias whatever in any cause, to take
 19 on themselves to judge the law as well as the fact. They never exercise this power but when they suspect
 20 partiality in the judges; and by the exercise of this power they have been the firmest bulwarks of English
 21 liberty."
 22 [Thomas Jefferson to Abbe Arnoux, 1789. ME 7:423, Papers 15:283]

23 With respect to that last remark, keep in mind that NONE of the rulings of Supreme Court cases like Wong Kim Ark have
 24 juries, so what do you think the judges are going to try to do?.. expand their power and enhance their retirement benefits,
 25 duhhhh! Another portion of that same document found in 7 Foreign Affairs Manual \(F.A.M.\), Section 1116.2-1 says:

26 "a. Simply stated, "subject to the jurisdiction" [within the context of federal statutes but not within the 27 Fourteenth Amendment] of the United States[**] means subject to the laws of the United States[**]."
 28 [emphasis added]

29 So what does "subject to the laws of the United States**" mean? It means subject to the exclusive/general/plenary
 30 legislative jurisdiction of the national (not federal) government under Article 1, Section 8, Clause 17 of the Constitution,
 31 which only occurs within the federal zone. We covered this earlier in section 4.10 of the Great IRS Hoax, Form #11.302
 32 and again later throughout chapter 5 of that book. Here is how we explain the confusion created by 7 Foreign Affairs
 33 Manual (F.A.M.), Section 1116.2-1 above in the note we attached to it inside the Acrobat file of it on our website:

34 This is a distortion. Wong Kim Ark also says: "To be 'completely subject' to the political jurisdiction of the 35 *United States*** is to be in no respect or degree subject to the political jurisdiction of any other government."*

36 If you are subject to a Union state government, then you CANNOT meet the criteria above. That is why a
 37 "national" is defined in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) as "a person owing permanent allegiance to a [Union] state"
 38 and why most natural persons are "nationals" rather than "U.S. citizens"

39 4.13.8.8 Federal court jurisdiction

40 Let's now further explore what 7 Foreign Affairs Manual \(F.A.M.\), Section 1116.2-1 means when it says "subject to the 41 laws of the United States**". In doing so, we will draw on a very interesting article on our website entitled Authorities on 42 Jurisdiction of Federal Courts found on our website at:

Authorities on Jurisdiction of Federal Courts, Family Guardian Fellowship
<http://famguardian.org/Subjects/LegalGovRef/ChallJurisdiction/AuthoritiesArticle/AuthOnJurisdiction.htm>

43 We start with a cite from Title 18 that helps explain the jurisdiction of "the laws of the United States**":

44 TITLE 18 > PART III > CHAPTER 301 > Sec. 4001.
 45 Sec. 4001. - Limitation on detention; control of prisons

(a) No citizen shall be imprisoned or otherwise detained by the United States** except pursuant to an Act of Congress.

Building on this theme, we now add a corroborating citation from the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure, Rule 26, Notes of Advisory Committee on Rules, paragraph 2, in the middle,

"On the other hand since all Federal crimes are statutory  see [United States v. Hudson, 11 U.S. 32, 3 L.Ed. 259 \(1812\)] and all criminal prosecutions in the Federal courts are based on acts of Congress. . . ." [emphasis added]

We emphasize the phrase "Acts of Congress" above. In order to define the jurisdiction of the Federal courts to conduct criminal prosecutions and how they might apply "the laws of the United States**" in any given situation, one would have to find out what the specific definition of "Act of Congress," is. We find such a definition in Federal Rule of Criminal Procedure 54\(c\) prior to Dec. 2002, wherein "Act of Congress" was defined. Rule 54(c) stated:

"Act of Congress" includes any act of Congress locally applicable to and in force in the District of Columbia, in Puerto Rico, in a territory or in an insular possession."

If you want to examine this rule for yourself, here is the link:

[http://www2.law.cornell.edu/cgi-bin/fofiocgi.exe/frcrm/query=\[jump!3A!27district+court!27\]/doc/{@772}?](http://www2.law.cornell.edu/cgi-bin/fofiocgi.exe/frcrm/query=[jump!3A!27district+court!27]/doc/{@772}?)

The $64,000 question is:

"ON WHICH OF THE FOUR LOCATIONS NAMED IN [former] RULE 54(c) OF THE FEDERAL RULES OF CRIMINAL PROCEDURE IS THE UNITED STATES** DISTRICT COURT ASSERTING JURISDICTION WHEN THE U.S. ATTORNEY HAULS YOUR ASS IN COURT ON AN INCOME TAX CRIME?"

Hint: everyone knows what and where the District of Columbia is, and everyone knows where Puerto Rico is, and territories and insular possessions are defined in Title 48 United States Code, happy hunting!

The Supreme Court says the same thing about this situation as well:

"It is no longer open to question that the general government, unlike the states, Hammer v. Dagenhart, 247 U.S. 251, 275, 38 S.Ct. 529, 3 A.L.R. 649, Ann.Cas.1918E 724, possesses no inherent power in respect of the internal affairs of the states; and emphatically not with regard to legislation." Carter v. Carter Coal Co., [298 U.S. 238, 56 S.Ct. 855 (1936)]

Keep in mind that Title 8 of the U.S. Code, which establishes citizenship under federal law is federal "legislation". I guess that means there is nothing in that title that can define or circumscribe our rights as people born within and domiciled within a state of the Union, which is foreign to the federal government for the purposes of legislative jurisdiction. In fact, that is exactly our status as a "national" defined in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21). The term "national" is defined in Title 8, Section 1101 but the rights of such a human being are not limited or circumscribed there because they can't be under the Constitution. This, folks, is the essence of what it means to be truly "sovereign" with respect to the federal government, which is that you aren't the subject of any federal law. Laws limit rights and take them away. Rights don't come from laws, they come from God! America is "The land of the Kings". Every one of you is a king or ruler over your public servants, and THEY, not you, should be "rendering to Caesar", just as the Bible says in Matt. 22:15:22:

"The people of the state [not the federal government, but the state: IMPORTANT!], as the successors of its former sovereign, are entitled to all the rights which formerly belonged to the king by his own prerogative." [Lansing v. Smith, 4 Wendell 9, (NY) (1829)]

"It will be admitted on all hands that with the exception of the powers granted to the states and the federal government, through the Constitutions, the people of the several states are unconditionally sovereign within their respective states." [Ohio L. Ins. & T. Co. v. Debolt, 16 How. 416, 14 L.Ed. 997 ]

"Sovereignty [that's you!] itself is, of course, not subject to law, for it is the author and source of law; but in our system, while sovereign powers are delegated to the agencies of government, sovereignty itself remains with the people, by whom and for whom all government exists and acts." [Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U.S. 356, 6 S.Ct. 1064 (1886)]

4.13.8.9 Title 8 status definitions

“nationals” and “state nationals” are also further defined in 8 U.S.C. §1101 as follows:

8 U.S.C. §1101 Definitions [for the purposes of citizenship]

(a) As used in this chapter—

(21) The term "national" means a person owing permanent allegiance to a state.

(22) The term "national of the United States[**]" means:

(A) a citizen of the United States[**], or

(B) a person who, though not a citizen of the United States[**], owes permanent allegiance to the United States[**].

Note the suspect word “permanent” in the above definition. Below is the definition of “permanent” from the same title found in 8 U.S.C. §1101\(a\)\(31\):

8 U.S.C. §1101 Definitions [for the purposes of citizenship]

(a) As used in this chapter—

(31) The term "permanent" means a relationship of continuing or lasting nature, as distinguished from temporary, but a relationship may be permanent even though it is one that may be dissolved eventually at the instance either of the United States[**] or of the individual, in accordance with law.

For those of you who are Christians, you realize that this life is very temporary and that nothing on this earth can be permanent, and especially not your life:

*“In the sweat of your face you shall eat bread
Till you return to the ground,
For out of it you were taken;
For dust you are,
And to dust you shall return.”
[God speaking to Adam and Eve, Gen. 3:19, Bible, NKJV]*

If we are going to be “dust”, then how can our intact living body have a permanent earthly place of abode? The Bible says in Romans 6:23 that “the wages of sin is death”, and that Eve brought sin into the world and thereby cursed all her successors so there is nothing more certain than death, which means there can be nothing physical that is permanent on earth including our very short lives. The only thing permanent is our spirit and not our physical body, which will certainly deteriorate and die. Therefore, there can be no such thing as “permanent allegiance” on our part to anything but God for Christians, because exclusive allegiance to God is the only way to achieve immortality and eternal life. Exclusive allegiance to anything but God is idolatry, in violation of the first four commandments of the ten commandments.

When we bring up the above kinds of issues, some of our readers have said that they don’t even like being called “nationals” as they are defined above, and we agree with them. However, it is a practical reality that you cannot get a passport within our society without being either a “citizen or non-citizen national of the United States*”. The compromise we make in this sort of dilemma is to clarify on our passport application that:

1. The term “U.S.” as used on our passport application means the “United States of America” and not the federal United States**.
2. The term “U.S.” used on the USA passport application excludes the federal corporation called the United States** government.
3. We are not the statutory “national and citizen of the United States** at birth” defined in 8 U.S.C. §1401.
4. Anyone who interferes with our status declaration in the context of the passport application is doing the following, both of which are a violation of 22 U.S.C. §2721:
  - 4.1. Interfering with our First Amendment right of free association and freedom from compelled association.
  - 4.2. Compelling us to contract with the government in procuring a franchise status that we don’t consent to.

Below, in fact, is a procedure we use to apply for a passport without creating a false presumption that we are a “U.S. citizen” that worked for us:

Getting a USA Passport as a “state national”, Form #10.012
FORMS PAGE: <http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

Sneaky, huh? This is a chess game using “words of art” conducted by greedy lawyers to steal your property and your liberty, folks! Now we ask our esteemed readers:

“After all the crazy circuitous logic and wild goose chasing that results from listening to the propaganda of the government from its various branches on the citizenship definitions, what should a reasonable man conclude about the meanings of these terms? We only have two choices:

1. *‘United States**’ as used in 8 U.S.C. §1101\(a\)\(38\) means the federal zone and ‘U.S. citizens’ are born in the federal zone under all federal statutes and “acts of Congress”. This implies that Americans born and domiciled outside the federal zone and in a constitutional state of the Union can only be state nationals per 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21).*
2. *‘United States**’ as used in 8 U.S.C. §1101\(a\)\(38\) means the entire country and political jurisdictions that are legislatively foreign to that of the federal government which are found in the states. This implies that most Americans can only be statutory “nationals and citizens of the United States” per 8 U.S.C. §1401.*

We believe the answer is that our system of jurisprudence is based on “innocence until proven guilty”. In this case, the fact in question is: “Are you a statutory U.S. citizen”, and being “not guilty” means having our rights and sovereignty respected by our deceitful government under these circumstances implies being a “national” or a “state national”. Therefore, at best, we should conclude that the above analysis is correct and clearly explains the foundations of what it means to be a “national” or a “state national” and why most Americans fit that description. At the very worst, our analysis clearly establishes that federal statutory and case law, at least insofar as “U.S. citizenship” is very vague and very ambiguous and needs further definition. The U.S. Supreme Court has held that when laws are vague, then they are “void for vagueness”, null, and unenforceable. See the following cases for confirmation of this fact:

“A statute which either forbids or requires the doing of an act in terms so vague that men and women of common intelligence must necessarily guess at its meaning and differ as to its application, violates the first essential of due process of law.”
[Connally v. General Construction Co., 269 U.S. 385 (1926)]

“It is a basic principle of due process that an enactment [435 U.S. 982 , 986] is void for vagueness if its prohibitions are not clearly defined. Vague laws offend several important values. First, because we assume that man is free to steer between lawful and unlawful conduct, we insist that laws give the person of ordinary intelligence a reasonable opportunity to know what is prohibited, so that he may act accordingly. Vague laws may trap the innocent by not providing fair warning. Second, if arbitrary and discriminatory enforcement is to be prevented, laws must provide explicit standards for those who apply them. A vague law impermissibly delegates basic policy matters to policemen, judges, and juries for resolution on an ad hoc and subjective basis, with the attendant dangers of arbitrary and discriminatory application.”
[Grayned v. City of Rockford, 408 U.S. 104, 108 (1972), emphasis added]

We refer you to the following additional rulings of the U.S. Supreme Court on “void for vagueness” as additional authorities:

- Papachristou v. City of Jacksonville, 405 U.S. 156 (1972)
- Cline v. Frink Dairy Co., 274 U.S. 445, 47 S. Ct. 681 (1927)
- Sewell v. Georgia, 435 U.S. 982 (1978)

Here is the way one of our readers describes the irrational propaganda and laws the government writes:

4.13.8.10 Conclusions

Our conclusions then to the matters at our disposal are the following based on the above reasonable analysis:

1 The “United States***” defined in Section 1 of the Fourteenth Amendment means the states of the Union while the
 2 “United States**” appearing in federal statutes in most cases, means the federal zone. For instance, the definition of
 3 “United States**” relating to citizenship and found in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(38) means the federal zone, as we prove in
 4 the following:

Tax Deposition Questions, Form #03.016, Questions 77 through 82 located at: http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/Forms/Discovery/Deposition/Section 14.htm .

- 5 2. Most Americans, and especially those born in and living within states of the Union are statutory “nationals” or “state
 6 nationals” rather than statutory “U.S.** citizens”, “citizens and nationals of the United States**”, or “U.S. nationals”
 7 under all “acts of Congress” and federal statutes. The Internal Revenue Code is an “act of Congress” and a federal 8 statute.
- 9 3. The government has deliberately tried to confuse and obfuscate the laws on citizenship to fool the average American
 10 into incorrectly declaring that they are “U.S. citizens” in order to be subject to their laws and come under their 11 jurisdiction. See section 4.11.10 of our Great IRS Hoax, Form #11.302 book for complete details on how they have 12 done it.
- 13 4. The courts have not lived up to their role in challenging unconstitutional exercises of power by the other branches of 14 government or in protecting our Constitutional rights. They are on the take like everyone else who works in the federal 15 government and have conspired with the other branches of government in illegally expanding federal jurisdiction.
- 16 5. Once the feds used this ruse with words to get Americans under their corrupted jurisdiction as statutory “U.S. citizens”
 17 and presumed “taxpayers”, our federal “servants” have then made themselves into the “masters” by subjecting
 18 sovereign Citizens to their corrupted laws within the federal zone that can disregard the Constitution because the 19 Constitution doesn’t apply in these areas. By so doing, they can illegally enforce their income tax laws and abuse their 20 powers to plunder the assets, property, labor, and lives of most Americans in the covetous pursuit of money that the 21 law and the Constitution did not otherwise entitle them to. This act to subvert the operation of the Constitution
 22 amounts to an act of war and treason on the sovereignty of Americans and the sovereign states that they are domiciled
 23 in, punishable under Article III, Clause 3 of the U.S. Constitution with death by execution.

26 4.13.9 Summary of Constraints Applying to Statutory “State National” Status

27 So basically, if you owe allegiance to your state and are a constitutional “citizen” of that state, you are a “national” under 28 federal law. But how does that affect one’s voting rights? Below is the answer for California:

29 CALIFORNIA CONSTITUTION
 30 ARTICLE 2 VOTING, INITIATIVE AND REFERENDUM, AND RECALL

31 SEC. 2. A United States[**] citizen 18 years of age and resident in this State may vote.

32 The situation may be different for other states. If you are domiciled in a state other than California, you will need to check
 33 the laws of your specific home state in order to determine whether the prohibition against voting applies to “nationals” in 34 your state. If authorities give you a bad time about trying to register to vote without being a STATUTORY “U.S.**
 35 citizen”, then show them the Declaration of Independence, which says:

36 “We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their 37 Creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the pursuit of 38 Happiness.—“

39 Emphasize that it doesn’t say “endowed by their government” or “endowed by their federal citizenship” or “endowed by 40 their registrar of voters”, but instead “endowed by their CREATOR”. The rights to life, liberty, and the pursuit of 41 happiness certainly include suffrage and the right to own property. Suffrage is necessary in turn to protect personal 42 property from encroachment by the government and socialistic fellow citizens. These are not “privileges” that result from 43 federal citizenship. They are rights that result from birth! Thomas Jefferson said so:

1 "A free people [claim] their rights as derived from the laws of nature, and not as the gift of their chief
2 magistrate."

3 [Thomas Jefferson: Rights of British America, 1774. ME 1:209, Papers 1:134]

4 "Can the liberties of a nation be thought secure when we have removed their only firm basis, a conviction in the
5 minds of the people that these liberties are of the gift of God? That they are not to be violated but with His
6 wrath?"

7 [Thomas Jefferson: Notes on Virginia Q.XVIII, 1782. ME 2:227 ]

8 We will now analyze the constraints applying to "nationals" :

9 1. Right to vote:

- 10 1.1. "nationals" or "state nationals" can register to vote under laws in most states but must be careful how they 11 describe their status on the voter registration application.
12 1.2. Some state voter registration forms have a formal affidavit by which signer swears, under penalties of perjury,
13 that s/he is a "citizen of the United States**" or a "U.S.** citizen".
14 1.3. Such completed affidavits become admissible evidence and conclusive proof that signer is a "citizen of the United 15 States**" under federal statutes, which is not the same thing as a "national" or "state national".

16 2. Right to serve on jury duty:

- 17 2.1. "nationals" or "state nationals" can serve on jury duty under most state laws. If your state gives you trouble by 18 not allowing you to serve on jury duty as a "national", you are admonished to litigate to regain your voting rights
19 and change state law.
20 2.2. Some state jury summons forms have a section that allows persons to disqualify themselves from serving on jury
21 duty if they do not claim to be "citizens of the United States**". We should return the summons form with an
22 affidavit claiming that we want to serve on jury duty and are "nationals" rather than "citizens" of the United 23 States**. If they then disqualify us from serving on jury duty, we should litigate to regain our right to serve on 24 juries.
25 3. The exercise of federal citizenship, including voting and serving on jury duty, is a statutory privilege which can be
26 created, taxed, regulated and even revoked by Congress! Please reread section 4.3 of The Great IRS Hoax, Form
27 #11.302 book about "Government instituted slavery using privileges" for clarification on what this means. In effect,
28 the government, through operation of law, has transformed a right into a taxable privilege, .
29 4. The exercise of "national" Citizenship is an unalienable Right which Congress cannot tax, regulate or revoke under any 30 circumstances.
31 5. Such a Right is guaranteed by the U.S. Constitution, which Congress cannot amend without the consent of three-32 fourths of the Union States.

33 4.13.10 Federal citizenship

34 "All government without the consent of the governed is the very definition of slavery."
35 [Jonathan Swift]

36 4.13.10.1 Types of citizenship under federal law

37 At present, there are three types of federal citizenship identified in Title 8 of the U.S. Code, which is an "act of Congress":

Table 4-31: Types of federal citizens under federal law

#	Legal name	Where born	Defined in	Common name	Description
1	“nationals but not citizens of the United States at birth ”	1. American Samoa 2. Swains Island	8 U.S.C. §1408 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22) ; 8 U.S.C. §1452	“U.S. national”	The U.S. Supreme Court and the Constitution call these people “citizens of the United States”. See section 4.13.10.8 later for details. Used on the 1040NR form to describe people who file that form. Does not describe people who are not born in the federal United States.
2	“U.S.A. national” or “state national” or “Constitutional but not statutory U.S. citizen”	states of the Union	8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) ; http://www4.law.cornell.edu/uscode/8/1101.html	“national” or “state national”	This person is not necessarily the same as the “U.S. national” above, because it includes people who born in states of the Union. Notice that this term does not mention 8 U.S.C. §1408 citizenship nor confine itself only to citizenship by birth in the federal zone. Therefore, it also includes people born in states of the Union.
3	“nationals and citizens of the United States at birth ”	1. District of Columbia 2. Puerto Rico 3. Guam 4. Virgin Islands 5. Foreign country/abroad to at least one “national” parent.	8 U.S.C. §1401	“U.S. citizen”	All “U.S. citizens” are also “nationals” per 8 U.S.C. §1401 but “nationals” are not necessarily “U.S. citizens” as per 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22)(B) . <sup>166</sup> Term used on the 1040 form to describe the children who are being claimed as deductions.

Throughout the remainder of this book, when we refer generically to “nationals”, we mean statuses 1 or 2 above, which includes “nationals but not citizens of the United States at birth” under 8 U.S.C. §1408 or “nationals, but not citizens” under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21). STATUTORY “Nationals but not citizens” under 8 U.S.C. §1452 and “Nationals but not citizens at birth” under 8 U.S.C. §1408 includes only those born in American Samoa and Swains Island.

It is very important to be mindful of the context whenever you hear or use the term “citizen of the United States” or “U.S. citizen”, because the term “United States” has an entirely different meaning in federal statutes or “acts of Congress” than it has in the Constitution. This is especially true when filling out government forms. The differences in meaning of these terms between the Constitution and “acts of Congress” is a direct result of the fact that the federal government has no police powers within the states, as we discussed earlier in section 4.9. In the Constitution and the rulings of the Supreme Court, the term “United States” means the collective states of the Union while in federal statutes or “acts of Congress”, it means the federal zone. Watch out! Here is a quick summary of the effects on meanings based on this very important observation:

Table 4-32: Summary of citizenship terms within their context

#	Term	Contextual meaning
		Constitution and rulings of the U.S. supreme Court	Federal statutes or "acts of Congress"	State statutes
1	"citizen"	"National" of the collective states of the Union as described in Minor v. Happersett , 88 U.S. 162 (1874) and 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21)	"National" of the federal zone as defined in 8 U.S.C. §1401	"national" of the "state"
2	"citizen of the United States"	"National" of the collective states of the Union or "United States" as defined in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21)	Territorial citizen born in the federal zone as defined in 8 U.S.C. §1401	"National" of the federal zone as defined in 8 U.S.C. §1401
3	"U.S. citizen"	Not used	Territorial citizen born in the federal zone as defined in 8 U.S.C. §1401	"National" of the country "United States" as defined in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21)
4	"national of the United States"	Not used	"National" of the federal zone ("United States") as defined in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22)	Not used
5	"national"	Not defined, but equivalent to a Fourteenth Amendment, Section 1 citizen	8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) and 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22)(B)	Not used
6	"U.S. national"	Not used	"National" of the federal zone ("United States") as defined in 8 U.S.C. §1408 or 8 U.S.C. §1452	Not used
7	"citizen of the United States of America"	"National" of the collective states of the Union as described in Minor v. Happersett , 88 U.S. 162 (1874) and 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21)	Not used	Not used
8	"national but not citizen of the United States"	"National" of the collective states of the Union of "United States" as defined in common law but not statutes.	8 U.S.C. §1452 and 8 U.S.C. §1408	Not used

"citizen of the United States" status under the Constitution is the equivalent of "national of the United States" status under federal statutes and it is a "privileged" status:

"To be a citizen of the United States is a political privilege which no one, not born to, can assume without its consent in some form."
[Elk v. Wilkins, 112 U.S. 94 (1884)]

The Fourteenth Amendment did not create "citizen of the United States" status or add any restrictions to the existing citizenship laws, but simply allayed doubts and controversies that had arisen prior to that time:

"...the opening sentence of the fourteenth amendment is throughout affirmative and declaratory, intended to ally doubts and to settle controversies which had arisen, and not to impose any new restrictions upon citizenship."
[U.S. v. Wong Kim Ark, 169 U.S. 649, 18 S.Ct. 456, 42 L.Ed. 890 (1898)]

“U.S. citizen” or “national and citizen of the United States***” status under federal statutes and “acts of Congress” is different from “citizen of the United States***” status under the Fourteenth Amendment Section 1. “U.S.** citizen” or “national and citizen of the United States***” under federal statutes pursuant 8 U.S.C. §1401 is different from the Constitutional “citizen of the United States***” or statutory “USA national” pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §101(a)(21). Although these two nationals are different, they both came into existence as a result of the operation of The Laws of Nations. The Fourteenth Amendment didn’t create the Constitutional status of “citizen of the United States***”. The only thing that the ratification of the 14th Amendment in 1868 accomplished was to:

- Extend the status of “citizen of the United States***” to persons of all races, instead of only the whites who were previously the only citizens recognized under the Constitution.
- Further extend the privileges and immunities of those persons who were already “citizens of the United States***”
- Clarify and further define the meaning of the term “citizen of the United States***” under the Constitution

White persons born in states of the Union always were the equivalent “nationals” under federal statutes from the very beginning of our country under the Law of Nations, Book I, Section 212 and they had this status long before the creation of the 14th Amendment in 1868.<sup>167</sup> This is true because a “national” is defined in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) as someone who “owes allegiance to a state” and 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22)(B) defines a “national of the United States**” as someone who owes allegiance to the “United States***”. Nationality and allegiance are the only thing you need in order to be regarded as a “citizen” in our country:

“There cannot be a nation without a people. The very idea of a political community, such as a nation is, implies an [88 U.S. 162, 166] association of persons for the promotion of their general welfare. Each one of the persons associated becomes a member of the nation formed by the association. He owes it allegiance and is entitled to its protection. Allegiance and protection are, in this connection, reciprocal obligations. The one is a compensation for the other; allegiance for protection and protection for allegiance.”

“For convenience it has been found necessary to give a name to this membership. The object is to designate by a title the person and the relation he bears to the nation. For this purpose the words ‘subject,’ ‘inhabitant,’ and ‘citizen’ have been used, and the choice between them is sometimes made to depend upon the form of the government. Citizen is now more commonly employed, however, and as it has been considered better suited to the description of one living under a republican government, it was adopted by nearly all of the States upon their separation from Great Britain, and was afterwards adopted in the Articles of Confederation and in the Constitution of the United States. When used in this sense it is understood as conveying the idea of membership of a nation, and nothing more.”

“To determine, then, who were citizens of the United States before the adoption of the amendment it is necessary to ascertain what persons originally associated themselves together to form the nation, and what were afterwards admitted to membership.”

“Looking at the Constitution itself we find that it was ordained and established by ‘the people of the United States,’<sup>3</sup> and then going further back, we find that these were the people of the several States that had before dissolved the political bands which connected them with Great Britain, and assumed a separate and equal station among the powers of the earth,<sup>4</sup> and that had by Articles of Confederation and Perpetual Union, in which they took the name of ‘the United States of America,’ entered into a firm league of [88 U.S. 162, 167] friendship with each other for their common defence, the security of their liberties and their mutual and general welfare, binding themselves to assist each other against all force offered to or attack made upon them, or any of them, on account of religion, sovereignty, trade, or any other pretence whatever. 5”

“Whoever, then, was one of the people of either of these States when the Constitution of the United States was adopted, became ipso facto a citizen—a member of the nation created by its adoption. He was one of the persons associating together to form the nation, and was, consequently, one of its original citizens. As to this there has never been a doubt. Disputes have arisen as to whether or not certain persons or certain classes of persons were part of the people at the time, but never as to their citizenship if they were.”
[Minor v. Happersett, 88 U.S. 162 (1874)]

The treatment of the term “allegiance” above is significant. We must understand exactly what this word means in order to understand the foundation of our republican form of government. Below is a definition of “allegiance” from the law dictionary:

1            “Allegiance. Obligation of fidelity and obedience to government in consideration for protection that
 2 government gives. U.S. v. Kyh, D.C.N.Y., 49 F.Supp. 407, 414. See also Oath of allegiance or loyalty.”
 3 [Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 74]

4 The person who is a “national” does not have the kind of “allegiance” as that described above. Allegiance above is to the 5 government, while “nationals” instead have their allegiance to the “state”, which is the sovereign people (as individuals)
 6 within the territorial boundaries of the political body and not exclusively the “government”:

7            8 U.S.C. §1101 Definitions

8            (a) (21) The term “national” means a person owing permanent allegiance to a state.

9 The term “state” is then defined as follows:

10           “State. A people permanently occupying a fixed territory bound together by common-law habits and custom
 11 into one body politic exercising, through the medium of an organized government, independent sovereignty and
 12 control over all persons and things within its boundaries, capable of making war and peace and of entering into
 13 international relations with other communities of the globe. United States v. Kusche, D.C.Cal., 56 F.Supp. 201
 14 207, 208. The organization of social life which exercises sovereign power in behalf of the people. Delany v.
 15 Moralitis, C.C.A.Md., 136 F.2d. 129, 130. In its largest sense, a “state” is a body politic or a society of men.
 16 Beagle v. Motor Vehicle Acc. Indemnification Corp., 44 Misc.2d. 636, 254 N.Y.S.2d. 763, 765. A body of 17 people occupying a definite territory and politically organized under one government. State ex re. Maisano v.
 18 Mitchell, 155 Conn. 256, 231 A.2d. 539, 542. A territorial unit with a distinct general body of law.
 19 Restatement, Second, Conflicts, §3. Term may refer either to body politic of a nation (e.g. United States) or to 20 an individual government unit of such nation (e.g. California).

21           [...]

 23 public; as in the title of a cause, “The State vs. A.B.”
 24 [Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1407]

25 To have “allegiance” to “a state” as a “national” is to have allegiance to the sovereign within the body politic, which in a
 26 republican system of government is the people collectively and individually and not necessarily the government. We 27 cannot “assume” or “presume” that the government represents the will of the people. This is especially true when the 28 government has gone bad and is not representing the will of the people. When we have a rebellious government that has 29 strayed from the Constitution and its “de jure” foundation to become a “de facto” government, then the allegiance we have
 30 to the Constitution and the people who ordained it must supersede our allegiance to the government that has violated its 31 charter to implement the Constitution. The people, not the government, must always be regarded as the ultimate sovereigns
 32 within republican systems of governance.

33 Ironically, the very definition of the word “privilege” in Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, seems to contradict the 34 conclusion that “citizenship” can be a privilege to begin with!:

35           “Privilege. A particular benefit or advantage enjoyed by a person, company, or class beyond the common
 36 advantages of other citizens. An exceptional or extraordinary power or exemption. A peculiar right,
 37 advantage, exemption, power, franchise, or immunity held by a person or class, not generally possessed by 38 others.”
 39 [Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1197]

40 Note above that it says “beyond the common advantages of other citizens”, thus implying that citizenship itself cannot be a
 41 “privilege” and that you must also be accepting some kind of benefit beyond that of “citizenship” in order to be classified as 42 “privileged”. Furthermore, if everyone accepts this “privilege” (as the government calls it) called “U.S. citizen” status in 43 federal statutes or even if more than half of all natural persons do, then it becomes a “common advantage”, and thus no
 44 longer a special privilege granted only to a minority or a select few. This is the situation today with most Americans,
 45 where most falsely believe they are “U.S. citizens” as defined by federal statutes. By the above logic and definition, then, a
 46 reasonable man could easily conclude that “U.S. citizen” status cannot be classified as a “privilege” because it is 47 “common” and is shared by a majority rather than a minority.

48 4.13.10.2 History of federal citizenship

1 So far we have not offered any authority other than statutes to prove that the government actually recognizes two distinct
 2 classes of federal citizenship. We will now present additional evidence by describing the 13th and 14th Amendments and
 3 the history of how they have been viewed by the Supreme Court of the United States.

4 Prior to the Thirteenth and Fourteenth Amendments, all persons born in a state of the Union were “citizens of the United 5 States” under the Constitution and under the rulings of the U.S. Supreme Court, but NOT under federal statutes or “acts of 6 Congress”:

7 “There is no doubt that women may be citizens. They are persons, and by the fourteenth amendment ‘all
 8 persons born or naturalized in the United States and subject to the jurisdiction thereof’ are expressly
 9 declared to be ‘citizens of the United States and of the State wherein they reside.’ But, in our opinion, it did
 10 not need this amendment to give them that position. Before its adoption the Constitution of the United States
 11 did not in terms prescribe who should be citizens of the United States or of the several States, yet there were 12 necessarily such citizens without such provision.

14 “The fourteenth amendment did not affect the citizenship of women any more than it did of men. In this 15 particular, therefore, the rights of Mrs. Minor do not depend upon the amendment. She has always been a
 16 citizen from her birth, and entitled to all the privileges and immunities of citizenship. The [Fourteenth]
 17 Amendment prohibited the State, of which she is a citizen, from abridging any of their privileges and 18 immunities as a citizen of the United States; but it did not confer citizenship on her. That she had before its 19 adoption.

20 “The Constitution does not define the privileges and immunities of citizens. For that definition we must look 21 elsewhere.

22 “The [Fourteenth] Amendment did not add to the privileges and immunities of a citizen. It simply furnished
 23 an additional guaranty for the protection of such as he already had. No new voters were necessarily made by 24 it. Indirectly it may have had that effect, because it may have increased the number of citizens entitled to
 25 suffrage under the Constitution and laws of the States, but it operates for this purpose, if at all, through the
 26 States and the state laws, and not directly upon the citizen.

27 “All the States had government when the Constitution was adopted. These governments the Constitution did 28 not change.”
 29 [Minor v. Happersett, 88 U.S. 162 (1874)]

30 Therefore, “citizen of the United States” status under our Constitution and under the rulings of the Supreme Court existed
 31 before the passage of the Fourteenth Amendment to the U.S. Constitution. The status of being a “citizen of the United 32 States” under the Constitution and under Supreme Court rulings is equivalent to the status of being a “national” under 33 federal statutes or “acts of Congress” and is defined in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21).

34 Towards the end of the Civil War in 1865, the 13th Amendment was ratified and thereby abolished slavery and involuntary
 35 servitude except as punishment for a crime. The Supreme Court ruled that the 13th Amendment operated to free former 36 slaves and prohibit slavery, but it in no way conferred citizenship to the former slaves, or to those races other than white,
 37 because the founders of the Constitution were all of the white race.

38 Even after the end of the Civil War and the passage of the Thirteenth Amendment, Southern states were openly
 39 discriminating against blacks by denying them state citizenship and political rights. Congress was under political pressure
 40 from the northern states and had to do something about this problem. The Fourteenth Amendment was introduced as the 41 answer to this problem because it extended citizenship to persons of all races instead of only the whites covered by our
 42 original Constitution. The "big daddy" and chief protector of blacks then became the federal government under the new 43 Fourteenth Amendment. This protection was extended by extending national citizenship, which then made blacks "subject 44 to the jurisdiction of the United States".

45 “The first section of the fourteenth amendment of the constitution [169 U.S. 649, 676] begins with the words,
 46 ‘All persons born or naturalized in the United States, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the 47 United States and of the state wherein they reside.’ As appears upon the face of the amendment, as well as from 48 the history of the times, this was not intended to impose any new restrictions upon citizenship, or to prevent any
 49 persons from becoming citizens by the fact of birth within the United States, who would thereby have become
 50 citizens according to the law existing before its adoption. It is declaratory in form, and enabling and extending 51 in effect. Its main purpose doubtless was, as has been often recognized by this court, to establish the 52 citizenship of free negroes, which had been denied in the opinion delivered by Chief Justice Taney in Scott v.

Sandford (1857) 19 How. 393; and to put it beyond doubt that all blacks, as well as whites, born or naturalized within the jurisdiction of the United States, are citizens of the United States. Slaughter House Cases (1873) 16 Wall. 36, 73; Strauder v. West Virginia (1879) 100 U.S. 303, 306; Ex parte Virginia (1879) Id. 339, 345; Neal v. Delaware (1880) 103 U.S. 370, 386; Elk v. Wilkins (1884) 112 U.S. 94, 101, 5 S.Sup.Ct. 41. But the opening words, 'All persons born,' are general, not to say universal, restricted only by place and jurisdiction, and not by color or race, as was clearly recognized in all the opinions delivered in the Slaughter House Cases, above cited. "
[U.S. v. Wong Kim Ark, 169 U.S. 649 (1898)]

The Fourteenth Amendment approach that Congress devised would only work if it could confer national citizenship without conferring state citizenship. This approach was the only remedy available to Congress to end slavery and discrimination in the southern states because the federal government did not have the authority under our the Constitution to determine if a former slave could become a Citizen of one of the several states since the 9th and 10th Amendments said that powers not granted specifically to the federal government by the Constitution are reserved to the states or to the People.

History shows that the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania and New York State were nationalizing blacks as State Citizens before the outbreak of the Civil War. In other southern states, blacks were not Citizens and therefore did not have standing in any court based on the privileges and immunities of "citizens of the United States". The 14th Amendment was written primarily to afford citizenship to those of the black race that were recently freed by the 13th Amendment (Slaughter-House Cases, 16 Wall. 36, 71), and did not include Indians and others NOT born in and subject to the jurisdiction of the United States (McKay v. Cambell, 2 Sawy. 129). Thus, the 14th Amendment recognized that an individual can be a "citizen of the United States****" under the Constitution without being a Citizen of a State." (Slaughter-House Cases, supra; cf. U.S. v. Cruikshank, 92 U.S. 542 (1875)).

The Fourteenth Amendment was introduced for ratification to the states on June 16, 1866 and ratification was completed on July 28, 1868 at the end of the Civil War by the three fourths of the states required by the Constitution.<sup>168</sup> Ratification of the amendment by the southern states was made a precondition of them being readmitted back into the Union after the war. Until they were readmitted into the union, they were conquered federal territories.<sup>169</sup> Many of the southern states that voted in favor of ratifying the amendment did so at gunpoint while they were occupied by federal troops! Their legislatures in many such cases were summarily dismissed as "rebels" by Congress and replaced with puppet legislatures hand-selected by Congress following the cessation of war. You could say that they ratified the amendment under duress because of this, and that the amendment is therefore invalid because the ratification must be entirely voluntary to be legally binding. Furthermore, before they voted on this ratification, they had no representation in Congress and were "outnumbered" until they gave in.

The blacks following the civil war therefore had to be "collectively naturalized" into the status of being "citizens of the United States" so they could then freely roam to any state and be citizens of the state they were in, even if that state refused to grant them state citizenship. In order to do this, "citizen of the United States****" status under the Constitution had to be made paramount and dominant over state citizenship

"The first of these questions is one of vast importance, and lies at the very foundations of our government. The question is now settled by the fourteenth amendment itself, that citizenship of the United States is the primary citizenship in this country; and that State citizenship is secondary and derivative, depending upon citizenship of the United States and the citizen's place of residence. The States have not now, if they ever had, any power to restrict their citizenship to any classes or persons. A citizen of the United States has a perfect constitutional right to go to and reside in any State he chooses, and to claim citizenship therein, [83 U.S. 36, 113] and an equality of rights with every other citizen; and the whole power of the nation is pledged to sustain him in that right. He is not bound to cringe to any superior, or to pray for any act of grace, as a means of enjoying all the rights and privileges enjoyed by other citizens. And when the spirit of lawlessness, mob violence, and sectional hate can be so completely repressed as to give full practical effect to this right, we shall be a happier nation, and a more prosperous one than we now are. Citizenship of the United States ought to be, and, according to the Constitution, is, a surt and undoubted title to equal rights in any and every States in this Union, subject to such regulations as the legislature may rightfully prescribe. If a man be denied full equality before the law, he is denied one of the essential rights of citizenship as a citizen of the United States."

1 "By the thirteenth amendment of the constitution slavery was prohibited. The main object of the opening
2 sentence of the fourteenth amendment was to settle the question, upon which there had been a difference of
3 opinion throughout the country and in this court, as to the citizenship of free negroes, (Scott v. Sandford, 19
4 How. 393;) and to put it beyond doubt that all persons, white or black, and whether formerly slaves or not,
5 born or naturalized [collectively naturalized, in the case of slaves] in the United States[***], and owing no
6 allegiance to any alien power, should be citizens of the United States[***] and of the state in which they reside.
7 Slaughter-House Cases, 16 Wall. 36, 73; Strauder v. West Virginia, 100 U.S. 303, 306. "
8 [Elk v. Wilkins, 112 U.S. 94 (1884)]

9 The blacks were therefore collectively naturalized without their consent following the Civil War in the Civil Rights Act of 10 1866 on April 9, 1866, 14 Stat. 27 so they could be protected from state government abuses of their natural rights.

11 "By the act of April 9, 1866, entitled 'An act to protect all persons in the United States in their civil rights, and
12 furnish means for their vindication,' (14 St. 27,) it is provided that 'all persons born in the United States, and 13 not subject to any foreign power, excluding Indians not taxed, are hereby declared to be citizens of the United 14 States.' This, so far as we are aware, is the first general enactment making persons of the Indian race citizens of 15 the United States. Numerous statutes and treaties previously provided for all the individual members of 16 particular Indian tribes becoming, in certain contingencies, citizens of the United States. But the act of 1866
17 reached Indians not in tribal relations. Beyond question, by that act, national citizenship was conferred
18 directly upon all persons in this country, of whatever race, (excluding only 'Indians not taxed,') who were
19 born within the territorial limits of the United States, and were not subject to any foreign power."
20 [Elk v. Wilkins, 112 U.S. 94 (1884)]

21 Congress had the exclusive authority to collectively naturalize the blacks under Article 1, Section 8, Clause 4 of the U.S.
22 Constitution. Collective naturalization also occurs, for instance, when a new territory is annexed to the "United States".
23 An example of collective naturalization was the case of the Louisiana Purchase from France or the Alaska Purchase from 24 Russia. Note that at the time of the Louisiana Purchase and the Alaska Purchase, these areas became federal territories,
25 which are the proper subject of exclusive federal jurisdiction and acts of Congress. The U.S. Supreme Court calls these 26 areas "inchoate states" in their rulings. The same condition applied to the southern states following the Civil War, which 27 effectively became federal territories during the period when they were conquered but had not yet rejoined the Union.
28 Conditions had been placed on them in order to rejoin. For instance, they could not send representatives to the Congress
29 until they had ratified the Fourteenth Amendment. In effect, they would be slaves of the rest of the states until they had 30 consented to the ratification of the Fourteenth Amendment that would help eliminate slavery. During the time that the 31 southern states were federal territories, an act of Congress such as the Civil Rights Act of 1866 could lawfully be passed to 32 naturalize all the blacks. Once they rejoined the Union as sovereign states, such an act could not have been passed because 33 the jurisdiction of the states within their borders would again have been exclusive and plenary.

34 To restate: In the Slaughter-House Cases, 16 Wall. 36, 71 supra the supreme Court said:

35 "It is quite clear, then, that there is a citizenship of the United States and a citizenship of a state, which are
36 distinct from each other and which depend upon different characteristics or circumstances of the individual.
37 Of the privileges and immunities of the citizens of the United States and of the privileges and immunities of the 38 citizen of the state, and what they respectfully are, we will presently consider; but we wish to state here that it is 39 only the former which are placed by this clause under the protection of the Federal Constitution, and the latter,
40 whatever they may be, are not intended to have any additional protection by this paragraph of the amendment."

41 The Supreme court has also ruled that "The term United States is a metaphor [a figure of speech]". Cunard S.S Co. V.
42 Mellon, 262 U.S. 100, 122; and that

43 "The term 'United States' may be used in one of several senses. It may be merely the name of a sovereign
44 occupying the position analogous to that of sovereign in a family of nations. It may designate territory over
45 which sovereignty of the United States extends, or it may be a collective name of the states which are united by 46 and under the Constitution."
47 [Hooven & Allison Co. v. Evatt, 324 U.S. 652, 672-73.]

48 Did the Courts really say that someone could be a Citizen of a State without being a "citizen of the United States" (which 49 means "national of the United States" in federal statutes)? Yes, they did. Who would fit this description? How about a
50 national from another country who resides in a state of the Union and who has not yet been naturalized under the laws of 51 this country. It's true that the cases cited above are old, some over 100 years old. None of these cases have ever been 52 overturned by a more recent decision, so they are valid. A more recent case is Crosse v. Bd. of Supervisors, 221 A.2d. 431
53 (1966) which says:

1 "Both before and after the Fourteenth Amendment to the federal Constitution, it has not been necessary for a
 2 person to be a citizen of the United States in order to be a citizen of his state." Citing U.S. v. Cruikshank, supra.

3 The Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, for instance, is one of the "several states" described in the Constitution. The
 4 Constitution treats the several states of the Union as independent countries and jurisdictions that are "foreign" to each other
 5 and to the federal government for the purposes of legislative jurisdiction and internal "police powers". 28 U.S.C. §297
 6 makes it very clear that the states of the Union are "foreign countries" with respect to each other, as we talk about later in
 7 section 5.2.13. Each state is on an equal footing with all the other states of the Union in terms of its sovereignty and nearly
 8 exclusive control over everything that happens internal to its borders. The Buck Act in 1940 created federal areas inside the 9 50 Union states. If you are domiciled in a federal area, you are subject to federal territorial laws and the municipal laws of 10 the District of Columbia. The Internal Revenue Service (IRS) is internal to the federal zone. The Commonwealth of 11 Pennsylvania mentioned in the state constitution is not part of the federal zone, but the Pennsylvania Commonwealth is.
 12 PA is the name that the post office recognizes for mail sent into the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, which is a federal 13 area. Pa., Penna., and Pennsylvania are the names that the post office uses for mail sent into the Commonwealth of 14 Pennsylvania, which is not a federal area. If I accept mail sent to PA, I am saying that I live in the federal zone. The same
 15 situation exists in the other states.

16 One important outcome of being a "U.S. citizen" under federal statutes and "acts of Congress" is that the federal
 17 government may tax only its own "U.S. citizens" when they reside outside of federal territorial jurisdiction, for instance
 18 when they are in foreign countries. See the Supreme Court case of Cook v. Tait for authorities on this subject. In the U.S.
 19 Constitution Annotated, under the Fifth Amendment (see 20 <http://caselaw.lp.findlaw.com/data/constitution/amendment05/13.html> - 6), here is what it says about this subject:

21 In laying taxes, the Federal Government is less narrowly restricted by the Fifth Amendment than are the States
 22 *by the Fourteenth. The Federal Government may tax property belonging to its ["U.S."] citizens, even if such
 23 property is never situated within the jurisdiction of the United States.<sup>170</sup> and it may tax the income of a citizen*
 24 resident abroad, which is derived from property located at his residence.<sup>171</sup> The difference is explained by the 25 fact that protection of the Federal Government follows the citizen wherever he goes, whereas the benefits of 26 state government accrue only to persons and property within the State's borders.

27 It is important, however, to point out that the Union states are exempted from direct taxes under Article 1, Section 9, Clause
 28 4 and Article 1, Section 2, Clause 3 of the Constitution but foreign countries where "U.S. citizens" (under federal statutes)
 29 reside are not. This point is VERY important, and clearly indicates from where the tax jurisdiction of the United States
 30 government derives. It isn't mainly a geographical jurisdiction as far as taxes internal to the federal zone go, but instead
 31 originates mainly from our "U.S. citizen" status under federal statutes and "acts of Congress". Through this devious
 32 mechanism of fooling sovereign state Citizens and "nationals" into becoming privileged "U.S. citizens" under federal
 33 statutes and "acts of Congress", the federal government usurped the Sovereignty of the People, as well as the Sovereignty
 34 of the several Union states. They also usurped the authority of sovereign state Citizens by creating "Federal areas" within 35 the authority of Article IV, Section 3, Clause 2 in the Constitution for the United States of America which states:

36 "The Congress shall have Power to dispose of and make all needful Rules and Regulations respecting the 37 Territory or other Property belonging to the United States, and nothing in this Constitution shall be so
 38 construed as to prejudice any claims of the United states, or of any particular State."

39 Therefore, all STATUTORY "U.S. citizens" [i.e. citizens of the District of Columbia and the territories described in 40 federal statutes] residing in one of the states of the Union, are classified as property and franchisees of the federal
 41 government, and as an "individual" entity! These serfs are "completely subject to the jurisdiction of the United States" no
 42 matter where they reside because they are chattel and slaves of that government. See Wheeling Steel Corp. v. Fox, 298 U.S.
 43 193, 80 L.Ed. 1143, 56 S.Ct. 773 (1936). Under the "Buck Act," 4 U.S.C Secs. 105-113, the federal government has created
 44 a "Federal area" or "enclave" within the boundaries of the several states. This area is similar to any territory that the federal
 45 government acquires through purchase, conquest or treaty, thereby imposing federal territorial law upon the people in this
 46 "Federal area." Federal territorial law is evidenced by the Executive Branch's Admiralty flag (a federal flag with a gold or 47 yellow fringe on it) flying in schools, offices and courtrooms. As you will find out in section 5.6.1 of the Tax Fraud
 48 Prevention Manual, Form #06.008, "acts of Congress" and all federal crimes falling under Title 18, the Criminal Code,
 49 only apply inside these federal areas and not within states of the Union.

1 There are actually four potential sources of federal jurisdiction over “nationals” living in a state of the Union:

- 2 1. In personam jurisdiction
- 3 2. Citizenship
- 4 3. Territorial jurisdiction. If a person’s “domicile” is within the territorial jurisdiction, then they are subject to the
- 5 jurisdiction of the sovereign.
- 6 4. Subject matter jurisdiction

7 “Nationals”, also called “citizens of the United States***” by the Supreme Court and the Fourteenth Amendment, are
 8 subject to the political (but not legislative) jurisdiction of the “United States***” even when they are outside the territorial
 9 jurisdiction of that country United States*. That is the whole reason why we have embassies in foreign countries: to protect
 10 citizens residing in foreign lands. States of the Union do not have legislative jurisdiction over their citizens when they are 11 outside the state. However, today all state citizens are also citizens of the United States*** and hence all state citizens have 12 the same protections when they are outside of the “U.S.***” that was spoken of at the beginning of this paragraph, meaning
 13 outside the country United States*. Federal political jurisdiction derives from being either a “U.S.** citizen” under 8
 14 U.S.C. §1401 or a “national of the United States***” under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22). Being a “U.S.** citizen” under federal 15 statutes is a privilege while being a “national of the United States***” in all cases is a right. We hope this clears up all 16 remaining doubts you might have about the nature of federal citizenship.

17 Now for a little history on citizenship prior to the Civil War. To begin, the "citizen of the United States**" in 26 C.F.R.
 18 §31.3121(e) -1 is a citizen of a territory or possession of the United States under Title 48 of the U.S. Code and 8 U.S.C.
 19 §1401. This citizenship doesn't have anything to do with the Fourteenth Amendment. It is a special "non-constitutional"
 20 class of citizenship. This misunderstanding dates back to 1803 at the time of the Louisiana Purchase. Article 1, Section 8, 21 Clause 17 jurisdiction applies exclusively to:

- 22 1. The District of Columbia as the seat of government, and
- 23 2. Territory within states of the Union ceded to the United States for purposes specified.

24 The territorial clause, at Article 4, Section 3, applied only to what was known as the Northwest Territory ceded by New 25 York and other new sovereign states in 1787 to help pay off debts of the Revolution.

26 In the cession treaty with France, there were two important provisions for territory ceded as a result of the Louisiana
 27 Purchase:

- 28 1. Those who lived in the territory would enjoy all rights, benefits and protections of "citizens of the United States***," 29 and
- 30 2. As the territory was settled, it would become one or more States of the Union.

31 Thomas Jefferson was President at the time. He knew that the Constitution makes no provision for acquisition of new 32 territories so he drafted two proposed amendments to accommodate the Louisiana Purchase and the treaty provisions.
 33 However, Congress elected to do nothing, reasoning that territorial acquisition was implicit from the constitutional
 34 provisions relating to waging war & making treaties. As a consequence, the U.S. Government has been operating under 35 implied rather than constitutionally enumerated powers for territorial acquisition ever since.

36 Until the Spanish-American War (1898), cession treaties all included the two key elements that were in the Louisiana
 37 Purchase -- the acquired territory would become one or more States of the Union, and those living in the territory would 38 enjoy all rights, benefits and protections the Constitution affords citizens of the several States until such time as the territory
 39 was admitted to the Union. When Spain ceded Puerto Rico & the Philippines, the cession treaty did not include those 40 provisions.

41 If you will read the Downes v. Bidwell case, that Supreme Court decision, and the other Insular Tax Cases decided in the 42 same general timeframe, a distinction was made between incorporated territories such as Alaska and Hawaii (destined to 43 become States of the Union, per cession treaties), and the new "unincorporated" insular possessions. They were deemed
 44 "foreign" to States of the Union, i.e., to the "United States," in that they were not under the "constitutional umbrella."

45 In 1917, Congress extended nationality ("national of the United States***") status to the people of Puerto Rico; in 1927, the 46 status was extended to the people of the Virgin Islands, etc., until citizenship was finally extended to the people of Guam,

American Samoa and the Northern Mariana Islands. It appears that nationality ("national of the United States**") status was also extended to the people of Alaska and Hawaii prior to the two being admitted to the Union, but in all cases it was a "non-constitutional" citizenship -- the Fourteenth Amendment didn't have a thing to do with it, because these were territories at the time and were not part of the "United States***" as referred to in the Constitution.

One of the important declarations in Downes v. Bidwell is that once the Constitution has been extended to a territory, it cannot be withdrawn. The District of Columbia, federal enclaves ceded by states of the Union for Article 1, Section 8, Clause 17 purposes, the Northwest Territory, and territories acquired from 1803 to 1898 all enjoyed the same benefit of falling under the constitutional umbrella without being part of the "United States" within the meaning of the Constitution. However, until admitted to the Union, people in the territories, as well as those in today's unincorporated insular possessions:

1. Did not elect Senators and Representatives to Congress, and
2. could not vote in presidential elections. Additionally, both incorporated territories and unincorporated possessions are or were subject to Congress' plenary power, i.e., the "municipal" authority of the United States.

An essential necessary to understand the scheme is to understand that "all legislation is geographical in nature." In other words, it applies to a territory. The Social Security Act of 1935 applied to the "geographical United States**," i.e., to territories and possessions of the United States**. It did not apply to states of the Union, and there is no special provision that extends application to federal enclaves within States of the Union. This is one of the reasons there are some code sections that conditionally include the District of Columbia where others don't.

If you would like to study the history of citizenship further, the best and most authoritative source is the Supreme Court case of Minor v. Happersett, 88 U.S. 162 (1874).

4.13.10.3 Constitutional Basis of federal citizenship

Here is Section 1 of the 14th Amendment that confers "national" citizenship upon persons born in the United States***:

*Section 1. All persons born or naturalized in the United States[***], and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the United States and of the state wherein they reside. No state shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States; nor shall any state deprive any person of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law; nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws.*

Prior to the introduction of the Fourteenth Amendment after the Civil War, the U.S. Constitution only established the individual rights enumerated by the first eight Amendments to the U.S. Constitution at the federal level. This meant that prior to the Fourteenth Amendment, the individual rights enumerated by the first eight amendments to the U.S. Constitution were not guaranteed to Americans by the states of the Union and many state constitutions did not universally include all of these rights. The Fourteenth Amendment was introduced at the federal level to compel states to honor the first 8 amendments of the constitution in the case of all "citizens of the United States".<sup>172</sup> These "citizens of the United States" identified by both the Fourteenth Amendment and the U.S. Supreme Court are referred to as "nationals but not citizens" or simply "nationals" within federal statutes.<sup>173</sup> Here is how the Supreme Court of the United States described the significance of the Fourteenth Amendment in terms of its effect on federal legislative jurisdiction:

"The [Fourteenth] amendment prohibited the state, of which she is a citizen, from abridging any of her privileges and immunities as a citizen of the United States, but it did not confer citizenship on her. That she had before its adoption.

"If the right of suffrage is one of the necessary privileges of a citizen of the United States, then the Constitution and laws of Missouri confining it to men are in violation of the Constitution of the United States, as amended, and consequently void. The direct question is therefore presented whether all citizens are necessarily voters.

1           “The Constitution does not define the privileges and immunities of citizens. For that definition we must look
2 elsewhere. In this case, we need not determine what they are, but only whether suffrage is necessarily one of 3 them.

4           [. . .]

5           The [Fourteenth] amendment did not add to the privileges and immunities of a citizen. It simply furnished an
6 additional guaranty for the protection of such as he already had. No new voters were necessarily made by it.
7 Indirectly it may have had that effect because it may have increased the number of citizens entitled to
8 suffrage under the constitution and laws of the states, but it operates for this purpose, if at all, through the
9 states and the state laws, and not directly upon the citizen.”
10          [Minor v. Happersett, 88 U.S. 162 (1874)]

11         So we can see that the Fourteenth Amendment operates exclusively through the states and state law, not through federal 12 law. It is not a source of federal legislative jurisdiction, but simply confers membership in the political community called 13 the “United States***” by virtue of their birth in a state of the Union.

14         Following the introduction of the Fourteenth Amendment, it became quite common for people to confuse “citizens of the 15 United States***” under the Fourteenth Amendment and under Supreme Court rulings with “U.S. citizens” under federal 16 statutes and “acts of Congress” such as 8 U.S.C. §1401, which are two completely different statuses. Because of this
17 confusion, people in states of the Union would almost universally but mistakenly identify themselves as “U.S. citizens”
18 under the authority of federal statutes on the many government forms they would eventually submit in the context of 19 federal taxes. This created a “false presumption” and evidence supporting the belief that they are residents of the federal 20 zone and feudal serfs of Congress. Through this devious obfuscation mechanism, people who were victims of such 21 confusion became “property and franchisees of the federal government” in receipt of taxable privileges who were aliens in
22 their own state and whose “U.S. citizen” status made them into residents and citizens of the federal zone from a legal
23 perspective. Sneaky politicians would later introduce the Buck Act of 1940 following the passage of the Fourteenth
24 Amendment in 1868 as a way to allow states to tax this franchise and states would later introduce income tax statutes of 25 their own to cash in on these federal slaves.

26         Remember the Supreme Court’s definition of the term “United States” in Hooven and Allison v. Evatt, 324 U.S. 652 (1945)
27 which we talked about earlier in section 4.6 in which there were three definitions of “United States”? The key to 28 understanding the meaning of the 14th Amendment shown above are the words “United States***”, which means the 29 collective states of the Union of states in the context of the Constitution, and ”the jurisdiction”, which means the political 30 and NOT legislative jurisdiction of these states.

31           “It is impossible to construe the words ‘subject to the jurisdiction thereof,’ in the opening sentence [of the 32 Fourteenth Amendment], as less comprehensive than the words ‘within its jurisdiction,’ in the concluding 33 sentence of the same section; or to hold that persons ‘within the jurisdiction’ of one of the states of the Union
34 are not ‘subject to the jurisdiction of the United States/***].”
35          [U.S. v. Wong Kim Ark, 169 U.S. 649 (1898)]

36         Now do you understand? Can you also understand then why your government would want you to be a federal statutory 37 “U.S. citizen” defined in 8 U.S.C. §1401 and who lives in the federal zone from a legal perspective? They can legally make 38 you into a slave with no rights who is completely subject to their jurisdiction! Tricky, huh? The Supreme Court confirmed
39 these conclusions in Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 (1901), when it said in pertinent part:

40           “The 13th Amendment to the Constitution, prohibiting slavery and involuntary servitude ‘within the United
41 States, or in any place subject to their jurisdiction,’ is also significant as showing that there may be places
42 within the jurisdiction of the United States that are no part of the Union. To say that the phraseology of this
43 amendment was due to the fact that it was intended to prohibit slavery in the seceded states, under a possible
44 interpretation that those states were no longer a part of the Union, is to confess the very point in issue, since it
45 involves an admission that, if these states were not a part of the Union, they were still subject to the jurisdiction
46 of the United States.”

47           Upon the other hand, the 14th Amendment, upon the subject of citizenship, declares only that ‘all persons born
48 or naturalized in the United States, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the United States, and 49 of the state wherein they reside.’ Here there is a limitation to persons born or naturalized in the United States,
50 which is not extended to persons born in any place ‘subject to their jurisdiction.’”

51         The Social Security Program Operations Manual (POM) clarifies the meaning of “subject to the jurisdiction” found in 52 section 1 of the Fourteenth Amendment:

[GN 00303.100 U.S. Citizenship\[...\]](#)

5. SUBJECT TO THE JURISDICTION OF THE U.S.

Individuals under the purview of the Fourteenth Amendment (which states that all individuals born in the U.S. and to whom U.S. laws apply are U.S. citizens). Acquisition of citizenship is not affected by the fact that the alien parents are only temporarily in the U.S. at the time of the child's birth. Under international law, children born in the U.S. to foreign sovereigns or foreign diplomatic officers listed on the State Department Diplomatic List are not subject to the jurisdiction of the U.S.

The legal encyclopedia, American Jurisprudence, further clarifies the meaning of U.S. citizenship as follows:

3C American Jurisprudence 2d, Aliens and Citizens, §2689 (1999) Who is born in United States and subject to United States jurisdiction "A person is born subject to the jurisdiction of the United States, for purposes of acquiring citizenship at birth, if his or her birth occurs in territory over which the United States is sovereign, even though another country provides all governmental services within the territory, and the territory is subsequently ceded to the other country."

Therefore, an individual may not legally be a "U.S. citizen" or "citizen of the United States" under federal statutes or "acts of Congress" unless he or she was born on a federal territory, such as in Guam, the Virgin Islands, or Puerto Rico. States of the Union are not territories of the central government. Below is the definition of the word "territory" so you can see for yourself, right from Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1473:

"Territory: A part of a country separated from the rest, and subject to a particular jurisdiction. Geographical area under the jurisdiction of another country or sovereign power.

A portion of the United States not within the limits of any state, which has not yet been admitted as a state of the Union, but is organized with a separate legislature, and with executive and judicial powers appointed by the President."

The major legal encyclopedia, Corpus Juris Secundum (C.J.S.), has the following enlightening things to say about the word "territory":

86 Corpus Juris Secundum, Territories

§1. Definitions, Nature, and Distinctions

The word "territory," when used to designate a political organization has a distinctive, fixed, and legal meaning under the political institutions of the United States, and does not necessarily include all the territorial possessions of the United States, but may include only the portions thereof which are organized and exercise governmental functions under act of congress.

While the term "territory" is often loosely used, and has even been construed to include municipal subdivisions of a territory, and "territories of the" United States is sometimes used to refer to the entire domain over which the United States exercises dominion, the word "territory," when used to designate a political organization, has a distinctive, fixed, and legal meaning under the political institutions of the United States, but may include only a portion or the portions thereof which are organized and exercise governmental functions under acts of congress. The term "territories" has been defined to be political subdivisions of the outlying dominion of the United States, and in this sense the term "territory" is not a description of a definite area of land but of a political unit governing and being governed as such. The question whether a particular subdivision or entity is a territory is not determined by the particular form of government with which it is, more or less temporarily invested.

"Territories" or "territory" as including "state" or "states."

While the term "territories of the" United States may, under certain circumstances, include the states of the Union, as used in the federal Constitution, and in ordinary acts of congress "territory" does not include a foreign state.

As used in this title, the term "territories" generally refers to the political subdivisions created by congress, and not within the boundaries of any of the several states."
[86 Corpus Juris Secundum (C.J.S.), Territories, §1 (2003)]

The U.S. Supreme Court also defined precisely what "territory" meant as follows:

"Various meanings are sought to be attributed to the term 'territory' in the phrase 'the United States and all territory subject to the jurisdiction thereof.' We are of opinion that it means the regional areas- of land and adjacent waters-over which the United States claims and exercises [plenary/exclusive] dominion and control as a sovereign power. The immediate context and the purport of the entire section show that the term is used in a physical and not a metaphorical sense-that it refers to areas or districts having fixity of location and recognized boundaries. See United States v. Bevens, 3 Wheat. 336, 390.

"It now is settled in the United States and recognized elsewhere that the territory subject to its jurisdiction includes the land areas under its dominion and control, the ports, harbors, bays and other enclosed arms of the sea along its coast and a marginal belt of the sea extending from the coast line outward a marine league, or three geographic miles. Church v. Hubbart, 2 Cranch, 187, 234; The Am, 1 Fed.Cas. No. 397, p. 926; United States v. Smiley, 27 Fed.Cas. No. 16317, p. 1132; Manchester v. Massachusetts, 139 U.S. 240, 257, 258 S., 11 Sup.Ct. 559; Louisiana v. Mississippi, 202 U.S. 1, 52, 26 S.Sup.Ct. 408; 1 Kent's Com. (12th Ed.) *29; 1 Moore, [262 U.S. 100, 123] International Law Digest, 145; 1 Hyde, International Law, 141, 142, 154; Wilson, International Law (8th Ed.) 54; Westlake, International Law ( 2d Ed.) p. 187, et seq; Wheaton, International Law (5th Eng. Ed. [ Phillipson]) p. 282; 1 Oppenheim International Law (3d Ed.) 185-189, 252. This, we hold, is the territory which the amendment designates as its field of operation; and the designation is not of a part of this territory but of 'all' of it."

It is extremely important to emphasize once again the need to consider the context of the words being used in order to properly and clearly understand federal jurisdiction. The term “subject to the jurisdiction” as used in the Fourteenth Amendment of the Constitution has an entirely different meaning than the term “subject to its jurisdiction” as used in federal statutes or “acts of Congress”. Below is a table that hopefully will make the distinctions clear in your mind:

Table 4-33: Constitution v. Federal Statute jurisdiction

Context	Term used	Authority where cited	Where term used within authority cited	Jurisdiction
Federal statute or “act of Congress”	“subject to its jurisdiction”	Cunard S.S. Co. v. Mellon , 262 U.S. 100 (1923)	National Prohibition Act (41 Stat. 305)	Federal zone only under Article 1, Section 8, Clause 17 of the Constitution. Refers to both legislative and political jurisdiction.
U.S. Constitution	“subject to the jurisdiction”	U.S. v. Wong Kim Ark , 169 U.S. 649 (1898)	Fourteenth Amendment, section 1	The collective states of the Union. Does not include any part of the federal zone. Applies ONLY to “political jurisdiction” and excludes “legislative jurisdiction”.

An interesting and important outcome of the above analysis regarding the Fourteenth Amendment is the following very reasonable conclusion:

*If you claim to be a federal “U.S. citizen” under the Internal Revenue Code and yet do not live in the federal United States**/federal zone, the only way you can be subject to the jurisdiction of the United States is to yourself be property or territory of the United States! That’s right: you are a slave! The only thing subject to the jurisdiction of the United States is its territory, and if you aren’t on federal property then YOU are federal territory!*

Human beings born in the sovereign 50 Union states outside of the “federal zone” are technically not “U.S. citizens” under federal statutes such as 8 U.S.C. §1401, but “nationals” as defined in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21). As “nationals” who are not statutory “U.S. citizens”, they are classified as “nonresident aliens” within the Internal Revenue Code, but only if serving in a public office in the national government:

26 U.S.C. §7701 Definitions

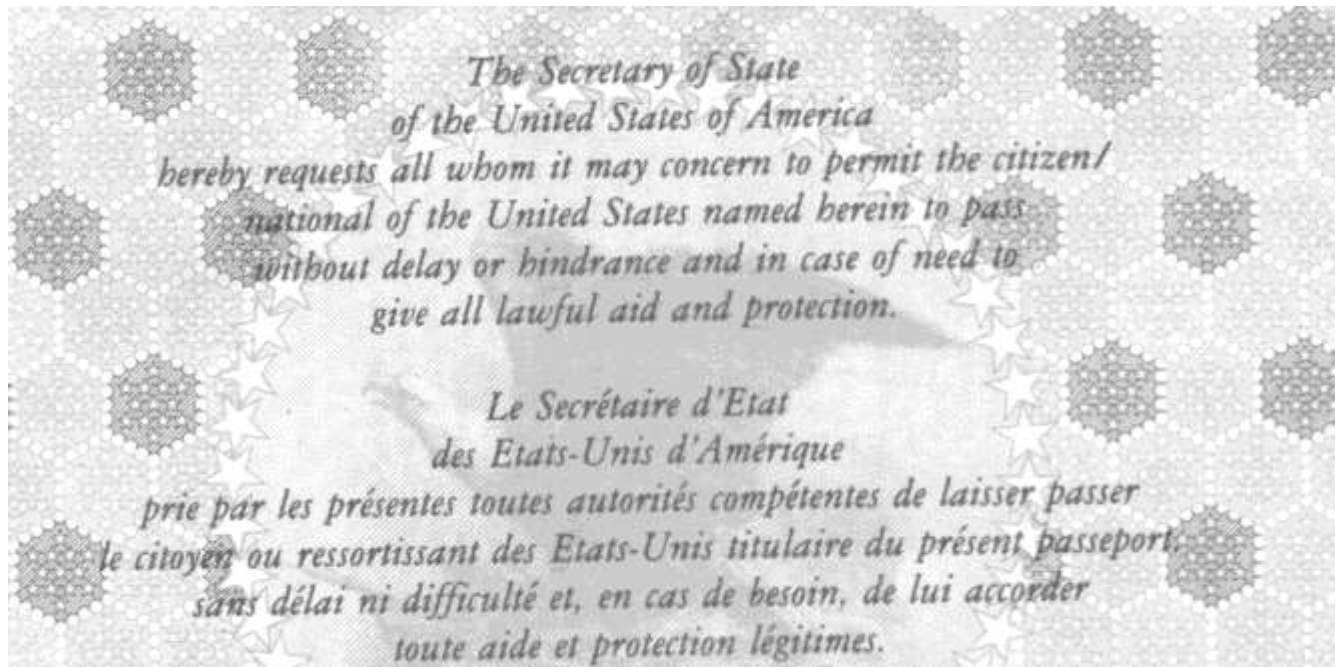

(B) Nonresident alien

An individual is a nonresident alien if such individual is neither a citizen of the United States nor a resident of the [federal] United States (within the meaning of subparagraph (A)).

One of our readers took this section a step further and actually examined her passport. Below is a snapshot of what the cover of the U.S. passport says, which confirms the fact that U.S. passports recognize two classes of citizenship: “U.S. citizens” and “nationals”:

2 We can now apply what we have just learned above to the federal government’s definition of “U.S. citizen” found in the 3 Internal Revenue Code and explain why they defined it the way they did. Are you a “U.S. citizen”? Here’s the only
4 definition of “citizen of the United States” found anywhere in the I.R.C. or 26 CFR:

5 26 C.F.R. 31.3121(e)-1 State, United States, and citizen.

6 (b)...The term 'citizen of the United States' includes a citizen of the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico or the Virgin
7 Islands, and, effective January 1, 1961, a citizen of Guam or American Samoa.

8 The answer is EMPHATICALLY NO! The above definition, you will note, also depends on the definition of “United 9 States” or “U.S.” appearing in 26 U.S.C. §7701\(a\)\(9\) and 26 U.S.C. §7701\(a\)\(10\), which we showed earlier in sections
10 3.9.1.24 and 3.9.1.20 means the federal United States in the context of the Internal Revenue Code. The context must 11 always be examined to determine which of the two types of federal citizens (nationals or citizens) they are talking about.
12 Therefore, the only thing “U.S. citizen” or “citizen of the United States” can mean in Subtitles A and C of the Internal 13 Revenue Code is persons born in federal territories and possessions, which doesn’t include most of us. Based on what we
14 just learned, we can now understand why the conniving lawyers inhabiting the District of Columbia (Washington, D.C.)
15 defined it the way they did! Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, American Samoa, and Guam are all federal TERRITORIES
16 and territories are the only place that “U.S. citizens” as defined above can be born and reside! The District of Columbia is 17 NOT a territory as the word is correctly defined!

18 The Fourteenth Amendment has two requirements in order to be a “citizen of the United States ”:

- 19 1. Born in a state of the Union AND 20 2. “subject to the jurisdiction” of the federal government.

21 We must therefore think very clearly about what it means to be “subject to the jurisdiction” above and what context we are 22 talking about: federal statutes versus the Constitution. You will find out later in section 4.11 that the term “subject to the 23 jurisdiction” means the political jurisdiction, which means the ability to vote or serve on jury duty within the 50 states of 24 the Union. If we therefore reside in the 50 Union states and outside of the federal zone, then we are technically “subject to 25 the [political] jurisdiction” of the federal government under the Constitution, but at the same time, we are not subject to 26 most federal statutes and regulations or to the Internal Revenue Code. The founding fathers endowed us with the ability to 27 participate politically in voting and jury service within our country without subjecting ourselves to federal police powers or
28 legislative jurisdiction.

1 How does the government rope us into the jurisdiction of federal statutes and “acts of Congress” so they can tax and pillage
 2 us? They use confusing terms and definitions on tax and voter registration and jury duty forms to get us to “volunteer” or
 3 “elect” to be treated as though we are statutory federal “U.S. citizens” under 8 U.S.C. §1401 who are subject to federal law
 4 and who reside inside the federal zone. For instance, they scare us into filling out an IRS form 1040 that creates a false but
 5 prima facie presumption that we occupy the federal zone as a “alien”.<sup>174</sup> In effect, they trick us by abusing language into
 6 admitting that we occupy the federal zone so they can make us into financial slaves, and it’s perfectly legal because the 7 Thirteenth Amendment prohibition against involuntary servitude doesn’t apply inside the federal zone!

8 4.13.10.4 The voluntary nature of citizenship: Requirement for “consent” and “intent”

9 As we said in section 4.11, the act of becoming a citizens is a voluntary act and requires an intent and consent on your part.
 10 The government likes to rig its forms to deceive you into admitting that you are a “U.S. citizen” under federal statutes and
 11 the Internal Revenue Code, which most people aren’t. Whenever you see any kind of state or federal government form that 12 asks you whether you are a “U.S. citizen”, remember that they are asking about your “intent” and asking for your “consent”
 13 to treat you as a “U.S. citizen”. In doing so, what they are really asking you but can’t say outright:

14 *“Do you want to volunteer to give up all of your rights and become a slave to state and federal income taxes
 15 who is devoid of Constitutional rights? Do you want to be a Socialist puppet of your government?”*

16 If your answer is yes, you have just volunteered into slavery and servitude to the federal government, in effect. There is 17 absolutely no advantage whatsoever to becoming a “U.S. citizen” because as we said before, your rights don’t come from 18 your citizenship, but from where you live. Even the U.S. Supreme Court says that citizenship is an optional and voluntary 19 act:

20 “The people of the United States resident within any State are subject to two governments: one State, and the 21 other National; but there need be no conflict between the two. The powers which one possesses, the other
 22 does not. They are established for different purposes, and have separate jurisdictions. Together they make one
 23 whole, and furnish the people of the United States with a complete government, ample for the protection of all
 24 their rights at home and abroad. True, it may sometimes happen that a person is amenable to both jurisdictions
 25 for one and the same act. Thus, if a marshal of the United States is unlawfully resisted while executing the 26 process of the courts within a State, and the resistance is accompanied by an assault on the officer, the 27 sovereignty of the United States is violated by the resistance, and that of the State by the breach of peace, in the 28 assault. So, too, if one passes counterfeited coin of the United States within a State, it may be an offence against 29 the United States and the State: the United States, because it discredits the coin; and the State, because of the 30 fraud upon him to whom it is passed. This does not, however, necessarily imply that the two governments
 31 possess powers in common, or bring them into conflict with each other. It is the natural consequence of a 32 citizenship [92 U.S. 542, 551] which owes allegiance to two sovereignties, and claims protection from both.

33 The citizen cannot complain, because he has 34 voluntarily submitted himself to such a form of 35 government. He owes allegiance to the two departments, so to speak, and within their respective 36 spheres must pay the penalties which each exacts for disobedience to its laws. In return, he can demand 37 protection from each within its own jurisdiction.

38 [United States v. Cruikshank, 92 U.S. 542 (1875) [emphasis added]

39 Returning to the Cruikshank cite above and the meaning of the word “voluntarily” in the context of “U.S. citizen” status,
 40 you might at this point want to go forward to Chapter 14, which is Definitions, and look at the definition of “voluntary”.
 41 Here is it again:

42 *“Voluntary: (Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1575) “Unconstrained by interference; unimpelled by 43 another’s influence; spontaneous; acting of oneself. Coker v. State, 199 Ga. 20, 33 S.E.2d. 171, 174. Done
 44 by design or intention. Proceeding from the free and unrestrained will of the person. Produced in or by an 45 act of choice. Resulting from free choice, without compulsion or solicitation. The word, especially in 46 statutes, often implies knowledge of essential facts. Without valuable consideration; gratuitous, as a voluntary 47 conveyance. Also, having a merely nominal consideration; as, a voluntary deed.”*

48 The implications here are profound, because the Supreme Court is implying here that we don’t have to choose to be
 49 statutory “U.S.** citizens” because it is voluntary! Voluntary citizenship and voluntary political rights are the very heart

<sup>174</sup> See 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1(a)(2)(ii) and 26 C.F.R. §1.1441-1(c)(3) for confirmation of the fact that the only “individuals” who are “subject” to the Internal Revenue Code are aliens and nonresident aliens.

1 and soul of what it means to live in a free country and have liberty! We can't be citizens by compulsion or by presumption,
 2 and must do so by choice. We can simply be "free inhabitants" under the Articles of Confederation instead of statutory
 3 "citizens" if that status affords us the most protections for our God-give rights and liberties. The reason why citizenship
 4 MUST be voluntary is because of what we find in the Declaration of Independence, which states:

5 "We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator
 6 with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness.--That to
 7 secure these rights, Governments are instituted among Men, deriving their just powers
 8 from the consent of the governed, --That whenever any Form of Government becomes
 9 destructive of these ends, it is the Right of the People to alter or to abolish it, and to institute new Government,
 10 laying its foundation on such principles and organizing its powers in such form, as to them shall seem most
 11 likely to effect their Safety and Happiness." [emphasis added]

12 The key word here is "consent". If you don't want to be a "U.S. citizen" or accept the so-called "benefits" or "privileges 13 and immunities" of a highly litigious and corrupt and greedy socialist democracy, or submit yourself to its corrupt laws that
 14 are clearly in conflict with God's sovereign laws, then you don't have to! Consent can't be compelled and if it is, then the 15 exercise of government power in such a case is no longer "just" as Thomas Jefferson says here, and represents "injustice".

16 "An agreement obtained by duress, coercion, or intimidation is invalid, since the party coerced is not
 17 exercising his free will, and the test is not so much the means by which the party is compelled to execute the 18 agreement as the state of mind induced.<sup>175</sup> Duress, like fraud, rarely becomes material, except where a
 19 contract or conveyance has been made which the maker wishes to avoid. As a general rule, duress renders the 20 contract or conveyance voidable, not void, at the option of the person coerced,<sup>176</sup> and it is susceptible of
 21 ratification. Like other voidable contracts, it is valid until it is avoided by the person entitled to avoid it.<sup>177</sup>
 22 However, duress in the form of physical compulsion, in which a party is caused to appear to assent when he has
 23 no intention of doing so, is generally deemed to render the resulting purported contract void.<sup>178</sup>
 24 [American Jurisprudence 2d, Duress, §21 (1999)]

25 Please remember that the purpose of our court system is to effect justice, not injustice, so the courts can't enforce that
 26 which isn't consensual. The only exception to this rule is if a person does something that infringes on the equal rights or 27 liberties of a bona fide, flesh and blood third party. Nonpayment of "income taxes" (which are in reality donations) does
 28 not accomplish this because the state/government isn't a natural or real person, but an artificial legal entity that actually is a
 29 corporation. The problem is, even if your choice or consent was procured by force or fraud or trickery on the part of the 30 government or its treacherous lawyers, as it is in most cases, the judges in our corrupt federal courts are so eager to get their 31 hands in your pocket that they won't give you the benefit of the doubt as their very own precedents and rulings clearly
 32 establish. Here is what the U.S. Supreme Court said about this subject:

33 "Keeping in mind the well-settled rule that the citizen is exempt from taxation unless the same is imposed by 34 clear and unequivocal language, and that where the construction of a tax law is doubtful, the doubt is to be 35 resolved in favor of those upon whom the tax is sought to be laid."
 36 [Spreckels Sugar Refining Co. v. McClain, 192 U.S. 397 (1904)]

37 "Waivers of constitutional rights not only must be voluntary, but must be knowing, intelligent acts done with 38 sufficient awareness of the relevant circumstances and likely consequences."
 39 [Brady v. United States, 397 U.S. 742, 90 S.Ct. 1463 (1970)]

40 Powerful stuff, folks! By the way, there are LOTS of similar quotes like the first quote above that use the word "taxpayer"
 41 instead of "citizen", but we positively refuse to use them because the word "taxpayer" is a due process trap and a
 42 government scam, as you will learn later in section 5.3.1. Based on the above, if most judges really were "honorable"
 43 (which is why we are supposed to call them "your honor" but also why they seldom merit that name), they would presume

<sup>178</sup> Restatement 2d, Contracts § 174, stating that if conduct that appears to be a manifestation of assent by a party who does not intend to engage in that conduct is physically compelled by duress, the conduct is not effective as a manifestation of assent.

1 we are “nationals” unless and until THE GOVERNMENT meets the burden of proof that we chose to become privileged
 2 “U.S. citizens” by an informed and deliberate choice and consent rather than by presumption and by fraud because of our
 3 own legal ignorance when filling out government forms. The foundation of this is that in our system of justice, we are 4 “innocent until proven guilty”. In the commercial world, a contract becomes valid only when there is:

- 5 1. An offer: government offers to make us “U.S. citizens”
- 6 2. Acceptance: we accept their offer voluntarily and without duress. Being deceived constitutes duress insofar as the 7 actions of our government are concerned.
- 8 3. Consideration: receipt of the privileges and immunities of “U.S. citizen” status in our case or income tax on the 9 part of the government
- 10 4. Mutual assent by both parties: informed choice and a full understanding of the rights that are being surrendered or 11 waived in the process of procuring the perceived benefit.

12 The fourth element above is missing from the “citizenship contract” we signed when we submitted our government
 13 application for voter registration, passport, or social security benefits, and therefore the “citizenship contract” cannot and
 14 should not be legally enforced by our dishonorable courts, but it is anyway in a massive conspiracy to deprive us of rights
 15 under 18 U.S.C. §241 and in violation of the spirit and intent of the “social contract” called U.S. Constitution and that of 16 the framers who wrote it. The goal of this document is to ensure that your consent from this day forward is fully informed
 17 so that the government can no longer use your own ignorance as a weapon against you to STEAL your property. After you
 18 have read this document, if you continue to remain a “U.S. citizen”, then you will have no one to blame but yourself for 19 your inaction at eliminating that status and regaining your God-given rights. The choice to do NOTHING is a choice to 20 remain a slave. As Sherry Peel Jackson, an X IRS Examination agent very powerfully said at the We The People Truth In 21 Taxation Hearings on February 28, 2002 (<http://www.bostonteparty2.com>):

22 “You can remain an informed slave, or you can leave the plantation entirely!”

23 So the question is, why on earth would anyone want to “volunteer” to be a citizen of either their state or federal government
 24 and thereby volunteer to be subject to the legislative jurisdiction of our corrupt and covetous government? What if you
 25 don’t want government “protection” as the Supreme Court describes above and want to fend for yourself or better yet have 26 God protect you? Remember that a compelled benefit is not a benefit, but slavery disguised as government benevolence!
 27 If the government abuses its power by threatening anyone who doesn’t want protection [from harassment by IRS computers
 28 in the collection of taxes when they aren’t paid, for instance] and thereby forces you to accept protection and to pay taxes
 29 for that protection, then government becomes nothing more than a mafia protection racket under such circumstances, who
 30 charges you for protection from its own bad deeds! This kind of arrangement is no different than Racketeer Influenced 31 Corrupt Organizations (RICO), which is a serious crime under 18 U.S.C. §225. I certainly don’t choose to “volunteer” to 32 be a citizen of my federal government under such compelled circumstances and you shouldn’t either.

33 We should never forget that God in the Bible clearly states that we should not be citizens of any state or government,
 34 because in doing so we surrender our sovereignty and the protection of God, and trade our God-given rights for taxable
 35 government “privileges” and protection, thereby becoming slaves!:

36 “Protection draws subjection.”
 37 [Steven Miller]

38 *“Stand fast therefore in the liberty wherewith Christ hath made us free, and be not entangled again with the 39 yoke of bondage [to the government or the income tax].”

 44 of the household of God.”*
 45 [Ephesians 2:19, Bible, NKJV]

46 *“These all died in faith, not having received the promises, but having seen them afar off were assured of them,

1 [Peter 2:1]

2 4.13.10.5 How you unknowingly volunteered to become a “citizen of the United States” under federal statutes

3 Armed with the knowledge that “U.S. citizen” status under federal statutes and “acts of Congress” is entirely voluntary,
4 let’s now examine the federal government’s definition of the term “naturalization” to determine at what point we
5 “volunteered”:

6 8 U.S.C. §1101\(a\)\(23\) naturalization defined

7 (a)(23) The term "naturalization" means the conferring of nationality [NOT "citizenship" or "U.S. citizenship",
8 but "nationality", which means "national"] of a state upon a person after birth, by any means whatsoever.

9 And here is the definition in Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1026 of naturalization:

10 Naturalization. The process by which a person acquires nationality [not citizenship, but nationality] after birth
11 and becomes entitled to the privileges of U.S. citizenship. 8 U.S.C.A. §1401 et seq..

12 In the United States collective naturalization occurs when designated groups are made citizens by treaty (as 13 Louisiana Purchase), or by a law of Congress (as in annexation of Texas and Hawaii). Individual 14 naturalization must follow certain steps: (a) petition for naturalization by a person of lawful age who has been
15 a lawful resident of the United States for 5 years; (b) investigation by the Immigration and Naturalization
16 Service to determine whether the applicant can speak and write the English language, has a knowledge of the 17 fundamentals of American government and history, is attached to the principles of the Constitution and is of 18 good moral character; (c) hearing before a U.S. District Court or certain State courts of record; and (d) after a 19 lapse of at least 30 days a second appearance in court when the oath of allegiance is administered.
20 [Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1026]

21 Hmmm. Well then, if you were a foreigner who was “naturalized” to become a “national” (and keep in mind that all of 22 America is mostly a country of immigrants), then some questions arise:

- 23 1. At what point did you become a STATUTORY “U.S. citizen” under federal law, because “naturalization” didn’t do it?
24 2. By what means did you inform the government of your “informed choice” in this voluntary process?

25 The answer is that when you applied for a passport or registered to vote or participated in jury duty, the government asked
26 you whether you were a “U.S. citizen” and you lied by saying “YES”. In effect, although you never made an informed
27 choice to surrender your sovereign status as a “national” to become a “U.S. citizen”, you created a “presumption” on their
28 part that you were a “U.S. citizen” just because of the erroneous paperwork you sent them which they can later use as 29 evidence in court to prove you are a “U.S. citizen”. Even worst, they ENCOURAGED you to make it erroneous because of 30 the way they designed the forms by not even giving you a choice on the form to indicate that you were a “national” instead 31 of a “U.S. citizen”! By you checking the “U.S. citizen” block on their rigged forms, that is all the evidence they needed to 32 conclude, incorrectly and to their massive financial benefit I might add, that you were a “U.S. citizen” who was 33 “completely subject to the jurisdiction” of the United States. BAD IDEA!

34 Technically and lawfully, the federal government does not have the lawful authority to confer statutory “citizen of the 35 United States***” status upon a person born inside a Union state on land that is not part of the federal zone and domiciled
36 there. If they did, they would be “sheep poachers” who were stealing citizens from the Union states and depriving those 37 states of control over persons born within their jurisdiction. This is so because “citizen of the United States***” status is 38 superior and dominant over state citizenship according to the Supreme Court in the Slaughter-House Cases, 83 U.S. 36
39 (1873):

40 “The first of these questions is one of vast importance, and lies at the very foundations of our government. The 41 question is now settled by the fourteenth amendment itself, that citizenship of the United States is the primary
42 citizenship in this country; and that State citizenship is secondary and derivative, depending upon citizenship
43 of the United States and the citizen's place of residence. The States have not now, if they ever had, any power
44 to restrict their citizenship to any classes or persons. A citizen of the United States has a perfect constitutional
45 right to go to and reside in any State he chooses, and to claim citizenship therein, [83 U.S. 36, 113] and an
46 equality of rights with every other citizen; and the whole power of the nation is pledged to sustain him in that
47 right. He is not bound to cringe to any superior, or to pray for any act of grace, as a means of enjoying all the 48 rights and privileges enjoyed by other citizens. And when the spirit of lawlessness, mob violence, and sectional
49 hate can be so completely repressed as to give full practical effect to this right, we shall be a happier nation,
50 and a more prosperous one than we now are. Citizenship of the United States ought to be, and, according to the Constitution, is, a surt and undoubted title to equal rights in any and every States in this Union, subject to such regulations as the legislature may rightfully prescribe. If a man be denied full equality before the law, he is denied one of the essential rights of citizenship as a citizen of the United States."

[Slaughter-House Cases, 83 U.S. 36 (1873)]

Therefore, persons born in the Union states but outside the federal zone (federal areas or enclaves within the states) must be naturalized technically in order to become "citizens of the United States". However, the rules for naturalization in the case of federal citizenship are so lax and transparent that people are fooled into thinking they always were "citizens of the United States"! Whenever you fill out a passport or voter registration form and claim you are a "citizen of the United States" or a "U.S. citizen", for instance, even if you technically weren't because you weren't born inside the federal zone, then you have effectively and formally "naturalized" yourself into federal citizenship and given the government evidence admissible under penalty of perjury proving that you are a federal serf and slave!

I therefore like to think of the term "U.S. citizen" used by the Internal Revenue Service and the Internal Revenue Code as being like the sign that your enemies taped on your back in grammar school without you knowing which said "HIT ME!", and the only people who can see the sign or understand what it means are those who work for the government and the IRS and the legal profession! Your own legal ignorance is the only reason that you don't know that you have this sign on your back.

4.13.10.6 Presumptions about "citizen of the United States" status

The courts often "presume" you to be a statutory federal citizen under 8 U.S.C. §1401, without even telling you that there are different classes of citizens. It is up to you dispute this.

"Unless the defendant can prove he is not a citizen of the United States, the IRS has the right to inquire and determine a tax liability."
[U.S. v. Slater, 545 Fed.Supp. 179,182 (1982)]

The legal encyclopedia, American Jurisprudence, further helps explain the nature of the above presumption as shown below:

"As a general rule, it is presumed, until the contrary is shown, that every person is a citizen of the country [nation, meaning "national"] in which he or she resides.<sup>179</sup> Furthermore, once granted, citizenship is presumably retained unless voluntarily relinquished,<sup>180</sup> and the burden rests upon one alleging a change of citizenship and allegiance to establish that fact. Consequently, a person born in the United States is presumed to continue to be a citizen until the contrary is shown, and where it appears that a person was once a citizen of a particular foreign country, even though residing in another, the presumption is that he or she still remains a citizen of such foreign country, until the contrary appears."
[3C American Jurisprudence 2d, Presumptions concerning citizenship (1999)]

The above quote is obviously written so that it could very easily mislead those who do not understand the separation of powers doctrine or the nature of federal jurisdiction. As we said earlier in section 4.6, the "United States*" is not a "nation", but a "federation" of independent states. Within the context of The Law of Nations (see Vattel), the federal zone in combination with the 50 states are collectively considered a "country", but not a nation. Politicians and judges do frequently refer to the federal government as the "national government" to deliberately mislead people, but you would be mistaken to conclude that we are a "nation" in the legal sense.<sup>181</sup> When the above cite says we are "presumed" to be a "citizen" of the "country in which he or she resides", what they are saying is that we are to be presumed to be a "national" but not necessarily a statutory "citizen" under the laws of that country. The US* is a country but not a nation, while both the US** and the US*** are both a county and a nation. Therefore, if you are residing within the US** you are presume to be a national of the US** and if you are residing in the US*** you are presumed to be a national of the US***. The word "citizen" used independently of the name of a geographic region, simply implies "national". This confusion over definitions was not our doing, but a creation of the politicians and the courts to keep you confused and enslaved to their corrupt jurisdiction.

As we covered earlier in section 2.8.2, having a Social Security Number (SSN) also creates a rebuttable presumption that you are a “U.S. citizen”, according to the Internal Revenue Code:

26 C.F.R. §301.6109-1\(g\)

(g) Special rules for taxpayer identifying numbers issued to foreign persons—

(1) General rule—

(i) Social security number. A social security number is generally identified in the records and database of the Internal Revenue Service as a number belonging to a U.S. citizen or resident alien individual. A person may establish a different status for the number by providing proof of foreign status with the Internal Revenue Service under such procedures as the Internal Revenue Service shall prescribe, including the use of a form as the Internal Revenue Service may specify. Upon accepting an individual as a nonresident alien individual, the Internal Revenue Service will assign this status to the individual's social security number.

The reason you can rebut this presumption is that the Social Security Administration Program Operations Manual says that both “U.S. citizens” and “U.S. nationals” can participate in the Social Security program, and because foreigners can acquire a Socialist Security Number as well using an SSA Form SS-5.

To rebut the presumption that you are a statutory “U.S. citizen” under 8 U.S.C. §1401, simply present your SSA Form SS-5 reflecting your correct status as a “national”, along with your birth certificate. You can also show them a copy of any of the following documents, which we show you how to prepare so as to reflect your correct citizenship status in section 2.5.3.13 of the Sovereignty Forms and Instructions Manual, Form #10.005:

1. Voter registration
2. Passport application
3. Government security clearance application
4. Jury summons

Using the above evidence to rebut incorrect presumptions about your citizenship status can be useful when you are filing tax returns and when you are litigating in court and you want the judge to respect your choice of citizenship status.

WARNING!: If you have a Socialist Security Number and you don't rebut the presumption that you are a statutory “U.S. citizen” with evidence in a court proceeding, then the state and federal courts will automatically presume that you are without even telling you that they are! This can have disastrous results!

4.13.10.7 Privileges and Immunities of U.S. citizens

Statutory “U.S.** citizens” under 8 U.S.C. §1401 do not have natural rights (constitutional civil rights) granted by God but instead have statutory civil rights granted by Congress. The rights that most people believe they have are not natural rights but civil rights which are actually franchise privileges granted by Congress to only statutory “citizens of the United States**” under 8 U.S.C. §1401. Some of these statutory civil rights parallel the protection of the Bill of Rights (the first 10 Amendments to the Constitution), but by researching the Civil Rights Act along with case law decisions involving those rights, it can be shown that these so-called civil rights do not include the Ninth or Tenth Amendments and have only limited application with regard to Amendments One through Eight.

If you accept any benefit from the federal government or you claim any statutory civil right, you are making an “adhesion contract” with the federal government. You may not be aware of any adhesion contracts but the courts are. The other aspect of such a contract is that you will obey every statute that Congress passes. For example, if you want to be in receipt of the “privilege” of becoming a commissioned officer in the U.S. military, 10 U.S.C. §532\(a\)\(1\) requires that you must be a statutory “citizen of the United States**”. That same statute in paragraph (3) requires that officers must be “of good moral character”. Does supreme ignorance fit the description of “good moral character”? No one other than either an idiot or a liar would claim to be a statutory “citizen of the United States**” if they were born in a Union state outside of the federal zone and domiciled there, based on the content of this section. Does that meet the definition of “good moral character?” We think not! We must also conclude that there are an awful lot of officers in the U.S. military who don't belong there, because the vast majority of them no doubt had to be born inside the Union states instead of inside the federal zone. Wouldn't this make a GREAT subject for a lawsuit: getting most of the officers in the military kicked out of the 1 military because they are not, in fact, "U.S. citizens"? Can you see just how insidious this "privilege-induced slavery" is

 2 that our government uses to trap us into their corrupt jurisdiction? The most distressing part is that it's all based on fraud
 3 and lies, and the government in this case loves being lied to and won't question the lies, because willfully acquiescing to
 4 lies is the only way they can manufacture "taxpayers" and idiots they can govern and have jurisdiction over!

5 Privileged "U.S. citizens" under 8 U.S.C. §1401 are presumed to be operating in the jurisdiction of private commercial law
 6 because that is the jurisdiction of their creator -- Congress. This is evidenced by the existence of various contracts and the 7 use of negotiable instruments. All are products of international law or commercial law [Uniform Commercial Code]. Under
 8 Common Law your intent is important; in a court of equity and contract (commercial law) the only thing that matters is that
 9 you live up to the letter of the contract. Because you have adhesion contracts with Congress, you cannot use the 10 Constitution or Bill of Rights as a defense because it is irrelevant to the contract. As stated previously, the contract says you
 11 will obey every Act of Congress. A federal "U.S. citizen" under 8 U.S.C. §1401 does not have access to Common Law. If 12 you doubt this, appoint a counsel of your choice and under contract who is not licensed by the socialist state to practice law
 13 to represent you in court. Go in front of the federal court and when they ask for his state bar number, tell them the counsel
 14 isn't licensed and doesn't need to be licensed. If they try to dismiss your counsel for not being licensed, cite Article 1,
 15 Section 10 of the Constitution says

16 U.S. Constitution, Article 1, Section 10

17 "No State shall ... pass any Bill of Attainder, ex post facto Law, or Law impairing the Obligation of Contracts,
 18 or grant any Title of Nobility."

19 By removing your counsel, they have effected a Bill of Attainder by penalizing you without a law or even a trial related to 20 attorney licensing for exercising your right to contract. They have in effect created a Title of Nobility for all those who are 21 licensed to practice law in the state. They have also penalized you in effect for exercising your right of free speech in the 22 process of removing the person you chose to be your spokesperson, who is then prevented from representing you. They 23 have done this in furtherance of the private lawyer's labor union called the American Bar Association (ABA).

24 Section 1 of the Fourteenth Amendment says that "citizens of the United States", which we will show later are actually
 25 "nationals" or "nationals of the United States***" under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21), have special "privileges and immunities"
 26 above and beyond those of purely state Citizens, but what exactly are they? The annotated Fourteenth Amendment answers
 27 this question. Below is an excerpt from the annotated Fourteenth Amendment on the "privileges and immunities" of U.S.
 28 citizens:

29 SECTION 1. RIGHTS GUARANTEED: PRIVILEGES AND IMMUNITIES

30 Unique among constitutional provisions, the privileges and immunities clause of the Fourteenth Amendment
 31 enjoys the distinction of having been rendered a "practical nullity" by a single decision of the Supreme Court
 32 issued within five years after its ratification. In the Slaughter-House Cases, 15 a bare majority of the Court
 33 frustrated the aims of the most aggressive sponsors of this clause, to whom was attributed an intention to
 34 centralize "in the hands of the Federal Government large powers hitherto exercised by the States" with a view
 35 to enabling business to develop unimpeded by state interference. This expansive alteration of the federal system
 36 was to have been achieved by converting the rights of the citizens of each State as of the date of the adoption of 37 the Fourteenth Amendment into privileges and immunities of United States citizenship and thereafter
 38 perpetuating this newly defined status quo through judicial condemnation of any state law challenged as
 39 "abridging" any one of the latter privileges. To have fostered such intentions, the Court declared, would have 40 been "to transfer the security and protection of all the civil rights . . . to the Federal Government, . . . to bring 41 within the power of Congress the entire domain of civil rights heretofore belonging exclusively to the States," 42 and to "constitute this court a perpetual censor upon all legislation of the States, on the civil rights of their own
 43 citizens, with authority to nullify such as it did not approve as consistent with those rights, as they existed at the
 44 time of the adoption of this amendment. . . . [The effect of] so great a departure from the structure and spirit of 45 our institutions . . . is to fetter and degrade the State governments by subjecting them to the control of Congress,
 46 in the exercise of powers heretofore universally conceded to them of the most ordinary and fundamental 47 character. . . . We are convinced that no such results were intended by the Congress . . . , nor by the legislatures
 48 . . . which ratified" this amendment, and that the sole "pervading purpose" of this and the other War
 49 Amendments was "the freedom of the slave race."

50 Conformably to these conclusions, the Court advised the New Orleans butchers that the Louisiana statute,
 51 conferring on a single corporation a monopoly of the business of slaughtering cattle, abrogated no rights
 52 possessed by them as United States citizens; insofar as that law interfered with their claimed privilege of 53 pursuing the lawful calling of butchering animals, the privilege thus terminated was merely one of "those which 54 belonged to the citizens of the States as such." Privileges and immunities of state citizenship had been "left to 55 the state governments for security and protection" and had not been placed by this clause "under the special care of the Federal Government." The only privileges which the Fourteenth Amendment protected against state encroachment were declared to be those "which owe their existence to the Federal Government, its National character, its Constitution, or its laws." <sup>16</sup> These privileges, however, had been available to United States citizens and protected from state interference by operation of federal supremacy even prior to the adoption of the Fourteenth Amendment. The Slaughter-House Cases, therefore, reduced the privileges and immunities clause to a superfluous reiteration of a prohibition already operative against the states.

Although the Court has expressed a reluctance to attempt a definitive enumeration of those privileges and immunities of United States citizens which are protected against state encroachment, it nevertheless felt obliged in the Slaughter-House Cases "to suggest some which owe their existence to the Federal Government, its National character, its Constitution, or its laws." <sup>17</sup> Among those which it then identified were the right of access to the seat of Government and to the seaports, subtreasuries, land officers, and courts of justice in the several States, the right to demand protection of the Federal Government on the high seas or abroad, the right of assembly, the privilege of habeas corpus, the right to use the navigable waters of the United States, and rights secured by treaty. In Twining v. New Jersey, <sup>18</sup> the Court recognized "among the rights and privileges" of national citizenship the right to pass freely from State to State, <sup>19</sup> the right to petition Congress for a redress of grievances, <sup>20</sup> the right to vote for national officers, <sup>21</sup> the right to enter public lands, <sup>22</sup> the right to be protected against violence while in the lawful custody of a United States marshal, <sup>23</sup> and the right to inform the United States authorities of violation of its laws. <sup>24</sup> Earlier, in a decision not mentioned in Twining, the Court had also acknowledged that the carrying on of interstate commerce is "a right which every citizen of the United States is entitled to exercise." <sup>25</sup>

In modern times, the Court has continued the minor role accorded to the clause, only occasionally manifesting a disposition to enlarge the restraint which it imposes upon state action. Colgate v. Harvey, <sup>26</sup> which was overruled five years later, <sup>27</sup> represented the first attempt by the Court since adoption of the Fourteenth Amendment to convert the privileges and immunities clause into a source of protection of other than those "interests growing out of the relationship between the citizen and the national government." Here, the Court declared that the right of a citizen resident in one State to contract in another, to transact any lawful business, or to make a loan of money, in any State other than that in which the citizen resides was a privilege of national citizenship which was abridged by a state income tax law excluding from taxable income interest received on money loaned within the State. In Hague v. CIO, <sup>28</sup> two and perhaps three justices thought that freedom to use municipal streets and parks for the dissemination of information concerning provisions of a federal statute and to assemble peacefully therein for discussion of the advantages and opportunities offered by such act was a privilege and immunity of a United States citizen, and in Edwards v. California <sup>29</sup> four Justices were prepared to rely on the clause. <sup>30</sup> In Oyama v. California, <sup>31</sup> in a single sentence the Court agreed with the contention of a native-born youth that a state Alien Land Law, applied to a forfeiture of property purchased in his name with funds advanced by his parent, a Japanese alien ineligible for citizenship and precluded from owning land, deprived him "of his privileges as an American citizen." The right to acquire and retain property had previously not been set forth in any of the enumerations as one of the privileges protected against state abridgment, although a federal statute enacted prior to the proposal and ratification of the Fourteenth Amendment did confer on all citizens the same rights to purchase and hold real property as white citizens enjoyed. <sup>32</sup>

It is important to realize that the status of "citizen of the United States" under Section 1 of the Fourteenth Amendment makes state citizenship "derivative and dependent" upon federal citizenship.

"Thus, the dual character of our citizenship is made plainly apparent. That is to say, a citizen of the United States is ipso facto and at the same time a citizen of the state in which he resides. And while the Fourteenth Amendment does not create a national citizenship, it has the effect of making that citizenship 'paramount and dominant' instead of 'derivative and dependent' upon state citizenship. <sup>3</sup> 'In reviewing the subject,' Chief Justice White said, in the Selective Draft Law Cases, <sup>245 U.S. 366, 377</sup>, 388 S., 389, 38 S.Ct. 159, 165, L.R.A. 1918C, 361, Ann.Cas. 1918B, 856: 'We have hitherto considered it as it has been argued from the point of view of the Constitution as it stood prior to the adoption of the Fourteenth Amendment. But to avoid all misapprehension we briefly direct attention to that (the fourteenth) amendment for the purpose of pointing out, as has been frequently done in the past, how completely it broadened the national scope of the government under the Constitution by causing citizenship of the United States to be paramount and dominant instead of being subordinate [296 U.S. 404, 428] and derivative, and therefore operating as it does upon all the powers conferred by the Constitution leaves no possible support for the contentions made if their want of merit was otherwise not to clearly made manifest.' "

[Colgate v. Harvey, 296 U.S. 404 (1935)]

Five years later, in Madden v. Commonwealth of Kentucky, 309 U.S. 83 (1940), the Supreme Court contradicted itself by overruling Colgate v. Harvey in its majority opinion, but the above does help you to understand how the courts think about statutory "nationals". The court also ruled in Madden that the main goal of the Fourteenth Amendment was to protect Negro slaves in their freedom, and was therefore not intended to apply to the rest of the predominantly white population.

1                   "This Court declared in the Slaughter-House Cases<sup>15</sup> that the Fourteenth Amendment as well as the Thirteenth
 2 and Fifteenth were adopted to protect the negroes in their freedom. This almost contemporaneous
 3 interpretation extended the benefits of the privileges and immunities clause to other rights which are inherent in 4 national citizenship but denied it to those which spring from [309 U.S. 83, 92] state citizenship."

6   4.13.10.8    Definitions of federal citizenship terms

7   We'd like to clarify one more very important point about the meaning of the term "citizen of the United States" based on
 8 the definition of "naturalization" offered earlier. Because "naturalization" is defined statutorily in 8 U.S.C. §1101\(a\)\(23\) as 9 the process of conferring "nationality" rather than "federal U.S. citizen" status, then some people believe that the "citizen
 10 of the United States" that section 1 of the Fourteenth is referring to must actually be that of a "national" rather than "U.S.
 11 citizen". We agree wholeheartedly with this conclusion. Government has deliberately confused definitions to deceive you.

12 There is additional evidence found earlier in section 4.6 which corroborates the view that a "citizen of the United States"
 13 mentioned repeatedly by the Supreme Court is actually a "national" as defined in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21). In that section,
 14 we quoted the Black's Law Dictionary Fourth Edition definition of "National Government" as well as the Supreme Court
 15 case of Chisholm v. Georgia, 2 Dall. (U.S.) 419, 1 L.Ed. 440 (1793) to conclusively show that the "United States" is not a
 16 "nation", but a "federation" of sovereign states. Now if the "United States" is defined as a "federation" and not a "nation",
 17 then what exactly does it mean to say that a person is a "national"? What "nation" are they a "citizen" of under such a
 18 circumstance if it isn't the "United States"? Well, 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) answers this question authoritatively:

19                   TITLE 8 > CHAPTER 12 > SUBCHAPTER I > Sec. 1101.
 20                   Sec. 1101. - Definitions

21                   (a)(21) The term "national" means a person owing permanent allegiance to a state.

22 It's important to realize that federal statutes and most "acts of Congress" are simply municipal legislation that only have
 23 force and effect over the federal zone in most cases. The term "state" in the context of federal statutes, since it is not
 24 capitalized, means a foreign state, which can either be a foreign country or a state of the Union. So it is therefore
 25 reasonable to conclude that a "national" can only mean a person born in a state of the Union or a foreign country to parents
 26 who were also "nationals" and who owes allegiance to the federation of states called the "United States".

27 If you were born in a state of the Union, you are a "national" under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21), and this is so because of section
 28 1 of the Fourteenth Amendment and state law, and not because of any federal statute. The courts of your state, in fact, have 29 the authority under the Law of Nations to declare your "citizen of the United States" status under the Fourteenth 30 Amendment based on your birth certificate. Remember always that Congress wears two hats:

- 31           1. The equivalent of a state government over the federal zone.
- 32           2. An independent contractor for the states of the union that handles external affairs for the entire country only.

33 The laws that Congress writes pertain to one of these two political jurisdictions, and it is often difficult to tell which of 34 these two that a specific federal law applies to. The only thing that federal statutes pertain to in most cases are statutory
 35 federal "U.S. citizens" or "citizens and nationals of the United States" as defined under 8 U.S.C. §1401, which are people
 36 who are born anywhere in the country but domiciled on federal property that is within the federal zone, because Congress is 37 the municipal "city hall" for the federal zone. The "States" they legislate for in this capacity are federal "States", which are 38 in fact territories and possessions of the United States such as Guam and Puerto Rico. Federal statutes and the U.S. Codes
 39 do not and cannot address what happens to people who are born in a state of the Union because Congress has no police
 40 power or legislative jurisdiction over states of the Union for the vast majority of subject matters. All legislation and 41 statutes of the states, including the power of taxation of internal commerce, are "plenary" and exclusive within their own
 42 respective territorial jurisdictions. Therefore, don't go looking for a federal statute that confers citizenship upon you as 43 someone who was born in a state of the Union, because there isn't one! No government is authorized to write legislation
 44 that operates outside its territory, which is called "extraterritorial legislation".

45                   "The Constitution of the United States [before the Fourteenth Amendment] does not declare who are and who
 46 are not its citizens, nor does it attempt to describe the constituent elements of citizenship; it leaves that quality
 47 where it found it, resting upon the fact of home birth and upon the laws of the several states."
 48 [8 U.S.C. §1401, Notes]

1 A “citizen” in the context of most federal statutes is someone who is either born or naturalized in federal territory within the
2 federal “United States” (federal zone). A “national”, however, is someone who was born anywhere within the country
3 called the “United States”. A “citizen” in state statutes and regulations usually refers to someone who is a state citizen, and
4 not necessarily a federal citizen. These points are very important to remember as you read through this book.

5 So how do we conclusively relate what a “citizen of the United States” is under the Fourteenth Amendment to a specific
6 citizenship status found in federal statutes? We have to look at Title 8, Aliens and Nationality and compare the terms they
7 use to describe each and reach our own conclusions, because the government gives us absolutely no help doing this. Does
8 it surprise you that the Master doesn’t want to educate the slaves how to take off their chains by eliminating their captivity
9 to “words of art”? Title 8 of the U.S. Code does not even define “U.S. citizen” and only defines the term “citizens and 10 nationals of the United States” in 8 U.S.C. §1401 or “nationals but not citizens of the United States at birth” in 8 U.S.C.
11 §1408. Upon trying to resolve the distinctions between these two terms and how they relate to the term “citizen of the 12 United States” used in section 1 of the Fourteenth Amendment, we searched diligently for authorities and found no
13 authority or cite in federal statutes that makes the term “citizens and nationals of the United States” used in 8 U.S.C. §1401
14 equivalent to the term “citizen of the United States” used in section 1 of the Fourteenth Amendment or the term “citizen”
15 used in the 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1.

16 Both the IRC in Subtitle A of Title 26 and Title 8 of the U.S.C. use equivalent definitions for “United States” (see 26
17 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10), 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(38), and 8 C.F.R. §215.1(f)), and all three mean the federal zone only.
18 The “citizen” appearing in 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1, is a federal “U.S. citizen” only, which is defined in 26 C.F.R. §31.3121(e)-1 as
19 a person born in Puerto Rico, Virgin Islands, Guam, or American Samoa, which are all territories or possessions of the 20 United States. The “citizens and nationals of the United States” appearing in the 8 U.S.C. §1401 are the same federal 21 “U.S.** citizens” as that appearing in Title 26 and are equivalent. If you are a “national” or “state national” born in a state
22 of the Union, you should never admit to being a “U.S. citizen” or a “citizen of the United States” under federal statutes or 23 the Internal Revenue Code because people born in states of the Union are the equivalent of a “National” under federal 24 statutes or “citizens of the United States” under the Fourteenth Amendment.

25 We believe the confusion the government has created by mixing up the meanings of “citizenship” and “nationality” in 26 federal statutes and cases construing them is deliberate, and is meant to help induce ignorant Americans everywhere into
27 falsely claiming they are “U.S. citizens” on their tax returns and voter registration, which is defined as an entirely different
28 type of citizenship under Title 26 than the one referred to in either the Fourteenth Amendment as “citizens of the United 29 States” or the cases construing it that we mention in this section. We will now summarize our findings and research in 30 graphical form to make the definitions and distinctions we have just made crystal clear:
31

Table 4-34: Summary of findings on meaning of citizenship

Term	U.S. Supreme Court	Title 8: Aliens and Nationality	Title 26: Internal Revenue Code
“U.S. national”	Not defined	Defined in 8 U.S.C. §1102(a)(22) and 8 U.S.C. §1408.	Not defined in Title 26 but is equivalent to “nonresident alien” as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(B).
“national”	Not defined	Defined in 8 U.S.C. §1102(a)(22) and 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21).	Not defined in Title 26 but is equivalent to “nonresident alien” as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(B).
“citizen”	Not explicitly defined by the Supreme Court.	Not defined in Title 8.	Defined in 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1(c).
“citizen of the United States”	Means a “national” under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) but not a statutory “U.S. citizen” in the Internal Revenue Code, which is defined in 26 U.S.C. §3121(e) See: 1. Slaughter-House Cases, 83 U.S. 36 (1873) 2. U.S. v. Wong Kim Ark, 169 U.S. 649 (1898)	Not defined separately in Title 8. 8 U.S.C. §1401 defines “nationals and citizens of the United States at birth” but this type of citizen is a federal zone citizen ONLY . This is because federal statutes only apply to federal territory. This is NOT the same as a “citizen of the United States” defined by the Supreme Court.	Not defined in Title 26.
“nationals and citizens of the United States at birth”	Not explicitly defined by the Supreme Court.	Defined in 8 U.S.C. §1401. NOT the same as Section 1 of Fourteenth Amendment.	Not defined in Title 26.

Based on the above, there is no legal basis to conclude that a “citizen of the United States***” under the tax code at 26 C.F.R. §31.3121(e)-1 and a “citizen of the United States***” as used by the Supreme Court or the Fourteenth Amendment, are equivalent because nowhere in the law are they made equivalent, and each depends on a different definition of “United States”. However, if you read through court cases on citizenship, you will find that the federal courts like to create a false “presumption” that they are equivalent in order to help expand federal jurisdiction. If you want to understand the meanings of the terms provided above, you will therefore have to read through all of the authorities cited above and convince yourself of the validity of the table.

If you look closely at 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1(c) where income taxes are “imposed”, you will find that it does not use or define “U.S. citizen” but does refer to “citizens”. Remember that under 26 U.S.C. §7806(b), the title of a section or subsection in the Internal Revenue Code has no legal significance. Since that regulation implements 26 U.S.C. §1, which imposes the tax on “individuals”, one can “presume” but not conclusively prove that the regulation is describing what a “U.S. citizen” is under 8 U.S.C. §1401. Keep in mind, however, that the term “citizen” refers to the federal United States** in the Internal Revenue Code because of the definition it depends on in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10). Nowhere in Titles 8 or 26, however, are the terms “U.S. citizen” and “citizen of the United States” ever correlated or identified as being equivalent, but we must conclude that they are the same because the definition of “United States” found in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(38) are equivalent and include only the District of Columbia and the territories and possessions of the United States.

4.13.10.9 Further Study

If you want to know who the Social Security Administration thinks is a “U.S. citizen”, refer to the link below, which is a section from the SSA’s Program Operation Manual System (POMS). Note that all the references in the POMS manual we are about to cite below use the term “State” and “United States” as meaning federal States and the federal United States** only. The link below from POMS is entitled “Who is a U.S. citizen”:

<http://policy.ssa.gov/poms.nsf/lnx/0200303120-A>

<http://policy.ssa.gov/poms.nsf/lnx/0300204015>

And finally, another useful section from the POMS manual on the SSA website is entitled “GN 00303.300 Establishing U.S. Citizenship for All SSA Programs” at:

In conclusion, we need not be afraid because we are not legally obligated to be federal statutory citizens or “U.S.** citizens” and can choose to be a constitutional “citizen of the United States***” (or natural born Sovereign). State Citizens are also called “non-residents” in federal statutes. Our right of choosing our statutory federal citizenship is absolute and cannot be abridged. One can become a “national of the United States***” (a state only citizen) without being a statutory “citizen of the United States**” (a federal statutory citizen). That is why we repeatedly advise expatriating from federal United States** citizenship in section 2.5.3.13 of the Sovereignty Forms and Instructions Manual, Form #10.005.

WARNING: The feds apparently are so sure that you will be angry and violent after finding out the devious scam they played with “U.S. citizenship” that they made it illegal to be a gun dealer if you were once a U.S. citizen and renounced your statutory “U.S. citizen” status under 8 U.S.C. §1401 to become a “national” under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21)! Take a look at 18 U.S.C. §922\(g\)\(7\) to see for yourself at:

<http://www4.law.cornell.edu/uscode/18/922.html>

Note that because Constitutional rights only apply in the sovereign 50 Union states, this statute can only apply inside the federal zone.

For further detailed information on federal citizenship, we refer you to section 3.8.10 on the Fourteenth Amendment.

4.13.11 Citizenship and all political rights are INVOLUNTARILY exercised and therefore CANNOT be taxable and cannot be called “privileges”

Earlier in section 4.13.8 on Federal (U.S.) citizens, we quoted the U.S. Supreme Court as saying that federal and state citizenship were “voluntary”. Here is the quote:

“The citizen cannot complain, because he has voluntarily submitted himself to such a form of government. He owes allegiance to the two departments, so to speak, and within their respective spheres must pay the penalties which each exacts for disobedience to its laws. In return, he can demand protection from each within its own jurisdiction.”

And here is another similar quote by the same U.S. Supreme Court:

“A State does not owe its origin to the Government of the United States, in the highest or in any of its branches. It was in existence before it. It derives its authority from the same pure and sacred source as itself: The voluntary and deliberate choice of the people...A State is altogether exempt from the jurisdiction of the Courts of the United States, or from any other exterior authority, unless in the special instances when the general Government has power derived from the Constitution itself.”
[Chisholm v. Georgia, 2 Dall. (U.S.) 419 (Dall.) (1793)]

This section will examine this rather flawed premise of the U.S. Supreme Court in extreme detail to very clearly prove beyond any doubt not only that citizenship is not and cannot be “voluntary” or “consensual”, but also that all the “political rights” that circumscribe how we exercise our citizenship are in fact compelled and involuntary. By proving this flawed premise of the U.S. Supreme Court incorrect, we open up the following intriguing possibilities:

1. Contrary to what the U.S. Supreme Court said above, those misguided individuals who do choose to become second class “U.S. citizens” do have a right to complain because their participation is coerced and involuntary.
2. We have a right to avoid government compulsion and compulsion from our fellow citizens by refusing to be “citizens” and refusing to exercise our civic duties.
3. If we choose to not participate as citizens in society, then the reward is not being subject to the laws of the government, which in most cases are dishonest and corrupt and covetous anyway. We are citizens of heaven and not of earth anyway (see Phil. 3:20). Once we are not subject to the laws of a society, it no longer matters what our fellow citizens do to the law to corrupt it for their own personal benefit, because we are sovereigns who are immune from government regulation for the most part. If we aren't paying taxes and the government can't do anything to control or regulate us, does it matter whether we have "taxation without representation"?

What is a "political right"? Below is the definition of that term from Black's Law Dictionary:

Political rights. Those which may be exercised in the formation or administration of the government. Rights of citizens established or recognized by constitutions which give them the power to participate directly or indirectly in the establishment or administration of the government.
[Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1159]

Political rights include such things as:

Table 4-35: Political rights

Political right	Category
Voting	Representation
Jury service	Representation
Serving in or running for political office	Representation
Paying taxes	Taxation

The concept of political rights and citizenship are tied together, and the reason they are tied together is that taxation and representation must be tied together in order to have a stable government. When taxation and representation are not tied together, governments become unstable and the people will eventually revolt. We therefore show in the above table the correlation between political rights on the left, and taxation and representation on the right. Remember that one of the main reasons for the American Revolution was to protest "taxation without representation". The British colonies that comprised America at the time were paying taxes but had no say in their government in how those taxes were spent, and they didn't like it so they started a revolution against Britain: the American Revolution! The representation part of political rights comes from voting, jury service, and serving in political office. The definition of "citizen" from the legal dictionary confirms the linkage between political rights and citizenship:

citizen. One who, under the Constitution and laws of the United States, or of a particular state, is a member of the political community, owing allegiance and being entitled to the enjoyment of full civil rights. All persons born or naturalized in the United States, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the United States and of the state wherein they reside. U.S. Const., 14th Amend. See Citizenship.

"Citizens" are members of a political community who, in their associated capacity, have established or submitted themselves to the dominion of a government for the promotion of their general welfare and the protection of their individual as well as collective rights. Herriott v. City of Seattle, 81 Wash.2d. 48, 500 P.2d. 101, 109.

The term may include or apply to children of alien parents from in United States, Von Schwerdtmer v. Piper, D.C.Md., 23 F.2d. 862, 863; U.S. v. Minoru Yasui, D.C.Or., 48 F.Supp. 40, 54; children of American citizens born outside United States, Haaland v. Attorney General of United States, D.C.Md., 42 F.Supp. 13, 22; Indians, United States v. Hester, C.C.A.Okl., 137 F.2d. 145, 147; National Banks, American Surety Co. v. Bank of California, C.C.A.Or., 133 F.2d. 160, 162; nonresident who has qualified as administratrix of estate of deceased resident, Hunt v. Noll, C.C.A.Tenn., 112 F.2d. 288, 289. However, neither the United States nor a state is a citizen for purposes of diversity jurisdiction. Jizemerjian v. Dept of Air Force, 457 F.Supp. 820. On the other hand, municipalities and other local governments are deemed to be citizens. Rieser v. District of Columbia, 563 F.2d. 462. A corporation is not a citizen for purposes of privileges and immunities clause of the Fourteenth Amendment. D.D.B. Realty Corp. v. Merrill, 232 F.Supp. 629, 637.

Under diversity statute [28 U.S.C. §1332], which mirrors U.S. Const. Article III's diversity clause, a person is a "citizen of a state" if he or she is a citizen of the United States and a domiciliary of a state of the United States. Gibbons v. Udaras na Gaeltachta, D.C.N.Y., 549 F.Supp. 1094, 1116.
[Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 244]

Note from above definition of "citizen" that when you become a citizen, you choose to subject yourself to the laws of the political community or jurisdiction of which you are part. This is very important. We speculate that the reasoning behind this requirement is that you can't have the protection of laws that you yourself refuse to obey, because this would be hypocritical. In the case of federal statutes and "legislative jurisdiction" and "Acts of Congress", of which the Internal

1 Revenue Code is a part, however, you don't need to be subject to them because for the most part, they only apply inside the
2 federal zone anyway, and most Americans don't live in the federal zone.

3 The other thing that the above definition of "citizen" helps us to understand is that our government has defined citizenship
4 such that political rights depend on our citizenship status, while the rest of our rights depend on where we reside. Look at 5 these excerpts from the definition of "citizen" again:

6 "...owing allegiance and being entitled to the enjoyment of full civil rights..."

7 "Citizens' are members of a political community who... submitted themselves to the dominion of a
8 government for the promotion of their general welfare and the protection of their individual as well as
9 collective rights. Herriott v. City of Seattle, 81 Wash.2d. 48, 500 P.2d. 101, 109."

10 The implication of the above definition of "citizen" is that unless we are citizens, we do not have full civil rights. Based on 11 the logic above, if we are not citizens, our civil rights are protected by (but we are not "subject to" or "subservient to") the
12 Bill of Rights and the rest of the Constitution, but we can only get political rights by becoming citizens, based on the 13 government's definition of "citizen" and "political rights". There is a paradox here folks. Can you see it? We should 14 always be looking for paradoxes and "cognitive dissonance" of this kind in order to properly challenge jurisdiction.
15 Remember once again:

16 "If it doesn't make sense, it's probably because politics is involved."

17 Here is "the rest of the story", as Paul Harvey likes to say, that the government won't tell you. Remember that from earlier
18 discussions in sections 4.2 through 4.4.2, a right is not something the government can interfere with or take away or
19 regulate or revoke or that is subject to their discretion or any aspect of our voluntary behavior. If the existence of our
20 rights is conditional or based on any aspect of government discretion, then they aren't rights, but privileges disguised as
21 rights! The government can lawfully interfere with and regulate the exercise of privileges, but not with rights.
22 Consequently, what our deceitful government calls "political rights" in the definition above really aren't "rights" at all, but
23 "privileges" which depend on the voluntary decision to accept statutory citizenship (which is a behavior) and the privileges
24 that go with statutory citizenship. Consequently, our government has made both citizenship and political participation in 25 the affairs of government into a statutory privilege and not a right.

26 The most important thing that we should have learned from this chapter is that whenever we receive a government privilege
27 there will be strings attached that will destroy our rights. In this case, receipt of the "citizenship" privilege makes us subject
28 to taxation and regulation and jurisdiction by the federal government, none of which we need or want, nor will such status
29 protect or enhance our rights or liberties, but rather destroy them. We repeat the quote from the beginning of section 4.5.12
30 to make this point crystal clear:

31 "In the matter of taxation, every privilege is an injustice."
32 [Voltaire ]

33 Your covetous politicians are trying to fool you into thinking that it wasn't a "privilege" you accepted by calling it
34 "political rights", but we have already established that it cannot be a right if it is conditioned on anything or on any aspect
35 of your voluntary behavior, including the choice to become a "citizen". Once again, our deceitful government has 36 entrapped us with word games. If they are going to call it a "political right", then they better treat it as right and remove the 37 requirement to be a citizen in order to exercise that right, so that we really do have "rights" instead of "privileges"
38 masquerading as "counterfeit rights". As I like to say:

39 If you want people to swallow a piece of shit, you have to wrap it in a pretty package by coating it in chocolate
40 and calling it a "Babe Ruth" candy bar.

41 In this case, the "chocolate coating" for the "shit" you don't want to swallow called "citizenship" is the word "right" in 42 "political rights"! Please pardon our language, but we just couldn't resist this very appropriate metaphor!

43 One of our readers, after reading the foregoing analysis of "citizenship" and "political rights", responded by saying:

44 "But how are you going to keep foreigners from voting so they don't commit treason and trash the country?"

The answer is that so long as people are born in United States*** of America, not United States** the federal zone, and as long as they have allegiance to the United States*** of America, rather than the federal corporation called the United States**, then they should be able to vote because they have the best interests of the country in mind when they have allegiance to it. The status of being both born in the United States*** of America and having allegiance to it, collectively, is called “U.S. nationality”, and not “U.S. citizenship”, and you will find out later in section 4.13.12 what being a “national” means, why that is the status you want to have, and why you don’t have to pay taxes or be in receipt of government privileges to have that status. You will also find out in that section that most states have colluded to deprive you of your rights by passing laws to force you to become a “U.S. citizen” in order to exercise political rights such as voting or serving on jury duty. The federal government has added to this injury by messing with the passport application forms to make it look like you have to be a privileged “U.S. citizen” in order to get a U.S. passport, but this also is not a lawful requirement. The states and the federal government have conspired against your rights in this fashion because they want to:

- Force you to lie to them in saying that you are a “U.S. citizen”, in direct violation of the ten commandments, which says in Exodus 20:16 that we shall not bear false witness. Remember our analysis in section 4.13.10.1: to be a “U.S. citizen”, you must be born in the federal United States (federal zone) in an area subject to the sovereignty of the United States Government under Article 1, Section 8, Clause 17 of the Constitution. Most Americans are not born there and more properly are classified as “nationals” born outside the federal United States**.
- Break down the separation of powers between the federal and state governments, and force you to serve two masters instead of one, in direct violation of the bible, Luke 16:13 (“...no man can serve two masters..”). The lie you committed by simultaneously declaring yourself to be both a U.S. and a state citizen also violates the rulings of the Supreme Court in U.S. v. Lopez, 514 U.S. 549 (1995) and the intent of the constitution, which says:

We start with first principles. The Constitution creates a Federal Government of enumerated powers. See U.S. Const., Art. I, § 8. As James Madison wrote, “[t]he powers delegated by the proposed Constitution to the federal government are few and defined. Those which are to remain in the State governments are numerous and indefinite.” The Federalist No. 45, pp. 292-293 (C. Rossiter ed. 1961). This constitutionally mandated division of authority "was adopted by the Framers to ensure protection of our fundamental liberties." Gregory v. Ashcroft, 501 U.S. 452, 458 (1991) (internal quotation marks omitted). "Just as the separation and independence of the coordinate branches of the Federal Government serves to prevent the accumulation of excessive power in any one branch, a healthy balance of power between the States and the Federal Government will reduce the risk of tyranny and abuse from either front." Ibid.

Remember that by default, all federal legislation and “Acts of Congress” only apply inside the federal zone, and we will explain this matter in great detail in section 5.2 and subsections. But if the thieves and robbers who are our elected leaders can make you a “citizen” in receipt of “privileges”, then they can make you subject to their laws even if you don’t live on their property. By doing so, they can make you into property and a franchise of the United States government and treat you as though you occupy the federal zone anyway. Sneaky, huh? At that point, these covetous and arrogant thugs and murderers have succeeded in breaking down the wall of separation between the state and federal jurisdictions at great injury to your liberties. They have then forced you to serve two masters in direct violation of the bible in Luke 16:13. Ultimately, this leads to socialism, tyranny, and an oppression of and conspiracy against your constitutional rights, as we explain throughout this book.

- Once the government “thugs”, murderers, and thieves coax you into the federal zone, they can then legally deprive you of your constitutional rights and make you a slave of income taxes and not be held accountable by the courts or the law for their actions of trespass on your person, property, and liberty. The constitution and bill of rights, remember, do not apply in the federal zone. That is why we call the federal zone the “plunder and fraud” zone.

Justice Harlan of the Supreme Court warned us that this was going to happen in his dissenting opinion found in Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 (1901):

“The idea prevails with some, indeed it has found expression in arguments at the bar, that we have in this country substantially two national governments; one to be maintained under the Constitution, with all of its restrictions; the other to be maintained by Congress outside the independently of that instrument, by exercising such powers [of absolutism] as other nations of the earth are accustomed to.. I take leave to say that, if the principles thus announced should ever receive the sanction of a majority of this court, a radical and mischievous change in our system of government will result. We will, in that event, pass from the era of constitutional liberty guarded and protected by a written constitution into an era of legislative absolutism.. It will be an evil day for American liberty if the theory of a government outside the supreme law of the land”

finds lodgment in our constitutional jurisprudence. No higher duty rests upon this court than to exert its full authority to prevent all violation of the principles of the Constitution.

[Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 (1901)]

When are people going to wake up? We believe the foregoing analysis also explains why there is a long term trend toward reduced participation of the people in the political process. Most states require you to be a “U.S. citizens” to vote and they do it so they can use voting as a way to get jurisdiction to impose income taxes. If corrupt politicians and lawyers writing our state laws have forced the people to give up their constitutional rights and their sovereignty and be subject to unwanted socialist federal jurisdiction in order to participate in the political process and have “political rights”, is it any wonder that they no longer wish to participate? If our state governments sincerely want to fix the problem of low voter turnout and people being unwilling to serve on jury duty, then what they need to do is:

1. Admit in their election literature that most people are “nationals” and not “U.S. citizens”.
2. Remove the legal requirement to be a “U.S. citizen” in order to vote or serve on jury duty. Instead, make the requirement that they must be “nationals” instead, under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21).
3. Tell people that by serving on jury duty and participating in elections, they are defending their liberty and that if they don’t, the government and the laws will become corrupted. The state should remind people that keeping our government and the state laws honest and limited in power is everyone’s job.

Of course, if the states did this, most of them would lose their jurisdiction to impose state income taxes. Don’t hold your breath waiting for them to do the honorable thing documented above, because you will die of suffocation!

“The love of money is the root of all evil.”

[1 Tim. 6:10, Bible, NKJV]

In satisfying the goals of this section on the subject of political rights, we rely mainly upon the writings of Lysander Spooner and his brilliant essay entitled No Treason: The Constitution of No Authority, Lysander Spooner available on our website at:

<http://famguardian.org/PublishedAuthors/Indiv/SpoonerLysander/NoTreason.htm>

In the above essay, Lysander Spooner uses reason and common sense alone to examine the two most important aspects of citizenship, that of voting and paying taxes, and concludes that the only reason people do these things is for selfish reasons and in defense of their personal liberties from what he aptly calls “bands of robbers, tyrants, and murderers” who he says inhabit “the government”. His analysis is so compelling and indisputable that we repeat it here for your benefit and edification. His essay is also so irreverent towards the government and public “servants” (tyrants) that it is funny!

What Lysander does is simply prove that the exercise of civic responsibility in the form of voting and payment of taxes are done under compulsion from the government and under the implied influence and duress and coercion by other of his fellow citizens within a competitive and dog-eat-dog, democracy, who will trample his natural rights if he isn’t politically involved and doesn’t defend those rights by vigilantly exercising all of his civic responsibilities.

“voluntary. Unconstrained by interference; unimpelled by another’s influence; spontaneous; acting of oneself. Coker v. State, 199 Ga. 20, 33 S.E.2d. 171, 174. Done by design or intention. Proceeding from the free and unrestrained will of the person. Produced in or by an act of choice. Resulting from free choice, without compulsion or solicitation. The word, especially in statutes, often implies knowledge of essential facts. Without valuable consideration; gratuitous, as a voluntary conveyance. Also, having a merely nominal consideration; as, a voluntary deed.”

[Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1575]

In the next few subsections, we’ll examine each aspect of political rights individually. However, before we start looking at the trees, consider the forest and the bigger picture. For instance, have you ever considered that our life and our existence itself is involuntary? We never asked to be here: our parents chose to put us here without our consent or involvement. Life was an involuntary gift from our parents to us and we couldn’t choose whether we wanted it or not before we received it. Our very existence is involuntary and nonconsensual! Everything we do after we are born and come into existence in order to maintain and protect a life that we never asked for to begin with is involuntary, because our very life is involuntary. This life, in fact, is a “death sentence” by God Himself for the original sin of Adam and Eve documented in the bible in the book

1 of Genesis in chapter 3. Because Adam and Eve sinned by disobeying God and eating the fruit, and because the “wages of
 2 sin is death” (Romans 6:23), then His sentence was a death sentence. Before that sentence, Adam and Eve were immortal.
 3 In that context, God was the “judge” who administered His righteous death sentence according to His Laws. Recall also
 4 that the Fifth Amendment of our Constitution prohibits double jeopardy, which is two trials and two sentences for the same
 5 crime. If God already sentenced us to death for our sin, then the Fifth amendment is violated if the government tries to 6 punish us a second time with direct taxes in the process of toiling to sustain and support a life we never asked for to begin 7 with.

8 Remember the definition of “voluntary” above: “Unconstrained by interference; unimpelled by another’s influence”. In
 9 this case, that unwanted influence came from a combination of our parents bringing us into existence, and God allowing
 10 them to do that. Every other argument about political rights derives from this higher argument and is a product of reason
 11 and common sense, which are rare entities indeed in today’s society and especially among democratic candidates. We have 12 an article on our Life web page of our website from the French Supreme Court where one individual born with birth defects
 13 sued his doctor for the right to NOT be born because it was suffering for him! See the article for yourself:

14 <http://famguardian.org/Subjects/AbortionCloning/News/RightNotToBeBorn.htm>

15 Common sense also confirms the validity of this premise. For instance, many parents choose not to have children because 16 they don’t want to force their children to undergo poverty or an unpleasant lifestyle in a corrupted or crowded society.
 17 Note that word “force”. That argument applies to the author, for instance. Why would I want to bring more willing federal 18 slaves and serfs to an illegal income tax into the world to serve a corrupted government unless and until our tax system is 19 reformed?

20 As yet another example of why life is involuntary, the rate of teen suicide in America today is the highest it has ever been.
 21 Those teens who choose suicide have chosen to give back a gift from their parents that they apparently don’t appreciate or
 22 want. We would argue that the reason these teens are committing suicide is because our public/government schools have
 23 become antiseptic prison houses devoid of God or any spiritual training. They have become training camps to brainwash
 24 gullible youth into becoming federal serfs. Our public schools are fool factories where psychologists are making children
 25 into drug addicts and forcing them in unprecedented numbers to take mind altering drugs to make them submissive to 26 authority. Nonconformity and questioning of authority is punished, not encouraged or developed as the product of an 27 inquisitive and sovereign mind and person.

28 If you would like to look at what the citizenship requirements for various political rights are within your state, we have 29 compiled a listing by state at the web address below:

31 4.13.11.1 Voting<sup>182</sup>

32 All the voting that has ever taken place under the Constitution, has been of such a kind that it not only did not pledge the 33 whole people to support the Constitution, but it did not even pledge any one of them to do so, as the following 34 considerations show.

35 1. In the very nature of things, the act of voting could bind nobody but the actual voters. But owing to the property
 36 qualifications required, it is probable that, during the first twenty or thirty years under the Constitution, not more than one-
 37 tenth, fifteenth, or perhaps twentieth of the whole population (black and white, men, women, and minors) were permitted to 38 vote. Consequently, so far as voting was concerned, not more than one-tenth, fifteenth, or twentieth of those then existing,
 39 could have incurred any obligation to support the Constitution.

40 At the present time [1869], it is probable that not more than one-sixth of the whole population are permitted to vote.
 41 Consequently, so far as voting is concerned, the other five-sixths can have given no pledge that they will support the 42 Constitution.

2. Of the one-sixth that are permitted to vote, probably not more than two-thirds (about one-ninth of the whole population) have usually voted. Many never vote at all. Many vote only once in two, three, five, or ten years, in periods of great excitement.

No one, by voting, can be said to pledge himself for any longer period than that for which he votes. If, for example, I vote for an officer who is to hold his office for only a year, I cannot be said to have thereby pledged myself to support the government beyond that term. Therefore, on the ground of actual voting, it probably cannot be said that more than one-ninth or one-eighth, of the whole population are usually under any pledge to support the Constitution. [In recent years, since 1940, the number of voters in elections has usually fluctuated between one-third and two-fifths of the populace.]

3. It cannot be said that, by voting, a man pledges himself to support the Constitution, unless the act of voting be a perfectly voluntary one on his part. Yet the act of voting cannot properly be called a voluntary one on the part of any very large number of those who do vote. It is rather a measure of necessity imposed upon them by others, than one of their own choice. On this point I repeat what was said in a former number, viz.:

"In truth, in the case of individuals, their actual voting is not to be taken as proof of consent, even for the time being. On the contrary, it is to be considered that, without his consent having even been asked a man finds himself environed by a government that he cannot resist; a government that forces him to pay money, render service, and forego the exercise of many of his natural rights, under peril of weighty punishments. He sees, too, that other men practice this tyranny over him by the use of the ballot. He sees further, that, if he will but use the ballot himself, he has some chance of relieving himself from this tyranny of others, by subjecting them to his own. In short, he finds himself, without his consent, so situated that, if he use the ballot, he may become a master; if he does not use it, he must become a slave. And he has no other alternative than these two. In self-defence, he attempts the former. His case is analogous to that of a man who has been forced into battle, where he must either kill others, or be killed himself. Because, to save his own life in battle, a man takes the lives of his opponents, it is not to be inferred that the battle is one of his own choosing. Neither in contests with the ballot -- which is a mere substitute for a bullet -- because, as his only chance of self-preservation, a man uses a ballot, is it to be inferred that the contest is one into which he voluntarily entered; that he voluntarily set up all his own natural rights, as a stake against those of others, to be lost or won by the mere power of numbers. On the contrary, it is to be considered that, in an exigency into which he had been forced by others, and in which no other means of self-defence offered, he, as a matter of necessity, used the only one that was left to him.

"Doubtless the most miserable of men, under the most oppressive government in the world, if allowed the ballot, would use it, if they could see any chance of thereby meliorating their condition. But it would not, therefore, be a legitimate inference that the government itself, that crushes them, was one which they had voluntarily set up, or even consented to.

"Therefore, a man's voting under the Constitution of the United States, is not to be taken as evidence that he ever freely assented to the Constitution, even for the time being. Consequently we have no proof that any very large portion, even of the actual voters of the United States, ever really and voluntarily consented to the Constitution, EVEN FOR THE TIME BEING. Nor can we ever have such proof, until every man is left perfectly free to consent, or not, without thereby subjecting himself or his property to be disturbed or injured by others."

As we can have no legal knowledge as to who votes from choice, and who from the necessity thus forced upon him, we can have no legal knowledge, as to any particular individual, that he voted from choice; or, consequently, that by voting, he consented, or pledged himself, to support the government. Legally speaking, therefore, the act of voting utterly fails to pledge ANY ONE to support the government. It utterly fails to prove that the government rests upon the voluntary support of anybody. On general principles of law and reason, it cannot be said that the government has any voluntary supporters at all, until it can be distinctly shown who its voluntary supporters are.

4. As taxation is made compulsory on all, whether they vote or not, a large proportion of those who vote, no doubt do so to prevent their own money being used against themselves; when, in fact, they would have gladly abstained from voting, if they could thereby have saved themselves from taxation alone, to say nothing of being saved from all the other usurpations and tyrannies of the government. To take a man's property without his consent, and then to infer his consent because he attempts, by voting, to prevent that property from being used to his injury, is a very insufficient proof of his consent to support the Constitution. It is, in fact, no proof at all. And as we can have no legal knowledge as to who the particular individuals are, if there are any, who are willing to be taxed for the sake of voting, we can have no legal knowledge that any particular individual consents to be taxed for the sake of voting; or, consequently, consents to support the Constitution.

5. At nearly all elections, votes are given for various candidates for the same office. Those who vote for the unsuccessful candidates cannot properly be said to have voted to sustain the Constitution. They may, with more reason, be supposed to have voted, not to support the Constitution, but specially to prevent the tyranny which they anticipate the successful

1 candidate intends to practice upon them under color of the Constitution; and therefore may reasonably be supposed to have
2 voted against the Constitution itself. This supposition is the more reasonable, inasmuch as such voting is the only mode
3 allowed to them of expressing their dissent to the Constitution.

4 6. Many votes are usually given for candidates who have no prospect of success. Those who give such votes may 5 reasonably be supposed to have voted as they did, with a special intention, not to support, but to obstruct the execution of,
6 the Constitution; and, therefore, against the Constitution itself.

7 7. As all the different votes are given secretly (by secret ballot), there is no legal means of knowing, from the votes
8 themselves, who votes for, and who votes against, the Constitution. Therefore, voting affords no legal evidence that any 9 particular individual supports the Constitution. And where there can be no legal evidence that any particular individual
10 supports the Constitution, it cannot legally be said that anybody supports it. It is clearly impossible to have any legal proof
11 of the intentions of large numbers of men, where there can be no legal proof of the intentions of any particular one of them.

12 8. There being no legal proof of any man's intentions, in voting, we can only conjecture them. As a conjecture, it is 13 probable, that a very large proportion of those who vote, do so on this principle, viz., that if, by voting, they could but get
14 the government into their own hands (or that of their friends), and use its powers against their opponents, they would then
15 willingly support the Constitution; but if their opponents are to have the power, and use it against them, then they would 16 NOT willingly support the Constitution.

17 In short, men's voluntary support of the Constitution is doubtless, in most cases, wholly contingent upon the question
18 whether, by means of the Constitution, they can make themselves masters, or are to be made slaves.

19 Such contingent consent as that is, in law and reason, no consent at all.

20 9. As everybody who supports the Constitution by voting (if there are any such) does so secretly (by secret ballot), and in a
21 way to avoid all personal responsibility for the acts of his agents or representatives, it cannot legally or reasonably be said
22 that anybody at all supports the Constitution by voting. No man can reasonably or legally be said to do such a thing as 23 assent to, or support, the Constitution, unless he does it openly, and in a way to make himself personally responsible for the 24 acts of his agents, so long as they act within the limits of the power he delegates to them.

25 10. As all voting is secret (by secret ballot), and as all secret governments are necessarily only secret bands of robbers,
26 tyrants, and murderers, the general fact that our government is practically carried on by means of such voting, only proves
27 that there is among us a secret band of robbers, tyrants, and murderers, whose purpose is to rob, enslave, and, so far as
28 necessary to accomplish their purposes, murder, the rest of the people. The simple fact of the existence of such a band does
29 nothing towards proving that "the people of the United States," or any one of them, voluntarily supports the Constitution.

30 For all the reasons that have now been given, voting furnishes no legal evidence as to who the particular individuals are (if 31 there are any), who voluntarily support the Constitution. It therefore furnishes no legal evidence that anybody supports it 32 voluntarily.

33 So far, therefore, as voting is concerned, the Constitution, legally speaking, has no supporters at all.

34 And, as a matter of fact, there is not the slightest probability that the Constitution has a single bona fide supporter in the 35 country. That is to say, there is not the slightest probability that there is a single man in the country, who both understands 36 what the Constitution really is, and sincerely supports it for what it really is.

37 The ostensible supporters of the Constitution, like the ostensible supporters of most other governments, are made up of 38 three classes, viz.: 1. Knaves, a numerous and active class, who see in the government an instrument which they can use for 39 their own aggrandizement or wealth. 2. Dupes -- a large class, no doubt -- each of whom, because he is allowed one voice
40 out of millions in deciding what he may do with his own person and his own property, and because he is permitted to have
41 the same voice in robbing, enslaving, and murdering others, that others have in robbing, enslaving, and murdering himself,
42 is stupid enough to imagine that he is a "free man," a "sovereign"; that this is "a free government"; "a government of equal 43 rights," "the best government on earth,"<sup>183</sup> and such like absurdities. 3. A class who have some appreciation of the evils of

<sup>183</sup> Suppose it be "the best government on earth," does that prove its own goodness, or only the badness of all other governments?

1 government, but either do not see how to get rid of them, or do not choose to so far sacrifice their private interests as to give
2 themselves seriously and earnestly to the work of making a change.

3 Lastly, the Fifteenth and the Nineteenth Amendments to the U.S. Constitution collectively make it a right for “citizens of 4 the United States” to vote which cannot be abridged on the basis of race, color, previous servitude, or sex. Since the
5 “citizen” they are talking about is in the Constitution and the “United States” in the Constitution means the states of the 6 Union, then that means they are referring to people born in states of the Union. Based on the definition of “national” in 8
7 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21), calling yourself a “national” under federal law is the equivalent of calling yourself a “citizen of the 8 United States” in the Constitution. However, whenever you fill out any government form, if you are “citizen of the United 9 States” under the Constitution, you should be careful to clarify that it means “national but not citizen of the United States”
10 under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) in order to prevent confusion so they don’t misuse the form as evidence against you in court to 11 suck you into their jurisdiction.

12 4.13.11.2 Paying taxes<sup>184</sup>

13 The payment of taxes, being compulsory, of course furnishes no evidence that any one voluntarily supports the 14 Constitution.

15 1. It is true that the THEORY of our Constitution is, that all taxes are paid voluntarily; that our government is a mutual
16 insurance company, voluntarily entered into by the people with each other; that that each man makes a free and purely
17 voluntary contract with all others who are parties to the Constitution, to pay so much money for so much protection, the 18 same as he does with any other insurance company; and that he is just as free not to be protected, and not to pay tax, as he 19 is to pay a tax, and be protected.

20 But this theory of our government is wholly different from the practical fact. The fact is that the government, like a 21 highwayman, says to a man: "Your money, or your life." And many, if not most, taxes are paid under the compulsion of 22 that threat.

23 The government does not, indeed, waylay a man in a lonely place, spring upon him from the roadside, and, holding a pistol
24 to his head, proceed to rifle his pockets. But the robbery is none the less a robbery on that account; and it is far more
25 dastardly and shameful.

26 The highwayman takes solely upon himself the responsibility, danger, and crime of his own act. He does not pretend that he
27 has any rightful claim to your money, or that he intends to use it for your own benefit. He does not pretend to be anything
28 but a robber. He has not acquired impudence enough to profess to be merely a "protector," and that he takes men's money
29 against their will, merely to enable him to "protect" those infatuated travelers, who feel perfectly able to protect themselves,
30 or do not appreciate his peculiar system of protection. He is too sensible a man to make such professions as these.
31 Furthermore, having taken your money, he leaves you, as you wish him to do. He does not persist in following you on the 32 road, against your will; assuming to be your rightful "sovereign," on account of the "protection" he affords you. He does not 33 keep "protecting" you, by commanding you to bow down and serve him; by requiring you to do this, and forbidding you to
34 do that; by robbing you of more money as often as he finds it for his interest or pleasure to do so; and by branding you as a
35 rebel, a traitor, and an enemy to your country, and shooting you down without mercy, if you dispute his authority, or resist
36 his demands. He is too much of a gentleman to be guilty of such impostures, and insults, and villainies as these. In short, he 37 does not, in addition to robbing you, attempt to make you either his dupe or his slave.

38 The proceedings of those robbers and murderers, who call themselves "the government," are directly the opposite of these 39 of the single highwayman.

40 In the first place, they do not, like him, make themselves individually known; or, consequently, take upon themselves
41 personally the responsibility of their acts. On the contrary, they secretly (by secret ballot) designate some one of their
42 number to commit the robbery in their behalf, while they keep themselves practically concealed. They say to the person
43 thus designated:

44 Go to A_____ B_____, and say to him that "the government" has need of money to meet the expenses of protecting him
45 and his property. If he presumes to say that he has never contracted with us to protect him, and that he wants none of our

1 protection, say to him that that is our business, and not his; that we CHOOSE to protect him, whether he desires us to do so
2 or not; and that we demand pay, too, for protecting him. If he dares to inquire who the individuals are, who have thus taken
3 upon themselves the title of "the government," and who assume to protect him, and demand payment of him, without his
4 having ever made any contract with them, say to him that that, too, is our business, and not his; that we do not CHOOSE to
5 make ourselves INDIVIDUALLY known to him; that we have secretly (by secret ballot) appointed you our agent to give
6 him notice of our demands, and, if he complies with them, to give him, in our name, a receipt that will protect him against
7 any similar demand for the present year. If he refuses to comply, seize and sell enough of his property to pay not only our
8 demands, but all your own expenses and trouble beside. If he resists the seizure of his property, call upon the bystanders to 9 help you (doubtless some of them will prove to be members of our band.) If, in defending his property, he should kill any of 10 our band who are assisting you, capture him at all hazards; charge him (in one of our courts) with murder; convict him, and
11 hang him. If he should call upon his neighbors, or any others who, like him, may be disposed to resist our demands, and
12 they should come in large numbers to his assistance, cry out that they are all rebels and traitors; that "our country" is in
13 danger; call upon the commander of our hired murderers; tell him to quell the rebellion and "save the country," cost what it
14 may. Tell him to kill all who resist, though they should be hundreds of thousands; and thus strike terror into all others
15 similarly disposed. See that the work of murder is thoroughly done; that we may have no further trouble of this kind
16 hereafter. When these traitors shall have thus been taught our strength and our determination, they will be good loyal 17 citizens for many years, and pay their taxes without a why or a wherefore.

18 It is under such compulsion as this that taxes, so called, are paid. And how much proof the payment of taxes affords, that 19 the people consent to "support the government," it needs no further argument to show.

20 2. Still another reason why the payment of taxes implies no consent, or pledge, to support the government, is that the 21 taxpayer does not know, and has no means of knowing, who the particular individuals are who compose "the government."
22 To him "the government" is a myth, an abstraction, an incorporeality, with which he can make no contract, and to which he
23 can give no consent, and make no pledge. He knows it only through its pretended agents. "The government" itself he never 24 sees. He knows indeed, by common report, that certain persons, of a certain age, are permitted to vote; and thus to make 25 themselves parts of, or (if they choose) opponents of, the government, for the time being. But who of them do thus vote,
26 and especially how each one votes (whether so as to aid or oppose the government), he does not know; the voting being all
27 done secretly (by secret ballot). Who, therefore, practically compose "the government," for the time being, he has no means
28 of knowing. Of course he can make no contract with them, give them no consent, and make them no pledge. Of necessity,
29 therefore, his paying taxes to them implies, on his part, no contract, consent, or pledge to support them -- that is, to support
30 "the government," or the Constitution.

31 3. Not knowing who the particular individuals are, who call themselves "the government," the taxpayer does not know
32 whom he pays his taxes to. All he knows is that a man comes to him, representing himself to be the agent of "the 33 government" -- that is, the agent of a secret band of robbers and murderers, who have taken to themselves the title of "the 34 government," and have determined to kill everybody who refuses to give them whatever money they demand. To save his 35 life, he gives up his money to this agent. But as this agent does not make his principals individually known to the taxpayer,
36 the latter, after he has given up his money, knows no more who are "the government" -- that is, who were the robbers --
37 than he did before. To say, therefore, that by giving up his money to their agent, he entered into a voluntary contract with 38 them, that he pledges himself to obey them, to support them, and to give them whatever money they should demand of him
39 in the future, is simply ridiculous.

40 4. All political power, so called, rests practically upon this matter of money. Any number of scoundrels, having money
41 enough to start with, can establish themselves as a "government"; because, with money, they can hire soldiers, and with
42 soldiers extort more money; and also compel general obedience to their will. It is with government, as Caesar said it was in 43 war, that money and soldiers mutually supported each other; that with money he could hire soldiers, and with soldiers
44 extort money. So these villains, who call themselves governments, well understand that their power rests primarily upon
45 money. With money they can hire soldiers, and with soldiers extort money. And, when their authority is denied, the first 46 use they always make of money, is to hire soldiers to kill or subdue all who refuse them more money.

47 For this reason, whoever desires liberty, should understand these vital facts, viz.: 1. That every man who puts money into
48 the hands of a "government" (so called), puts into its hands a sword which will be used against him, to extort more money
49 from him, and also to keep him in subjection to its arbitrary will. 2. That those who will take his money, without his
50 consent, in the first place, will use it for his further robbery and enslavement, if he presumes to resist their demands in the 51 future. 3. That it is a perfect absurdity to suppose that anybody of men would ever take a man's money without his consent,
52 for any such object as they profess to take it for, viz., that of protecting him; for why should they wish to protect him, if he

1 does not wish them to do so? To suppose that they would do so, is just as absurd as it would be to suppose that they would
 2 take his money without his consent, for the purpose of buying food or clothing for him, when he did not want it. 4. If a man
 3 wants "protection," he is competent to make his own bargains for it; and nobody has any occasion to rob him, in order to
 4 "protect" him against his will. 5. That the only security men can have for their political liberty, consists in their keeping 5 their money in their own pockets, until they have assurances, perfectly satisfactory to themselves, that it will be used as
 6 they wish it to be used, for their benefit, and not for their injury. 6. That no government, so called, can reasonably be trusted
 7 for a moment, or reasonably be supposed to have honest purposes in view, any longer than it depends wholly upon
 8 voluntary support.

9 These facts are all so vital and so self-evident, that it cannot reasonably be supposed that any one will voluntarily pay
 10 money to a "government," for the purpose of securing its protection, unless he first make an explicit and purely voluntary
 11 contract with it for that purpose.

12 It is perfectly evident, therefore, that neither such voting, nor such payment of taxes, as actually takes place, proves
 13 anybody's consent, or obligation, to support the Constitution. Consequently we have no evidence at all that the Constitution
 14 is binding upon anybody, or that anybody is under any contract or obligation whatever to support it. And nobody is under 15 any obligation to support it.

16 4.13.11.3 Jury Service

17 Jury service is similar to voting and is based on voting, so all the arguments used earlier by Spooner about voting apply
 18 equally to jury service. People involve themselves in jury service for the very same reasons as voting, which is to defend 19 their liberties against encroachment by:

- 20 • The "band of tyrants, robbers, and murderers" in "the government"
- 21 • Fellow citizens who would want to violate the liberties and rights of others by using the government as their agent.
 22 For instance, they might abuse their elective franchise or voting power to influence or authorize the state or 23 government to plunder the property of others in order to guarantee their economic security and income.

24 Even before government existed, all men had a natural and God-given right to defend their person, their family, their
 25 liberty, and their property against encroachment by others, and they did so through force and using violence if necessary.
 26 Book I of The Law of Nations by Vattel, which our founding fathers used to write our Constitution and which appears on 27 our website at:

The Law of Nations, Vattel

28 also confirms the existence of this God-given right of self-defense:

29 *§ 18. A nation has a right to every thing necessary for its preservation.*

30 Since then a nation is obliged to preserve itself, it has a right to every thing necessary for its preservation.
 31 For the Law of Nature gives us a right to every thing without which we cannot fulfil our obligation; otherwise it
 32 would oblige us to do impossibilities, or rather would contradict itself in prescribing us a duty, and at the same
 33 time debarring us of the only means of fulfilling it. It will doubtless be here understood, that those means ought 34 not to be unjust in themselves, or such as are absolutely forbidden by the Law of Nature.

35 As it is impossible that it should ever permit the use of such means, — if on a particular occasion no other
 36 present themselves for fulfilling a general obligation, the obligation must, in that particular instance, be looked 37 on as impossible, and consequently void.

38 Even the Supreme Court agrees with the existence of the natural rights of self-protection:

39 "The individual may stand upon his constitutional rights as a citizen. He is entitled to carry on his private
 40 business in his own way. His power to contract is unlimited. He owes no duty to the state or to his neighbors to 41 divulge his business, or to open his doors to an investigation, so far as it may tend to criminate him. He owes no
 42 such duty to the state, since he receives nothing therefrom, beyond the protection of his life and property. His 43 rights are such as existed by the law of the land long antecedent to the organization of the state, and can only
 44 be taken from him by due process of law, and in accordance with the Constitution. Among his rights are a

1 refusal to incriminate himself, and the immunity of himself and his property from arrest or seizure except under
2 a warrant of the law. He owes nothing to the public so long as he does not trespass upon their rights."
3 [Hale v. Henkel, 201 U.S. 43 (1906)]

4 Within the early family unit, this role of defending one's rights usually fell on the man. As mankind civilized, the function
5 of defending personal liberty and property were delegated to the government, but the sovereignty remained with the people.
6 At first, the role of the government in defending its citizens was defined verbally, but mankind soon discovered that human
7 nature being dishonest and covetous and untrustworthy, the people working for government became corrupted and abused
8 their power for personal benefit. Consequently, the people then chose to correct this problem by defining the role of the 9 government formally in writing using written constitutions, from which the government was authorized by the constitution
10 to write statutes and regulations to carry out the sovereign powers delegated to them by the people. The constitution was 11 like a written contract that could then be enforced in court against government agents who were charged with carrying it
12 out. But once again, human depravity entered into the picture and the greedy lawyers and politicians writing the statutes
13 and regulations devised a way to obfuscate and distort the law for their personal gain, and illegally expand their delegated
14 authority by dolus. Hence, the jury was invented as a check and balance so that bad laws could be nullified by the 15 sovereign people and so that this conflict of interest by the government could then be eliminated. The people then
16 separated the Judiciary from the Executive branch of the government in order that this conflict of interest might be 17 minimized and to make the judges controlling the trials more objective and less biased, but even that solution had defects.
18 The judges became corrupted because they got their pay and benefits from the tax monies that were illegally collected by 19 the Executive branch, and the Executive branch used their tax collecting power to threaten, harass, and intimidate the 20 judges into illegally enforcing the Internal Revenue Code. This made juries all the more important because they were there
21 not only to nullify bad laws, but to counteract subtle and often hidden biases on the part of the judge. We talked about 22 many of these biases and prejudices earlier in section 2.8.13. Thomas Jefferson hinted at these biases when he said:

23 "It is left... to the juries, if they think the permanent judges are under any bias whatever in any cause, to take on
24 themselves to judge the law as well as the fact. They never exercise this power but when they suspect partiality
25 in the judges; and by the exercise of this power they have been the firmest bulwarks of English liberty."
26 [Thomas Jefferson to Abbe Arnoux, 1789. ME 7:423, Papers 15:283]

27 The purpose of juries is therefore to protect us from corrupted and covetous government politicians and judges and to 28 nullify bad laws that conflict with God's laws. But the definition of "voluntary" at the beginning of this subsection said
29 that "voluntary" meant:

30 "voluntary. Unconstrained by interference; unimpelled by another's influence; spontaneous; acting of oneself.
31 Coker v. State, 199 Ga. 20, 33 S.E.2d. 171, 174. Done by design or intention. Proceeding from the free and
32 unrestrained will of the person. Produced in or by an act of choice. Resulting from free choice, without
33 compulsion or solicitation. The word, especially in statutes, often implies knowledge of essential facts. Without 34 valuable consideration; gratuitous, as a voluntary conveyance. Also, having a merely nominal consideration;
35 as, a voluntary deed."
36 [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1575]

37 Certainly, jury service cannot be said to be "unimpelled by another's influence" because the very reason we do it is because 38 of the fear of specific bad people in government and the bad laws they write. Nothing that is done out of fear of a person or 39 a bad law can be said to be "voluntary". Here is a confirmation of that conclusion found in the definition of "consent" in 40 Black's Law Dictionary:

41 "Consent. A concurrence of wills. Voluntarily yielding the will to the proposition of another; acquiescence or
42 compliance therewith. Agreement; approval; permission; the act or result of coming into harmony or accord.
43 Consent is an act of reason, accompanied with deliberation, the mind weighing as in a balance the good or evil
44 on each side. It means voluntary agreement by a person in the possession and exercise of sufficient mental
45 capacity to make an intelligent choice to do something proposed by another. It supposes a physical power to
46 act, a moral power of acting, and a serious, determined, and free use of these powers. Consent is implied in
47 every agreement. It is an act unclouded by fraud, duress, or sometimes even mistake.

48 "Willingness in fact that an act or an invasion of an interest shall take place. Restatement, Second, Torts §10A.

49 As used in the law of rape 'consent' means consent of the will,
50 and submission under the influence of fear or terror cannot
51 amount to real consent. There must be an exercise of intelligence based on knowledge of its 52 significance and moral quality and there must be a choice between resistance and assent. And if a woman

1                    resists to the point where further resistance would be useless or until her resistance is overcome by force or
 2                    violence, submission thereafter is not 'consent'."
 3                    [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 305, emphasis added]

4                    Self-defense cannot be voluntary unless we consented or volunteered to put ourselves into harm's way to begin with, which
 5                    no sane man would consider in the first place. Like voting, if we don't serve on jury duty, then corrupted people in
 6                    government will eventually write the laws in such a way as to make us into complete and total slaves. Here is how Thomas
 7                    Jefferson describes this situation in the Declaration of Independence and what we should do about it:

8                    "But when a long train of abuses and usurpations, pursuing invariably the same Object evinces a design to
 9                    reduce them under absolute Despotism, it is their right, it is their duty, to throw off such Government, and to
 10                    provide new Guards for their future security."
 11                    [Declaration of Independence]

12                    Jury service, like voting and the exercise of all other political rights, is defensive and done as a safeguard for our future
 13                    security. The exercise of rights cannot be turned into taxable government privileges. Anything that is defensive is done for 14                    selfish and not altruistic or voluntary reasons. One could then say that by exercising our right to serve on jury duty (and 15                    voting in the process), we are in receipt of "consideration", which is a fancy legal word for a "benefit". That benefit is the 16                    absence of threats or coercion or corruption in our government. By exercising our right (not our privilege, but our right) to
 17                    act as jurors, we are ensuring a peaceful, orderly society free of corruption and evil, which is probably the most important
 18                    aspect of quality of life that we can personally experience in our lifetime. Consequently, the reason we serve on jury duty
 19                    is to remain free of government compulsion and to protect our liberties, and for no other reason, and we do so for selfish
 20                    reasons and not the magnanimous good of mankind. You could then say we are "compelled to avoid future compulsion 21                    and government corruption".

22                    It would be the grossest distortion for any government servant or judge to then commit fraud by saying that jury service is 23                    "voluntary", and if it isn't "voluntary" and "consensual", then it can't be a "privilege". Here is what Black's Law
 24                    Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1198 says about "privilege" on p. 1197-1198:

25                    "privilege. A particular and peculiar benefit or advantage enjoyed by a person, company, or class, beyond the 26                    common advantages of other citizens. An exceptional or extraordinary power or exemption. A peculiar right,
 27                    advantage, exemption, power, franchise, or immunity held by a person or class, not generally possessed by
 28                    others.

29                    [...]

30                    "A privilege may be based upon: (a) the consent of the other affected by the actor's conduct, or (b) the fact
 31                    that its exercise is necessary for the protection of some interest of the actor or of the public which is of such
 32                    importance as to justify the harm caused or threatened by its exercise, or (c) the fact that the actor is 33                    performing a function for the proper performance of which freedom of action is essential. Restatement,
 34                    Second, Torts, §10.

35                    Privileges may be divided into two general categories: (1) consent, and (2) privileges created by law
 36                    irrespective of consent. In general, the latter arise where there is some important and overriding social value
 37                    in sanctioning defendant's conduct, despite the fact that it causes plaintiff harm."
 38                    [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1198]

39                    From the above, we must conclude that unless receipt of a "privilege" is consensual, then it cannot be a privilege. And 40                    something cannot be consensual unless it is "voluntary" and done "without valuable consideration" or personal benefit.

41                    "consent. A concurrence of wills. Voluntarily yielding the will to the proposition of another; acquiescence or
 42                    compliance therewith. Agreement; approval; permission; the act or result of coming into harmony or accord.
 43                    Consent is an act of reason, accompanied with deliberation, the mind weighing as in a balance the good or evil
 44                    on each side. It means voluntary agreement by a person in the possession and exercise of sufficient mental
 45                    capacity to make an intelligent choice to do something proposed by another. It supposes a physical power to
 46                    act, a moral power of acting, and a serious, determined, and free use of these powers. Consent is implied in
 47                    every agreement. It is an act unclouded by fraud, duress, or sometimes even mistake."

48                    So any way you want to look at it, jury service is a compelled necessity of the society we live in and it is involuntary and
 49                    nonconsensual. It is a necessary evil at best because of the evil nature of mankind when serving in public office and in 50                    positions of power.

1 "Society in every state is a blessing, but government [or its trappings such as voting and jury service], even in
2 its best state is but a necessary evil; in its worst state, an intolerable one."
3 [Thomas Paine (1737-1809)]

4 4.13.11.4 Citizenship

5 We have already established that the main and most important function of government is public protection, which is
6 accomplished by preventing and punishing injustice. We established this fact in section 3.3, where we talked about the
7 Purpose of Law. People in the government will tell you that the reason for becoming a citizen is to qualify for receipt of 8 that public protection and to pay one's fair share of the costs of supporting it. However, we established earlier in section
9 4.13.8 on Federal Citizenship that you do not have to be a "citizen" to have civil rights. The purpose of law is to protect
10 rights and liberties. Therefore, one need not become a citizen to benefit from the protection afforded by government or the 11 laws that it enacts. Compliance with all law must therefore be voluntary because citizenship itself ideally should be but 12 seldom is voluntary. Here is an example court cite illustrating our point:

13 "When a change of government takes place, from a monarchical to a republican government, the old form is 14 dissolved. Those who lived under it, and did not choose to become members of the new, had a right to refuse
15 their allegiance to it, and to retire elsewhere. By being a part of the society subject to the old government, they 16 had not entered into any engagement to become subject to any new form the majority might think proper to 17 adopt. That the majority shall prevail is a rule posterior to the formation of government, and results from it. It
18 is not a rule upon mankind in their natural state. There, every man is independent of all laws, except those 19 prescribed by nature. He is not bound by any institutions formed by his fellowmen without his consent"
20 [Cruden v. Neale, 2 N.C., 2 S.E. 70 (1796)]

21 As we stated at the beginning of this chapter and in section 4.6.3, your civil rights derive not from your citizenship status,
22 but from where you were born and where you live. Furthermore, most of us will pay our fair share of the costs of 23 supporting government without being citizens. In fact, very few taxes one might pay are dependent on their status as 24 citizens. Furthermore, there are very few things we can do, citizen or not, that don't compel us to pay some kind of tax.

25 Why, then, do people become citizens? It defies us. In the next section on "nationals", you will learn that state
26 governments commonly will deprive "nationals" the right to vote and serve on jury duty unless and until they become "U.S.
27 citizens" under 8 U.S.C. §1401, but we established in that section and earlier in section 4.13.11 that these are rights and not
28 privileges. This is so because in our civil society, these mechanisms are the only means available for us to defend our 29 rights, liberties, and property without resorting to violence and without being compelled to rely on a corrupt politician to do
30 it for us. Being able to defend oneself from harm is a natural right that cannot be turned into a privilege that can then be 31 taxed or regulated.

32 "A right common in every citizen such as the right to own property or to engage in business of a character
33 not requiring regulation CANNOT, however, be taxed as a special franchise by first prohibiting its exercise
34 and then permitting its enjoyment upon the payment of a certain sum of money." [Stevens v. State, 2 Ark. 291,
35 35 Am. Dec. 72, Spring Val. Water Works v. Barber, 99 Cal. 36, 33 Pac. 735, 21 L.R.A. 416. Note 57 L.R.A.
36 416]

37 "The individual, unlike the corporation, cannot be taxed for the mere privilege of existing. The corporation is 38 an artificial entity which owes its existence and charter power to the State, but the individual's right to live and 39 own property are natural rights for the enjoyment of which an excise cannot be imposed."
40 [Redfield v. Fisher, 292 Oregon 814, 817]

41 The reason the individual can't be taxed for the privilege of existing is because all privileges must be voluntarily accepted,
42 and we never made the choice to exist. Life was a gift from God, not a choice or a government "privilege". Why, then, do
43 governments make voting and serving on jury duty (which incidentally are defensive rather than voluntary actions) into a
44 "privilege" by forcing you to become a "U.S. citizen" subject to their corrupt jurisdiction? The reason, quite frankly, is 45 because they want to pull you into the "federal zone" so they can tax you and subject you to their jurisdiction! They do this 46 because they want to pick your pocket and make you into a feudal government serf, and for no other reason. The federal 47 statutory "U.S. citizen" status under 8 U.S.C. §1401 is simply a legal tool that they use to expand their authority and 48 political power and jurisdiction over you. The government then adds insult to this injury by saying that receipt of "U.S.
49 citizenship" is a "privilege" and is done "voluntarily". Look again at Section 1 of the Fourteenth Amendment:

50 Section 1. All persons born or naturalized in the [federal] United States, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof,
51 are citizens of the United States and of the state wherein they reside. No state shall make or enforce any law
52 which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States:

1 nor shall any state deprive any person of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law; nor deny to any
2 person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws.

3 We ask you now:

4 "How can the exercise of a natural right as basic as self defense and the pursuit of self protection be turned
5 into a privilege? How can the government force you to surrender your rights by becoming a second class 'U.S.
6 citizen' in order to acquire the ability to defend those rights as a jurist or a voter?"

7 The answer is, they can't, but they do it anyway, because the "sheeple", I mean people, don't complain. Are you a sheep?
8 Furthermore, can the acquisition of citizenship under such circumstances rightfully be called "voluntary" or "consensual"?
9 Let's look at the definition again:

10 "voluntary. Unconstrained by interference; unimpelled by another's influence; spontaneous; acting of oneself.
11 Coker v. State, 199 Ga. 20, 33 S.E.2d. 171, 174. Done by design or intention. Proceeding from the free and
12 unrestrained will of the person. Produced in or by an act of choice. Resulting from free choice, without
13 compulsion or solicitation. The word, especially in statutes, often implies knowledge of essential facts. Without
14 valuable consideration; gratuitous, as a voluntary conveyance. Also, having a merely nominal consideration;
15 as, a voluntary deed."
16 [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1575]

17 And here is the definition of "consent" from Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition:

18 "consent. A concurrence of wills. Voluntarily yielding the will to the proposition of another; acquiescence or
19 compliance therewith. Agreement; approval; permission; the act or result of coming into harmony or accord.
20 Consent is an act of reason, accompanied with deliberation, the mind weighing as in a balance the good or evil
21 on each side. It means voluntary agreement by a person in the possession and exercise of sufficient mental
22 capacity to make an intelligent choice to do something proposed by another. It supposes a physical power to
23 act, a moral power of acting, and a serious, determined, and free use of these powers. Consent is implied in
24 every agreement. It is an act unclouded by fraud, duress, or sometimes even mistake."
25 [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 305]

26 If the government has applied duress in forcing you to become a statutory "U.S. citizen" under 8 U.S.C. §1401 in order so
27 you could have the opportunity to protect your God-given rights, which by the way is itself an involuntary function, and at 28 the same time, has committed fraud by fooling or deceiving you into claiming an incorrect and mistaken status as a "U.S.
29 citizen", then clearly, based on the definition of "consensual" above, one cannot claim to have become a citizen by the 30 requisite consent from a legal perspective.

31 The answer, then, to our previous question of whether the government can force you to become a statutory federal "U.S.
32 citizen" is a resounding NO, because the government interfered and constrained and threatened the exercise of your natural,
33 God-given rights if you didn't provide your fully-informed consent to become a citizen. You were "under the influence" of 34 government coercion and therefore were acting "involuntarily". You became a citizen for selfish reasons and the 35 "consideration" you received in exchange for your consent was government protection of your God-given rights that they 36 couldn't lawfully deny you to begin with. Ironically, the government coerced you into paying for something you didn't 37 need and that which you already had as a gift from God and nature rather than from your magistrate or Congressman. Once
38 again, here is how Thomas Jefferson, author of our Declaration of Independence, describes it:

39 "A free people [claim] their rights as derived from the laws of nature, and not as the gift of their chief
40 magistrate."
41 [Thomas Jefferson: Rights of British America, 1774. ME 1:209, Papers 1:134 ]

42 In effect, by exchanging your God-give "rights" for taxable government "privileges", you sold your soul to Satan and a
43 corrupted government because you didn't trust God to protect you and wanted to put an end to government harassment and 44 discrimination directed at you for not "volunteering" to become a "U.S. citizen".

45 "But he who doubts [God's protection?] is condemned if he eats, because he does not eat from faith; for 46 whatever is not from faith [trust in God rather than government] is sin."
47 [Rom. 14:23, Bible, NKJV]

48 At the point when you became a "U.S. citizen" under federal law found in 8 U.S.C. §1401, you sinned and fell from grace
49 like Satan did and went to the bottom of the hierarchy of sovereignty that we explained at the beginning of this chapter in
50 section 4.1. You sinned by volunteering to serve more than one master (the federal and the state governments and God) in

1 violation of Jesus' words in Luke 16:13. You became unequally yoked with Babylon, the Great Harlot, described in the 2 book of Revelation. You sold out your soul and the Truth to Satan for 20 pieces of silver, like Judas did to Jesus. You also
 3 lied to the government about your true and legal citizenship status as a "national" because you ignorantly coveted
 4 government privileges and benefits and "protection" in violation of Exodus 20:16. The price for these sins, it turns out, is
 5 perpetual slavery to a corrupt government "god", who you must then worship and pay homage and tribute to for the rest of
 6 your natural life, not out of choice or consent, but out of fear. Becoming a "U.S. citizen" demoted you from being a
 7 sovereign to a government whore and you had better bend over whenever the IRS comes knocking! Once you admitted you
 8 were a "U.S. citizen" and a government harlot, the burden of proving that you aren't a prostitute fell on you, and any good
 9 lawyer knows that proving a negative is an impossibility, so you have to wear the "taxpayer" sign on you back for as long
 10 as you are a "U.S. citizen". As long as you are wearing that sign, you may as well be standing on a street corner half-naked
 11 begging every government "John" who drives by to pick you up for free and enjoy your company all night, and it's 12 perfectly legal, because the "Johns" write the laws!

13 "For our citizenship is in heaven [not earth or "U.S. citizenship"], from which we also eagerly wait for the 14 Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ"
 15 [Philippians 3:20]

16 "Protection draws subjection."
 17 [Steven Miller]

18 "Stand fast therefore in the liberty wherewith Christ hath made us free, and be not entangled again with the 19 yoke of bondage [to the government or the income tax]."
 20 [Galatians 5:1, Bible, NKJV]

21 "Now, therefore, you are no longer strangers and foreigners, but fellow citizens with the saints and members
 22 of the household of God."
 23 [Ephesians 2:19, Bible, NKJV]

24 "These all died in faith, not having received the promises, but having seen them afar off were assured of them,
 25 embraced them and confessed that they were strangers and pilgrims on the earth."
 26 [Hebrews 11:13]

27 "Beloved, I beg you as sojourners and pilgrims, abstain from fleshly lusts which war against the soul..."
 28 [1 Peter 2:1]

29 4.13.12 "Nationals" v. "U.S.** Nationals"

30 An important and often overlooked condition of "nationals" of the US*** is that today all "state nationals" are "USA
 31 nationals", but "USA nationals" who do not reside/domicile in a state of the Union are not "state nationals."

32 A U.S.** national is a person born in the outlying possessions of the United States**. These types of people are referred to 33 with any of the following synonymous names:

- 34 1. "nationals but not citizens of the United States** at birth" under 8 U.S.C. §1408, 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22)(B), and 8
 35 U.S.C. §1452
- 36 2. "nationals but not citizens of the United States**" under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) and 8 U.S.C. §1452.
- 37 3. Nonresident Aliens (under the Internal Revenue Code, as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701\(b\)\(1\)\(B\)), but ONLY if lawfully 38 engaged in a public office in the national government.

39 Statutory "U.S.** nationals" are defined under 8 U.S.C. §1408 and 8 U.S.C. §1452. "nationals" are defined under 8 U.S.C.
 40 §1101(a)(21). Both statutory "nationals" and statutory "U.S.** nationals" existed under The Law of Nations and 41 international law since long before the passage of the 14th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution in 1868. There are two 42 types of "nationals" or "U.S.** nationals" under federal law, as we revealed earlier in section 4.13.10.1:

Table 4-36: Types of “nationals” under federal law

#	Legal name	Where born	Defined in	Common name	Description
1	“nationals but not citizens of the United States at birth ”	3. American Samoa 4. Swains Island	8 U.S.C. §1408 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22); 8 U.S.C. §1452	“U.S. national”	The U.S. Supreme Court and the Constitution call these people “citizens of the United States”. See section 4.13.10.8 later for details. Used on the 1040NR form to describe people who file that form. Does not describe people who are not born in the federal United States.
2	“U.S.A. national” or “state national” or “Constitutional but not statutory U.S. citizen”	states of the Union	8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21)	“national” or “state national” or “USA national”	The “national” or “state national” is not necessarily the same as the “U.S. national” above, because it includes people who born in states of the Union. Notice that this term does not mention 8 U.S.C. §1408 citizenship nor confine itself only to citizenship by birth in the federal zone. Therefore, it also includes people born in states of the Union.

A “state national” or simply “national” is one who derives his nationality and allegiance to the confederation of states of the Union called the “United States*** of America” by virtue of being born in a state of the Union and domiciled there. To avoid false presumption, these people should carefully avoid associating their citizenship status with the term “United States” or “U.S.”, which means the federal zone within Acts of Congress. Therefore, instead of calling themselves “U.S. nationals”, they call themselves either “state nationals” or “USA nationals”. In terms of protection of our rights, being a “state national” or a “U.S. national” are roughly equivalent. The “U.S. national” status, however, has several advantages that the “state national” status does not enjoy, as we explained earlier in section 4.11.4 of the Great IRS Hoax book:

1. May NOT collect any Social Security benefits, because the Social Security Program Operations Manual System (POM), Section GN 00303.001 states that only “U.S.** citizens” and “U.S.** nationals” can collect benefits. State nationals are NOT “U.S.** nationals”.
2. May hold a U.S. security clearance, unlike “non-citizen nationals of the United States***”. See SECNAVINST 5510.30A, Appendix I.
3. May work for the federal government as a civil servant. See 5 C.F.R. §338.101.

The key difference between a “state national” and a “U.S.** national” is the citizenship status of your parents. Below is a table that summarizes the distinctions using all possible permutations of “state national” and “U.S. national” status for both you and your parents:

Table 4-37: Becoming a “U.S. national” by birth

#	Reference	Parent’s citizenship status	Your birthplace	Your status

4	8 U.S.C. §1408(2)	“U.S. nationals” but not “U.S. citizens” who have resided anywhere in the federal United States prior to your birth	Outside the federal “United States”	“U.S. national”
5	8 U.S.C. §1408(3)	A person of unknown parentage found in an outlying possession of the United States while under the age of five years, until shown, prior to his attaining the age of twenty-one years, not to have been born in such outlying possession	NA	“U.S. national”
6	8 U.S.C. §1408(4)	One parent is a “U.S. national” but not “U.S. citizen” and the other is an “alien”. The “U.S. national” parent has resided somewhere in the federal United States prior to your birth	Outside the federal “United States”	“U.S. national”
7	Law of Nations , Book I, §212, Vattel	Both parents are “state nationals” and not “U.S. citizens” or “U.S. nationals”. Neither were either born in the federal zone nor did they reside there during their lifetime.	Inside a state of the union and not on federal property	“state national”
8	Law of Nations , Book I, §215, Vattel	Both parents are “U.S. nationals””. Neither were either born in the federal zone nor did they reside there during their lifetimes.	Outside the “United States” the country	“U.S. national”
9	Law of Nations , Book I, §215	Both parents are “state nationals”. Neither were either born in the federal zone nor did they reside there during their lifetimes.	Outside the “United States” the country	“state national”
10	Law of Nations , Book I, §62, Vattel 8 U.S.C. §1481	You started out as a “U.S. citizen” under 8 U.S.C. §1401 and decided to abandon the “citizen” part and retain the “national part”, properly notified the Secretary of State of your intentions, and obtained a revised passport reflecting your new status.	NA	“U.S. national”

Very significant is the fact that 8 U.S.C. §1408, confines itself exclusively to citizenship by birth inside the federal zone and does not define all possible scenarios whereby a person may be a “U.S. national”. For instance, it does not define the condition where both parents are “U.S. nationals”, the birth occurred outside of the federal United States, and neither parent ever physically maintained a domicile inside the federal United States. Under item 7 above, The Law of Nations, Book I, Section 215, Vattel, says this condition always results in the child having the same citizenship as his/her father. The Law of Nations was one of the organic documents that the founding fathers used to write our original Constitution and Article 1, Section 8, Clause 10 of that Constitution MANDATES that it be obeyed.

“Article 1, Section 8, Clause 10

“The Congress shall have Power...

“To define and punish Piracies and Felonies committed on the high Seas, and Offences against the Law of Nations;”

As you read this section below from The Law of Nations, Vattel that proves item 7 in the above table, keep in mind that states of the Union are considered “foreign countries” with respect to the federal government legislative jurisdiction and police powers (see <http://famguardian.org/Publications/LawOfNations/vattel.htm>).

§ 215. Children of citizens born in a foreign country.

It is asked whether the children born of citizens in a foreign country are citizens? The laws have decided this question in several countries, and their regulations must be followed.(59) By the law of nature alone, children follow the condition of their fathers, and enter into all their rights (§ 212); the place of birth produces no change in this particular, and cannot, of itself, furnish any reason for taking from a child what nature has given him; I say "of itself," for, civil or political laws may, for particular reasons, ordain otherwise. But I suppose that the father has not entirely quitted his country in order to settle elsewhere. If he has fixed his abode in a foreign country, he is become a member of another society, at least as a perpetual inhabitant; and his children will be members of it also.

[The Law of Nations, Book I, Section 215, Vattel]

Here’s a U.S. Supreme Court ruling confirming these conclusions:

“Under statute, child born outside United States is not entitled to citizenship unless father has resided in United States before its birth.”

[Weedin v. Chin Bow, 274 U.S. 657, 47 S.Ct. 772 (1927)]

There are very good legal reasons why 8 U.S.C. §1408 doesn’t mention this case or condition. There is also a reason why there is no federal statute anywhere that directly prescribes the citizenship status of persons based on birth within states of the Union. The reasons are because lawyers in Congress:

7. Know that this is the criteria that most Americans born inside states of the Union will meet.
8. Know that these people are “sovereign”. Even the U.S. Supreme Court said so:

“The words ‘people of the United States’ and ‘citizens,’ are synonymous terms, and mean the same thing. They both describe the political body who, according to our republican institutions, form the sovereignty, and who hold the power and conduct [run] the government through their representatives [servants]. They are what we familiarly call the ‘sovereign people,’ and every citizen is one of this people, and a constituent member of this sovereignty. ...”

[Boyd v. State of Nebraska, 143 U.S. 135 (1892)]

9. Know that a “sovereign” is not and cannot be the subject of any law, and therefore cannot be mentioned in the law.

“...at the Revolution, the sovereignty devolved on the people; and they are truly the sovereigns of the country, but they are sovereigns without subjects...with none to govern but themselves; the citizens of America are equal as fellow citizens, and as joint tenants in the sovereignty.”

[Chisholm v. Georgia, 2 Dall. (U.S.) 419, 454, 1 L.Ed. 440, 455 @DALL 1793 pp. 471-472]

“Sovereignty itself is, of course, not subject to law, for it is the author and source of law; but in our system, while sovereign powers are delegated to the agencies of government, sovereignty itself remains with the people, by whom and for whom all government exists and acts.”

[Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U.S. 356, 6 S.Ct. 1064 (1886)]

1 "In common usage, the term 'person' does not include the sovereign, and statutes employing the word are
2 ordinarily construed to exclude it."
3 Wilson v. Omaha Indian Tribe, [442 U.S. 653, 667 (1979)]

4 "Since in common usage the term 'person' does not include the sovereign, statutes employing that term are
5 ordinarily construed to exclude it."
6 U.S. v. Cooper, [312 U.S. 600, 604, 61 S.Ct. 742 (1941)]

7 "In common usage, the term 'person' does not include the sovereign and statutes employing it will ordinarily
8 not be construed to do so."
9 U.S. v. United Mine Workers of America, [330 U.S. 258, 67 S.Ct. 677 (1947)]

- 10 10. Know that they cannot write a federal statute or act of Congress that prescribes any criteria for becoming a 11 "national" based on birth and perpetual residence outside of federal legislative jurisdiction and within a state of the 12 Union. That is why the circuit court said the following with respect to "U.S. nationals":

13 "Marquez-Almanzar seeks to avoid removal by arguing that he can demonstrate that he owes "permanent
14 allegiance" to the United States and thus qualify as a U.S. national under section 101(a)(22)(B) of the 15 Immigration and Nationality Act ("INA"), 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22)(B). That provision defines "national of the
16 United States" as "a person who, though not a citizen of the United States, owes permanent allegiance to the
17 United States." We hold that § 1101(a)(22)(B) itself does not provide a means by which an individual can
18 become a U.S. national, and deny Marquez-Almanzar's petition accordingly.
19 [Jose Napoleon Marquez-Almanzar v. Immigration and Naturalization Service, Docket # 03-4395, 03-40027,
20 03-40497, August 8, 2005, <http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/CitesByTopic/USNational-034395p.pdf>]

- 21 11. Want to deceive most Americans to falsely believe or presume that they are "U.S. citizens" who are "subject to"
22 federal statutes and jurisdiction, so they interfere in the determination of their true status as "nationals" and "state
23 nationals".

24 8 U.S.C. §1452 is the authority for getting your status of being a "non-citizen national" formally recognized by the national 25 government as a person born in a U.S. possession.

26 How can you be sure you are a "national" or "state national" if the authority for being so isn't found in federal statutes?
27 There are lots of ways, but the easiest way is to consider that you as a person who was born in a state of the Union and 28 outside the federal "United States" can legally "expatriate" your citizenship. All you need in order to do so is your original 29 birth certificate and to follow the procedures prescribed in federal law which we explain later in sections 4.13.17 and 30 8.5.3.13. What exactly are you "expatriating"? The definition of expatriation clarifies this:

31 "Expatriation is the voluntary renunciation or abandonment of nationality and allegiance."
32 Perkins v. Elg, [307 U.S. 325; 59 S.Ct. 884; 83 L.Ed. 1320 (1939)]

33 "expatriation. The voluntary act of abandoning or renouncing one's country, [nation] and becoming the citizen
34 or subject of another.
35 [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 576]

36 You can't abandon your "nationality" unless you had it in the first place, so you must be a "national" or a "state national!"
37 Here is the clincher:

38 8 U.S.C. §1101: Definitions

39 (a)(21) The term "national" means a person owing permanent allegiance to a state.

40 The term "state" above can mean a state of the Union or it can mean a confederation of states called the "United States".
41 Sneaky, huh? You'll never hear especially a federal lawyer agree with you on this because it destroys their jurisdiction to
42 impose an income tax on you, but it's true!

43 The rulings of the U.S. Supreme Court also reveal that "citizen of the United States" and "nationality" are equivalent in the 44 context of the Constitution. Look at the ruling below and notice how they use "nationality" and "citizen of the United 45 States" interchangeably:

46 "Whether it was also the rule at common law that the children of British subjects born abroad were themselves
47 British subjects-nationality being attributed to parentage instead of locality-has been variously determined. If this were so, of course the statute of Edw. III. was declaratory, as was the subsequent legislation. But if not, then such children were aliens, and the statute of 7 Anne and subsequent statutes must be regarded as in some sort acts of naturalization. On the other hand, it seems to me that the rule, 'Partus sequitur patrem,' has always applied to children of our citizens born abroad, and that the acts of congress on this subject are clearly declaratory, passed out of abundant caution, to obviate misunderstandings which might arise from the prevalence of the contrary rule elsewhere.

"Section 1993 of the Revised Statutes provides that children so born 'are declared to be citizens of the United States; but the rights of citizenship shall not descend to children whose fathers never resided in the United States.' Thus a limitation is prescribed on the passage of citizenship by descent beyond the second generation if then surrendered by permanent nonresidence, and this limitation was contained in all the acts from 1790 down. Section 2172 provides that such children shall 'be considered as citizens thereof.' "
 [U.S. v. Wong Kim Ark, 169 U.S. 649 (1898)]

If after examining the chart above, you find that your present citizenship status does not meet your needs, you are perfectly entitled to change it and the government can't stop you. We explain later in section 4.13.17 how to abandon any type of citizenship you may find undesirable in order to have the combination of rights and "privileges" that suit your fancy. If you are currently a "state-only" citizen but want to become a "national" or a "state national" so that you can qualify for Socialist Security Benefits or a military security clearance, then in most cases, the federal government is more than willing to cooperate with you in becoming one under 8 U.S.C. §1101.

In the following subsections we have an outline of the legal constraints applying to persons who are "nationals" or "state nationals" and who do not claim the status of "U.S. citizens" under federal statutes. The analysis that follows establishes that for "state nationals", such persons may in some cases not be allowed to vote in elections without special efforts on their part to maintain their status. They are also not allowed to serve on jury duty without special efforts on their part to maintain their status. These special efforts involve clarifying our citizenship on any government forms we sign to describe ourselves as:

- "nationals" or "state nationals" but not statutory "citizens of the United States" as defined in and 8 U.S.C. §1101\(a\)\(21\).
- Nationals of the "United States of America" (just like our passport says) but not citizens of the federal "United States"

4.13.12.1 Legal Foundations of "national" Status

We said in the previous section that all people born in states of the Union are technically "nationals" or "state nationals" or "U.S.*** nationals", that is: "nationals of the United States of America". One of the two types of "nationals" is defined in 8 U.S.C. §1408 and depends a different definition of "U.S." that means the federal zone instead of the "United States*** of America". We don't cite all of the components of the definition for this type of "national" below, but only that part that describes Americans born inside the 50 Union states on nonfederal land to parents who resided inside the federal zone prior to the birth of the child:

8 U.S.C. Sec. 1408. - Nationals but not citizens of the United States at birth

Unless otherwise provided in section 1401 of this title, the following shall be nationals, but not citizens, of the United States at birth:

(2) A person born outside the United States and its outlying possessions of parents both of whom are nationals, but not citizens, of the United States, and have had a residence in the United States, or one of its outlying possessions prior to the birth of such person;

The key word above is the term "United States". This term is defined in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(38) as follows:

TITLE 8 > CHAPTER 12 > SUBCHAPTER I > Sec. 1101.
Sec. 1101. - Definitions

(a)(38) The term "United States", except as otherwise specifically herein provided, when used in a geographical sense, means the continental United States, Alaska, Hawaii, Puerto Rico, Guam, and the Virgin Islands of the United States.

1 First of all, this definition leaves much to be desired, because it:

- 2 1. Doesn't tell us whether this is the only definition of "United States" that is applicable.
- 3 2. Gives us no clue as to how to determine whether the term "United States" is being used in a "geographical sense" as
- 4 described above or in some other undefined sense. The OTHER most frequent undefined sense, in fact, is the "United
- 5 States" as a legal person rather than a geographical area.

6 The definition also doesn't tell us which of the three definitions of "United States" is being referred to as defined by the 7 Supreme Court in Hooven and Allison v. Evatt, 324 U.S. 652 (1945) and as explained earlier in section 4.6. Since we have
8 to guess which one they mean, then the law is already vague and confusing, and possibly even "void for vagueness" as we
9 will explain later in section 5.12. However, in the absence of a clear and unambiguous definition, we must assume that
10 because this is a federal statute, then by default that the definition used implies only the property of the federal government
11 situated within the federal zone as we explain later in section 5.2.2 and as the Supreme Court revealed in U.S. v. Spelar,
12 338 U.S. 217 at 222 (1949).

13 The legal encyclopedia American Jurisprudence helps us define what is meant by "United States" in the context of 14 citizenship under federal (not state) law:

15 3C American Jurisprudence 2d, Aliens and Citizens, §2689 (1999), Who is born in United States and subject to
16 United States jurisdiction

17 "A person is born subject to the jurisdiction of the United States, for purposes of acquiring citizenship at birth,
18 if his or her birth occurs in territory over which the United States is sovereign, even though another
19 country provides all governmental services within the territory, and the territory is subsequently ceded to the
20 other country."

21 The key word in the above definition is "territory" in relationship to the sovereignty word. The only places which are
22 "territories" of the United States government are listed in Title 48 of the U.S. Code. The states of the union are NOT
23 territories!

24 "Territory: A part of a country separated from the rest, and subject to a particular jurisdiction. Geographical
25 area under the jurisdiction of another country or sovereign power.

26 A portion of the United States not within the limits of any state, which has not yet been admitted as a state of the 27 Union, but is organized with a separate legislature, and with executive and judicial powers appointed by the 28 President."

29 [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1473]

30 And the rulings of the Supreme Court confirm the above:

31 "A State does not owe its origin to the Government of the United States, in the highest or in any of its
32 branches. It was in existence before it. It derives its authority from the same pure and sacred source as itself:
33 The voluntary and deliberate choice of the people...A State is altogether exempt from the jurisdiction of the 34 Courts of the United States, or from any other exterior authority, unless in the special instances when the 35 general Government has power derived from the Constitution itself."
36 Chisholm v. Georgia, [2 Dall. \(U.S.\) 419 (Dall.) (1793)]

38 "There is no such thing as a power of inherent sovereignty in the government of the United States .... In this
39 country sovereignty resides in the people [living in the states of the Union, since the states created the United 40 States government and they came before it], and Congress can exercise no power which they have not, by their
41 Constitution entrusted to it: All else is withheld."
42 Juilliard v. Greenman: [110 U.S. 421 (1884)]

43 So what is really meant by "United States" for the three types of citizens found in federal statutes such as 8 U.S.C. §1401
44 and 8 U.S.C. §1408 and 8 U.S.C. §1452 is the "sovereignty of the United States", which exists in its fullest, most exclusive,
45 and most "general" form inside its "territories", and in federal enclaves within the states, or more generally in what we call
46 the "federal zone" in this book. The ONLY place where the exclusive sovereignty of the United States exists in the context
47 of its "territories" is under Article 1, Section 8, Clause 17 of the Constitution on federal land. In the legal field, by the 48 way, this type of exclusive jurisdiction is described as "plenary power". Very few of us are born on federal land under such

1 circumstances, and therefore very few of us technically qualify as “citizens of the United States”. By the way, the federal
 2 government does have a very limited sovereignty or “authority” inside the states of the union, but it does not exceed that of
 3 the states, nor is it absolute or unrestrained or exclusive like it is inside the “territories” of the United States listed in Title
 4 48 of the U.S. Code.

5 Let’s now see if we can confirm the above conclusions with the weasel words that the lawyers in Congress wrote into the
 6 statutes with the willful intent to deceive common people like you. The key phrase in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(38) above is “the 7 continental United States”. The definition of this term is hidden in the regulations as follows:

8 [Code of Federal Regulations]
 9 [Title 8, Volume 1]
 10 [Revised as of January 1, 2002]
 11 From the U.S. Government Printing Office via GPO Access
 12 [CITE: 8CFR215]
 13 TITLE 8--ALIENS AND NATIONALITY CHAPTER 1--IMMIGRATION AND NATURALIZATION SERVICE,
 14 DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE
 15 PART 215--CONTROLS OF ALIENS DEPARTING FROM THE UNITED STATES

 18
 19 (f) The term continental United States means the District of Columbia and the several States, except Alaska and 20 Hawaii.

21 The term “States”, which is suspiciously capitalized and is then also defined elsewhere in Title 8 as follows:

22 8 U.S.C. Sec. 1101\(a\)\(36\): State [naturalization]

23 The term "State" includes the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, Guam, and the Virgin Islands of the United
 24 States.

25 Do you see the sovereign Union states in the above definition? They aren’t there. Note that there are several entities listed
 26 in the above definition of “State”, which collectively are called “several States”. But when Congress really wants to clearly
 27 state the 50 Union states that are “foreign states” relative to them, they have no trouble at all, because here is another
 28 definition of “State” found under an older version of Title 40 of the U.S. Code prior to 2005 which refers to easements on
 29 Union state property by the federal government:

30 TITLE 40 > CHAPTER 4 > Sec. 319c.
 31 Sec. 319c. - Definitions for easement provisions

32 As used in sections 319 to 319c of this title -

33 (a) The term "State" means the States of the Union, the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto
 34 *Rico, and the possessions of the United States[**].*

35 The above section, after we found it in 2002 and documented it here, was REWRITTEN in 2005 and REMOVED from title
 36 40 of the U.S. Code in order to cover up the distinctions we are trying to make here. Does that surprise you? In fact, this 37 kind of “wordsmithing” by covetous lawyers is at the heart of how the separation of powers between the state and federal 38 governments is being systematically destroyed, as documented below:

Government Conspiracy to Destroy the Separation of Powers, Form #05.023
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

39 Did you notice in the now repealed 40 U.S.C. §319c that they used the term “means” instead of “includes” and that they
 40 said “States of the Union” instead of “several States”? You can tell they are playing word games and trying to hide their
 41 limited jurisdiction whenever they throw in the word “includes” and do not use the word “Union” in their definition of 42 “State”. As a matter of fact, section 5.6.15 of the Great IRS Hoax reveals that there is a big scandal surrounding the use of 43 the word “includes”. That word is abused as a way to illegally expand the jurisdiction of the federal government beyond its 44 clear Constitutional limits. The memorandum of law below thoroughly rebuts any lies or deception the government is 45 likely to throw at you regarding the word “includes” and you might want to read it:

Moving on, if we then substitute the definition of the term “State” from 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(36) into the definition of “continental United States” in 8 C.F.R. §215.1, we get:

8 C.F.R. §215.1

The term continental United States means the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, Guam, and the Virgin Islands of the United States, except Alaska and Hawaii.

We must then conclude that the “continental United States” means essentially the federal areas within the real (not legally defined) continental United States. We must also conclude based on the above analysis that:

3. The term “continental United States” is redundant and unnecessary within the definition of “United States” found in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(38).
4. The use of the term “continental United States**” is introduced mainly to deceive and confuse the average American about his true citizenship status as a “national” or a “state national” and not a “U.S. national”.

The above analysis also leaves us with one last nagging question: why do Alaska and Hawaii appear in the definition of “United States” in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(38), since we showed that the other “States” mentioned as part of this “United States” are federal “States”? If our hypothesis is correct that the “United States” means “the federal zone” within federal statutes and regulations and “the states of the Union” collectively within the Constitution, then the definition from the regulation above can’t include any part of a Union state that is not a federal enclave. In the case of Alaska and Hawaii, they were only recently admitted as Union states (1950’s). The legislative notes for Title 8 of the U.S. Code (entitled “Aliens and Nationality”) reveal that the title is primarily derived from the immigration and Nationality Act of 1940, which was written BEFORE Alaska and Hawaii joined the Union. Before that, they were referred to as the Territories of Alaska and Hawaii, which belonged to the “United States”. Note that 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(38) adds the phrase “of the United States” after the names of these two former territories and groups them together with other federal territories, which to us implies that they are referring to Alaska and Hawaii when they were territories rather than Union states. At the time they were federal territories, then they were federal “States”. These conclusions are confirmed by a rule of statutory construction known as “ejusdem generis”, which basically says that items of the same class or general type must be grouped together. The other items that Alaska and Hawaii are grouped with are federal territories in the list of enumerated items:

“Ejusdem generis. Of the same kind, class, or nature. In the construction of laws, wills, and other instruments, the “ejusdem generis rule” is, that where general words follow an enumeration of persons or things, by words of a particular and specific meaning, such general words are not to be construed in their widest extent, but are to be held as applying only to persons or things of the same general kind or class as those specifically mentioned. U.S. v. LaBrecque, D.C. N.J., 419 F.Supp. 430, 432. The rule, however, does not necessarily require that the general provision be limited in its scope to the identical things specifically named. Nor does it apply when the context manifests a contrary intention.

Under “ejusdem generis” canon of statutory construction, where general words follow the enumeration of particular classes of things, the general words will be construed as applying only to things of the same general class as those enumerated. Campbell v. Board of Dental Examiners, 53 Cal.App.3d. 283, 125 Cal.Rptr. 694, 696.”

[Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 517]

Many freedom lovers allow themselves to be confused by the content of the Fourteenth Amendment so that they do not believe the distinctions we are trying to make here about the differences in meaning of the term “United States” between the Constitution and federal statutes. Here is what section 1 of that Amendment says:

*United States Constitution
Fourteenth Amendment*

“Section 1. All persons born or naturalized in the United States and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the United States and of the State wherein they reside.”

The Supreme Court clarifies exactly what the phrase “subject to the jurisdiction” above means. It means the “political jurisdiction” of the United States and NOT the “legislative jurisdiction”(!):

1 “This section contemplates two sources of citizenship, and two sources only, -birth and naturalization. The
 2 persons declared to be citizens are 'all persons born or naturalized in the United States, and subject to the
 3 jurisdiction thereof.' The evident meaning of these last words is, not merely subject in some respect or degree
 4 to the jurisdiction of the United States, but completely subject to their [plural, not singular, meaning states of
 5 the Union] political jurisdiction, and owing them [the state of the Union] direct and immediate
 6 allegiance. And the words relate to the time of birth in the one case, as they do [169 U.S. 649, 725] to the time
 7 of naturalization in the other. Persons not thus subject to the jurisdiction of the United States at the time of birth
 8 cannot become so afterwards, except by being naturalized, either individually, as by proceedings under the
 9 naturalization acts, or collectively, as by the force of a treaty by which foreign territory is acquired.”
 10 U.S. v. Wong Kim Ark, [169 U.S. 649, 18 S.Ct. 456, 42 L.Ed. 890 (1898)]

11 “Political jurisdiction” is NOT the same as “legislative jurisdiction”. “Political jurisdiction” was defined by the Supreme
 12 Court in Minor v. Happersett:

13 “There cannot be a nation without a people. The very idea of a political community, such as a nation is, implies
 14 an [88 U.S. 162, 166] association of persons for the promotion of their general welfare. Each one of the 15 persons associated becomes a member of the nation formed by the association. He owes it allegiance and is
 16 entitled to its protection. Allegiance and protection are, in this connection, reciprocal obligations. The one is
 17 a compensation for the other; allegiance for protection and protection for allegiance.

18 “For convenience it has been found necessary to give a name to this membership. The object is to designate by
 19 a title the person and the relation he bears to the nation. For this purpose the words 'subject,' 'inhabitant,' and
 20 'citizen' have been used, and the choice between them is sometimes made to depend upon the form of the 21 government. Citizen is now more commonly employed, however, and as it has been considered better suited to
 22 the description of one living under a republican government, it was adopted by nearly all of the States upon
 23 their separation from Great Britain, and was afterwards adopted in the Articles of Confederation and in the
 24 Constitution of the United States. When used in this sense it [the word
 25 “citizen”] is understood as conveying the idea of membership
 26 of a nation, and nothing more.”

27 “To determine, then, who were citizens of the United States before the adoption of the amendment it is
 28 necessary to ascertain what persons originally associated themselves together to form the nation, and what
 29 were afterwards admitted to membership.”
 30 [Minor v. Happersett, 88 U.S. 162 (1874)]

31 Notice how the Supreme court used the phrase “and nothing more”, as if to emphasize that citizenship doesn’t imply
 32 legislative jurisdiction, but simply political membership. We described in detail the two political jurisdictions within our 33 country earlier in section 4.7. “Political jurisdiction” implies only the following:

- 34 1. Membership in a political community (see Minor v. Happersett, 88 U.S. 162 (1874))
- 35 2. Right to vote.
- 36 3. Right to serve on jury duty.

37 “Legislative jurisdiction”, on the other hand, implies being “completely subject” and subservient to federal laws and all
 38 “Acts of Congress”, which only people in the District of Columbia and the territories and possessions of the United States
 39 can be. You can be “completely subject to the political jurisdiction” of the United States*** without being subject in any 40 degree to a specific “Act of Congress” or the Internal Revenue Code, for instance. The final nail is put in the coffin on the 41 subject of what “subject to the jurisdiction” means in the Fourteenth Amendment, when the Supreme Court further said in 42 the above case:

43 “It is impossible to construe the words 'subject to the jurisdiction thereof,' in the opening sentence, as less
 44 comprehensive than the words 'within its jurisdiction,' in the concluding sentence of the same section; or to 45 hold that persons 'within the jurisdiction' of one of the states of the Union are not 'subject to the jurisdiction
 46 of the United States.'”
 47 U.S. v. Wong Kim Ark, [169 U.S. 649, 18 S.Ct. 456, 42 L.Ed. 890 (1898), emphasis added]

48 So “subject to the jurisdiction” means “subject to the [political] jurisdiction” of the United States***, and the Fourteenth
 49 Amendment definitely describes only those people born in states of the Union. Another very interesting conclusion reveals 50 itself from reading the following excerpt from the above case:

51 And Mr. Justice Miller, delivering the opinion of the court [legislating from the bench, in this case], in 52 analyzing the first clause, observed that “the phrase 'subject to the jurisdiction thereof' was intended to exclude

1 from its operation children of ministers, consuls, and citizens or subjects of foreign states, born within the
 2 United States.
 3 U.S. v. Wong Kim Ark, [169 U.S. 649, 18 S.Ct. 456, 42 L.Ed. 890 (1898)]

4 When we first read that, an intriguing question popped into our head:

5 Is "Heaven" a "foreign state" with respect to the United States government and are we God's "ambassadors"
 6 and "ministers" of the Sovereign ("God") in that "foreign state"?

7 Based on the way our deceitful and wicked public servants have been acting lately, we think so and here are the scriptures
 8 to back it up!

9 "For our citizenship is in heaven, from which we also eagerly wait for the Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ"
 10 [Philippians 3:20]

11 "Now, therefore, you are no longer strangers and foreigners, but fellow citizens with the saints and members
 12 of the household of God."
 13 [Ephesians 2:19, Bible, NKJV]

14 "These all died in faith, not having received the promises, but having seen them afar off were assured of them,
 15 embraced them and confessed that they were strangers and pilgrims on the earth."
 16 [Hebrews 11:13]

17 "Beloved, I beg you as sojourners and pilgrims, abstain from fleshly lusts which war against the soul..."
 18 [1 Peter 2:1]

19 Furthermore, if you read section 5.2.13 found later, you will also find that the 50 Union states are considered "foreign 20 states" and "foreign countries" with respect to the U.S. government as far as Subtitle A income taxes are concerned:

21 Foreign government: "The government of the United States of America, as distinguished from the government
 22 of the several states."
 23 [Black's Law Dictionary, 5th Edition]

24 Foreign laws: "The laws of a foreign country or sister state."
 25 [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 647]

26 Foreign states: "Nations outside of the United States...Term may also refer to another state; i.e. a sister state.
 27 The term 'foreign nations', ...should be construed to mean all nations and states other than that in which the
 28 action is brought; and hence, one state of the Union is foreign to another, in that sense."
 29 [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 648]

30 Another place you can look to find confirmation of our conclusions is the Department of State Foreign Affairs Manual,
 31 Section 7 Foreign Affairs Manual \(F.A.M.\) 1116.1-1, available on our website at:

32 <http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/Evidence/Citizenship/7FAM1100,1110,1111-DeptOfState.pdf>

33 and also available on the Dept. of State website at:

34 <http://foia.state.gov/REGS/Search.asp>

35 which says in pertinent part:

36 "d. Prior to January 13, 1941, there was no statutory definition of "the United States" for citizenship
 37 purposes. Thus there were varying interpretations. Guidance should be sought from the Department (CA/OCS)
 38 when such issues arise." [emphasis added]

39 If our own government hadn't defined the meaning of the term "United States" up until 1941, then do you think there might
 40 have been some confusion over this and that this confusion might be viewed by a reasonable person as deliberate? Can you
 41 also see how the ruling in Wong Kim Ark might have been somewhat ambiguous to the average American without a
 42 statutory (legal) reference for the terms it was using? Once again, our government likes to confuse people about its 43 jurisdiction in order to grab more of it. Here is how Thomas Jefferson explained it:

1 "Contrary to all correct example, [the Federal judiciary] are in the habit of going out of the question before
2 them, to throw an anchor ahead and grapple further hold for future advances of power. They are then in fact
3 the corps of sappers and miners, steadily working to undermine the independent rights of the States and to
4 consolidate all power in the hands of that government in which they have so important a freehold estate."
5 [Thomas Jefferson: Autobiography, 1821. ME 1:121]

6 "We all know that permanent judges acquire an esprit de corps; that, being known, they are liable to be tempted
7 by bribery; that they are misled by favor, by relationship, by a spirit of party, by a devotion to the executive or 8 legislative; that it is better to leave a cause to the decision of cross and pile than to that of a judge biased to one
9 side; and that the opinion of twelve honest jurymen gives still a better hope of right than cross and pile does."
10 [Thomas Jefferson to Abbe Arnoux, 1789. ME 7:423, Papers 15:283 ]

11 "It is not enough that honest men are appointed judges. All know the influence of interest on the mind of 12 man, and how unconsciously his judgment is warped by that influence. To this bias add that of the esprit de
13 corps, of their peculiar maxim and creed that 'it is the office of a good judge to enlarge his jurisdiction,' and 14 the absence of responsibility, and how can we expect impartial decision between the General government, of 15 which they are themselves so eminent a part, and an individual state from which they have nothing to hope 16 or fear?"
17 [Thomas Jefferson: Autobiography, 1821. ME 1:121 ]

18 "At the establishment of our Constitutions, the judiciary bodies were supposed to be the most helpless and 19 harmless members of the government. Experience, however, soon showed in what way they were to become 20 the most dangerous; that the insufficiency of the means provided for their removal gave them a freehold and 21 irresponsibility in office; that their decisions, seeming to concern individual suitors only, pass silent and
22 unheeded by the public at large; that these decisions nevertheless become law by precedent, sapping by little
23 and little the foundations of the Constitution and working its change by construction before any one has
24 perceived that that invisible and helpless worm has been busily employed in consuming its substance. In truth,
25 man is not made to be trusted for life if secured against all liability to account."
26 [Thomas Jefferson to A. Coray, 1823. ME 15:486 ]

27 "I do not charge the judges with wilful and ill-intentioned error; but honest error must be arrested where its
28 toleration leads to public ruin. As for the safety of society, we commit honest maniacs to Bedlam; so judges
29 should be withdrawn from their bench whose erroneous biases are leading us to dissolution. It may, indeed,
30 injure them in fame or in fortune; but it saves the republic, which is the first and supreme law."
31 [Thomas Jefferson: Autobiography, 1821. ME 1:122 ]

32 "The original error [was in] establishing a judiciary independent of the nation, and which, from the citadel
33 of the law, can turn its guns on those they were meant to defend, and control and fashion their proceedings
34 to its own will."
35 [Thomas Jefferson to John Wayles Eppes, 1807. FE 9:68 ]

36 "It is a misnomer to call a government republican in which a branch of the supreme power [the Federal 37 Judiciary] is independent of the nation."
38 [Thomas Jefferson to James Pleasants, 1821. FE 10:198 ]

39 "It is left... to the juries, if they think the permanent judges are under any bias whatever in any cause, to take
40 on themselves to judge the law as well as the fact. They never exercise this power but when they suspect
41 partiality in the judges; and by the exercise of this power they have been the firmest bulwarks of English
42 liberty."
43 [Thomas Jefferson to Abbe Arnoux, 1789. ME 7:423, Papers 15:283 ]

44 With respect to that last remark, keep in mind that NONE of the rulings of Supreme Court cases like Wong Kim Ark have 45 juries, so what do you think the judges are going to try to do?.. expand their power, duhhhh! Another portion of that same
46 document found in 7 Foreign Affairs Manual \(F.A.M.\) 1116.2-1 says:

47 "a. Simply stated, "subject to the jurisdiction" of the United States means subject to the laws of the United 48 States." [emphasis added]

49 So what does "subject to the laws of the United States" mean? It means subject to the exclusive legislative jurisdiction of 50 the federal government under Article 1, Section 8, Clause 17 of the Constitution, which only occurs within the federal zone.
51 It means subject to the U.S. Constitution but not most federal statutes or the Internal Revenue Code. We covered this 52 earlier in section 4.6.3 and again later throughout chapter 5. Here is how we explain the confusion created by 7 Foreign 53 Affairs Manual (F.A.M.) 1116.2-1 above in the note we attached to it inside the Acrobat file of it on our website:

54 This is a distortion. Wong Kim Ark also says: "To be 'completely subject' to the political jurisdiction of the
55 United States is to be in no respect or degree subject to the political jurisdiction of any other government."

If you are subject to a Union state government, then you CANNOT meet the criteria above. That is why a "national" is defined in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) as "a person owing permanent allegiance to a [Union] state" and why most natural persons are "nationals of the United States***" rather than "U.S.** citizens"

Let's now further explore what 7 Foreign Affairs Manual \(F.A.M.\) 1116.2-1 means when it says "subject to the laws of the United States". In doing so, we will draw on a very interesting article on our website entitled Authorities on Jurisdiction of Federal Courts found on our website at:

<http://famguardian.org/Subjects/LawAndGovt/ChallJurisdiction/AuthoritiesArticle/AuthOnJurisdiction.htm>

We start with a cite from Title 18 that helps explain the jurisdiction of "the laws of the United States":

TITLE 18 > PART III > CHAPTER 301 > Sec. 4001.
Sec. 4001. - Limitation on detention; control of prisons

(a) No citizen shall be imprisoned or otherwise detained by the United States except pursuant to an Act of Congress.

Building on this theme, we now add a corroborating citation from the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure, Rule 26, Notes of Advisory Committee on Rules, paragraph 2, in the middle,

"On the other hand since all Federal crimes are statutory  see [United States v. Hudson, 11 U.S. 32, 3 L.ed. 259 \(1812\)] and all criminal prosecutions in the Federal courts are based on acts of Congress. . . ." [emphasis added]

We emphasize the phrase "Acts of Congress" above. In order to define the jurisdiction of the Federal courts to conduct criminal prosecutions and how they might apply "the laws of the United States" in any given situation, one would have to find out what the specific definition of "Act of Congress," is. We find such a definition in Rule 54\(c\) of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure prior to Dec. 2002, wherein "Act of Congress" is defined. Rule 54(c) states:

"Act of Congress" includes any act of Congress locally applicable to and in force in the District of Columbia, in Puerto Rico, in a territory or in an insular possession."

If you want to examine this rule for yourself, here is the link:

[http://www2.law.cornell.edu/cgi-bin/foiocgi.exe/frcrm/query=\[jump!3A!27district+court!27\]/doc/{@772}?](http://www2.law.cornell.edu/cgi-bin/foiocgi.exe/frcrm/query=[jump!3A!27district+court!27]/doc/{@772}?)

The $64 question is:

"ON WHICH OF THE FOUR LOCATIONS NAMED IN RULE 54(c) IS THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT ASSERTING JURISDICTION WHEN THE U.S. ATTORNEY HAULS YOUR ASS INTO COURT ON AN INCOME TAX CRIME?"

Hint: everyone knows what and where the District of Columbia is, and everyone knows where Puerto Rico is, and territories and insular possessions are defined in Title 48 United States Code, happy hunting!

The Supreme Court says the same thing about this situation as well:

"It is no longer open to question that the general government, unlike the states, Hammer v. Dagenhart, 247 U.S. 251, 275, 38 S.Ct. 529, 3 A.L.R. 649, Ann.Cas.1918E 724, possesses no inherent power in respect of the internal affairs of the states; and emphatically not with regard to legislation." Carter v. Carter Coal Co., [298 U.S. 238, 56 S.Ct. 855 (1936)]

Keep in mind that Title 8 of the U.S. Code, which establishes citizenship under federal law is federal "legislation". I guess that means there is nothing in that title that can define or circumscribe our rights as people born within and living within a state of the Union, which is foreign to the federal government for the purposes of legislative jurisdiction. In fact, that is exactly our status as a "national" defined in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21). The term "national" is defined in the title but the rights of such a person are not limited or circumscribed there because they can't be under the Constitution. This, folks, is the essence of what it means to be truly "sovereign" with respect to the federal government, which is that you aren't the subject of any federal law. Laws limit rights and take them away. Rights don't come from laws, they come from God! America is

1 “The land of the Kings”. Every one of you is a king or ruler over your public servants, and THEY, not you, should be
2 “rendering to Caesar”, just as the Bible says in Matt. 22:15:22:

3 “The people of the state [not the federal government, but the state: IMPORTANT!], as the successors of its
4 former sovereign, are entitled to all the rights which formerly belonged to the king by his own prerogative.”
5 [Lansing v. Smith, (1829) 4 Wendell 9, (NY)]

6 “It will be admitted on all hands that with the exception of the powers granted to the states and the federal
7 government, through the Constitutions, the people of the several states are unconditionally sovereign within 8 their respective states.”
9 [Ohio L. Ins. & T. Co. v. Debolt, 16 How. 416, 14 L.Ed. 997 ]

10 “Sovereignty [that’s you!] itself is, of course, not subject to law, for it is the author and source of law; but in 11 our system, while sovereign powers are delegated to the agencies of government, sovereignty itself remains 12 with the people, by whom and for whom all government exists and acts.”
13 [Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U.S. 356, 6 S.Ct. 1064 (1886)]

14 “nationals” and “state nationals” are also further defined in 8 U.S.C. §1101 as follows:

15 TITLE 8 > CHAPTER 12 > SUBCHAPTER I > § 1101
16 § 1101. Definitions

17 (a) As used in this chapter—

18 (21) The term "national" means a person owing permanent allegiance to a state.

19 (22) The term "national of the United States" means:

20 (A) a citizen of the United States, or

21 (B) a person who, though not a citizen of the United States, owes permanent allegiance to the United 22 States.

23 Note the suspect word “permanent” in the above definition. Below is the definition of “permanent” from the same title
24 found in 8 U.S.C. §1101\(a\)\(31\):

25 (a) (a) As used in this chapter—

26 (31) The term "permanent" means a relationship of continuing or lasting nature, as distinguished from 27 temporary, but a relationship may be permanent even though it is one that may be dissolved eventually at the 28 instance either of the United States or of the individual, in accordance with law.

29 For those of you who are Christians, you realize that this life is very temporary and that nothing on this earth can be
30 permanent, and especially your life. The bible says that “the wages of sin is death” (Rom. 6:23), and so there is nothing
31 more certain than death, which means there can be nothing physical that is permanent on earth including our very short 32 lives. The only thing permanent is our spirit and not our physical body, which will certainly deteriorate and die. Therefore,
33 there can be no such thing as “permanent allegiance” on our part to anything but God for Christians.

34 When we bring up the above kinds of issues, some of our readers have said that they don’t even like being called
35 “nationals” as they are defined above, and we agree with them. However, it is a practical reality that you cannot get a
36 passport within our society without being either a “U.S. citizen” or a “national”, because state governments simply won’t 37 issue passports to those who are state nationals, which is what most of us are. That was not always true, but it is true now.
38 The compromise we make in this sort of dilemma is to clarify on our passport application that the term “U.S.” as used on
39 our passport application means the “United States of America” and not the federal United States or the federal corporation
40 called the United States government.

41 Now we ask our esteemed readers:

42 “After all the crazy circuitous logic and wild goose chasing that results from listening to the propaganda of the
43 government from its various branches on the definitions of ‘U.S. citizenship’ v. ‘U.S. nationality’, what should a 44 reasonable man conclude about the meanings of these terms? We only have two choices:

- 1 3. 'United States' as used in 8 U.S.C. §1101\(a\)\(38\) means the federal zone and 'U.S. citizens' are 2 born in the federal zone under all federal statutes and "acts of Congress". This implies that most
 3 Americans can only be 'U.S. nationals'
- 4 4. 'United States' as used in 8 U.S.C. §1101\(a\)\(38\) means the entire country and political jurisdictions
 5 that are foreign to that of the federal government which are found in the states. This implies that 6 most Americans can only be 'U.S. citizens'."

7 We believe the answer is that our system of jurisprudence is based on "innocence until proven guilty". In this case, the fact
 8 in question is: "Are you a U.S. citizen", and being "not guilty" and having our rights and sovereignty respected by our 9 deceitful government under these circumstances implies being a "national" or a "state national". Therefore, at best, we
 10 should conclude that the above analysis is correct and clearly explains the foundations of what it means to be a "national"
 11 or a "state national" and why most Americans fit that description. At the very worst, our analysis clearly establishes that 12 federal statutory and case law, at least insofar as "U.S. citizenship" is very vague and very ambiguous and needs further
 13 definition. The supreme Court has said that when laws are vague, then they are "void for vagueness", null, and 14 unenforceable. See the following cases for confirmation of this fact:

15 "A statute which either forbids or requires the doing of an act in terms so vague that men and women of 16 common intelligence must necessarily guess at its meaning and differ as to its application, violates the first 17 essential of due process of law."
 18 [Connally vs. General Construction Co., 269 U.S. 385 \(1926\)]

 20 "It is a basic principle of due process that an enactment [435 U.S. 982 , 986] is void for vagueness if its 21 prohibitions are not clearly defined. Vague laws offend several important values. First, because we assume 22 that man is free to steer between lawful and unlawful conduct, we insist that laws give the person of ordinary
 23 intelligence a reasonable opportunity to know what is prohibited, so that he may act accordingly. Vague laws
 24 may trap the innocent by not providing fair warning. Second, if arbitrary and discriminatory enforcement is to 25 be prevented, laws must provide explicit standards for those who apply them. A vague law impermissibly
 26 delegates basic policy matters to policemen, judges, and juries for resolution on an ad hoc and subjective basis,
 27 with the attendant dangers of arbitrary and discriminatory application."
 28 [Grayned v. City of Rockford, 408 U.S. 104, 108 \(1972\), emphasis added]

29 We refer you to the following additional rulings of the U.S. Supreme Court on "void for vagueness" as additional 30 authorities:

- 31 • Papachristou v. City of Jacksonville, 405 U.S. 156 (1972)
 32 • Cline v. Frink Dairy Co., 274 U.S. 445, 47 S. Ct. 681 (1927)
 33 • Sewell v. Georgia, 435 U.S. 982 (1978)

34 Here is the way one of our readers describes the irrational propaganda and laws the government writes:

35 "If it doesn't make sense, it's probably because politics is involved!"

36 Our conclusions then to the matters at our disposal are the following based on the above reasonable analysis:

- 37 • The "United States" defined in Section 1 of the Fourteenth Amendment means the states of the Union while the 38 "United States" appearing in federal statutes in most cases, means the federal zone. For instance, the definition of
 39 "United States" relating to citizenship and found in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(38) means the federal zone, as we prove in 40 questions 77 through 82 of the following:

Tax Deposition Questions, Family Guardian Fellowship
<http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/Forms/Discovery/Deposition/Section 14.htm>

- 41 • Most Americans are "nationals" or "state nationals" rather than "U.S. citizens" or "U.S. nationals" under all "acts 42 of Congress" and federal statutes. The Internal Revenue code is an "act of Congress" and a federal statute.
 43 • Our government has deliberately tried to confuse and obfuscate the laws on citizenship to fool the average
 44 American into incorrectly declaring that they are "U.S. citizens" in order to be subject to their laws and come
 45 under their jurisdiction.
 46 • The courts have not lived up to their role in challenging unconstitutional exercises of power by the other branches
 47 of government or in protecting our Constitutional rights. They are on the take like everyone else who works in the 48 federal government and have conspired with the other branches of government in illegally expanding federal 49 jurisdiction.

- Once the feds used this ruse with words to get Americans under their corrupted jurisdiction as “U.S. citizens” and presumed “taxpayers”, our federal “servants” have then made themselves into the “masters” by subjecting sovereign Americans to their corrupted laws within the federal zone that can disregard the Constitution because the Constitution doesn’t apply in these areas. By so doing, they can illegally enforce the Internal Revenue Code and abuse their powers to plunder the assets, property, labor, and lives of most Americans in the covetous pursuit of money that the law and the Constitution did not otherwise entitle them to. This act to subvert the operation of the Constitution amounts to an act of war and treason on the sovereignty of Americans and the sovereign states that they live in, punishable under Article III, Clause 3 of the U.S. Constitution with death by execution.

Old (and bad) habits die hard. Even if you don’t want to believe any of the foregoing analysis or conclusions and you consequently still stubbornly cling to the false notion that you are a statutory “citizen of the United States**” instead of a “national” or “state national”, the fact remains that all “nationals and citizens of the United States” are also defined in 8 U.S.C. §1401 to include “national” status. That means that being a privileged statutory “citizen of the United States**” under federal law is a dual citizenship status while being a statutory “national” is only a single status (U.S. nationality derived from state birth and citizenship):

TITLE 8 > CHAPTER 12 > SUBCHAPTER III > Part I > Sec. 1401.
Sec. 1401. - Nationals and citizens of United States at birth

The following shall be nationals and citizens of the United States at birth:

(a) a person born in the United States, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof;

[...]

This type of dual status is described in Black’s Law Dictionary as follows:

Dual citizenship. Citizenship in two different countries. Status of citizens of United States who reside within a state; i.e., person who are born or naturalized in the U.S. are citizens of the U.S. and the state wherein they reside.
 [Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 498]

The term “citizenship” as used by the courts means “nationality”, so dual citizenship means “dual nationality and allegiance”.<sup>185</sup> You see, even the law dictionary says your state is a “country”, which means you are a national of that country according to 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21).

What can we do to correct our citizenship status and protect our liberties? Well, since you are already a “national” as a dual national called a “citizen of the United States”, you can abandon half of your dual citizenship and we will show you how and why you should do this in section 4.13.17. The door is still therefore wide open for you to correct your status and liberate yourself from the government’s chains of slavery, and the law authorizes you to do this. The government also can’t stop you from doing this, because here is how one court explained legislation passed by Congress authorizing expatriation only days before the Fourteenth Amendment was ratified and which is still in force (stare decisis) today:

You see, our politicians know that citizenship in any political jurisdiction can be regarded as an assault on our liberties, and that sometimes we have to renounce it in order to protect those liberties, so they provided a lawful way to do exactly that. Another reason they have to allow expatriation of any or all aspects of one's citizenship is that if they didn't, they could no longer call citizenship "voluntary", now could they? And if it isn't voluntary, then the whole country becomes one big DESPOTIC TOTALITARIAN SLAVE CAMP and the Declaration of Independence goes into the toilet! Remember what that Declaration said?

That to secure these rights, Governments are instituted among Men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed. --That whenever any Form of Government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the Right of the People to alter or to abolish it, and to institute new Government, laying its foundation on such principles and organizing its powers in such form, as to them shall seem most likely to effect their Safety and Happiness." [emphasis added]

How can you be "independent" and "sovereign" if you can't even declare or determine your own citizenship status? Citizenship must therefore be voluntary and consensual or the enforcement of all laws based on it becomes unjust, and we made that point very clear earlier in section 4.13.11 when we talked about federal citizenship. If you are a "U.S. citizen" and you have a dual citizenship as we just defined earlier using 8 U.S.C. §1401 above, then we will clearly establish later in 4.13.17 that the government cannot unilaterally sever any aspect of your dual citizenship and that it is a permanent contract which only you [not the government] can revoke any aspect of either by dying or by voluntary choice in a process initiated by you. Every aspect of your citizenship status must be voluntary or it is unjust and if you want to eliminate or revoke the federal portion of your citizenship status only and retain the "national" or "state citizen" status that you already have as a "U.S. citizen", then the government cannot lawfully stop you, and if they try to, your citizenship is no longer voluntary but compelled. Once it is compelled, your compliance with federal laws based on citizenship as a SOVERIEGN is no longer voluntary or consensual, but is based on duress, fraud, extortion, and amounts to slavery in violation of the Thirteenth Amendment to the U.S Constitution! What are you waiting for and why haven't you corrected your citizenship status yet?

4.13.12.2 Voting as a "national" or "state national"

The point of reference in the example given below is the California Republic (notice we didn't say "State of California", because that term means federal areas inside California!). The cite below doesn't define "United States citizen" but it's safe to conclude that it means a "national of the United States***", and you should specify this on your voter registration document to remove any possibility for false presumption.

CALIFORNIA CONSTITUTION
ARTICLE 2 VOTING, INITIATIVE AND REFERENDUM, AND RECALL

SEC. 2. A United States citizen 18 years of age and resident in this State may vote.

The situation may be different for other states. If you live in a state other than California, you will need to check the laws of your specific home state in order to determine whether the prohibition against voting applies to "nationals" or "state nationals" in your state. If authorities give you a bad time about trying to register to vote without being a federal "U.S. citizen", then show them the Declaration of Independence, which says:

"We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness.—

[Declaration of Independence]

Emphasize that it doesn't say "endowed by their government" or "endowed by their federal citizenship" or "endowed by their registrar of voters", but instead "endowed by their CREATOR". The rights to life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness certainly include suffrage and the right to own property. Suffrage is necessary in turn to protect personal property from encroachment by the government and socialistic fellow citizens. These are not "privileges" that result from federal citizenship. They are rights that result from birth! Thomas Jefferson said so:

1 "A free people [claim] their rights as derived from the laws of nature, and not as the gift of their chief
2 magistrate."

3 [Thomas Jefferson: Rights of British America, 1774. ME 1:209, Papers 1:134]

4 "Can the liberties of a nation be thought secure when we have removed their only firm basis, a conviction in the
5 minds of the people that these liberties are of the gift of God? That they are not to be violated but with His
6 wrath?"

7 [Thomas Jefferson: Notes on Virginia Q.XVIII, 1782. ME 2:227 ]

8 Below is a summary of our research relating to the right to vote as a "national" or "state national":

- 9 1. Some states require that an elector be a "citizen of the United States" or "United States citizen"
- 10 1.1. See voter registration form, available at Post Office
- 11 1.2. This qualification can interfere with the right to vote by a U.S. national .
- 12 1.2.1. Voter registration form exhibits a formal affidavit, signed under penalties of perjury, that voter is a "U.S.
13 citizen"
- 14 1.2.1.1. Such an affidavit is admissible evidence in any state or federal court
- 15 1.2.1.2. Federal courts use this affidavit to establish court jurisdiction or "U.S. citizen" status.
- 16 1.2.2. Perjury is punishable by 2 or 3 years in state prison (see warnings on registration form)
- 17 1.2.3. Warnings are in CONSPICUOUS text, which prevents signer from saying he didn't see it
- 18 1.3. To avoid establishing a false presumption that you are a "citizens of the United States" under federal statutes, you 19 must clarify the status of your citizenship on their voter registration in order to perfect and maintain their 20 sovereign status.
- 21 1.3.1. Most registration forms were signed in ignorance of the 2 classes of citizenship in America
- 22 1.3.2. We must claim to be a "national of the United States of America" but not a "citizen of the United States"
23 (refer to 8 U.S.C. § 1101(a)(21) through 8 U.S.C. § 1101(a)(22) and 8 U.S.C. § 1408).
- 24 1.3.3. With this knowledge, "nationals" and "state nationals" elect "to be treated" as "U.S. citizens" under the 25 internal revenue code by ignorantly and incorrectly claiming their citizenship. To avoid this trap, they
26 should clarify their citizenship on their voter registration as outlined in section 3.6.6 of the Sovereignty
27 Forms and Instructions Manual, Form #10.005 entitled "Voter Registration Affidavit Attachment".
- 28 2. Registering to vote produces material evidence that one is a "U.S. citizen" under federal statutes who is, by definition, 29 in receipt of federal privileges, whereas State Citizens are not.
- 30 2.1. State Citizens are protected by constitutional limits against direct taxation
- 31 2.1.1. Direct taxes must be apportioned per Article 1, Section 9, Clause 4 and Article 1, Section 2, Clause 3
- 32 2.2. Federal citizens are not protected by these same constitutional limits
- 33 3. If you are a "national" and you live in a state that won't allow you to register to vote without clarifying your status as a 34 "national" on the application form, then you should take the following measures in order to avoid jeopardizing their 35 Natural Born state Citizenship status:
- 36 3.1. Cancel your voter registration to perfect and maintain your sovereign status under the Law.
- 37 3.2. Litigate to regain your right to vote as a "national" rather than a "U.S. citizen".
- 38 4. The Fifteenth and the Nineteenth Amendments to the U.S. Constitution only protect the right to vote for those who are 39 "citizens of the United States". They do NOT protect the right to vote for those persons who are "U.S. nationals".

40 4.13.12.3 Serving on Jury Duty as a "national" or "state national"

41 Serving on jury service is not necessarily or exclusively a privilege arising from being a "citizen". Your state may apply
42 additional criteria to the qualifications.

43 "To remove the cause of them; to obviate objections to the validity of legislation similar to that contained in the 44 first section of the Civil Rights Act; to prevent the possibility of hostile and discriminating legislation in future
45 by a State against any citizen of the United States, and the enforcement of any such legislation already had; and 46 to [100 U.S. 339, 365] secure to all persons within the jurisdiction of the States the equal protection of the 47 laws,-the first section of the Fourteenth Amendment was adopted. Its first clause declared who are citizens of 48 the United States and of the States. It thus removed from discussion the question, which had previously been 49 debated, and though decided, not settled, by the judgment in the Dred Scott Case, whether descendants of 50 persons brought to this country and sold as slaves were citizens, within the meaning of the Constitution. It also 51 recognized, if it did not create, a national citizenship, as contradistinguished from that of the States. But the 52 privilege or the duty, whichever it may be called, of acting as a juror in the courts of the country, is not an 53 incident of citizenship. Women are citizens; so are the aged above sixty, and children in their minority; yet they 54 are not allowed in Virginia to act as jurors. Though some of these are in all respects qualified for such service,
55 no one will pretend that their exclusion by law from the jury list impairs their rights as citizens."

[Ex Parte State of Virginia, 100 U.S. 339 (1879)]

Below is a summary of our research relating to the right to serve on a jury as a “U.S. national”:

1. Some states and the federal government require that a person who wishes to serve on jury duty must be a “citizen of the United States”. This is especially true in federal courts.
  - 1.1. The jury duty disqualification form says that you are disqualified if you are not a “citizen of the United States”. Since state statutes don’t define the meaning of the term “citizen of the United States” or “U.S. citizen”, you can just say that you are and then simply define what you mean on the form itself.
  - 1.2. The only way to overcome the built-in presumption that we are “citizens of the United States” on the jury summons is to file an affidavit in response to the summons claiming to be a “national of the United States of America” but not a “citizen of the United States” (refer to 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) through 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22) and 8 U.S.C. §1408).
2. Serving on jury duty produces material evidence useful to the state or federal government that one is a federal citizen who is in receipt of government privileges, whereas State Citizens are not in receipt of such privileges.
3. If you are a Natural Born state Citizens and you live in a state that whose laws won’t allow you to serve on jury duty without committing fraud on the jury summons by claiming that you are a “U.S. citizen”, you should take the following measures in order to avoid jeopardizing your Natural Born state Citizenship status:
  - 3.1. Cancel your jury summons to perfect and maintain your sovereign status under the Law.
  - 3.2. Litigate to regain your right to serve on a jury without being a “U.S. citizen” and instead being a “U.S. national”.

4.13.12.4 Rebutted arguments against those who believe people born in the states of the Union are not “nationals”

A few people have disagreed with our position on the “national” and “state national” citizenship status of persons born in states of the Union. These people have sent us what might appear to be contradictory information from websites maintained by the federal government. We thank them for taking the time to do so and we will devote this section to rebutting all of their incorrect views. Below are some of the arguments against our position on “state national” citizenship that we have received and enumerated to facilitate rebuttal. We have boldfaced the relevant portions to make the information easier to spot.

1. U.S. Supreme Court, Miller v. Albright, 523 U.S. 420 (1998), footnote #2:

“2. Nationality and citizenship are not entirely synonymous; one can be a national of the United States and yet not a citizen. 8 U.S.C. § 1101(a)(22). The distinction has little practical impact today, however, for the only remaining noncitizen nationals are residents of American Samoa and Swains Island. See T. Aleinikoff, D. Martin, & H. Motomura, Immigration: Process and Policy 974-975, n. 2 (3d ed. 1995). The provision that a child born abroad out of wedlock to a United States citizen mother gains her nationality has been interpreted to mean that the child gains her citizenship as well; thus, if the mother is not just a United States national, but also a United States citizen, the child is a United States citizen. See 7 Gordon § 93.04[2][b], p. 93-42; id., § 93.04[2][d][viii], p. 93-49.”
 [Miller v. Albright, 523 U.S. 420 (1998)]

2. Volume 7 of the Foreign Affairs Manual (FAM) section 1111.3 published by the Dept. of States at <http://foia.state.gov/REGS/Search.asp> says the following about nationals but not citizens of the United States:

c. Historically, Congress, through statutes, granted U.S. nationality, but not citizenship, to persons born or inhabiting territory acquired by the United States through conquest or treaty. At one time or other natives and certain other residents of Puerto Rico, the U.S. Virgin Islands, the Philippines, Guam, and the Panama Canal Zone were U.S. non-citizen nationals.

d. Under current law (the Immigration and Nationality Act of 1952, as amended through October 1994), only persons born in American Samoa and the Swains Islands are U.S. nationals (Secs. 101(a)(29) and 308(I) INA).

3. The Social Security Program Operations Manual System (POMS) at <http://policy.ssa.gov/poms.nsf/poms> says the following:

Social Security Program Operations Manual System (POMS), Section RS 02001.003 “U.S. Nationals”

The term includes both U.S. citizens and persons who, though not citizens, owe permanent allegiance to the United States. As noted in RS 02640.005 D., the only persons who are nationals but not citizens are American Samoans and natives of Swains Island.

4. The USDA Food Stamp Service, website says at <http://www.fns.usda.gov/fsp/rules/Memo/Support/02/polimgrt.htm>:

Non-citizens who qualify outright

There are some immigrants who are immediately eligible for food stamps without having to meet other immigrant requirements, as long as they meet the normal food stamp requirements:

- Non-citizen nationals (people born in American Samoa or Swains Island).
- American Indians born in Canada.
- Members (born outside the U.S.) of Indian tribes under Section 450b(e) of the Indian Self-Determination and Education Assistance Act.
- Members of Hmong or Highland Laotian tribes that helped the U.S. military during the Vietnam era, and who are legally living in the U.S., and their spouses or surviving spouses and dependent children.

The defects that our detractors fail to realize about the above information are the following points:

1. The term “United States” as used in 8 U.S.C. §1408 means the federal zone based on the definitions provided in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(36), 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(38), and 8 C.F.R. §215.1(f). See the following:

http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/Forms/Discovery/Deposition/Section\_14.htm

2. All of the cites that our detractors quote come from federal statutes and “acts of Congress”. The federal government is not authorized under our Constitution or under international law to prescribe the citizenship status of persons who neither reside within nor were born within its territorial jurisdiction. The only thing that federal statutes can address are the status of persons who either reside in, were born in, or resided in the past within the territorial jurisdiction of the federal government. People born within states of the Union do not satisfy this requirement and their citizenship status resulting from that birth is determined only under state and not federal law. State jurisdiction is foreign to federal jurisdiction EXCEPT in federal areas within a state. The quote below confirms this, keeping in mind that Title 8 of the U.S. Code qualifies as “legislation”:

“While states are not sovereign in true sense of term but only quasi sovereign, yet in respect of all powers reserved to them [under the Constitution] they are supreme and independent of federal government as that government within its sphere is independent of the states.”

“It is no longer open to question that the general government, unlike the states, Hammer v. Dagenhart, 247 U.S. 251, 275, 38 S.Ct. 529, 3 A.L.R. 649, Ann.Cas.1918E 724, possesses no inherent power in respect of the internal affairs of the states; and emphatically not with regard to legislation.”
[Carter v. Carter Coal Co., 298 U.S. 238, 56 S.Ct. 855 (1936)]

3. The only thing you need in order to obtain a USA passport is “allegiance”. 22 U.S.C. §212. If the federal government is willing to issue you a passport, then they regard you as a “national”, because the only type of citizenship that carries with it exclusively allegiance is that of a “national”. 8 U.S.C. §1101. See:

<http://famguardian.org/Subjects/Taxes/Citizenship/ApplyingForAPassport.htm>

4. USA passports indicate that you are a “citizen OR national”:

“citizen/national”= “citizen” OR “national”

“/”= “virgule”

5. The quotes of our detractors above recognize only one of the four different ways of becoming a “national but not citizen of the United States” described in 8 U.S.C. §1408. They also recognize only one of the three different

1 definitions of “United States” that a person can be a “national” of, as revealed in Hooven & Allison Co. v. Evatt, 324
 2 U.S. 652 (1945) . They also fail to recognize that an 8 U.S.C. §1452 “national but not citizen of the United States**”
 3 is not necessarily the same as a “citizen but not national of the United States at birth”.

- 4 6. Information derived from informal publications or advice of employees of federal agencies are not admissible in a
 5 court of law as evidence upon which to base a good faith belief. The only basis for good-faith belief is a reading of the 6 actual statute or regulation that implements it. The reason for this is that employees of the government are frequently
 7 wrong, and frequently not only say wrong things, but in many cases the people who said them had no lawful delegated
 8 authority to say such things. See <http://famguardian.org/Subjects/Taxes/Articles/reliance.htm> for an excellent treatise 9 from an attorney on why this is.
- 10 7. People writing the contradictory information falsely “presume” that the term “citizen” in a general sense that most 11 Americans use is the same as the term “citizen” as used in the definition of “citizens and nationals of the United States”
 12 found in 8 U.S.C. §1401. In fact, we conclusively prove later in section 5.2.14 that this is emphatically not the case. A
 13 “citizen” as used in the Internal Revenue Code and most federal statutes means a person born in a territory or 14 possession of the United States, and not in a state of the Union. Americans born in states of the Union are a different
 15 type of “citizen”, and we show in section 5.2.14 that these types of people are “nationals” and “state nationals” but not
 16 “citizens” or “U.S. citizens” in the context of any federal statute.

17 “The 1st section of the 14th article [Fourteenth Amendment], to which our attention is more specifically invited,
 18 *opens with a definition of citizenship—not only citizenship of the United States[***], but citizenship of the*
 19 states. No such definition was previously found in the Constitution, nor had any attempt been made to define
 20 it by act of Congress. It had been the occasion of much discussion in the courts, by the executive departments
 21 and in the public journals. It had been said by eminent judges that no man was a citizen of the United
 22 *States[***] except as he was a citizen of one of the states composing the Union. Those therefore, who had*
 23 been born and resided always in the District of Columbia or in the territories, though within the United
 24 *States[*], were not citizens. Whether this proposition was sound or not had never been judicially decided.”*
 25 [Slaughter-House Cases, 83 U.S. (16 Wall.) 36, 21 L.Ed. 394 (1873)]

26 We therefore challenge those who make this unwarranted presumption to provide law and evidence proving us wrong
 27 on this point.

- 28 8. Whatever citizenship we enjoy we are entitled to abandon. This is our right, as declared both by the Congress and the 29 Supreme Court. See Revised Statutes, section 1999, page. 350, 1868 and section 4.13.17. “citizens and nationals of 30 the United States” as defined in 8 U.S.C. §1401 have two statuses: “citizen” and “national”. We are entitled to 31 abandon either of these two. If we abandon nationality, then we automatically lose the “citizen” part, because 32 nationality is where we obtain our allegiance. But if we abandon the “citizen” part, then we still retain our nationality
 33 under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21). This is the approach we advocated earlier in section 4.13.12.1. Because all citizenship
 34 must be consensual, then the government must respect our ability to abandon those types of citizenship we find 35 objectionable. Consequently, if either you or the government believe that you are a “citizen and national of the United 36 States” under 8 U.S.C. §1401, then you are entitled by law to abandon only the “citizen” portion and retain the 37 “national” portion, and 8 U.S.C. §1452 tells you how to have that choice recognized by the Department of State.

38 Item 2 above is important, because it establishes that the federal government has no authority to write law that prescribes
 39 the citizenship status of persons born outside of federal territorial jurisdiction and within the states of the Union. The U.S.
 40 Constitution in Article 1, Section 8, Clause 4 empowers Congress to write “an uniform Rule of Naturalization”, but 41 “naturalization” is only one of two ways of acquiring citizenship. Birth is the other way, and the states have exclusive 42 jurisdiction and legislative authority over the citizenship status of those people who acquire their state citizenship by virtue
 43 of birth within states of the Union. Here is what the Supreme Court said on this subject:

44 “The power of naturalization, vested in congress by the constitution, is a power to confer citizenship, not a
 45 power to take it away. 'A naturalized citizen,' said Chief Justice Marshall, 'becomes a member of the society,
 46 possessing all the rights of a native citizen, and standing, in the view of the constitution, on the footing of a
 47 native. The constitution does not authorize congress to enlarge or abridge those rights. The simple power of 48 the national legislature is to prescribe a uniform rule of naturalization, and the exercise of this power
 49 exhausts it, so far as respects the individual.”
 50 [U.S. v. Wong Kim Ark, 169 U.S. 649 (1898)]

51

52 “A naturalized citizen is indeed made a citizen under an act of Congress, but the act does not proceed to give,
 53 to regulate, or to prescribe his capacities. He becomes a member of the society, possessing all the rights of a
 54 native citizen, and standing, in the view of the constitution, on the footing of a native. The constitution does
 55 not authorize Congress to enlarge or abridge those rights. The simple power of the national Legislature, is to 56 prescribe a uniform rule of naturalization, and the exercise of this power exhausts it, so far as respects the 57 individual. The constitution then takes him up, and, among other rights, extends to him the capacity of suing

in the Courts of the United States, precisely under the same circumstances under which a native might sue. He is *828 distinguishable in nothing from a native citizen, except so far as the constitution makes the distinction. The law makes none.
[Osborn v. Bank of U.S., 22 U.S. 738 (1824)]

The rules of comity prescribe whether or how this citizenship is recognized by the federal government, and by reading 8 U.S.C. §1408, it is evident that the federal government chose not directly recognize within Title 8 of the U.S.C. the citizenship status of persons born within states of the Union to parents neither of whom were “U.S. citizens” under 8 U.S.C. §1401 and neither of whom “resided” inside the federal zone prior to the birth of the child. We suspect that this is because not only does the Constitution not give them this authority, but more importantly because doing so would spill the beans on the true citizenship of persons born in states of the Union and result in a mass exodus from the tax system by most Americans.

As we said, there are four ways identified in 8 U.S.C. §1408 that a person may be a “national but not citizen of the United States” at birth. We have highlighted the section that our detractors are ignoring, and which we quote frequently on our treatment of the subject of citizenship.

TITLE 8 > CHAPTER 12 > SUBCHAPTER III > Part I > Sec. 1408.
Sec. 1408. - Nationals but not citizens of the United States at birth

Unless otherwise provided in section 1401 of this title, the following shall be nationals, but not citizens, of the United States at birth:

(1) A person born in an outlying possession of the United States on or after the date of formal acquisition of such possession;

(2) A person born outside the United States and its outlying possessions of parents both of whom are nationals, but not citizens, of the United States, and have had a residence in the United States, or one of its outlying possessions prior to the birth of such person;

(3) A person of unknown parentage found in an outlying possession of the United States while under the age of five years, until shown, prior to his attaining the age of twenty-one years, not to have been born in such outlying possession; and

(4) A person born outside the United States and its outlying possessions of parents one of whom is an alien, and the other a national, but not a citizen, of the United States who, prior to the birth of such person, was physically present in the United States or its outlying possessions for a period or periods totaling not less than seven years in any continuous period of ten years -

(A) during which the national parent was not outside the United States or its outlying possessions for a continuous period of more than one year, and

(B) at least five years of which were after attaining the age of fourteen years.

The proviso of section 1401(g) of this title shall apply to the national parent under this paragraph in the same manner as it applies to the citizen parent under that section

Subsections (1), (3), and (4) above deal with persons who are born in outlying possessions of the United States, and Swains Island and American Samoa would certainly be included within these subsections. These people would be the people who are addressed by the information cited by our detractors from federal websites above. Subsection (2), however, deals with persons who are born outside of the federal United States (federal zone) to parents who are “nationals but not citizens of the United States” and who resided at one time in the federal United States. Anyone born overseas to American parents is a “non-citizen U.S. national” under this section and this status is one that is not recognized in any of the cites provided by our detractors but is recognized by the law itself. Since states of the Union are outside the federal United States and outside the “United States” used in Title 8, then parents born in states of the Union satisfy the requirement for “national but not citizen of the United States” status found in 8 U.S.C. §1408(2).

“Let’s assume you’re right and that 8 U.S.C. §1408(2) prescribes the citizenship status of persons born in a state of the Union. The problem I have with that view is that ‘United States’ means the federal zone in that section, and subsection (2) requires that the parents must reside within the ‘United States’ prior to the birth of the child. This means they must have ‘resided’ in the federal zone before the child was born, and most people don’t satisfy that requirement.”

Let us explain why the above concern is unfounded. According to 8 U.S.C. §1408(2), the parents must also reside in the federal United States prior to the birth of the child. We assert that most people born in states of the Union do in fact meet this requirement and we will now explain why. They can meet this requirement by any one of the following ways:

1. Serving in the military or residing on a military base or occupied territory.
2. Filing an IRS form 1040 (not a 1040NR, but a 1040). The federal 1040 form says “U.S. individual” at the top left. A “U.S. individual” is defined in 26 C.F.R. §1.1441-1(c)(3) as either an “alien” residing within the federal zone or a “nonresident alien” with income from within the federal zone. Since “nonresident aliens” file the 1040NR form, the only thing that a person who files a 1040 form can be is a “resident alien” as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(b) and 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1(a)(2)(ii) or a “citizen” residing abroad who attaches a form 2555 to the 1040. See section 5.2.11 for further details on this if you are curious. Consequently, being a “resident alien” qualifies you as a “resident”. You are not, in fact a resident because you didn’t physically occupy the federal zone for the year covered by the tax return, but if the government is going to treat you as a “resident” by accepting and processing your tax return, then they have an obligation to treat either you or your parents as “residents” in all respects, including those related to citizenship. To do otherwise would be inconsistent and hypocritical.
3. Spending time in a military hospital.
4. Visiting federal property or a federal reservation within a state routinely as a contractor working for the federal government.
5. Working for the federal government on a military reservation or inside of a federal area.
6. Sleeping in a national park.
7. Spending time in a federal courthouse.

The reason why items 3 through 7 above satisfy the requirement to be a “resident” of the federal United States is because the term “resident” is nowhere defined in Title 8 of the U.S. Code, and because of the definition of “resident” in Black’s Law Dictionary:

“Resident. Any person who occupies a dwelling within the State, has a present intent to remain within the State for a period of time, and manifests the genuineness of that intent by establishing an ongoing physical presence within the State together with indicia that his presence within the State is something other than merely transitory in nature.”
[Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1309]

The key word in the above is “permanent”, which is defined as it pertains to citizenship in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(31) below:

TITLE 8 > CHAPTER 12 > SUBCHAPTER I > Sec. 1101
Sec. 1101. - Definitions

(31) The term “permanent” means a relationship of continuing or lasting nature, as distinguished from temporary, but a relationship may be permanent even though it is one that may be dissolved eventually at the instance either of the United States or of the individual, in accordance with law.

Since Title 8 does not define the term “lasting” or “ongoing” or “transitory”, we referred to the regular dictionary, which says:

“lasting: existing or continuing a long while: ENDURING.”
[Webster’s Ninth New Collegiate Dictionary, ISBN 0-87779-510-X, 1983, p. 675]

“ongoing: 1. being actually in process 2: continuously moving forward; GROWING”
[Webster’s Ninth New Collegiate Dictionary, ISBN 0-87779-510-X, 1983, p. 825]

“transitory: 1: tending to pass away: not persistent 2: of brief duration: TEMPORARY syn see TRANSIENT.”

No period of time is specified in order to meet the criteria for “permanent”, so even if we lived there a day or a few hours, we were still there “permanently”. The Bible also says in Matt. 6:26-31 that we should not be anxious or presumptuous about tomorrow and take each day as a new day. The last verse in that sequence says:

“Therefore do not worry about tomorrow, for tomorrow will worry about its own trouble.”
[Matt. 6:31, Bible, NKJV]

1 In fact, we are not allowed to be presumptuous at all, which means we aren't allowed to assume or intend anything about
2 the future. Our future is in the hands of a sovereign Lord, and we exist by His good graces alone.

3 *"Come now, you who say, 'Today or tomorrow we will go to such and such a city, spend a year there, buy and
4 sell, and make a profit'; whereas you do not know what will happen tomorrow. For what is your life? It is even
5 a vapor that appears for a little time and then vanishes away. Instead you ought to say, 'If the Lord wills, we
6 shall live and do this or that.' But now you boast in your arrogance. All such boasting is evil."
7 [James 4:13-16, Bible, NKJV]*

8 *"But the person who does anything presumptuously, whether he is native-born or a stranger, that one brings 9 reproach on the Lord, and he shall be cut off from among his people."
10 [Numbers 15:30, Bible, NKJV]*

11 Consequently, the Christian's definition of "permanent" is anything that relates to what we intend for today only and does
12 not include anything that might happen starting tomorrow or at any time in the future beyond tomorrow. Being 13 presumptuous about the future is "boastful" and "evil", according to the Bible! The future is uncertain and our lives are 14 definitely not "permanent" in God's unlimited sense of eternity. Therefore, wherever we are is where we "intend" to 15 permanently reside as Christians.

16 Even if you don't like the above analysis of why most Americans born in states of the Union are "nationals but not citizens
17 of the United States" under 8 U.S.C. §1408(2), we still explained above that you have the right to abandon only the 18 "citizen" portion and retain the "national" portion of any imputed dual citizenship status under 8 U.S.C. §1401. We also 19 show you how to have that choice formally recognized by the U.S. Department of State in section 2.5.3.13 of the 20 Sovereignty Forms and Instructions Manual, Form #10.005 under the authority of 8 U.S.C. §1452, and we know people
21 who have successfully employed this strategy, so it must be valid.

22 Furthermore, even if you don't want to believe that any of the preceding discussion is valid, we also explained that the 23 federal government cannot directly prescribe the citizenship status of persons born within states of the Union under 24 international law. To illustrate this fact, consider the following extension of a popular metaphor:

25 *"If a tree fell in the forest, and Congress refused to pass a law recognizing that it fell and forced the agencies in 26 the executive branch to refuse to acknowledge that it fell because doing so would mean an end to income tax
27 revenues, then did it really fall?"*

28 The answer to the above questions is emphatically "yes". We said that the rules of comity prevail in that case the federal 29 government recognizing the citizenship status of those born in states of the Union. But what indeed is their status under 30 federal law? 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) defines a "national" as:

31 TITLE 8 > CHAPTER 12 > SUBCHAPTER I > Sec. 1101.
32 Sec. 1101. - Definitions

33 (21) The term "national" means a person owing permanent allegiance to a state.

34 If you were born in a state of the Union, you are a "national of the United States" because the "state" that you have
35 allegiance to is the confederation of states called the "United States". As further confirmation of this fact, if 36 "naturalization" is defined as the process of conferring "nationality" under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(23), and "expatriation" is
37 defined as the process of abandoning "nationality and allegiance" by the Supreme Court in Perkins v. Elg, 307 U.S. 325
38 (1939), then "nationality" is the key that determines citizenship status. What makes a person a "national" is "allegiance" to 39 a state. The only type of citizenship which carries with it the notion of "allegiance" is that of "national", as shown in 8
40 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) and 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22)(B). You will not find "allegiance" mentioned anywhere in Title 8 in 41 connection with those persons who claim to be "citizens and nationals of the United States" as defined in 8 U.S.C. §1401:

42 TITLE 8 > CHAPTER 12 > SUBCHAPTER I > Sec. 1101.
43 Sec. 1101. - Definitions

44 (a) (22) The term "national of the United States" means

45 (A) a citizen of the United States, or

46 (B) a person who, though not a citizen of the United States, owes permanent [but not necessarily exclusive]
47 allegiance to the United States.

1 People born in states of the Union can and most often do have allegiance to the confederation of states called the "United
 2 States" just as readily as people who were born on federal property, and the federal government under the rules of comity
 3 should be willing to recognize that allegiance without demanding that such persons surrender their sovereignty, become tax
 4 slaves, and come under the exclusive jurisdiction of federal statutes by pretending to be people who live in the federal zone.
 5 Not doing so would be an injury and oppression of their rights, and would be a criminal conspiracy against rights, because 6 remember, people who live inside the federal zone have no rights, by the admission of the Supreme Court in Downes v.
 7 Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 (1901):

8 TITLE 18 > PART 1 > CHAPTER 13 > Sec. 241.
 9 Sec. 241. - Conspiracy against rights

10 If two or more persons conspire to injure, oppress, threaten, or intimidate any person in any State, Territory,
 11 Commonwealth, Possession, or District in the free exercise or enjoyment of any right or privilege secured to 12 him by the Constitution or laws of the United States, or because of his having so exercised the same; or

13 If two or more persons go in disguise on the highway, or on the premises of another, with intent to prevent or 14 hinder his free exercise or enjoyment of any right or privilege so secured -

15 They shall be fined under this title or imprisoned not more than ten years, or both; and if death results from the 16 acts committed in violation of this section or if such acts include kidnapping or an attempt to kidnap,
 17 aggravated sexual abuse or an attempt to commit aggravated sexual abuse, or an attempt to kill, they shall be
 18 fined under this title or imprisoned for any term of years or for life, or both, or may be sentenced to death

19 It would certainly constitute a conspiracy against rights to force or compel a person to give up their true citizenship status in 20 order to acquire any kind of citizenship recognition from a corrupted federal government. The following ruling by the 21 Supreme Court plainly agrees with these conclusions:

22 "It would be a palpable incongruity to strike down an act of state legislation which, by words of express
 23 divestment, seeks to strip the citizen of rights guaranteed by the federal Constitution, but to uphold an act by 24 which the same result is accomplished under the guise of a surrender of a right in exchange for a valuable
 25 *privilege which the state threatens otherwise to withhold. It is not necessary to challenge the proposition that,
 26 as a general rule, the state, having power to deny a privilege altogether, may grant it upon such conditions as
 27 it sees fit to impose. But the power of the state in that respect is not unlimited, and one of the limitations is 28 that it may not impose conditions which require the relinquishment of Constitutional rights. If the state may 29 compel the surrender of one constitutional right as a condition of its favor, it may, in like manner, compel a
 30 surrender of all. It is inconceivable that guaranties embedded in the Constitution of the United States may 31 thus be manipulated out of existence."

32 [Frost v. Railroad Commission, 271 U.S. 583, 46 S.Ct. 605 (1926)]

33 Lastly, we will close this section with a list of questions aimed at those who still challenge our position on being a "national 34 of the United States". If you are going to lock horns with us or throw rocks, please start by answering the following 35 questions or your inquiry will be ignored. Remember Abraham Lincoln's famous saying: "He has a right to criticize who 36 has a heart to help.":

37 1. "Expatriation" is defined in Perkins v. Elg, 307 U.S. 325 (1939) as:

38 "Expatriation is the voluntary renunciation or abandonment of nationality and allegiance."
 39 [Perkins v. Elg, 307 U.S. 325; 59 S.Ct. 884; 83 L.Ed. 1320 (1939)]

40 How can you abandon your nationality as a "national" or "state national" with the Secretary of the State of the United 41 States under 8 U.S.C. §1481 if you didn't have it to begin with?

42 2. Naturalization is defined in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(23) as:

43 8 U.S.C. §1101

44 \(a\) Definitions

45 \(23\) The term "naturalization" means the conferring of nationality NOT "citizenship" or "U.S. citizenship", but 46 "nationality", which means "[national"] of a state upon a person after birth, by any means whatsoever. "

1 How can you say a person isn't a "national" after they were naturalized, and if they are, what type of "national" do they
 2 become? As a "national" born outside of federal jurisdiction and the "United States", do they meet the requirements of 3 8 U.S.C. §1452 and if not, why not?

- 4 3. If the Supreme Court declared that the United States*** defined in the Constitution is not a "nation", but a "society" in 5 Chisholm v. Georgia:

6 "By that law the several States and Governments spread over our globe, are considered as forming a society,
 7 not a NATION. It has only been by a very few comprehensive minds, such as those of Elizabeth and the Fourth
 8 Henry, that this last great idea has been even contemplated. 3rdly. and chiefly, I shall examine the important
 9 question before us, by the Constitution of the United States, and the legitimate result of that valuable
 10 instrument. "

11 [Chisholm v. Georgia, 2 Dall. (U.S.) 419, 1 L.Ed. 440 (1793)]

12 ...then what exactly does it mean to be a "national of the United States" within the meaning of the Constitution and not 13 federal law?

- 14 4. If a "national" is defined in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) simply as a person who owes "allegiance" to the United States***, 15 then why can't a person who lives in a state of the union have allegiance to the confederation of states called the 16 "United States***", which the Supreme Court said above was a "society" and not a "nation". And what would you call
 17 that "society", if it wasn't a "nation"? The Supreme Court said in Hooven and Allison v. Evatt that there are three 18 definitions of the term "United States" and one of those definitions includes the following, which is what I claim to be 19 a "national" of:

20 "It may be merely the name of a sovereign occupying the position analogous to that of other sovereigns in the 21 family of nations."

22 [Hooven & Allison Co. v. Evatt, 324 U.S. 652 (1945)]

- 23 5. How come I can't have allegiance to the "society" called "United States***" and define that "society" as being the 24 country and not the OTHER two types of "United States**" found in federal statutes, which are synonymous with the 25 "federal zone" and not the country?
- 26 6. The federal government has exclusive jurisdiction over the following issues:
 27 6.1. "naturalization", under Article 1, Section 8, Clause 4 of the U.S. Constitution.
 28 6.2. The citizenship status of persons born in its territories or possessions.

29 However, the federal government has no power to determine citizenship by birth of person born in states of the Union,
 30 because the Constitution does not confer upon them that power. All the cases and authorities that detractors of our
 31 position like to cite relate ONLY to the above subject matters, which are all governed exclusively by federal law,
 32 which does not apply within states of the Union for this subject matter. Please therefore show us a case that involves a
 33 person born in a state of the Union and not on a territory or possession in which the person claimed to be a "national",
 34 and show us where the court said they weren't. You absolutely won't find such a case!

35 4.13.12.5 Sovereign Immunity of State Nationals

36 There are big legal advantages to being an "American national" or "state national" instead of a "U.S. citizen". An 37 "American national" or simply "national" born within and living within a state of the Union is technically the equivalent of 38 an instrumentality of a "foreign state" under the federal Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act (F.S.I.A.).

39 Foreign States: "Nations outside of the United States...Term may also refer to another state; i.e. a sister state.
 40 The term 'foreign nations', ...should be construed to mean all nations and states other than that in which the
 41 action is brought; and hence, one state of the Union is foreign to another, in that sense."
 42 [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 648]

43 Below is the explanation of a "foreign state" from the Department of State website:

44 Section 1603(b) defines an "agency or instrumentality" of a foreign state as an entity (1) which is a separate
 45 legal person, corporate or otherwise, and (2) which is an organ of a foreign state or political subdivision
 46 thereof, or a majority of whose shares or other ownership interest is owned by a foreign state or political
 47 subdivision thereof, and (3) which is neither a citizen of the a state of the United States as defined in Sec.

1332(c) and (d) nor created under the laws of any third country. An instrumentality of a foreign state includes a corporation, association, or other juridical person a majority of whose shares or other ownership interests are owned by the state, even when organized for profit.
 Department of State Website, [http://travel.state.gov/law/info/judicial/judicial\_693.html]

The FSIA itself defines “foreign state” as follows:

TITLE 28 > PART IV > CHAPTER 97 > § 1603
§ 1603. Definitions

For purposes of this chapter—

(a) A “foreign state”, except as used in section 1608 of this title, includes a political subdivision of a foreign state or an agency or instrumentality of a foreign state as defined in subsection (b).

(b) An “agency or instrumentality of a foreign state” means any entity—

(1) which is a separate legal person, corporate or otherwise, and

(2) which is an organ of a foreign state or political subdivision thereof, or a majority of whose shares or other ownership interest is owned by a foreign state or political subdivision thereof, and

(3) which is neither a citizen of a State of the United States as defined in section 1332 (c) and (d) of this title, nor created under the laws of any third country.

(c) The “United States” includes all territory and waters, continental or insular, subject to the jurisdiction of the United States.

The statute above says in paragraph (b)(3) that a person cannot be an instrumentality of a “foreign state” if they are a STATUTORY “citizen of the United States” under 8 U.S.C. §1401, which is exactly the description of a person who is a “national” or “state national” but not a “U.S. citizen”. Under the FSIA, a “nation” is simply a group of people who have their own internal laws to govern themselves. A church, for instance, qualifies as a self-governing “nation”, if:

1. It has its own rules and laws (God’s laws)
2. Its own ecclesiastical courts to govern internal disputes.
3. None of its members are “U.S. citizens” under 8 U.S.C. §1401.

The ministers of such a church are “instrumentalities of a foreign state” within the meaning of the FSIA, and they are immune from federal suit or IRS collection actions pursued under the authority of federal law. Of course, they cannot be immune from federal law if they conduct “commerce” with “the Beast” by signing up for any social welfare benefit, because the FSIA says so:

TITLE 28 > PART IV > CHAPTER 97 > § 1605
§ 1605. General exceptions to the jurisdictional immunity of a foreign state

(a) A foreign state shall not be immune from the jurisdiction of courts of the United States or of the States in any case—[. . .]

(2) in which the action is based upon a commercial activity carried on in the United States by the foreign state; or upon an act performed in the United States in connection with a commercial activity of the foreign state elsewhere; or upon an act outside the territory of the United States in connection with a commercial activity of the foreign state elsewhere and that act causes a direct effect in the United States;

However, so long as members of the church maintain complete economic separation from “the Beast”, they can maintain their status as a “foreign state” and the sovereign immunity that goes with it.

Likewise, a sovereign “American National” also qualifies as a “foreign state” because he participates in the government of a state of the Union, which is “foreign” with respect to the federal government, as you will learn in the next chapter. He is an instrumentality of the foreign state by virtue of his participation in it as:

1. A jurist
2. A voter

1 3. An elected official.

2 4. A “taxpayer”.

3 Those private individuals who believe in God also qualify as ministers and fiduciaries of a “foreign state” as God’s 4 ambassadors and ministers. The name of the “foreign state” is “Heaven” and their home or domicile qualifies as a “foreign
5 embassy”. They are also entitled to diplomatic immunity. See the following page of the Department of State for details on 6 diplomatic immunity:

7 <http://www.state.gov/ofm/>

8 If you study the subject of diplomatic immunity as we have, you will learn that such “foreign diplomats” are not subject to 9 the laws of other foreign states, even when resident therein, and are also not subject to taxation of the foreign state. More
10 information is available on this subject below under the title “Challenging Jurisdiction”:

11 <http://famguardian.org/Subjects/LawAndGovt/LawAndGovt.htm>

12 Sovereign American Nationals are also protected by 18 U.S.C. §112, which is as follows:

13 TITLE 18 > PART 1 > CHAPTER 7 > § 112

14 112. Protection of foreign officials, official guests, and internationally protected persons

15 (a) Whoever assaults, strikes, wounds, imprisons, or offers violence to a foreign official, official guest, or 16 internationally protected person or makes any other violent attack upon the person or liberty of such person, or,
17 if likely to endanger his person or liberty, makes a violent attack upon his official premises, private
18 accommodation, or means of transport or attempts to commit any of the foregoing shall be fined under this title
19 or imprisoned not more than three years, or both. Whoever in the commission of any such act uses a deadly or 20 dangerous weapon, or inflicts bodily injury, shall be fined under this title or imprisoned not more than ten 21 years, or both.

22 (b) Whoever willfully—

23 (1) intimidates, coerces, threatens, or harasses a foreign official or an official guest or obstructs a foreign
24 official in the performance of his duties;

25 (2) attempts to intimidate, coerce, threaten, or harass a foreign official or an official guest or obstruct a foreign
26 official in the performance of his duties; or

27 (3) within the United States and within one hundred feet of any building or premises in whole or in part owned,
28 used, or occupied for official business or for diplomatic, consular, or residential purposes by—

29 (A) a foreign government, including such use as a mission to an international organization;

30 (B) an international organization;

31 (C) a foreign official; or

32 (D) an official guest;

33 congregates with two or more other persons with intent to violate any other provision of this section;

34 shall be fined under this title or imprisoned not more than six months, or both.

35 (c) For the purpose of this section “foreign government”, “foreign official”, “internationally protected
36 person”, “international organization”, “national of the United States”, and “official guest” shall have the 37 same meanings as those provided in section 1116 (b) of this title.

38 The last question we must address about sovereignty is to identify precisely and exactly what activities a sovereign must 39 avoid in order to prevent losing his sovereignty and his legal and judicial immunity within federal courts. This subject is 40 dealt with in the context of the federal Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act (F.S.I.A.), which grants judicial immunity from 41 suit for most foreign states and governments and instrumentalities of foreign states, including states of the Union and the 42 people living within them. The Department of State maintains a website that summarizes the details of the FSIA at:

http://travel.state.gov/law/info/judicial/judicial\_693.html

Below is an all-inclusive specific list of exceptions to the FSIA from the above website that cause a sovereign to lose immunity in a federal court and thereby subject themselves to the jurisdiction of the federal court. The numbers are section numbers from the Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act of 1976, which is codified in 28 U.S.C. Chapter 97, starting with section 1602.

1. 1605(a)(1) - explicit or implicit waiver of immunity by the foreign state;
2. 1605(a)(2) - commercial activity carried on in the United States [federal zone] or an act performed in the United States in connection with a commercial activity elsewhere, or an act in connection with a commercial activity of a foreign state elsewhere that causes a direct effect in the United States;
3. 1605(a)(3) - property taken in violation of international law is at issue;
4. 1605(a)(4) - rights in property in the United States acquired by succession or gift or rights in immovable property situated in the United States are at issue;
5. 1605(a)(5) - money damages are sought against a foreign state for personal injury or death, or damage to or loss of property, occurring in the United States [federal zone] and caused by the tortious act or omission of that foreign state;
6. 1605(a)(6) - action brought to enforce an agreement made by the foreign state with or for the benefit of a private party to submit to arbitration;
7. 1605(a)(7) - money damages are sought against a foreign state for personal injury or death that was caused by an act of torture, extrajudicial killing, aircraft sabotage, hostage taking, or the provision of material support or resources for such an act, if the foreign state is designated as a state sponsor of terrorism under section 6(j) of the Export Administration Act of 1979 (50 U.S.C. App 2405(j) or Section 620A of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 (22 U.S.C. 2371).
8. 1605(b) - a suit in admiralty is brought to enforce a maritime lien against a vessel or cargo of the foreign state which maritime lien is based upon a commercial activity of the foreign state.

From among the list above, the only exceptions that are relevant to American nationals who are not “U.S. citizens” is items #1 and #2 above. First, we’ll talk about #2. Receipt of Social Security benefits, tax deductions, Earned Income Credit, or a graduated rate of tax certainly qualifies as “commercial activity” because all of these benefits can only be claimed by those with income “effectively connected with a trade or business in the United States”. Consequently, it ought to be clear, as we point out throughout this book, that you cannot accept any benefits from the U.S. government that you didn’t earn and still maintain your sovereignty and sovereign immunity in a federal district court. The other important conclusion to be drawn from this exception is that the “commercial activity” must occur in the “United States”, which under the Internal Revenue Code means the District of Columbia. This explains why 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(39) says that all those subject to the code shall be treated as though they reside in the District of Columbia for the purposes of judicial jurisdiction. Is the picture becoming clearer?

The other exception that applies above within the FSIA was #1, which is “explicit or implicit waiver of immunity by the foreign state”. When you sign any federal form under penalty of perjury, you in effect waive your sovereign immunity, because now a federal judge will have jurisdiction to penalize you if you lied on the form. Furthermore, if the form also has the potential to produce a “refund” of taxes paid, you are also meeting exception #2 above because now you are engaging in “commercial activity” with the “United States” as well. This is why it is a bad idea to sign a federal tax form under penalty of perjury without at least qualifying the perjury statement to exclude all other instances of federal jurisdiction, so as to ensure that you continue to enjoy sovereign immunity.

The one hypocrisy with the FSIA is that it doesn’t apply to the relationship between the U.S. government and an American national who has been harmed by the government. For instance, if they stole money from you, then you need their permission to recover it because you can’t sue the U.S. government without its permission. The reverse, however, is frequently not true. Therefore, being a foreign sovereign by virtue of being an “American national” who is not also a “U.S. citizen” is at least one example where Americans are deprived of “the equal protection of the laws” mandated by Section 1 of the Fourteenth Amendment. Our society is based on the “equal protection of the laws”, and therefore this would appear to be an injustice that must be righted eventually by our courts.

4.13.13 How Did We Lose Our Sovereignty and Become STATUTORY “U.S. citizens”?

If every American in the original colonies became a sovereign, how could they lose their sovereignty? The Citizens of each of the several states in the Union were sovereigns. But the people in a federal territory or in the District of Columbia were not sovereigns because the territories and the District of Columbia were not in the Union.

1           “The 1st section of the 14th article [Fourteenth Amendment], to which our attention is more specifically invited,
 2 opens with a definition of citizenship—not only citizenship of the United States, but citizenship of the states. No
 3 such definition was previously found in the Constitution, nor had any attempt been made to define it by act of 4 Congress. It had been the occasion of much discussion in the courts, by the executive departments and in the
 5 public journals. It had been said my eminent judges that no man was a citizen of the United States[*] except
 6 as he was a citizen of one of the states composing the Union. Those therefore, who had been born and
 7 resided always in the District of Columbia or in the territories, though within the United States[*], were not
 8 citizens. Whether this proposition was sound or not had never been judicially decided.”
 9 [Slaughter-House Cases, 83 U.S. (16 Wall.) 36, 21 L.Ed. 394 (1873)]

10 Congress had/has exclusive legislative control over these areas under Article 1, Section 8, Clause 17 of the U.S.
 11 Constitution. The states were governed by a "constitutional republic" while the territories were ruled by a "legislative 12 democracy". In a legislative democracy, the inhabitants have no rights except what Congress gives them because the Bill
 13 of Rights do not apply. As a matter of fact, within the federal zone, they have a statutory Bill of Rights instead of 14 Constitutional rights. See 48 U.S.C. §1421b. In the constitutional republics of the states, the Citizens have rights given to 15 them by their Creator and Congress is the Citizens servant. This is why Citizens, having left a state to buy or conquer land
 16 from the native Americans that was located in federal territories, would apply for statehood as soon as possible.

17 How is it that someone who was born in and has lived in a state on nonfederal land all his/her life can be treated like a
 18 citizen of the District of Columbia? There has been a series of steps that Congress has made to convert the state Citizens
 19 into statutory “U.S. citizens” under 8 U.S.C. §1401. Over the years, our laws have deliberately been made
 20 incomprehensible by the average American in order to put most Americans at the mercy of the legal profession. The 21 Federal Reserve Act of 1913 turned over our money to a private banking cartel. Social Security created Social Security
 22 Districts (or territories) in which people with SSN’s lived. The Buck Act created federal areas inside the states. Then the 23 states rewrote their income tax statutes to pretend like everyone was a “U.S. citizen” who lived in these federal areas. They 24 could legally impose direct taxes in these areas because those domiciled in the federal zone have no Constitutional rights!

25 In order for the federal government to tax a Citizen of one of the several Union states, it had to create some sort of 26 contractual nexus. This contractual nexus is the Social Security Number (SSN) and the status of being statutory “citizens of 27 the United States” 8 U.S.C. §1401. Prior to the 14th Amendment, everyone who was born in any one of the 50 Union states
 28 was a “national of the United States” under the Law of Nations and their citizenship status was nowhere defined in the 29 Constitution. Following the passage of the 14th Amendment in 1868, these people were called “citizens of the United 30 States”, where “United States” in the context of the Constitution meant the collective states of the Union and excluded the 31 federal zone. Here is the pertinent part of the Fourteenth Amendment that accomplished this:

32           Section 1: All persons born or naturalized in the United States, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are
 33 citizens of the United States and of the state wherein they reside.

34 Notice the term “citizens of the United States” above, which looks confusingly similar to the same term “citizen of the 35 United States” used in 8 U.S.C. §1401. The trick is that the term “United States” in federal statutes means the federal zone
 36 while in the Constitution, it means the collective states of the Union. The common man didn’t understand this distinction
 37 and the legal profession has, since the passage of the Fourteenth Amendment, done everything in its power to expand this 38 jurisdiction by, for instance, removing the definition of the term “United States” from legal dictionaries. This scandal is 39 described later in section 6.10.1. Lawyers and scumbags in our courts and Congress, following the passage of the 40 Fourteenth Amendment, therefore decided to try to illegally expand their jurisdiction by using this confusion to trick the 41 people in the states of the Union by making them believe that they were statutory “citizens of the United States” under 8
 42 U.S.C. §1401.

43 After the 14th Amendment was passed, the scumbag Congress gradually changed the immigration and naturalization laws
 44 and especially the government forms that implemented them to expand and enlarge this confusion and deception about
 45 citizenship. When the government naturalized people to become Americans, it still made people “nationals” but not 46 “citizens” (see 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(23)) but wrote the forms in such a way that they were deceived into believing that they 47 became statutory federal “U.S. citizens” under 8 U.S.C. §1401. When people asked what they meant by the term “U.S.
 48 citizen” on immigration and other government forms, their questions were deliberately ignored or they were given
 49 confusing explanations that didn’t clarify these important distinctions and perpetuated false assumptions and presumptions
 50 by the average American. The government did this because they naturally wanted all of the immigrants to unwittingly but 51 incorrectly believe they were “U.S. citizens” and “taxpayers” who were the subject to the tax imposed in 26 U.S.C. §1 and 52 who were completely subject to the legislative jurisdiction of the federal government in a way that they wouldn’t be if they
 53 were only “nationals” under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) but not “citizens” under 8 U.S.C. §1401. Most naturalized persons were not smart enough to figure out this legal ruse or that what they really were as a result of naturalization were “nationals” and not “U.S. citizens”. After they were fooled into believing they were “U.S. citizens” upon naturalization, they would subsequently fill out all kinds of government forms that misrepresented their status and created this same false presumption in the minds of federal judges and other misinformed fellow citizens serving in federal courtrooms everywhere. If these duped Americans then subsequently figured out the ruse (like we did in the process of writing this book), they would need to go back and renounce their privileged “U.S. citizen” status under 8 U.S.C. §1401 and correct all the forms they mistakenly filled out to completely escape the jurisdiction of the U.S. government and regain their sovereign status.

There is a lot of confusion about the meaning of the Fourteenth Amendment in the freedom community. The key thing to notice about Section 1 of the 14th Amendment quoted above is the phrase “and subject to the jurisdiction thereof”. Many people look at that sentence and wrongfully conclude that “subject to the jurisdiction” means the legislative jurisdiction of the federal government under “acts of Congress” and the U.S. codes. In fact, it does NOT mean this, as the supreme court has confirmed.

"The persons declared to be citizens are ALL PERSONS BORN OR NATURALIZED IN THE UNITED STATES AND SUBJECT TO THE JURISDICTION THEREOF. The evident meaning of these last words is, not merely subject in some respect or degree to the jurisdiction of the United States, but completely subject to their political jurisdiction, and owing them direct and immediate allegiance. And the words relate to the time of birth in the one case, as they do to the time of naturalization in the other."
[Elk v. Wilkins, 112 U.S. 94 (1884)]

“Allegiance” is what makes a person born in a state of the Union “subject to the political jurisdiction”, and this allegiance is a characteristic of being a “national of the United States” under 8 U.S.C. §1408 or a “national” under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21). Therefore the phrase “subject to the jurisdiction” in the Fourteenth Amendment simply means the “political jurisdiction” and not the “legislative jurisdiction”. “Political jurisdiction” means only voting and jury service and does not include “legislative jurisdiction”. Legislative jurisdiction is defined by where you are domiciled and not by your citizenship status. You can be “completely subject” to the “political jurisdiction” by voting and serving on jury duty in a federal trial without being subject to federal legislative jurisdiction described in “acts of Congress” or the U.S. codes. See the following free pamphlet for further details about “political jurisdiction” as distinguished from “legislative jurisdiction”:

<http://sedm.org/Forms/05-MemLaw/PoliticalJurisdiction.pdf>

The legal encyclopedia American Jurisprudence tries to confuse this issue by echoing the words found in the Fourteenth Amendment “subject to the jurisdiction”, and using them in describing federal statutory “citizens of the United States” under 8 U.S.C. §1401. They do this in order to try to create a false presumption that this inferior statutory citizenship is equivalent to Fourteenth Amendment “citizen of the United States” status, when in fact it is not. The means the scumbag Pharisees use to deceive us is simply to refuse to define or state which of the three definitions or “contexts” of “United States” they are using in their definitions. Below is the definition of “citizen of the United States” from the American Jurisprudence legal encyclopedia to help illustrate this frequent form of deception and confusion within the teachings and doctrine of the Pharisees:

3C American Jurisprudence 2d, Aliens and Citizens, §2689 (1999), Who is born in United States and subject to United States jurisdiction

"A person is born subject to the jurisdiction of the United States, for purposes of acquiring citizenship at birth, if his or her birth occurs in territory over which the United States is sovereign, even though another country provides all governmental services within the territory, and the territory is subsequently ceded to the other country."

Endless but needless arguments over citizenship within the freedom community result from a fundamental misunderstanding of the observations and conclusions in this section. This contention is fostered by the kind of deliberate deception found in legal reference works such as the above. The above confusion is also propagated by other means. For instance, the 1040 form propagates it by requiring you to identify your children as “U.S. citizens” on your tax return in order to claim them as deductions while not defining or clarifying which of the two “citizens of the United States” that they are. People also unwittingly contribute to this confusion by creating a false presumption that they are a “U.S. citizen” under the income tax code simply by saying that they are on their tax forms, and both the state and federal government are

1 more than happy to take your word for it, even if you are wrong, because that is how they manufacture “taxpayers” and
2 illegally expand their jurisdiction!

3 If people understood the simple distinctions between “political jurisdiction” and “legislative jurisdiction”, the arguments
4 and confusion relating to citizenship within the freedom community would cease instantly. If they understood the 5 following, then we could end these foolish arguments and get on with more important issues like prosecuting IRS fraud:

- 6 • The term “United States” in the Constitution does not have the same meaning as the term “United States” in 7 federal statutes. In the Constitution, “United States” means states of the Union while in federal statutes relating to 8 citizenship, it means the District of Columbia and territories of the United States.
- 9 • Being a Fourteenth Amendment “citizen of the United States” is NOT equivalent to being a “citizen and national 10 of the United States” under 8 U.S.C. §1401.
- 11 • Fourteenth Amendment citizenship is equivalent to being a “national” under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21).
- 12 • There is nothing wrong or injurious about being a Fourteenth Amendment “citizen of the United States” and that 13 status doesn’t make you subject to the “legislative jurisdiction” of Congress.

14 Let’s go back to the Elk v. Wilkins case mentioned above for a moment to illustrate the points we are making here. Here is 15 what the Supreme Court said again:

16 "The persons declared to be citizens are ALL PERSONS BORN OR NATURALIZED IN THE UNITED STATES
17 AND SUBJECT TO THE JURISDICTION THEREOF. The evident meaning of these last words is, not merely
18 subject in some respect or degree to the jurisdiction of the United States, but COMPLETELY SUBJECT to their
19 political jurisdiction, and owing them direct and immediate allegiance. And the words relate to the time of 20 birth in the one case, as they do to the time of naturalization in the other. Persons not thus subject to the 21 jurisdiction of the United States at the time of birth cannot become so afterwards, except by being
22 naturalized, either individually, as by proceedings under the naturalization acts; or collectively, as by the 23 force of a treaty by which foreign territory is acquired. Indians born within the territorial limits of the United 24 States, members of, and owing immediate allegiance to, one of the Indiana tribes, (an alien though dependent 25 power,) although in a geographical sense born in the United States, are no more 'born in the United States and 26 subject to the jurisdiction thereof,' within the meaning of the first section of the fourteenth amendment, than the 27 children of subjects of any foreign government born within the domain of that government, or the children born
28 within the United States, of ambassadors or other public ministers of foreign nations. . "
29 [Elk v. Wilkins, 112 U.S. 94 (1884)]

30 The above case was about an Indian who was born on a reservation and left the reservation and lived in the surrounding 31 state community to try to become a “citizen of the United States***”. Indian reservations are considered to be part of the 32 federal zone and are under trusteeship of the federal government, but at the same time they do not participate in the 33 “political jurisdiction” that includes states of the Union. Indians cannot vote in national elections and they can’t serve on a
34 federal jury. The Indian in the above case was deprived of the right to vote right after the passage of the 14th Amendment
35 in 1868 by the registrar of voters in his state, who claimed he wasn’t a “citizen of the United States***”, even though he in 36 all other respects met the criteria for being a state citizen, had allegiance to the United States***, and admitted he was 37 “completely subject” to the [political] jurisdiction of the U.S.*** in all respects. The U.S. Supreme Court ruled that Indian
38 reservations are considered foreign territories not part of the United States*** and akin to foreign governments, and Indians
39 born on these reservations are not “citizens of the United States***” under the Fourteenth Amendment by virtue of being 40 born on an Indian Reservation. In effect, they were saying that Indian reservations are not part of the Union of states and 41 are completely separate. Recall that Indian reservations have their own private and sovereign tribal governments and are 42 not subject to any federal law or state law in most cases. The court in Elk said that Indians born on reservations can only
43 become citizens by naturalization and with the consent of the federal government. Naturalization, by the way, is statutorily
44 defined as the process of conferring “nationality” and of becoming a “national” under either 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) or 8
45 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22)(B). In the case of the plaintiff/appellant, an Indian who never explicitly naturalized, the court ruled
46 that he had been deprived of no right by the state when he was denied the opportunity to vote by that state. Recall that the 47 right to vote was covered by the 15th Amendment, which depended on 14th Amendment citizenship. This case therefore 48 helps to illustrate that the only context in which “citizen of the United States***” is meaningful as far as the federal 49 government is concerned is in a political context that relates to either voting or jury service.

50 Moving beyond the Elk v. Wilkins case in 1884, in 1935, the federal government instituted Social Security. The Social 51 Security Board then created 10 Social Security "Districts." The combination of these "Districts" resulted in a "Federal 52 Area", a fictional jurisdiction, which covered all of the several states like a clear plastic overlay.

In 1939, the federal government instituted the "Public Salary Tax Act of 1939." This Act is a municipal law of the District of Columbia for taxing all federal government statutory "employees", public officers, and those domiciled who within and working within any "Federal Area." Now the government knows it cannot tax those state Citizens who live and work outside the territorial jurisdiction of Article 1, Section 8, Clause 2 in the Constitution for the United States of America; also known as the ten square miles of the District of Columbia and territories and enclaves. So, in 1940, Congress passed the "Buck Act" now found in 4 U.S.C. Sections 105-113. In Section 110(e), this Act authorized any department of the federal government to create a "Federal Area" for imposition of the "Public Salary Tax Act of 1939." This tax is imposed at 4 U.S.C. §111. The rest of the taxing law is found in the Internal Revenue Code. The Social Security Board had already created a "Federal Area" overlay. U.S.C. Title 4 is as follows:

TITLE 4 - FLAG AND SEAL, SEAT OF GOVERNMENT, AND THE STATES

CHAPTER 4 - THE STATES

Sec. 110(d): The term "State" includes any territory or possession of the United States.

Sec. 110(e): The term "Federal Area" means any lands or premises held or acquired by or for the use of the United states or any department, establishment, or agency of the United states; and any federal area, or any part thereof, which is located within the exterior boundaries of any State, shall be deemed to be a federal area located within such State.

Under the Provisions of Title 4, Section 105, the federal "State" (also known as, "The State of...") is imposing an excise tax. That section states, in pertinent part:

TITLE 4 - FLAG AND SEAL, SEAT OF GOVERNMENT, AND THE STATES

CHAPTER 4 - THE STATES

Sec. 105: State, and so forth, taxation affecting Federal areas; sales or use tax.

(a) No person shall be relieved from the liability for payment of, collection of, or accounting for any sales or use tax levied by any State, or any duly constituted taxing authority therein, having jurisdiction to levy such tax, on the ground that the sales or use, with respect to which such tax is levied, occurred in whole or in part within a Federal area; and such State or taxing authority shall have full jurisdiction to levy such a tax, by reason of his residing within a Federal area or receiving income from transactions occurring or services performed in such area; and such State or taxing authority shall have full jurisdiction and power to levy and collect such tax in any Federal area within such a State to the same extent and with the same effect as though such area was not a Federal area.

NOTE: Irrespective of what the tax is called, if its purpose is to produce revenue, it is an income tax or a receipts tax under the Buck Act [4 U.S.C. Secs. 105-110]. See Humble Oil & Refining Co. v. Calvert, 464 S.W.2d. 170 (1971), affd (Tex) 478 S.W.2d. 926, cert. den. 409 U.S. 967, 34 L.Ed.2d. 234, 93 S.Ct. 293.

For purposes of further explanation, a Federal area can include the Social Security areas designated by the Social Security Administration; any public housing that has federal funding; a home that has a federal (or Federal reserve) loan; a road that has federal funding; schools and colleges (public or private) that receive (direct or indirectly) federal funding, and virtually everything that the federal government touches through any type of direct or indirect aid. See Springfield v. Kenny, 104 N.E. 2d. 65 (1951 app.) This "Federal area" is attached to anyone who has a Social Security number or any personal contact with the federal or State government. (That is, of course, with the exception of those who have been defrauded through the tenets of an Unrevealed Contract to "accept" compelled benefits. Which includes me and perhaps you.) Through this mechanism, the federal government usurped the Sovereignty of the People, as well as the Sovereignty of the several states by creating "Federal areas" within the authority of Article IV, Section 3, Clause 2 in the Constitution for the United States of America which states:

United States Constitution
Article IV, Section 3, Clause 2

"The Congress shall have Power to dispose of and make all needful Rules and Regulations respecting the Territory or other Property belonging to the United States, and nothing in this Constitution shall be so construed as to prejudice any claims of the United states, or of any particular State."

Therefore, all U.S. citizens [i.e. citizens of the District of Columbia] residing in one of the states of the Union, are classified as property and franchisees of the federal government, and as an "individual entity." See Wheeling Steel Corp. v. Fox, 298 U.S. 193, 80 L.Ed. 1143, 56 S.Ct. 773 (1936). Under the "Buck Act," 4 U.S.C Secs. 105-113, the federal government has created a "Federal area" within the boundaries of the several states. This area is similar to any territory that the federal

1 government acquires through purchase, conquest or treaty, thereby imposing federal territorial law upon the people in this
 2 "Federal area." Federal territorial law is evidenced by the Executive Branch's Admiralty flag (a federal flag with a gold or
 3 yellow fringe on it) flying in schools, offices and courtrooms.

4 To enjoy the freedoms secured by the federal and state constitutions, you must live on the land in one of the states of the 5 Union of several states, not in any "Federal area." Nor can you be involved in any activity that makes you subject to
 6 "federal laws." You cannot have a "resident" State driver's license, a motor vehicle registered in your name, a bank account
 7 in a federally insured bank, or any other known "contract implied in fact" that would place you in this "Federal area" and
 8 thus within the territorial jurisdiction of the municipal laws of Congress. We explain later in section 5.6.12.6 that you can
 9 have a Social Security Number and even contribute to and collect benefits as a "U.S. national" without being regarded as
 10 living in a federal area, but you need to be very careful to ensure that the Social Security Administration records properly
 11 reflect your status as a "U.S. national" rather than a "U.S. citizen" using the process we give in section 2.5.3.13 of the 12 Sovereignty Forms and Instructions Manual, Form #10.005 by submitting a corrected SSA Form SS-5.

13 Remember, all acts of Congress are mainly territorial in nature and usually apply only within the territorial jurisdiction of
 15 94 L.Ed. 3 (1949). The only exceptions to this general rule are the following:

- 16 1. Persons who claim a "domicile" within the exclusive jurisdiction of a government, even if they physically reside
 17 elsewhere, are subject to the civil legislative jurisdiction of that place. For instance, people "residing" (as aliens in a 18 foreign country) living abroad who continue to claim a domicile in the "United States" (District of Columbia) can be 19 taxed for their earnings because the benefits of citizenship exist with them no matter where they live. This is shown in 20 26 U.S.C. §911 and was also declared by the U.S. Supreme Court in Cook v. Tait, 265 U.S. 47 (1924). Persons with a 21 "domicile" in a place are called "citizens" or "residents". People without such a domicile are called "non-resident non-22 persons" or "transient foreigners".
- 23 2. Under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 17(b), a person exercising agency on behalf of a corporation become subject to 24 the laws of the place where the corporation was formed. This would be true in the case of persons who are exercising a
 25 "public office" in the employment of the U.S. government, which would include elected or appointed officials of the 26 federal government, and federal statutory "employees", for instance.

27 It's not easy to survive without an SSN! Most banks are federally insured. It may be inconvenient to bank at an institution
 28 that is not federally insured. There are many things that become a little more difficult to do without a SSN, state driver's
 29 licenses, or a ZIP Code.

30 There has been created a fictional federal "State (of) within a state." See Howard v. Sinking Fund of Louisville, 344 U.S.
 31 624, 73 S.Ct. 465, 476, 97 L.Ed. 617 (1953); Schwartz v. O'Hara TP School District, 100 A.2d. 621, 625, 375, Pa. 440.
 32 This fictional "State" is identified by the use of two-letter abbreviations like "PA", "NJ", "AZ", and "DE", etc., as 33 distinguished from the authorized abbreviations for the sovereign States: "Pa.", "N.J.", "Ariz.", and "Del." The fictional
 34 States also use ZIP Codes that are within the municipal, exclusive legislative jurisdiction of Congress. The Commonwealth
 35 of Pennsylvania Commonwealth is one of the several States. The Pennsylvania Commonwealth, also known as PA, is a
 36 subdivision of the District of Columbia. If you accept postal matter sent to PA, and/or with a ZIP Code, the Courts say that
 37 this is evidence that you are a federal citizen or a resident. Use of the Zip Code is voluntary. See Domestic Mail Service
 38 Regulations, Section 122.32. The Postal service cannot discriminate against the non-use of the ZIP Code. See Postal
 39 Reorganization Act, Section 403, (Public Law 91-375). The IRS has adopted the ZIP Code areas as Internal Revenue
 40 Districts. See the Federal Register, Volume 51, Number 53, Wednesday March 19, 1986. The acceptance of mail with a ZIP
 41 Code is one of the requirements for the IRS to have jurisdiction to send you notices.

42 When you apply for a Social Security Number, you are telling the federal government that you are repudiating your state
 43 Citizenship in order to apply for the privileges and benefits of citizenship in the federal Nation. Granting a Social Security
 44 number is prima facie evidence that no matter what you were before, you have voluntarily entered into a voyage for profit
 45 or gain in negotiable instruments and maritime enterprise. This is the system that has been set up over the years to restrict,
 46 control, and destroy our personal and economic liberties. Our legal system is very complicated and you may not understand
 47 how it works. I believe that this is intentional.

48 You may also find it disturbing to know how an administrative procedure can remove your children from you. In 1921
 49 Congress passed the Sheppard-Towner Maternity Act that created the United States birth "registration" area (see Public
 50 Law 97, 67th Congress, Session I, Chapter 135, 1921.) That act allows you to register your children when they are born. If

1 you do so, you will get a copy of the birth certificate. By registering your children, which is voluntary, they become Federal
2 Children. This does several things: Your children become subjects of Congress (they lose their state citizenship). A copy of
3 the birth certificate is sent to the Department of Vital Statistics in the state in which they were born. The original birth
4 certificate is sent to the Department of Commerce in the District of Columbia. It then gets forwarded to an International
5 Monetary Fund (IMF) building in Europe. Your child's future labor and properties are put up as collateral for the public
6 debt.

7 Once a child is registered, a constructive trust is formed. The parent(s) usually become the trustee (the person managing 8 the assets of the trust), the child becomes an asset of the trust, and the state becomes the principal beneficiary of the trust.
9 See The Uniform Trustees' Powers Act (ORS 128.005(1)). If the beneficiary does not believe the trustee is managing the 10 assets of the trust optimally, the beneficiary can go through an administrative procedure to change trustees. This is the way
11 that bureaucrats can take children away from their parents if the bureaucrat does not like the way the child is cared for. You
12 may say that there is nothing wrong with this. If a parent is neglecting a child, then the state should remove the child from 13 the parents' custody. Under common law a child can still be removed from the parent but it takes twelve jurors from that
14 county to do so. Theoretically, a bureaucrat could remove your children from you, if you disagree with some unrelated
15 administrative procedure, such as home schooling the child. This is another way the government can intimidate citizens
16 who question its authority. With all this in mind, the statement that the President says every few months: "Our children are 17 our most valuable asset." takes on a different meaning. That is - your children are their assets.

18 When the government communicates with corporations it spells the name of the corporation in all capital letters. If the 19 government refers to you with your name in all capital letters, it actually means to treat you like a corporation. A
20 corporation is a privileged status created by government. It has no rights. The government gives it privileges and the 21 corporation must follow the rules of its creator. I am not a corporation! A state Citizen should challenge the government's 22 assertion that he/she is a corporation. This applies to both postal matter and court documents.

23 We gave the federal government the right to regulate commerce. Since the government has started usurping our
24 sovereignty, our language has been subtly modified to include commercial terms. Most people do not realize or care that
25 they are using commercial terms but the courts do. If you describe your actions in commercial terms in a court, the judge
26 will take silent notice of your status as being regulatable by the federal government. In the following examples, the 27 commercial terms are all in upper case letters: instead of a birthing room, you are now born in a DELIVERY room. Instead
28 of traveling in your car, you are DRIVING or OPERATING a MOTOR VEHICLE in TRAFFIC and you don't have guests
29 in your car, you have PASSENGERS. Instead of a nativity you have a DATE OF BIRTH. You are not a worker but an 30 "EMPLOYEE". You don't own a house but a piece of REAL ESTATE.

31 To summarize this section, we lose our sovereignty and create false "presumptions" that we are a statutory "U.S. citizen"
32 under 8 U.S.C. §1401 and under the exclusive legislative jurisdiction of Congress in any one of the following ways:

Table 4-38 : Ways We Become a statutory “U.S.** citizen” under 8 U.S.C. §1401

#	Factor that causes false presumption of 8 U.S.C. §1401 “U.S. citizen” status	Applicable law(s)	Place of birth	Parent 1	Parent 2	Law quoted
1	Requesting a Social Security Number and claiming on the SSA Form SS-5 that we are a statutory “U.S. citizen instead of a Constitutional “citizen of the United States”	26 C.F.R. §301.6109-1(g)	NA	NA	NA	(g) Special rules for taxpayer identifying numbers issued to foreign persons--(1) General rule--(i) Social security number. A social security number is generally identified in the records and database of the Internal Revenue Service as a number belonging to a U.S. citizen or resident alien individual. A person may establish a different status for the number by providing proof of foreign status with the Internal Revenue Service under such procedures as the Internal Revenue Service shall prescribe, including the use of a form as the Internal Revenue Service may specify. Upon accepting an individual as a nonresident alien individual, the Internal Revenue Service will assign this status to the individual's social security number.
2	Receiving a jury duty summons and not responding properly. In some states, one must claim to be a “citizen of the United States” in order to serve on jury duty. A proper response to a jury duty summons would contain an affidavit which clarifies that you are not a statutory “U.S. citizen” pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1401 but instead are a “14th Amendment citizen of the United States”, which is the equivalent of a statutory “national, but not a citizen” pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21). 3	Trying to get a Driver’s license, which requires that we have a valid Social Security Number in most states. The approach we take is to cancel but not “terminate” the driver’s license. Use of the public roads for non-commercial purposes is a right to all Constitutional citizens of the United States. However, a driver’s license is required for statutory citizens of the United States and for anyone using the public roads for commercial purposes. #### 4.13.14 How You are Illegally Deceived or Compelled to Transition from Being a Constitutional Citizen/Resident to a Statutory Citizen/Resident: By Confusing the Two Contexts

This section builds on the content of section 4.11.3.8 of the Great IRS Hoax, Form #11.302, where we talked about definitions of U.S. citizenship terms. We state throughout this memorandum that the definitions of terms used are extremely important, and that when the government wants to usurp additional jurisdiction beyond what the Constitution authorizes, it starts by confusing and obfuscating the definition of key terms. The courts then use this confusion and uncertainty to stretch their interpretation of legislation in order to expand government jurisdiction, in what amounts to “judge-made law”. This in turn transforms a government of “laws” into a government of “men” in violation of the intent of the Constitution (see Marbury v. Madison, 5 U.S. 137 (1803)). You will see in this section how this very process has been accomplished with the citizenship issue. The purpose of this section is therefore to:

1. Provide definitions of the key and more common terms used both by the Federal judiciary courts and the Legislative branch in Title 8 so that you will no longer be deceived.
2. Show you how the government and the legal profession have obfuscated key citizenship terms over the years to expand their jurisdiction and control over Americans beyond what the Constitution authorizes.

The main prejudicial and usually invisible presumption that governments, courts and judges make which is most injurious to your rights is the association between the words “citizen” and “citizenship” with the term “domicile”. Whenever either you or the government uses the word “citizen”, they are making the following presumptions:

1. That you maintain a domicile within their civil legislative jurisdiction. This means that if you are in a federal court, for instance, that you have a legal domicile on federal territory and not within the exclusive jurisdiction of any state of the Union.
2. That you owe allegiance to them and are required as part of that allegiance to pay them “tribute” for the protection they afford.
3. That you are qualified to participate in the affairs of the government as a voter or jurist, even though you may in fact not participate at that time.

4.13.14.1 The methods of deceit and coercion on the citizenship issue

Most people are ILLEGALLY and CRIMINALLY DECEIVED and COMPELLED by covetous public servants to become STATUTORY citizens or residents even though they are TECHNICALLY not allowed to and it is a CRIME to do so. This process is done by the following devious means:

1. Asking you if you are a “citizen” or “resident” on a government form or in person but not defining the context: CONSTITUTIONAL or STATUTORY.
2. When you hear their question about your STATUS, your ignorance of the law causes you to PRESUME they mean “citizen” or “resident” in a POLITICAL or CONSTITUTIONAL context.
3. When you say “yes”, they will self-servingly and ILLEGALLY PRESUME that the STATUTORY and CIVIL context applies rather than the POLITICAL or CONSTITUTIONAL context.
  - 3.1. WARNING: The CONSTITUTIONAL/POLITICAL context and the STATUTORY/CIVIL contexts are MUTUALLY exclusive and NOT equivalent!
  - 3.2. A CONSTITUTIONAL/POLITICAL “citizen of the United States****” is a “national of the United States of America” but is not a STATUTORY “national of the United States**” per 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22) or a STATUTORY/CIVIL “citizen”.
  - 3.3. The term “citizen of the United States***” used in 8 U.S.C. §1401 and 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22)(A) is a POLITICAL citizen because it relates to birth or naturalization and NOT domicile.
  - 3.4. The term “citizen of the United States” used in other titles of the U.S. Code including Title 26 (income tax), Title 42 (Social Security and Medicare) relates to DOMICILE rather than NATIONALITY and is a CIVIL/STATUTORY status. Both of these titles are CIVIL franchises that have DOMICILE on federal territory not within a state as a prerequisite.
  - 3.5. The U.S. Supreme Court held in the License Tax Cases that Congress cannot establish a “trade or business” in a constitutional state in order to tax it. Hence, Titles 26 and 42 do not relate to constitutional states and only relate to federal territory not within a constitutional state.

1 “Thus, Congress having power to regulate commerce with foreign nations, and among the several States, and
2 with the Indian tribes, may, without doubt, provide for granting coasting licenses, licenses to pilots, licenses to
3 trade with the Indians, and any other licenses necessary or proper for the exercise of that great and extensive
4 power; and the same observation is applicable to every other power of Congress, to the exercise of which the
5 granting of licenses may be incident. All such licenses confer authority, and give rights to the licensee.

6 But very different considerations apply to the internal commerce or domestic trade of the States. Over this
7 commerce and trade Congress has no power of regulation nor any direct control. This power belongs
8 exclusively to the States. No interference by Congress with the business of citizens transacted within a State is
9 warranted by the Constitution, except such as is strictly incidental to the exercise of powers clearly granted to
10 the legislature. The power to authorize a business within a State is plainly repugnant to the exclusive power of 11 the State over the same subject. It is true that the power of Congress to tax is a very extensive power. It is given
12 in the Constitution, with only one exception and only two qualifications. Congress cannot tax exports, and it
13 must impose direct taxes by the rule of apportionment, and indirect taxes by the rule of uniformity. Thus limited,
14 and thus only, it reaches every subject, and may be exercised at discretion. But, it reaches only existing 15 subjects. Congress cannot authorize [LICENSE, using a Social Security Number] a trade or business within 16 a State in order to tax it.
17 License Tax Cases, [72 U.S. 462, 18 L.Ed. 497, 5 Wall. 462, 2 A.F.T.R. 2224 (1866)]

- 18 4. Hence, with a simple presumption fostered by legal ignorance on both YOUR part and on the part of the government
19 clerk accepting your application or form, you have often UNWITTINGLY AND ILLEGALLY TRANSITIONED from 20 being a CONSTITUTIONAL citizen to a STATUTORY citizen domiciled on federal territory! WATCH OUT!
- 21 5. The presumptions which foster this illegal transition are a CRIMINAL offence, because:
22 5.1. The civil status of “citizen” is an office in the U.S. government, as we will show.
23 5.2. It is a crime to impersonate a public officer in violation of 18 U.S.C. §911.
24 5.3. It is a crime to impersonate a “U.S. citizen” in violation of 18 U.S.C. §912.
- 25 6. The presumptions which foster this illegal transition are also a violation of due process of law, because conclusive
26 presumptions undermine constitutional rights violate due process of law:

27 (1) [8:4993] Conclusive presumptions affecting protected interests:

28 A conclusive presumption may be defeated where its application would impair a party's constitutionally-
29 protected liberty or property interests. In such cases, conclusive presumptions have been held to violate a
30 party's due process and equal protection rights. Vlandis v. Kline (1973) [412 U.S. 441, 449, 93 S.Ct. 2230,
31 2235; Cleveland Bd. of Ed. v. LaFleur (1974) 414 U.S. 632, 639-640, 94 S.Ct. 1208, 1215-presumption under 32 Illinois law that unmarried fathers are unfit violates process]
33 [Federal Civil Trials and Evidence (2005), Rutter Group, paragraph 8:4993, p. 8K-34]

- 34 7. This ILLEGAL and CRIMINAL tactic is abused in almost all most government offices, including:
35 7.1. In federal court.
36 7.2. Department of Motor Vehicles on the application for a driver license.
37 7.3. Social Security Administration form SS-5.
38 7.4. Voter registration at the country registrar of voters.
39 7.5. Application for a United States of America Passport, Department of State Form DS-11.
40 7.6. United States Citizenship and Immigration Services form I-9.
- 41 8. The reason they are using this devious and deceptive tactic is because they know that:
42 8.1. A “citizen” is defined as someone who has “voluntarily submitted himself” to the LAWS and thereby become a
43 CIVIL “subject”. YOU HAVE TO VOLUNTEER AND CONSENT!
44 8.2. They know they need your CONSENT and PERMISSION to transition from a CONSTITUTIONAL citizen to a
45 STATUTORY citizen and therefore “subject”.
46 8.3. They don’t want to ask for your consent DIRECTLY because that would imply that you have the right to NOT 47 consent. If you said NO, their whole SCAM of ruling OVER you would be busted and people would quit in 48 droves. They therefore have to be very INDIRECT about it.
49 8.4. CONSENT and PERMISSION is implied if they ask you your status AND you say you HAVE that STATUS.
50 You cannot acquire or maintain ANY civil status without your at least IMPLIED consent. See:
51

Your Exclusive Right to Declare or Establish Your Civil Status , Form #13.008 http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm
--

52 9. We call this process what it is:
53 9.1. Criminal kidnapping of your legal identity.
54 9.2. Criminal identity theft.
55 9.3. Criminally impersonating a public officer.
56 9.4. Constructive fraud.

1 “Fraud in its elementary common law sense of deceit -- and this is one of the meanings that fraud bears [483
 2 U.S. 372] in the statute, see United States v. Dial, 757 F.2d. 163, 168 (7th Cir.1985) -- includes the deliberate
 3 concealment of material information in a setting of fiduciary obligation. A public official is a fiduciary toward
 4 the public, including, in the case of a judge, the litigants who appear before him, and if he deliberately
 5 conceals material information from them, he is guilty of fraud. When a judge is busily soliciting loans from 6 counsel to one party, and not telling the opposing counsel (let alone the public), he is concealing material
 7 information in violation of his fiduciary obligations.”
 8 [McNally v. United States, 483 U.S. 350 (1987)]

9 10. Government agencies: They abuse these ILLEGAL and CRIMINAL tactics as well. They do so by the following 10 means:

11 10.1. Ensure that their employees are not schooled in the law so that they will not realize that they are PAWNS in a
 12 game to enslave all Americans, and that “compartmentalization” is being used to ensure they don’t know more
 13 than they need to know to do their job.

14 10.2. Dismiss or FIRE employees who read the law and discover these tactics. Case in point is IRS criminal
 15 investigator Joe Banister, who discovered these tactics, exposed them and asked the agency to STOP them. He 16 was asked to resign rather than the IRS fixing this criminal activity.

17 10.3. PRESUME that ALL of the four contexts for "United States" are equivalent.

18 10.4. Tell the public that their publications are “general” in nature and should not be relied upon. Keep in mind that a
 19 FRAUDSTER always deals in GENERALS, and the “general” context is the CONSTITUTIONAL context. Yet,
 20 even though you ASSUME the government is ALSO using the CONSTITUTIONAL context, they do the 21 SWITCHEROO and ASSUME the OPPOSITE, which is the STATUTORY context when processing the form
 22 they handed you.

23 10.5. Publish deceptive government publications that are in deliberate conflict with what the statutes define "United 24 States" as and then tell the public that they CANNOT rely on the publication. The IRS does this with ALL of
 25 their publications and it is FRAUD. See:

Reasonable Belief About Income Tax Liability, Form #05.007

FORMS PAGE: <http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

DIRECT LINK: <http://sedm.org/Forms/05-MemLaw/ReasonableBelief.pdf>

26 10.6. Using the word “United States” as meaning the government, as in the Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A, but 27 deceiving the reader into thinking that it REALLY means the CONSTITUTIONAL United States. See:

Non-Resident Non-Person Position, Form #05.020, Sections 8 through 11

<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

28 10.7. Not explaining WHICH of the two contexts apply on government forms but presuming the Statutory context
 29 ONLY.

30 10.8. Refusing to accept attachments to government forms that clarify the meaning of all terms on forms so as to:

31 10.8.1. Delegate undue discretion to judges and bureaucrats to PRESUME the statutory context.

32 10.8.2. Add things to the meaning of words that do not expressly appear in the law.

33 10.9. Refusing to define the LEGAL meaning of the terms used on government forms.

34 10.10. Confusing a “federal government” with a “national government”, removing the definitions of these two 35 words entirely from the dictionary, or refusing in a court setting to discuss the differences.

36 “NATIONAL GOVERNMENT. The government of a whole nation, as distinguished from that of a local or
 37 territorial division of the nation, and also as distinguished from that of a league or confederation.

38 “A national government is a government of the people of a single state or nation, united as a community by
 39 what is termed the “social compact,” and possessing complete and perfect supremacy over persons and things,
 40 so far as they can be made the lawful objects of civil government. A federal government is distinguished from
 41 a national government by its being the government of a community of independent and sovereign states,
 42 united by compact.” Piqua Branch Bank v. Knoup, 6 Ohio.St. 393.”
 43 [Black’s Law Dictionary, Revised Fourth Edition, 1968, p. 1176]
 44

45 “FEDERAL GOVERNMENT. The system of government administered in a state formed by the union or
 46 confederation of several independent or quasi independent states; also the composite state so formed.

47 In strict usage, there is a distinction between a confederation and a federal government. The former term
 48 denotes a league or permanent alliance between several states, each of which is fully sovereign and
 49 independent, and each of which retains its full dignity, organization, and sovereignty, though yielding to the
 50 central authority a controlling power for a few limited purposes, such as external and diplomatic relations.
 51 In this case, the component states are the units, with respect to the confederation, and the central
 52 government acts upon them, not upon the individual citizens. In a federal government, on the other hand, the allied states form a union,-not, indeed, to such an extent as to destroy their separate organization or deprive them of quasi sovereignty with respect to the administration of their purely local concerns, but so that the central power is erected into a true state or nation, possessing sovereignty both external and internal,-while the administration of national affairs is directed, and its effects felt, not by the separate states deliberating as units, but by the people of all, in their collective capacity, as citizens of the nation. The distinction is expressed, by the German writers, by the use of the two words "Staatenbund" and "Bundesstaat;" the former denoting a league or confederation of states, and the latter a federal government, or state formed by means of a league or confederation."

[Black's Law Dictionary, Revised Fourth Edition, 1968, p. 740]

10.11. Making unconstitutional and prejudicial presumptions about the status of people that connects them with government franchises without their consent or even their knowledge, in some cases. See:

Presumption: Chief Weapon for Unlawfully Enlarging Federal Jurisdiction, Form #05.017

11. Courts and lawyers: Courts and lawyers ESPECIALLY have refined this process to a fine art by abusing "legalese" an words of art. They do this through the following very specific tactics in the courtroom.

11.1. Prevent jurists from reading the law to discover these tactics. Most federal courthouses forbid jurors serving on duty to enter their law libraries if they have one. Thus, the judge is enabled to insist that HE is the "source of law" and that what he says is law. He thereby substitutes his will for what the law says, and prevents anyone from knowing that what he SAYS the law requires is DIFFERENT from what it ACTUALLY says.

11.2. PRESUME that ALL of the four contexts for "United States" are equivalent.

11.3. Confusing the Statutory context with the Constitutional context for geographical words of art when these two contexts are NOT equivalent and in fact are mutually exclusive contexts. Terms this trick is applied to include:

11.3.1. "United States" in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9).

11.3.3. "U.S. person" in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(30).

11.3.4. "U.S. citizen" or "citizen of the United States" in 8 U.S.C. §1401, 26 U.S.C. §3121(e), and 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1.

11.3.5. "U.S. resident" in 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(4).

11.4. PRESUME that CONSTITUTIONAL citizens and STATUTORY citizens are EQUIVALENT under federal law. They are NOT. A CONSTITUTIONAL citizen is a "non-resident" under federal law and NOT a STATUTORY "national and citizen of the United States** at birth" per 8 U.S.C. §1401.

Why You are a "national", "state national", and Constitutional but not Statutory Citizen, Form #05.006
 FORMS PAGE: <http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>
 DIRECT LINK: <http://sedm.org/Forms/05-MemLaw/WhyANational.pdf>

11.5. PRESUME that "nationality" and "domicile" are equivalent. They are NOT. See:

Why Domicile and Becoming a "Taxpayer" Require Your Consent, Form #05.002
 FORMS PAGE: <http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>
 DIRECT LINK: <http://sedm.org/Forms/05-MemLaw/Domicile.pdf>

11.6. Use the word "citizenship" in place of "nationality" OR "domicile", and refuse to disclose WHICH of the two they mean in EVERY context.

11.7. Confuse the POLITICAL/CONSTITUTIONAL meaning of words with the civil STATUTORY context. For instance, asking on government forms whether you are a POLITICAL/CONSTITUTIONAL citizen and then FALSELY PRESUMING that you are a STATUTORY citizen under 8 U.S.C. §1401.

11.8. Confuse the words "domicile" and "residence" or impute either to you without satisfying the burden of proving that you EXPRESSLY CONSENTED to it and thereby illegally kidnap your civil legal identity against your will. One can have only one "domicile" but many "residences" and BOTH require your consent. See:

Why Domicile and Becoming a "Taxpayer" Require Your Consent, Form #05.002
 FORMS PAGE: <http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>
 DIRECT LINK: <http://sedm.org/Forms/05-MemLaw/Domicile.pdf>

12. Abusing the words "includes" and "including" as a means of unlawfully adding things to the meanings of words that do not expressly appear and are therefore purposefully excluded per the rules of statutory construction. Such words include:

12.1. "taxpayer" in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(14).

12.2. "trade or business" in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26). Means "the functions of a public office" and excludes activities of PRIVATE human beings or private entities.

12.3. "State"

12.4. "Employer" in 26 U.S.C. §3401(d). Means a government agency which a public officer works for, and not a private company.

1 12.5. "Employee" in 26 U.S.C. §3401(c). Means a public officer in the U.S. and not state government and not
 2 private human beings per 5 U.S.C. §2105(a).

3 For details on the unconstitutional and criminal abuse of language by the government, judges, and 4 prosecutors, see:

Meaning of the Words "includes" and "including", Form #05.014
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

5 12.6. Refusing to allow the jury to read the definitions in the law and then give them a definition that is in conflict with 6 the statutory definition. This substitutes the JUDGES will for what the law expressly says and thereby substitutes
 7 PUBLIC POLICY for the written law.

8 12.7. Deliberately omitting or refusing to discuss or address any of the above types of abuses in litigation raised against 9 the government in any court, or even penalizing those who raise these issues, and thereby:

10 12.7.1. Criminally obstructing justice.

11 12.7.2. Engaging in organized crime and racketeering, which is committed daily by most federal judges.

12 12.7.3. Engaging in criminal witness tampering against those who want to stop criminal activities by public
 13 servants. See 18 U.S.C. §1512.

14 13. When the above criminal tactics of public dis-servants are exposed as the FRAUD and CRIME that they are, the only 15 thing the de facto thieves in government can do is:

16 13.1. Try to ignore the issue raised like you never said it.

17 13.2. Hope you don't approach the grand jury and get them indicted for their crime.

18 13.3. If you do, go after you with what we call "selective enforcement" as a way to defend themselves illegally.

19 4.13.14.2 Purpose for the confusion in laws and forms

20 The purpose for the deliberate obfuscation of citizenship terms is to accomplish a complete breakdown of the separation of 21 powers between the constitutional states of the Union and the national government, and thus, to compress us all into one
 22 mass under a national government just like the rest of the nations of the world. This form of corruption was predicted by 23 Thomas Jefferson, one of our most revered Founding Fathers, when he said:

24 "When all government, domestic and foreign, in little as in great things, shall be drawn to Washington as the 25 center of all power, it will render powerless the checks provided of one government on another and will 26 become as venal and oppressive as the government from which we separated."

27 [Thomas Jefferson to Charles Hammond, 1821. ME 15:332 ]

28 "What an augmentation of the field for jobbing, speculating, plundering, office-building and office-hunting
 29 would be produced by an assumption of all the State powers into the hands of the General Government!"

30 [Thomas Jefferson to Gideon Granger, 1800. ME 10:168]

31 The great object of my fear is the Federal Judiciary. That body, like gravity, ever acting with noiseless foot and 32 unalarming advance, gaining ground step by step and holding what it gains, is engulfing insidiously the special 33 governments into the jaws of that which feeds them."

34 [Thomas Jefferson to Spencer Roane, 1821. ME 15:326 ]

35 "The judiciary of the United States is the subtle corps of sappers and miners constantly working under ground
 36 to undermine the foundations of our confederated fabric. They are construing our Constitution from a co-
 37 ordination of a general and special government to a general and supreme one alone. This will lay all things at 38 their feet, and they are too well versed in English law to forget the maxim, 'boni iudicis est ampliari
 39 jurisdictionem.'"

40 [Thomas Jefferson to Thomas Ritchie, 1820. ME 15:297 ]

41 "It has long been my opinion, and I have never shrunk from its expression,... that the germ of dissolution of our 42 Federal Government is in the constitution of the Federal Judiciary--an irresponsible body (for impeachment is 43 scarcely a scare-crow), working like gravity by night and by day, gaining a little today and a little tomorrow,
 44 and advancing its noiseless step like a thief over the field of jurisdiction until all shall be usurped from the 45 States and the government be consolidated into one. To this I am opposed."

46 [Thomas Jefferson to Charles Hammond, 1821. ME 15:331 ]

47 "Contrary to all correct example, [the Federal judiciary] are in the habit of going out of the question before
 48 them, to throw an anchor ahead and grapple further hold for future advances of power. They are then in fact
 49 the corps of sappers and miners, steadily working to undermine the independent rights of the States and to
 50 consolidate all power in the hands of that government in which they have so important a freehold estate."

51 [Thomas Jefferson: Autobiography, 1821. ME 1:121 ]

The systematic and diabolical plan to destroy the separation of powers and all the efforts to implement it are described in:

Government Conspiracy to Destroy the Separation of Powers, Form #05.023
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

The purpose of abusing this confusion of contexts between CONSTITUTIONAL and STATUTORY “citizens” and “residents” is to:

1. Avoid having to admit that YOU and not THEM are in charge, and that THEY are the SERVANT and seller and you are the SOVEREIGN and buyer. The customer is always right in a free market.

*"In United States, sovereignty resides in people... the Congress cannot invoke the sovereign power of the People to override their will as thus declared."
 [Perry v. U.S., 294 U.S. 330 (1935)]*

*"Strictly speaking, in our republican form of government, the absolute sovereignty of the nation is in the people of the nation; and the residuary sovereignty of each state, not granted to any of its public functionaries, is in the people of the state. 2 Dall. 471
 [Bouv. Law Dict (1870)]*

*"The ultimate authority ... resides in the people alone."
 [The Federalist, No. 46, James Madison]*

*"... a very great lawyer, who wrote but a few years before the American revolution, seems to doubt whether the original contract of society had in any one instance been formally expressed at the first institution of a state; The American revolution seems to have given birth to this new political phenomenon: in every state a written constitution was framed, and adopted by the people, both in their individual and sovereign capacity, and character. By this means, the just distinction between the sovereignty, and the government, was rendered familiar to every intelligent mind; the former was found to reside in the people, and to be unalienable from them; the latter in their servants and agents: by this means, also, government was reduced to its elements; its object was defined, its principles ascertained; its powers limited, and fixed; its structure organized; and the functions of every part of the machine so clearly designated, as to prevent any interference, so long as the limits of each were observed...."
 [Blackstone's Commentaries, "View of the Constitution of the United States, Section 2 - Nature of U.S. Constitution; manner of its adoption; as annotated by St. George Tucker, William Young Birch and Abraham Small, c1803]*

2. Make the consent to become a STATUTORY citizen “invisible”, so you aren’t informed that you can withdraw it and thereby obligate them to PROTECT your right to NOT consent and not be a “subject” under their void for vagueness franchise “codes”. See:

Requirement for Consent, Form #05.003
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

3. Remove your ability to CIVILLY, POLITICALLY, and LEGALLY disassociate with them peacefully and thereby abolish your sponsorship of them. Thus, indirectly they are advocating lawlessness, violence, and anarchy, because these VIOLENT forces are the only thing left to remove their control over you if you can’t lawfully do it peacefully.
4. Avoid having to be competitive and efficient like any other corporate business. Government is just a business, and the only thing it sells is “protection”. You aren’t required to “buy” their product or be a “customer”.
  - 4.1. In their language, civil STATUTORY “citizens” and “residents” are “customers”.
  - 4.2. You have a right NOT to contract with them for protection under the social compact.
  - 4.3. You have a First Amendment right to NOT associate with them and not be compelled to associate with them civilly.
  - 4.4. If you don’t like their “product” you have a right FIRE them:

*"To secure these [inalienable] rights [to life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness], governments are instituted among men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed... Whenever any form of government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the right of the people to alter or abolish it, and to institute new government, laying its foundation on such principles, and organizing its powers in such form, as to them shall seem most likely to effect their safety and happiness."
 [Thomas Jefferson: Declaration of Independence, 1776. ME 1:29, Papers 1:429]*

- 4.5. The ONLY peaceful means to “alter or abolish” them is to STOP subsidizing them and thereby take away ALL the power they have, which is primarily commercial. Any other means requires violence.

5. Make everything they do into essentially an adhesion contract, where the civil statutory law is the contract.

“Adhesion contract. Standardized contract form offered to consumers of [government] goods and services on essentially “take it or leave it” basis without affording consumer realistic opportunity to bargain and under such conditions that consumer cannot obtain desired product or services except by acquiescing in form contract. Distinctive features of adhesion contract is that weaker party has no realistic choice as to its terms. Cubic Corp. v. Marty, 4 Dist., 185 C.A.3d. 438, 229 Cal.Rptr. 828, 833; Standard Oil Co. of Calif. v. Perkins, C.A.Or., 347 F.2d. 379, 383. Recognizing that these contracts are not the result of traditionally “bargained” contracts, the trend is to relieve parties from onerous conditions imposed by such contracts. However, not every such contract is unconscionable. Lechmere Tire and Sales Co. v. Burwick, 360 Mass. 718, 720, 721, 277 N.E.2d. 503.”
[Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 40]

6. Replace the citizen/government relationship with the employee/employer relationship. All statutory “citizens” are public offices in the government. As Judge Napolitano likes to say in his Freedom Watch Program:

“Do we work for the government or does the government work for us”?

If you would like more details on how this transition from citizen/government to employee/employer happens, see:

6.1. Ministry Introduction, Form #12.014

6.2. De Facto Government Scam, Form #05.043

7. Destroy the separation between PRIVATE humans and PUBLIC offices, and thus to impose the DUTIES of a public office against the will of those who do not consent in violation of the Thirteenth Amendment. See:

Why Your Government is Either a Thief or You are a “Public Officer” for Income Tax Purposes, Form #05.008
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

8. Destroy the separation of powers between the federal government and the states. See:

Government Conspiracy to Destroy the Separation of Powers, Form #05.023
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

9. Undermine the very function of government, which is to protect PRIVATE, inalienable, Constitutional rights. The first step in that process is to prevent them from being converted to PUBLIC offices or PUBLIC rights with your EXPRESS, INFORMED consent. Hence, this is not GOVERNMENT activity, but PRIVATE activity of a PRIVATE corporation and mafia protection racket.

10. Protect the plausible deniability of those who engage in it by allowing them to disingenuously say that it was an innocent or ignorant mistake. Ignorance of the law is not an excuse in criminal violations of this kind.

4.13.14.3 The architect of our present government system, Montesquieu, predicted this deception, corruption, and confusion of contexts

It will interest the reader to know that the deliberate confusion and deception between nationality and domicile and between CONSTITUTIONAL citizens and STATUTORY citizens respectively was predicted by the architect who designed our present system of republican government with its separation of powers. He said that the main way the system could be corrupted would be to place everyone under the POLITICAL law, which he describes as law for the INTERNAL affairs of the government only.

Within our republican government, the founding fathers recognized three classes of law:

1. Criminal law. Protects both PUBLIC and PRIVATE rights.
2. Civil law. Protects exclusively PRIVATE rights.
3. Political law. Protects exclusively PUBLIC rights of public officers and offices within the government.

The above three types of law were identified in the following document upon which the founding fathers wrote the constitution and based the design of our republican form of government:

The Spirit of Laws, Charles de Montesquieu, 1758
SOURCE: <http://famguardian.org/Publications/SpiritOfLaws/sol.htm>

Montesquieu defines “political law” and “political liberty” as follows:

1. A general Idea.

I make a distinction between the laws that establish political liberty, as it relates to the constitution, and those by which it is established, as it relates to the citizen. The former shall be the subject of this book; the latter I shall examine in the next.

[The Spirit of Laws, Charles de Montesquieu, 1758, Book XI, Section 1;

SOURCE: http://famguardian.org/Publications/SpiritOfLaws/sol\_11.htm#001]

The Constitution in turn is a POLITICAL document which represents law EXCLUSIVELY for public officers within the government. It does not obligate or abrogate any PRIVATE right. It defines what the courts call “public rights”, meaning rights possessed and owned exclusively by the government ONLY.

“And the Constitution itself is in every real sense a law—the lawmakers being the people themselves, in whom under our system all political power and sovereignty primarily resides, and through whom such power and sovereignty primarily speaks. It is by that law, and not otherwise, that the legislative, executive, and judicial agencies which it created exercise such political authority as they have been permitted to possess. The Constitution speaks for itself in terms so plain that to misunderstand their import is not rationally possible. ‘We the People of the United States,’ it says, ‘do ordain and establish this Constitution.’ Ordain and establish! These are definite words of enactment, and without more would stamp what follows with the dignity and character of law. The framers of the Constitution, however, were not content to let the matter rest here, but provided explicitly—‘This Constitution, and the Laws of the United States which shall be made in Pursuance thereof; ... shall be the supreme Law of the Land.’ (Const. art. 6, cl. 2.) The supremacy of the Constitution as law is thus declared without qualification. That supremacy is absolute; the supremacy of a statute enacted by Congress is not absolute but conditioned upon its being made in pursuance of the Constitution. And a judicial tribunal, clothed by that instrument with complete judicial power, and, therefore, by the very nature of the power, required to ascertain and apply the law to the facts in every case or proceeding properly brought for adjudication, must apply the supreme law and reject the inferior statute whenever the two conflict. In the discharge of that duty, the opinion of the lawmakers that a statute passed by them is valid must be given great weight, Adkins v. Children’s Hospital, 261 U.S. 525, 544, 43 S.Ct. 394, 24 A.L.R. 1238; but their opinion, or the court’s opinion, that the statute will prove greatly or generally beneficial is wholly irrelevant to the inquiry. Schechter Poultry Corp. v. United States, 295 U.S. 495, 549, 550 S., 55 S.Ct. 837, 97 A.L.R. 947. “
[Carter v. Carter Coal Co., 298 U.S. 238 (1936)]

The vast majority of laws passed by Congress are what Montesquieu calls “political law” that is intended exclusively for the government and not the private citizen. The authority for implementing such political law is Article 4, Section 3, Clause 2 of the United States Constitution. To wit:

United States Constitution
Article 4, Section 3, Clause 2

The Congress shall have Power to dispose of and make all needful Rules and Regulations respecting the Territory or other Property belonging to the United States; and nothing in this Constitution shall be so construed as to Prejudice any Claims of the United States, or of any particular State.

The only areas where POLITICAL law and CIVIL law overlap is in the exercise of the political rights to vote and serve on jury duty. Why? Because jurists are regarded as public officers in 18 U.S.C. §201(a)(1):

TITLE 18 > PART 1 > CHAPTER 11 > § 201
§ 201. Bribery of public officials and witnesses

(a) For the purpose of this section—

(1) the term “public official” means Member of Congress, Delegate, or Resident Commissioner, either before or after such official has qualified, or an officer or employee or person acting for or on behalf of the United States, or any department, agency or branch of Government thereof, including the District of Columbia, in any official function, under or by authority of any such department, agency, or branch of Government, or a juror;

However, it has also repeatedly been held by the courts that poll taxes are unconstitutional. Hence, voters technically are NOT to be regarded as public officers or franchisees for any purpose OTHER than their role as a voter. Recall that all statutory “Taxpayers” are public offices in the government.

Tax laws, for instance, are “political law” exclusively for the government or public officer and not the private citizen. Why? Because:

1. The U.S. Supreme Court identified taxes as a “political matter”. “Political law”, “political questions”, and “political matters” cannot be heard by true constitutional courts and may ONLY be heard in legislative franchise courts officiated by the Executive and not Judicial branch:

“Thus, the Court has frequently held that domicile or residence, more substantial than mere presence in transit or sojourn, is an adequate basis for taxation, including income, property, and death taxes. Since the Fourteenth Amendment makes one a citizen of the state wherein he resides, the fact of residence creates universally reciprocal duties of protection by the state and of allegiance and support by the citizen. The latter obviously includes a duty to pay taxes, and their nature and measure is largely a political matter. Of course, the situs of property may tax it regardless of the citizenship, domicile, or residence of the owner, the most obvious illustration being a tax on realty laid by the state in which the realty is located.”

Miller Brothers Co. v. Maryland, [347 U.S. 340 (1954)]

2. The U.S. Tax Court:
- 2.1. Is an Article I Court in the EXECUTIVE and not JUDICIAL branch, and hence, can only officiate over matters INTERNAL to the government. See 26 U.S.C. §7441.
  - 2.2. Is a POLITICAL court in the POLITICAL branch of the government. Namely, the Executive branch.
  - 2.3. Is limited to the District of Columbia because all public offices are limited to be exercised there per 4 U.S.C. §72. It travels all over the country, but this is done ILLEGALLY and in violation of the separation of powers.
3. The activity subject to excise taxation is limited exclusively to “public offices” in the government, which is what a “trade or business” is statutorily defined as in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26).

26 U.S.C. Sec. 7701\(a\)\(26\)

“The term ‘trade or business’ includes the performance of the functions of a public office.”

In Book XXVI, Section 15 of the Spirit of Laws, Montesquieu says that POLITICAL laws should not be allowed to regulate CIVIL conduct, meaning that POLITICAL laws limited exclusively to the government should not be enforced upon the PRIVATE citizen or made to “appear” as though they are “civil law” that applies to everyone:

The Spirit of Laws, Book XXVI, Section 15

15. That we should not regulate by the Principles of political Law those Things which depend on the Principles of civil Law.

As men have given up their natural independence to live under political laws, they have given up the natural community of goods to live under civil laws.

By the first, they acquired [PUBLIC] liberty; by the second, [PRIVATE] property. We should not decide by the laws of [PUBLIC] liberty, which, as we have already said, is only the government of the community, what ought to be decided by the laws concerning [PRIVATE] property. It is a paralogism to say that the good of the individual should give way to that of the public; this can never take place, except when the government of the community, or, in other words, the liberty of the subject is concerned; this does not affect such cases as relate to private property, because the public good consists in every one's having his property, which was given him by the civil laws, invariably preserved.

Cicero maintains that the Agrarian laws were unjust; because the community was established with no other view than that every one might be able to preserve his property.

Let us, therefore, lay down a certain maxim, that whenever the public good happens to be the matter in question, it is not for the advantage of the public to deprive an individual of his property, or even to retrench the least part of it by a law, or a political regulation. In this case we should follow the rigour of the civil law, which is the Palladium of [PRIVATE] property.

Thus when the public has occasion for the estate of an individual, it ought never to act by the rigour of political law; it is here that the civil law ought to triumph, which, with the eyes of a mother, regards every individual as the whole community.

If the political magistrate would erect a public edifice, or make a new road, he must indemnify those who are injured by it; the public is in this respect like an individual who treats with an individual. It is fully enough that it can oblige a citizen to sell his inheritance, and that it can strip him of this great privilege which he holds from the civil law, the not being forced to alienate his possessions.

1 After the nations which subverted the Roman empire had abused their very conquests, the spirit of liberty called
2 them back to that of equity. They exercised the most barbarous laws with moderation: and if any one should
3 doubt the truth of this, he need only read Beaumanoir's admirable work on jurisprudence, written in the twelfth
4 century.

5 They mended the highways in his time as we do at present. He says, that when a highway could not be repaired,
6 they made a new one as near the old as possible; but indemnified the proprietors at the expense of those who
7 reaped any advantage from the road.<sup>4</sup> They determined at that time by the civil law; in our days, we determine
8 by the law of politics.

11 What Montesquieu is implying is what we have been saying all along, and he said it in 1758, which was even before the 12 Declaration of Independence was written:

- 13 1. The purpose of establishing government is exclusively to protect PRIVATE rights.
- 14 2. PRIVATE rights are protected by the CIVIL law. The civil law, in turn is based in EQUITY rather than PRIVILEGE:

15 “Thus when the public has occasion for the estate of an individual, it ought never to act by the rigour of
16 political law; it is here that the civil law ought to triumph, which, with the eyes of a mother, regards every 17 individual as the whole community.”

- 18 3. PUBLIC or government rights are protected by the PUBLIC or POLITICAL or GOVERNMENT law and NOT the 19 CIVIL law.
- 20 4. The first and most important role of government is to prevent the POLITICAL or GOVERNMENT law from being 21 used or especially ABUSED as an excuse to confiscate or jeopardize PRIVATE property.

22 Unfortunately, it is precisely the above type of corruption that Montesquieu describes that is the foundation of the present
23 de facto government, tax system, and money system. ALL of them treat every human being as a PUBLIC officer against 24 their consent, and impose what he calls the “rigors of the political law” upon them, in what amounts to unconstitutional
25 eminent domain and a THEFT and CONFISCATION of otherwise PRIVATE property by enforcing PUBLIC law against 26 PRIVATE people.

27 The way that the corrupt politicians have implemented the corruption described by Montesquieu was to:

- 28 1. Made people born or domiciled in the territories into privileged public officers and franchisees.

29 “Is it a franchise? A franchise is said to be a right reserved to the people by the constitution, as the elective
30 franchise. Again, it is said to be a privilege conferred by grant from government, and vested in one or more
31 individuals, as a public office. Corporations, or bodies politic are the most usual franchises known to our laws.
32 In England they are very numerous, and are defined to be royal privileges in the hands of a subject. An 33 information will lie in many cases growing out of these grants, especially where corporations are concerned, as
34 by the statute of 9 Anne, ch. 20, and in which the public have an interest. In 1 Strange R. ( The King v. Sir 35 William Louthier,) it was held that an information of this kind did not lie in the case of private rights, where no
36 franchise of the crown has been invaded.

37 If this is so--if in England a privilege existing in a subject, which the king alone could grant, constitutes it a
38 franchise--in this country, under our institutions, a privilege or immunity of a public nature, which could not 39 be exercised without a legislative grant, would also be a franchise.”
40 [People v. Ridgley, 21 Ill. 65, 1859 WL 6687, 11 Peck 65 (Ill., 1859) ]

- 41 2. Gave these PRIVILEGED territorial people a name of “U.S. citizen” or “U.S. resident”.
- 42 3. Confused the CONSTITUTIONAL “United States***” with the STATUTORY “United States***” in their statutes, 43 forms, and court rulings by refusing to distinguish them. This allowed them to:
  - 44 3.1. Conduct their war on private property and private rights under the COLOR of law, but without the actual 45 AUTHORITY of law.
  - 46 3.2. Claim ignorance when the confusion was revealed.
  - 47 3.3. Protect their plausible deniability.
- 48 4. Called people in states of the Union the SAME NAME as that of PRIVILEGED people in the territories on 49 government forms, so that they could deceive them into believing that they are public officers in the government.
- 50 5. Imposed whatever obligations, including tax obligations, that they want upon these privileged franchisees.

4.13.14.4 How the deceit and compulsion is implemented in the courtroom

"Shall the throne of iniquity [the judge's bench], which devises evil by [obfuscating the] law, have fellowship with You [Christians]?" They gather together against the life of the righteous, and condemn innocent blood. But the Lord has been my defense, and my God the rock of my refuge. He has brought on them their own iniquity, and shall cut them off in their own wickedness; the Lord our God shall cut them off.
 [Psalm 94:20-23, Bible, NKJV]

The U.S. Supreme Court indirectly identified the distinctions between the CONSTITUTIONAL and the STATUTORY contexts and how one transitions from being a Constitutional to a Statutory citizen in the following holdings. These holdings are important so you will recognize what happens to your standing in court when you switch from a CONSTITUTIONAL to a STATUTORY "citizen". That way you will recognize WHERE the court's jurisdiction is coming from: the CONSTITUTION or the STATUTES. The CONSTITUTION only deals with HUMANS and LAND while the STATUTES deal almost entirely with FRANCHISES and ARTIFICIAL creations of CONGRESS.

1. First the U.S. Supreme Court held that a corporation is NOT a "citizen" as used in the CONSTITUTION:

"That by no sound or reasonable interpretation, can a corporation-a mere faculty in law, be transformed into a citizen, or treated as a citizen [within the Constitution]. 2d. That the second section of the third article of the Constitution, investing the courts of the United States with jurisdiction in controversies between citizens of different States, cannot be made to embrace controversies to which corporations and not citizens are parties; and that the assumption, by those courts, of jurisdiction in such cases, must involve a palpable infraction of the article and section just referred to. 3d. That in the cause before us, the party defendant in the Circuit Court having been a corporation aggregate, created by the State of New Jersey, the Circuit Court could not properly take cognizance thereof; and, therefore, this cause should be remanded to the Circuit Court, with directions that it be dismissed for the want of jurisdiction."
 [Rundle v. Delaware & Raritan Canal Co., 55 U.S. 80 (1852)]

2. But on the OTHER hand, they held that a corporation IS a "citizen" or "resident" under federal STATUTORY law.

"...it is well settled that a corporation created by a state is a citizen of the state, within the meaning of those provisions of the constitution and statutes of the United States which define the jurisdiction of the federal courts. Railroad Co. v. Railroad Co., 112 U.S. 414, 5 Sup.Ct.Rep. 208; Paul v. Virginia, 8 Wall. 168, 178; Pennsylvania v. Bridge Co., 13 How. 518."
 [State of Wisconsin v. Pelican Insurance Co., 127 U.S. 265 (1888)]

3. The U.S. Supreme Court held that ONLY private HUMAN men and women can sue in a CONSTITUTIONAL court, not corporations:

"Aliens, or citizens of different states, are not less susceptible of these apprehensions, nor can they be supposed to be less the objects of constitutional provision, because they are allowed to sue by a corporate name. That name, indeed, cannot be an alien or a citizen; but the persons whom it represents may be the one or the other; and the controversy is, in fact and in law, between those persons suing in their corporate character, by their corporate name, for a corporate right, and the individual against whom the suit may be instituted. Substantially *88 and essentially, the parties in such a case, where the members of the corporation are aliens, or citizens of a different state from the opposite party, come within the spirit and terms of the jurisdiction conferred by the constitution on the national tribunals."

If the constitution would authorize congress to give the courts of the union jurisdiction in this case, in consequence of the character of the members of the corporation, then the judicial act ought to be construed to give it. For the term citizen ought to be understood as it is used in the constitution, and as it is used in other laws. That is, to describe the real persons who come into court, in this case, under their corporate name.

That corporations composed of citizens are considered by the legislature as citizens, under certain [STATUTORY but not CONSTITUTIONAL] circumstances, is to be strongly inferred from the registering act. It never could be intended that an American registered vessel, abandoned to an insurance company composed of citizens, should lose her character as an American vessel; and yet this would be the consequence of declaring that the members of the corporation were, to every intent and purpose, out of view, and merged in the corporation.

The court feels itself authorized by the case in 12 Mod. on a question of jurisdiction, to look to 92*92 the character of the individuals who compose the corporation, and they think that the precedents of this court, though they were not decisions on argument, ought not to be absolutely disregarded.
[Bank of United States v. Deveaux, 9 U.S. 61(1809)]

4. They also held that when a HUMAN or CONSTITUTIONAL “citizen” or “person” sues a corporation, then they have to sue SPECIFIC PEOPLE in the corporation instead of the whole corporation if the court is a CONSTITUTIONAL court rather than a STATUTORY FRANCHISE court:

*It is important that the style and character of this party litigant, as well as the source and manner of its existence, be borne in mind, as both are deemed material in considering the question of the jurisdiction of this court, and of the Circuit Court. It is important, too, to be remembered, that the question here raised stands wholly unaffected by any legislation, competent or incompetent, which may have been attempted in the organization of the courts of the United States; but depends exclusively upon the construction of the 2d section of the 3d article of the Constitution, which defines the judicial power of the United States; first, with respect to the subjects embraced within that power; and, secondly, with respect to those whose character may give them access, as parties, to the courts of the United States. In the second branch of this definition, we find the following enumeration, as descriptive of those whose position, as parties, will authorize their pleading or being impleaded in those courts; and this position is limited to "controversies to which the United States are a party; controversies 97*97 between two or more States, — between citizens of different States, — between citizens of the same State, claiming lands under grants of different States, — and between the citizens of a State and foreign citizens or subjects."*

Now, it has not been, and will not be, pretended, that this corporation can, in any sense, be identified with the United States, or is endowed with the privileges of the latter; or if it could be, it would clearly be exempted from all liability to be sued in the Federal courts. Nor is it pretended, that this corporation is a State of this Union; nor, being created by, and situated within, the State of New Jersey, can it be held to be the citizen or subject of a foreign State. It must be, then, under that part of the enumeration in the article quoted, which gives to the courts of the United States jurisdiction in controversies between citizens of different States, that either the Circuit Court or this court can take cognizance of the corporation as a party; and this is, in truth, the sole foundation on which that cognizance has been assumed, or is attempted to be maintained. The proposition, then, on which the authority of the Circuit Court and of this tribunal is based, is this: The Delaware and Raritan Canal Company is either a citizen of the United States, or it is a citizen of the State of New Jersey. This proposition, startling as its terms may appear, either to the legal or political apprehension, is undeniably the basis of the jurisdiction asserted in this case, and in all others of a similar character, and must be established, or that jurisdiction wholly fails. Let this proposition be examined a little more closely.

*The term citizen will be found rarely occurring in the writers upon English law; those writers almost universally adopting, as descriptive of those possessing rights or sustaining obligations, political or social, the term subject, as more suited to their peculiar local institutions. But, in the writers of other nations, and under systems of polity deemed less liberal than that of England, we find the term citizen familiarly reviving, and the character and the rights and duties that term implies, particularly defined. Thus, Vattel, in his 4th book, has a chapter, (cap. 6th,) the title of which is: "The concern a nation may have in the actions of her citizens." A few words from the text of that chapter will show the apprehension of this author in relation to this term. "Private persons," says he, "who are members of one nation, may offend and ill-treat the citizens of another; it remains for us to examine what share a state may have in the actions of her citizens, and what are the rights and obligations of sovereigns in that respect." And again: "Whoever uses a citizen ill, indirectly offends the state, which is bound to protect this citizen." The meaning of the term citizen 98*98 or subject, in the apprehension of English jurists, as indicating persons in their natural character, in contradistinction to artificial or fictitious persons created by law, is further elucidated by those jurists, in their treatises upon the origin and capacities and objects of those artificial persons designated by the name of corporations. Thus, Mr. Justice Blackstone, in the 18th chapter of his 1st volume, holds this language: "We have hitherto considered persons in their natural capacities, and have treated of their rights and duties. But, as all personal rights die with the person; and, as the necessary forms of investing a series of individuals, one after another, with the same identical rights, would be inconvenient, if not impracticable; it has been found necessary, when it is for the advantage of the public to have any particular rights kept on foot and continued, to constitute artificial persons, who maintain a perpetual succession, and enjoy a kind of legal immortality. These artificial persons are called corporations."*

This same distinguished writer, in the first book of his Commentaries, p. 123, says, "The rights of persons are such as concern and are annexed to the persons of men, and when the person to whom they are due is regarded, are called simply rights; but when we consider the person from whom they are due, they are then denominated, duties," And again, cap. 10th of the same book, treating of the PEOPLE, he says, "The people are either aliens, that is, born out of the dominions or allegiance of the crown; or natives, that is, such as are born within it." Under our own systems of polity, the term, citizen, implying the same or similar relations to the government and to society which appertain to the term, subject, in England, is familiar to all. Under either system, the term used is designed to apply to man in his individual character, and to his natural capacities; to a being, or agent, possessing social and political rights, and sustaining, social, political, and moral obligations. It is in this acceptance only, therefore, that the term, citizen, in the article of the Constitution, can be received and understood. When distributing the judicial power, that article extends it to controversies between citizens of

1 different States. This must mean the natural physical beings composing those separate communities, and
 2 can, by no violence of interpretation, be made to signify artificial, incorporeal, theoretical, and invisible
 3 creations. A corporation, therefore, being not a natural person, but a mere creature of the mind, invisible
 4 and intangible, cannot be a citizen of a State, or of the United States, and cannot fall within the terms or the 5 power of the above-mentioned article, and can therefore neither plead nor be impleaded in the courts of the 6 United States. Against this position it may be urged, that the 99*99 converse thereof has been ruled by this
 7 court, and that this matter is no longer open for question. In answer to such an argument, I would reply, that
 8 this is a matter involving a construction of the Constitution, and that wherever the construction or the integrity
 9 of that sacred instrument is involved, I can hold myself trammelled by no precedent or number of precedents.
 10 That instrument is above all precedents; and its integrity every one is bound to vindicate against any number of 11 precedents, if believed to trench upon its supremacy. Let us examine into what this court has propounded in 12 reference to its jurisdiction in cases in which corporations have been parties; and endeavor to ascertain the 13 influence that may be claimed for what they have heretofore ruled in support of such jurisdiction. The first
 14 instance in which this question was brought directly before this court, was that of the Bank of the United States
 15 v. Deveaux, 5 Cranch, 61. An examination of this case will present a striking instance of the error into which 16 the strongest minds may be led, whenever they shall depart from the plain, common acceptance of terms, or 17 from well ascertained truths, for the attainment of conclusions, which the subtlest ingenuity is incompetent to 18 sustain. This criticism upon the decision in the case of the Bank v. Deveaux, may perhaps be shielded from 19 the charge of presumptuousness, by a subsequent decision of this court, hereafter to be mentioned. In the 20 former case, the Bank of the United States, a corporation created by Congress, was the party plaintiff, and
 21 upon the question of the capacity of such a party to sue in the courts of the United States, this court said, in 22 reference to that question, "The jurisdiction of this court being limited, so far as respects the character of the 23 parties in this particular case, to controversies between citizens of different States, both parties must be 24 citizens, to come within the description. That invisible, intangible, and artificial being, that mere legal entity,
 25 a corporation aggregate, is certainly not a citizen, and consequently cannot sue or be sued in the courts of 26 the United States, unless the rights of the members in this respect can be exercised in their corporate name.
 27 If the corporation be considered as a mere faculty, and not as a company of individuals, who, in transacting
 28 their business, may use a legal name, they must be excluded from the courts of the Union." The court having 29 shown the necessity for citizenship in both parties, in order to give jurisdiction; having shown farther, from the 30 nature of corporations, their absolute incompatibility with citizenship, attempts some qualification of these 31 indisputable and clearly stated positions, which, if intelligible at all, must be taken as wholly subversive of the 32 positions so laid down. After stating the requisite of citizenship, and showing that a corporation 100*100
 33 cannot be a citizen, "and consequently that it cannot sue or be sued in the courts of the United States," the court
 34 goes on to add, "unless the rights of the members can be exercised in their corporate name." Now, it is 35 submitted that it is in this mode only, viz. in their corporate name, that the rights of the members can be
 36 exercised; that it is this which constitutes the character, and being, and functions of a corporation. If it is meant
 37 beyond this, that each member, or the separate members, or a portion of them, can take to themselves the 38 character and functions of the aggregate and merely legal being, then the corporation would be dissolved; its 39 unity and perpetuity, the essential features of its nature, and the great objects of its existence, would be at an 40 end. It would present the anomaly of a being existing and not existing at the same time. This strange and 41 obscure qualification, attempted by the court, of the clear, legal principles previously announced by them,
 42 forms the introduction to, and apology for, the proceeding, adopted by them, by which they undertook to 43 adjudicate upon the rights of the corporation, through the supposed citizenship of the individuals interested in 44 that corporation. They assert the power to look beyond the corporation, to presume or to ascertain the 45 residence of the individuals composing it, and to model their decision upon that foundation. In other words,
 46 they affirm that in an action at law, the purely legal rights, asserted by one of the parties upon the record, may 47 be maintained by showing or presuming that these rights are vested in some other person who is no party to the 48 controversy before them.

49 Thus stood the decision of the Bank of the United States v. Deveaux, wholly irreconcilable with correct
 50 definition, and a puzzle to professional apprehension, until it was encountered by this court, in the decision of 51 the Louisville and Cincinnati Railroad Company v. Letson, reported in 2 Howard, 497. In the latter decision,
 52 the court, unable to untie the judicial entanglement of the Bank and Deveaux, seem to have applied to it the 53 sword of the conqueror; but, unfortunately, in the blow they have dealt at the ligature which perplexed them,
 54 they have severed a portion of the temple itself. They have not only contravened all the known definitions and
 55 adjudications with respect to the nature of corporations, but they have repudiated the doctrines of the civilians
 56 as to what is imported by the term subject or citizen, and repealed, at the same time, that restriction in the 57 Constitution which limited the jurisdiction of the courts of the United States to controversies between "citizens
 58 of different States." They have asserted that, "a corporation created by, and transacting business in a State, is 59 to be deemed an inhabitant of the State, capable of being treated 101*101 as a citizen, for all the purposes of 60 suing and being sued, and that an averment of the facts of its creation, and the place of transacting its business,
 61 is sufficient to give the circuit court's jurisdiction.

62 The first thing which strikes attention, in the position thus affirmed, is the want of precision and perspicuity in
 63 its terms. The court affirm that a corporation created by, and transacting business within a State, is to be 64 deemed an inhabitant of that State. But the article of the Constitution does not make inhabitancy a requisite
 65 of the condition of suing or being sued; that requisite is citizenship. Moreover, although citizenship implies
 66 the right of residence, the latter by no means implies citizenship. Again, it is said that these corporations may 67 be treated as citizens, for the purpose of suing or being sued. Even if the distinction here attempted were 68 comprehensible, it would be a sufficient reply to it, that the Constitution does not provide that those who may be
 69 treated as citizens, may sue or be sued, but that the jurisdiction shall be limited to citizens only; citizens in right and in fact. The distinction attempted seems to be without meaning, for the Constitution or the laws nowhere define such a being as a quasi citizen, to be called into existence for particular purposes; a being without any of the attributes of citizenship, but the one for which he may be temporarily and arbitrarily created, and to be dismissed from existence the moment the particular purposes of his creation shall have been answered. In a political, or legal sense, none can be treated or dealt with by the government as citizens, but those who are citizens in reality. It would follow, then, by necessary induction, from the argument of the court, that as a corporation must be treated as a citizen, it must be so treated to all intents and purposes, because it is a citizen. Each citizen (if not under old governments) certainly does, under our system of polity, possess the same rights and faculties, and sustain the same obligations, political, social, and moral, which appertain to each of his fellow-citizens. As a citizen, then, of a State, or of the United States, a corporation would be eligible to the State or Federal legislatures; and if created by either the State or Federal governments, might, as a native-born citizen, aspire to the office of President of the United States — or to the command of armies, or fleets, in which last example, so far as the character of the commander would form a part of it, we should have the poetical romance of the spectre ship realized in our Republic. And should this incorporeal and invisible commander not acquit himself in color or in conduct, we might see him, provided his arrest were practicable, sent to answer his delinquencies before a court-martial, and subjected to the penalties 102*102 of the articles of war. Sir Edward Coke has declared, that a corporation cannot commit treason, felony, or other crime; neither is it capable of suffering a traitor's or felon's punishment; for it is not liable to corporeal penalties — that it can perform no personal duties, for it cannot take an oath for the due execution of an office; neither can it be arrested or committed to prison, for its existence being ideal, no man can arrest it; neither can it be excommunicated, for it has no soul. But these doctrines of Lord Coke were founded upon an apprehension of the law now treated as antiquated and obsolete. His lordship did not anticipate an improvement by which a corporation could be transformed into a citizen, and by that transformation be given a physical existence, and endowed with soul and body too. The incongruities here attempted to be shown as necessarily deducible from the decisions of the cases of the Bank of the United States v. Deveaux, and of the Cincinnati and Louisville Railroad Company v. Letson, afford some illustration of the effects which must ever follow a departure from the settled principles of the law. These principles are always traceable to a wise and deeply founded experience; they are, therefore, ever consentaneous, and in harmony with themselves and with reason; and whenever abandoned as guides to the judicial course, the aberration must lead to bewildering uncertainty and confusion. Conducted by these principles, consecrated both by time and the obedience of sages, I am brought to the following conclusions: 1st. That by no sound or reasonable interpretation, can a corporation — a mere faculty in law, be transformed into a citizen, or treated as a citizen. 2d. That the second section of the third article of the Constitution, investing the courts of the United States with jurisdiction in controversies between citizens of different States, cannot be made to embrace controversies to which corporations and not citizens are parties; and that the assumption, by those courts, of jurisdiction in such cases, must involve a palpable infraction of the article and section just referred to. 3d. That in the cause before us, the party defendant in the Circuit Court having been a corporation aggregate, created by the State of New Jersey, the Circuit Court could not properly take cognizance thereof; and, therefore, this cause should be remanded to the Circuit Court, with directions that it be dismissed for the want of jurisdiction.

[Rundle Et Al v. Delaware and Raritan Canal Company, 55 U.S. 80 (1852)]

So, in the CONSTITUTION, corporations or other artificial entities are NOT “citizens”, but under federal STATUTORY law granting jurisdiction to federal courts, they ARE. And what statutory law is THAT? See 28 U.S.C. §1332:

TITLE 28 > PART IV > CHAPTER 85 > § 1332
§ 1332. Diversity of citizenship; amount in controversy; costs

(a) The district courts shall have original jurisdiction of all civil actions where the matter in controversy exceeds the sum or value of $75,000, exclusive of interest and costs, and is between—

(1) citizens of different States;

(2) citizens of a State and citizens or subjects of a foreign state;

(3) citizens of different States and in which citizens or subjects of a foreign state are additional parties; and

(4) a foreign state, defined in section 1603 \(a\) of this title, as plaintiff and citizens of a State or of different States.

[ . . . ]

(e) The word “States”, as used in this section, includes the Territories, the District of Columbia, and the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico.

We can see from the above that the “State” they are talking about is NOT a constitutional state of the Union, but rather is identified in 28 U.S.C. §1332(e) as a federal territory NOT within any state of the Union. All such territories are in fact “corporations”:

*At common law, a "corporation" was an "artificial perso[n] endowed with the legal capacity of perpetual succession" consisting either of a single individual (termed a "corporation sole") or of a collection of several individuals (a "corporation aggregate"). 3 H. Stephen, Commentaries on the Laws of England 166, 168 (1st Am. ed. 1845) . The sovereign was considered a corporation. See id., at 170; see also 1 W. Blackstone, Commentaries *467. Under the definitions supplied by contemporary law dictionaries, Territories would have been classified as "corporations" (and hence as "persons") at the time that 1983 was enacted and the Dictionary Act recodified. See W. Anderson, A Dictionary of Law 261 (1893) ("All corporations were originally modeled upon a state or nation"); I J. Bouvier, A Law Dictionary Adapted to the Constitution and Laws of the United States of America 318-319 (11th ed. 1866) ("In this extensive sense the United States may be termed a corporation"); Van Brocklin v. Tennessee, 117 U.S. 151, 154 (1886) ("The United States is a . . . great corporation . . . ordained and established by the American people") (quoting United [495 U.S. 182, 202] States v. Maurice, 26 F.Cas. 1211, 1216 (No. 15,747) (CC Va. 1823) (Marshall, C. J.); Cotton v. United States, 11 How. 229, 231 (1851) (United States is "a corporation"). See generally Trustees of Dartmouth College v. Woodward, 4 Wheat. 518, 561-562 (1819) (explaining history of term "corporation"). [Ngiraingas v. Sanchez, 495 U.S. 182 (1990) ]*

Hence, this STATUTORY “State” mentioned in 28 U.S.C. §1332 is obviously a STATUTORY rather than CONSTITUTIONAL “State”, and hence a STATUTORY and not CONSTITUTIONAL “citizen”. Therefore, a person who claims to be a constitutional citizen or a human being could not partake of the statutory “privilege” granted by the above franchise in 28 U.S.C. §1332. And YES, that is what it is: A franchise, “Congressionally created right”, or “public right”. All franchises presume that the actors, who are all public officers of “U.S. Inc.”, are domiciled upon and therefore citizens of federal territory and NOT a state of the Union. Those who are HUMANS don’t need franchises or privileges, and can instead invoke CONSTITUTIONAL diversity instead of STATUTORY diversity of citizenship under Article III, Section 2 to litigate in a CONSTITUTIONAL un-enfranchised court.

The above analysis also clearly explains the following, because you can’t be a “citizen” under federal statutory law unless you are domiciled on federal territory not within a CONSTITUTIONAL state of the Union:

“Domicile and citizen are synonymous in federal courts, Earley v. Hershey Transit Co., D.C. Pa., 55 F.Supp. 981, 982; inhabitant, resident and citizen are synonymous, Standard Stoker Co. v. Lower, D.C.Md., 46 F.2d. 678, 683.”
[Black’s Law Dictionary, 4th Ed., p. 311]

All federal District Courts are Article IV, Section 3, Clause 2 franchise courts that manage government territory, property, and franchises. Federal corporations are an example of such franchises. This is proven with thousands of pages of evidence in the following. Therefore, the ONLY type of “domicile” they could mean above is domicile on federal territory not within any state of the Union.

What Happened to Justice?, Form #06.012
<http://sedm.org/ItemInfo/Ebooks/WhatHappJustice/WhatHappJustice.htm>

We also know based on the previous section that corporations are not constitutional citizens, so they can’t be “born or naturalized” like a human being. BUT they are “born or naturalized” by other methods to become STATUTORY “citizens” of a particular jurisdiction. For instance:

1. The act of FORMING a corporation gives it “birth”, in a legal sense.
2. The place or jurisdiction that the corporation is legally formed becomes the effective civil domicile of that corporation.

“A corporation is a citizen, resident, or inhabitant of the state or country by or under the laws of which it was created, and of that state or country only.”
[19 Corpus Juris Secundum, Corporations, §886]

3. A corporation can only be domiciled in ONE place at a time. Hence, it can only be a “citizen” of one jurisdiction at a time. The place where the corporate headquarters is located usually is treated as the effective domicile of the corporation.
4. If a corporation is formed in a specific state of the Union, then it is a statutory but not constitutional citizen in THAT state only and a statutory alien in every OTHER state AND also alien in respect to federal jurisdiction.

"A foreign corporation is one that derives its existence solely from the laws of another state, government, or country, and the term is used indiscriminately, sometimes in statutes, to designate either a corporation created by or under the laws of another state or a corporation created by or under the laws of a foreign country."

"A federal corporation operating within a state is considered a domestic corporation rather than a foreign corporation. The United States government is a foreign corporation with respect to a state."
[19 Corpus Juris Secundum (C.J.S.), Corporations, §883 (2003)]

Whenever you hear a judge or government prosecutor use the word "citizen" in federal court, they really are referring to civil domicile on federal territory not within any state of the Union. They are setting a trap to exploit your legal ignorance using "words of art". If they are referring to your "nationality" rather than whether you are a "citizen", they are referring to CONSTITUTIONAL citizenship and whether you are a "national" under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21). If they ask you whether you are a "citizen" or a "citizen of the United States", you should always respond by asking:

1. Which of the three "United States" defined by the U.S. Supreme Court in Hooven & Allison Co. v. Evatt, 324 U.S. 652 \(1945\) do you mean?
2. Do you mean my nationality or my domicile in that place?

..and then you should say you are:

1. Domiciled outside the statutory "United States" and therefore a statutory alien in relation to federal jurisdiction.
2. A CONSTITUTIONAL citizen
3. NOT a STATUTORY citizen under any federal statute or regulation, including but not limited to 8 U.S.C. §1401, 26 U.S.C. §3121(e), and 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1(c), all of which are STATUTORY and not CONSTITUTIONAL citizens:

TITLE 26 > Subtitle C > CHAPTER 21 > Subchapter C > § 3121
§ 3121. Definitions

(e) State, United States, and citizen

For purposes of this chapter—

(1) State

The term "State" includes the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, Guam, and American Samoa.

(2) United States [FEDERAL TERRITORY NOT PART OF ANY STATE]

The term "United States" when used in a geographical sense includes the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, Guam, and American Samoa.

We should also point out that 18 U.S.C. §911 makes it a CRIME for a constitutional citizen to claim to be the statutory citizen described in 8 U.S.C. §1401.

4.13.14.5 How you help the government terrorists kidnap your legal identity and transport it to "The District of Criminals"

People who begin as a "constitutional" citizen commonly commit this crime and unwittingly in most cases transform themselves into a privileged "statutory" citizen by performing any one of the following unlawful acts. These unlawful acts at least make them appear to be a legal "person" under federal law with an effective domicile in the District of Columbia/federal zone and a "SUBJECT citizen":

1. Opening up bank or financial accounts WITHOUT using the proper form, which is an AMENDED IRS Form W-8BEN. If you don't use this form or a derivative and invoke the protection of the law for your status as a statutory "non-resident non-person" not engaged in a "trade or business", the financial institution will falsely and prejudicially "presume" that you are both a statutory "U.S. citizen" pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1401 and a "U.S. person" pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §7701\(a\)\(30\). To prevent this problem, see the following article:

About IRS Form W-8BEN, Form #04.202
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

2. Filing the WRONG tax form, the IRS Form 1040, rather than the correct 1040NR form. This constitutes an election to become a “resident alien” engaged in a “trade or business”, pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §7701\(b\)\(4\)\(B\) and 26 U.S.C. §6013\(g\) and (h). This can be prevented using the following form, for instance:

Federal Nonresident Nonstatutory Claim for Return of Funds Unlawfully Paid to the Government-Long, Form #15.001
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

3. Applying for or accepting a government benefit, privilege, or license, such as Social Security, Medicare, or TANF. This would require them to fill out an SSA Form SS-5. 20 C.F.R. §422.104 requires that only those with a domicile on federal territory and who are therefore statutory “U.S. citizens” or “U.S. permanent residents”, may apply for Social Security. This causes a waiver of sovereign immunity under 28 U.S.C. §1605\(a\)\(2\) and makes you into a “resident alien” who is a “public officer” within the government granting the privilege or benefit. See:

Government Instituted Slavery Using Franchises, Form #05.030
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

4. Filling out a federal or state government form incorrectly by describing yourself as a statutory “U.S. citizen” pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1401 rather than a “national but not a citizen” pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1101\(a\)\(21\) and/or 8 U.S.C. §1452. This can be prevented by attaching the following form:

Affidavit of Citizenship, Domicile, and Tax Status, Form #02.001
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

5. Improperly declaring your citizenship status to a federal court or not declaring it at all. If you describe yourself as a “citizen” or a “U.S. citizen” without further clarification, or if you don’t describe your citizenship at all in court pleadings, then federal courts will self-servingly “presume” that you are a statutory rather than constitutional citizen pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1401 who has a domicile on federal territory. This is also confirmed by the following authorities:

“The term ‘citizen’, as used in the Judiciary Act with reference to the jurisdiction of the federal courts, is substantially synonymous with the term ‘domicile’. Delaware, L. & W.R. Co. v. Petrowsky, 2 Cir., 250 F. 554, 557.”

[Earley v. Hershey Transit Co., 55 F.Supp. 981, D.C.PA. (1944)]

“Domicile and citizen are synonymous in federal courts, Earley v. Hershey Transit Co., D.C. Pa., 55 F.Supp. 981, 982; inhabitant, resident and citizen are synonymous, Standard Stoker Co. v. Lower, D.C.Md., 46 F.2d. 678, 683.”

[Black’s Law Dictionary, Fourth Edition, p. 311]

To prevent this problem, use the following attachment to all the filings in the court:

Federal Pleading/Motion/Petition Attachment, Litigation Tool #01.002
<http://sedm.org/Litigation/LitIndex.htm>

6. Accepting public office within the federal government. This causes you to act in a representative capacity representing the federal corporation called the “United States” as defined in 28 U.S.C. §3002\(15\)\(A\). Pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 17\(b\), you assume the same domicile and citizenship of the party you represent. All corporations are “citizens” with a domicile where they were created, which is the District of Columbia in the case of the federal United States.

“A corporation is a citizen, resident, or inhabitant of the state or country by or under the laws of which it was created, and of that state or country only.”

[19 Corpus Juris Secundum, Corporations, §886]

7. Failing to rebut false information returns filed against you reflecting nonzero earnings, such as any of the following forms:

7.1. Correcting Erroneous IRS Form 1042’s, Form #04.003. See:

7.2. Correcting Erroneous IRS Form 1098’s, Form #04.004. See:

<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

7.3. Correcting Erroneous IRS Form 1099’s, Form #04.005. See:

<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

7.4. Correcting Erroneous IRS Form W-2’s, Form #04.006. See:

<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

All of the above information return forms connect you with the “trade or business” franchise pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §6041\(a\). A “trade or business” is defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701\(a\)\(26\) as “the functions of a public office”. Engaging in a “trade or business” makes you into a “resident alien” as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701\(b\)\(1\)\(A\). See older versions of 26 C.F.R. §301.7701-5 for proof at the link below:

<http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/CitesByTopic/Resident-26cfr301.7701-5.pdf>

Later in section 4.13.16 we will describe in detail how to avoid and prevent being DECEIVED or COMPELLED into illegally assuming the STATUTORY CIVIL STATUS of “citizen” or “resident”.

4.13.14.6 Questions you can ask that will expose their deceit and compulsion

“Be diligent to [investigate and expose the truth for yourself and thereby] present yourself [and the public servants who are your fiduciaries and stewards under the Constitution] approved to God, a worker who does not need to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word [and the deeds] of truth. But shun profane babblings [government propaganda, tyranny, and usurpation] for they will increase to more ungodliness. And their message [and their harmful affects] will spread like cancer [to destroy our society and great Republic].”
[2 Tim. 2:15-17, Bible, NKJV]

Our favorite tactic to silence legally ignorant and therefore presumptuous people in PRESUMING that we are incorrect is to simply ask them questions just like Jesus did that will expose their deceit and folly. Below are a few questions you can ask judges and attorneys that they can’t answer in their entirety without contradicting either themselves or the law itself. By forcing them to engage in these contradictions and “cognitive dissonance” you prove indirectly that they are lying, because anyone who contradicts their own testimony is a LIAR. There are many more questions like these at the end of the pamphlet, but these are high level enough to use on the average American to really get them thinking about the subject:

1. If the Declaration of Independence says that ALL just powers of government derive ONLY from our consent and we don’t consent to ANYTHING, then aren’t the criminal laws the ONLY thing that can be enforced against us, since they don’t require our consent to enforce?
2. Certainly, if we DO NOT want “protection” then there ought to be a way to abandon it and the obligation to pay for it, at least temporarily, right?
3. If the word “permanent” in the phrase “permanent allegiance” is in fact conditioned on our consent and is therefore technically NOT “permanent”, as revealed in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(31) , can’t we revoke it either temporarily or conditionally as long as we specify the conditions in advance or the specific laws we have it for and those we don’t?

8 U.S.C. §1101 Definitions [for the purposes of citizenship]

(a) As used in this chapter—

(31) The term "permanent" means a relationship of continuing or lasting nature, as distinguished from temporary, but a relationship may be permanent even though it is one that may be dissolved eventually at the instance either of the United States<sup>[**]</sup> or of the individual, in accordance with law.

4. If the “citizen of the United States** at birth” under 8 U.S.C. §1401 involves TWO components, being “national” and “citizen”, can’t we just abandon the “citizen” part if we want to and wouldn’t we do that by simply changing our domicile to be outside of federal territory, since civil status is tied to domicile?

citizen. One who, under the Constitution and laws of the United States<sup>[***]</sup>, or of a particular state, is a member of the political community, owing allegiance and being entitled to the enjoyment of full civil [STATUTORY] rights. All persons born or naturalized in the United States<sup>[***]</sup>, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the United States<sup>[***]</sup> and of the state wherein they reside. U.S. Const., 14th Amend. See Citizenship.

“Citizens” are members of a political community who, in their associated capacity, have established or submitted themselves to the dominion of a government [by giving up their rights] for the promotion of their general welfare and the protection of their individual as well as collective rights. Herriott v. City of Seattle, 81 Wash.2d. 48, 500 P.2d. 101, 109.
[Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 244]

5. If you can’t abandon the civil protection of Caesar and the obligation to pay for it, isn’t there an unconstitutional taking without compensation of all the PUBLIC rights attached to the statutory status of “citizen” if we do not consent to the status?
6. If the separation of powers does not permit federal civil jurisdiction within states, how could the statutory status of “citizen” carry any federal obligations whatsoever while in a constitutional state?

- 1 7. If domicile is what imparts the “force of law” to civil statutes per Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 17 and we don’t
 2 have a domicile on federal territory, then how could we in turn have any CIVIL status under the laws of Congress?
 3 8. How can the government claim we have an obligation to pay for protection we don’t want if it is a maxim of the 4 common law that we may REFUSE to accept a “benefit”?

5 “Invito beneficium non datur.

6 No one is obliged to accept a benefit against his consent. Dig. 50, 17, 69. But if he does not dissent he will be
 7 considered as assenting. Vide Assent.”

9 A man may relinquish, for himself and his heirs, a right which was introduced for his own benefit. See 1 Bouv.
 10 Inst. n. 83.

11 Quilibet potest renunciare juri pro se inducto.

12 Any one may renounce a law introduced for his own benefit. To this rule there are some exceptions. See 1 Bouv.
 13 Inst. n. 83.

14 [Bouvier’s Maxims of Law, 1856;

15 SOURCE: <http://famguardian.org/Publications/BouvierMaximsOfLaw/BouviersMaxims.htm>]

- 16 9. What if I define what they call “protection” NOT as a “benefit” but an “injury”? Who is the customer here? The 17 CUSTOMER should be the only one who defines what a “benefit” is and only has to pay for it if HE defines it as a 18 “benefit”.
 19 10. Is the “citizen” in Title 8 of the U.S. Code the same “citizen” that obligations attach to under Titles 26 and 31? Could
 20 Congress have instead created an office and a franchise with the same name of “citizen of the United States” under 21 Title 26, imposed duties upon it, and fooled everyone into thinking it is the same “citizen” as the one in Title 8?
 22 11. If the Bible says that Christians can’t consent to anything Caesar does or have contracts with him (Exodus 23:32-33,
 23 Judges 2:1-4), then how could I lawfully have any discretionary status under Caesar’s laws such as STATUTORY 24 “citizen”? The Bible says I can’t have a king above me.

25 “Owe no one anything [including ALLEGIANCE], except to love one another; for he who loves his neighbor 26 has fulfilled the law.”

27 [Romans 13:8, Bible, NKJV]

- 28 12. If the Bible says that GOD bought us for a price and therefore OWNS us, then by what authority does Caesar claim
 29 ownership or the right to extract “rent” called “income tax” upon what belongs to God? Isn’t Caesar therefore simply 30 renting out STOLEN property and laundering money if he charges “taxes” on the use of that which belongs to God?

31 “For you were bought [by Christ] at a price [His blood]; therefore glorify God in your body and in your spirit,
 32 which are God’s [property].”

33 [1 Cor. 6:20, Bible, NKJV]

34 Anyone who can’t answer ALL the above questions with answers that don’t contradict themselves or the REST of the law
 35 is lying to you about citizenship, and probably because they covet your property and benefit commercially from the lie.
 36 Our research in answering the above very interesting questions reveals that there is a way to terminate our status as a
 37 STATUTORY “citizen” and “customer” without terminating our nationality, but that it is carefully hidden. The results of 38 our search will be of great interest to many. Enjoy.

39 4.13.14.7 The Hague Convention HIDES the ONE portion that differentiates NATIONALITY from DOMICILE

40 After World War II, countries got together in the Hague Convention and reached international agreements on the proper
 41 treatment of people everywhere. The United States was a party to that international agreement. Within that agreement is 42 the following document:

Hague Convention Relating to the Settlement of the Conflicts Between the Law of Nationality and the Law of Domicile
[Anno Domini 1955], SEDM Exhibit #01.008

43 Not surprisingly, the above article within the convention was written originally in FRENCH but is NOT available in or 44 translated into ENGLISH. Why? Because English speaking governments obviously don’t want their inhabitants knowing
 45 the distinctions between NATIONALITY and DOMICILE and how they interact with each other. The SEDM sister site
 46 has found a French speaking person to translate the article, got it translated, and posted it at the following location:

Hague Convention Relating to the Settlement of the Conflicts Between the Law of Nationality and the Law of Domicile [Anno Domini 1955], SEDM Exhibit #01.008

4.13.14.8 Social Security Administration HIDES your citizenship status in their NUMIDENT records

Your citizenship status is represented in the Social Security NUMIDENT record maintained by the Social Security Administration. The field called “CSP” within NUMIDENT contains a one character code that represents your citizenship status. Valid CSP values are as follows:

Table 4-39: SSA NUMIDENT CSP Code Values

#	CSP Code Value	Statutory meaning	Constitutional meaning
1	A	U.S. citizen (per 8 U.S.C. §1401)	None
2	B	Legal Alien Allowed to Work	Alien (foreign national)
3	C	Legal Alien Not Allowed to Work	Alien (foreign national)
4	D	Other	“citizen of the United States” or “Citizen”

This information is DELIBERATELY concealed and obfuscated from public view by the following Social Security policies:

- The meaning of the CSP codes is NOT listed in the Social Security Program Operations Manual System (POMS) online so you can’t find out.
<https://s044a90.ssa.gov/apps10/poms.nsf/partlist!OpenView>
- Employees at the SSA offices are NOT allowed to know and typically DO NOT know what the code means.
- If you submit a Freedom Of Information Act (FOIA) request to SSA asking them what the CSP code means, they will respond that the values of the codes are CLASSIFIED and therefore UNKNOWABLE by the public. You ARE NOT allowed to know WHAT citizenship status they associate with you. See the following negative response:

Social Security Admin. FOIA for CSP Code Values, Exhibit #01.011
<http://sedm.org/Exhibits/ExhibitIndex.htm>

- The ONLY option they give you in block 5 entitled “CITIZENSHIP” are the following. They REFUSE to distinguish WHICH “United States” is implied in the term “U.S. citizen”, and if they told the truth, the ONLY citizen they could lawfully mean is a STATUTORY “U.S. citizen” per 8 U.S.C. §1401 and NOT a CONSTITUTIONAL citizen, who is a STATUTORY non-resident and non-citizen national in relation to the national government with a foreign domicile:
  - “U.S. citizen”
  - “Legal Alien Allowed to Work”
  - “Legal Alien NOT allowed to Work” (See Instructions on Page 1)
  - “Other” (See instructions on page 1)
 See:

SSA Form SS-5

Those who are domiciled outside the statutory “United States***” or in a constitutional state of the Union and who want to correct the citizenship records of the SSA must submit a new SSA Form SS-5 to the Social Security Administration (SSA) and check “Other” in Block 5 pursuant to 20 C.F.R. §422.110(a). This changes the CSP code in their record from “A” to “B”. If you go into the Social Security Office and try to do this, the local offices often will try to give you a run-around with the following abusive and CRIMINAL tactics:

- When you ask them about the meaning of Block 5, they will refuse to indicate whether the citizenship indicated is a CIVIL/STATUTORY status or a POLITICAL/CONSTITUTIONAL status. It can’t be both. It must indicate NATIONALITY or DOMICILE, but not BOTH.
- They will first try to call the national office to ask about your status in Block 5.
- They will ABSOLUTELY REFUSE to involve you in the call or to hear what is said, because they want to protect the perpetrators of crime on the other end. Remember, terrorists always operate anonymously and they are terrorists. You should bring your MP3 voice record, insist on being present, and put the phone on speaker phone, and do EXACTLY the same thing they do when you call them directly by saying the following:

1                   "This call is being monitored for quality assurance purposes, just like you do to me without my consent ALL
 2                   THE TIME."

- 3     4. After they get off the phone, they will refuse to tell you the full legal name of the person on the other end of the call to 4     protect those who are perpetuating the fraud.
- 5     5. They will tell you that they want to send your SSA Form SS-5 to the national office in Baltimore, Maryland, but refuse
 6     to identify EXACTLY WHO they are sending it to, because they don't want this person sued personally as they should 7     be.
- 8     6. The national office will sit on the form forever and refuse to make the change requested, and yet never justify with the 9     law by what authority they:
 10    6.1. Perpetuate the criminal computer fraud that results from NOT changing it.
 11    6.2. Perpetuate the criminal violation of 18 U.S.C. §911 by NOT changing it.
- 12    7. They will allow you to change ANYTHING ELSE on the form without their permission, but if you want to change
 13    your CITIZENSHIP, they essentially interfere with it illegally and criminally.

14    The reason they play all the above obfuscation GAMES and hide or classify information to conceal the GAMES is because 15    they want to protect what they certainly know are the following CRIMES on their part and that of their employees:

- 16    1. They can't offer federal benefits to CONSTITUTIONAL but not STATUTORY citizens with a domicile outside of 17    federal territory. If they do, they would be criminally violating 18 U.S.C. §911.
- 18    2. They can't pay public monies to PRIVATE parties, and therefore you CANNOT apply with the SS-5 for a "benefit"
 19    unless you are a public officer ALREADY employed with the government. If they let PRIVATE people apply they are 20    conspiring to commit the crime of impersonating a public officer in violation of 18 U.S.C. §912.
- 21    3. They aren't allowed to offer or enforce any government franchise within the borders of a Constitutional but not
 22    STATUTORY state of the Union, as held by the U.S. Supreme Court, so they have to make you LOOK like a
 23    STATUTORY citizen, even though you aren't, in order to expand their Ponzi Scheme outside their GENERAL
 24    jurisdiction and into legislatively foreign states.

25                   "Congress cannot authorize [LICENSE, using a de facto license number called a "Social Security Number"] a 26                   trade or business within a State in order to tax it."
 27                   [License Tax Cases, 72 U.S. 462, 18 L.Ed. 497, 5 Wall. 462, 2 A.F.T.R. 2224 (1866)]

28    The only status a state domiciled CONSTITUTIONAL but not STATUTORY citizen can put on the form is "Other" or 29    "Legal [STATUTORY] Alien Allowed to Work". The instructions say following about "Other" option:

30                   "If you check "Other", you need to provide proof that you are entitled to a federally-funded benefit for which 31                   Social Security number is required as a condition for you to receive payment."

32    In answer to the above query in connection with the "Other" option, we suggest:

33                   "DO NOT seek any federally funded benefit. I want a NONtaxpayer number that entitles me to ABSOLUTELY
 34                   NOTHING as a NONRESIDENT not subject to federal law and NOT qualified to receive benefits of any kind. I 35                   am only applying because:

36                   1. I am being illegally compelled to use a number I know I am not qualified to ask for.

37                   2. The number was required as a precondition condition of PRIVATE employment or opening an PRIVATE
 38                   financial account by a NONRESIDENT ALIEN who is NOT a "U.S. citizen" or "U.S. person" and who is NOT
 39                   required to have or use such a number by 31 C.F.R. §306.10, 31 C.F.R. §103.34(a)(3)(x), and IRS Pub. 515.

40                   I ask that you criminally prosecute them for doing so AND provide a statement on SSA letterhead indicating 41                   that I am NOT eligible that I can show them. Furthermore, if you do have any numbers on file connected with 42                   my name, I ask that they be rescinded permanently from your records."

43    Then you may want to attach the following forms to the application to ENSURE that they reject your application and TELL
 44    you that you are NOT eligible so you can show it to the person who is COMPELLING you to use a number:

- 45    1. Affidavit of Citizenship, Domicile, and Tax Status, Form #02.001
 46    <http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

4.13.14.9 “Citizenship” in federal court implies Domicile on federal territory not within any state

The following legal authorities conclusively establish that the terms “citizen”, “citizenship”, and “domicile” are synonymous in federal courts. They validate all of the above conclusive presumptions that government employees, officers, and judges habitually make when you appear before them or submit a government form to them, unless you specify or explain otherwise. Government employees, officers, and judges just HATE to discuss or document these presumptions, which is why authorities to prove their existence are so difficult to locate.

“Domicile and citizen are synonymous in federal courts. Earley v. Hershey Transit Co., D.C. Pa., 55 F.Supp. 981, 982; inhabitant, resident and citizen are synonymous, Standard Stoker Co. v. Lower, D.C.Md., 46 F.2d. 678, 683.”
[Black’s Law Dictionary, Fourth Edition, p. 311]

The terms “citizen” and “citizenship” are distinguishable from “resident” or “inhabitant.” Jeffcott v. Donovan, C.C.A.Ariz., 135 F.2d. 213, 214; and from “domicile,” Wheeler v. Burgess, 263 Ky. 693, 93 S.W.2d. 351, 354; First Carolinas Joint Stock Land Bank of Columbia v. New York Title & Mortgage Co., D.C.S.C., 59 F.2d. 350, 351. The words “citizen” and “citizenship,” however, usually include the idea of domicile, Delaware, L. & W.R.Co. v. Petrowsky, C.C.A.N.Y., 250 F. 554, 557; citizen inhabitant and resident often synonymous, Jonesboro Trust Co. v. Nutt, 118 Ark. 368, 176 S.W. 322, 324; Edgewater Realty Co. v. Tennessee Coal, Iron & Railroad Co., D.C.Md., 49 F.Supp. 807, 809; and citizenship and domicile are often synonymous. Messick v. Southern Pa. Bus Co., D.C.Pa., 59 F.Supp. 799, 800.
[Black’s Law Dictionary, Fourth Edition, p. 310]

“Citizenship and domicile are substantially synonymous. Residency and inhabitation are too often confused with the terms and have not the same significance. Citizenship implies more than residence. It carries with it the idea of identification with the state and a participation in its functions. As a citizen, one sustains social, political, and moral obligation to the state and possesses social and political rights under the Constitution and laws thereof. Harding v. Standard Oil Co. et al. (C.C.) 182 F. 421; Baldwin v. Franks, 120 U.S. 678, 7 S.Ct. 763, 32 L.Ed. 766; Scott v. Sandford, 19 How. 393, 476, 15 L.Ed. 691.”
[Baker v. Keck, 13 F.Supp. 486 (1936)]

[Earley v. Hershey Transit Co., 55 F.Supp. 981, D.C.PA. (1944)]

No person, may be compelled to choose a domicile or residence ANYWHERE. By implication, no one but you can commit yourself to being a “citizen” or to accepting the responsibilities or liabilities that go with it.

“The rights of the individual are not derived from governmental agencies, either municipal, state or federal, or even from the Constitution. They exist inherently in every man, by endowment of the Creator, and are merely reaffirmed in the Constitution, and restricted only to the extent that they have been voluntarily surrendered by the citizenship to the agencies of government. The people’s rights are not derived from the government, but the government’s authority comes from the people.*946 The Constitution but states again these rights already existing, and when legislative encroachment by the nation, state, or municipality invade these original and permanent rights, it is the duty of the courts to so declare, and to afford the necessary relief. The fewer restrictions that surround the individual liberties of the citizen, except those for the preservation of the public health, safety, and morals, the more contented the people and the more successful the democracy.”*
[City of Dallas v Mitchell, 245 S.W. 944 (1922)]

“Citizenship” and “residence”, as has often been declared by the courts, are not convertible terms. ... “The better opinion seems to be that a citizen of the United States is, under the amendment [14th], prima facie a citizen of the state wherein he resides, cannot arbitrarily be excluded therefrom by such state, but that he does not become a citizen of the state against his will, and contrary to his purpose and intention to retain an already acquired citizenship elsewhere. The amendment [14th] is a restraint on the power of the state, but not on the right of the person to choose and maintain his citizenship or domicile”.
[Sharon v. Hill, 26 F. 337 (1885)]

Since “citizen”, “citizenship”, and “domicile” are all synonymous, then you can only be a “citizen” in ONE place at a time. This is because you can only have a “domicile” in one place at a time.

“domicile. A person’s legal home. That place where a man has his true, fixed, and permanent home and principal establishment, and to which whenever he is absent he has the intention of returning. Smith v. Smith, 206 Pa.Super. 310, 213 A.2d. 94. Generally, physical presence within a state and the intention to make it one’s*

1 home are the requisites of establishing a "domicile" therein. The permanent residence of a person or the place
 2 to which he intends to return even though he may actually reside elsewhere. A person may have more than one
 3 residence but only one domicile. The legal domicile of a person is important since it, rather than the actual
 4 residence, often controls the jurisdiction of the taxing authorities and determines where a person may
 5 exercise the privilege of voting and other legal rights and privileges."
 6 [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 485]

7 The implications of this revelation are significant. It means that in relation to the state and federal governments and their 8 mutually exclusive territorial jurisdictions, you can only be a statutory "citizen" of one of the two jurisdictions at a time.
 9 Whichever one you choose to be a "citizen" of, you become a "national but not a citizen" in relation to the other. You can
 10 therefore be subject to the civil laws of only one of the two jurisdictions at a time. Whichever one of the two jurisdictions
 11 you choose your domicile within becomes your main source of protection.

12 Choice of domicile is an act of political affiliation protected by the First Amendment prohibition against compelled 13 association:

14 Just as there is freedom to speak, to associate, and to believe, so also there is freedom not to speak, associate,
 15 or believe "The right to speak and the right to refrain from speaking on a government tax return, and in 16 violation of the [Fifth Amendment when coerced, for instance] are complementary components of the broader
 17 *concept of 'individual freedom of mind.'" Wooley v. Maynard, [430 U.S. 703] (1977). Freedom of conscience
 18 *dictates that no individual may be forced to espouse ideological causes with which he disagrees:

19 "[A]t the heart of the First Amendment is the notion that the individual should be free to believe as he will, and
 20 that in a free society one's beliefs should be shaped by his mind and by his conscience rather than coerced by 21 the State [through illegal enforcement of the revenue laws]." Abood v. Detroit Board of Education [431 U.S.
 22 209] (1977)

23 Freedom from compelled association is a vital component of freedom of expression. Indeed, freedom from 24 compelled association illustrates the significance of the liberty or personal autonomy model of the First
 25 Amendment. As a general constitutional principle, it is for the individual and not for the state to choose
 26 one's associations and to define the persona which he holds out to the world.

28 4.13.14.10 Obfuscated federal definitions to confuse Statutory Context with Constitutional Context

29 Beyond the above authorities, we then tried to locate credible legal authorities that explain the distinctions between the 30 constitutional context and the statutory context for the term "United States". The basic deception results from the 31 following:

- 32 1. The differences in meaning of the term "United States" between the U.S. Constitution and federal statutes. The 33 term "United States***" in the Constitution means the collective 50 states of the Union (the United States of America),
 34 while in federal statutes, the term "United States**" means the federal zone.
- 35 2. Differences between citizenship definitions found in Title 8, the Aliens and Nationality Code, and those found in 36 Title 26, the Internal Revenue Code. The term "nonresident alien" as used in Title 26, for instance, does not appear
 37 anywhere in Title 8 but is the equivalent of the term "national" found in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) but not "national and 38 citizen of the United States***" in 8 U.S.C. §1401.
- 39 3. Differences between statutory citizenship definitions and the language of the courts. The language of the courts is 40 independent from the statutory definition so that it is difficult to correlate the term the courts are using and the related 41 statutory definition. We will include in this section separate definitions for the statutes and the courts to make these 42 distinctions clear in your mind.

43 We will start off by showing that no authoritative definition of the term "citizen of the United States***" existed before the 44 Fourteenth Amendment was ratified in 1868. This was revealed in the Slaughter-House Cases, 83 U.S. (16 Wall.) 36, 21
 45 L.Ed. 394 \(1873\):

46 "The 1st clause of the 14th article was primarily intended to confer citizenship of the United States[***] and 47 citizenship of the states, and it recognizes the distinction between citizenship of a state and citizenship of the 48 United States[***] by those definitions.

49 "The 1st section of the 14th article, to which our attention is more specifically invited, opens with a definition of 50 citizenship—not only citizenship of the United States[***], but citizenship of the states. No such definition was 51 previously found in the Constitution, nor had any attempt been made to define it by act of Congress. It had

1 been the occasion of much discussion in the courts, by the executive departments and in the public journals.
 2 *It had been said by eminent judges that no man was a citizen of the United States[***] except as he was a*
 3 citizen of one of the state comprising the Union. Those, therefore, who had been born and resided always in 4 *the District of Columbia or in the territories, though within the United States[*], were not citizens."*

5 [...]

6 "To remove this difficulty primarily, and to establish a clear and comprehensive definition of citizenship
 7 *which should declare what should constitute citizenship of the United States[***] and also citizenship of a*
 8 state, the 1st clause of the 1st section [of the Fourteenth Amendment] was framed:

9 *'All persons born or naturalized in the United States[***] and subject to the jurisdiction thereof are citizens of*
 10 *the United States[***] and of the state wherein they reside.'*

11 "The first observation we have to make on this clause is that it puts at rest both the questions which we stated to 12 have been the subject of differences of opinion. It declares that persons may be citizens of the United
 13 *States[***] without regard to their citizenship of a particular state, and it overturns the Dred Scott decision by* 14 *making all persons born within the United States[***] and subject to its jurisdiction citizens of the United*
 15 *States[***]. That its main purpose was to establish the citizenship of the negro can admit of no doubt. The* 16 phrase 'subject to its jurisdiction' was intended to exclude from its operation children of ministers, consuls and 17 *citizens or subjects of foreign states born within the United States[***]."*

18 "The next observation is more important in view of the arguments of counsel in the present case. It is that the 19 *distinction between citizenship of the United States[***] and citizenship of a state is clearly recognized and* 20 *established. Not only may a man be a citizen of the United States[***] without being a citizen of a state, but* 21 an important element is necessary to convert the former into the latter. He must reside within the state to
 22 make him a citizen of it but it is only necessary that he should be born or naturalized in the United 23 *States[***] to be a citizen of the Union.*

24 *It is quite clear, then, that there is a citizenship of the United States[***], and a citizenship of a state, which are*
 25 distinct from each other and which depend upon different characteristics or circumstances of the individual."
 26 [Slaughter-House Cases, 83 U.S. (16 Wall.) 36, 21 L.Ed. 394 (1873)]

27 A careful reading of Boyd v. Nebraska, 143 U.S. 135 (1892) helps clarify the true meaning of the term "citizen of the 28 United States[***]" in the context of the U.S. Constitution and the rulings of the U.S. Supreme Court. It shows that a
 29 "citizen of the United States[***]" is indeed a "national" in the context of federal statutes only:

30 "Mr. Justice Story, in his Commentaries on the Constitution, says: 'Every citizen of a state is ipso facto a
 31 *citizen of the [143 U.S. 135, 159] United States[***].' Section 1693. And this is the view expressed by Mr.*
 32 *Rawle in his work on the Constitution. Chapter 9, pp. 85, 86. Mr. Justice CURTIS, in Dred Scott v. Sandford, 19*
 33 *How. 393, 576, expressed the opinion that under the constitution of the United States[***] 'every free person,*
 34 born on the soil of a state, who is a citizen of that state by force of its constitution or laws, is also a citizen of
 35 *the United States[***].' And Mr. Justice SWAYNE, in The Slaughter-House Cases, 16 Wall. 36, 126, declared*
 36 *that 'a citizen of a state is ipso facto a citizen of the United States[***].' But in Dred Scott v. Sandford, 19*
 37 How. 393, 404, Mr. Chief Justice TENNEY, delivering the opinion of the court, said: 'The words 'people of the 38 *United States[***]' and 'citizens,' are synonymous terms, and mean the same thing. They both describe the* 39 political body who, according to our republican institutions, form the sovereignty, and who hold the power and 40 conduct the government through their representatives. They are what we familiarly call the 'sovereign people,'
 41 and every citizen is one of this people, and a constituent member of this sovereignty. ... In discussing this 42 question, we must not confound the rights of citizenship which a state may confer within its own limits and
 43 the rights of citizenship as a member of the Union. It does not by any means follow, because he has all the 44 *rights and privileges of a citizen of a state, that he must be a citizen of the United States[***]. He may have all*
 45 of the rights and privileges of the citizen of a state, and yet not be entitled to the rights and privileges of a
 46 *citizen in any other state; for, previous to the adoption of the constitution of the United States[***], every state*
 47 had the undoubted right to confer on whomsoever it pleased the character of citizen, and to endow him with all
 48 its rights. But this character, of course, was confined to the boundaries of the state, and gave him no rights or
 49 privileges in other states beyond those secured to him by the laws of nations and the comity of states. Nor have
 50 the several states surrendered the power of conferring these rights and privileges by adopting the constitution
 51 *of the United States[***]. Each state may still confer them upon an alien, or any one it thinks proper, or upon*
 52 any class or description of persons; yet he would not be a citizen in the sense in [143 U.S. 135, 160] which 53 *that word is used in the constitution of the United States[***], nor entitled to sue as such in one of its courts,*
 54 nor to the privileges and immunities of a citizen in the other states. The rights which he would acquire would be
 55 restricted to the state which gave them. The constitution has conferred on congress the right to establish a
 56 uniform rule of naturalization, and this right is evidently exclusive, and has always been held by this court to be
 57 so. Consequently no state, since the adoption of the constitution, can, by naturalizing an alien, invest him with 58 the rights and privileges secured to a citizen of a state under the federal government, although, so far as the 59 state alone was concerned, he would undoubtedly be entitled to the rights of a citizen, and clothed with all the 60 rights and immunities which the constitution and laws of the state attached to that character.' "
 61 [Boyd v. Nebraska, 143 U.S. 135 (1892)]

1 Notice above that the term “citizen of the United States***” and “rights of citizenship as a member of the Union” are
2 described synonymously. Therefore, a “citizen of the United States***” under the Fourteenth Amendment, section 1 and a
3 “national” under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) are synonymous. As you will see in the following cite, people who were born in a
4 state of the Union always were “citizens of the United States***” by the definition of the U.S. Supreme Court, which made
5 them “nationals of the United States*** of America” under federal statutes. What the Fourteenth Amendment did was 6 extend the privileges and immunities of “nationals” (defined under federal statutes) to people of races other than white.
7 The cite below helps confirm this:

9 *opens with a definition of citizenship—not only citizenship of the United States[***], but citizenship of the*
10 states. No such definition was previously found in the Constitution, nor had any attempt been made to define
11 it by act of Congress. It had been the occasion of much discussion in the courts, by the executive departments
12 and in the public journals. It had been said by eminent judges that no man was a citizen of the United
13 *States[***] except as he was a citizen of one of the states composing the Union. Those therefore, who had*
14 been born and resided always in the District of Columbia or in the territories, though within the United
15 *States[*], were not citizens. Whether this proposition was sound or not had never been judicially decided.”*
16 [Slaughter-House Cases, 83 U.S. (16 Wall.) 36, 21 L.Ed. 394 (1873)]

17 We explained in section 4.1.1.3.6 of the Great IRS Hoax, Form #11.302 that the federal courts and especially the Supreme 18 Court have done their best to confuse citizenship terms and the citizenship issue so that most Americans would be unable to 19 distinguish between “national” and “U.S. citizen” status found in federal statutes. This deliberate confusion has then been
20 exploited by collusion of the Executive Branch, who have used their immigration and naturalization forms and publication
21 and their ignorant clerk employees to deceive the average American into thinking they are “U.S. citizens” in the context of 22 federal statutes. Based on our careful reading of various citizenship cases mainly from the U.S. Supreme Court, Title 8 of 23 the U.S. Code, Title 26 of the U.S. Code, as well as Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, below are some citizenship
24 terms commonly used by the court and their correct and unambiguous meaning in relation to the statutes found in Title 8,
25 which is the Aliens and Nationality Code:

Table 4-40: Citizenship terms

#	Term	Context	Meaning	Authorities	Notes
1	"nation"	Everywhere	In the context of the United States of America, a state of the union. The federal government and all of its possessions and territories are not collectively a "nation". The "country" called the "United States*" is a "nation", but our federal government and its territories and possessions are not collectively a "nation".	<ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>1. Chisholm v. Georgia, 2 Dall. (U.S.) 419, 1 L.Ed. 440 (1793)</li> <li>2. Black's Law Dictionary, revised Fourth Edition, 1968, p. 1176 under "National Government".</li> <li>3. Hooven and Allison Co. v. Evatt, 324 U.S. 652 (1945).</li> </ol>	The "United States of America" is a "federation" and not a "nation". Consequently, the government is called a "federal government" rather than a "national government". See section 4.6 of Great IRS Hoax , Form #11.302 for further explanation.
2	"national"	Everywhere	"national" is a person owing allegiance to a state	<ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>1. 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21).</li> </ol>
3	"non-citizen National"	Everywhere	"non-citizen national" is a person born in a federal possession.	<ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>2. 8 U.S.C. §1408.</li> <li>3. 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22)(B).</li> <li>4. 8 U.S.C. §1452.</li> <li>5. 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22).</li> <li>6. 3C Am.Jur.2d. §2732-2752: Noncitizen nationality (1999)</li> </ol>	We could find no mention of the term "U.S. national" by the Supreme Court. We were told that this term was first introduced into federal statutes in the 1930's.
4	"naturalization"	Everywhere	The process of conferring nationality and " national " status only , but not "U.S. citizen" status.	<ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>1. 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(23): "The term "naturalization" means the conferring of nationality [NOT "citizenship" or "U.S. citizenship", but "nationality", which means "national"] of a state [of the union] upon a person after birth, by any means whatsoever."</li> <li>2. Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, page 1063 under "naturalization".</li> </ol>	The U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is responsible for naturalization in the United States of America. Their "Application for naturalization", Form N-400, only uses the term "U.S. citizen" and never mentions "national". On this form, the term "U.S. citizen" must therefore mean "national" in the context of this form based on the definition of "naturalization", but you can't tell because the form doesn't refer to a definition of what "U.S. citizen" means.
5	"expatriation"	Everywhere	"The voluntary renunciation or abandonment of nationality [not "U.S. citizenship" or "citizen of the United States" status] and allegiance."	<ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>1. Perkins v. Elg, 307 U.S. 325, 59 S.Ct. 884, 83 L.Ed. 1320 (1939)</li> <li>2. 8 U.S.C. §1401.</li> <li>3. 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22).</li> </ol>	Renouncing one's statutory "citizen of the United States" status and reverting to a "national of the United States of America" is not "expatriation", because both "citizens of the United States" and "nationals but not citizens" are "nationals of the United States" under 8 U.S.C. §1401 and 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22).

#	Term	Context	Meaning	Authorities	Notes
6	"citizenship"	Everywhere	Persons with a legal domicile within the jurisdiction of a sovereign and who were born SOMEWHERE within the country, although not necessarily within that specific jurisdiction..	<ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>1. Perkins v. Elg, 307 U.S. 325, 59 S.Ct. 884, 83 L.Ed. 1320 (1939)</li> <li>2. 8 U.S.C.A. §1401, Notes. See note 1 below.</li> <li>3. Slaughter-House Cases, 83 U.S. (16 Wall.) 36, 21 L.Ed. 394 (1873)</li> <li>4. 3C Am.Jur.2d. §2732-2752: Noncitizen nationality (1999)</li> </ol>	Perkins v. Elg, 307 U.S. 325 (1939) says: "To cause a loss of citizenship in the absence of treaty or statute having that effect, there must be a voluntary action and such action cannot be attributed to an infant whose removal to another country is beyond his control and who during minority is incapable of a binding choice. By the Act of July 27, 1868, Congress declared that 'the right of expatriation is a natural and inherent right of all people'. Expatriation is the voluntary renunciation or abandonment of nationality and allegiance." This implies that "loss of citizenship" and "expatriation", which is "loss of nationality" are equivalent. Slaughter-House Cases, 83 U.S. 36 (1873) says: "The next observation is more important in view of the arguments of counsel in the present case. It is that the distinction between citizenship of the United States[] and citizenship of a state is clearly recognized and established [by the Fourteenth Amendment]. Not only may a man be a citizen of the United States[] without being a citizen of a state, but an important element is necessary to convert the former into the latter. He must reside within the state to make him a citizen of it but it is not necessary that he should be born or naturalized in the [country] United States[] to be a citizen of the Union. "It is quite clear, then, that there is a citizenship [nationality] of the United States[], and a citizenship [nationality]of a state, which are distinct from each other and which depend upon different characteristics or circumstances of the individual."

This is because of the definition of “United States” within Subtitle A of the Internal Revenue Code, which means the federal zone only.</li> </ol>
8	“citizen” used alone and without the term “U.S.” in front or “of the United States” after it	State statutes	Person with a legal domicile within the exclusive jurisdiction of a state of the Union who is NOT a “citizen” under federal statutory law.	Law of Nations , Vattel, Section 212.	Because states are “nations” under the law of nations and have police powers and exclusive legislative jurisdiction within their borders, then virtually all of their legislation is directed toward their own citizens exclusively. See section 4.9 of the Great IRS Hoax , Form #11.302 earlier for further details on “police powers”.
8	“citizen” used alone and without the term “U.S.” in front or “of the United States” after it	Federal statutes including Title 26, the Internal Revenue Code and Title 8, Aliens and Nationality	Not defined anywhere in Title 8. Persons with a legal domicile within the jurisdiction of a sovereign and who were born SOMEWHERE within the country, although not necessarily within that specific jurisdiction..	<ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>Defined in 26 C.F.R. §31.3121(e)-1. See Note 2.</li> </ol>	This term is never defined anywhere in Title 8 but it is defined in 26 C.F.R. §31.3121(e)-1. You will see it most often on government passport applications, voter registration, and applications for naturalization. These forms also don’t define the meaning of the term nor do they equate it to either “national” or “citizen of the United States”. The person filling out the form therefore must define it himself on the form to eliminate the ambiguity or be presumed incorrectly to be a “citizen of the United States” under section 1 of the 14 th Amendment.
9	“United States citizenship”	Everywhere	The status of being a “national”. Note that the term “U.S. citizen” looks similar but not identical and is not the same as this term, and this is especially true on federal forms.	See “citizenship”.	Same as “citizenship”.

#	Term	Context	Meaning	Authorities	Notes
10	"citizens of the United States"	Everywhere	A collection of people who are "nationals" and who in most cases are not a "citizen of the United States" or a "U.S. citizen" under "acts of Congress" or federal statutes unless at some point after becoming "nationals", they incorrectly declared their status to be a "citizen of the United States" under 8 U.S.C. §1401 or changed their domicile to federal territory.	See "citizenship".	Note that the definition of "citizen of the United States" and "citizens of the United States" are different.
11	"citizen of the United States"	Federal statutes	Persons with a legal domicile on federal territory that is no part of the exclusive jurisdiction of any state of the Union. Born SOMEWHERE within the country, although not necessarily within that specific jurisdiction.	<ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>8 U.S.C.A. §1401.</li> <li>3C Am.Jur.2d §2689 ("U.S. citizen").</li> <li>26 C.F.R. §31.3121(e)-1.</li> <li>United States v. Mellon, 262 U.S. 100, 43 S.Ct. 504 (1923)</li> </ol>	Term "United States" in federal statutes is defined as federal zone so a "citizen of the United States" is a citizen of the federal zone only. According to the U.S. Supreme Court in the Slaughter-House Cases , 83 U.S. (16 Wall.) 36, 21 L.Ed. 394 (1873), this term was not defined before the ratification of the Fourteenth Amendment in 1868. Section 1 of the 14 th Amendment established the circumstances under which a person was a "citizen of the United States". Note that the terms "citizens of the United States" and "citizen of the United States" are nowhere made equivalent in Title 8, and we define "citizens of the United States" above differently.
12	"citizen of the United States*"	State statutes U.S. Supreme Court Constitution	Person who maintains a legal domicile within the exclusive jurisdiction of a state of the Union. 13	"citizen of the Union"	Everywhere	A "national of the United States*" or a "national"	<ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>Slaughter-House Cases, 83 U.S. (16 Wall.) 36, 21 L.Ed. 394 (1873)</li> </ol>	" Slaughter-House Cases , 83 U.S. 36 (1873) says: "The next observation is more important in view of the arguments of counsel in the present case. It is that the distinction between citizenship of the United States[] and citizenship of a state is clearly recognized and established [by the Fourteenth Amendment]. Not only may a man be a citizen of the United States[] without being a citizen of a state, but an important element is necessary to convert the former into the latter. He must reside within the state to make him a citizen of it but it is not necessary that he should be born or naturalized in the [country] United States[] to be a citizen of the Union. "

#	Term	Context	Meaning	Authorities	Notes
14	"U.S. citizen"	Title 26: Internal Revenue Code (which is a federal statute or "act of Congress)	Not defined anywhere in Title 8 that we could find. Defined in 26 C.F.R. §31.3121(e)-1, and there it means a person with a domicile on federal territory that is not part of the exclusive jurisdiction of any state of the Union.	1. Defined in 26 C.F.R. §31.3121(e)-1. See Note 2.	This term is never defined anywhere in Title 8 but it is defined in 26 C.F.R. §31.3121(e)-1. You will see it most often on government passport applications, voter registration, and applications for naturalization. These forms also don't define the meaning of the term nor do they equate it to either "national" or "citizen of the United States". The person filling out the form therefore must define it himself on the form to eliminate the ambiguity or be presumed incorrectly to be a "citizen of the United States" under section 1 of the 14 th Amendment.

NOTES FROM THE ABOVE TABLE:

1. 8 U.S.C.A. §1401 under "Notes", says the following:

"The right of citizenship, as distinguished from alienage, is a national right or condition, and it pertains to the confederated sovereignty, the United States**, and not to the individual states. Lynch v. Clarke, N.Y.1844, 1 Sandf.Ch. 583"

"By 'citizen of the state' is meant a citizen of the United States**] whose domicile is in such state. Prowd v. Gore, 1922, 207 P. 490, 57 Cal.App. 458"

"One who becomes citizen of United States**] by reason of birth retains it, even though by law of another country he is also citizen of it."

"The basis of citizenship in the United States**] is the English doctrine under which nationality meant birth within allegiance to the king."

2. 26 C.F.R. §31.3121(e)-1 defines "U.S. citizen" as follows:

(b)...The term 'citizen of the United States**]' includes a citizen of the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico or the Virgin Islands, and, effective January 1, 1961, a citizen of Guam or American Samoa.

We put the term “U.S. citizen” last in the above table because we would now like to expand upon it. We surveyed the election laws of all 50 states to determine which states require persons to be either “U.S. citizens” or “citizen of the United States” in order to vote. The results of our study are found on our website below at:

4.13.14.11 State statutory definitions of “U.S. citizen”

If you look through all the state statutes on voting above, you will find that only California, Indiana, Texas, Virginia, and Wisconsin require you to be either a “U.S. citizen” or a “United States citizen” in order to vote, and none of these five states even define in their election code what these terms mean! 26 other states require you to be a “citizen of the United States” and don’t define that term in their election code either! This means that a total of 31 of the 50 states positively require some type of citizenship related to the term “United States” in order to be eligible to vote and none of them define which of the three “United States” they mean. Because none of the state election laws define the term, then the legal dictionary definition applies.

4.13.14.12 Legal definition of “citizen”

We looked in Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition and found no definition for either “U.S. citizen” or “citizen of the United States”. Therefore, we must rely only on the common definition rather than any legal definition. We then looked for “U.S. citizen” or “citizen of the United States” in Webster’s Dictionary and they weren’t defined there either. Then we looked for the term “citizen” and found the following interesting definition in Webster’s:

“citizen. 1: an inhabitant of a city or town; esp: one entitled to the rights and privileges of a freeman. 2 a: a member of a state b: a native or naturalized person who owes allegiance to a government and is entitled to protection from it 3: a civilian as distinguished from a specialized servant of the state—citizenry

syn CITIZEN, SUBJECT, NATIONAL mean a person owing allegiance to and entitled to the protection of a sovereign state. CITIZEN is preferred for one owing allegiance to a state in which sovereign power is retained by the people and sharing in the political rights of those people; SUBJECT implies allegiance to a personal sovereign such as a monarch; NATIONAL designates one who may claim the protection of a state and applies esp. to one living or traveling outside that state.”

[Webster’s Ninth New Collegiate Dictionary, ISBN 0-87779-510-X, 1983, p. 243]

Note in the above that the key to being a citizen under definition (b) is the requirement for allegiance. The only federal citizenship status that uses the term “allegiance” is that of a “national” as defined in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) and 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22)(B) respectively. Consequently, we are forced to conclude that the generic term “citizen” and the statutory definition of “national” in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22) are equivalent.

We also looked up the term “citizen” in Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition and found the following:

*“citizen. One who, under the Constitution and laws of the United States***], or of a particular state, is a member of the political community, owing allegiance and being entitled to the enjoyment of full civil rights. All persons born or naturalized in the United States***], and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the United States***] and of the state wherein they reside. U.S. Const., 14th Amend. See Citizenship.*

“Citizens” are members of a political community who, in their associated capacity, have established or submitted themselves to the dominion of a government for the promotion of their general welfare and the protection of their individual as well as collective rights. Herriott v. City of Seattle, 81 Wash.2d. 48, 500 P.2d. 101, 109.

*The term may include or apply to children of alien parents from in United States***], Von Schwerdtner v. Piper, D.C.Md., 23 F.2d. 862, 863; U.S. v. Minoru Yasui, D.C.Or., 48 F.Supp. 40, 54; children of American citizens born outside United States, Haaland v. Attorney General of United States, D.C.Md., 42 F.Supp. 13, 22; Indians, United States v. Hester, C.C.A.Okl., 137 F.2d. 145, 147; National Banks, American Surety Co. v. Bank of California, C.C.A.Or., 133 F.2d. 160, 162; nonresident who has qualified as administratrix of estate of*

1 *deceased resident, Hunt v. Noll, C.C.A.Tenn., 112 F.2d. 288, 289. However, neither the United States[**] nor*
 2 a state is a citizen for purposes of diversity jurisdiction. Jizemerjian v. Dept of Air Force, 457 F.Supp. 820. On
 3 the other hand, municipalities and other local governments are deemed to be citizens. Rieser v. District of
 4 Columbia, 563 F.2d. 462. A corporation is not a citizen for purposes of privileges and immunities clause of the
 5 Fourteenth Amendment. D.D.B. Realty Corp. v. Merrill, 232 F.Supp. 629, 637.

6 Under diversity statute [28 U.S.C. §1332], which mirrors U.S. Const. Article III's diversity clause, a person is a
 7 *"citizen of a state" if he or she is a citizen of the United States[***] and a domiciliary of a state of the United*
 8 *States[***]. Gibbons v. Udaras na Gaeltachta, D.C.N.Y., 549 F.Supp. 1094, 1116.*
 9 [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 244]

10 So the key requirement to be a "citizen" is to "owe allegiance" to a political community according to Black's Law
 11 Dictionary. Under 26 U.S.C. §1101\(a\)\(21\) and 26 U.S.C. §1101\(a\)\(22\)\(B\), one can "owe allegiance" to the "United 12 States***" as a political community only by being a "national" without being a "U.S.** citizen" or a "citizen of the United 13 States***" as defined in 8 U.S.C. §1401. Therefore, we must conclude once again, that "citizen of the United States**"
 14 status under federal statutes, is a political privilege that few people are born into and most acquire by mistake or fraud or 15 both. Most of us are "nationals" by birth and we volunteer to become "citizens of the United States***" under 8 U.S.C.
 16 §1401 by lying at worst or committing a mistake at best when we fill out government forms. That process of 17 misrepresenting our citizenship status is how we "volunteer" to become "U.S. citizens" subject to federal statutes, and of 18 course our covetous government is more than willing to overlook the mistake because that is how they manufacture
 19 "taxpayers" and make people "subject" to their corrupt laws. Remember, however, what the term "subject" means from 20 Webster's above under the definition of the term "citizen":

21 "SUBJECT implies allegiance to a personal [earthly] sovereign such as a monarch."
 22 [Webster's Ninth New Collegiate Dictionary, ISBN 0-87779-510-X, 1983, p. 243]

23 Therefore, to be "subject" to the federal government's legislation and statutes and "Acts of Congress" is to be subservient
 24 to them, which means that you voluntarily gave up your sovereignty and recognized that they have now become your
 25 "monarch" and you are their "servant". You have turned the Natural Order and hierarchy of sovereignty described in 26 section 4.1 of the Great IRS Hoax, Form #11.302 upside down and made yourself into a voluntary slave, which violates of 27 the Thirteenth Amendment if your consent in so doing was not fully informed and the government didn't apprise you of the 28 rights that you were voluntarily giving up by becoming a "citizen of the United States***".

29 "Waivers of Constitutional rights not only must be voluntary, but must be knowing, intelligent acts done with 30 sufficient awareness of the relevant circumstances and likely consequences."
 31 [Brady v. U.S., 397 U.S. 742 (1970)]

4.13.14.13 How you unknowingly volunteered to become a “citizen of the United States” under federal statutes

Armed with the knowledge that “U.S. citizen” status under federal statutes and “acts of Congress” is entirely voluntary, let’s now examine the federal government’s definition of the term “naturalization” to determine at what point we “volunteered”:

8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(23) naturalization defined

(a)(23) The term “naturalization” means the conferring of nationality [NOT “citizenship” or “U.S. citizenship”, but “nationality”, which means “national”] of a state upon a person after birth, by any means whatsoever.

And here is the definition in Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1026 of naturalization:

Naturalization. The process by which a person acquires nationality [not citizenship, but nationality] after birth and becomes entitled to the privileges of U.S. citizenship. 8 U.S.C.A. §1401 et seq.

In the United States collective naturalization occurs when designated groups are made citizens by treaty (as Louisiana Purchase), or by a law of Congress (as in annexation of Texas and Hawaii). Individual naturalization must follow certain steps: (a) petition for naturalization by a person of lawful age who has been a lawful resident of the United States for 5 years; (b) investigation by the Immigration and Naturalization Service to determine whether the applicant can speak and write the English language, has a knowledge of the fundamentals of American government and history, is attached to the principles of the Constitution and is of good moral character; (c) hearing before a U.S. District Court or certain State courts of record; and (d) after a lapse of at least 30 days a second appearance in court when the oath of allegiance is administered. [Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1026]

Hmmm. Well then, if you were a foreigner who was “naturalized” to become a “national” (and keep in mind that all of America is mostly a country of immigrants), then some questions arise:

3. At what point did you become a STATUTORY “U.S. citizen” under federal law, because “naturalization” didn’t do it?
4. By what means did you inform the government of your “informed choice” in this voluntary process?

The answer is that when you applied for a passport or registered to vote or participated in jury duty, the government asked you whether you were a “U.S. citizen” and you lied by saying “YES”. In effect, although you never made an informed choice to surrender your sovereign status as a “national” to become a “U.S. citizen”, you created a “presumption” on their part that you were a “U.S. citizen” just because of the erroneous paperwork you sent them which they can later use as evidence in court to prove you are a “U.S. citizen”. Even worst, they ENCOURAGED you to make it erroneous because of the way they designed the forms by not even giving you a choice on the form to indicate that you were a “national” instead of a “U.S. citizen”! By you checking the “U.S. citizen” block on their rigged forms, that is all the evidence they needed to conclude, incorrectly and to their massive financial benefit I might add, that you were a “U.S. citizen” who was “completely subject to the jurisdiction” of the United States. BAD IDEA!

Technically and lawfully, the federal government does not have the lawful authority to confer statutory “citizen of the United States**” status upon a person born inside a Union state on land that is not part of the federal zone and domiciled there. If they did, they would be “sheep poachers” who were stealing citizens from the Union states and depriving those states of control over persons born within their jurisdiction. This is so because “citizen of the United States***” status is superior and dominant over state citizenship according to the Supreme Court in the Slaughter-House Cases, 83 U.S. 36 (1873):

“The first of these questions is one of vast importance, and lies at the very foundations of our government. The question is now settled by the fourteenth amendment itself, that citizenship of the United States is the primary citizenship in this country; and that State citizenship is secondary and derivative, depending upon citizenship of the United States and the citizen’s place of residence. The States have not now, if they ever had, any power to restrict their citizenship to any classes or persons. A citizen of the United States has a perfect constitutional right to go to and reside in any State he chooses, and to claim citizenship therein, [83 U.S. 36, 113] and an equality of rights with every other citizen; and the whole power of the nation is pledged to sustain him in that right. He is not bound to cringe to any superior, or to pray for any act of grace, as a means of enjoying all the rights and privileges enjoyed by other citizens. And when the spirit of lawlessness, mob violence, and sectional hate can be so completely repressed as to give full practical effect to this right, we shall be a happier nation, and a more prosperous one than we now are. Citizenship of the United States ought to be, and, according to the Constitution, is, a surt and undoubted title to equal rights in any and every States in this Union, subject to

1 such regulations as the legislature may rightfully prescribe. If a man be denied full equality before the law, he
 2 is denied one of the essential rights of citizenship as a citizen of the United States.”
 3 [Slaughter-House Cases, 83 U.S. 36 (1873)]

4 Therefore, persons born in the Union states but outside the federal zone (federal areas or enclaves within the states) must be
 5 naturalized technically in order to become “citizens of the United States”. However, the rules for naturalization in the case
 6 of federal citizenship are so lax and transparent that people are fooled into thinking they always were “citizens of the 7 United States”! Whenever you fill out a passport or voter registration form and claim you are a “citizen of the United
 8 States” or a “U.S. citizen”, for instance, even if you technically weren’t because you weren’t born inside the federal zone,
 9 then you have effectively and formally “naturalized” yourself into federal citizenship and given the government evidence
 10 admissible under penalty of perjury proving that you are a federal serf and slave!

11 I therefore like to think of the term “U.S. citizen” used by the Internal Revenue Service and the Internal Revenue Code as
 12 being like the sign that your enemies taped on your back in grammar school without you knowing which said “HIT ME!”,
 13 and the only people who can see the sign or understand what it means are those who work for the government and the IRS
 14 and the legal profession! Your own legal ignorance is the only reason that you don’t know that you have this sign on your 15 back.

16 4.13.14.14 How to prevent being deceived or compelled to assume the civil status of “citizen”

28 4.13.15 Citizenship in Government Records

29 The citizenship status of a person is maintained in the Social Security “NUMIDENT” record:

- 30 1. The NUMIDENT record derives from what was filled out on the SSA Form SS-5, Block 5. See:
 31 <http://www.ssa.gov/online/ss-5.pdf>
- 32 2. One’s citizenship status is encoded within the NUMIDENT record using the “CSP code” within the Numident record.
 33 This code is called the “citizenship code” by the Social Security administration.
- 34 3. Like all government forms, the terms used on the SSA Form SS-5 use the STATUTORY context, not the 35 CONSTITUTIONAL context for all citizenship words. Hence, block 5 of the SSA Form SS-5 should be filled out with 36 “Legal Alien Authorized to Work”, which means you are a STATUTORY but not CONSTITUTIONAL alien. This is 37 consistent with the definition of “individual” found in 26 C.F.R. §1.1441-1(c)(3), which defines the term to include
 38 ONLY STATUTORY “aliens”.
- 39 4. Those who are not STATUTORY “nationals and citizens of the United States**” at birth per 8 U.S.C. §1401 or 26
 40 U.S.C. §3121(e), and 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1(c) have a “CSP code” of B in their NUMIDENT record, which corresponds 41 with a CSP code of “B”. The comment field of the NUMIDENT record should also be annotated with the following to 42 ensure that it is not changed during an audit because of confusion on the part of the SSA employee:

43 “CSP Code B not designated in error-- applicant is an American national with a domicile and residence in a 44 foreign state for the purposes of the Social Security Act.”

- 45 5. The local SSA office cannot provide a copy of the NUMIDENT record. Only the central SSA headquarters can 46 provide it by submitting a Privacy Act request rather than a FOIA using the following resource:

Guide to Freedom of Information Act, Social Security Administration
http://www.ssa.gov/foia/html/foia\_guide.htm

6. Information in the NUMIDENT record is shared with:
- 6.1. The Department of Homeland Security (DHS).
  - 6.2. State Department of Motor Vehicles in verifying SSNs.
  - 6.3. E-Verify.

About E-Verify, Form #04.107

<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

7. The procedures for requesting NUMIDENT information using the Freedom of Information Act or Privacy Act are described in:

Social Security Program Operations Manual System (POMS), Section RM 00299.005 Form SSA-L669 Request for Evidence in Support of an SSN Application — U.S.-Born Applicant

<https://s044a90.ssa.gov/apps10/poms.nsf/lx/0100299005>

Those who are CONSTITUTIONAL but not STATUTORY citizens and who wish to change the citizenship status reflected in the NUMIDENT record may do so by executing both of the following methods:

1. Visiting the local Social Security Administration office and getting the clerk to change the record. Bring witnesses in case they resist.
2. Sending in the following document:

4.13.16 Practical Application: Avoiding Identity Theft and Legal Kidnapping Caused by Confusion of Contexts

4.13.16.1 How to Describe Your Citizenship on Government Forms and Correspondence

In the following sections, we will share the results of our collective latest research and how they fit together perfectly in the overall puzzle. We have concluded the following:

1. A Citizen of one of the 50 states is a United States*** citizen per the Fourteenth Amendment and a "national of the United States*** of America".
2. A Citizen of one of the 50 states is a United States*** citizen per the Fourteenth Amendment and an "An alien authorized to work" for the purposes of U.S.C.I.S. Form I-9 so long as he/she maintains a domicile (actual or declared) in one of the 50 states or outside of the United States**.

You will have trouble when you try to explain your citizenship on government forms based on the content of this paper because:

1. IRS, SSA, and the Department of State do not put all of the options available for citizenship on their forms.
2. Most people falsely PRESUME that "United States" as used in the phrase "citizen of the United States" means the whole country for EVERY enactment of Congress but they won't expose this presumption.
3. The use of the term "citizenship" on government forms intentionally confuses "nationality" with "domicile" in an attempt to make them appear equal, when in fact they are NOT.
4. Government forms often mix requests for information from multiple titles of the Code and do not distinguish which title they mean on the form. For instance, "United States" in Title 26 means federal territory (U.S.***) while "United States" in other Titles or in the Constitution itself often means states of the Union (U.S. ***).

We will clarify in the following sections techniques for avoiding the above road blocks.

4.13.16.1.1 Overview

This section provides some pointers on how to describe your citizenship status on government forms in order to avoid being confused with a someone who has a domicile on federal territory and therefore no Constitutional rights. Below is a summary of how we recommend protecting yourself from the prejudicial presumptions of others about your citizenship status:

1. Keep in mind the following facts about all government forms:

- 1 1.1. Government forms ALWAYS imply the LEGAL/STATUTORY rather than POLITICAL/CONSTITUTIONAL
 2 status of the party in the context of all franchises, including income taxes and social security.
 3 1.2. "Alien" on government forms always means a person born or naturalized in a foreign country.
 4 1.3. The Internal Revenue Code does NOT define the term "nonresident alien". The closest thing to a definition is
 5 that found in 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(B), which defines what it ISN'T, but NOT what it IS. If you look on IRS
 6 Form W-8BEN, Block 3, you can see that there are many different types of entities that can be nonresident aliens,
 7 none of which are EXPRESSLY included in the definition at 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(B). It is therefore
 8 IMPOSSIBLE to conclude based on any vague definition in the Internal Revenue Code that a specific person IS 9 or IS NOT a "nonresident alien."
 10 1.4. On tax forms, the term "nonresident alien" is NOT a subset of the term "alien", but rather a SUPERSET. It
 11 includes both FOREIGN nationals domiciled in a foreign country and also those in Constitutional states of the 12 Union. A "national of the United States*", for instance, although NOT an "alien" under Title 8 of the U.S. Code,
 13 is a "nonresident alien" under Title 26 of the U.S. Code if engaged in a public office or a "non-resident non-
 14 person" if exclusively PRIVATE and not engaged in a public office. Therefore, a "nonresident alien" is a "word
 15 of art" designed to confuse people, and the fact that uses the word "alien" doesn't mean it IS an "alien". This is 16 covered in:

Flawed Tax Arguments to Avoid, Form #08.004, Section 6.7

<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

- 17 2. Anyone who PRESUMES any of the following should promptly be DEMANDED to prove the presumption with 18 legally admissible evidence from the law. ALL of these presumptions are FALSE and cannot be proven:

- 19 2.1. That you can trust ANYTHING that either a government form OR a government employee says. The courts say
 20 not only that you CANNOT, but that you can be PENALIZED for doing so. See:

Reasonable Belief About Income Tax Liability, Form #05.007

<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

- 21 2.2. That nationality and domicile are synonymous.
 22 2.3. That "nonresident aliens" are a SUBSET of "aliens" within the Internal Revenue Code.
 23 2.4. That the term "United States" has the SAME meaning in Title 8 of the U.S. Code as it has in Title 26.
 24 2.5. That a Fourteenth Amendment "citizen of the United States" is equivalent to any of the following:
 25 2.5.1. 8 U.S.C. §1401 "national and citizen of the United States".
 26 2.5.2. 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1 "citizen".
 27 2.5.3. 26 U.S.C. §3121(e) "citizen of the United States".
 28 All of the above statuses have similar sounding names, but they rely on a DIFFERENT definition of "United 29 States" from that found in the U.S.A. Constitution.
 30 2.6. That you can be a statutory "taxpayer" or statutory "citizen" of any kind WITHOUT your consent. See:

Why Domicile and Becoming a "Taxpayer" Require Your Consent, Form #05.002

<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

- 31 3. The safest way to describe oneself is to check "Other" for citizenship or add an "Other" box if the form doesn't have 32 one and then do one of the following:

- 33 3.1. Write in the "Other" box

34 "See attached mandatory Affidavit of Citizenship, Domicile, and Tax Status, Form 35 #02.001"

36 and then attach the following completed form:

Affidavit of Citizenship, Domicile, and Tax Status, Form #02.001

<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

- 37 3.2. If you don't want to include an attachment, add the following mandatory language to the form that you are a:

38 3.2.1. A "Citizen and national of _____ (statename)"

39 3.2.2. NOT a statutory "national and citizen of the United States" or "U.S. citizen" per 8 U.S.C. §1401

40 3.2.3. A constitutional or Fourteenth Amendment Citizen.

41 3.2.4. A statutory alien per 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(A) for the purposes of the federal income tax.

- 42 4. If the recipient of the form says they won't accept attachments or won't allow you to write explanatory information on 43 the form needed to prevent perjuring the form, then send them an update via certified mail AFTER they accept your 44 submission so that you have legal evidence that they tried to tamper with a federal witness and conspired to commit 45 perjury on the form.

- 46 5. For detailed instructions on how to fill out the U.S.C.I.S. Form I-9, See:

I-9 Form Amended, Form #06.028

6. For detailed instructions on how to participate in E-Verify for the purposes of PRIVATE employment, see:

7. To undo the damage you have done over the years to your status by incorrectly describing your status, send in the following form and submit according to the instructions provided. This form says that all future government forms submitted shall have this form included or attached by reference.

Legal Notice of Change in Domicile/Citizenship Records and Divorce from the United States, Form #10.001

<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

8. Quit using Taxpayer Identifying Numbers (TINs). 20 C.F.R. §422.104 says that only statutory “U.S. citizens” and “permanent residents” can lawfully apply for Social Security Numbers, both of which share in common a domicile on federal territory such as statutory “U.S. citizens” and “residents” (aliens), can lawfully use such a number. 26 C.F.R. §301.6109-1(b) also indicates that “U.S. persons”, meaning persons with a domicile on federal territory, are required to furnish such a number if they file tax forms. “Foreign persons” are also mentioned in 26 C.F.R. §301.6109-1(b), but these parties also elect to have an effective domicile on federal territory and thereby become “persons” by engaging in federal franchises. See:

- 8.2. Why It is Illegal for Me to Request or Use a “Taxpayer Identification Number”, Form #04.205-attach this form to every government form that asks for a Social Security Number or Taxpayer Identification Number. Write in the SSN/TIN Box (NONE: See attached form #04.205).

9. If you are completing any kind of government form or application to any kind of financial institution other than a tax form and you are asked for your citizenship status, TIN, or Social Security Number, attach the following form and prepare according to the instructions provided:

Affidavit of Citizenship, Domicile, and Tax Status, Form #02.001

11. If you are submitting a voter registration, attach the following form and prepare according to the instructions provided:

12. If you are applying for a USA passport, attach the following form and prepare according to the instructions provided:

<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

13. If you are submitting a complaint, response, pleading, or motion to a federal court, you should attach the following form:

Federal Pleading/Motion/Petition Attachment, Litigation Tool #01.002

<http://sedm.org/Litigation/LitIndex.htm>

14. Use as many of the free forms as you can from the page below. They are very well thought out to avoid traps set by the predators who run the American government:

SEDM Forms Page

<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

15. When engaging in correspondence with anyone in the government, legal, or financial profession about your status that occurs on other than a standard government form, use the following guidelines:

15.2. Entirely avoid the use of the words “citizen”, “citizenship”, “resident”, “inhabitant”. Instead, prefer the term “non-resident”, and “transient foreigner”.

15.3. Never describe yourself as an “individual” or “person”. 5 U.S.C. §552a(a)(2) says that this entity is a government employee who is a statutory “U.S. citizen” or “resident” (alien). Instead, refer to yourself as a “transient foreigner” and a “nonresident”. Some forms such as IRS form W-8BEN Block 3 have no block for “transient foreigner” or “non-resident NON-person”, in which case modify the form to add that option. See the following for details:

About IRS Form W-8BEN, Form #04.202
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

- 15.4. Entirely avoid the use of the phrase “United States”, because it has so many different and mutually exclusive meanings in the U.S. code and state law. Instead, replace this phrase with the name of the state you either are physically present within or with “USA” and then define that “USA” includes the states of the Union and excludes federal territory. For instance, you could say “Citizen of California Republic” and then put an asterisk next to it and at the bottom of the page explain the asterisk as follows:

\ NOT a citizen of the STATE of California, which is a corporate extension of the federal government, but instead a sovereign Citizen of the California Republic*

California Revenue and Taxation Code, Section 6017 defines “State of” as follows:

“6017. ‘In this State’ or ‘in the State’ means within the exterior limits of the State of California and includes all territory within these limits owned by or ceded to the United States of America.”

- 15.5. Never use the word “residence”, “permanent address”, or “domicile” in connection with either the term “United States”, or the name of the state you are in.
- 15.6. If someone else refers to you improperly, vociferously correct them so that they are prevented from making presumptions that would injure your rights.
- 15.7. Avoid words that are undefined in statutes that relate to citizenship. Always use words that are statutorily defined and if you can’t find the definition, define it yourself on the form or correspondence you are sending. Use of undefined words encourages false presumptions that will eventually injure your rights and give judges and administrators discretion that they undoubtedly will abuse to their benefit. There isn’t even a common definition of “citizen of the United States” or “U.S. citizen” in the standard dictionary, then the definition of “U.S. citizen” in all the state statutes and on all government forms is up to us! Therefore, once again, whenever you fill out any kind of form that specifies either “U.S. citizen” or “citizen of the United States”, you should be very careful to clarify that it means “national” under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) or you will be “presumed” to be a federal citizen and a “citizen of the United States***” under 8 U.S.C. §1401, and this is one of the biggest injuries to your rights that you could ever inflict. Watch out folks! Here is the definition we recommend that you use on any government form that uses these terms that makes the meaning perfectly clear and unambiguous:

- 15.8. Refer them to this pamphlet if they have questions and tell them to do their homework.

16. Citizenship status in Social Security NUMIDENT record:

- 16.1. The NUMIDENT record derives from what was filled out on the SSA Form SS-5, Block 5. See:

<http://www.ssa.gov/online/ss-5.pdf>

- 16.2. One’s citizenship status is encoded within the NUMIDENT record using the “CSP code” within the Numident record. This code is called the “citizenship code” by the Social Security administration.

- 16.3. Like all government forms, the terms used on the SSA Form SS-5 use the STATUTORY context, not the CONSTITUTIONAL context for all citizenship words. Hence, block 5 of the SSA Form SS-5 should be filled out with “Other”, which means you are a non-resident. This is consistent with the definition of “individual” found in 26 C.F.R. §1.1441-1(c)(3), which defines the term to include ONLY STATUTORY “aliens”.

- 16.4. Those who are not STATUTORY “nationals and citizens of the United States***” at birth per 8 U.S.C. §1401 or 26 U.S.C. §3121(e), and 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1(c) have a “CSP code” of B in their NUMIDENT record, which corresponds with a CSP code of “B”. The comment field of the NUMIDENT record should also be annotated with the following to ensure that it is not changed during an audit because of confusion on the part of the SSA employee:

1 “CSP Code B not designated in error-- applicant is an American national with a
2 domicile and residence in a foreign state for the purposes of the Social Security Act.”

3 16.5. The local SSA office cannot provide a copy of the NUMIDENT record. Only the central SSA headquarters can
4 provide it by submitting a Privacy Act request rather than a FOIA using the following resource:

5 Guide to Freedom of Information Act, Social Security Administration
6 http://www.ssa.gov/foia/html/foia\_guide.htm

7 16.6. Information in the NUMIDENT record is shared with:

- 8 16.6.1. The Department of Homeland Security (DHS).
9 16.6.2. State Department of Motor Vehicles in verifying SSNs.
10 16.6.3. E-Verify.

NOTES:

1. "United States" is described in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(38), (a)(36) and 8 C.F.R. §215.1(f) and includes only federal territory and possessions and excludes all Constitutional Union states. This is a product of the separation of powers doctrine that is the heart of the United States Constitution.
2. E-Verify CANNOT be used by those who are a NOT lawfully engaged in a public office in the U.S. government at the time of making application. Its use is VOLUNTARY and cannot be compelled. Those who use it MUST have a Social Security Number or Taxpayer Identification Number and it is ILLEGAL to apply for, use, or disclose said number for those not lawfully engaged in a public office in the U.S. government at the time of application. #### 4.13.16.1.3 Diagrams of Federal Government processes that relate to citizenship

The diagrams at the link below show how your citizenship status is used and verified throughout all the various federal government programs.

 DIRECT LINK: <http://sedm.org/Forms/10-Emancipation/CitizenshipDiagrams.pdf>

Knowledge of these processes is important to ensure that all the government's records are properly updated to reflect your status as:

1. A Constitutional "Citizen" as mentioned in Article I, Section 2, Clause 2 of the United States Constitution.
2. A Constitutional "citizen of the United States" per the Fourteenth Amendment.
3. A state national under 8 U.S.C. §1101\(a\)\(21\).
4. "Subject to THE jurisdiction" of the CONSTITUTIONAL United States, meaning subject to the POLITICAL and not LEGISLATIVE jurisdiction of the Constitutional but not STATUTORY "United States".

"This section contemplates two sources of citizenship, and two sources only, -birth and naturalization. The persons declared to be citizens are 'all persons born or naturalized in the United States, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof.' The evident meaning of these last words is, not merely subject in some respect or degree to the jurisdiction of the United States, but completely subject to their [plural, not singular, meaning states of the Union] political jurisdiction, and owing them [the state of the Union and NOT the national government] direct and immediate allegiance. And the words relate to the time of birth in the one case, as they do [169 U.S. 649, 725] to the time of naturalization in the other. Persons not thus subject to the jurisdiction of the United States at the time of birth cannot become so afterwards, except by being naturalized, either individually, as by proceedings under the naturalization acts, or collectively, as by the force of a treaty by which foreign territory is acquired."
 U.S. v. Wong Kim Ark, [169 U.S. 649, 18 S.Ct. 456; 42 L.Ed. 890 (1898)]

5. With a Social Security NUMIDENT citizenship status of:

- 1 5.1. OTHER than "CSP=A". Social Security Program Operations Manual System (POMS), Section GN 03313.095
2 indicates that those who are NOT STATUTORY "U.S. citizens" have a CSP code value of OTHER than "A".
3 See:

<http://sedm.org/Exhibits/ExhibitIndex.htm>

- 4 5.2. "CSP=D", which correlates with not a "citizen of the United States***".
5 6. NOT any of the following:

- 6 6.1. A "U.S. citizen" or "citizen of the United States" on any federal form. All government forms presume the 7 STATUTORY and not CONSTITUTIONAL context for terms. For an enumeration of all the statuses one can 8 have and their corresponding status on federal forms, see:

- 9 6.2. Statutory "U.S. citizen" per 26 U.S.C. §3121(e), and 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1(c).
10 6.3. Statutory "national and citizen" per 8 U.S.C. §1401.
11 6.4. Statutory "national but not citizen of the United States AT BIRTH" per 8 U.S.C. §1408.

14 "individuals" within the Internal Revenue Code are government instrumentalities and/or offices within the U.S.
15 government, and not biological people. This is proven in:

4.13.16.1.4 How the corrupt government CONCEALS and OBFUSCATES citizenship information on government forms to ENCOURAGE misapplication of federal franchises to states of the Union

The following key omissions from government forms are deliberately implemented universally by federal agencies as a way to encourage and even mandate the MISAPPLICATION of federal law to legislatively foreign jurisdictions and to KIDNAP your legal identity and transport it stealthily and without your knowledge to the District of Criminals:

1. Not describing WHICH context they are using geographical terms within: CONSTITUTIONAL or STATUTORY. These two contexts are mutually exclusive.
2. Refusing to define WHICH of the three "United States" they mean in EACH option presented, as described by the U.S. Supreme Court in Hooven & Allison Co. v. Evatt, 324 U.S. 652 (1945).

In addition, the Social Security Administration (SSA) deliberately conceals key information about citizenship in their Program Operations Manual System (POMS) in order to encourage the misapplication of federal franchises to places they may not be offered or enforced, which is states of the Union. The POMS is available at:

Social Security Program Operations Manual System (POMS) Online

Here are the obfuscation tactics you will encounter from the SSA:

1. If you ask the Social Security Administration WHAT all of the valid values are for the CSP code in your NUMIDENT record, they will pretend like they don't know AND they will refuse to find out.
2. If you visit a local Social Security Administration office and do demand to see and print out their complete NUMIDENT records on you, they will resist.
3. Key sections of the Program Operations Manual System (POMS) within the Records Manual (RM) are omitted from public view dealing with the meaning of "CSP code" and "IDN" code in their NUMIDENT records.
  - 3.1. The "CSP code", according to the SSA POMS, is a "citizenship code". It is defined in POMS RM 00208.001D.4, which is not available online.
  - 3.2. The "IDN code" appears to be an evidence code that synthesizes the CSP and other factors to determine your exact status. "RM 00202.235, Form SS-5 Evidence (IDN) Codes" describes this code and is not available online.
  - 3.3. BOTH POMS RM 00208.001D.4 AND RM 00202.235 sections are "conveniently omitted" from the online POMS because they are hiding something:

Social Security Program Operations Manual System (POMS), Section RM 002: The Social Security Number, Policy and General Procedures
<https://s044a90.ssa.gov/apps10/poms.nsf/subchapterlist!openview&restricttocategory=01002>

If you want something to FOIA for, ask for the POMS sections and any other SSA internal documents that define these codes. SCUM BAGS!

Finally, HERE is how the POMS system describes how to request one's records from the SSA:

Social Security Program Operations Manual System (POMS), Section RM 00299.005 Form SSA-L669 Request for Evidence in Support of an SSN Application — U.S.-Born Applicant
<https://s044a90.ssa.gov/apps10/poms.nsf/lx/0100299005>

4.13.16.1.5 The Social Security Administration and Form SS-5

Let us start with SSA Form SS-5, or what would be the nowadays equivalent of an SS-5 -- an agreement entered into as part of the birth registration process. There are multiple issues here. Each issue must be taken into consideration as this is where the whole tax snare is initiated. We know from U.S. v. Wong Kim Ark, 169 U.S. 649 (1898), that a person receives two conditions at birth which describe his complete legal condition -- nationality/political status, and domicile/civil status. SSA Form SS-5 is brilliantly constructed to take both of these issues into consideration by virtue of Block 3 -- BIRTHPLACE, and Block 5 -- CITIZENSHIP. Block 3 and Block 5 work together to paint a complete picture, which can be very unique depending on many factors. For example, there are American Nationals born in one of the 50 states, or born in Germany, or Canada. There are foreign nationals born in China or Italy who have since gone through the process of naturalization -- maybe they are domiciled in the United States** or one of the 50 states (United States***). There are former American

1 Nationals who have since expatriated (i.e. surrendered United States*** nationality). The point, is that Block 3 --
 2 BIRTHPLACE paints only part of the picture. The total status is only fully established when an applicable domicile is
 3 considered. But most importantly, the applicable jurisdiction changes depending on whether or not the person in
 4 consideration is an American National or a foreign national. This is key -- and this concept applies to U.S.C.I.S. Form I-9 5 also!

6 We know that Congress exercises plenary legislative jurisdiction over a foreign "national" occupying ANY portion of the 7 territory of the United States* (the nation). The nation has two territorial divisions, United States**, and United States***.
 8 A foreign national occupying either territorial subdivision is a LEGAL "alien," NOT TO BE CONFUSED with his status as
 9 a POLITICAL "alien" who may or may not be in the country LEGALLY. What I mean, is that a "legal alien" or an "illegal
 10 alien" are both considered to be a LEGAL "alien" within the context of law that is -- a LEGAL appellation. This is what the 11 status is communicating. It is simply presenting a LEGAL status that can apply to anyone who happens to be "alien" to the 12 jurisdiction at issue, whether here legally or not, or possessing a right-to-work status or not. The issue of whether or not the 13 "alien" is here legally or not then commutes a right-to-work status. Conversely, an American National automatically has a
 14 right-to-work status by virtue of his/her American nationality. But the jurisdiction and the status of the American National
 15 is considered differently because Congress does not have legislative jurisdiction within the 50 states -- only subject matter
 16 jurisdiction. Thus, if an American National establishes a domicile in one of the 50 states, then he too is a LEGAL "alien" . .
 17 . not a POLITICAL "alien," but a LEGAL "alien" domiciled in a territorially foreign legislative jurisdiction with a right-to-
 18 work status commuted through American nationality, which is either commuted through the Fourteenth Amendment (50
 19 states), or an Act of Congress (D.C., Federal possessions, or naturalization). The following examples will show how both
 20 Block 3 -- BIRTHPLACE, and Block 5 -- CITIZENSHIP on SSA Form SS-5 work in tandem to paint the total picture as 21 the Supreme Court said in Wong Kim Ark.

22 In the following examples A - E, I will provide 3 data points, 1.POLITICAL STATUS/NATIONALITY, 2. SS-5 Block 3--
 23 BIRTHPLACE, 3. CIRCUMSTANCE, and finally, a conclusory civil status 4. SS-5 Block 5--CITIZENSHIP STATUS, 24 which is determined by taking the first three items into consideration collectively.

- 25 A. 1. Mexican National, 2. BIRTHPLACE -- Mexico City, 3. visiting = 4. "Legal Alien Not Allowed to Work"
 26 B. 1. American National, 2. BIRTHPLACE -- Phoenix, AZ, 3. work in the U.S.A. with an Arizona domicile = 4. "Other "
 27 C. 1. American National, 2. BIRTHPLACE -- Phoenix, AZ, 3. work in the U.S.A. with a United States** domicile = 4.
 28 "U.S. Citizen"
 29 D. 1. American National, 2. BIRTHPLACE -- American Samoa, 3. work in the U.S.A. with a United States** domicile =
 30 4. "Other"
 31 E. 1. German National, 2. BIRTHPLACE -- Frankfurt, Germany, 3. work in the U.S.A. with a work visa = 4. "Legal 32 Alien Allowed to Work"

33 Notice how B. and E. have the same civil status, but a different political status. This is not an issue as these differences are 34 reconciled within the tax system, as a "U.S. person" is a "citizen" or "resident" of the "United States***" with the context of 35 the "United States" changing depending on the nationality of the "taxpayer."

36 How do I know the above is true? Because the SSA will not issue an SSA Form SS-1042-S to anyone with a CSP Code of 37 "A" (U.S. Citizen). An SSA Form SS-1042-S is an information return issued to a "nonresident alien" under Title 26 who 38 receives "United States" sourced payments from the SSA. A "U.S. person" will receive an SSA Form SS-1099R.
 39 Furthermore, if an "employer" sends "wage" information to the SSA, the SSA will then transmit that "wage" information
 40 together with the CSP Code of the "individual" to the IRS. If the IRS receives "wage" information with a CSP Code of "A",
 41 and the "taxpayer" subsequently tries to file a 1040NR, it will be flagged as being an incorrect or fraudulent return-- after 42 all, how can an SS-5 "U.S. Citizen" file a "nonresident alien" tax return? I think they would call this "frivolous." However,
 43 if an "individual" has a CSP Code of "B" ("Legal Alien Allowed To Work") on file with the SSA, a CSP Code "B" will be
 44 transmitted with the "wage" information and the "taxpayer" could file EITHER a 1040 ("resident alien") or a 1040NR
 45 ("nonresident alien"), as both a "resident alien" and a "nonresident alien" would qualify as a "Legal Alien Allowed to 46 Work" for the purposes of the Social Security Act. The Block 5 -- CITIZENSHIP status on the SSA Form SS-5 is 47 designed to get people to declare a federal domicile in the United States**, and thus keep them caged in the "U.S. person"
 48 tax status. We know this to be the case because we know tax status is based on domicile. And since the SSA issues two
 49 types of information returns (SSA Form SS-1099R & SSA Form SS-1042-S), and since SSA will not issue an SSA Form
 50 SS-1042-S to an "individual" with a CSP Code of "A" ("U.S. Citizen"), then we know that the Block 5 -- CITIZENSHIP
 51 status of "U.S.** Citizen" is not referring to political citizenship/nationality, but a civil status based partly on the Block 3 --
 52 BIRTHPLACE, nationality, AND domicile . . . precisely as pointed out by the Supreme Court in Wong Kim Ark.

1 One of our members who is a state national, armed with the information from this pamphlet, went into the Social Security
 2 Administration office to file an SSA Form SS-5 to change their status from "U.S. citizen" is SSA Form SS-5, Block 5 and
 3 here is the response they got. Their identity shall remain anonymous, but here is their personal experience. They are
 4 among our most informed members and used every vehicle available on our website to prove their position at the SSA
 5 office:

6 *On _____ I submitted my "Legal Alien Allowed to Work" SSA Form SS-5 modification pursuant to 20 C.F.R.
 7 §422.110(a). I was met with the recalcitrance that one would imagine, and then I "turned it on" in the style that
 8 one can only get from an SEDM education!! I was elevated to the local office manager. I insisted she input my 9 information into the SSNAP as I have indicated, as no SSA "employee" can practice law on my behalf by 10 providing me legal advice, mandating my political affiliations, or even sign my SS-5 under penalty of perjury,
 11 and that it was against the law for them to do so. She acknowledged that I was correct and proceeded to try.*

12 *The manager took my information, my passport, disappeared, and then came back about 10 mins later asking
 13 for different ID. "Why . . . is my passport not good enough?" I asked. She said, "Well, the system will not let me
 14 input you as a 'Legal Alien Allowed to Work' with a U.S. Passport as your ID." I told her that my passport was 15 evidence of nationality and not Block 5 citizenship. She told me I was correct and that "there must be something 16 wrong with the system." She flat-out told me that Block 5 of the SSA Form SS-5 was NOT an inquiry into 17 nationality -- which we know to be the case. It is also not an inquiry into HOW one obtains nationality. Which 18 means it can only be a civil status based on domicile within or without the geographical legislative jurisdiction
 19 defined as the "United States**" in 42 U.S.C. §1301(a)(2).*

20 *She came back a time later, telling me they scanned my Form SS-5 as well as all of the documentation that I
 21 brought (case law, diagrams, statutory and regulatory language), and that she had been instructed to send it to 22 Baltimore (ostensibly by Baltimore) as well as my regional office. She was told that the information I wanted
 23 reflected in my Numident could only be "hard-coded" at the national level, as only they could bypass certain 24 provisions in the SSNAP that local offices were relegated to adhere to! Well . . . surprise, surprise!!!*

26 4.13.16.1.6 The Department of Homeland Security and Form I-9

27 U.S.C.I.S. Form I-9 also plays a very important role in protecting the status quo of the tax system. We know that U.S.C.I.S.
 28 Form I-9 has a very narrow application under the Immigration Reform and Control Act of 1986, as there are a very few 29 number of people who would be in a "position" of "employment" in the agricultural section under an executive
 30 "department."

31 The Department of Homeland Security administers the E-Verify program which receives two sources of data input -- the 32 Social Security Numident Record, which is what the SSA has on file based on an applicant's SS-5, and the United States
 33 Customs and Immigration Service, which deals with the immigration status of FOREIGN NATIONALS. If U.S.C.I.S. deals
 34 with the immigration status of foreign nationals who are political aliens and ipso facto legal aliens only, then there is
 35 absolutely no information with regard to the legal "alien" status of an American National since they are not politically
 36 foreign. Furthermore, the government's regulation of private conduct is repugnant to the Constitution. And since the First
 37 Amendment guarantees the right to freedom of association, neither the SSA nor U.S.C.I.S. can even address or regulate the 38 legal "alien" status of an American National when he/she chooses a foreign domicile. Since they cannot regulate it, they 39 simply don't address it -- out of sight, out of mind!!! This has the practical effect of creating a psychological barrier that 40 very few are able to overcome. After all, the thought process is as follows: "The E-Verify system does not recognize your 41 declared status, therefore you must be wrong." It's absolutely brilliant if I do say so myself. We tell you . . . we admire the 42 craftiness of these banksters more and more every day!!!

43 U.S.C.I.S. Form I-9 offers the following civil status designations which are determined precisely in the same manner in 44 which they are determined for the purposes of SSA Form SS-5.

- 45 1. "A citizen of the United States" (this would be someone described by 8 U.S.C. §1401)
- 46 2. "A noncitizen national of the United States***", or of the United States** (8 U.S.C. §1408, 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22)(B), 47 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21))
- 48 3. "A lawful permanent resident"
- 49 4. "An alien authorized to work" -- the meaning of which is dependent completely on the applicable definition of "United 50 States"

1 Now, just like on SSA Form SS-5, status number 4. changes applicability just like 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(3) can change based
2 on the meaning of the term "United States" which is used. A political "alien" is going to be "alien" to the political nation
3 called the United States* and legally "alien" to ALL territory within the political jurisdiction of the nation -- United
4 States** and United States***. However, an American National domiciled in any of the 50 states is legally "alien" to the
5 territorial subdivision of the United States* where an Act of Congress is locally applicable, this is otherwise known as
6 United States** and is comprised of the "States" of 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(36) and the "outlying possessions of the United
7 States" pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(29). So the civil statuses of Section 1. on U.S.C.I.S. Form I-9 are predicated on
8 BOTH nationality and domicile -- and again, we see that what the Supreme Court said in Wong Kim Ark is true -- both
9 nationality and domicile must be considered to ascertain the complete legal status of the person in question. Thus, the 10 statuses on U.S.C.I.S. Form I-9 are determined differently for American Nationals and foreign nationals.

11 Now, here is the rub. Solicitors of U.S.C.I.S. Form I-9 will then take that form and query the DHS E-Verify system. If an 12 American National domiciled in the 50 states correctly declares an I-9 status of "A noncitizen national of the United
13 States*" commensurate with the "Legal Alien Allowed to Work" status on the SSA's Form SS-5 and with the "nonresident
14 alien" status under Title 26, a non-conclusory response will come back from the DHS E-Verify system. Why? Because
15 DHS and U.S.C.I.S. deal only with LEGAL aliens who are foreign nationals. The "alien" status of American Nationals
16 falls 100% outside of the purview of the Federal government. This is why the reference to an A# or Admission# on 17 U.S.C.I.S. Form I-9 says "if applicable." Notice how a U.S. passport is used as evidence of "identity" and "employment"
18 eligibility -- NOT CITIZENSHIP. Furthermore, the boxed Anti-Discrimination Notice on page 1 of the U.S.C.I.S. Form I-9
19 instructions states in bold, all-caps, that an "employer" CANNOT specify which documents an "employee" may submit in 20 the course of establishing "employment" eligibility.

21 So, why not just state that you are "A citizen of the United States" and then define the United States to mean the United 22 States* or the United States***? Two reasons: 1. This would be avoiding the dual-element aspect of a person's legal status
23 as addressed by the Supreme Court under Wong Kim Ark, and 2. An "employer" will not accept a IRS Form W-8 a worker
24 with an I-9 election of "U.S. citizen" -- I know this first-hand.

25 I believe it is safe to say that the vast majority of Americans have snared themselves in the STATUTORY "U.S. person"
26 (26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(30)) tax trap. The Federal government provides the remedy by stating that a person may change
27 personal information such as citizenship status in the Social Security Numident record by submitting a corrected SSA Form
28 SS-5. This is detailed in 20 C.F.R. §422.110(a). We also know that the IRS has stated that an "individual" may change the 29 status of his/her SSN by following the regulatory guidance of 26 C.F.R. §301.6109-1(g)(1)(i). Since we know the IRS deals
30 with "taxpayers" and NOT non-"taxpayers," there is ONLY one way to change the status of one's SSN with the IRS, and
31 that is to file the appropriate Forms that a "nonresident alien" "taxpayer" would file -- namely a IRS Forms W-4, W-8ECI
32 or a W-8BEN with a SSN included. Had a Citizen of the 50 states NEVER declared the "U.S. citizen" federal domicile in 33 the first place which most have done in the course of obtaining an SSN, filling out a Bank Signature Card (Substitute IRS
34 W-9), and filing an IRS Form 1040, this "unwrapping oneself" from the damage done would never have to be done, as one
35 would have always maintained a legislatively foreign status. But a deceived man does not know that he has been deceived.
36 But once he figures it out, I believe he must follow the method provided by the government to remedy it. The government
37 does provide the remedy.

38 A Citizen of Florida who wishes to serve his nation in the Armed Forces would obtain a SSN as "Legal Alien Allowed to 39 Work" file an IRS Form W-4 as a "wage" earner who is in a "position" of "service" within the "department" of Defense,
40 and file a 1040NR on or before tax day. Then, upon returning to the private-sector, simply provide the private-sector payer
41 with a modified W-8BEN without the SSN. The Florida Citizen's status on file with the SSA reflects his foreign civil status
42 to the United States**, and this is further evidenced in his IRS IMF which would identify him as a "nonresident alien"
43 "taxpayer." All of the evidence the "United States" (non-geographical sense) would otherwise use against a "U.S. person"
44 claiming a "nonresident alien" status does not exist. In fact, it all supports his sovereign foreign status as an American
45 National and State Citizen under the Constitution as well as the various Acts of Congress. Additionally, the private-sector
46 payer is indemnified by the U.S.C.I.S. Form I-9 submission (which isn't really required anyway in the private-sector) and 47 the W-8BEN. There is not a voluntary W-4 agreement in place pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §3402(p)(3), thus the worker is not
48 part of "payroll," but is nothing more than a contractor who receives non-taxable personal payments from the company's 49 'accounts payable' pot of money. Of course, this "nonresident alien" may of course still be a "taxpayer" due to "United 50 States" sourced payments received from a military retirement (IRS Form 1099R), and Social Security Payments (if applied
51 for and received, SSA Form SS-1042-S). Because he is a "nonresident alien," his "United States" sourced payments are of 52 course taxed, but in his private life, any payment he receives constitutes a foreign estate, the taxation of which must be
53 accomplished through the process of apportionment pursuant to Art I, Sec 9, Cl 4.

1 Be certain, the SSA Form SS-5, U.S.C.I.S. Form I-9, and the "U.S. Citizen" ruse is designed to box people into a federal
 2 "United States**" domicile. 99.99% of the people don't understand the Fourteenth Amendment or the complexities of civil
 3 status and how it is established based on both nationality and domicile. For this reason, the matrix tax system is protected
 4 by those who feed off of it. The government has provided everyone with the remedy. But it involves many government
 5 agencies and a complete understanding of how information is shared between agencies, what applies when and how, and
 6 also knowing when it doesn't. Furthermore, one has to be able to articulate this to others so that they also feel indemnified
 7 in the process.

10 This section deals with describing your status on the USA passport application. We won't go into detail on this subject

12 4.13.16.2 Answering Questions from the Government About Your Citizenship So As to Protect Your Sovereign
 13 Status and disallow federal jurisdiction

14 When a federal officer asks you if you are a "citizen", consider the context! The only basis for him asking this is federal
 15 law, because he isn't bound by state law. If you tell him you are a "citizen" or a "U.S. citizen", then indirectly, you are
 16 admitting that you are subject to federal law, because that's what it means to be a "citizen" under federal law! Watch out!
 17 Therefore, as people born in and domiciled within a state of the Union on land that is not federal territory, we need to be
 18 very careful how we describe ourselves on government forms. Below is what we should say in each of the various contexts
 19 to avoid misleading those asking the questions on the forms. In this context, let's assume you were born in California and 20 are domiciled there. This guidance also applies to questions that officers of the government might ask you in each of the 21 two contexts as well:

Below is a sample interchange from a deposition held by a U.S. attorney against a sui juris litigant who knows his rights and his citizenship status. The subject is the domicile and citizenship of the litigant. This dialog helps to demonstrate how to keep the discussion focused on the correct issues and to avoid getting too complicated. If you are expecting to be called into a deposition by a U.S. attorney, we strongly suggest rehearsing the dialog below so that you know it inside and out:

Questions 1: Please raise your right hand so you can take the required oath.

Answer 1: I'm not allowed to swear an oath as a Christian. Jesus forbid the taking of oaths in Matt. 5:33-37. The courts have said that I can substitute an affirmation for an oath, and that I can freely prescribe whatever I want to go into the affirmation.

[8:222] Affirmation: A witness may testify by affirmation rather than under oath. An affirmation 'is simply a solemn undertaking to tell the truth.' [See FRE 603, Acv. Comm. Notes (1972); FRCP 43(d); and Ferguson v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue (5th Cir. 1991) 921 F.2d. 488, 489—affirmation is any form or statement acknowledging 'the necessity for telling the truth']

[8:224] 'Magic words' not required: A person who objects to taking an 'oath' may pledge to tell the truth by any 'form or statement which impresses upon the mind and conscience of a witness the necessity for telling the truth.' [See FRE 603, Adv. Comm. Notes (1972)—'no special verbal formula is required'; United States v. Looper (4th Cir. 1969), 419 F.2d. 1405, 1407; United States v. Ward (9th Cir. 1992), 989 F.2d. 1015, 1019] [Federal Civil Trials and Evidence (2005), Rutter Group, pp. 8C-1 to 8C-2]

Questions 2: Please provide or say your chosen affirmation

Answer 2: Here is my affirmation:

"I promise to tell the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth. Do not interrupt me at any point in this deposition or conveniently destroy or omit the exhibits I submit for inclusion in the record because you will cause me to commit subornation of perjury in violation of 18 U.S.C. §1622 and be guilty of witness tampering in violation of 18 U.S.C. §1512. This deposition constitutes religious and political beliefs and speech that are NOT factual and not admissible as evidence pursuant to Federal Rule of Evidence 610 if any portion of it is redacted or removed from evidence or not allowed to be examined or heard in its entirety by the jury or judge. It is ONLY true if the entire thing can be admitted and talked about and shown to the jury or fact finder at any trial that uses it.

Non-acceptance of this affirmation or refusal to admit all evidence submitted during this deposition into the record by the court shall constitute:

1. Breach of contract (this contract).
2. Compelled association with a foreign tribunal in violation of the First Amendment and in disrespect of the choice of citizenship and domicile of the deponent.
3. Evidence of unlawful duress upon the deponent.
4. Violation of this Copyright/User/Shrink wrap license agreement applying to all materials submitted or obtained herein.

The statements, testimony, and evidence herein provided impose a license agreement against all who use it. The deposer and the government, by using any portion of this deposition as evidence in a civil proceeding,, also agree to grant witness immunity to the deponent in the case of any future criminal proceeding which might use it pursuant to 18 U.S.C. §6002.

Any threats of retaliation or court sanctions or punishment because of this Affirmation shall also constitute corruptly threatening and tampering with a witness in violation of 18 U.S.C. §1512.

This affirmation is an extension of my right to contract guaranteed under Article I, Section 10 of the United States Constitution and may not be interfered with by any court of the United States.

I am appearing here today as a fiduciary, foreign ambassador, minister of a foreign state, and a foreign government, God's government on earth. The ONLY civil laws which apply to this entire proceeding are the laws of my domicile, being God's Kingdom and the Holy Bible New King James Version, pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 17\(b\) and Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 44.1. The Declaration of Independence says that all just powers of government derive from the consent of the governed, and the ONLY laws that I consent to are those found in the Holy Bible. Domicile is the method of describing the laws that a person voluntarily consents to, and the Bible forbids me to consent to the jurisdiction of any laws other than those found in the Holy Bible.

Questions 3: Where do you live

Answer 3: In my body.

Question 4: Where does your body sleep at night?

Answer 4: In a bed.

Question 5: Where is the bed geographically located?

Answer 5: On the territory of my Sovereign, who is God. The Bible says that God owns all the Heavens and the Earth, which leaves nothing for Caesar to rule. See Gen. 1:1, Psalm 89:11-13, Isaiah 45:12, Deut. 10:14. You're trying to create a false presumption that I have allegiance to you and must follow your laws because I live on your territory. It's not your territory. God is YOUR landlord, and if my God doesn't exist, then the government doesn't exist either because they are both religions and figments of people's imagination. You can't say that God doesn't exist without violating the First Amendment and disestablishing my religion and establishing your own substitute civil religion called "government". What you really mean to ask is what is my domicile because that is the origin of all of your civil jurisdiction over me, now isn't it?

Questions 6: Where is your domicile?

Answer 6: My domicile establishes to whom I owe exclusive allegiance, and that allegiance is exclusively to God, who is my ONLY King, Lawgiver, and Judge. Isaiah 33:22. The Bible forbids me to have allegiance to anyone but God or to nominate a King or Ruler to whom I owe allegiance or obedience. See 1 Sam. 8:4-8 and 1 Sam. 12. Consequently, the only place I can have a domicile is in God's Kingdom on Earth, and since God owns all the earth, I'm a citizen of Heaven and not any man-made government, which the Bible confirms in Phil. 3:20. You're trying to recruit me to commit idolatry by placing a civil ruler above my allegiance to God, which is the worst sin of all documented in the Bible and violates the first four commandments of the Ten Commandments. The Bible also says that I am a pilgrim and stranger and sojourner on earth who cannot be conformed to the earth, and therefore cannot have a domicile within any man-made government, but only God's government. Hebrews 11:13, 1 Pet. 2:1, Romans 12:2.

Questions 7: Are you a "U.S. citizen"?

Answer 7: Which of the three "United States" do you mean? The U.S. Supreme Court identified three distinct definitions of "United States" in Hooven & Allison Co. v. Evatt, 324 U.S. 652 \(1945\)? If there are three different "United States", then it follows that there are three different types of "U.S. citizens", now doesn't it?

Questions 8: You don't know which one of the three are most commonly used on government forms?

Answer 8: That's not the point here. You are the moving party and you have the burden of proof. You are the one who must define exactly what you mean so that I can give you an unambiguous answer that is consistent with prevailing law. I'm not going to do your job for you, and I'm not going to encourage injurious presumptions about what you mean by the audience who will undoubtedly read this deposition. Presumption is a biblical sin. See Numbers 15:30, New King James version. I won't sit here and help you manufacture presumptions about my status that will prejudice my God given rights.

Questions 9: Are you a "resident" of the United States?

Answer 9: A "resident" is an alien with a domicile within your territory. I don't have a domicile within any man-made government so I'm not a "resident" ANYWHERE. I am not an "alien" in relation to you because I was born here. That makes me a "national" pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1101\(a\)\(21\) but not a statutory "citizen" as defined in 8 U.S.C. §1401. All statutory citizens are persons born somewhere in the United States and who have a domicile on federal territory, and I'm NOT a statutory "citizen".

Questions 10: What kind of "citizen" are you?

Answer 10: I'm not a "citizen" or "resident" or "inhabitant" of any man-made government, and what all those statuses have in common is domicile within the jurisdiction of the state or forum. I already told you I'm a citizen of God's Kingdom and not Earth because that is what the Bible requires me to be as a Christian. Being a "citizen" implies a domicile within the jurisdiction of the government having general jurisdiction over the country or state of my birth. I can only be a "citizen" of one place at a time because I can only have a domicile in one place at a time. A human being without a domicile in the place that he is physically located is a transient foreigner, a stranger, and a stateless person in relation to the government of that place. That is what I am. I can't delegate any of my God-given sovereignty to you or nominate you as my protector by selecting a domicile within your jurisdiction because the Bible says I can't conduct commerce with any government and can't nominate a king or protector over or above me. Rev. 18:4, 1 Sam. 8:4-8 and 1 Sam. 12. The Bible forbids oaths, including perjury oaths, which means I'm not allowed to participate in any of your franchises or excise taxes, submit any of your forms, or sign any contracts with you that would cause a surrender of the sovereignty God gave me as his fiduciary and "public officer". See Matt. 5:33-37. I also can't serve as your "public officer", which is what all of your franchises do to me, because no man can serve two masters. Luke 16:13. I have no delegated authority from the sovereign I represent here today, being God, to act as your agent, fiduciary, or public officer, all of which is what a "taxpayer" is.

"You were bought at a price; do not become slaves of men [and remember that government is made up of men]."
[1 Cor. 7:23, Bible, NKJV]

"We ought to obey God rather than men."
[Acts 5:27-29, Bible, NKJV]

Questions 11: Who issued your passport?

Answer 11: The "United States of America" issued my passport, not the "United States". The Articles of Confederation identify the United States of America as the confederation of states of the Union, not the government that was created to serve them called the "United States". See United States v. Curtiss-Wright Export Corporation, 299 U.S. 304 (1936). The only thing you need to get a passport is allegiance to "United States" pursuant to 22 U.S.C. §212. The "United States" they mean in that statute isn't defined and it could have one of three different meanings. Since the specific meaning is not identified, I define "allegiance to the United States" as being allegiance to the people in the states of the Union and NOT the pagan government that serves them in the District of Criminals. No provision within the U.S. Code says that I have to be a statutory "U.S. citizen" pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1401 in order to obtain a passport or that possession of a passport infers or implies that I am a statutory "U.S. citizen". A passport is not proof of citizenship, but only proof of allegiance. The only citizenship status that carries with it exclusively allegiance is that of a "national" but not a "citizen" pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21). That and only that is what I am as far as citizenship. There is no basis to imply or infer anything more than that about my citizenship.

"...the only means by which an American can lawfully leave the country or return to it - absent a Presidentially granted exception - is with a passport... As a travel control document, a passport is both proof of identity and proof of allegiance to the United States. Even under a travel control statute, however, a passport remains in a sense a document by which the Government vouches for the bearer and for his conduct."
Haig v. Agee, [453 U.S. 280 (1981)]

Questions 12: Are you the "citizen of the United States" described in section 1 of the Fourteenth Amendment?

Answer 12: The term "United States" as used in the Constitution signifies the states of the Union and excludes federal territories and possessions.

*"The earliest case is that of Hepburn v. Ellzey, 2 Cranch, 445, 2 L.Ed. 332, in which this court held that, under that clause of the Constitution limiting the jurisdiction of the courts of the United States to controversies between citizens of different states, a citizen of the District of Columbia could not maintain an action in the circuit court of the United States. It was argued that the word 'state,' in that connection, was used simply to denote a distinct political society. 'But,' said the Chief Justice, 'as the act of Congress obviously used the word 'state' in reference to that term as used in the Constitution, it becomes necessary to inquire whether Columbia is a state in the sense of that instrument. The result of that examination is a conviction that the members of the American confederacy only are the states contemplated in the Constitution, . . . and excludes from the term the signification attached to it by writers on the law of nations. This case was followed in Barney v. Baltimore, 6 Wall. 280, 18 L.Ed. 825, and quite recently in Hooe v. Jamieson, 166 U.S. 395, 41 L.Ed. 1049, 17 Sup.Ct.Rep. 596. The same rule was applied to citizens of territories in New Orleans v. Winter, 1 Wheat. 91, 4 L.Ed. 44, in which an attempt was made to distinguish a territory from the District of Columbia. But it* was said that 'neither of them is a state in the sense in which that term is used in the Constitution.' In Scott v. Jones, 5 How. 343, 12 L.Ed. 181, and in Miners' Bank v. Iowa ex rel. District Prosecuting Attorney, 12 How. 1, 13 L.Ed. 867, it was held that under the judiciary act, permitting writs of error to the supreme court of a state in cases where the validity of a state statute is drawn in question, an act of a territorial legislature was not within the contemplation of Congress."

Therefore, the term “citizen of the United States” as used in section 1 of the Fourteenth Amendment implies a citizen of one of the 50 states of the Union who was NOT born within or domiciled within any federal territory or possession.

“The 1st section of the 14th article [Fourteenth Amendment], to which our attention is more specifically invited, opens with a definition of citizenship—not only citizenship of the United States[***], but citizenship of the states. No such definition was previously found in the Constitution, nor had any attempt been made to define it by act of Congress. It had been the occasion of much discussion in the courts, by the executive departments and in the public journals. It had been said by eminent judges that no man was a citizen of the United States[***] except as he was a citizen of one of the states composing the Union. Those therefore, who had been born and resided always in the District of Columbia or in the territories, though within the United States[*], were not citizens.”
[Slaughter-House Cases, 83 U.S. (16 Wall.) 36, 21 L.Ed. 394 (1873)]

“It is impossible to construe the words 'subject to the jurisdiction thereof,' in the opening sentence [of the Fourteenth Amendment, Section 1], as less comprehensive than the words 'within its jurisdiction,' in the concluding sentence of the same section; or to hold that persons 'within the jurisdiction' of one of the states of the Union are not 'subject to the jurisdiction of the United States[***].'”
U.S. v. Wong Kim Ark, [169 U.S. 649, 18 S.Ct. 456; 42 L.Ed. 890 (1898), emphasis added]

A constitutional citizen, which is what you are describing, is not a statutory “U.S. citizen” pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1401 and may not describe himself as a “citizen” of any kind on any federal form. If I have ever done that, I was in error and you should disregard any evidence in your possession that I might have done such a thing because now I know that it was wrong.

4.13.16.3 Arguing or Explaining Your Citizenship in Litigation Against the Government

A very common misconception about citizenship employed by IRS and Department of Justice Attorneys in the course of litigation is the following false statement:

“Constitutional citizens born within states of the Union and domiciled there are statutory “citizens of the United States” pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1401, the Internal Revenue Code at 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1(c), 26 U.S.C. §911.”

The reasons why the above is false are explained elsewhere in this document. An example of such false statements is found in the Department of Justice Criminal Tax Manual (1994), Section 40.05[7]:

40.05[7] Defendant Not A "Person" or "Citizen"; District Court Lacks Jurisdiction Over Non-Persons and State Citizens

40.05[7][a] Generally

Another popular protester argument is the contention that the protester is not subject to federal law because he or she is not a citizen of the United States, but a citizen of a particular "sovereign" state. This argument seems to be based on an erroneous interpretation of 26 U.S.C. §3121(e)(2), which states in part: "The term 'United States' when used in a geographical sense includes the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, Guam, and American Samoa." The "not a citizen" assertion directly contradicts the Fourteenth Amendment, which states "all persons born or naturalized in the United States, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the United States and of the state wherein they reside." The argument has been rejected time and again by the courts. See United States v. Cooper, 170 F.3d. 691, 691(7th Cir. 1999) (imposed sanctions on tax protester defendant making "frivolous squared" argument that only residents of Washington, D.C. and other federal enclaves are citizens of United States and subject to federal tax laws); United States v. Mundt, 29 F.3d. 233, 237 (6th Cir. 1994) (rejected "patently frivolous" argument that defendant was not a resident of any "federal zone" and therefore not subject to federal income tax laws); United States v. Hilgefjord, 7 F.3d. 1340, 1342 (7th Cir. 1993) (rejected "shop worn" argument that defendant is a citizen of the "Indiana State Republic" and therefore an alien beyond the jurisdictional reach of the federal courts); United States v. Gerads, 999 F.2d. 1255, 1256-57 (8th Cir. 1993) (imposed $1500 sanction for frivolous appeal based on argument that defendants were not citizens of the United States but instead "Free Citizens of the Republic of Minnesota" not subject to taxation); *United States v. Notice the self-serving and devious "word or art" games and "word tricks" played by the Dept. of Injustice in the above:

1. They deliberately don't show you the WHOLE definition in 26 U.S.C. §3121(e), which would open up a HUGE can of worms that they could never explain in a way that is consistent with everything that people know other than the way it is explained here.
2. They FALSELY and PREJUDICIALLY "presume" that there is no separation of powers between federal territory and states of the Union, which is a violation of your rights and Treason punishable by death. The separation of powers is the very foundation of the Constitution, in fact. See:

Government Conspiracy to Destroy the Separation of Powers, Form #05.023
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>
3. They deliberately refuse to recognize that the context in which the term "United States" is used determines its meaning.
4. They deliberately refuse to recognize that there are THREE definitions of the term "United States" according to the U.S. Supreme Court.
5. They deliberately refuse to reconcile which of the three mutually exclusive and distinct definitions of "United States" applies in each separate context and WHY they apply based on the statutes they seek to enforce.
6. They deliberately refuse to recognize or admit that the term "United States" as used in the Constitution includes states of the Union and excludes federal territory.
7. They deliberately refuse to apply the rules of statutory construction to determine what is "included" within the definition of "United States" found in 26 U.S.C. §3121(e)(2). They don't want to admit that the definition is ALL inclusive and limiting, because then they couldn't collect any tax, even though it is.

TITLE 26 > Subtitle C > CHAPTER 21 > Subchapter C > § 3121
§ 3121. Definitions

(e) State, United States, and citizen

For purposes of this chapter—

(1) State

The term "State" includes the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, Guam, and American Samoa. [WHERE are the states of the Union?]

(2) United States

The term "United States" when used in a geographical sense includes the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, Guam, and American Samoa. [WHERE are the states of the Union?]

"When a statute includes an explicit definition, we must follow that definition, even if it varies from that term's ordinary meaning. Meese v. Keene, 481 U.S. 465, 484-485 (1987) ("It is axiomatic that the statutory definition of the term excludes unstated meanings of that term"); Colautti v. Franklin, 439 U.S. at 392-393, n. 10 ("As a rule, a definition which declares what a term "means" . . . excludes any meaning that is not stated"); Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Lenroot, 323 U.S. 490, 502 (1945) ; Fox v. Standard Oil Co. of N.J., 294 U.S. 87, 95-96 (1935) (Cardozo, J.); see also 2A N. Singer, Sutherland on Statutes and Statutory Construction § 47.07, p. 152, and n. 10 (5th ed. 1992) (collecting cases). That is to say, the statute, read "as a whole," post at 998 [530 U.S. 943] (THOMAS, J., dissenting), leads the reader to a definition. That definition does not include the Attorney General's restriction -- "the child up to the head." Its words, "substantial portion," indicate the contrary."

1 [\[Stenberg v. Carhart, 530 U.S. 914 \(2000\)\]](#)

2 "It is axiomatic that the statutory definition of the term excludes unstated meanings of that term. Colautti v.
 3 Franklin, 439 U.S. 379, 392, and n. 10 (1979). Congress' use of the term "propaganda" in this statute, as indeed
 4 in other legislation, has no pejorative connotation. As judges, it is our duty to [481 U.S. 485] construe
 5 legislation as it is written, not as it might be read by a layman, or as it might be understood by someone who 6 has not even read it."
 7 [Meese v. Keene, 481 U.S. 465, 484 (1987)]

8 "As a rule, `a definition which declares what a term "means" . . . excludes any meaning that is not stated"
 9 [Colautti v. Franklin, 439 U.S. 379 (1979), n. 10]

10 Therefore, if you are going to argue citizenship in federal court, we STRONGLY suggest the following lessons learned by 11 reading the Department of Justice Criminal Tax Manual article above:

- 12 1. Include all the language contained in the following in your pleadings:

Rules of Presumption and Statutory Interpretation, Litigation Tool #01.006
<http://sedm.org/Litigation/LitIndex.htm>

- 13 2. If someone from the government asks you whether you are a "citizen of the United States" or a "U.S. citizen":
 14 2.1. Cite the three definitions of the "United States" explained by the Supreme Court and then ask them to identify 15 which of the three definitions of "U.S." they mean. Tell them they can choose ONLY one of the definitions.
 16 2.1.1. The COUNTRY "United States*"
 17 2.1.2. Federal territory and no part of any state of the Union "United States**"
 18 2.1.3. States of the Union and no part of federal territory "United States***"
 19 2.2. Ask them WHICH of the three types of statutory citizenship do they mean in Title 8 of the U.S. Code and tell
 20 them they can only choose ONE:
 21 2.2.1. 8 U.S.C. §1401 statutory "citizen of the United States**". Born in and domiciled on a federal territory and 22 possession and NOT a state of the Union.
 23 2.2.2. 8 U.S.C. §1408 and 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22)(B) statutory "national of the United States**". Born in and 24 domiciled in American Samoa or Swains Island.
 25 2.2.3. 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) state national. Born in and domiciled in a state of the Union and not subject to 26 federal legislative jurisdiction but only subject to political jurisdiction.
 27 2.3. Hand them the following short form printed on double-sided paper and signed by you. Go to section 7 and point
 28 to the "national" status in diagram. Tell them you want this in the court record or administrative record and that 29 they agree with it if they can't prove it wrong with evidence.

Citizenship, Domicile, and Tax Status Options, Form #10.003
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

30 If you want more details on how to field questions about your citizenship, fill out government forms describing your 31 citizenship, or rebut arguments that you are wrong about your citizenship, we recommend sections 11 through 13 of the 32 following:

Why You are a "national", "state national", and Constitutional but not Statutory Citizen, Form #05.006
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

- 33 3. If your opponent won't answer the above questions, then forcefully accuse him of engaging in TREASON by trying to 34 destroy the separation of powers that is the foundation of the United States Constitution. Tell them you won't help
 35 them engage in treason or undermine the main protection for your constitutional rights, which the Supreme Court said
 36 comes from the separation of powers. Then direct them at the following document that proves the existence of such 37 TREASON.

Government Conspiracy to Destroy the Separation of Powers, Form #05.023
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

- 38 4. Every time you discuss citizenship with a government representative, emphasize the three definitions of the "United 39 States" explained by the Supreme Court and that respecting and properly applying these definitions consistently is how 40 we respect and preserve the separation of powers.
 41 5. Admit to being a constitutional "citizen of the United States****" but not a statutory "citizen of the United States**".
 42 This will invalidate almost all the case law they cite and force them to expose their presumptions about WHICH 43 "United States" they are trying to corn-hole you into.
 44 6. Emphasize that the context in which the term "United States" is used determines WHICH of the three definitions
 45 applies and that there are two main contexts.

1 "It is clear that Congress, as a legislative body, exercise two species of legislative power: the one, limited as to
2 its objects, but extending all over the Union: the other, an absolute, exclusive legislative power over the District
3 of Columbia. The preliminary inquiry in the case now before the Court, is, by virtue of which of these
4 authorities was the law in question passed?"

5 [Cohens v. Virginia, 19 U.S. 264, 6 Wheat. 265; 5 L.Ed. 257 \(1821\)]

6 6.1. The Constitution: states of the Union and no part of federal territory. This is the "Federal government"

7 6.2. Federal statutory law: Community property of the states that includes federal territory and possession that is no
8 party of any state of the Union. This is the "National government".

9 7. Emphasize that you can only be a "citizen" in ONE of the TWO unique geographical places above at a time because 10 you can only have a domicile in ONE of the two places at a time. Another way of saying this is that you can only have 11 allegiance to ONE MASTER at a time and won't serve two masters, and domicile is based on allegiance.

12 "domicile. A person's legal home. That place where a man has his true, fixed, and permanent home and 13 principal establishment, and to which whenever he is absent he has the intention of returning. Smith v. Smith,
14 206 Pa.Super. 310, 213 A.2d. 94. Generally, physical presence within a state and the intention to make it one's
15 home are the requisites of establishing a "domicile" therein. The permanent residence of a person or the place
16 to which he intends to return even though he may actually reside elsewhere. A person may have more than one
17 residence but only one domicile. The legal domicile of a person is important since it, rather than the actual
18 residence, often controls the jurisdiction of the taxing authorities and determines where a person may
19 exercise the privilege of voting and other legal rights and privileges."

20 [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 485]

21 "Thus, the Court has frequently held that domicile or residence, more substantial than mere presence in
22 transit or sojourn, is an adequate basis for taxation, including income, property, and death taxes. Since the
23 Fourteenth Amendment makes one a citizen of the state wherein he resides, the fact of residence creates
24 universally reciprocal duties of protection by the state and of allegiance and support by the citizen. The latter
25 obviously includes a duty to pay taxes, and their nature and measure is largely a political matter. Of course,
26 the situs of property may tax it regardless of the citizenship, domicile, or residence of the owner, the most 27 obvious illustration being a tax on realty laid by the state in which the realty is located."

28 [Miller Brothers Co. v. Maryland, 347 U.S. 340 (1954) ]

29 8. Emphasize that it is a violation of due process of law and an injury to your rights for anyone to PRESUME anything
30 about which definition of "United States" applies in a given context or which type of "citizen" you are.
31 EVERYTHING must be supported with evidence as we have done here.

32 (1) [8:4993] Conclusive presumptions affecting protected interests: A conclusive presumption may be 33 defeated where its application would impair a party's constitutionally-protected liberty or property interests. In 34 such cases, conclusive presumptions have been held to violate a party's due process and equal protection
35 rights. [Vlandis v. Kline (1973) 412 U.S. 441, 449, 93 S.Ct. 2230, 2235; Cleveland Bd. of Ed. v. LaFleur
36 (1974) 414 US 632, 639-640, 94 S.Ct. 1208, 1215-presumption under Illinois law that unmarried fathers are 37 unfit violates process]

38 [Rutter Group Practice Guide-Federal Civil Trials and Evidence, paragraph 8:4993, page 8K-34]

39 9. Emphasize that applying the CORRECT definition is THE MOST IMPORTANT JOB of the court, as admitted by the 40 U.S. Supreme Court, in order to maintain the separation of powers between the federal zone and the states of the 41 Union, and thereby protect your rights:

42 "The idea prevails with some, indeed it has found expression in arguments at the bar, that we have in this
43 country substantially two national governments; one to be maintained under the Constitution, with all of its
44 restrictions; the other to be maintained by Congress outside the independently of that instrument, by exercising
45 such powers [of absolutism] as other nations of the earth are accustomed to.. I take leave to say that, if the
46 principles thus announced should ever receive the sanction of a majority of this court, a radical and
47 mischievous change in our system of government will result. We will, in that event, pass from the era of
48 constitutional liberty guarded and protected by a written constitution into an era of legislative absolutism.. It
49 will be an evil day for American liberty if the theory of a government outside the supreme law of the land
50 finds lodgment in our constitutional jurisprudence. No higher duty rests upon this court than to exert its full
51 authority to prevent all violation of the principles of the Constitution."

52 [Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 (1901)]

53 10. Emphasize that anything your opponent does not rebut with evidence under penalty of perjury is admitted pursuant to 54 Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 8(b)(6) and then serve them with a Notice of Default on the court record of what they 55 have admitted to by their omission in denying.

56 11. Focus on WHICH "United States" is implied in the definitions within the statute being enforced.

12. Avoid words that are not used in statutes, such as “state citizen” or “sovereign citizen” or “natural born citizen”, etc. because they aren’t defined and divert attention away from the core definitions themselves.
13. Rationally apply the rules of statutory construction so that your opponent can’t use verbicide or word tricks to wiggle out of the statutory definitions with the word “includes”. See:
- Meaning of the Words “includes” and “including”*, Form #05.014
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>
14. State that all the cases cited in the Criminal Tax Manual are inapposite, because:
- 14.1. You aren’t arguing whether you are a “citizen of the United States”, but whether you are a STATUTORY “citizen of the United States”.
- 14.2. They don’t address the distinctions between the statutory and constitutional definitions nor do they consistently apply the rules of statutory construction.
15. Emphasize that a refusal to stick with the legal definitions and include only what is expressly stated and not “presume” or read anything into it that isn’t there is an attempt to destroy the separation of powers and engage in a conspiracy against your Constitutionally protected rights.

 [Senator Sam Ervin, during Watergate hearing]

 [Confucius (551 BCE - 479 BCE) Chinese thinker and social philosopher]

4.13.16.4 Federal court statutory remedies for those who are “state nationals” injured by government

State nationals domiciled in a constitutional state have RIGHTS protected by the constitution. Statutory “citizens” domiciled on federal territory have only PRIVILEGES. If you are a state national who is being COMPELLED to illegally impersonate a public officer called a STATUTORY “citizen”, the following remedies are provided to protect your INALIENABLE CONSTITUTIONAL RIGHTS as a state national from being converted into STATUTORY PRIVILEGES.

1. If you are “denied a right or privilege as a national of the United States*” then you can sue under 8 U.S.C. §1503(a) and 8 U.S.C. §1252. See Hassan v. Holder, Civil Case No 10-00970 and Raya v. Clinton, 703 F.Supp.2d. 569 (2010). Under this statute:
  - 1.1. 8 U.S.C. §1408 “non-citizen nationals of the United States**” in American Samoa and Swain’s Island would sue for deprivation of a PRIVILEGE.
  - 1.2. State nationals domiciled outside the statutory “United States” but physically present on federal territory could sue for deprivation of a constitutional right.
2. If you are a “national of the United States*” who is victimized by acts of international or domestic terrorism, you can sue under 18 U.S.C. §2333. See also Boim v. Quranic Literacy Institute, 340 F.Supp.2d. 885 (2004).

All the above cases cited refer to people born in constitutional states as “nationals of the United States” under Title 8 of the U.S. Code. Therefore, they protect BOTH non-citizen nationals under 8 U.S.C. §1408 and state nationals domiciled outside the federal zone and in a state of the Union.

4.13.17 Expatriation

1 [Tomoya Kawakita v. United States, 190 F.2d. 506 (1951)]

2 4.13.17.1 Definition

3 Expatriation is the process of eliminating one's nationality [e.g. "U.S. National"] but not necessarily one's "U.S. citizen"
4 status under federal statutes. You would never learn this by reading any legal dictionary we could find, because the 5 government simply doesn't want you to know this! Here is the definition from the most popular legal dictionary:

6 "expatriation. The voluntary act of abandoning or renouncing one's country, and becoming the citizen or 7 subject of another."
8 [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 576]

9 Notice they didn't say a word about "nationality" and "allegiance" in the above definition because the lawyers who wrote
10 this don't want their "tax slaves" to know how to escape the federal plantation! The chains that bind the slaves to the 11 plantation are deceitful "words of art" found in the laws and doctrines of the Pharisees that keep people from learning the 12 truth. The Bible warned us this would happen and we shouldn't be surprised:

13 Then Jesus said to them, "Take heed and beware of the leaven [teachings, laws, doctrine, and publications] of 14 the Pharisees [lawyers] and the Sadducees." ....How is it you do not understand that I did not speak to you
15 concerning bread?—but to beware of the leaven of the Pharisees and the Sadducees." Then they understood
16 that He did not tell them to beware of the leaven of bread, but of the doctrine [legal dictionaries, laws, and 17 teachings] of the Pharisees and Sadducees.
18 [Matt. 16:6,11,12; Bible, NKJV]

19 The supreme court has also said that certain actions other than explicit formal expatriation may result in the equivalent of 20 expatriation:

21 "It has long been recognized that citizenship may not only be voluntarily renounced through exercise of the 22 right of expatriation, but also by other actions in derogation of undivided allegiance to this country. While 23 the essential qualities of the citizen-state relationship under our Constitution preclude the exercise of 24 governmental power to divest United States citizenship, the establishment of that relationship did not impair the 25 principle that conduct of a citizen showing a voluntary transfer of allegiance is an abandonment of 26 citizenship. Nearly all sovereignties recognize that acquisition of foreign nationality ordinarily shows a
27 renunciation of citizenship. Nor is this the only act by which the citizen may show a voluntary abandonment
28 of his citizenship. Any action by which he manifests allegiance to a foreign state may be so inconsistent with 29 the retention of citizenship as to result in loss of that status. In recognizing the consequence of such action,
30 the Government is not taking away United States citizenship to implement its general regulatory powers, for, as 31 previously indicated, in my judgment, citizenship is immune from divestment under these [356 U.S. 69] powers.
32 Rather, the Government is simply giving formal recognition to the inevitable consequence of the citizen's own
33 voluntary surrender of his citizenship."
34 [Perez v. Brownell, 356 U.S. 44 (1958)]

35 4.13.17.2 Right of expatriation

36 The courts have ruled that expatriation is a natural right essential to the protection of one's liberty:

37 "Almost a century ago, Congress declared that "the right of expatriation [including expatriation from the 38 District of Columbia or "U.S. Inc", the corporation] is a natural and inherent right of all people, indispensable
39 to the enjoyment of the rights of life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness," and decreed that "any declaration,
40 instruction, opinion, order, or decision of any officers of this government which denies, restricts, impairs, or 41 questions the right of expatriation, is hereby declared inconsistent with the fundamental principles of this 42 government." 15 Stat. 223-224 (1868), R.S. §1999, 8 U.S.C. § 800 (1940).<sup>188</sup> Although designed to apply
43 especially to the rights of immigrants to shed their foreign nationalities, that Act of Congress "is also broad 44 enough to cover, and does cover, the corresponding natural and inherent right of American citizens to 45 expatriate themselves." Savorgnan v. United States, 1950, 338 U.S. 491, 498 note 11, 70 S.Ct. 292, 296, 94
46 L.Ed. 287.<sup>189</sup> The Supreme Court has held that the Citizenship Act of 1907 and the Nationality Act of 1940 "are 47 to be read in the light of the declaration of policy favoring freedom of expatriation which stands unrepealed."
48 Id., 338 U.S. at pages 498-499, 70 S.Ct. at page 296. That same light, I think, illuminates 22 U.S.C.A. § 211a
49 and 8 U.S.C.A. § 1185."

As we stated earlier in section 4.10, your citizenship/nationality status is voluntary according to the supreme Court<sup>190</sup>, which means that any type of citizenship or nationality status you may have may be voluntarily abandoned or renounced by you at any time without the permission of anyone in the government, as long as you follow the prescribed procedures in place if there are any. The U.S. supreme Court has also said that the citizenship “contract” is a one way contract. Once the government makes this contract with you, they cannot renege on it and take away your citizenship or nationality because otherwise they could use this ability to politically persecute you and exile you, as so many other countries do throughout the world to their dissenters. Only you can therefore initiate the process of losing your privileged “U.S. citizenship” status as a voluntary act not under compulsion.

“In our country the people are sovereign and the Government cannot sever its relationship to the people by taking away their citizenship. Our Constitution governs us and we must never forget that our Constitution limits the Government to those powers specifically granted or those that are necessary and proper to carry out the specifically granted ones. The Constitution, of course, grants Congress no express power to strip people of their citizenship, whether in the exercise of the implied power to regulate foreign affairs or in the exercise of any specifically granted power.

“The entire legislative history of the 1868 Act makes it abundantly clear that there was a strong feeling in the Congress that the only way the citizenship it conferred could be lost was by the voluntary renunciation or abandonment by the citizen himself. And this was the unequivocal statement of the Court in the case of United States v. Wong Kim Ark.”
[Afroyim v. Rusk, 387 U.S. 253, 87 S.Ct. 1660 (1967)]

4.13.17.3 Compelled Expatriation as a punishment for a crime

Likewise, the supreme Court of the United States has also ruled that the government may not pass a penal law for which the punishment is the forfeiture of U.S. citizenship:

“Citizenship is not a license that expires upon misbehavior. The duties of citizenship are numerous, and the discharge of many of these obligations is essential to the security and well-being of the Nation. The citizen who fails to pay his taxes or to abide by the laws safeguarding the integrity of elections deals a dangerous blow to his country. But could a citizen be deprived of his nationality for evading these basic responsibilities of citizenship? In time of war the citizen's duties include not only the military defense of the Nation but also full participation in the manifold activities of the civilian ranks. Failure to perform any of these obligations may cause the Nation serious injury, and, in appropriate circumstances, the punishing power is available to deal with derelictions of duty. But citizenship is not lost every time a duty of citizenship is shirked. And the deprivation of citizenship [356 U.S. 86, 93] is not a weapon that the Government may use to express its displeasure at a citizen's conduct, however reprehensible that conduct may be. As long as a person does not voluntarily renounce or abandon his citizenship, and this petitioner has done neither, I believe his fundamental right of citizenship is secure. On this ground alone the judgment in this case should be reversed.

“We believe, as did Chief Judge Clark in the court below, 33 that use of denationalization as a punishment is barred by the Eighth Amendment. There may be involved no physical mistreatment, no primitive torture. There is instead the total destruction of the individual's status in organized society. It is a form of punishment more primitive than torture, for it destroys for the individual the political existence that was centuries in the development. The punishment strips the citizen of his status in the national and international political community. His very existence is at the sufferance of the country in which he happens to find himself. While any one country may accord him some rights, and presumably as long as he remained in this country he would enjoy the limited rights of an alien, no country need do so because he is stateless. Furthermore, his enjoyment of even the limited rights of an alien might be subject to termination [356 U.S. 86, 102] at any time by reason of deportation. 34 In short, the expatriate has lost the right to have rights.

“This punishment is offensive to cardinal principles for which the Constitution stands. It subjects the individual to a fate of ever-increasing fear and distress. He knows not what discriminations may be established against him, what proscriptions may be directed against him, and when and for what cause his existence in his native land may be terminated. He may be subject to banishment, a fate universally decried by civilized people. He is stateless, a condition deplored in the international community of democracies. 35 It is no answer to suggest that all the disastrous consequences of this fate may not be brought to bear on a stateless person. The threat makes the punishment obnoxious. 36

"The civilized nations of the world are in virtual unanimity that statelessness is not to be imposed as punishment for crime. It is true that several countries prescribe expatriation in the event that their nationals engage in conduct in derogation of native allegiance. 37 Even statutes of this sort are generally applicable primarily [356 U.S. 86, 103] to naturalized citizens. But use of denationalization as punishment for crime is an entirely different matter. The United Nations' survey of the nationality laws of 84 nations of the world reveals that only two countries, the Philippines and Turkey, impose denationalization as a penalty for desertion. 38 In this country the Eighth Amendment forbids this to be done.

"In concluding as we do that the Eighth Amendment forbids Congress to punish by taking away citizenship, we are mindful of the gravity of the issue inevitably raised whenever the constitutionality of an Act of the National Legislature is challenged. No member of the Court believes that in this case the statute before us can be construed to avoid the issue of constitutionality. That issue confronts us, and the task of resolving it is inescapably ours. This task requires the exercise of judgment, not the reliance upon personal preferences. Courts must not consider the wisdom of statutes but neither can they sanction as being merely unwise that which the Constitution forbids. "

4.13.17.4 Amending your citizenship status to regain your rights: Don't expatriate!

Because all "U.S. citizens" are also "nationals" under 8 U.S.C. §1401 (see the beginning of that section, which says "The following shall be nationals and citizens of the United States at birth:"), then if you are a privileged statutory "U.S. citizen" under 8 U.S.C. §1401, you actually have two aspects of your statutory citizenship that you can renounce or surrender voluntarily. Title 8, Chapter 12, Subchapter III, Part III define the rules for expatriating your nationality, but conspicuously say nothing about how to eliminating only one's privileged "U.S. citizen" status without removing your "national" status. Knowing what we know now about our covetous politicians and how they try to use your privileged "U.S. citizen" status as a justification to have jurisdiction over you and control and tax you, does it then surprise you that that the Master won't tell the slaves how to loose their chains? We showed earlier in section 4.13.3 that the only difference between a "citizen" and a "national" is one's "domicile". We will also see in section 5.4.5 that domicile is voluntary. Therefore, the primary vehicle by which one can change their status from that of a "citizen" to a "national but not a citizen" is to voluntarily change one's legal domicile.

You will find that there is a lot of confusion in the freedom community over the distinctions between "U.S. citizen" and "national" and "state national" status, and the government likes to add as much to this confusion as they can so they can keep you from gaining your freedom. It is quite common for "promoters" to try to tell you that you should renounce your nationality to become a "state citizen" to regain your sovereignty and stop paying income taxes and they will try to sell you an "expatriation" package for upwards of $2,500 that will eliminate your nationality. However, you don't always need to eliminate your "national" status in order to not be a federal "U.S. citizen" under federal statutes and this point is so very important that we repeat it in several places in this book. For example, Eddie Kahn used to try to sell people an expatriation package for $495 that he said would eliminate their nationality, but you don't want to do this if you work for the government or the military and hold a security clearance. Doing this can be disastrous because you can't hold a federal security clearance without being either a "U.S. citizen" or a "national"! If you are an officer in the U.S. military, you also must forfeit your commission (10 U.S.C. §532(a)(1)) and your retirement benefits (see Chapter 6 of DOD 7000.14-R, Volume 7B, "Military Pay Policy and Procedures for Retired Pay." Chapter 6 is "Foreign Citizenship after Retirement.") if you renounce your "U.S. citizen" status! Because some people confuse "U.S. citizen" status with "national" status, they therefore get themselves in a heap of trouble. Another way they get themselves in trouble is 26 U.S.C. §877 establishes a penalty for "Expatriation to avoid tax", and remember that expatriation, in that context means loss of nationality and not loss of "U.S. citizen" status. The government can't penalize you for surrendering your "U.S. citizen" status under this section but they definitely try to penalize you for losing your nationality! Watch out because you don't want to make more trouble for yourself!

If you want to have your liberties back, the only way you will get them back is to abandon or renounce your privileged federal "U.S. citizen" status under 8 U.S.C. §1401 to become a "national but not a citizen" under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21). As we just said earlier, this process is effected mainly by changing your legal domicile. It should come as no surprise that the federal government will give you absolutely no help and no law or administrative procedure that tells you how to do this because they don't quite frankly want you doing it! They want everyone to be tax slaves and subject citizens living on the federal plantation, and they are NOT going to help the slaves leave the federal plantation voluntarily. Here are some of the potent roadblocks they have put in your way to prevent you from regaining your freedom and returning to your de jure state as a "national but not a citizen" under federal law:

1. They have invented a new word for “domicile” called “residence”, which may only be used to describe “aliens” and not nationals, and encouraged the misuse of the word to prejudice the rights of citizens. See section 4.10 earlier and section 5.4.5 later.
2. They have disguised the fact that you are choosing a “domicile” on government forms, by giving it a new name called “permanent address”, “permanent residence”, etc. instead of simply “domicile”.
3. They have used the “word of art” called “United States” on government forms without defining its true meaning, which means the federal zone. Thus, they have encouraged false presumption about the use of the word that ultimately makes you into a privileged alien “resident” domiciled in the federal zone.
4. They have defined the word “domicile” in the legal dictionary to remove the requirement of “consent” and replace it with “intent”. This is not consistent with the purpose behind why the word domicile was established to begin with, which was to give people a choice and require their consent in choosing the legal system under which they want to be protected. See section 5.4.5 later.
5. They have created misleading change of address forms and voter registrations to send to the DMV, tax authorities, etc. that use the word “residence” instead of “domicile” and not defined the meaning of the word on their forms, knowing full well that they were making the applicant into privileged aliens in the process. See: <http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/Forms/Emancipation/ChangeOfAddressAttachment.htm>.
6. They have refused to directly define the term “resident” in any IRS publication, because they don’t want people to know that only aliens with a domicile in the District of Columbia can be “residents” under the Internal Revenue Code. See section 4.10 earlier for details.
7. They have tried to intimidate, harass, and confuse people who send citizenship amendment paperwork to the attorney general or who try to get their passport updated. Some people who have sent their passport to the Department of State to get the “U.S. National” endorsement added to page 24 have had the passport held hostage for months and been the recipients of threatening and harassing correspondence from the Dept. of State that contains frivolous arguments that don’t address the issues in the amendment request letter.
8. Those who write the Dept. of State and talk with Sharon Palmer-Royston (202-261-8314), the legal affairs supervisor there, about their passport are basically lied to and she refuses to address any of the issues appearing in:

Tax Deposition Questions, Section 14, Family Guardian Fellowship
<http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/Forms/Discovery/Deposition/Section%2014.htm>

The only reason the federal government might think you are a statutory “U.S. citizen” under 8 U.S.C. §1401 to begin with is because of forms you filled out incorrectly over your lifetime and the incorrect “presumptions” that they produce which bias your rights. These presumptions in most cases are documented in the paperwork they maintain about you, such as passport applications, voter registrations, driver’s license applications, and tax returns, etc. You are and always have been a “national” or a “state national”. The only thing you have ever needed to do to maintain that status is change the government’s paperwork which you submitted in most cases, to properly reflect that fact. Whether you change or amend government records from a statutory “U.S. citizen” under 8 U.S.C. §1401 to being either a “U.S. national” under 8 U.S.C. §1408 or a “national” under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) depends on your needs and is up to you. A detailed procedure appears in section 2.5.3.13 of the Sovereignty Forms and Instructions Manual, Form #10.005 for eliminating your “U.S. citizen” status but not your “national” status. If you want to expatriate your “nationality” instead of remove your domicile from the federal zone to abandon your “U.S. citizen” status, the procedure is the same but the document is slightly different. It was difficult to develop this procedure because as we just pointed out, the government gives you absolutely no help, no administrative procedure, no regulations, and no laws that tell you how to do this for obvious reasons. There is a sample document that corrects government records documenting your true citizenship status by removing presumptions that you are a privileged “U.S. citizen” under 8 U.S.C. §1401 below:

Legal Notice of Change in Domicile/Citizenship Records and Divorce from the United States, Form #10.001
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

We don’t provide forms or procedures for expatriating your “nationality” or “national” status under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22) because we have never had an occasion to do it and we don’t recommend it to anyone anyway.

WARNING!: Citizenship status is NOT the primary factor in determining your tax liability. Instead, the following factors primarily determine one's tax liability under Subtitle A of the Internal Revenue Code:

1. Your domicile. See section 5.4.19 entitled "Why all income taxes are based on domicile and are voluntary because domicile is voluntary."
2. The taxable activity you engage in. See sections 5.6.13 through 5.6.13.11.

Changing one's citizenship status DOES NOT result in eliminating an existing liability for 1040 income taxes under Subtitle A of the Internal Revenue Code. We have never made any claim otherwise in any of our materials. The only affect that correcting government records describing one's citizenship can have is:

1. Restoring one's sovereignty. Under the Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act (F.S.I.A.), 28 U.S.C. §1603\(b\) and under 28 U.S.C. §1332\(c\) and (d), a legal person cannot be classified as an agency or instrumentality of a foreign state if they are a citizen of a [federal] state of the United States, meaning a person born in a federal territory, possession, or the District of Columbia as defined in 4 U.S.C. §110\(d\). This conclusion is also confirmed on the Department of State website at: http://travel.state.gov/law/info/judicial/judicial\_693.html
2. Removing oneself from some aspect of federal legislative jurisdiction. A "citizen" under federal law, is defined as a person subject to federal jurisdiction. This is covered in Great IRS Hoax, section 4.11.2, for instance.
3. Making sure that a person's domicile cannot be involuntarily moved to the District of Columbia. Both 26 U.S.C. §7701\(a\)\(39\) or 26 U.S.C. §7408\(d\) allow that a person who is a "citizen" or a "resident" under the Internal Revenue Code, should be treated as having a domicile in the District of Columbia for the purposes of federal jurisdiction. Since kidnapping is illegal under 18 U.S.C. §1201, then a person who is not a "citizen or resident" under federal law needs to take extraordinary efforts to ensure that their citizenship is not misunderstood or misconstrued by the federal government by going back and making sure that all federal forms which indicate one's citizenship status are truthful and unambiguous. The process of correcting government forms relating to citizenship is described in section 2.5.3.13 of the Sovereignty Forms and Instructions Manual, Form #10.005.

The reason why the last item above is very important is that the term "United States" is defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701\(a\)\(9\) and (a)(10) as being limited to the District of Columbia and the term is not enlarged elsewhere under Subtitle A of the Code. If it ain't defined anywhere in the code to include states of the Union, then under the rule of statutory construction, "Expressio unius, exclusio alterius", what is not specifically included may be excluded by implication. Therefore, if a person is either a "citizen" or a "resident" under federal law, then they are treated as domiciliaries of the main place where Subtitle A of the Internal Revenue Code applies, which is the District of Columbia, and become the proper subjects of the code.

1 When you renounce your privileged "U.S. citizen" status to become a nonprivileged "national", you must keep the
2 following very important considerations in mind:

- 3 1. Before you institute the process of correcting government records to eliminate false presumptions of federal "U.S.
4 citizen" status under 8 U.S.C. §1401, you should read and understand this chapter completely, so the government can't 5 pull any fast ones on you during the process.
- 6 2. Ensure that you have evidence and documentation you can use in court if you ever need it of every step you take in the 7 renunciation process. You may need it later if you ever end up in court. For instance, everything you send should be
8 notarized with a proof of service and you should keep the original copy and send the copy to the government. Original
9 documents are easier to get admitted into evidence in court than are photocopies, and this will become very important
10 in the future if you ever have to litigate over your citizenship status.
- 11 3. Be careful! The government will go fishing for any excuse they can to call you an 8 U.S.C. §1401 federal "U.S.
12 citizen" because that is how they draw you into their jurisdictional spider web and suck your blood dry. You should
13 never admit to ever having been a "U.S. citizen" either verbally or in writing, and every piece of paper they show either
14 you or a court claiming or indicating that you are a "U.S. citizen" should be rebutted as being mistaken, fraudulent, and 15 submitted under duress. For instance, if they pull out an old passport application in which you claimed to be a "U.S.
16 CITIZEN", then you should correct them by saying you are a "national" and say that you were mistaken and
17 misinformed at the time. Then show them your renunciation document and your birth certificate clearly showing that 18 you were not born on federal land. If you don't rebut such evidence or offer counter-evidence, then the court and the 19 jury will erroneously assume that you agree with your opponent that you are a "U.S. citizen", which would be a disaster. Shift the burden of proving that you are a “U.S. citizen” to them when you can. Insist that NOTHING be presumed and everything be proven so that your due process rights under the Fifth and Sixth Amendments are respected.

4. You must abandon your 8 U.S.C. §1401 federal “U.S. citizen” status completely voluntarily and without any kind of duress or compulsion. This means you can’t be doing it for financial reasons, for instance, to avoid taxes because you are in a bind, or the courts will not honor your renunciation. Never admit to being under financial duress in renouncing citizenship, even if you indeed are.
5. You should never tell the government you are renouncing your “nationality” in order to avoid paying taxes, because then they may try to incorrectly apply 26 U.S.C. §877 in order to try penalize you by forcing you to pay taxes for a ten year period after you renounce your “U.S. citizenship”.
6. You aren’t obligated to explain to anyone why you renounced your citizenship but if you get backed into a corner by an itinerant judge, for instance, into telling people why you did it, you should always say that you did it in order to protect and preserve your liberties by making yourself a nonprivileged person. Remind them that you can’t be a sovereign individual if you are receiving government privileges and that personal sovereignty is your goal.
7. You should emphasize to every government representative during the renunciation process that you are not eliminating your “national” status or your allegiance to the “United States”, but your “U.S. citizen” status
8. Don’t let any government agent try to talk you out of the renunciation process or try to confuse you by saying that they don’t have any procedures to do it so it must not be authorized. They will try to do this because they don’t want you doing it or because, more often, they are just plain ignorant of the law, which is why they are government slaves to begin with. Of course it is authorized because the courts said you could do it in our cite above from Briehl and they even said why you can do it: to protect your liberties. Remember that you can’t have liberty or live in a free country if citizenship status isn’t voluntary, and just tell them you don’t want to volunteer to be a “U.S. citizen” and want to only be a “national”, and because all “U.S. citizens” are also “nationals”, they can’t take away your national status and you don’t want to lose that.
9. Because the extortionists in the federal government don’t want to give you your freedom, they are likely to resist correcting your citizenship status to that of a “national” but not statutory citizen. Because of this, they are likely to drag their feet, conveniently lose your correspondence, and delay providing you your “Certificate of non-Citizen National Status” under 8 U.S.C. §1452. You may therefore need to use a third party notary to help you and serve them with a Notice of Default with a Proof of Service after the time period for responding to your 8 U.S.C. §1452 request has expired.
10. We recommend using our citizenship abandonment/amendment procedure found in section 2.5.3.13 of the Sovereignty Forms and Instructions Manual, Form #10.005 to ensure that you accomplish all the necessary steps properly.
11. We don’t have a paralegal we can recommend to help you with your citizenship amendment process as documented in this book. You will just have to be resourceful and locate your own. Please don’t call us to ask about this either because we not only won’t help you, but we will ask you why you didn’t follow our directions.

4.13.18 Duties and Responsibilities of Citizens

So far, we have talked a lot about the “rights” of the various citizens, but what about the responsibilities and duties? What are the obligations of being a citizen? That’s the subject of this section.

The main responsibility of any good citizen is to enforce the laws of the federal Constitution upon our state and federal governments. As they say:

Eternal vigilance for the citizen must take many forms. Here are a few:

1. Obey all government laws that do not conflict with God’s laws and/or our conscience while disobeying government laws that conflict, so that:
  - 1.1. We don’t offend God or our moral beliefs by violating His laws.
  - 1.2. We don’t hurt our fellow citizens or burden our government in prosecuting or punishing us for our crimes.
2. Taking complete and personal responsibility for defending our own life, liberty, property, and family as best that we can from encroachments by other citizens or especially the government. This will minimize the burden on government of defending us.
3. Taking personal responsibility for completely supporting ourselves so that we never become a burden to either the government or our fellow citizens who support the government:

1 "Make it your ambition to lead a quiet life, to mind your own business and to work with your hands, just as
 2 we told you, so that your daily life may win the respect of outsiders and so that you will not be dependent on 3 anybody."

4 [1 Thess. 4:9-12, Bible, NIV]

5 4. Recognizing that government is force and that force and charity are fundamentally incompatible.

6 "Government is not reason. It is not eloquence. It is a force, like fire: a dangerous servant and a terrible
 7 master"

8 [George Washington]

9 Therefore, good citizens will:

- 10 4.1. Vote in such a way that we elect people into public office who do not allow government to involve itself in 11 charity or social welfare programs.
- 12 4.2. Involve themselves in church and charitable causes, and giving to the needy, so that we don't get so selfish that 13 government HAS to step in and take over the job of charity that we refuse to do.
- 14 4.3. Try to keep the tax rates down so that people have maximal control over their own labor and property.
- 15 4.4. Refuse to pay money to the government in "taxes" that will be used to support anything but the government,
 16 because this amounts to an abuse of the tax system. The legal definition of "taxes" demands that they may only 17 be used to support the government, and not private citizens or private enterprises or private fortunes such as the 18 federal reserve:

19 "To lay with one hand the power of government on the property of the citizen, and with the other to bestow it on
 20 favored individuals.. is none the less robbery because it is done under the forms of law and is called taxation.
 21 This is not legislation. It is a decree under legislative forms."

22 [Loan Association v. Topeka, 20 Wall. 655 (1874)]

23 "A tax, in the general understanding of the term and as used in the constitution, signifies an exaction for the 24 support of the government. The word [tax] has never thought to connote the 25 expropriation of money from one group for the benefit of another."

26 [U.S. v. Butler, 297 U.S. 1 (1936)]

27 "Surely the matters in which the public has the most interest are the supplies of food and clothing; yet can it be 28 that by reason of this interest the state may fix the price at which the butcher must sell his meat, or the vendor of 29 boots and shoes his goods? Men are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable rights, -life, liberty, and 30 the pursuit of happiness; and to 'secure,' not grant or create, these rights, governments are instituted. That
 31 property which a man has honestly acquired he retains full control of, subject to these limitations: First, that
 32 he shall not use it to his neighbor's injury, and that does not mean that he must [can be compelled to] use it
 33 for his neighbor's benefit [e.g. Social Security, Medicare, etc]; second, that if he devotes it to a public use, he
 34 gives to the public a right to control that use; and third, that whenever the public needs require, the public
 35 may take it upon payment of due compensation."

36 [Budd v. People of State of New York, 143 U.S. 517 (1892)]

37 5. Being self-governing within our own families, so that we do not become subject to any type of government jurisdiction
 38 or laws in our normal everyday affairs. This will minimize the size and power of the government so that they don't 39 become oppressive and don't have to become our "parens patriae" or parent. Our free Family Constitution describes 40 how to do this at:

41 <http://famguardian.org/Publications/FamilyConst/FamilyConst.htm>

42 6. Continually educating oneself so that we cannot be deceived or controlled by government, or are unable to support 43 ourselves and have to depend on government.

44 "The price of eternal vigilance is eternal education."

45 "Knowledge will forever govern ignorance; and a people who mean to be their own governors must arm
 46 themselves with the power which knowledge gives."

[James Madison (Letter to W.T. Barry, August 4, 1822)]

47 7. Enforcing the U.S. Constitution upon the state and federal governments, and especially the Bill of Rights.

48 7.1. Amendments 1 through 10 and 13 establish several rights that the federal government may not invade.

49 7.2. The Fourteenth Amendment says the states may also not violate these rights either.

50 8. The way citizens enforce the U.S. Constitution against the federal and state governments are as follows:

1 8.1 Voting consistently in elections and picking the candidates who are honorable and will follow the Constitution and
2 honor their promises. (the Ballot Box)

3 *"A share in the sovereignty of the state, which is exercised by the citizens at large, in voting at elections is one
4 of the most important rights of the subject, and in a republic ought to stand foremost in the estimation of the 5 law."*

6 *[Alexander Hamilton, The Papers of Alexander Hamilton, Harold C. Syrett, ed. (New York, Columbia
7 University Press, 1962), Vol III, pp. 544-545.]*

8 8.2 If candidates get elected who are not honorable, serving enthusiastically as a juror to nullify the bad laws they 9 write. (the Jury Box)

10 8.3 If jury nullification doesn't work, defend your property against government tyranny using your right to own
11 firearms (the Cartridge Box)

12 9. Making sure that our government doesn't become fiscally irresponsible and load us down with debt, and later use that 13 as a justification to oppressively tax us:

14 *"Funding I consider as limited, rightfully, to a redemption of the debt within the lives of a majority of the 15 generation contracting it; every generation coming equally, by the laws of the Creator of the world, to the free
16 possession of the earth He made for their subsistence, unincumbered by their predecessors, who, like them, 17 were but tenants for life."*

18 [Thomas Jefferson to John Taylor, 1816. ME 15:18 ]

19 "[The natural right to be free of the debts of a previous generation is] a salutary curb on the spirit of war and 20 indebtedment, which, since the modern theory of the perpetuation of debt, has drenched the earth with blood, and 21 crushed its inhabitants under burdens ever accumulating."

22 [Thomas Jefferson to John Wayles Eppes, 1813. ME 13:272 ]

23 *"We believe--or we act as if we believed--that although an individual father cannot alienate the labor of his son,
24 the aggregate body of fathers may alienate the labor of all their sons, of their posterity, in the aggregate, and
25 oblige them to pay for all the enterprises, just or unjust, profitable or ruinous, into which our vices, our 26 passions or our personal interests may lead us. But I trust that this proposition needs only to be looked at by an
27 American to be seen in its true point of view, and that we shall all consider ourselves unauthorized to saddle
28 posterity with our debts, and morally bound to pay them ourselves; and consequently within what may be 29 deemed the period of a generation, or the life of the majority."*

30 [Thomas Jefferson to John Wayles Eppes, 1813. ME 13:357 ]

31 "It is incumbent on every generation to pay its own debts as it goes. A principle which if acted on would save 32 one-half the wars of the world."

33 [Thomas Jefferson to A. L. C. Destutt de Tracy, 1820. FE 10:175 ]

34 *To preserve [the] independence [of the people,] we must not let our rulers load us with perpetual debt. We must 35 make our election between economy and liberty, or profusion and servitude. If we run into such debts as that we 36 must be taxed in our meat and in our drink, in our necessities and our comforts, in our labors and our
37 amusements, for our callings and our creeds, as the people of England are, our people, like them, must come to 38 labor sixteen hours in the twenty-four, give the earnings of fifteen of these to the government for their debts and 39 daily expenses, and the sixteenth being insufficient to afford us bread, we must live, as they now do, on oatmeal
40 and potatoes, have no time to think, no means of calling the mismanagers to account, but be glad to obtain 41 subsistence by hiring ourselves to rivet their chains on the necks of our fellow-sufferers."*

42 [Thomas Jefferson to Samuel Kercheval, 1816. ME 15:39]

43 10. Watching what our government does like a hawk and:

44 10.1. Publicizing violations of the Constitution whenever you see them. This is what we do in Chapter 6 of this book
45 by showing the history of how our civil servants have corrupted and debased our de jure government to make an 46 unlawful de facto government.

47 10.2. Prosecuting specific wrongdoers working in government who violate the Constitutional rights of individuals
48 using a Bivens action or a civil rights or discrimination lawsuit.

49 In America, the Republic, we most assuredly have separation of church and state, the First Amendment and the last 50 paragraph, last sentence, of Article VI of the federal Constitution ensure this.

51 "Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof"
52 [U.S. Constitution, First Amendment]

1                    "...no religious Test shall ever be required as a Qualification to any Office or public Trust under the United
2 States."
3 [U.S. Constitution, Article VI]

4 A good government, however, is one whose laws do not conflict in any way with God's laws so that it does not expect
5 citizens to violate their religious beliefs in order to obey its laws. Citizens do not enforce God's law directly on anyone but
6 perhaps themselves, individually, and perhaps also within their own families, if they are believers. Nor do Constitutional
7 governments enforce God's law directly on anyone or anything. No one in America, the Republic, is required to belong to 8 any religious organization, or even believe if any God, to be a good person and a good citizen.

9 Governments are not ruled by God nor God's law but by the Law of the federal and state Constitutions. In fact, the 10 Constitution is the only law that government has to obey and was established exclusively to obey. It says that right in the 11 Constitution itself:

12                    "This Constitution, and the Laws of the United States which shall be made in Pursuance thereof; and all
13 Treaties made, or which shall be made, under the Authority of the United States, shall be the supreme Law of 14 the Land; and the Judges in every State shall be bound thereby, any Thing in the Constitution or Laws of 15 any state to the Contrary notwithstanding."
16 [U.S. Constitution, Article VI, Section 2]

17 The federal and state Constitutions express the will of the sovereign people as individuals ("We The People") and delegate
18 specific but not exclusive authority to the federal and state governments. Any act by specific public servants in the 19 government that is not authorized by either the federal or state Constitutions is an illegal act and good citizens will 20 conscientiously prosecute government officials privately for such illegal acts if they injure the rights of anyone.

21                    "Unlawful. That which is contrary to, prohibited, or unauthorized by law. That which is not lawful. The acting
22 contrary to, or in defiance of the law; disobeying or disregarding the law. Term is equivalent to "without 23 excuse or justification." State v. Noble, 90 N.M. 360, 563 P.2d. 1153, 1157. While necessarily not implying 24 the element of criminality, it is broad enough to include it."
25 [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1536]

26 When such an injury or violation of law occurs, the remedy is not to sue "the government", but to sue the public official
27 personally because he was not acting under the authority of law and was abusing his public office for personal gain to the 28 injury of sovereign Americans.

29 God and His law may be enforced against natural persons primarily and we ought to avoid applying them to the 30 government in order to promote separation of church and state. However, when a government servant violates his authority
31 delegated through the Constitution and has thereby acted as a private individual to injure a fellow citizen, then we as the 32 sovereigns sitting on a jury can and should apply God's moral laws or our conscience to determine how to punish the errant
33 public servant and thereby protect our fellow aggrieved citizen. In exercising their duties as jurors, sovereign Americans
34 may completely ignore all Supreme Court decisions and question the righteousness of any legislation and disregard any 35 they feel unjust.

36 When we apply God's laws and/or our conscience as jurors, we should do so with much discretion by not publicizing
37 exactly how or why we are doing this, but simply quietly do our best based on our behavior and our decision to ensure that
38 a just result occurs that is consistent with our conscience and with God's moral laws. Remember that jurors do not have to 39 explain or justify to a judge why they arrived at a decision. The only time that jurors might be called upon to explain their 40 decision is to fellow jurors during deliberations. We shouldn't thump the Bible or get pious or become a missionary as a 41 jurist, but simply talk about what is right and wrong in a generic sense.

42                    "But our rulers can have no authority over such natural rights, only as we have submitted to them. The rights of 43 conscience we never submitted, we could not submit. We are answerable for them to our God. The legitimate 44 powers of government extend to such acts as are injurious to others."
45 [Thomas Jefferson in "Notes on Virginia"]

46 Good citizens are constantly aware that government is a "business", or more properly, a "corporation" (see 28 U.S.C.
47 §3002(15)(A)), and they know that the sinful and selfish tendency of those in government is to get into every business
48 except the constitutional purpose of its creation, so they watch their government like a hawk.

1 "Nothing is more essential to the establishment of manners in a State than that all persons employed in places
2 of power and trust be men of unexceptionable characters. The public cannot be too curious concerning the
3 character of public men."
4 [Samuel Adams, The Writings of Samuel Adams, Harry Alonzo Cushing, editor (New York: G.P. Putnam's
5 Sons, 1907), Vol. III, p. 236-237]

6 "Experience should teach us to be most on our guard to protect liberty when the Government's purposes are 7 beneficent. Men born to freedom are naturally alert to repel invasion of their liberty by evil-minded rulers. The 8 greatest dangers to liberty lurk in insidious encroachment by men of zeal, well-meaning but without 9 understanding."
10 [Justice Louis D. Brandeis, dissenting, Olmstead v. United States, 277 U.S. 438 (1928)]

11 The reason to be a citizen is to have liberty, which is simply freedom with personal responsibility. People who are free
12 MUST govern and support themselves entirely and can be beholden to no man. In America, unlike in Europe, the "state"
13 consists of the people and not some king or dictator who rules over them, and they govern themselves through their elected 14 representatives.

15 "State. A people permanently occupying a fixed territory bound together by common-law habits and custom
16 into one body politic exercising, through the medium of an organized government, independent sovereignty
17 and control over all persons and things within its boundaries, capable of making war and peace and of 18 entering into international relations with other communities of the globe. United States v. Kusche, D.C.Cal., 56
19 F.Supp. 201 207, 208. The organization of social life which exercises sovereign power in behalf of the people.
20 Delany v. Moralitis, C.C.A.Md., 136 F.2d. 129, 130. In its largest sense, a "state" is a body politic or a society
21 of men. Beagle v. Motor Vehicle Acc. Indemnification Corp., 44 Misc.2d. 636, 254 N.Y.S.2d. 763, 765. A body
22 of people occupying a definite territory and politically organized under one government. State ex re. Maisano
23 v. Mitchell, 155 Conn. 256, 231 A.2d. 539, 542. A territorial unit with a distinct general body of law.
24 Restatement, Second, Conflicts, §3. Term may refer either to body politic of a nation (e.g. United States) or to
25 an individual government unit of such nation (e.g. California)." ]
26 [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1407]

27 In our constitutional Republic, citizens as their own governors protect each other from government abuse and abuse by 28 other citizens using legislation (laws) and the courts. In particular, citizens protect each other from government abuse when 29 serving on a jury and when voting for a candidate. Christians cannot correctly disregard the duties of citizenship, such as
30 voting and jury service, and at the same time obey Christ's command to love your neighbor, because the purpose of being a 31 good citizen is to protect your neighbor from abuse by the government and other fellow citizens.

32 The only constitutional reason citizens vote for, or elect, any candidate to public office is with the understanding that the 33 candidate will honor the oath of office. They do this in the name of preserving their liberty. The voter cannot 34 rightly/correctly demand or "will" the candidate to do anything else simply because it is a Law of the Constitution the oath
35 be taken before entering the office elected to as found in Article VI of the federal Constitution, last paragraph:

36 "The Senators and Representatives before mentioned, and the Members of the several State Legislatures, and
37 all executive and judicial Officers, both of the United States and of the several States, shall be bound by Oath or
38 Affirmation, to support this Constitution; but no religious Test shall ever be required as a Qualification to any 39 Office or public Trust under the United States."
40 [U.S. Constitution, Article VI]

41 This oath is also found in Article II, Section 1 of the Constitution:

42 "Before he enter on the Execution of his Office, he shall take the following Oath or Affirmation: -- "I do
43 solemnly swear (or affirm) that I will faithfully execute the Office of President of the United States, and will to 44 the best of my Ability, preserve, protect and defend the Constitution of the United States."
45 [U.S. Constitution, Article II, Section 1]

46 New citizens pledge allegiance to the Constitution when they are naturalized, and rightly so. See immigrant oath to become 47 an American. The process of naturalization, in fact, is defined as the process of conferring nationality, which is then 48 defined as someone who has allegiance:

49 TITLE 8 > CHAPTER 12 > SUBCHAPTER I > Sec. 1101.
50 Sec. 1101. - Definitions

51 (a) As used in this chapter -

(23) The term "naturalization" means the conferring of nationality of a state upon a person after birth, by any means whatsoever.

TITLE 8 > CHAPTER 12 > SUBCHAPTER I > Sec. 1101.
Sec. 1101. - Definitions

(21) The term "national" means a person owing permanent allegiance to a state.

As a matter of fact the definition of an American is a constitutional "citizen of the United States" under the Fourteenth Amendment, Section 1 and a "national" under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) who pledges allegiance to the Constitution, and renounces any allegiance to any foreign country and or any King of any country. His duty as a citizen is the same as that of the Constitution, which is to promote the "general welfare":

"We the People of the United States, in Order to form a more perfect Union, establish Justice, insure domestic Tranquillity, provide for the common defence, promote the general Welfare, and secure the Blessings of Liberty to ourselves and our Posterity, do ordain and establish this Constitution for the United States of America. "
[Preamble to the Constitution]

The above phrase means exactly what it says, "the general welfare, ...of the UNITED STATES", where "State" means the collection of people within a territory. It does not mean the government of that region, because that government may not be obeying the Constitution and to obey tyrants who are in violation of the Constitution is to commit treason.

Also in the body of the Constitution at Article I, Section 8 says; "general Welfare of the United States". "Welfare" in this case does NOT mean charity or socialism by any means. The Constitution, in fact, does not authorize the government to involve itself in any insurance or welfare program such as Medicare, Social Security, Food stamps, or any other program. Such programs are anathema to the legislative intent of the Constitution and result in government dependence, not personal sovereignty. The purpose of the Constitution is to ensure a separation of powers and the sovereignty and independence of the people as individuals from the government. Sovereignty and government-dependency are mutually exclusive. The original Articles of Confederation that preceded the Constitution, in fact, said that freeloaders were not entitled to the privileges and immunities of citizens!

"The better to secure and perpetuate mutual friendship and intercourse among the people of the different States in this Union, the free inhabitants of each of these States, paupers, vagabonds and fugitives from justice excepted, shall be entitled to all privileges and immunities of free citizens in the several States; and the people of each state shall have free ingress and regress to and from any other State, and shall enjoy therein all the privileges of trade and commerce, subject to the same duties, impositions and restrictions as the inhabitants thereof respectively, provided that such restriction shall not extend so far as to prevent the removal of property imported into any state, to any other state of which the Owner is an inhabitant; provided also that no imposition, duties or restriction shall be laid by any state, on the property of the United States, or either of them."
[Articles of Confederation, Article IV]

Here is the definition of "paupers and vagabonds":

Vagabond. A vagrant or homeless wanderer without means of honest livelihood. Neering v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 383 Ill. 366, 50 N.E.2d. 497, 502. One who wanders from place to place, having no fixed dwelling, or, if he has one, not abiding in it; a wanderer, especially such a person who is lazy and generally worthless without means of honest livelihood."
[Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1548]

Vagrant. At common law, wandering or going about from place to place by idle person who had no lawful or visible means of support and who subsisted on charity and did not work, though able to do so. State v. Harlowe, 174 Wash. 227, 24 P.2d. 601. A general term, including, in English law, the several classes of idle and disorderly persons, rogues, and vagabonds, and incorrigible rogues. One who wanders from place to place; an idle wander, specifically, one who has no settled habitation, nor any fixed income or livelihood. A vagabond; a tramp. A person able to work who spends his time in idleness or immorality, having no property to support him and without some visible and known means of fair, honest, and reputable livelihood. State v. Oldham, 224 N.C. 415, 30 S.E.2d. 318, 319. One who is apt to become a public charge through his own

1                    laziness. People, on Complaint of McDonough, v. Gesino, Sp.Sess., 22 N.Y.S.2d. 284, 285. See Vagabond;
 2                    Vagrancy.”
 3                    [Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1548]

4                    Incidentally, the above also happens to describe most of the people who work for the government. We know, because some
 5                    of us worked for the federal government and were always frustrated with the irresponsible attitudes of government
 6                    coworkers! Most are do-nothing no-loads who effectively are "retired on duty" (R.O.D.). Hee...hee...hee. Based on the
 7                    above, those who must draw from the government through charity or socialist welfare programs as a private citizen cannot
 8                    have the rights or privileges of citizenship under the original Articles of Confederation, and that is exactly what happens to 9                    those who participate in our present Social Security or the government’s tax system.

10                    4.13.19 Citizenship Summary

11                    Having thoroughly covered all aspects of citizenship in this section, we will now summarize what we have learned by 12                    showing you how to practically apply it. Based on the previous section, we emphasize again the following important facts:

- 13                    1. A “citizen of the United States” in the context of the Constitution and the rulings of the Supreme Court is equivalent to 14                    a “national” or “non-resident non-person” in federal statutes, as defined in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21).
- 15                    2. A “U.S. citizen” in the context of federal statutes is equivalent to a “national and citizen of the United States” as 16                    defined in 8 U.S.C. §1401.
- 17                    3. People who are “nationals” under Title 8 of the U.S. Code are:
  - 18                    3.1. “nonresident aliens” as defined under 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(B) if they occupy a public office.
  - 19                    3.2. Statutory “non-resident non-persons” if they do not occupy a public office.

20                    We will also summarize our findings using a table to help you understand the types of citizenship and how they relate to
 21                    where you were born or naturalized. Choose the place you were born on the left and then go across the row to the columns
 22                    that indicate “Yes”. The “Yes” columns indicate a type of citizenship that you have the right to choose under federal and 23                    state law. If more than one column indicates “Yes”, then you have multiple choices of which type of citizen you want to 24                    be.

3	Foreign country	1. 8 U.S.C. §1408(2) 2. Law of Nations, Book I, section 215	No	Yes (if either or both parents are “nationals”)	Yes (if either or both parents are “nationals”)	Under the doctrine of “ jus sanguinis ”, an American, either one or both of whose parents are “nationals of the United States” who is born in a foreign country is treated as a “national” or “national of the United States”

NOTES:

- Throughout this book, the terms “national” and “state national” are used interchangeably.
- The table above makes the simplifying assumption that at least one of your parents have the same citizenship status as you.
- In practice, the law requires that at least one of your parents must have the same citizenship status as the one you choose.
- In all cases, “non-resident” status and “state national” status are equivalent from a legal perspective.

You can also change your citizenship based on domicile and intent to be other than what you were born with. For instance, if you were born as a STATUTORY “U.S. citizen”, you can choose to be a “non-resident non-person”. Recall that the state you are a citizen of can also change based on your domicile and intent. For instance, if you were born in California but you later move to Texas, and if you meet the Texas requirements for residency and live there with the intent to become a Texas national/citizen, then at that point, you become a Texas national.

Another important thing to remember is that your residency can change your citizenship status as a “U.S. citizen”.<sup>191</sup> If you were born in a federal territory like Puerto Rico, which is “subject to its jurisdiction” (federal zone), then you are a “U.S. citizen” under 8 U.S.C. §1401 and 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1(c). Because all “U.S. citizens” under 8 U.S.C. §1401 are also “nationals of the United States”, you can leave Puerto Rico and move to a state of the Union and become naturalized there and forfeit your Puerto Rican citizenship. At the point that you move from a U.S. territory to a state of the Union and become naturalized in your new state, you can forfeit your STATUTORY “U.S. citizen” status and revert to being “national” or a “state national”.

- 1 We would like to close this section by summarizing the privileges and rights that go with each of the three citizenship statuses described in section 4.10 and following.
- 2 This table is also repeated later in section 2.5.3.13 of the Sovereignty Forms and Instructions Manual, Form #10.005.

4.5	"alien" or "Foreign national"	Foreign country	Foreign country	No	8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21)	No	No	No	Yes

NOTES:

1. A "nonresident alien individual" who has made an election under 26 U.S.C. §6013(g) and (h) to be treated as a "resident alien" is treated as a "nonresident alien" for the purposes of withholding under I.R.C. Subtitle C but retains their status as a "resident alien" under I.R.C. Subtitle A. See 26 C.F.R. §1.1441-1(c)(3)(ii).
2. A "non-individual" is really just a transient foreigner who is not "purposefully availing themselves" of commerce within the legislative jurisdiction of the United States on federal territory under the Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act, 28 U.S.C. Chapter 97. The real transition from a "NON-individual" to an "individual" occurs when one:
  - 2.1. "Purposefully avails himself" of commerce on federal territory and thus waives sovereign immunity. Examples of such purposeful availment are the next three items.
  - 2.2. Lawfully and consensually occupying a public office in the U.S. government and thereby being an "officer and individual" as identified in 5 U.S.C. §2105(a). Otherwise, you are PRIVATE and therefore beyond the civil legislative jurisdiction of the national government.
  - 2.3. Voluntarily files an IRS Form 1040 as a citizen or resident abroad and takes the foreign tax deduction under 26 U.S.C. §911. This too is essentially an act of "purposeful availment". Nonresidents are not mentioned in section 911. The upper left corner of the form identifies the filer as a "U.S. individual". You cannot be an "U.S. individual" without ALSO being an "individual". All the "trade or business" deductions on the form presume the applicant is a public officer, and therefore the "individual" on the form is REALLY a public officer in the government and would be committing FRAUD if he or she was NOT.
  - 2.4. VOLUNTARILY fills out an IRS Form W-7 ITIN Application (IRS identifies the applicant as an "individual") AND only uses the assigned number in connection with their compensation as an elected or appointed public officer. Using it in connection with PRIVATE earnings is FRAUD.
3. What turns a "non-resident non-person" into a "nonresident alien individual" is meeting one or more of the following two criteria found in 26 C.F.R. §1.1441-

- 1 1(c)(3)(ii):
2 3.1. Residence/domicile in a foreign country under the residence article of an income tax treaty and 26 C.F.R. §301.7701(b)-7(a)(1).
3 3.2. Residence/domicile as an alien in Puerto Rico, Guam, the Commonwealth of Northern Mariana Islands, the U.S. Virgin Islands, or American Samoa as
4 determined under 26 C.F.R. §301.7701(b)-1(d).
5 4. If you were born in a state of the Union and maintain a domicile there, then you are described in item 3.1 of the table.
6 5. All “taxpayers” are STATUTORY “aliens” or “nonresident aliens”. The definition of “individual” found in 26 C.F.R. §1.1441-1(c)(3) does NOT include
7 “citizens”. The only occasion where a “citizen” can also be an “individual” is when they are abroad under 26 U.S.C. §911 and interface to the I.R.C. under a tax
8 treaty with a foreign country as an alien pursuant to 26 C.F.R. §301.7701(b)-7(a)(1)

10 customs or taxes, from their sons [citizens and subjects] or from strangers ["aliens"], which are synonymous with ""residents" in the tax code, and exclude ""citizens"?"

11 Peter said to Him, "From strangers ["aliens"]/"residents" ONLY. See 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1\(a\)\(2\)\(ii\) and 26 C.F.R. §301.6109-1\(d\)\(3\)."

12 Jesus said to him, "Then the sons ["citizens"] of the Republic, who are all sovereign ""nationals" and ""nonresident aliens" under federal law] are free [sovereign over

1 If we are a person born in a state of the Union, then what is the most accurate and unambiguous way to describe our
 2 citizenship status and our rights? Below is what we recommend, and we have stated it several ways to make it as 3 unambiguous as possible. You are:

- 4 1. A “citizen of the United States” under the Fourteenth Amendment.
- 5 2. Not a “national and citizen of the United States” under federal statutes such as 8 U.S.C. §1401, because this is a person
 6 born only in the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, Guam, and the Virgin Islands.
- 7 3. A “National” under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21).
- 8 4. A “national” of the state you were born in. Being a “national” simply means that you owe allegiance to your state. For 9 instance, if you were born in California, you are a “California national”, because the states of the Union are treated as 10 independent nations by our constitution.
- 11 5. “subject to the jurisdiction” of the confederation of states called the “United States”, but not necessarily to the 12 jurisdiction of federal statutes or “acts of Congress”. The term “subject to the jurisdiction” simply means the political,
 13 but not necessarily legislative jurisdiction.
- 14 6. Not subject to federal government legislative jurisdiction under most “acts of Congress” so long as you are domiciled 15 in a state of the Union and not living on federal territory ceded by the state to the federal government.
- 16 7. A sovereign individual whose rights are protected from federal encroachment by the Constitution and from State
 17 encroachment by the Fourteenth Amendment and your state constitution.

18 If you would like to know more about correcting your citizenship status, we invite you to read and study section 2.5.3.13 of 19 the Sovereignty Forms and Instructions Manual, Form #10.005.

20 4.14 Contracts

21 Article 1, Section 10 of the U.S. Constitution says:

22 No State shall...pass any Bill of Attainder, ex post facto Law, or Law impairing the Obligation of Contracts, or
 23 grant any Title of Nobility.

24 This clause is important, as it establishes the foundation of how to protect one’s assets from taxes and government seizure
 25 using trusts.

26 The Uniform Commercial Code (UCC) recognizes that it is possible for any one of us to be commercially coerced into
 27 signing a contract that we would not sign had we true free agency. The UCC provides that if we sign a contract under such 28 adverse conditions, and if we do so “without prejudice” or “under protest,” then we preserve all our rights. You can read
 29 the UCC for yourself at the following address:

30 <http://www.law.cornell.edu/ucc/ucc.table.html>

31 The Uniform Commercial Code, Section 1-308, states: Performance or Acceptance Under Reservation of Rights

32 (a) A party that with explicit reservation of rights performs or promises performance or assents to performance
 33 in a manner demanded or offered by the other party does not thereby prejudice the rights reserved. Such words
 34 as “without prejudice,” “under protest,” or the like are sufficient.

35 If it is necessary to assert your rights in court, when the point is raised, here is a suggested testimony to offer when 36 explaining what you meant when you claimed “without prejudice”:

37 “It indicates I have exercised the remedy provided for me in the Uniform Commercial Code by which I might 38 reserve the Common Law Right not to be compelled to perform under any contract that I have not entered
 39 knowingly, voluntarily, and intentionally. And furthermore, that notifies all administrative agencies of 40 government that I do not accept the liability associated with the compelled benefits of any unrevealed
 41 commercial agreement.”

42 The Uniform Commercial Code is Admiralty Law, which has come on shore. The “without prejudice” clause is the window
 43 which enables one to assert their 7th Amendment guarantee of access to the Common Law.

1 Some people are putting the words, “without prejudice” on everything they sign, above their signature. E.g. they are putting
 2 it on applications for driver's license, tax returns, voter registration, bank checks, gun purchases, etc. According to
 3 Anderson's UCC annotated, you can only reserve those rights which you have. Whenever you sign anything you will give 4 to the government, it's a good idea to be explicit about your domicile/citizenship (capitalize Citizenship).

5 4.15 Our Rights

6 “Statesmen, my dear Sir, may plan and speculate for liberty, but it is Religion and Morality alone, which can 7 establish the Principles upon which Freedom can securely stand.

8 “The only foundation of a free Constitution is pure Virtue, and if this cannot be inspired into our People in a
 9 greater Measure, than they have it now, they may change their Rulers and the forms of Government, but they 10 will not obtain a lasting liberty.”
 11 [John Adams, June 21, 1776]
 12

13 “The smallest minority on earth is the individual. Those who deny individual rights, cannot claim to be 14 defenders of minorities.”
 15 [Ayn Rand]

16 Based on the above discussion, we now proceed to define and explain our rights in detail.

17 4.15.1 No forced participation in Labor Unions or Occupational Licenses

18 “Among these unalienable rights, as proclaimed in that great document, is the right of men to pursue their
 19 happiness, by which is meant the right to pursue any lawful business or vocation, in any manner not
 20 inconsistent with the equal rights of others, which may increase their prosperity or develop their faculties, so as 21 to give to them their highest enjoyment. The common business and callings of life, the ordinary trades and 22 pursuits, which are innocuous in themselves, and have been followed in all communities from time immemorial,
 23 must therefore be free in this country to all alike upon the same conditions. The right to pursue them, without let
 24 or hindrance, except that which is applied to all persons of the same age, sex, and condition, is a distinguishing
 25 privilege of citizens of the United States, and an essential element of that freedom which they claim as their
 26 birthright. It has been well said that ‘THE PROPERTY WHICH EVERY MAN HAS IN HIS OWN LABOR, AS IT
 27 IS THE ORIGINAL FOUNDATION OF ALL OTHER PROPERTY, SO IT IS THE MOST SACRED AND
 28 INVIOABLE. The patrimony of the poor man lies in the strength and dexterity of his own hands, and to hinder
 29 his employing this strength and dexterity in what manner he thinks proper, without injury to his neighbor, is a
 30 plain violation of this most sacred property. It is a manifest encroachment upon the just liberty both of the 31 workman and of those who might be disposed to employ him. . . The right to follow any of the common
 32 occupations of life is an inalienable right, it was formulated as such under the phrase ‘pursuit of happiness’ in
 33 the declaration of independence, which commenced with the fundamental proposition that ‘all men are created
 34 equal; that they are endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable rights; that among these are life, liberty,
 35 and the pursuit of happiness.’ This right is a large ingredient in the civil liberty of the citizen. To deny it to all
 36 but a few favored individuals, by investing the latter with a monopoly, is to invade one of the fundamental 37 privileges of the citizen, contrary not only to common right, but, as I think, to the express words of the 38 constitution. It is what no legislature has a right to do; and no contract to that end can be binding on 39 subsequent legislatures. . .”
 40 [Butchers’ Union Co. v. Crescent City Co., 111 U.S. 746 (1884) ]

41 The supreme Court, in the above finding, makes it very clear that granting a monopoly to a few favored individuals or a 42 government organization over the right to pursue certain occupations violates our fundamental civil liberties and the 43 constitution. This has the following implications, when you think about it:

- 44 1. The government should not and may not restrict entrance into certain occupations of individuals by laws requiring
- 45 licenses, or by restricting who may obtain a license.
- 46 2. The government should not and may not allow labor unions who have a majority in any given employer to compel
- 47 workers at that employer to join the union or be discriminated against because they won't join.

48 4.15.2 Property Rights

49 “Men are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable rights, -life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness;’
 50 and to ‘secure, ’ not grant or create, these rights, governments are instituted. That property which a man has 51 honestly acquired he retains full control of, subject to these limitations: First, that he shall not use it to his
 52 neighbor's injury, and that does not mean that he must use it for his neighbor's benefit; second, that if the 53 devotes it to a public use, he gives to the public a right to control that use; and third, that whenever the public
 54 needs require, the public may take it upon payment of due compensation.”

1 [Budd v. People of State of New York, 143 U.S. 517 (1892)]

2 4.15.3 No IRS Taxes

3 In the IRS 1040 Tax Guide Kit, it asks, "who is required to file a 1040 form?" The IRS's answer states, "all citizens of the 4 United States no matter where they are located". Here then is how the IRS defines the United States:

5 TITLE 26, Subtitle F, CHAPTER 79, Sec. 7701(a)(9):

6 United States: The term "United States" when used in a geographical sense includes only the States and the

9 TITLE 26, Subtitle F, CHAPTER 79, Sec. 7701(a)(10)

10 State: The term "State" shall be construed to include the District of Columbia, where such construction is 11 necessary to carry out provisions of this title.

12 Substituting the definition for the term State into the definition for United States we arrive at what can only be described as 13 a totally different meaning than what you and I have thought all along.

14 The term "United States" when used in a geographical sense includes only the District of Columbia and the 15 District of Columbia. [emphasis added to illustrate substitution]

16 If you weren't born in the District of Columbia then you are not a "citizen of the United States" and you are not required to 17 file an IRS 1040 Tax Return.

18 However, remember the part that said, "no matter where they are located." If you have ever declared yourself to be a
19 "citizen of the United States" (that legislative entity - a statutory "person" - a federal corporation), usually under penalty of 20 perjury, then you are and you must file an IRS 1040 Tax Return (see SOLUTIONS).

21 4.15.4 No Gun Control

22 Bill of Rights - Article II (Second Amendment)

23 A well regulated Militia, being necessary to the security of a free state, the right of the people to keep and bear
24 arms, shall not be infringed. [Underlines added]

25 We all know that the Militia is the People and every State Constitution I have read so states this. It is also clear that the 26 Second Amendment is not a Right of the State. It states that this Right is merely "... necessary to the security of a free state, 27 ..."

28 Further, it is often stated that the Bill of Rights limits the Federal Government in its attempts to govern (rule) the States and 29 the People. It should be noted however, that the mere title is self-explanatory "Bill of Rights". These articles of Rights
30 (Amendments) are Rights of the People and/or the States. By implication, yes, they are limits of the Federal Government,
31 including the State Governments in certain cases. The Second Amendment is one of those Rights, which limits both Federal 32 and State Governments. Note it states "... the Right of the People ..." this is clearly not a Right of the State and is therefore a 33 limit of the State as well as the Federal Government.

34 So, how is it that our various levels of government can pass what seems to be unconstitutional laws and get away with it in 35 the courts?

36 One day, while searching for further insight into the laws, which we have come to accept as governing our access and use
37 of arms (and our lives), I made a startling discovery, while rereading portions of the United States Code (USC) pertaining 38 to the Gun Control Act of 1968 (Public Law 90-618) (GCA), I noticed for the first time a table of definitions. The table
39 included a definition for the term "interstate or foreign commerce," which in turn describes the geographic boundaries for 40 which the GCA has jurisdiction. The following is the pertinent text: (If you have a FFL, see your Federal Firearms 41 Guidebook)

1 US Code: Title 18, Section 921(a)(2) - Definitions:

2 The term "interstate or foreign commerce" includes commerce between any place in a State and any place
3 outside of that State, or within any possession of the United States (not including the Canal Zone) or the District
4 of Columbia, but such term does not include commerce between places within the same State but through any
5 place outside of that State.

6 The term "State" includes the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, and the possessions of 7 the United States (not including the Canal Zone).

8 The geographic boundaries of the United States are clearly described in the Constitution as the District of Columbia, its 9 possessions and territories:

10 Article 1, Section 8, Clause 17

11 To exercise exclusive Legislation in all Cases whatsoever, over such District (not exceeding ten Miles square)
12 as may, by Cession of particular States, and the acceptance of Congress, become the Seat of the Government of 13 the United States, and to exercise like Authority over all Places purchased by the Consent of the Legislature of 14 the State in which the Same shall be, for the Erection of Forts, Magazines, Arsenals, dock-Yards, and other
15 needful Buildings;--And

16 Note: the term, United States, is a noun, a proper name and title, describing the Federal (Central) Government, a separate 17 corporate entity, housed in the District of Columbia and is the offspring of the "We the People...".

18 However, in the above 921(a)(2) definition, the USC, in effect, has redefined the United States to only include the District
19 of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, and the possessions of the United States. What happened to the 20 "Territories" (Guam, Virgin Islands, the Northern Mariana Islands, the American Samoa, etc.)? By this self-proclaimed-
21 redefinition, the "Territories" have, in effect, become the "any place outside that state" and as such satisfies the term
22 "foreign commerce".

23 Leaving the term "interstate commerce" to mean the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico and the 24 possessions.

25 As we then substitute the definition for the term "State" from the second sentence and the term "Territories", into the first 26 sentence, the passage then reads:

27 The term "interstate or foreign commerce" includes commerce between any place in the District of Columbia,
28 the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, and the possessions of the United States (not including the Canal Zone) and 29 the Territories of that District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, and the possessions of the 30 United States (not including the Canal Zone), or within any possession of the United States (not including the 31 Canal Zone) or the District of Columbia, but such term does not include commerce between places within the 32 same District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, and the possessions of the United States (not 33 including the Canal Zone) but through the Territories of that District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of 34 Puerto Rico, and the possessions of the United States (not including the Canal Zone). [emphasis added to 35 illustrate substitution]

36 At first, this seems nonsensical. Nevertheless, note that nowhere is Iowa, Illinois, Indiana or any one of the other several 37 States mentioned (the reason for this overt omission I leave to the reader). However, at this point, it is safe to assume that 38 you are as surprised as I to discover that the Gun Control Act of 1968 applies only to the District of Columbia, the 39 possessions and territories of the United States, and not to any one of the several States.

40 To further demonstrate that the Federal Government, purposely and knowingly redefines ordinary words, consider another
41 definition found in C.F.R. 27. This is the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms (BATF) section on the 42 IMPORTATION OF ARMS, AMMUNITION AND IMPLEMENTS OF WAR:

43 Title 27, Chapter I, Part 47, Section 47.11, Subpart B-Meaning of items

44 United States. When used in the geographical sense, includes the several States, the Commonwealth of Puerto 45 Rico, the insular possessions of the United States, the District of Columbia, and any territory over which the 46 United States exercises any powers of administration, legislation, and jurisdiction. [underline added]

1 Clearly, the Federal Government recognizes the several States as a separate entity, as it should and as is enumerate in the 2 Constitution. However, in this instance the term United States is being used in a collective sense, because this section of the 3 C.F.R. is talking about the importation of arms from foreign countries, not the use or sale of firearms within the several
4 States.

5 Notice the use of the term "Arms" in the title of this Chapter of the BATF Code. In other definitions and codes
6 they use the term "Firearm". There is a legal distinction between the term "Arms" as used in the Second
7 Amendment and the term "Firearm" which infers a Federal privilege.

8 If Congress wanted to apply these various Codes and Acts to all the several States and the People, they need only include
9 the statement "several States and the People." But, this they did not do, because to do so would be in clear violation of the 10 intended restrictions of the Constitution of the United States of America.

11 At this point, you might ask, how is it that the Federal Government can claim jurisdiction over me? With respect to 12 firearms, the process was as simple as writing "Yes" when answering the question "are you a citizen of the United States?"
13 when completing form 4473 (9)(L) (the "yellow sheet") when purchasing a firearm from a Federally licensed dealer. Note
14 however, that it is not required to answer "yes" on the 4473 form. You can answer "no" and still purchase the gun. Read the 15 box at the bottom of the front page, it DOES NOT mention item (9)(L) as having to be answered "yes or no" to purchase a 16 firearm.

17 Recall the definition for the United States as examined earlier. Were you born in the District of Columbia, the 18 Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, or any of the Possessions or Territories of the United States? If not, you have just asserted
19 your own United States citizenship by answering "Yes" to the question on form 4473. Now that you have legally declared
20 yourself a citizen of the United States, and have signed the document, you have accepted its "terms and conditions", which 21 includes the entire USC and the C.F.R. and are now subject to the jurisdiction of the Federal Government.

22 Were you ever curious about why, as individuals, we can buy and sell firearms between each other without completing a
23 form 4473? Well, the answer is that the 4473 form is a requirement only of the dealer who holds a Federal Firearms
24 License, not the People. The Federal Government has no authority over a sovereign American and must rely on our 25 ignorance and complicity to persuade and trick us to complete the form. Ironically, the dealer is not required to do so either,
26 nor is he required to have an FFL, but has also been misled and influenced by the practice of redefining commonly used
27 words. Once again, the Federal Codes only applies to the United States (the District of Columbia, the possessions and 28 territories) and to the federal citizens thereof (no matter where they are located), not the several States or the People.

29 While the Constitution does enumerate congressional power and authority to the United States to govern itself [Article 1, 30 Section 8, Clause 17], it has no exclusive legislative authority over the several States or the People thereof.

31 However, the Constitution also states that, "No State shall enter into any...law impairing the Obligation of Contracts...".
32 By asserting United States citizenship on form 4473 and signing it, we enter into a private contract with the Federal 33 Government and agree to the terms and conditions of that contract. A contract being an agreement between two or more
34 people and their signatures, serve both to affirm the contract and to obligate them to the terms, conditions and performances
35 therein.

36 Article 1, Section 10

37 No State shall enter into any Treaty, Alliance, or Confederation; grant Letters of Marque and Reprisal; coin
38 Money; emit Bills of Credit; make any Thing but gold and silver Coin a Tender in Payment of Debts; pass any 39 Bill of Attainder, ex post facto Law, or Law impairing the Obligation of Contracts, or grant any Title of 40 Nobility. [underlines added]

41 Again, we are not doing the right thing when we sign these documents in our involvement with the government. We need to 42 protect our Rights under the Constitution according to the laws which govern them. Once we enter them without reserving
43 our Rights we have lost them (See SOLUTIONS).

44 One last thought for our FFL Dealer friends out there, moving a few pages over we find:

45 BATF Title 27 Part 178 - Commerce in Firearms and Ammunition

46 Subpart D - Licenses

1 §178.41 - General.

2 (a) "Each person intending to engage in business as an importer or manufacturer of firearms or ammunition,
3 or a dealer in firearms shall, before the commencing such business, obtain the license required by this subpart
4 for the business to be operated..." [Underlines added]

5 Remember our earlier coverage of the word "citizen"? That's right, if you are not a statutory "U.S. citizen" domiciled on 6 federal territory pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1401, then you can't be a statutory "person" and you weren't required to get an FFL.
7 That includes people domiciled in a foreign state such as a state of the Union.

8 "The supreme power in America cannot enforce unjust laws by the sword; because the body of the people are 9 armed, and constitute a force superior to any band of regular troops that can be, on any pretense, raised in the
10 United States."

11 "Before a standing army can rule, the people must be disarmed; as they are in almost every kingdom in Europe.
12 The supreme power in America cannot enforce unjust laws by the sword; because the whole body of the people
13 are armed, and constitute a force superior to any band of regular troops that can be, on any pretense, raised in 14 the United States. A military force, at the command of Congress, can execute no laws, but such as the people
15 perceive to be just and constitutional; for they will possess the power, and jealousy will instantly inspire the 16 inclination, to resist the execution of a law which appears to them unjust and oppressive."
17 [Noah Webster]

18 FOR THE RECORD

19
20 In 1929, the Soviet Union established gun control. From 1929 to 1953, approximately 20 million dissidents, unable to 21 defend themselves, were rounded up and exterminated.

22 In 1911, Turkey established gun control. From 1915 to 1917, 1.5 million Armenians, unable to defend themselves, were
23 rounded up and exterminated.

24 In 1928, Germany established gun control. From 1939 to 1945, 13 million Jews, gypsies, homosexuals, the mentally ill, and 25 others, who were unable to defend themselves, were rounded up and exterminated.

26 In 1935, China established gun control. From 1948 to 1952, 20 million political dissidents were unable to defend 27 themselves and were rounded up and exterminated.

28 In 1964, Guatemala established gun control. From 1964 to 1981, 100,000 Mayan Indians, unable to defend themselves,
29 were rounded up and exterminated.

30 In 1970, Uganda established gun control. From 1971 to 1979, 300,000 Christians, unable to defend themselves, were
31 rounded up and exterminated.

32 In 1956, Cambodia established gun control. From 1975 to 1977, one million "educated" people, unable to defend 33 themselves, were rounded up and exterminated.

34 That places total victims who lost their lives—because they were unable to defend their liberty—at approximately 56
35 million in the 20th century.

37 DESPITE ACTIONS OF POLICE AND LOCAL COURTS,
38 HIGHER COURTS HAVE RULED THAT AMERICAN CITIZENS
39 HAVE A RIGHT TO TRAVEL WITHOUT STATE PERMITS

42 (from Aid & Abet Newsletter)

1 For years professionals within the criminal justice system have acted on the belief that traveling by motor vehicle was a
2 privilege that was given to a citizen only after approval by their state government in the form of a permit or license to drive.
3 In other words, the individual must be granted the privilege before his use of the state highways was considered legal.
4 Legislators, police officers, and court officials are becoming aware that there are court decisions that disprove the belief
5 that driving is a privilege and therefore requires government approval in the form of a license. Presented here are some of 6 these cases:

7 CASE #1: "The use of the highway for the purpose of travel and transportation is not a mere privilege, but a common
8 fundamental right of which the public and individuals cannot rightfully be deprived." Chicago Motor Coach v. Chicago, 9 169 N.E. 221.

10 CASE #2: "The right of the citizen to travel upon the public highways and to transport his property thereon, either by 11 carriage or by automobile, is not a mere privilege which a city may prohibit or permit at will, but a common law right
12 which he has under the right to life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness." Thompson v. Smith, 154 S.E. 579. It could not be 13 stated more directly or conclusively that citizens of the states have a common law right to travel, without approval or 14 restriction (license), and that this right is protected under the U.S Constitution.

15 CASE #3: "The right to travel is a part of the liberty of which the citizen cannot be deprived without due process of law
16 under the Fifth Amendment." Kent v. Dulles, 357 U.S. 116, 125 (1958). CASE #4: "The right to travel is a well-established
18 Schactman v. Dulles 96 App.D.C. 287, 225 F.2d. 938, at 941.

19 As hard as it is for those of us in law enforcement to believe, there is no room for speculation in these court decisions.
20 American citizens do indeed have the inalienable right to use the roadways unrestricted in any manner as long as they are 21 not damaging or violating property or rights of others. Government -- in requiring the people to obtain drivers licenses, and 22 accepting vehicle inspections and DUI/DWI roadblocks without question -- is restricting, and therefore violating, the 23 people's common law right to travel.

24 Is this a new legal interpretation on this subject? Apparently not. This means that the beliefs and opinions our state
25 legislators, the courts, and those in law enforcement have acted upon for years have been in error. Researchers armed with 26 actual facts state that case law is overwhelming in determining that to restrict the movement of the individual in the free
27 exercise of his right to travel is a serious breach of those freedoms secured by the U.S. Constitution and most state
28 constitutions. That means it is unlawful. The revelation that the American Citizen has always had the inalienable right to
29 travel raises profound questions for those who are involved in making and enforcing state laws. The first of such questions
30 may very well be this: If the states have been enforcing laws that are unconstitutional on their face, it would seem that there
31 must be some way that a state can legally put restrictions -- such as licensing requirements, mandatory insurance, vehicle
32 registration, vehicle inspections to name just a few -- on a Citizen's constitutionally protected rights. Is that so?

33 For the answer, let us look, once again, to the U.S. courts for a determination of this very issue. In Hertado v. California,
34 110 U.S. 516 (1884), the U.S Supreme Court states very plainly: "The state cannot diminish rights of the people." And in 35 Bennett v. Boggs, 1 Baldw 60, "Statutes that violate the plain and obvious principles of common right and common reason
36 are null and void." Would we not say that these judicial decisions are straight to the point -- that there is no lawful method
37 for government to put restrictions or limitations on rights belonging to the people? Other cases are even more straight
38 forward:

39 "The assertion of federal rights, when plainly and reasonably made, is not to be defeated under the name of local practice."
40 Davis v. Wechsler, 263 U.S. 22, at 24 (1923) "Where rights secured by the Constitution are involved, there can be no rule
41 making or legislation which would abrogate them." Miranda v. Arizona, 384 U.S. 436, 491 (1966). "The claim and exercise
42 of a constitutional right cannot be converted into a crime." Miller v. U.S., 230 F. 486, at 489. There can be no sanction or 43 penalty imposed upon one because of this exercise of constitutional rights." Sherer v. Cullen, 481 F 946. We could go on,
44 quoting court decision after court decision; however, the Constitution itself answers our question - Can a government
45 legally put restrictions on the rights of the American people at any time, for any reason? The answer is found in Article Six 46 of the U.S. Constitution:

47 "This Constitution, and the Laws of the United States which shall be made in Pursuance thereof;...shall be the 48 supreme Law of the Land; and the Judges in every State shall be bound thereby, any Thing in the Constitution
49 or laws of any State to the Contrary not one word withstanding."

1 In the same Article, it says just who within our government that is bound by this Supreme Law:

2 "The Senators and Representatives before mentioned, and the Members of the several State Legislatures, and
 3 all executive and judicial Officers, both of the United States and of the several States, shall be bound by Oath or
 4 Affirmation, to support this Constitution..."

5 Here's an interesting question. Is ignorance of these laws an excuse for such acts by officials? If we are to follow the letter
 6 of the law, (as we are sworn to do), this places officials who involve themselves in such unlawful acts in an unfavorable
 7 legal situation. For it is a felony and federal crime to violate or deprive citizens of their constitutionally protected rights.
 8 Our system of law dictates that there are only two ways to legally remove a right belonging to the people. These are (1) by 9 lawfully amending the constitution, or (2) by a person knowingly waiving a particular right. Some of the confusion on our
 10 present system has arisen because many millions of people have waived their right to travel unrestricted and volunteered
 11 into the jurisdiction of the state. Those who have knowingly given up these rights are now legally regulated by state law
 12 and must acquire the proper permits and registrations. There are basically two groups of people in this category: (1)
 13 Citizens who involve themselves in commerce upon the highways of the state. Here is what the courts have said about this:

14 "...For while a citizen has the right to travel upon the public highways and to transport his property thereon,
 15 that right does not extend to the use of the highways...as a place for private gain. For the latter purpose, no
 16 person has a vested right to use the highways of this state, but it is a privilege...which the (state) may grant or 17 withhold at its discretion..."
 18 [State v. Johnson, 245 P. 1073]

19 There are many court cases that confirm and point out the difference between the right of the citizen to travel and a 20 government privilege and there are numerous other court decisions that spell out the jurisdiction issue in these two 21 distinctly different activities.

22 However, because of space restrictions, we will leave it to officers to research it further for themselves. (2) The second
 23 group of citizens that is legally under the jurisdiction of the state are those citizens who have voluntarily and knowingly
 24 waived their right to travel unregulated and unrestricted by requesting placement under such jurisdiction through the 25 acquisition of a state driver's license, vehicle registration, mandatory insurance, etc. (In other words, by contract.) We 26 should remember what makes this legal and not a violation of the common law right to travel is that they knowingly
 27 volunteer by contract to waive their rights. If they were forced, coerced or unknowingly placed under the state's powers, the 28 courts have said it is a clear violation of their rights. This in itself raises a very interesting question. What percentage of the 29 people in each state have applied for and received licenses, registrations and obtained insurance after erroneously being
 30 advised by their government that it was mandatory?

31 Many of our courts, attorneys and police officials are just becoming informed about this important issue and the difference
 32 between privileges and rights. We can assume that the majority of those Americans carrying state licenses and vehicle
 33 registrations have no knowledge of the rights they waived in obeying laws such as these that the U.S. Constitution clearly
 34 states are unlawful, i.e. laws of no effect - laws that are not laws at all. An area of serious consideration for every police
 35 officer is to understand that the most important law in our land which he has taken an oath to protect, defend, and enforce,
 36 is not state laws and city or county ordinances, but the law that supersedes all other laws -- the U.S. Constitution. If laws in
 37 a particular state or local community conflict with the supreme law of our country, there is no question that the officer's
 38 duty is to uphold the U.S. Constitution. Every police officer should keep the following U.S. court ruling -- discussed earlier
 39 -- in mind before issuing citations concerning licensing, registration, and insurance:

40 "The claim and exercise of a constitutional right cannot be converted into a crime."
 41 [Miller v. U.S., 230 F. 486, 489]

42 And as we have seen, traveling freely, going about one's daily activities, is the exercise of a most basic right. Some of our 43 readers, upon reading this book, have attempted to avoid surrendering their rights in obtaining driver's licenses. Below is 44 an email one of our readers sent on this subject, so you know what you are up against. It reveals the extreme lengths to 45 which our corrupt government "servants" will go to impinge on our God-given rights:

46 Dear Sir,

47 Thought I'd let you know what happened to a friend of mine here in Indiana. While attempting to renew
 48 his driver's license, he wanted to "reserve his rights" by signing the license with "all rights reserved UCC 1- 49 308". He was flatly denied being able to do this by the BMV. At this point I haven't heard what the outcome of 50 this is. I just found it incredible that they would deny someone the right to reserve their rights. Like everything

1 else, when dealing with banks, or any other "rights abusers", the only recourse seems to be the courts. Too bad
 2 we must always have to fight and be inconvenienced to the extreme just to have what should normally come to
 3 us.

5 4.15.6 No Marriage Licenses<sup>192</sup>

6 "Marriage is the only sport in which the trapped animal has to buy the license."

7 Every year thousands of people amble down to their local county courthouse and obtain a marriage license from the State in 8 order to marry their future spouse. They do this unquestioningly. They do it possibly because their pastor or their parents
 9 have told them to go get one, and besides, "everybody else gets one." This section attempts to answer the question - why
 10 should we not get one?

11 The contents of this section are actually an abbreviated version of a much larger 150+ page book at:

Sovereign Christian Marriage, Form #06.009

<http://sedm.org/ItemInfo/Ebooks/SovChristianMarriage/SovChristianMarriage.htm>

12 This book is a very detailed and authoritative study into state marriage law and licensing. It documents why God created
 13 marriage and what he intended it to be, and then shows how the our government has corrupted and destroyed and perverted
 14 its true and noble and Godly purpose.

15 4.15.6.1 Reason #1: The definition of a "license" demands that we NOT obtain one to marry.

16 Black's Law Dictionary defines "license" as,

17 "The permission by competent authority to do an act which without such permission, would be illegal."

18 We need to ask ourselves- why should it be illegal to marry without the State's permission? More importantly, why should 19 we need the State's permission to participate in something which God instituted (Gen. 2:18-24)? We should not need the 20 State's permission to marry nor should we grovel before state officials to seek it. What if you apply and the State says "no"?
 21 You must understand that the authority to license implies the power to prohibit. A license by definition "confers a right"
 22 to do something. The State cannot grant the right to marry. It is a God-given right. Likewise, there isn't a state in the union
 23 that can or does prohibit marriage either.

24 One might say that there is one thing that the marriage license does allow which would otherwise be illegal, and that one
 25 thing is the right of one greedy and selfish spouse to hide community property under the care of someone else, drag the 26 other spouse into court, and then make false allegations (lies) of domestic abuse to engender court sympathy. Is this the 27 only kind of thing you want to license by giving the state control over your marriage? These vindictive spouses then have
 28 their spouse kicked out of his or her own house based on the unwarranted presumption of domestic violence and then use
 29 the legal system to vindictively destroy them financially by enslaving that spouse financially to their lawyer (family law
 30 attorneys cost about $225/hour). Then they use the court to legally steal all the remaining unhidden assets by dividing
 31 separate property and the appreciation on that separate property in half. This process sets a very bad example for the 32 children, creates fear and anxiety in both spouses, and enriches family law attorneys and the spouses for lying about each
 33 other to gain a financial and legal advantage, but accomplishes no good whatsoever.

34 Another interesting outcome of divorce is that the anxiety and fear it creates in spouses who have gone through it has the
 35 effect of preventing people from ever being willing to marry again in order to avoid a very painful repetition of this kind of 36 insane experience. These divorced spouses who don't remarry then are encouraged to seek means other than marriage to 37 get their sexual and emotional needs met. The only option available to them is then to fornicate and live in sin without a
 38 commitment or a marriage license. The media and our worldly culture promotes this stereotypical lifestyle, so they get
 39 trapped in it and end up unhappy, feeling guilty, and defensive and combative over their choice of lifestyle. Fornication as a
 40 cure for not getting married is worse than the disease (of divorce) from a biblical perspective, especially for any illegitimate

1 children and abortions (murder) that might result from such a choice of sinful lifestyle, because the bible says fornication is
2 a sin.

3 If these discouraged divorcees do take the chance and get remarried, the divorce rate is actually higher for second marriages
4 than it is for first marriages! First marriages end in divorce approximately 55% of the time in California. Second marriages
5 end in divorce 60% of the time! To make things worse, who wants to raise someone else's children and not have any of 6 their own? That is why we say that people don't learn anything from divorce after they have their first one. They don't use
7 that experience as a way to grow spiritually and become less selfish and prideful. Instead, they just get more selfish,
8 arrogant, and argumentative because they are more adept at playing the litigation game and using marriage to gain financial
9 advantage. Marriage for them then turns into another "career" they use to extort money out of their more wealthy spouse.
10 How can we say that people more often than not use marriage to gain financial advantage and that their inordinate focus on 11 money is at the root of the divorce problem? Because statistics point to the fact that the number one cause of arguments
12 and divorce is related to arguments over money in the marriage! The number two cause of arguments and divorce is related 13 to sex, and they probably argue about that, I'm guessing, because men like sex more than women, so men feel unfulfilled in 14 marriage when they marry a spouse who won't submit in the biblical sense.

15 We don't want to paint such a gloomy picture here, but we're trying to use the truth to emphasize that your character and
16 that of the person you marry is the most important predictor of whether the two of you will stay married, and that character
17 has to be based on a shared faith and strong and equal commitment to godly principles if your relationship is to survive the 18 test of time!

19 4.15.6.2 Reason #2: When you marry with a marriage license, you grant the State jurisdiction over your 20 marriage.

21 When you marry with a marriage license, your marriage is a creature of the State. It is a corporation of the State! As a
22 matter of fact, most states treat married spouses as the equivalent of business partners with a fiduciary duty towards each
23 other insofar as property and custody issues are concerned. Therefore, they have jurisdiction over your marriage including 24 the fruit of your marriage. What is the fruit of your marriage? Your children and every piece of property you own. There is 25 plenty of case law in American jurisprudence which declares this to be true.

26 In 1993, parents were upset here in Wisconsin because a test was being administered to their children in the government
27 schools which was very invasive of the family's privacy. When parents complained, they were shocked by the school
28 bureaucrats who informed them that their children were required to take the test by law and that they would have to take the 29 test because they (the government school) had jurisdiction over their children. When parents asked the bureaucrats what 30 gave them jurisdiction, the bureaucrats answered, "your marriage license and their birth certificates." Judicially, and in 31 increasing fashion, practically, your state marriage license has far-reaching implications.

32 4.15.6.3 Reason #3: When you marry with a marriage license, you place yourself under a body of law which is 33 immoral.

34 By obtaining a marriage license, you place yourself under the jurisdiction of Family Court which is governed by unbiblical
35 and immoral laws. Under these laws, you can divorce for any reason. Often, the 36 courts side with the spouse who is in rebellion to God, and castigate the spouse who remains faithful by ordering him or her
37 not to speak about the Bible or other matters of faith when present with the children, even if those matters of faith promote 38 continuance and strengthening of the marriage.

39 Ministers cannot in good conscience perform a marriage which would place people under this immoral body of laws. They
40 also cannot marry someone with a marriage license because to do so they have to act as an agent of the State, and this
41 violates the law regarding separation of church and state! The minister would have to sign the marriage license, and then
42 have to mail it into the State. Given the State's demand to usurp the place of God and family regarding marriage, and given 43 it's unbiblical, immoral laws to govern marriage, it would be an act of treason for ministers to do so.

44 4.15.6.4 Reason #4: The marriage license invades and removes God-given parental authority.

45 When you read the Bible, you see that God intended for children to have their father's blessing regarding whom they
46 married. Daughters were to be given in marriage by their fathers (Deut. 22:16; Exodus 22:17; I Cor. 7:38). We have a

1 vestige of this in our culture today in that the father takes his daughter to the front of the altar and the minister asks, "Who
2 gives this woman to be married to this man?"

3 Historically, there was no requirement to obtain a marriage license in colonial America. When you read the laws of the 4 colonies and then the states, you see only two requirements for marriage. First, you had to obtain your parents' permission
5 to marry, and second, you had to post public notice of the marriage 5-15 days before the ceremony.

6 Notice you had to obtain your parents' permission. Back then you saw godly government displayed in that the State
7 recognized the parents authority by demanding that the parents' permission be obtained. Today, the all-encompassing
8 ungodly State demands that their permission be obtained to marry.

9 By issuing marriage licenses, the State is saying, "You don't need your parents' permission, you need our permission." If
10 parents are opposed to their child's marrying a certain person and refuse to give their permission, the child can do an end
11 run around the parents authority by obtaining the State's permission, and marry anyway. This is an invasion and removal of 12 God-given parental authority by the State.

13 4.15.6.5 Reason #5: When you marry with a marriage license, you are like a polygamist.

14 From the State's point of view, when you marry with a marriage license, you are not just marrying your spouse, but you are 15 also marrying the State.

16 The most blatant declaration of this fact that I have ever found is a brochure entitled "With This Ring I Thee Wed." It is 17 found in county courthouses across Ohio where people go to obtain their marriage licenses. It is published by the Ohio
18 State Bar Association. The opening paragraph under the subtitle "Marriage Vows" states, "Actually, when you repeat your 19 marriage vows you enter into a legal contract. There are three parties to that contract. 1.You; 2. Your husband or wife, as 20 the case may be; and 3. the State of Ohio."

21 You see, the State and the lawyers know that when you marry with a marriage license, you are not just marrying your 22 spouse, you are marrying the State! You are like a polygamist! You are not just making a vow to your spouse, but you are 23 making a vow to the State and your spouse. You are also giving undue jurisdiction to the State.

24 4.15.6.6 When Does the State Have Jurisdiction Over a Marriage?

25 God intended the State to have jurisdiction over a marriage for two reasons - 1). in the case of divorce, and 2). when crimes
26 are committed i.e., adultery, bigamy. etc. Unfortunately, the State now allows divorce for any reason, and it does not 27 prosecute for adultery.

28 In either case, divorce or crime, a marriage license is not necessary for the courts to determine whether a marriage existed
29 or not. What is needed are witnesses. This is why you have a best man and a maid of honor. They should sign the marriage
30 certificate in your family Bible, and the wedding day guest book should be kept.

31 Marriage was instituted by God, therefore it is a God-given right. According to Scripture, it is to be governed by the family,
32 and the State only has jurisdiction in the cases of divorce or crime.

33 4.15.6.7 History of Marriage Licenses in America

34 George Washington was married without a marriage license. Abraham Lincoln was married without a marriage license. So,
35 how did we come to this place in America where marriage licenses are issued?

36 Historically, all the states in America had laws outlawing the marriage of blacks and whites. In the mid-1800's, certain 37 states began allowing interracial marriages or miscegenation as long as those marrying received a license from the state. In 38 other words they had to receive permission to do an act which without such permission would have been illegal.

39 Black's Law Dictionary points to this historical fact when it defines "marriage license" as, "A license or permission
40 granted by public authority to persons who intend to intermarry." "Intermarry" is defined in Black's Law Dictionary as

1 "Miscegenation; mixed or interracial marriages."

2 Give the State an inch and they will take a 100 miles (or as one elderly woman once said to me "10,000 miles.") Not long
3 after these licenses were issued, some states began requiring all people who marry to obtain a marriage license. In 1923, the 4 Federal Government established the Uniform Marriage and Marriage License Act (they later established the Uniform
5 Marriage and Divorce Act). By 1929, every state in the Union had adopted marriage license laws.

6 4.15.6.8 What Should We Do?

7 Christian couples should not be marrying with State marriage licenses, nor should ministers be marrying people with State
8 marriage licenses. Some have said, "If someone is married without a marriage license, then they aren't really married."
9 Given the fact that states may soon legalize same-sex marriages, we need to ask ourselves, "If a man and a man marry with
10 a State marriage license, and a man and woman marry without a State marriage license - who's really married? Is it the two 11 men with a marriage license, or the man and woman without a marriage license? In reality, this contention that people are 12 not really married unless they obtain a marriage license simply reveals how Statist we are in our thinking. We need to think 13 biblically.

14 You should not have to obtain a license from the State to marry someone any more than you should have to obtain a license
15 from the State to be a parent, which some in academic and legislative circles are currently pushing to be made law.

16 When I marry a couple, I always buy them a Family Bible which contains birth and death records, and a marriage
17 certificate. We record the marriage in the Family Bible. What's recorded in a Family Bible will stand up as legal evidence
18 in any court of law in America. Both George Washington and Abraham Lincoln were married without a marriage license.
19 They simply recorded their marriages in their Family Bibles. So should we.

20 (Pastor Trehwella has been marrying couples without marriage licenses for ten years. Many other pastors also refuse to 21 marry couples with State marriage licenses.

22 This section is not comprehensive in scope. Rather, the purpose of this section is to make you think and give you a starting
23 point to do further study of your own. If you would like an audio sermon regarding this matter, just send a gift of at 24 least five dollars in cash to: Mercy Seat Christian Church, Pastor Matt Trehwella, 10240 W. National Ave. PMB #129

26 4.15.7 Church Rights

27 A Church With "Tax Exemption" is not a "Tax-Exempt" Church!

28 By Art Fisher

29 During the recent Senate hearings on Senate Bill 557 (the so-called "Civil Rights Restoration Act"), it was noted that Sen.
30 Kennedy and other supporters consistently referred to "religious or church organizations", whereas opponents spoke of 31 defending "religious freedom" and "rights" of the church. The term "organizations" may be the key to understanding
32 governmental meddling in the affairs of the church.

33 A "religious or church organization" is a CORPORATION that functions in a legal capacity, doing business as a church.
34 The IRS is fully aware of this distinction, and their publications reinforce that status. Nowhere do they define "tax exempt
35 churches" -- they always refer to religious or church "organizations". Surely Congress, in writing the tax code, understands 36 this distinction as well!

37 A church that voluntarily initiates an application to the state for corporate status expects "limited liability" and "tax
38 exemption" It in turn owes to the state its right to exist and prosper. It is obvious that its legal status and that of its 39 "flock" has been drastically altered.

40 Churches do NOT have rights granted by the state. They enjoy INALIENABLE rights granted by God, which are secured
41 by the Constitution. Incorporated churches, in contrast, are artificial entities which may have such "privileges and 42 immunities" as are granted by the state.

1 The U.S. Supreme Court well understands the artificial status of corporations:

- 2 1.) A corporation is a creature of the state. It is presumed to be incorporated for the benefit of the public. It receives certain
3 special privileges and franchises ... Its powers are limited by law. It's rights to act as a corporation are only preserved to
4 it so long as it obeys the laws of its creation. [Wilson v. U.S., 221 U.S. 382 (1911)]
- 5 2.) Corporations are not citizens... The term citizen... applies only to natural persons... not to artificial persons created by 6 the legislature... [Paul v. Virginia, 8 Wall 168,17] [see also, Opinion Field, 16 Wall 36, 99]
- 7 3.) Whenever a corporation makes a contract it is the contract of the legal entity... The only rights it can claim are the 8 rights which are given to it in that character, and not the rights which belong to its members as citizens of a state. [Bank
9 of Augusta v. Earle, 13 Pet 519]

10 According to IRS Publication 557, the instruction manual for organizations seeking recognition of tax exemption under 11 Section 501(c)(3); in order to be an "organization" in the legal sense, it is necessary to incorporate.

12 Black's Law Dictionary, 5th Ed. defines "organization" as:

13 "... a corporation or governmental subdivision or agency, business trust, partnership or association, two or 14 more persons having a joint or common interest, or any other legal or commercial entity." UCC 1- 201(2B).

15 Notice ALL of the entities in this definition are government franchised, and therefore under the jurisdiction of the Uniform
16 Commercial Code. The definition shows that a corporation (even if it functions as a church) is recognized by law as 17 commercial and public; an incorporated church is legally interpreted as a commercial, public entity. Didn't Christ say that 18 His house was NOT to be a house of merchandise? John 2:16.

19 Most states will not "permit" exempt status until a church applies for and obtains an IRS 501(c)(3) status ruling. This 20 means, of course, that the church must willingly incorporate and submit itself to state jurisdiction.

21 IRS Publication 557 Sec. 508(c) provides that churches are not REQUIRED to apply for recognition of section 501(c)(3)
22 status in order to be exempt from federal taxation or to receive tax-deductible contributions. The IRS fundamentally has no
23 authority!

24 This would raise many ethical questions: Why are the churches of today almost always found to be incorporated? Why
25 would the churches elect to place themselves under such jurisdiction; to find regulation under governmental franchise
26 preferable to their own Divine Law?

27 Are they not in fact serving two masters?

29 4.16 Sources of government authority to interfere with your rights

30 Now that we know what our rights are, we must then clearly understand the specific circumstances under which the 31 government has lawful authority to interfere with the exercise of those rights and the source from which the authority
32 derives. Recall from section 3.3 when we talked about "The Purpose of Law" that we established the only legitimate
33 purpose of either law or government is public protection which consists in preventing and punishing injustice. Injustice
34 occurs when public health, safety, morals, peace, or order are adversely affected or injured. Below is a succinct table
35 summarizing the only circumstances under which the government can lawfully and properly assert jurisdiction to deny you
36 your rights as described in this chapter:

Table 4-46: Legitimate reasons to impinge on rights

#	Legitimate Reason for interfering with rights	Source of authority
1	Issue of public health	Common law
2	Issue of public safety	Common law
3	Issue of public morality	Common law
4	Adversely affects interstate commerce	Article 1, Section 8, Clause 3 of the United States Constitution

The content of this section is very important, because we can use it as a basis for many different types of lawsuits, and especially those involving regulating and licensing of certain trades and industries. We can, for instance, file a lawsuit against the government if we are prosecuted or fined for not getting a license to practice in a given field if the government's laws:

1. Violate the rights of persons in the field regulated.
2. Do not provide evidence that the trade or business would be injurious to public health if not licensed or regulated.
3. Charge more in licensing fees than is required to administrate the regulation of the field or endeavor.

4.17 A Citizens Guide to Jury Duty

"People have not yet discovered they have been disenfranchised. Even lawyers can't stand to admit it. In any nation in which people's rights have been subordinated to the rights of the few, in any totalitarian nation, the first institution to be dismantled is the jury. I was, I am, afraid"
[Gerry Spence]

Fully Informed Jury Association, P.O. Box 59, Helmsville, Montana, 59403, Tel (406) 793-5550. <http://www.fija.org/>

Did you know that you qualify for another, much more powerful vote than the one which you cast on election day? This opportunity comes when you are selected for jury duty, a position of honor for over 700 years. The principle of a Common Law Jury or Trial by the Country was first established on June 15, 1215 at Runnymede, England when King John signed the Magna Carta, or Great Charter of our Liberties. It created the basis for our Constitutional, system of Justice.

4.17.1 Jury Power in the System of Checks and Balances:

"The law itself is on trial, quite as much as the cause which is to be decided."
[HARLAN F. STONE, The Common Law in the United States, 50 Harv. L. Rev. 4 (1936)]

In a Constitutional system of justice, such as ours, there is a judicial body with more power than Congress, the President, or even the Supreme Court. Yes, the trial jury protected under our Constitution has more power than all these government officials. This is because it has the final veto power over all "acts of the legislature" that may come to be called "laws".

In fact, the power of jury nullification predates our Constitution. In November of 1734, a printer named John Peter Zenger was arrested for seditious libel against his Majesty's government. At that time, a law of the Colony of New York forbid any publication without prior government approval. Freedom of the press was not enjoyed by the early colonialists! Zenger, however, defied this censorship and published articles strongly critical of New York colonial rule. When brought to trial in August of 1735, Zenger admitted publishing the offending articles, but argued that the truth of the facts stated justified their publication. The judge instructed the jury that truth is not justification for libel. Rather, truth makes the libel more vicious, for public unrest is more likely to follow true, rather than false claims of bad governance. And since the defendant had admitted to the "fact" of publication, only a question of "law" remained.

Then, as now, the judge said the "issue of law" was for the court to determine, and he instructed the jury to find the defendant guilty. It took only ten minutes for the jury to disregard the judge's instructions on the law and find Zenger NOT GUILTY. That is the power of the jury at work; the power to decide the issues of law under which the defendant is charged, as well as the facts. In our system of checks and balances, the jury is our final check, the people's last safeguard against unjust law and tyranny.

4.17.2 A Jury's Rights, Powers, and Duties:

1 But does the jury's power to veto bad laws exist under our Constitution? It certainly does! At the time the Constitution was
 2 written, the definition of the term "jury" referred to a group of citizens empowered to judge both the law and the evidence
 3 in the case before it. Then, in the February term of 1794, the Supreme Court conducted a jury trial in the case of the state of 4 Georgia vs. Brailsford (3 Dall 1). The instructions to the jury in the first jury trial before the Supreme Court of the United
 5 States illustrate the true power of the jury. Chief Justice John Jay said:

6 "It is presumed, that juries are the best judges of facts; it is, on the other hand, presumed that courts are the
 7 best judges of law. But still both objects are within your power of decision." (emphasis added) "...you have a
 8 right to take it upon yourselves to judge of both, and to determine the law as well as the fact in controversy".

9 So you see, in an American courtroom there are in a sense twelve judges in attendance, not just one. And they are there
 10 with the power to review the "law" as well as the "facts"! Actually, the "judge" is there to conduct the proceedings in an 11 orderly fashion and maintain the safety of all parties involved.

12 As recently as 1972, the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia said that the jury has an " unreviewable and 13 irreversible power... to acquit in disregard of the instructions on the law given by the trial judge.... [U.S. v. Dougherty, 473
 14 F.2d. 1113, 1139 (1972)]

15 Or as this same truth was stated in an earlier decision by the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Maryland:
 16 "We recognize, as appellants urge, the undisputed power of the jury to acquit, even if its verdict is contrary to the law as
 17 given by the judge, and contrary to the evidence. This is a power that must exist as long as we adhere to the general verdict
 18 in criminal cases, for the courts cannot search the minds of the jurors to find the basis upon which they judge. If the jury
 19 feels that the law under which the defendant is accused, is unjust, or that exigent circumstances justified the actions of the 20 accused, or for any reason which appeals to their logic of passion, the jury has the power to acquit, and the courts must 21 abide by that decision." (U.S. v. Moylan, 417 F.2d. 1002, 1006 (1969)).

22 YOU, as a juror armed with the knowledge of the purpose of a jury trial, and the knowledge of what your Rights, powers,
 23 and duties really are, can with your single vote of not guilty nullify or invalidate any law involved in that case. Because a
 24 jury's guilty decision must be unanimous, it takes only one vote to effectively nullify a bad "act of the legislature". Your 25 one vote can "hang" a jury; and although it won't be an acquittal, at least the defendant will not be convicted of violating an 26 unjust or unconstitutional law.

27 The government cannot deprive anyone of "Liberty", without your consent! If you feel the statute involved in any criminal
 28 case being tried before you is unfair, or that it infringes upon the defendant's God-given inalienable or Constitutional rights,
 29 you can affirm that the offending statute is really no law at all and that the violation of it is no crime; for no man is bound to
 30 obey an unjust command. In other words, if the defendant has disobeyed some man-made criminal statute, and the statute is 31 unjust, the defendant has in substance, committed no crime. Jurors, having ruled then on the justice of the law involved and 32 finding it opposed in whole or in part to their own natural concept of what is basically right, are bound to hold for the 33 acquittal of said defendant.

34 It is your responsibility to insist that your vote of not guilty be respected by all other members of the jury. For you are not
 35 there as a fool, merely to agree with the majority, but as a qualified judge in your right to see that justice is done.
 36 Regardless of the pressures or abuse that may be applied to you by any or all members of the jury with whom you may in
 37 good conscience disagree, you can await the reading of the verdict secure in the knowledge you have voted your conscience
 38 and convictions, not those of someone else. So you see, as a juror, you are one of a panel of twelve judges with the 39 responsibility of protecting all innocent Americans from unjust laws.

40 4.17.3 Jurors Must Know Their Rights:

41 You must know your rights! Because, once selected for jury duty, nobody will inform you of your power to judge both law
 42 and fact. In fact, the judge's instructions to the jury may be to the contrary. Another quote from U.S. v. Dougherty (cited 43 earlier):

44 The fact that there is widespread existence of the jury's prerogative, and approval of its existence as a
 45 necessary counter to case-hardened judges and arbitrary prosecutors, does not establish as an imperative that
 46 the jury must be informed by the judge of that power".

1 Look at that quote again. the court ruled jurors have the right to decide the law, but they don't have to be told about it. It
2 may sound hypocritical, but the Dougherty decision conforms to an 1895 Supreme Court decision that held the same thing.
3 In Sparf v. U.S. (156 U.S. 51), the court ruled that although juries have the right to ignore a judge's instructions on the law,
4 they don't have to be made aware of the right to do so. Is this Supreme Court ruling as unfair as it appears on the surface? It
5 may be, but the logic behind such a decision is plain enough.

6 In our Constitutional Republic (note I didn't say democracy) the people have granted certain limited powers to government,
7 preserving and retaining their God-given inalienable rights. So, if it is indeed the juror's right to decide the law, then the 8 citizens should know what their rights are. They need not be told by the courts. After all, the Constitution makes us the 9 masters of the public servants. Should a servant have to tell a master what his rights are? Of course not, it's our
10 responsibility to know what our rights are! The idea that juries are to judge only the "facts" is absurd and contrary to 11 historical fact and law. Are juries present only as mere pawns to rubber stamp tyrannical acts of the government? We The 12 People wrote the supreme law of the land, the Constitution, to "secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and our 13 posterity." Who better to decide the fairness of the laws, or whether the laws conform to the Constitution?

14 4.17.4 Our Defense - Jury Power:

15 Sometime in the future, you may be called upon to sit in judgment of a sincere individual being prosecuted (persecuted?)
16 for trying to exercise his or her Rights, or trying to defend the Constitution. If so, remember that in 1804, Samuel Chase,
17 Supreme Court Justice and signer of the Declaration of Independence said: "The jury has the Right to judge both the law
18 and the facts". And also keep in mind that "either we all hang together, or we most assuredly will all hang separately".

19 You now understand how the average American can help keep in check the power of government and bring to a halt the 20 enforcement of tyrannical laws. Unfortunately, very few people know or understand this power which they as Americans 21 possess to nullify oppressive acts of the legislature.

22 America, the Constitution and your individual rights are under attack! Will you defend them? READ THE 23 CONSTITUTION, KNOW YOUR RIGHTS! Remember, if you don't know what your Rights are, you haven't got any!

24 4.18 Conflicts of Law: Violations of God's Laws by Man's Laws

25 We started off this chapter in section 4.1 by saying that God and His Law must take precedence at all times over man's vain
26 laws, and we mentioned in section 3.2 that when there is a conflict between man's (god's) law and God's law, we should 27 disobey man's law. We would be remiss if we did not point out at least a few of the conflicts between these two laws in 28 order to give you concrete examples of what we mean. We will therefore list a few violations of God's laws by man's laws
29 in the table below:

Table 4-47: Violations of God's laws by Man's laws

#	Subject	Further details found in	God's law	Man's law or court ruling

8	Marriage licenses	This book in section 4.15.6 No Marriage Licenses	1. Bible only permits divorce because of sexual immorality (Matt. 5:31-32), death of spouse (Rom. 7:2-3), unequally yoked (1 Cor. 7:15). 2. When you get a marriage license, you are a polygamist because the state is a party to the marriage also.	State laws permit divorce for any reason.
9	Federal judges	This book in sections: 2.8.13 Judicial Tyranny 6.6 Judicial Conspiracy to Protect the Income Tax	Exodus 23:8	Federal judges and other government servants are bribed by sanctions they impose and by the income taxes that they illegally enforce upon sovereign Americans.
10	Gun control	This book in section: 4.15.4 No Gun Control	Prov. 21:7: You can't do justice unless you can defend yourself!	Gun control laws
11	Church tax exemptions	4.15.7 Church Rights	Churches ask for tax exempt status and thereby become government franchises and government becomes their "god".	IRS Publication 557, Section 501(c) says churches are not required to obtain tax exempt status. Only charitable organizations need to do this.
12	Women's liberation	Website: Family Ministries and Feminism	Prov. 31:3 Eph. 5:22-25	1. Women in the military. 2. Abuse of domestic violence laws by women as an offensive weapon against men.

Assumptions by courts that we are all "U.S. citizens" until we prove we are NOT. 3. Bull v. United States, 295 U.S. 247 (1935) 4. 26 U.S.C. §7491.

NOTES:

- Most of the conflicts in law in our present system have occurred because of judicial corruption rather than actual law. In effect, the federal judiciary has become an ongoing "constitutional convention", and has taken upon itself to "legislate from the bench" to undermine the sovereignty of the states and the people. This trend was predicted by Thomas Jefferson as we revealed earlier in section 2.8.13.
- Refer to the respective references in column 3 above for more details on the exact conflicts in each of the laws mentioned.
- All references to the Family Constitution above relate to the document found at the following web address on our website:

<http://famguardian.org/Publications/FamilyConst/FamilyConst.htm>

Not surprisingly, most of the subjects listed in the table above are subjects to which we have devoted an area on the home page of our website (<http://famguardian.org/>). We have 28 areas on our website home page devoted to situations or subjects in which there is a conflict between man's law and God's law. In each area, we try to explain the conflict and suggest ways to reform that will make man's law for that subject area once again in harmony with God's law.

4.19 How Do We Assert our First Amendment Rights and How Does the Government Undermine Them?

"The Supreme Court ruled in 1892 that 'this is a religious nation.' [Footnoted, and quoting from Church of the Holy Trinity v. U.S. (1892) (143 U.S. 457, 470, 12 S.Ct. 511).] It reiterated this holding, more recently (1951), when it stated: 'We are a religious people whose institutions presuppose a supreme being.' [Footnoted, and quoting from Zorach v. Clauson (1951) (343 U.S. 306, 313, 72 S.Ct. 679).] U.S. Code Congressional and Administrative News, Vol. 2, pp. 1671-3646, 83rd Congress, Second Session, 1954.

Much of this book is based on the assertion of First Amendment Rights. If you want to assert your First Amendment rights to freedom of religion, you must do so properly within the limits prescribed by the courts. We will show in this section how to lawfully assert a First Amendment right and how the government can justify undermining or negating it.

Here is the basis for asserting a First Amendment right to freedom of religion:

- The religious belief need not be reasonable or rational, necessarily. The cite below establishes this:

1                   “Reasonableness of religious beliefs of an individual has no bearing on this right to “religious liberty”
2                   guaranteed by state and federal Constitutions, so long as individual’s acts or refusal to act are not directly
3                   harmful to the public.”

4                   [Bolling v. Superior Court For Clallam County, 133 P.2d. 803 (1943)]

- 5     2.   You should be careful not to directly incite violence or lawlessness when you speak, because this type of free speech
6     may not be protected:

7                   “These later decisions have fashioned the principle that the constitutional guarantees of free speech and free
8                   press do not permit a State to forbid or proscribe advocacy of the use of force or of law violation except where
9                   such advocacy is directed to inciting or producing imminent lawless action and is likely to incite or produce
10                  such action. As we said in Noto v. United States, 367 U.S. 290, 297-298, 6 L.Ed.2d. 836, 841, 81 S.Ct. 1517
11                  (1961), ‘the mere abstract teaching...of the moral propriety or even moral necessity for a resort of force and
12                  violence, is not the same as preparing a group for violent action and steeling it to such action.’ See also 13                  Herndon v. Lowry, 310 U.S. 242, 259-261, 81 L.Ed. 1066, 1075, 1076, 57 S.Ct. 732 (1937); Bond v. Floyd,
14                  385 U.S. 116, 134. L.Ed.2d. 235, 246, 87 S.Ct. 339 (1966). A statute which fails to draw this distinction
15                  impermissibly intrudes upon the freedoms guaranteed by the First and Fourteenth Amendments. It sweeps
16                  within its condemnation speech which our Constitution has immunized from governmental control.”

17                  [Brandenburg v. Ohio, 395 U.S. 444, 89 S.Ct. 1827, 23 L.Ed.2d. 430 (1969)]

- 18     3.   The right of individuals to freely practice their religious beliefs does not encompass the right to use government to that 19     end:

20                  “Violation of free exercise clause of the First Amendment is predicated on coercion. Right of individuals to 21                  freely practice their religious beliefs does not encompass right to use government to that end.”

22                  “Very purpose of religion clauses of First Amendment was to insure that sensitive issues of individual religious 23                  beliefs would be beyond majority control.”

24                  “This court must, of course, follow the decisions of the Supreme Court, but much has been written by the Court
25                  *concerning the ‘establishment of religion’ since the decision on Zorach; and, ‘there are occasional situations in* 26                  which subsequent Supreme Court opinions have so eroded an older case, without explicitly overruling it, as to 27                  warrant a subordinate court in pursuing what it conceives to be a clearly defined new lead from the Supreme
28                  Court to a conclusion inconsistent with an older Supreme Court case.”

29                  “*In the face of establishment clause challenges the court has upheld Sunday Closing Laws, *McGowan v.
30                  Maryland, 366 U.S. 420, 81 S.Ct. 1101, 6 L.Ed.2d. 393 (1961); the loaning of books on secular subjects to 31                  *students attending sectarian school, Board of Education v. Allen, 392 U.S. 236, 88 S.Ct. 1923, 20 L.Ed.2d. 1060*
32                  (1968)”

33                  [Smith v. Smith, 391 F.Supp. 443 (1975)]

- 34     4.   So long as faith is religiously based at the time it is asserted, it doesn’t matter where the faith originates:

35                  “So long as one’s faith is religiously based at time it is asserted, it does not matter, for free exercise clause
36                  purposes, whether that faith derives from revelation, study, upbringing, gradual evolution or some source that 37                  appears entirely incomprehensible and constitution protection cannot be denied simply because early 38                  experience has left one particularly open to current religious beliefs.”

39                  [Callahan v. Woods, 658 F.2d. 679 (1981)]

- 40     5.   Once a bona fide First Amendment issue is joined, burden that must be shouldered by the government to defend a 41     regulation with impact on that religious action is a heavy one, and the standard is that a “compelling state interest must 42     be demonstrated.”

43                  “Once bona fide First Amendment issue is joined, burden that must be shouldered by government to defend a
44                  regulation with impact on religious actions is a heavy one, and basic standards is that a compelling state
45                  interest must be demonstrated.”

46                  [Stevens v. Berger, 428 F.Supp. 896 (1977)]

47     Along the lines of that last item, we think it is important before you sue the government for First Amendment violations to 48     anticipate and identify each of the “compelling public interests” you expect the state to assert in the case at hand and to
49     disprove each one in advance using evidence, in your initial pleading. This will immunize yourself from losing your case
50     when you go to trial and make the burden of proof even greater for the government.

Probably the most common area where people assert their First Amendment rights is in the area of refusing to accept or give or use Social Security Numbers or to pay Social Security taxes. The most famous case along these lines was U.S. v. Lee, 455 U.S. 252 (1982), in which an Amish farmer and carpenter claimed that it was against his religious beliefs to be forced to pay Social Security taxes to the government, because he thought it was a personal responsibility within the family to support yourself and your parents, as we advocate in this book. Here is what the U.S. supreme Court said in denying him the free exercise of his religious rights:

The District Court held the statutes requiring appellee to pay social security and unemployment insurance taxes unconstitutional as applied. 497 F.Supp. 180 (1980). The court noted that the Amish believe it sinful not to provide for their own elderly and needy and therefore are religiously opposed to the national social security system. 3 The court also accepted appellee's contention that the Amish religion not only prohibits the acceptance of social security benefits, but also bars all contributions by Amish to the social security system. The District Court observed that in light of their beliefs, Congress has accommodated self-employed Amish and self-employed members of other religious groups with similar beliefs by providing exemptions from social security taxes. 26 U.S.C. 1402(g). 4 The Court's holding was based on both [455 U.S. 252, 256] the exemption statute for the self-employed and the First Amendment; appellee and others "who fall within the carefully circumscribed definition provided in 1402(g) are relieved from paying the employer's share of [social security taxes] as it is an unconstitutional infringement upon the free exercise of their religion." 5 497 F.Supp., at 184.

Direct appeal from the judgment of the District Court was taken pursuant to 28 U.S.C. 1252.

The exemption provided by 1402(g) is available only to self-employed individuals and does not apply to employers or employees. Consequently, appellee and his employees are not within the express provisions of 1402(g). Thus any exemption from payment of the employer's share of social security taxes must come from a constitutionally required exemption.

The preliminary inquiry in determining the existence of a constitutionally required exemption is whether the payment [455 U.S. 252, 257] of social security taxes and the receipt of benefits interferes with the free exercise rights of the Amish. The Amish believe that there is a religiously based obligation to provide for their fellow members the kind of assistance contemplated by the social security system. Although the Government does not challenge the sincerity of this belief, the Government does contend that payment of social security taxes will not threaten the integrity of the Amish religious belief or observance. It is not within "the judicial function and judicial competence," however, to determine whether appellee or the Government has the proper interpretation of the Amish faith; "[c]ourts are not arbiters of scriptural interpretation." Thomas v. Review Bd. of Indiana Employment Security Div., 450 U.S. 707, 716 (1981). 6 We therefore accept appellee's contention that both payment and receipt of social security benefits is forbidden by the Amish faith. Because the payment of the taxes or receipt of benefits violates Amish religious beliefs, compulsory participation in the social security system interferes with their free exercise rights.

The conclusion that there is a conflict between the Amish faith and the obligations imposed by the social security system is only the beginning, however, and not the end of the inquiry. Not all burdens on religion are unconstitutional. See, e. g., Prince v. Massachusetts, 321 U.S. 158 (1944); Reynolds v. United States, 98 U.S. 145 (1879). The state may justify a limitation on religious liberty by showing that it is essential to accomplish an overriding governmental interest. [455 U.S. 252, 258] Thomas, supra; Wisconsin v. Yoder, 406 U.S. 205 (1972); Gillette v. United States, 401 U.S. 437 (1971); Sherbert v. Verner, 374 U.S. 398 (1963).

Because the social security system is nationwide, the governmental interest is apparent. The social security system in the United States serves the public interest by providing a comprehensive insurance system with a variety of benefits available to all participants, with costs shared by employers and employees. 7 The social security system is by far the largest domestic governmental program in the United States today, distributing approximately $11 billion monthly to 36 million Americans. 8 The design of the system requires support by mandatory contributions from covered employers and employees. This mandatory participation is indispensable to the fiscal vitality of the social security system. "[W]idespread individual voluntary coverage under social security . . . would undermine the soundness of the social security program." S. Rep. No. 404, 89th Cong., 1st Sess., pt. 1, p. 116 (1965). Moreover, a comprehensive national social security system providing for voluntary participation would be almost a contradiction in terms and difficult, if not impossible, to administer. Thus, the Government's interest in assuring [455 U.S. 252, 259] mandatory and continuous participation in and contribution to the social security system is very high. 9

The remaining inquiry is whether accommodating the Amish belief will unduly interfere with fulfillment of the governmental interest. In Braunfeld v. Brown, 366 U.S. 599, 605 (1961), this Court noted that "to make accommodation between the religious action and an exercise of state authority is a particularly delicate task. . . because resolution in favor of the State results in the choice to the individual of either abandoning his religious principle or facing . . . prosecution." The difficulty in attempting to accommodate religious beliefs in the area of taxation is that "we are a cosmopolitan nation made up of people of almost every conceivable religious preference." Braunfeld, supra, at 606. The Court has long recognized that balance must be struck

1 between the values of the comprehensive social security system, which rests on a complex of actuarial factors,
 2 and the consequences of allowing religiously based exemptions. To maintain an organized society that
 3 guarantees religious freedom to a great variety of faiths requires that some religious practices yield to the 4 common good. Religious beliefs can be accommodated, see, e. g., Thomas, supra; Sherbert, supra, but there
 5 is a point at which accommodation would "radically restrict the operating latitude of the legislature."
 6 Braunfeld, supra, at 606. 10

7 Unlike the situation presented in Wisconsin v. Yoder, supra, it would be difficult to accommodate the 8 comprehensive [455 U.S. 252, 260] social security system with myriad exceptions flowing from a wide variety
 9 of religious beliefs. The obligation to pay the social security tax initially is not fundamentally different from the 10 obligation to pay income taxes; the difference - in theory at least - is that the social security tax revenues are 11 segregated for use only in furtherance of the statutory program. There is no principled way, however, for 12 purposes of this case, to distinguish between general taxes and those imposed under the Social Security Act. If,
 13 for example, a religious adherent believes war is a sin, and if a certain percentage of the federal budget can 14 be identified as devoted to war-related activities, such individuals would have a similarly valid claim to be
 15 exempt from paying that percentage of the income tax. The tax system could not function if denominations
 16 were allowed to challenge the tax system because tax payments were spent in a manner that violates their
 17 religious belief. See, e. g., Lull v. Commissioner, 602 F.2d. 1166 (CA4 1979), cert. denied, 444 U.S. 1014
 18 (1980); Autenrieth v. Cullen, 418 F.2d. 586 (CA9 1969), cert. denied, 397 U.S. 1036 (1970). Because 19 the broad public interest in maintaining a sound tax system is 20 of such a high order, religious belief in conflict with the 21 payment of taxes affords no basis for resisting the tax.

22 Congress has accommodated, to the extent compatible with a comprehensive national program, the practices
 23 of those who believe it a violation of their faith to participate in the social security system. In 1402(g)
 24 Congress granted an exemption, on religious grounds, to self-employed Amish and others. 11 Confining the 25 1402(g) exemption to the self-employed [455 U.S. 252, 261] provided for a narrow category which was readily
 26 identifiable. Self-employed persons in a religious community having its own "welfare" system are 27 distinguishable from the generality of wage earners employed by others.

28 Congress and the courts have been sensitive to the needs flowing from the Free Exercise Clause, but every
 29 person cannot be shielded from all the burdens incident to exercising every aspect of the right to practice
 30 religious beliefs. When followers of a particular sect enter into commercial activity as a matter of choice, the 31 limits they accept on their own conduct as a matter of conscience and faith are not to be superimposed on the 32 statutory schemes which are binding on others in that activity. Granting an exemption from social security
 33 taxes to an employer operates to impose the employer's religious faith on the employees. Congress drew a line
 34 in 1402(g), exempting the self-employed Amish but not all persons working for an Amish employer. The tax 35 imposed on employers to support the social security system must be uniformly applicable to all, except as 36 Congress provides explicitly otherwise. 12

37 Accordingly, the judgment of the District Court is reversed, and the case is remanded for proceedings
 38 consistent with this opinion.

39 [U.S. v. Lee, 455 U.S. 252 (1982)]

40 Basically, what the court said is that "the public interest" or "government interest" outweighs our religious rights and that
 41 the government can deprive us of our individual life, liberty, and property in the name of the "political correctness" or
 42 "public interest" or "majority vote", all of which are synonymous. This is just a fancy way to say that the majority or 43 collective is sovereign over and above the individual, and that our republican government based on individual rights no
 44 longer exists because it has been replaced by a monolithic, gargantuan, totalitarian socialist democracy as we clearly
 45 described in section 4.6.2. In making this treasonous ruling, the Supreme Court has negated the whole basis of law, which 46 is to prevent harm and has thereby transformed the function of law into promoting the "perceived" good decided by 47 majority vote, which is the essence of socialism. I would most certainly hope that the highest court in this, the greatest 48 country on earth, doesn't mean to imply that the fraud, waste, and abuse represented by the grossly mismanaged Social
 49 Security program as extensively documented earlier in section 2.9 successfully serves the "public interest" as a whole,
 50 because we have found no evidence whatsoever of that. If it had, then why does our own government continue to talk
 51 about privatizing social security? Granted, it would be political suicide for any politician in this country to advocate an end
 52 to the most massive entitlement system fraud and extortion program in the history of the planet, but that is a matter of the 53 private interests of individual politicians rather than public interest.

54 "The government that robs Peter to pay Paul can always depend on the support of Paul [the older people who 55 have no income because they never bothered to save for their own retirement]."
 56 [George Bernard Shaw]

1 Are we simply rewarding the abuse of individual elective franchise (the right to vote or the sovereign power of
 2 Congressional office) as a legal mandate to government officials (an unconstitutional and unlawful abuse of power)
 3 to rob a minority group of employed individuals at the point of a gun and force them into slavery to subsidize older
 4 people who don't want to work? Are we enticing and encouraging older people to vote the first politician into office
 5 who will promise them a new social(ist) security benefit increase? This is clearly a distortion of the original intent of 6 Congress and a conflict of interest. It also happens to be highly illegal under federal law, 18 U.S.C. §597. Here is 7 what that section says:

8 TITLE 18 > PART I > CHAPTER 29 > Sec. 591. > Sec. 597.

9 Sec. 597. - Expenditures to influence voting

10 Whoever makes or offers to make an expenditure to any person, either to vote or withhold his vote, or to vote
 11 for or against any candidate; and

12 Whoever solicits, accepts, or receives any such expenditure in consideration of his vote or the withholding of 13 his vote -

14 Shall be fined under this title or imprisoned not more than one year, or both; and if the violation was willful,
 15 shall be fined under this title or imprisoned not more than two years, or both

16 Even the bible agrees that this kind of scandal is not to be tolerated or allowed:

17 "Thou shalt not steal."

18 [Exodus 20:15, Bible]

19 But my, how quickly things change. Only 100 years before, that very same Supreme Court said the following, which is 20 completely opposite of the ruling in the Lee case:

21 "To lay with one hand the power of government on the property of the citizen, and with the other to bestow it on
 22 favoured individuals.. is none the less robbery because it is done under the forms of law and is called taxation.

23 This is not legislation. It is a decree under legislative forms."

24 [Loan Association v. Topeka, 20 Wall. 655 (1874)]

25 I therefore have some questions for the chief justice communists who made this ruling:

- 26 • How can robbery done in the name of taxation be in the public interest?
- 27 • How can organized crime, racketeering, and robbery implemented through Social Security and on that large a 28 scale ever be in the "public interest"?
- 29 • How can punishing people who work for the sake of people who don't work be in the "public interest"?
- 30 • How can stealing people's money and forcing them to allow the government to manage it rather than taking 31 responsibility for their own retirement ever be in the "public interest"? Doesn't such an approach presume that 32 people are incapable or incompetent at managing and saving for their own retirement and "government"
 33 paternalistically knows what's best for people better than they do? This cannot be in a country where the people 34 are the sovereigns, can it?
- 35 • Exactly what aspect of the effectively mandatory Social Security System is in the public interest?
- 36 • If the government rules against Microsoft for having a monopoly, how about IT'S monopoly in the retirement
 37 insurance business? Isn't it time to privatize this beast too and let people manage their own retirement savings 38 plan?
- 39 • How can the justices who ruled on this issue call themselves free of conflict of interest if it would mean political 40 suicide for most politicians to end the socialist security program?

41 The government will lie by saying that the program is "voluntary", but since they provide no way to quit the 42 program or have your money refunded or your social security number rescinded, and because many employers
 43 won't hire you without a number, the program is, for all intents and purposes, mandatory. Consequently, the whole
 44 Social Security system is based on fraud and duress and a false promise: it's a mandatory program that they
 45 "pretend" is voluntary so that politicians who want to force us to participate don't look like the tyrants and
 46 dictators that they really are. It's the "politically correct" way to be a tyrant dictator!

1 The ruling from U.S. v. Lee above therefore directly contradicts the very purpose why the founders gave us a Bill of
 2 Rights to begin with and why the Constitution guarantees us a “Republican Form of Government”, as we described
 3 earlier in section 4.8:

4 “The very purpose of the Bill of Rights was to withdraw certain subjects from the vicissitudes of political
 5 controversy, to place them beyond the reach of majorities and officials and to establish them as legal principles
 6 to be applied by the courts. One’s right to life, liberty, and property, to free speech, a free press, freedom of 7 worship and assembly, and other fundamental rights may not be submitted to vote; they depend on the 8 outcome of no elections.[or Congressional statutes or laws either, as was the case above]”
 9 [West Virginia State Board of Education v. Barnette, 319 U.S. 624, 63 S.Ct. 1178 (1943)]

10 Based on the Lee precedent, however, it wouldn’t surprise me to see the communist judges in the Supreme Court rule in the 11 not too distant future that:

12 “It is in the ‘public interest’ and ‘government interest’ to eliminate the Bill of Rights and the Thirteenth
 13 Amendment and thereby force people into government slavery using a mandatory direct tax on wages, because 14 if we don’t, the financial solvency of our country would be threatened. Maintaining the full faith and credit of 15 the United States in the presence of massive debt to a private corporation called the Federal Reserve is more
 16 important than having individual rights. Furthermore, people with rights are just too defiant and difficult to 17 govern economically or efficiently, so we have decided that all you idiots out there who are ignorant wards of 18 the state anyway don’t need rights anymore because we (the government) know better than you what is in your
 19 best interests. Now shut up, boy, or we’ll whoop you with 40 lashes and send you to bed without dinner or a 20 paycheck because we’ll seize it all to pay for the next Congressional pay raise and Social Security cost of 21 living increase.”

22 Does this sound like a chicken little, sky is falling triage-dominated mandate to overlook abuses of the government as we 23 predicted would happen earlier in section 2.8.12? Who is the servant and who is the master (sovereign) here? Your 24 government would have you believe that you are the Master, but this too is a LIE and simply can’t be the case based on the 25 way our government is presently behaving as evidenced by the above ruling of a communist Supreme Court.

26 4.20 The Solution

27 In conclusion, one must understand that this is all a matter of perspective. Since the Federal Government has little direct
 28 authority over the several States or the People, we then must be the ones to initiate these contracts. They then assume we
 29 are truly “citizens of the United States” (or “residents / aliens of the State”) not only because we answered “YES” on these 30 government application forms, but because we DID NOT reserve any of our Rights as Sovereign Americans to the contrary
 31 under our Constitutional Rights to Common Law.

32 Here is what the court has stated happens to us when we sign-up for any Federal Program (benefit or privilege).

33 “Anyone who partakes of the benefits or privileges of a given statute, or anyone who even places himself into a
 34 position where he may avail himself of those benefits at will, cannot reach constitutional grounds to redress
 35 grievances in the courts against the given statute.”
 36 [Ashwander v. T.V.A., 297 U.S. 288, 346, 56 S.Ct. 466, 482, 80 L.Ed. 688 (1936)][underlines added]

37 Since these applications are actually contracts we must invoke our Rights under the Uniform Commercial Code (UCC). The 38 UCC is statute law regulating contracts dealing in commerce (remember, the Federal Government gets what little authority
 39 it does have over the several States and the People from the Commerce Clause of the Constitution [Article 1, Section 8, 40 Clause 3]). Now that all the courts are Admiralty Courts and under Federal Jurisdiction, Common Law has been placed “in 41 harmony with” the UCC.

42 In the ANDERSON version of the Uniform Commercial Code (Lawyers Cooperative Publishing Co.), it states the 43 following:

44 “The Code is complimentary to the Common Law, WHICH REMAINS IN FORCE, except where displaced by 45 the code. A statute should be construed in harmony with the Common Law, unless there is a clear legislative 46 intent to abrogate the Common Law.”
 47 [UCC 1-103.6]

48 Here then is what one should do in order to reserve their Rights under the Constitution and the Seventh Amendment.

49 Uniform Commercial Code, Section 1-308

Performance or Acceptance Under Reservation of Rights

(a) A party that with explicit reservation of rights performs or promises performance or assents to performance in a manner demanded or offered by the other party does not thereby prejudice the rights reserved. Such words as "without prejudice," "under protest," or the like are sufficient. [underlines added]

The "without prejudice" clause is the means which enables one to assert his Seventh Amendment guarantee of access to the Common Law and the Constitution.

Bill of Rights - Article VII (Seventh Amendment)

In Suits at common law, where the value in controversy shall exceed twenty dollars, the right of trial by jury shall be preserved, and no fact tried by a jury shall be otherwise re-examined in any Court of the United States, than according to the rules of the common law.

What this all means is this, whenever you sign any legal document, whether it is dealing with the Federal Government, State Government, BATF, IRS, Social Security, Driver's License Bureau, Voter Registration or anything to do with Federal Reserve Notes, etc. ( in any way, shape or manner), over your signature you must write: "Without Prejudice" UCC 1-308 or "under Protest" or the like, e.g. "with reservation of rights".

By the way, a true sovereign American of any one of the several States is actually a non-resident alien to the United States. Guess who isn't required to file an IRS 1040 Income Tax Returns? You guessed it, non-resident aliens. Why? Because, we are foreign to the United States. We were not born in the District of Columbia and we are not residents of the District of Columbia.

Volume 20 of "Corpus Juris Secundum" at 1758 states:

"The United States Government is a foreign corporation with respect to a state."
[N.Y. v. re Merriam, 36 N.E. 505, 141 N.Y. 479, affirmed 16 S.Ct. 1073, 41 L.Ed. 287] [underlines added]

However, there are certain conditions and circumstances whereupon a non-resident alien might be required to file a 1040-NR tax return. Generally, compensation for one's labor, which is not INCOME, is simply a fair trade for his Life. It is unconstitutional to tax a man's Life, but it is not unconstitutional to tax a Federal citizen's life, for such a person has no Constitutional Protection. Rather, income is profit or gain of principle received by a privileged corporation.

For those who have already decided, through their own research and understanding of the limits the Constitution imposes on the Federal Government, it is at this point we hear about them getting into trouble with the Federal Government, particularly the IRS. Of course, this then leads to the fear we all have and our reluctance to pursue the matter ourselves.

It is absolutely crucial to know and understand that one must rescind and revoke ALL signatures and powers of attorney that one might have EVER committed to with the Federal Government in their LIFE TIME. For example, if the first IRS 1040 tax return you ever filed was in 1960, then you must notify the IRS that you are revoking your signature on ALL 1040 tax returns starting in 1960 to the present. The same then would be true in regards to the BATF and all of those 4473 forms you've signed since 1968.

In this way ONLY, can one deal with any level of Government and still retain access to the Constitution, The Bill of Rights and to Common Law as sovereign Americans and constitutional but not statutory citizens.

20 There's a very good reason why the title to this chapter uses the word "liable". The fact is, there is NO STATUTE or 21 POSITIVE LAW in the entire 9,500 page Internal Revenue Code, which makes a natural person liable for the payment of 22 Subtitle A income taxes, or Subtitle C Employment taxes for other than withholding agents who are accepting voluntary
23 withholding from nonresident alien individuals<sup>1</sup>. There has also never been a claim by anyone in the legal profession or the 24 IRS or in any IRS publication that we have found which contradicts this either that we are aware of. The IRS and the 25 Department of INJustice are speechless when you bring up the following issue in court in front of a jury by asking:

26 "I am a law-abiding American Citizen who wants to pay what the law says I owe. Prove to me that the Internal 27 Revenue Code is enacted positive 'law' that applies to me and then provide the positive law statute within it that 28 makes me liable for Subtitles A and C income taxes and I will gladly pay what you say I owe. I have studied
29 this issue for several years now and read extensively and searched electronically the entire Internal Revenue
30 Code and Treasury Regulations and couldn't find a statute that makes me liable."

31 This tactic is very effective with juries and against the IRS. We'll explain in this chapter the many reasons why we aren't 32 liable and the many different angles people have come up with over the years that show why we aren't liable which are also
33 very convincing to juries. We have scoured just about every tax book, every IRS publication, positive law, the I.R.C.
34 (which isn't "law", by the way), and went to every seminar we could find to come up with the content of this chapter to 35 make the arguments used authoritative, complete, detailed, and most importantly, unrefuted by any government propaganda
36 or legal document that we could find. We have done this to make your search for the truth easier. If we have missed 37 anything or are in error, please let us know what you found out so we can all benefit from your discovery!

38 The Bible says:

39 "Test all things; hold fast what is good. Abstain from every form of evil."
40 [1 Thess. 5:21-22, Bible, NKJV]

41 "Finally, brethren, whatever things are true, whatever things are noble, whatever things are just, whatever 42 things are pure, whatever things are lovely, whatever things are of good report, if there is any virtue and if 43 there is anything praiseworthy--meditate on these things."
44 [Phil. 4:8, Bible, NKJV]

This chapter is the result of over four years of diligent study to fulfill exactly the above calling. We have tried very hard to discover what is “truthful” and “good” about our government and our tax law. The result is the knowledge of where the evil lies and what we must correspondingly abstain from. Direct income taxes paid on one’s own labor within states of the Union just happens to be one of the evils and crimes that our research has revealed which we must abstain from, because you will learn in this chapter that they amount to slavery.

What you will find in reading this chapter, as we explain later in section 5.12, is that the more layers of the onion you peel back to expose the real truth about income taxes, the less information you will find, because as we make quite plain in the next chapter, there is a concerted effort by our deceitful and covetous government and the media to cover up the truth. You will therefore find it very difficult to locate materials or evidence published by the government that will refute or even address most of the issues discussed in this chapter.

"He who believes in Him [Jesus, the Son of God] is not condemned ; but he who does not believe is condemned already, because he has not believed in the name of the only begotten Son of God. And this is the condemnation, that the light has come into the world, and men loved darkness rather than light, because their deeds were evil. For everyone practicing evil hates the light and does not come to the light, lest his deeds should be exposed. But he who does the truth comes to the light, that his deeds may be clearly seen, that they have been done in God."
[John 3:18-21, Bible, NKJV]

We obtained every government publication we could find on the subject of taxes in either printed or electronic form and found it very difficult to refute the content of this chapter. We looked in the following government publications, many of which we downloaded and posted on our website, for instance, and found very little that addresses anything in this chapter and nothing credible that contradicted it, and this is no accident, but another means of confirming that what we are saying is the absolute truth:

- Several correspondences received by our readers from the Internal Revenue Service, many of which are posted in the Income Tax Freedom Forms and Instructions area of our website at: <http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/FormsInstr.htm> in the EVIDENCE section.

During our search for contradictory information, we obtained internal IRS memos dealing with one or more issues discussed in this chapter, and in every case, they had sensitivity markings limiting their distribution, apparently because the IRS did not want such sensitive information getting into the hands of the general public! Below is a link that provides just one example on our website of such an IRS memo:

<http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/Evidence/Refunds/1998-053IRSMemoZeroRet.pdf>

Remember, a public servant wrote the above and anything we as the sovereigns pay a government servant to do ought to be available and releasable unless it is classified, which the above was not. The only thing cover-ups do is protect wrongdoers.

Another source for clearly showing the deception of our public servants can be found in the “Tax Deposition Questions” found on our website. These questions are a superset of the We the People Truth in Taxation Hearing questions and the

1 IRS and Dept of Justice violated a written agreement to answer the We The People questions in a public forum because the
 2 answers would have been too incriminating and revealed far more of the truth than the government wants you to learn. You
 3 can look at these questions at:

Tax Deposition Questions, Family Guardian Fellowship
<http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/Forms/Discovery/Deposition/Deposition.htm>

4 The above memo, the Tax Deposition Questions, Family Guardian Fellowship, and thousands of pages of additional
 5 evidence on our website furnish compelling and overwhelming evidence that there is a systematic cover-up of the truth
 6 going on by the IRS and the Congress, which amounts to criminal violation of the following positive law statutes and 7 several others not mentioned:

- 8 • Obstructing Justice, 18 U.S.C. Chapter 73
- 9 • Conspiracy against rights under 18 U.S.C. §241
- 10 • Extortion under 18 U.S.C. §872.
- 11 • Wrongful actions of Revenue Officers under 26 U.S.C. §7214
- 12 • Engaging in monetary transactions derived from unlawful activity under 18 U.S.C. §1957
- 13 • Mailing threatening communications under 18 U.S.C. §876
- 14 • False writings and fraud under 18 U.S.C. §1018
- 15 • Taking of property without due process of law under 26 C.F.R. 601.106\(f\)\(1\) and the Fifth Amendment
- 16 • Unauthorized collection activity under 26 U.S.C. §7433
- 17 • Fraud under 18 U.S.C. §1341
- 18 • Continuing financial crimes enterprise (RICO) under 18 U.S.C. §225
- 19 • Conflict of interest of federal judges under 28 U.S.C. §455 and 28 U.S.C. §144
- 20 • Treason under Article III, Section 3, Clause 1 of the U.S. Constitution
- 21 • Peonage and obstructing enforcement under 18 U.S.C. §1581 and 42 U.S.C. §1994
- 22 • Bank robbery under 18 U.S.C. §2113 ( in the case of fraudulent notice of levies and notice of liens served by the 23 IRS on unsuspecting financial institutions)

24 Based on the exhaustive evidence and analysis found in this chapter, we will demonstrate far beyond a “reasonable doubt”
 25 that the “D.C.” in the phrase “Washington D.C.” stands for “District of Criminals”. We will also demonstrate that through 26 its coerced agents in a corrupt federal judiciary, these criminals have obstructed justice and abused sovereign immunity and
 27 official immunity in order to make areas under their control within the “federal zone” into havens for financial terrorists at
 28 the IRS, who have recklessly disregarded your sacred property rights and constitutional rights which the government was 29 instituted to protect from the beginning. The only lawfully sanctioned protector of our rights at the federal level has thus 30 become its worst abuser and violator. Your de facto government is a PREDATOR, not a PROTECTOR. It has 31 transformed in the role from a protector under a Constitutional Republic to a predator within a totalitarian socialist
 32 democracy. The federal corporation called the “United States Government” (see 28 U.S.C. §3002(15)(A)), and not 33 Microsoft, ought to be tried on anti-trust charges for the virtual monopoly on organized crime and extortion that it currently 34 enjoys in the disguise of a lawful “income tax”. We will also show how corrupted lawyers in the states have colluded with 35 the federal government in denying you your rights in the context of income taxes. You will also learn that the criminal 36 disregard of our politicians and public “servants” towards our constitutional rights and the laws that are documented in this 37 chapter amounts to “communism”, to use the government’s own words and definitions:

38 TITLE 50 > CHAPTER 23 > SUBCHAPTER IV > Sec. 841.
 39 Sec. 841. - Findings and declarations of fact

40 The Congress finds and declares that the Communist Party of the United States, although purportedly a
 41 political party, is in fact an instrumentality of a conspiracy to overthrow the Government of the United States. It
 42 constitutes an authoritarian dictatorship within a republic, demanding for itself the rights and privileges
 43 accorded to political parties, but denying to all others the liberties guaranteed by the Constitution. Unlike 44 political parties, which evolve their policies and programs through public means, by the reconciliation of a
 45 wide variety of individual views, and submit those policies and programs to the electorate at large for approval
 46 or disapproval, the policies and programs of the Communist Party are secretly prescribed for it by the foreign
 47 leaders of the world Communist movement. Its members have no part in determining its goals, and are not
 48 permitted to voice dissent to party objectives. Unlike members of political parties, members of the Communist
 49 Party are recruited for indoctrination with respect to its objectives and methods, and are organized, instructed,
 50 and disciplined to carry into action slavishly the assignments given them by their hierarchical chieftains.

Unlike political parties, the Communist Party acknowledges no constitutional or statutory limitations upon its conduct or upon that of its members.

The Communist Party is relatively small numerically, and gives scant indication of capacity ever to attain its ends by lawful political means. The peril inherent in its operation arises not from its numbers, but from its failure to acknowledge any limitation as to the nature of its activities, and its dedication to the proposition that the present constitutional Government of the United States ultimately must be brought to ruin by any available means, including resort to force and violence [or using income taxes]. Holding that doctrine, its role as the agency of a hostile foreign power [the Federal Reserve and the American Bar Association (ABA)] renders its existence a clear present and continuing danger to the security of the United States. It is the means whereby individuals are seduced into the service of the world Communist movement, trained to do its bidding, and directed and controlled in the conspiratorial performance of their revolutionary services. Therefore, the Communist Party should be outlawed

That's right: Anyone from the government charged with administering the tax code who refuses to discuss the code or the statutory or Constitutional constraints on their power in the context of income taxes is a Communist as our Congress defines it! Welcome to the United Socialist States of America (USSA), comrade! You will also find that this reckless and irresponsible attitude permeates everyone in government and the legal profession you will talk to about the laws on taxation. Incidentally, the "foreign powers" described above that are behind the current "communist party", which encompasses both the Democrats and the Republicans presently in office, is the Federal Reserve, the American Bar Association (ABA), Satan, and the legal profession. They have already conspired collectively to transform our constitutional republic into a totalitarian socialist democracy and the next step is complete communism. All it will take is a national emergency like the War on Terrorism to complete that step. After you read this chapter, you will also understand the following Washington Rules of the communists who currently serve in elected or appointed office:

WASHINGTON RULES

1. If it's worth fighting for, it's worth fighting dirty for.
2. Don't lie, cheat or steal unnecessarily.
3. There is always one more son of a bitch than you counted on.
4. An honest answer can get you into a lot of trouble.
5. The more you run over a dead cat, the flatter it gets.
6. If you tell the truth once, they will never believe you no matter how much you lie.
7. The facts, although interesting, are irrelevant.
8. Chicken little only has to be right once.
9. There's no such thing as a final decision.
10. "No" is only an interim response.
11. You can't kill a bad idea.
12. If at first you don't succeed, destroy all evidence that you ever tried.
13. The truth is a variable.
14. A porcupine with its quills down is just another fat rodent.
15. You can agree with any concept or notional future option in principle, but fight implementation in every step of the way.
16. A promise is not a guarantee.
17. If you can't counter the argument, leave the meeting or remain silent.
18. Pay no bill before its time.

5.1 Introduction to Federal Taxation

5.1.1 Hierarchy of Sovereignty: The Power to Create is the Power to Tax

"Having thus avowed my disapprobation of the purposes, for which the terms, State and sovereign, are frequently used, and of the object, to which the application of the last of them is almost universally made; it is now proper that I should disclose the meaning, which I assign to both, and the application, [2 U.S. 419, 455] which I make of the latter. In doing this, I shall have occasion incidentally to evince, how true it is, that States and Governments were made for man; and, at the same time, how true it is, that his creatures and servants have first deceived, next vilified, and, at last, oppressed their master and maker."

[Justice Wilson, Chisholm v. Georgia, 2 Dall. (2 U.S.) 419, 1 L.Ed. 440, 455 (1793)]

We pointed out earlier in section 4.1 the hierarchy of sovereignty, in which the sequence that things were created and who they were created by establishes the sovereign relations among all things, including both human beings and artificial creations such as corporations and governments. The analysis there is the basis for further discussion in this chapter. A summary of the hierarchy is below:

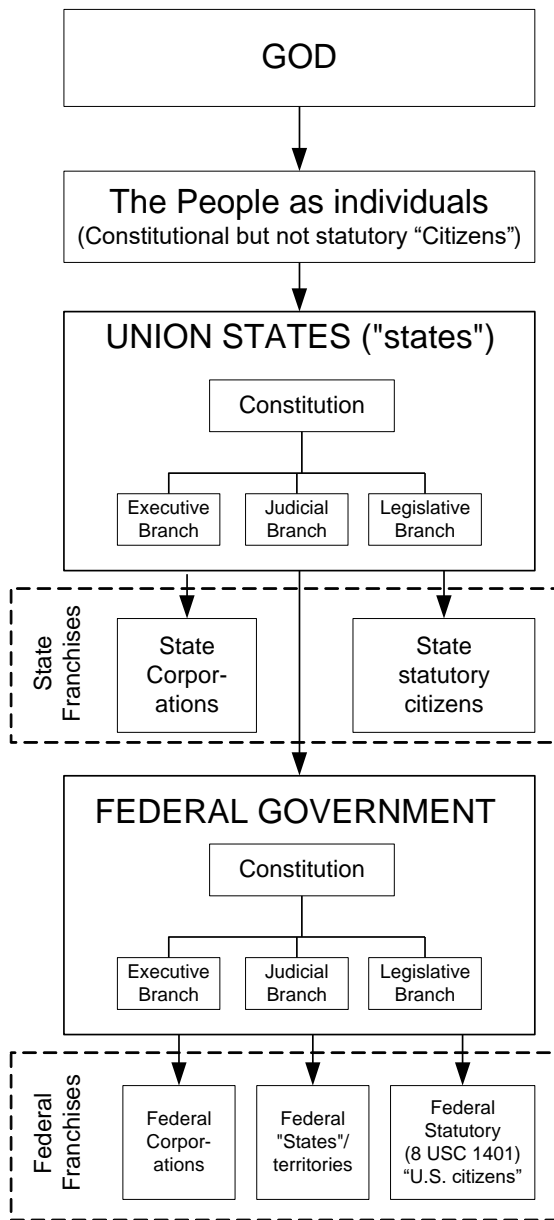

1. God created the people (as individuals).
2. The people (as individual sovereigns) created the state Constitution and the states. The state constitutions divided the state government into three branches: executive, judicial, and legislative.
3. The states created the federal constitution and the federal government. The federal constitution divided the federal government into three branches: executive, judicial, legislative. The states also instituted their own internal franchises, including state corporations and state citizens.
4. The federal government created federal States, corporations, and privileged "U.S. citizen" status through legislation.

The above hierarchy recognizes nine distinct sovereignties which are completely independent of each other in law. These are:

1. God
2. The people (as individuals).
3. The "states" (of the Union). These states create special franchises underneath them, including:
  - 3.1. State citizenship
  - 3.2. State corporations
4. The federal (not national) government. Remember from section 4.6 earlier that the "United States" is not a nation under the law of nations, but a federation, and there is a world of difference. The federal government then creates special franchises underneath them, including:
  - 4.1. Federal Corporations.
  - 4.2. Federal "States".
  - 4.3. U.S. citizens/idolaters. These are people who have surrendered their sovereignty to the government and choose to be government slaves/serfs/subjects.

The courts have historically recognized the separation of these sovereignties, and all exist by virtue of natural law. Below is a diagram of this hierarchy in graphical form:

2 The rules for how these sovereignties must relate to each other within our system of jurisprudence are as follows, extracted
3 from the rulings of the Supreme Court, federal statutes, the Bible, and historical documents:

4 1. The people are sovereign over all government:

5 "The ultimate authority...resides in the people alone..."
6 [James Madison, Federalist Paper No. 46]

7 "Sovereignty itself is, of course, not subject to law, for it is the author and source of law...While sovereign
8 powers are delegated to...the government, sovereignty itself remains with the people."
9 [Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U.S. 356 (1886)]

10 "Sovereign state" are cabalistic words, not understood by the disciple of liberty, who has been instructed in 11 our constitutional schools. It is an appropriate phrase when applied to an absolute despotism. I firmly
12 believe, that the idea of sovereign power in the government of a republic, is incompatible with the existence
13 and permanent foundation of civil liberty, and the rights of property. The history of man, in all ages, has

1 shown the necessity of the strongest checks upon power, whether it be exercised by one man, a few or many.
 2 Our revolution broke up the foundations of sovereignty in government; and our written constitutions have
 3 carefully guarded against the baneful influence of such an idea henceforth and forever. I can not, therefore,
 4 recognize the appeal to the sovereignty of the state, as a justification of the act in question. "
 5 [Gaines v. Buford, 31 Ky. (1 Dana) 481, 501]

- 6 2. The people came before the states and created the states. Therefore, they are the Masters and the states are their 7 servants:

8 "It is again to antagonize Chief Justice Marshall, when he said: 'The government of the Union, then (whatever
 9 may be the influence of this fact on the case), is emphatically and truly a government of the people. In form and 10 in substance it emanates from them. Its powers are granted by them, and are to be exercised directly on them
 11 and for their benefit. This government is acknowledged by all to be one of enumerated powers.' 4 Wheat. 404, 4
 12 L.Ed. 601."
 13 Downes v. Bidwell, [182 U.S. 244 (1901)]

14 "The words 'people of the United States' and 'citizens,' are synonymous terms, and mean the same thing. They
 15 both describe the political body who, according to our republican institutions, form the sovereignty, and who 16 hold the power and conduct the government through their representatives. They are what we familiarly call the 17 'sovereign people,' and every citizen is one of this people, and a constituent member of this sovereignty. ..."
 18 Boyd v. State of Nebraska, [143 U.S. 135 (1892)]

- 19 3. The states created the federal government and are superior to it. The federal government is the servant to and fiduciary 20 of the states and the states are their Master. This is confirmed by the U.S. Supreme Court in Carter v. Carter Coal Co.,
 21 298 U.S. 238 (1936):

22 The general rule with regard to the respective powers of the national and the state governments under the 23 Constitution is not in doubt. The states were before the Constitution; and, consequently, their legislative 24 powers antedated [and are superior to] the Constitution. Those who framed and those who adopted that 25 instrument meant to carve from the general mass of legislative powers, then possessed by the states, only such
 26 portions as it was thought wise to confer upon the federal government; and in order that there should be no
 27 uncertainty in respect of what was taken and what was left, the national powers of legislation were not
 28 aggregated but enumerated-with the result that what was not embraced by the enumeration remained vested
 29 in the states without change or impairment. Thus, 'when it was found necessary to establish a national 30 *government for national purposes,' this court said in Munn v. Illinois, 94 U.S. 113, 124, 'a part of the powers of* 31 the States and of the people of the States was granted to the United States and the people of the United States.
 32 This grant operated as a further limitation upon the powers of the States, so that now the governments of the 33 States possess all the powers of the Parliament of England, except such as have been delegated to the United
 34 States or reserved by the people.' While the states are not sovereign in the true sense of that term, but only quasi
 35 sovereign, yet in respect of all powers reserved to them they are supreme-'as independent of the general
 36 *government as that government within its sphere is independent of the States.' The Collector v. Day, 11 Wall.*
 37 113, 124. And since every addition to the national legislative power to some extent detracts from or invades the 38 power of the states, it is of vital moment that, in order to preserve the fixed balance intended by the
 39 Constitution, the powers of the general government [298 U.S. 238, 295] be not so extended as to embrace any
 40 not within the express terms of the several grants or the implications necessarily to be drawn therefrom. It is no
 41 *longer open to question that the general government, unlike the states, Hammer v. Dagenhart, 247 U.S. 251,*
 42 *275, 38 S.Ct. 529, 3 A.L.R. 649, *Ann.Cas.1918E 724, possesses no inherent power in respect of the internal
 43 affairs of the states; and emphatically not with regard to legislation. The question in respect of the inherent
 44 power of that government as to the external affairs of the Nation and in the field of international law is a wholly
 45 *different matter which it is not necessary now to consider. See, however, Jones v. United States, 137 U.S. 202, 46 *212, 11 S.Ct. 80; Nishimur Ekiu v. United States, 142 U.S. 651, 659, 12 S.Ct. 336; *Fong Yue Ting v. United
 48 *747.

49 The determination of the Framers Convention and the ratifying conventions to preserve complete and
 50 unimpaired state self-government in all matters not committed to the general government is one of the
 51 plainest facts which emerges from the history of their deliberations. And adherence to that determination is 52 incumbent equally upon the federal government and the states. State powers can neither be appropriated on 53 *the one hand nor abdicated on the other. As this court said in Texas v. White, 7 Wall. 700, 725, 'The* 54 preservation of the States, and the maintenance of their governments, are as much within the design and
 55 care of the Constitution as the preservation of the Union and the maintenance of the National government.
 56 The Constitution, in all its provisions, looks to an indestructible Union, composed of indestructible States.'
 57 Every journey to a forbidden end begins with the first step; and the danger of such a step by the federal 58 government in the direction of taking over the powers of the states is that the end of the journey may find the 59 states so despoiled of their powers, or-what may amount to the same thing-so [298 U.S. 238, 296] relieved of 60 the responsibilities which possession of the powers necessarily enjoins, as to reduce them to little more than 61 geographical subdivisions of the national domain. It is safe to say that if, when the Constitution was under 62 consideration, it had been thought that any such danger lurked behind its plain words, it would never have been 63 ratified.

1 And the Constitution itself is in every real sense a law-the lawmakers being the people themselves, in whom
 2 under our system all political power and sovereignty primarily resides, and through whom such power and
 3 sovereignty primarily speaks. It is by that law, and not otherwise, that the legislative, executive, and judicial
 4 agencies which it created exercise such political authority as they have been permitted to possess. The
 5 Constitution speaks for itself in terms so plain that to misunderstand their import is not rationally possible.
 6 'We the People of the United States,' it says, 'do ordain and establish this Constitution.' Ordain and establish!
 7 These are definite words of enactment, and without more would stamp what follows with the dignity and
 8 character of law. The framers of the Constitution, however, were not content to let the matter rest here, but
 9 provided explicitly- 'This Constitution, and the Laws of the United States which shall be made in Pursuance
 10 thereof; ... shall be the supreme Law of the Land.' (Const. art. 6, cl. 2.) The supremacy of the Constitution as
 11 law is thus declared without qualification. That supremacy is absolute; the supremacy of a statute enacted by
 12 Congress is not absolute but conditioned upon its being made in pursuance of the Constitution. And a
 13 judicial tribunal, clothed by that instrument with complete judicial power, and, therefore, by the very nature of
 14 the power, required to ascertain and apply the law to the facts in every case or proceeding properly brought for 15 adjudication, must apply the supreme law and reject the inferior stat- [298 U.S. 238, 297] ute whenever the 16 two conflict. In the discharge of that duty, the opinion of the lawmakers that a statute passed by them is valid
 17 must be given great weight, Adkins v. Children's Hospital, 261 U.S. 525, 544, 43 S.Ct. 394, 24 A.L.R. 1238; but 18 their opinion, or the court's opinion, that the statute will prove greatly or generally beneficial is wholly 19 irrelevant to the inquiry. Schechter Poultry Corp. v. United States, 295 U.S. 495, 549, 550 S., 55 S.Ct. 837, 97
 20 A.L.R. 947.
 21 Carter v. Carter Coal Co., [298 U.S. 238 (1936)]

23 "If the time shall ever arrive when, for an object appealing, however strongly, to our sympathies, the dignity of 24 the States shall bow to the dictation of Congress by conforming their legislation thereto, when the power and
 25 majesty and honor of those who created shall become subordinate to the thing of their creation, I but feebly
 26 utter my apprehensions when I express my firm conviction that we shall see 'the beginning of the end.'"
 27 [Steward Machine Co. v. Davis, 301 U.S. 548 (1937)]

- 28 4. Each sovereign is on an equal footing with every other sovereign: the People, the States, and the Federal Government.
 29 Each of these are legal "persons" and each are equal under the law. The rights of one man are equal to the combined
 30 rights of ALL men working in either a state or the federal government. This is the essence of equal protection of the 31 laws which is the foundation of our constitution and our republican system of government. We covered this subject in 32 depth earlier in section 4.3.2 if you would like to review.

33 "No State shall...deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws. "
 34 [Fourteenth Amendment, Section 1]

35 "The rights of individuals and the justice due to them, are as dear and precious as those of states. Indeed the 36 latter are founded upon the former; and the great end and object of them must be to secure and support the 37 rights of individuals, or else vain is government."
 38 [Chisholm v. Georgia, 2 U.S. (2 Dall.) 419, 1 L.Ed. 440 (1793)]

39 "Arise, O Lord,
 40 Do not let man prevail:
 41 Let the nations be judged in Your sight.
 42 Put them in fear, O Lord,
 43 That the nations may know themselves to be but men."
 44 [Psalm 9:19-20, Bible, NKJV]

45 "United States government is as sovereign within its sphere as states are within theirs."
 46 [Kohl v. United States, 91 U.S. 367, 23 L.Ed. 597 (1876)]

- 47 5. No sovereign can serve more than one master above it. To do otherwise would be a conflict of interest and allegiance.
 48 By implication, this means that no sovereign can have more than one Creator or one Master:

49 "No servant can serve two masters; for either he will hate the one and love the other, or else he will be loyal to 50 the one and despise the other. You cannot serve God and mammon."
 51 [Jesus [God] speaking in the Bible, Luke 16:13]

53 TITLE 18 > PART I > CHAPTER 11 > §208
 54 §208. Acts affecting a personal financial interest

55 (a) Except as permitted by subsection (b) hereof, whoever, being an officer or employee of the executive branch
 56 of the United States Government, or of any independent agency of the United States, a Federal Reserve bank

director, officer, or employee, or an officer or employee of the District of Columbia, including a special Government employee, participates personally and substantially as a Government officer or employee, through decision, approval, disapproval, recommendation, the rendering of advice, investigation, or otherwise, in a judicial or other proceeding, application, request for a ruling or other determination, contract, claim, controversy, charge, accusation, arrest, or other particular matter in which, to his knowledge, he, his spouse, minor child, general partner, organization in which he is serving as officer, director, trustee, general partner or employee, or any person or organization with whom he is negotiating or has any arrangement concerning prospective employment, has a financial interest—

Shall be subject to the penalties set forth in section 216 of this title.

6. The main and only purpose of the separation of sovereignties and powers within sovereignties in the above diagram is to protect the individual liberties of the ultimate sovereigns, the people (as individuals) themselves. See U.S. v. Lopez, 514 U.S. 549 (1995):

We start with first principles. The Constitution creates a Federal Government of enumerated powers. See U.S. Const., Art. I, § 8. As James Madison wrote, "[t]he powers delegated by the proposed Constitution to the federal government are few and defined. Those which are to remain in the State governments are numerous and indefinite." The Federalist No. 45, pp. 292-293 (C. Rossiter ed. 1961). This constitutionally mandated division of authority "was adopted by the Framers to ensure protection of our fundamental liberties." Gregory v. Ashcroft, 501 U.S. 452, 458 (1991) (internal quotation marks omitted). "Just as the separation and independence of the coordinate branches of the Federal Government serves to prevent the accumulation of excessive power in any one branch, a healthy balance of power between the States and the Federal Government will reduce the risk of tyranny and abuse from either front." [U.S. v. Lopez, 514 U.S. 549 (1995)]

7. A sovereignty is a servant or fiduciary of all sovereignties above it and a master over all those below it. For instance, the states created the federal government so they are sovereign over it and may change it at any time by amending the constitution that created it, or by abolishing it entirely, subject only to their will and voluntary consent.

"A State does not owe its origin to the Government of the United States, in the highest or in any of its branches. It was in existence before it. It derives its authority from the same pure and sacred source as itself: The voluntary and deliberate choice of the people... A State is altogether exempt from the jurisdiction of the Courts of the United States, or from any other exterior authority, unless in the special instances when the general Government has power derived from the Constitution itself." [Chisholm v. Georgia, 2 Dall. (U.S.) 419 (Dall.) (1794)]

8. Delegated authority:

- 8.1. A sovereign can only exercise those powers specifically delegated to it by its Master or Creator in a written voluntary contract called the Constitution. Any other action is specifically forbidden or reserved by implication to the Master and Creator it serves. For instance, the Tenth Amendment reserves police powers to the states. All powers not specifically given to the federal government in the federal constitution are therefore reserved to the states or to the people under the Tenth Amendment:

"The Government of the United States is one of delegated powers alone. Its authority is defined and limited by the Constitution. All powers not granted to it by that instrument are reserved to the States or the people." [United States v. Cruikshank, 92 U.S. 542 (1875)]

"Sovereignty is the right to govern; a nation or State-sovereign is the person or persons in whom that resides. In Europe the sovereignty is generally ascribed to the Prince; here it rests with the people; there, the sovereign actually administers the Government; here, never in a single instance; our Governors are the agents [fiduciaries] of the people, and at most stand in the same relation to their sovereign, in which regents in Europe stand to their sovereigns. Their Princes have personal powers, dignities, and pre-eminences, our rulers have none but official; nor do they partake in the sovereignty otherwise, or in any other capacity, than as private citizens." at 472. [Justice Wilson, Chisholm, Ex'r. v. Georgia, 2 Dall. (U.S.) 419, 1 L.ed. 454, 457, 471, 472) (1794)]

"By the tenth amendment, 'the powers not delegated to the United States by the constitution, nor prohibited by it to the states, are reserved to the states, respectively, or to the people.' Among the powers thus reserved to the several states is what is commonly called the 'police power,'-that inherent and necessary power, essential to the very existence of civil society, and the safeguard of the inhabitants of the state against disorder, disease, poverty, and crime. 'The police power belonging to the states in virtue of their general sovereignty,' said Mr. Justice STORY, delivering the judgment of this court, 'extends over all subjects within the territorial limits of the states, and has never been conceded to the United States.' Prigg v. Pennsylvania, 16 Pet. 539, 625. This is well illustrated by the recent adjudications that a statute prohibiting the sale of illuminating oils below a certain fire test is beyond the constitutional power of congress to enact, except so far as it has effect within the United States (as, for instance, in the District of Columbia) and without the limits of any state; but that it is within the constitutional power of a state to pass such a statute, even as to oils manufactured under letters patent from the United States. U.S. v. Dewitt, 9 Wall. 41; Patterson v. Kentucky, 97 U.S. 501. [135 U.S. 100, 128] The police power includes all measures for the protection of the life, the health, the property, and the welfare of the inhabitants, and for the promotion of good order and the public morals. It covers the suppression of nuisances, whether injurious to the public health, like unwholesome trades, or to the public morals, like gambling-houses and lottery tickets. Slaughter-House Cases, 16 Wall. 36, 62, 87; Fertilizing Co. v. Hyde Park, 97 U.S. 659; Phalen v. Virginia, 8 How. 163, 168; Stone v. Mississippi, 101 U.S. 814. This power, being essential to the maintenance of the authority of local government, and to the safety and welfare of the people, is inalienable. As was said by Chief Justice WAITE, referring to earlier decisions to the same effect: 'No legislature can bargain away the public health or the public morals. The people themselves cannot do it, much less their servants. The supervision of both these subjects of governmental power is continuing in its nature, and they are to be dealt with as the special exigencies of the moment may require. Government is organized with a view to their preservation, and cannot divest itself of the power to provide for them. For this purpose the largest legislative discretion is allowed, and the discretion cannot be parted with any more than the power itself.' Stone v. Mississippi, 101 U.S. 814, 819. See, also, Butchers' Union, etc., Co. v. Crescent City, etc., Co., 111 U.S. 746, 753, 4 S.Sup.Ct.Rep. 652; New Orleans Gas Co. v. Louisiana Light Co., 115 U.S. 650, 672, 6 S.Sup.Ct.Rep. 252; New Orleans v. Houston, 119 U.S. 265, 275, 7 S.Sup.Ct.Rep. 198." Leisy v. Hardin, [135 U.S. 100 (1890)]

- 8.2. Agents or fiduciaries within a sovereign must be willing and able at all times to identify the specific laws that give them the authority to act and be constantly aware of the limits of their delegated authority. If they are not, they run the risk of exceeding their delegated authority and injuring the rights of the master(s) they serve. All actions not specifically authorized by law are illegal by implication. All illegal actions by government officials that are outside their written delegated authority and positive law that result in an injury to the master(s) cause the actor to be personally liable for a tort and monetary damages because they are acting outside the authority of law.

"Unlawful. That which is contrary to, prohibited, or unauthorized by law. That which is not lawful. The acting contrary to, or in defiance of the law; disobeying or disregarding the law. Term is equivalent to "without excuse or justification." State v. Noble, 90 N.M. 360, 563 P.2d. 1153, 1157. While necessarily not implying the element of criminality, it is broad enough to include it." [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1536]

- 8.3. A sovereignty or human being cannot delegate an authority to a subordinate that they themselves do not ALSO possess.

"Quod meum est sine me auferri non potest.
What is mine [sovereignty in this case] cannot be taken away without my consent"
[Bouvier's Law Dictionary Unabridged, 8th Edition, p. 2159]

"Derivativa potestas non potest esse major primitiva.
The power [sovereign immunity in this case] which is derived cannot be greater than that from which it is derived."
[Bouvier's Law Dictionary Unabridged, 8th Edition, p. 2131]

"Nemo potest facere per obliquum quod non potest facere per directum.
No one can do that indirectly which cannot be done directly."
[Bouvier's Law Dictionary Unabridged, 8th Edition, p. 2147]

"Quod per me non possum, nec per alium.
What I cannot do in person, I cannot do through the agency of another."
[Bouvier's Law Dictionary Unabridged, 8th Edition, p. 2159]

[SOURCE: <http://famguardian.org/Publications/BouvierMaximsOfLaw/BouviereMaxims.htm>]

- 8.4. No sovereign can delegate to its fiduciaries the authority to do something that is a crime. For instance, if the people cannot murder, rob, or steal from their fellow man, then they certainly cannot delegate that authority to government, which means they cannot delegate to the government the authority to collect direct taxes upon individuals unless the persons paying the tax voluntarily consent to it individually, otherwise it is theft.

"In Calder v. Bull, which was here in 1798, Mr. Justice Chase said, that there were acts which the Federal and State legislatures could not do without exceeding their authority, and among them he mentioned a law which punished a citizen for an innocent act; a law that destroyed or impaired the lawful private [labor] contracts [and labor compensation, e.g. earnings from employment through compelled W-4 withholding] of citizens; a law that made a man judge in his own case; and a law that took the property from A [the worker], and gave it to B [the government or another citizen, such as through social welfare programs]. 'It is against all reason and justice,' he added, 'for a people to intrust a legislature with such powers, and therefore it cannot be presumed that they have done it. They may command what is right and prohibit what is wrong; but they cannot change innocence [a "nontaxpayer"] into guilt [a "taxpayer"], by presumption or otherwise], or punish innocence as a crime, or violate the right of an antecedent lawful private [employment] contract [by compelling W-4 withholding, for instance], or the right of private property. To maintain that a Federal or State legislature possesses such powers [of THEFT!] if they had not been expressly restrained, would, in my opinion, be a political heresy altogether inadmissible in all free republican governments.' 3 Dall. 388.

[Sinking Fund Cases, 99 U.S. 700 (1878)]

9. The Constitution is a trust document and creates a public trust. Public officers are the “trustees” within that trust and when they abuse their authority, they are executing a “sham trust” for their own personal gain. It is a violation of fiduciary duty for a sovereign or any agent within a sovereign to put a higher priority over its own needs than over any of the masters it serves above it. This is called a conflict of interest and it is against the law. See for instance 18 U.S.C. §208.

“Whatever these Constitutions and laws validly determine to be property, it is the duty of the Federal Government, through the domain of jurisdiction merely Federal, to recognize to be property.

“And this principle follows from the structure of the respective Governments, State and Federal, and their reciprocal relations. They are different agents and trustees of the people of the several States, appointed with different powers and with distinct purposes, but whose acts, within the scope of their respective jurisdictions, are mutually obligatory.”
[Dred Scott v. Sandford, 60 U.S. 393 (1856)]

10. Sovereign Immunity: A government sovereign is exempt from the jurisdiction of the courts of any other government sovereign unless it consents to the jurisdiction of the other sovereign or unless the Constitution that established it makes it subject to the jurisdiction in question. This is called sovereign immunity and it is the embodiment of the separation of powers doctrine. The rules for surrendering sovereign immunity through consent are documented in 28 U.S.C. §1605. Here is an example of sovereign immunity of states from the U.S. Supreme Court:

“A State does not owe its origin to the Government of the United States, in the highest or in any of its branches. It was in existence before it. It derives its authority from the same pure and sacred source as itself: The voluntary and deliberate choice of the people...A State is altogether exempt from the jurisdiction of the Courts of the United States, or from any other exterior authority, unless in the special instances when the general Government has power derived from the Constitution itself.”
[Chisholm v. Georgia, 2 Dall. (U.S.) 419 (Dall.) (1793)]

11. Sovereign immunity also extends to all entities or corporations created by a government sovereign. For instance, the case of Providence Bank v. Billings, 29 U.S. 514 (1830) revealed that the states could not tax a bank corporation created by an act or law of the United States government. The reasoning in that case was that the states could not destroy the federal government because the power to tax necessarily involved the power to destroy.

“The great principle is this: because the constitution will not permit a state to destroy, it will not permit a law involving the power to destroy. In order to show that the case turned entirely on that point, let us suppose that the court had arrived to the conclusion that the bank [The Bank of the United States located in the state of Maryland] was an authorized instrument of government; but that it was not the intention of the constitution to prohibit the states from interfering with those instruments: would it not have been necessary to have decided that the Maryland act was constitutional? Of what importance was it that the bank was an authorized means of power, other than this, that it afforded a key to the meaning of the constitution? If the bank was a legitimate and proper instrument of power, then the constitution intended to protect it. If not, then no protection was intended. The question, whether it was a necessary and proper means, was auxiliary to the great question, whether the constitution intended to shelter it; and when the court arrived to the conclusion that such protection was intended, they interfered not in behalf of the bank, but in behalf of the sanctuary to which it had fled. They decided against the tax; because the subject had been placed beyond the power of the states, by the constitution. They decided, not on account of the subject, but on account of the power that protected it; they decided that a prohibition against destruction was a prohibition against a law involving the power of destruction.”
[Providence Bank v. Billings, 29 U.S. 514 (1830)]

12. A sovereignty may not tax or regulate or control its Creator or grantor, or any sovereignty or agent of that sovereignty above it or at the same level as it, without the explicit and individual and written consent of that sovereign.

12.1. For instance, because churches are agents and creations of God and not the state, then government may not tax churches, and this applies whether or not such churches have a 501(c ) designation or not. See Isaiah 45:9-10:

“Woe to him who strives with his Maker! Let the potsherd strive with the potsherd of the earth! Shall the clay say to him who forms it, ‘What are you making?’ Or shall your handiwork say, ‘He has no hands?’ Woe to him who says to his father, ‘What are you begetting?’ Or to the woman, ‘What have you brought forth?’”
[Isaiah 45:9-10, Bible, NKJV]

12.2. Below is a U.S. Supreme Court cite which admits that in many cases, even the U.S. Supreme Court may not compel states:

“This court has declined to take jurisdiction of suits between states to compel the performance of obligations which, if the states had been independent nations, could not have been enforced judicially, but only through the political departments of their governments. Thus, in Kentucky v. Dennison, 24 How. 66, where the state of Kentucky, by her governor [127 U.S. 265, 289] applied to this court, in the exercise of its original jurisdiction, for a writ of mandamus to the governor of Ohio to compel him to surrender a fugitive from justice, this court, while holding that the case was a controversy between two states, decided that it had no authority to grant the writ.”
[State of Wisconsin v. Pelican Insurance Company, 127 U.S. 265 (1888)]

12.3. Here is an example from the Supreme Court where it is admitted that a state may not be taxed by the federal government:

“In Morcantile Bank v. City of New York, 121 U.S. 138, 162, 7 S. Sup. Ct. 826, this court said: ‘Bonds issued by the state of New York, or under its authority, by its public municipal bodies, are means for carrying on the work of the government, and are not taxable, even by the United States, and it is not a part of the policy of the government which issues them to subject them to taxation for its own purposes.’”
[Pollock v. Farmers’ Loan & Trust Co., 157 U.S. 429 (1895)]

12.4. The Supreme Court also said that states may not tax the federal government:

“While the power of taxation is one of vital importance, retained by the states, not abridged by the grant of a similar power to the government of the Union, but to be concurrently exercised by the two governments, yet even this power of a state is subordinate to, and may be controlled by, the constitution of the United States. That constitution and the laws made in pursuance thereof are supreme. They control the constitutions and laws of the respective states, and cannot be controlled by them. The people of a state give to their government a right of taxing themselves and their property at its discretion. But the means employed by the government of the Union are not given by the people of a particular state, but by the people of all the states; and being given by all, for the benefit of all, should be subjected to that government only which belongs to all. All subjects over which the sovereign power of a state extends are objects of taxation; but those over which it does not extend are, upon the soundest principles, exempt from taxation. The sovereignty of a state extends to everything which exists by its own authority, or is introduced by its permission; but does not extend to those means which are employed by congress to carry into execution powers conferred on that body by the people of the United States. The attempt to use the taxing power of a state on the means employed by the government of the Union, in pursuance of the constitution, is itself an abuse, because it is the usurpation of a power which the people of a single state cannot give. The power to tax involves the power to destroy; the power to destroy may defeat and render useless the power to create; and there is a plain repugnance in conferring on one government a power to control the constitutional measures of another, which other, with respect to those very measures, is declared to be supreme over that which exerts the control. The states have no power, by taxation [117 U.S. 151, 156] or otherwise, to retard, impede, burden, or in any manner control, the operations of the constitutional laws enacted by congress to carry into execution the powers vested in the general government. Such are the outlines, mostly in his own words, of the grounds of the judgment delivered by Chief Justice MARSHALL in the great case of McCulloch v. Maryland, in which it was decided that a statute of the state of Maryland, imposing a tax upon the issue of bills by banks, could not constitutionally be applied to a branch of the Bank of the United States within that state. 4 Wheat. 316, 425-431, 436.

“In Osborn v. Bank of U. S., 9 Wheat. 738, 859-868, that conclusion was reviewed in a very able argument of counsel, and reaffirmed by the court, and a tax laid by the state of Ohio upon a branch of the Bank of the United States was held to be unconstitutional. See, also, Providence Bank v. Billings, 4 Pet. 514, 564. Upon the same grounds, the states have been adjudged to have no power to lay a tax upon stock issued for money borrowed by the United States, or upon property of state banks invested in United States stock. Weston v. City Council of Charleston, 2 Pet. 449, 467; Bank of Commerce v. New York, 2 Black, 620; Bank Tax Case, 2 Wall. 200; Banks v. Mayor, 7 Wall. 16.”
[Van Brocklin v. State of Tennessee, 117 U.S. 151 (1886)]

12.5. Here is an example where the Supreme Court said that states may not tax each other's bonds:

1 “The question in Bonaparte v. Tax Court, 104 U.S. 592, was whether the registered public debt of one state,
 2 exempt from taxation by that state, or actually taxed there, was taxable by another state, when owned by a
 3 citizen of the latter, and it was held that there was no provision of the constitution of the United States which 4 prohibited such taxation. The states had not covenanted that this could not be done, whereas, under the 5 fundamental law, as to the power to borrow money, neither the United States, on the one hand, nor the states
 6 on the other, can interfere with that power as possessed by each, and an essential element of the sovereignty
 7 of each. “

8 [Pollock v. Farmers' Loan & Trust Co., 157 U.S. 429 (1895)]

9 12.6. Finally, the federal government may not tax the employees of states of the union:

10 “As stated by Judge [157 U.S. 429, 602] Cooley in his work on the Principles of Constitutional Law: The 11 power to tax, whether by the United States or by the states, is to be construed in the light of and limited by the 12 fact that the states and the Union are inseparable, and that the constitution contemplates the perpetual 13 maintenance of each with all its constitutional powers, unembarrassed and unimpaired by any action of the 14 other. The taxing power of the federal government does not therefore extend to the means or agencies through 15 or by the employment of which the states perform their essential functions; since, if these were within its reach,
 16 they might be embarrassed, and perhaps wholly paralyzed, by the burdens it should impose. That the power to 17 tax involves the power to destroy; that the power to destroy may defeat and render useless the power to create;
 18 that there is a plain repugnance in conferring on one government a power to control the constitutional
 19 measures of another, which other, in respect to those very measures, is declared to be supreme over that which 20 exerts the control,-are propositions not to be denied.’ It is true that taxation does not necessarily and 21 unavoidably destroy, and that to carry it to the excess of destruction would be an abuse not to be anticipated;
 22 but the very power would take from the states a portion of their intended liberty of independent action within
 23 the sphere of their powers, and would constitute to the state a perpetual danger of embarrassment and possible
 24 annihilation. The constitution contemplates no such shackles upon state powers, and by implication forbids
 25 them.”

26 Pollock v. Farmers' Loan & Trust Co., [157 U.S. 429 (1895)]

27 13. A sovereignty may tax or regulate any of the entities or sovereignties below it, because it created those subordinate
 28 sovereignties. The power to create carries with it the power to destroy as well. See M'Culloch v. Maryland, 4 Wheat.
 29 316, 431 (1819). Specific examples of sovereignties taxing their fiduciaries or creations below them include:

30 13.1. Federal State (but NOT Union state) taxation within federal enclaves under the Buck Act, found in 4. U.S.C.
 31 §§105-111

32 13.2. State and federal taxation of corporations. See 26 U.S.C. Subtitles D and E and Flint v. Stone Tracy, 220 U.S.
 33 107 (1911).

34 13.3. A sovereign may only tax the entities that it creates. The U.S. Supreme Court case of U.S. v. Perkins, 163 U.S.
 35 625 (1896) reveals, for instance, that states can only tax corporations that they create.

36 “Whether the United States are a corporation 'exempt by law from taxation,' within the meaning of the New 37 York statutes, is the remaining question in the case. The court of appeals has held that this exemption was 38 applicable only to domestic corporations declared by the laws of New York to be exempt from taxation. Thus, in
 39 Re Prime's Estate, 136 N.Y. 347, 32 N.E. 1091, it was held that foreign religious and charitable corporations
 40 were not exempt from the payment of a legacy tax, Chief Judge Andrews observing (page 360, 136 N. Y., and 41 page 1091, 32 N. E.): 'We are of opinion that a statute of a state granting powers and privileges to 42 corporations must, in the absence of plain indications to the contrary, be held to apply only to corporations
 43 created by the state, and over which it has power of visitation and control, ... The legislature in such cases is 44 dealing with its own creations, whose rights and obligations it may limit, define, and control.' To the same effect
 45 are Catlin v. Trustees, 113 N.Y. 133, 20 N.E. 864; White v. Howard, 46 N.Y. 144; In re Balleis' Estate, 144 N.Y.
 46 132, 38 N.E. 1007; Minot v. Winthrop, 162 Mass. 113, 38 N.E. 512; Dos P. Inh. Tax Law, c. 3, 34. If the ruling
 47 of the court of appeals of New York in this particular case be not absolutely binding upon us, we think that,
 48 having regard to the purpose of the law to impose a tax generally upon inheritances, the legislature intended to
 49 allow an exemption only in favor of such corporations as it had itself created, and which might reasonably be 50 supposed to be the special objects of its solicitude and bounty.

51 “In addition to this, however, the United States are not one of the class of corporations intended by law to be 52 exempt [163 U.S. 625, 631] from taxation. What the corporations are to which the exemption was intended to 53 apply are indicated by the tax laws of New York, and are confined to those of a religious, educational,
 54 charitable, or reformatory purpose. We think it was not intended to apply it to a purely political or 55 governmental corporation, like the United States. Catlin v. Trustees, 113 N.Y. 133, 20 N.E. 864; In re Van
 56 Kleeck, 121 N.Y. 701, 75 N.E. 50; Dos P. Inh. Tax Law, c. 3, 34. In re Hamilton, 148 N.Y. 310, 42 N.E. 717, it
 57 was held that the execution did not apply to a municipality, even though created by the state itself.”
 58 U.S. v. Perkins, [163 U.S. 625 (1896)]

59 14. The jurisdiction of each government sovereignty is divided into territorial and subject matter jurisdiction:

60 14.1. Government sovereigns have exclusive and absolute jurisdiction, sometimes called “plenary power” or “general 61 jurisdiction”, over their own territory and property, and no other sovereignty can exercise jurisdiction over this territory or property without the consent of the sovereign manifested in some form, and usually by an act of the legislature:

"The jurisdiction of the nation within its own territory is [169 U.S. 649, 684] necessarily exclusive and absolute. It is susceptible of no limitation not imposed by itself. Any restriction upon it, deriving validity from an external source, would imply a diminution of its sovereignty to the extent of the restriction, and an investment of that sovereignty to the same extent in that power which could impose such restriction. All exceptions, therefore, to the full and complete power of a nation within its own territories, must be traced up to the consent of the nation itself. They can flow from no other legitimate source. This consent may be either express or implied. In the latter case, it is less determinate, exposed more to the uncertainties of construction; but, if understood, not less obligatory."
 [The Exchange, 7 Cranch 116 (1812)]

"Territory: A part of a country separated from the rest, and subject to a particular jurisdiction. Geographical area under the jurisdiction of another country or sovereign power.

"A portion of the United States not within the limits of any state, which has not yet been admitted as a state of the Union, but is organized with a separate legislature, and with executive and judicial powers appointed by the President."
 [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1473]

The requirement for explicit consent is called "comity" in the legal field:

"comity. Courtesy; complaisance; respect; a willingness to grant a privilege, not as a matter of right, but out of deference and good will. Recognition that one sovereignty allows within its territory to the legislative, executive, or judicial act of another sovereignty, having due regard to rights of its own citizens. Nowell v. Nowell, Tex.Civ.App., 408 S.W.2d. 550, 553. In general, principle of "comity" is that courts of one state or jurisdiction will give effect to laws and judicial decisions of another state or jurisdiction, not as a matter of obligation, but out of deference and mutual respect. Brown v. Babbitt Ford, Inc., 117 Ariz. 192, 571 P.2d. 689, 695. See also Full faith and credit clause."
 [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 267]

14.2. States of the union have exclusive territorial jurisdiction within their respective borders over all land and state property not ceded by an act of the legislature of the state to the federal government. They have no jurisdiction outside of their borders except for service of process and discovery, such as subpoenas and summons.

14.3. The federal government has legislative territorial jurisdiction only over: 1. The federal zone; 2. All areas or enclaves within the union states that have been ceded to it by an act of the state legislature under Article 1, Section 8, Clause 17 of the Constitution; 3. Its own territories, possessions, and property, wherever situated; 4. Its own domiciliaries, which includes citizens and residents. Under most circumstances, the federal government has no legislative jurisdiction within states of the Union because the federal constitution reserves "police powers" to the states under the Tenth Amendment.

"It is no longer open to question that the general government, unlike the states, Hammer v. Dagenhart, 247 U.S. 251, 275, 38 S.Ct. 529, 3 A.L.R. 649, Ann.Cas.1918E 724, possesses no inherent power in respect of the internal affairs of the states; and emphatically not with regard to legislation."
 [Carter v. Carter Coal Co., 298 U.S. 238, 56 S.Ct. 855 (1936)]

14.4. Within states of the union, the only type of jurisdiction the federal government can have over areas that are not its territory is subject matter jurisdiction and that jurisdiction must be explicitly identified in the federal Constitution in order to exist at all. There are very few issues over which the federal government has subject matter jurisdiction within FOREIGN states of the Union and income taxes under Subtitles A through C of the Internal Revenue Code is an example of an area where such jurisdiction does not exist. Covetous public dis-servants have systematically tried to hide this fact over the years by obfuscating the Internal Revenue Code and by using illegal IRS extortion to coerce federal judges into violating the Constitutional rights of Americans in the states. Subject matter jurisdiction within states of the Union is limited to the following subjects and no others:

14.4.1. Foreign and interstate commerce. See Constitution, Article 1, Section 8, Clause 3. This includes the following subjects:

14.4.1.1. Taxes on importation, but not exportation. See 26 U.S.C. §7001 and U.S. Constitution, Article 1, Section 9, Clause 3.

14.4.1.2. Claims arising out of bankruptcy proceedings. See 28 U.S.C. §1334; Pauletto v. Reliance Ins. Co., 64 CA.4th 597 (1998), 602, 75 C.R.2d. 334, 337--state courts lack jurisdiction in action for malicious prosecution based on defendant's having filed adversary proceeding in bankruptcy court: "it is for Congress and the federal courts, not state courts, to decide what incentives and penalties shall be utilized in the bankruptcy process".

14.4.1.3. Claims under Sherman Antitrust Act. See 15 U.S.C. §4.

14.4.1.4. Claims under Securities Exchange Act of 1934 (including Rule 10b-5 actions). See 15 U.S.C. §78aa

14.4.1.5. Claims involving activities regulated by federal labor laws. E.g., the Labor Management Reporting and Disclosure Act (19 U.S.C. §401 et seq.) preempts state power to adjudicate claims based on union contracts or union activities, unless of "merely peripheral concern" to the Act. See San Diego Bldg. Trades Council, etc. v. Garmon, 359 U.S. 236 (1959), 247-248, 79 S.Ct. 773, 781-782; Bassett v. Attebery, 180 CA.3d. 288 (1986), 294-295, 224 CR 399, 402—NLRB (rather than federal court) has exclusive jurisdiction over wrongful discharge claim alleging violation of federal labor laws]

14.4.1.6. Certain ERISA actions: Suits for injunctive or other equitable relief against an employer or insurer under the Employee Retirement Income Security Act (ERISA) (But federal and state courts have concurrent jurisdiction of claims for benefits due). See 29 U.S.C. §1132\(e\)\(1\)

14.4.2. Federal property and "employees". See Constitution Article 4, Section 3, Clause 2.

14.4.3. Frauds involving the mail. See Constitution, Article 1, Section 8, Clause 7.

14.4.4. Treason. See Constitution, Article 4, Section 2, Clause 2.

14.4.5. Patent and copyright claims. See 28 U.S.C. §1338\(a\) and Constitution, Article 1, Section 8, Clause 8.

14.4.6. Admiralty and maritime claims. See 28 U.S.C. §1333 and Constitution Article 1, Section 8, Clause 10.

14.4.7. Jurisdiction over aliens everywhere in the Union, including in states of the Union. See Chae Chan Ping v. U.S., 130 U.S. 581 (1889), Kleindienst v. Mandel, 408 U.S. 753 (1972). This source of jurisdiction is the reason that all "taxpayers" are aliens and not "citizens". See 26 C.F.R. §1.1441-1(c)(3).

14.5. The formation of a state within territory under the exclusive control of the federal government does not affect the legal status of property not within the territory of the new state:

"This provision authorizes the United States to be and become a land-owner, and prescribes the mode in which the lands may be disposed of, and the title conveyed to the purchaser. Congress is to make the needful rules and regulations upon this subject. The title of the United States can be divested by no other power, by no other means, in no other mode, than that which congress shall sanction and prescribe. It cannot be done by the action of the people or legislature of a territory or state." And he supported this conclusion by a review of all the acts of congress under which states had theretofore been admitted. Mr. Webster said that those precedents demonstrated that 'the general idea has been, in the creation of a state, that its admission as a state has no effect at all on the property of the United States lying within its limits; and that it was settled by the judgment of this court in Pollard v. Hagan, 3 How. 212, 224, 'that the authority of the United States does so far extend as, by force of itself, Proprio vigore, to exempt the public lands from taxation when new states are created in the territory in which the lands lie.' 21 Cong. Globe, 31st Cong. 1st Sess. p. 1314; 22 Cong. Globe, pp. 848 et seq., 960, 986, 1004; 5 Webst. Works, 395, 396, 405."
Van Brocklin v. State of Tennessee, [117 U.S. 151 (1886)]

15. Jurisdiction of each government sovereignty over subjects or sovereignties underneath it is created by oath of allegiance, which we will discuss later in section 5.2.1.

15.1. In order to preserve their sovereignty, the people at the top of this hierarchy should not swear an oath of allegiance to any government, because by doing so, they come under the jurisdiction of the laws that control mainly government employees and thereby to surrender their sovereignty. See section 5.2.1 for further details and also see Matt. 5:33-37, which says that Christians should not swear an oath to anything.

15.2. Each officer of both the state and federal governments takes an oath of allegiance to support and defend the Constitution of the United States against all enemies, foreign and domestic. Failure to live up to that oath amounts to perjury of one's oath, which can result in removal from office.

15.3. If is a violation of the separation of powers doctrine and a conflict of interest to take oaths to TWO masters or to occupy a public office that requires an oath to two different masters or sovereignties. Hence, it is a violation of the Constitutions of most states to simultaneously serve in a public office in the state government as well as the federal government.

CALIFORNIA CONSTITUTION
ARTICLE 7 PUBLIC OFFICERS AND EMPLOYEES

SEC. 7. A person holding a lucrative office under the United States or other power may not hold a civil office of profit [within the state government]. A local officer or postmaster whose compensation does not exceed 500 dollars per year or an officer in the militia or a member of a reserve component of the armed forces of the United States except where on active federal duty for more than 30 days in any year is not a holder of a lucrative office, nor is the holding of a civil office of profit affected by this military service.

16. Any legislation or ruling by the judicial branch of either a state government or the federal government that breaks down the distinct separation of the powers above is unconstitutional and violates Article 4, Section 4 of the federal constitution, which requires that:

"The United States shall guarantee to every State in this Union a Republican Form of Government, and shall protect each of them against Invasion; and on Application of the Legislature, or of the Executive (when the Legislature cannot be convened) against domestic Violence."
[U.S. Constitution, Article 4, Section 4]

A republican form of government is based on individual, not collective rights, and those rights cannot be defended or protected from federal "invasion" or encroachment without separation of powers to the maximum extent possible. This concept is called the "Separation of Powers Doctrine". The implications of this requirement include:

- 16.1. Federal government may not offer franchises to states of the Union. Only federal "States" defined in 4 U.S.C. §110\(d\) can be party to federal franchises.
- 16.2. Federal government may not offer franchises, licenses, or privileges to anyone domiciled in a sovereign state of the Union and protected by the Constitution. Another way of saying this is that those who took an oath to support and defend your rights cannot make a business out of enticing you into surrendering them in exchange for anything, whether real or perceived.
- 16.3. State governments may not offer franchises, licenses, or privileges to domiciled within the state whose domicile is not on federal territory. Another way of saying this is that those who took an oath to support and defend your rights cannot make a business out of enticing you into surrendering them in exchange for anything, whether real or perceived.

If you would like to know more about the abuse of franchises by malicious public servants to destroy the separation of powers and enslave the people, read:

17. A sovereignty that wants to influence or control a subordinate sovereignty that is not immediately underneath it must do so by using the sovereignty below it as its conduit or agent.
18. In the realm of commerce, both state and federal sovereignties are treated just like any human being and recovery of debts is accomplished within courts of equity.

"...when the United States enters into commercial business it abandons its sovereign capacity and is treated like any other corporation..."
[91 Corpus Juris Secundum (C.J.S.), United States, §4 (2003)]

19. Human beings domiciled inside the federal zone above do not fall into the category of "The People" because the federal zone is not a constitutional republic, but a totalitarian socialist democracy. They ARE NOT parties to the Constitution and therefore are not protected by it. See section 4.8 earlier for further clarification on this subject. "The People" referred to in the diagram instead are those natural persons residing in and born within the 50 union states who claim their correct status as either "state nationals" or "nationals" as described in 8 U.S.C. §1101\(a\)\(21\). Persons who claim to be statutory "U.S. citizens" or who are in receipt of government privileges as elected or appointed officers of the government have also forfeited their sovereignty and their position in the above diagram to fall at the same level as corporations and federal "States".

"Indeed, the practical interpretation put by Congress upon the Constitution has been long continued and uniform to the effect [182 U.S. 244, 279] that the Constitution is applicable to territories acquired by purchase or conquest, only when and so far as Congress shall so direct. Notwithstanding its duty to 'guarantee to every state in this Union a republican form of government' (art. 4, 4), by which we understand, according to the definition of Webster, 'a government in which the supreme power resides in the whole body of the people, and is exercised by representatives elected by them,' Congress did not hesitate, in the original organization of the territories of Louisiana, Florida, the Northwest Territory, and its subdivisions of Ohio, Indiana, Michigan, Illinois, and Wisconsin and still more recently in the case of Alaska, to establish a form of government bearing a much greater analogy to a British Crown colony than a republican state of America, and to vest the legislative power either in a governor and council, or a governor and judges, to be appointed by the President. It was not until they had attained a certain population that power was given them to organize a legislature by vote of the people. In all these cases, as well as in territories subsequently organized west of the Mississippi, Congress thought it necessary either to extend to Constitution and laws of the United States over them, or to declare that the inhabitants should be entitled to enjoy the right of trial by jury, of bail, and of the privilege of the writ of habeas corpus, as well as other privileges of the bill of rights."

1 Downes v. Bidwell, [182 U.S. 244 (1901)]

- 2 20. A “national” or a “state national” or a “foreign national” may not sue any state government in a federal court. He can 3 only do so in a court of the state that he is suing or in the Court of Claims. This is because the servant, which is the 4 Federal Government, cannot be greater than its master and creator, the states of the Union. See the Eleventh
5 Amendment, which says:

6 “The Judicial power of the United States shall not be construed to extend to any suit in law or equity,
7 commenced or prosecuted against one of the United States by Citizens of another State, or by Citizens or 8 Subjects of any Foreign State.”

- 9 21. A state sovereignty cannot lawfully consent to the enlargement of the powers of Congress or of any other subordinate
10 sovereignty beyond those clearly enumerated in the Constitution.

11 “State officials thus cannot consent to the enlargement of the powers of Congress beyond those enumerated in 12 the Constitution.”

13 New York v. United States, [505 U.S. 142; 112 S.Ct. 2408; 120 L.Ed.2d. 120 (1992)]

14 By implication, officials of states of the Union mentioned in the Constitution, either through the Buck Act or through 15 an Agreement on Coordination of Tax Administration (ACTA), cannot lawfully extend or consent to extend federal 16 taxing powers into the states upon individuals and bypass the constitutional limits on federal taxing powers found in
17 Article 1, Section 9, Clause 4 and Article, 1, Section 2, Clause 3. Only officials of federal “States” described in 4
18 U.S.C. §110(d) may do it, and these “States” are not sovereign, but simply subdivisions of the national domain who are 19 called “territories and possessions of the United States”. States of the Union are neither territories nor possessions of 20 the United States.

- 21 22. A sovereignty may, under the rules of comity, voluntarily relinquish a portion of its sovereignty to a sovereignty below
22 it but not above it. For example, under the Buck Act, 4 U.S.C. §§105-111, the U.S. government gave jurisdiction to
23 federal “States”, which in fact are only territories of the federal United States (within the U.S. Code), to enforce
24 [federal] State tax statutes within federal areas or enclaves located within their exterior boundaries. Many people
25 mistakenly believe that this act gave the same type of authority to states of the Union, but the definition of “State”
26 found in 4 U.S.C. §110(d) confirms that such a “State” is either a territory or possession of the United States, as 27 defined in Title 48 of the U.S. Code. The reason that the federal government cannot consent to the enlargement of 28 powers of states of the Union within its borders is that this would violate the separation of powers doctrine and
29 undermine the obligation of Article 4, Section 4 of the Constitution, which requires Congress to guarantee a
30 “Republican form of government”. Below is the statute that authorizes territories and possessions of the United States
31 to enforce their tax statutes within federal enclaves:

32 TITLE 4 > CHAPTER 4 > Sec. 106.
33 Sec. 106. - Same; income tax

34 (a) No person shall be relieved from liability for any income tax levied by any State, or by any duly constituted
35 taxing authority therein, having jurisdiction to levy such a tax, by reason of his residing within a Federal area
36 or receiving income from transactions occurring or services performed in such area; and such State or taxing
37 authority shall have full jurisdiction and power to levy and collect such tax in any Federal area within such 38 State to the same extent and with the same effect as though such area was not a Federal area.

39 (b) The provisions of subsection (a) shall be applicable only with respect to income or receipts received after
40 December 31, 1940

- 41 23. A sovereignty or human being cannot delegate an authority to a subordinate that they themselves do not ALSO 42 possess.

44 What is mine [sovereignty in this case] cannot be taken away without my consent”

46 “Derivativa potestas non potest esse major primitiva.

7 24. The CREATOR of a thing is the ONLY one who has the power to DEFINE exactly what it means. You should
8 NEVER give the power to define ANYTHING you put on a government form in the hands of a government worker,
9 because they will ALWAYS define it to place you under their jurisdiction and benefit themselves personally. That 10 means you should NEVER submit any government form without defining ANY and EVERY possible "word of art" on 11 the form so that you will not waive any rights or benefit them.

12 "But when Congress creates a statutory right [a "privilege" in this case, such as a "trade or business"], it
13 clearly has the discretion, in defining that right, to create presumptions, or assign burdens of proof, or 14 prescribe remedies; it may also provide that persons seeking to vindicate that right must do so before
15 particularized tribunals created to perform the specialized adjudicative tasks related to that right."
16 [Northern Pipeline Const. Co. v. Marathon Pipe Line Co., 458 U.S. 50, 102 S.Ct. 2858 (1983)]

17 This is VERY important to know, because although Congress CREATES franchises and OFFERS you opportunities to 18 sign up and thereby waive your Constitutional rights, YOU and ONLY YOU have the right to DEFINE all terms on the 19 application to join the franchise. Most such applications are signed under penalty of perjury and constitute testimony
20 of a witness, and therefore it is a criminal offense to threaten or tamper with or advise the submitter to fill out the form
21 in a certain way or else criminal witness tampering has occurred. That means that if you are compelled to sign up for 22 the franchise against your will, you can define all terms on the form so as to:

23 24.1. Withhold consent.

24 24.2. Reserve all your constitutional rights and waive none.

25 24.3. Document the duress and the source of the duress that caused you to apply. Contracts or consent procured under 26 duress are unenforceable.

27 24.4. Change your status to foreign and alien in relation to the offeror and therefore beyond their civil jurisdiction.

28 24.5. Turn the application from an acceptance into a COUNTER-OFFER of YOUR OWN franchise. This causes
29 THEIR response to constitute an acceptance of what we call an ANTI-FRANCHISE FRANCHISE. That way,
30 THEY and not YOU become the party waiving rights. The following videos show how this works:

36 government available on our website below:

Treatise on Government, Joel Tiffany, 1867

<http://famguardian.org/Publications/TreatiseOnGovernment/TreatOnGovt.pdf>

37 Corporations were created by state and federal governments as a matter of public and social policy in order to encourage 38 commerce and prosper everyone in society economically. Any Creator may place any demand on his creation that he wants
39 to, including the requirement to pay a tax. He may even destroy his creation should he choose to do so by excessive
40 taxation or other means. The supreme Court said of this subject the following:

41 "The power to tax is the power to destroy."
42 [John Marshal, U.S. Supreme Court Justice, M'Culloch v. Maryland, 4 Wheat. 316, 431]

43 Since "the power to tax is the power to destroy," then it follows that "the power to create is the power to tax". This is a
44 logical consequence of the fact that the power to create and the power to destroy must proceed from the same hand. Here is 45 how the U.S. Supreme Court described it:

46 "What is a Constitution? It is the form of government, delineated by the mighty hand of the people, in which 47 certain first principles of fundamental laws are established. The Constitution is certain and fixed; it contains

1           the permanent will of the people, and is the supreme law of the land; it is paramount to the power of the 2           Legislature, and can be revoked or altered only by the authority that made it. The life-giving principle
3           and the death-doing stroke must proceed from the same hand.
4           [VanHorne's Lessee v. Dorrance, 2 U.S. 304 (1795)]

5           The power to create and the power to destroy can therefore only be allowed to proceed from the same source. This means
6           that the creation cannot and should not be allowed to destroy or burden its Creator. Therefore, the federal government
7           cannot be allowed to directly tax or embarrass or burden the states of the Union without their consent and through
8           apportionment. Likewise, the states of the Union cannot be allowed to directly tax or embarrass or burden the sovereign
9           People who created them. Government may therefore tax only what government has created, and the only thing it created
10          were corporations and paper fiat currency. A legal fiction called a government can only destroy those other legal fictions
11          that it creates, but it cannot destroy a flesh and blood man that it did not create:

12                   "Mr. Baily (Texas)...Or suppose I had concurred with him, and had levied a tax on the individual and exempted 13                   all corporations and to lay the burden of the government upon the man of flesh and blood, made in the image of 14                   his God."
15                   [44 Cong.Rec. 2447 (1909)]

16          The definition of the term "person" found throughout the Internal Revenue Code, such as in I.R.C. Sections 6671(b) and
17          7343 confirms that the only type of "persons" included as the target of most types of enforcement actions are federal
18          corporations incorporated in the District of Columbia, and "public officials" of the United States government who are in 19          receipt of excise taxable privileges of public office. Here are a few examples demonstrating this amazing fact from the 20          I.R.C.:

- 21          1. Definition of "person" for the purposes of "assessable penalties" within the Internal Revenue Code means an officer or 22          employee of a corporation:

23                   TITLE 26 > Subtitle F > CHAPTER 68 > Subchapter B > PART I > Sec. 6671.
24                   Sec. 6671. - Rules for application of assessable penalties

25                   (b) Person defined

26                   The term "person", as used in this subchapter, includes an officer or employee of a corporation, or a member or
27                   employee of a partnership, who as such officer, employee, or member is under a duty to perform the act in
28                   respect of which the violation occurs

- 29          2. Definition of "person" for the purposes of "miscellaneous forfeiture and penalty provisions" of the Internal Revenue
30          Code means an officer or employer of a corporation or partnership within the federal United States:

31                   TITLE 26 > Subtitle F > CHAPTER 75 > Subchapter D > Sec. 7343.
32                   Sec. 7343. - Definition of term "person"

33                   The term "person" as used in this chapter [Chapter 75] includes an officer or employee of a corporation, or a 34                   member or employee of a partnership, who as such officer, employee, or member is under a duty to perform the 35                   act in respect of which the violation occurs

- 36          3. Definition of "person" or "individual" for the purposes of levy within the Internal Revenue Code means an elected or 37          appointed officer of the United States government or a federal instrumentality:

38                   26 U.S.C., Subchapter D - Seizure of Property for Collection of Taxes
39                   Sec. 6331. Levy and distraint

40                   (a) Authority of Secretary

41                   If any person liable to pay any tax neglects or refuses to pay the same within 10 days after notice and demand,
42                   it shall be lawful for the Secretary to collect such tax (and such further sum as shall be sufficient to cover the 43                   expenses of the levy) by levy upon all property and rights to property (except such property as is exempt under 44                   section 6334) belonging to such person or on which there is a lien provided in this chapter for the payment of 45                   such tax. Levy may be made upon the accrued salary or wages of any officer, employee, or elected official, of 46                   the United States, the District of Columbia, or any agency or instrumentality of the United States or the 47                   District of Columbia, by serving a notice of levy on the employer (as defined in section 3401(d)) of such
48                   officer, employee, or elected official. If the Secretary makes a finding that the collection of such tax is in
49                   jeopardy, notice and demand for immediate payment of such tax may be made by the Secretary and, upon

1 failure or refusal to pay such tax, collection thereof by levy shall be lawful without regard to the 10-day period
2 provided in this section.

3 Government didn't create people so it can't tax people, unless they explicitly and individually consent voluntarily to it by
4 undertaking employment with the federal government as privileged public officers of that government who are voluntarily
5 engaged in a taxable activity called a "trade or business". In a free country, all just power of government derives from the 6 explicit consent of the people. Any civil action undertaken absent explicit, informed, and voluntary consent is unjust.

7 "There is a clear distinction in this particular case between an individual and a corporation, and that the latter
8 has no right to refuse to submit its books and papers for an examination at the suit of the State. The individual
9 may stand upon his constitutional rights as a citizen. He is entitled to carry on his private business in his own
10 way. His power to contract is unlimited. He owes no such duty to the State, since he receives nothing therefrom,
11 beyond the protection of his life and property. His rights are such as existed by the law of the land long
12 antecedent to the organization of the State, and can only be taken from him by due process of law, and in 13 accordance with the constitution. Among his rights are a refusal to incriminate himself, and the immunity of 14 himself and his property from arrest or seizure except under a warrant of the law. He owes nothing to the 15 public so long as he does not trespass upon their rights."
16 [Hale v. Henkel, 201 U.S. 43, 74 (1906)]

17 Only God in His sovereignty can create people. That is why the Constitution recognizes in two different places, including 18 Article 1, Section 9, Clause 4 (1:9:4) and Article 1, Clause 2, Section 3 (1:2:3) that direct taxes must be apportioned to the 19 states of the Union and may not be directly levied on the people within states of the Union by the federal government. The 20 federal government servant simply cannot be greater than the sovereign People that it serves in the states of the Union.
21 Violating this requirement is the equivalent of instituting slavery in states of the Union in violation of the Thirteenth
22 Amendment. This is also why:

- 23 1. There is no liability statute anywhere in Subtitle A making anyone responsible to pay income taxes.
- 24 2. The IRS is not an enforcement agency and does not fall under the Undersecretary for Enforcement within the Dept. of 25 Treasury. See: <http://famguardian.org/Subjects/Taxes/Research/TreasOrgHist/Torg1999.pdf>
- 26 3. I.R.C., Subtitles A and C can only be voluntary and can never be enforced against "nontaxpayers". Every person who 27 participates must individually consent or the code becomes unenforceable. Note that AFTER they consent, it is no
28 longer voluntary, but BEFORE they do, it is.
- 29 4. All payroll tax withholding is entirely consensual and voluntary and cannot be coerced. See 26 U.S.C. §3402(p) and 26
30 C.F.R. §31.3401(p)-1.
- 31 5. The Supreme Court said that the definition for "income" has always meant corporate profit. This means that natural 32 persons cannot earn "income" as defined by the Constitution unless they are privileged officers of the United States
33 government who voluntarily consent to it by pursuing employment with that government:

34 "In order, therefore, that the [apportionment] clauses cited from article I [§2, cl. 3 and §9, cl. 4] of the 35 Constitution may have proper force and effect ...[I]t becomes essential to distinguish between what is an what 36 is not 'income,' ...according to truth and substance, without regard to form. Congress cannot by any definition
37 it may adopt conclude the matter, since it cannot by legislation alter the Constitution, from which alone, it
38 derives its power to legislate, and within those limitations alone that power can be lawfully exercised... [pg.
39 207] ...After examining dictionaries in common use we find little to add to the succinct definition adopted in two
40 cases arising under the Corporation Tax Act of 1909, Stratton's Independence v. Howbert, 231 U.S. 399, 415,
41 34 S.Sup.Ct. 136, 140 [58 L.Ed. 285] and Doyle v. Mitchell Bros. Co., 247 U.S. 179, 185, 38 S.Sup.Ct. 467,
42 469, 62 L.Ed. 1054..."
43 Eisner v. Macomber, [252 U.S. 189, 207, 40 S.Ct. 189, 9 A.L.R. 1570 (1920)]
44

45 "...Whatever difficulty there may be about a precise scientific definition of 'income,' it imports, as used here,
46 something entirely distinct from principal or capital either as a subject of taxation or as a measure of the tax;
47 conveying rather the idea of gain or increase arising from corporate activities."
48 Doyle v. Mitchell Brothers Co., [247 U.S. 179, 185, 38 S.Ct. 467 (1918)]
49

50 "Income has been taken to mean the same thing as used in the Corporation Excise Tax Act of 1909 (36 Stat.
51 112) in the 16th Amendment, and in the various revenue acts subsequently passed."
52 Bowers v. Kerbaugh-Empire Co., [271 U.S. 170, 174, (1926)]

- 53 6. The Supreme Court said in the case of Flora v. United States, 362 U.S. 145 (1960):

54 "Our system of taxation is based upon voluntary assessment and payment, not distraint."
55 [Flora v. U.S., 362 U.S. 145 (1960)]

The debates held in Congress in 1909 over the ratification of the Sixteenth Amendment abundantly confirm the above conclusions. They also abundantly confirm the fact that the legislative intent of the Sixteenth Amendment revealed during Congressional debates never included the intent to tax “wages” (in the common understanding, not in the legal sense defined in the Internal Revenue Code) on the labor of human beings. Below is just one cite out the hundreds of pages of Congressional Debates on the Sixteenth Amendment posted on our website at:

Congressional Debates on the Sixteenth Amendment, Family Guardian Fellowship
<http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/History/Congress/1909-16thAmendCongrRecord.pdf>

Senator Daniel of Virginia is debating the Sixteenth Amendment and he offers an excellent analysis of the legal criteria of taxing a corporation:

“There are many things—settled personal views—about this excise tax which we ought to remember, and I propose to state, just as I have stated the difference between corporations and partnerships, what are some of the marked and settled opinions which have had judicial exposition and indorsement as to the power to tax corporations. I will state some of them. I think it will be found settled in the judicial reports of this country, and so well settled that no lawyer familiar with the decisions could hope to disturb the decisions, as follows:

“(1) That a corporate franchise is a distinct subject of taxation, and not as property, but as the exercise of a privilege.

“(2) That it may be taxed by a State or Country which creates it.

“(3) It may be taxed by a State or Territory in which it is exercised, although created by a foreign country.

“(4) It may be taxed by the United States, whether created by the United States or a foreign country or by a State, Territory, or district of the United States.

“(5) The franchise of the corporation may also be taxed by a State, although created by the United States, unless created as part of the governmental machinery of the United States.

“The same or rather the like limitation applies upon corporations created by the States. You may tax any private corporation of a State, but a corporation of the State, that is chartered by the State to perform some function of its government, partakes of a governmental nature, just as one so formed by the United States; and as the one cannot be taxed by the Federal Government, so the other cannot be taxed by the State.”
 [44 Cong.Rec. 4237-4238 (1909)]

Below is another Congressional interchange on the legislative intent of the Sixteenth Amendment that clearly shows it was never intended to apply to the wages derived from labor of a flesh and blood human being:

“Mr. Brandegee. Mr. President, what I said was that the amendment exempts absolutely everything that a man makes for himself. Of course it would not exempt a legacy which somebody else made for him and gave to him. If a man’s occupation or vocation—for vocation means nothing but a calling—if his calling or occupation were that of a financier it would exempt everything he made by underwriting and by financial operations in the course of a year that would be the product of his effort. Nothing can be imagined that a man can busy himself about with a view of profit which the amendment as drawn would not utterly exempt.”
 [50 Cong.Rec. p. 3839, 1913]

Even the U.S. Supreme Court agrees with this conclusion that earnings from labor are not taxable to the person who did the work:

“Every man has a natural right to the fruits of his own labor, is generally admitted; and no other person can rightfully deprive him of those fruits, and appropriate them against his will...”
 [The Antelope, 23 U.S. 66, 10 Wheat 66, 6 L.Ed. 268 (1825)]

5.1.2 Nature of the Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A Income Tax

The income tax described in Subtitle A of the Internal Revenue Code is an excise tax upon a “trade or business”, which is defined as “the functions of a public office” within the United States government:

26 U.S.C. §7701\(a\)\(26\)

"The term 'trade or business' includes the performance of the functions of a public office."

A "trade or business" is what the legal profession calls a "franchise". Participation in all franchises is voluntary, which is why there is no liability statute anywhere in the Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A that makes the average American "liable" to pay the income tax. For details on franchises, see:

Government Instituted Slavery Using Franchises, Form #05.030
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

A "public office" is a type of employment or agency within the federal government that is created by contract or agreement that you must implicitly or explicitly consent to.

Public office

"Essential characteristics of a 'public office' are:

- (1) Authority conferred by law,
- (2) Fixed tenure of office, and
- (3) Power to exercise some of the sovereign functions of government.
- (4) Key element of such test is that "officer is carrying out a sovereign function".
- (5) Essential elements to establish public position as 'public office' are:
  - (a) Position must be created by Constitution, legislature, or through authority conferred by legislature.
  - (b) Portion of sovereign power of government must be delegated to position,
  - (c) Duties and powers must be defined, directly or implied, by legislature or through legislative authority.
  - (d) Duties must be performed independently without control of superior power other than law, and
  - (e) Position must have some permanency."

[Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1230]

A person holding a "public office" has a fiduciary duty to the public as a "trustee" of the "public trust":

"As expressed otherwise, the powers delegated to a public officer are held in trust for the people and are to be exercised in behalf of the government or of all citizens who may need the intervention of the officer. 2 Furthermore, the view has been expressed that all public officers, within whatever branch and whatever level of government, and whatever be their private vocations, are trustees of the people, and accordingly labor under every disability and prohibition imposed by law upon trustees relative to the making of personal financial gain from a discharge of their trusts. 3 That is, a public officer occupies a fiduciary relationship to the political entity on whose behalf he or she serves. 4 and owes a fiduciary duty to the public. 5 It has been said that the fiduciary responsibilities of a public officer cannot be less than those of a private individual. 6 Furthermore, it has been stated that any enterprise undertaken by the public official which tends to weaken public confidence and undermine the sense of security for individual rights is against public policy.<sup>7</sup>"

[63C American Jurisprudence 2d., Public Officers and Employees, §247 (1999)]

If you aren't engaged in a "public office", then you can't be the proper subject of the income tax or truthfully or lawfully be described as THE "person", "individual", "employee", "employer", "citizen", "resident", or "taxpayer" described anywhere in the Internal Revenue Code UNLESS you volunteer by signing an agreement. Yes, you could be described by these terms in their ordinary English usage, but you would not fit the LEGAL meanings of these terms as they are defined in the Internal Revenue Code unless you in fact and in deed engage in a "public office" within the United States government through private contract or agreement that you consent to. Within this publication, we put quotes around words like those above when we wish to refer to the legally defined meaning of a term and exclude the common or ordinary definition. In that sense, the Internal Revenue Code constitutes:

1. Private law:

"Private law. That portion of the law which defines, regulates, enforces, and administers relationships among individuals, associations, and corporations. As used in contradistinction to public law, the term means all that part of the law which is administered between citizen and citizen, or which is concerned with the definition, regulation, and enforcement of rights in cases where both the person in whom the right inheres and the person upon whom the obligation is incident are private individuals. See also Private bill; Special law. Compare Public Law."

[Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1196]

2. Special law:

"special law. One relating to particular persons or things; one made for individual cases or for particular places or districts; one operating upon a selected class, rather than upon the public generally. A private law. A law is "special" when it is different from others of the same general kind or designed for a particular purpose, or limited in range or confined to a prescribed field of action or operation. A "special law" relates to either particular persons, places, or things or to persons, places, or things which, though not particularized, are separated by any method of selection from the whole class to which the law might, but not such legislation, be applied. Utah Farm Bureau Ins. Co. v. Utah Ins. Guaranty Ass'n, Utah, 564 P.2d. 751, 754. A special law applies only to an individual or a number of individuals out of a single class similarly situated and affected, or to a special locality. Board of County Com'rs of Lemhi County v. Swensen, Idaho, 80 Idaho 198, 327 P.2d. 361, 362. See also Private bill; Private law. Compare General law; Public law."

[Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, pp. 1397-1398]

3. What the courts call a "franchise", which is a "privilege" or benefit offered only to those who volunteer:

FRANCHISE. A special privilege conferred by government on individual or corporation, and which does not belong to citizens of country generally of common right. Elliott v. City of Eugene, 135 Or. 108, 294 P. 358, 360. In England it is defined to be a royal privilege in the hands of a subject.

A "franchise," as used by Blackstone in defining quo warranto, (3 Com. 262 [4th Am. Ed.] 322), had reference to a royal privilege or branch of the king's prerogative subsisting in the hands of the subject, and must arise from the king's grant, or be held by prescription, but today we understand a franchise to be some special privilege conferred by government on an individual, natural or artificial, which is not enjoyed by its citizens in general. State v. Fernandez, 106 Fla. 779, 143 So. 638, 639, 86 A.L.R. 240.

In this country a franchise is a privilege or immunity of a public nature, which cannot be legally exercised without legislative grant. To be a corporation is a franchise. *The various powers conferred on corporations are franchises. The execution of a policy of insurance by an insurance company [e.g. Social Insurance/Socialist Security], and the issuing a bank note by an incorporated bank [such as a Federal Reserve NOTE], are franchises. People v. Utica Ins. Co., 15 Johns., N.Y., 387, 8 Am.Dec. 243. But it does not embrace the property acquired by the exercise of the franchise. Bridgeport v. New York & N. H. R. Co., 36 Conn. 255, 4 Am.Rep. 63. Nor involve interest in land acquired by grantee. Whitbeck v. Funk, 140 Or. 70, 12 P.2d. 1019, 1020 In a popular sense, the political rights of subjects and citizens are franchises, such as the right of suffrage. etc. Pierce v. Emery, 32 N.H. 484; State v. Black Diamond Co., 97 Ohio.St. 24, 119 N.E. 195, 199, L.R.A. 1918E, 352.

Elective Franchise. The right of suffrage: the right or privilege of voting in public elections.

Exclusive Franchise. See Exclusive Privilege or Franchise.

General and Special. The charter of a corporation is its "general" franchise, while a "special" franchise consists in any rights granted by the public to use property for a public use but-with private profit. Lord v. Equitable Life Assur. Soc., 194 N.Y. 212, 81 N.E. 443, 22 L.R.A.,N.S., 420.

Personal Franchise. A franchise of corporate existence, or one which authorizes the formation and existence of a corporation, is sometimes called a "personal" franchise. as distinguished from a "property" franchise, which authorizes a corporation so formed to apply its property to some particular enterprise or exercise some special privilege in its employment, as, for example, to construct and operate a railroad. See Sandham v. Nye, 9 Misc.ReP. 541, 30 N.Y.S. 552.

Secondary Franchises. The franchise of corporate existence being sometimes called the "primary" franchise of a corporation, its "secondary" franchises are the special and peculiar rights, privileges, or grants which it may, receive under its charter or from a municipal corporation, such as the right to use the public streets, exact tolls, collect fares, etc. State v. Topeka Water Co., 61 Kan. 547, 60 P. 337; Virginia Canon Toll Road Co. v. People, 22 Colo. 429, 45 P. 398 37 L.R.A. 711. The franchises of a corporation are divisible into (1) corporate or general franchises; and (2) "special or secondary franchises. The former is the franchise to exist as a corporation, while the latter are certain rights and privileges conferred upon existing corporations. Gulf Refining Co. v. Cleveland Trust Co., 166 Miss. 759, 108 So. 158, 160.

Special Franchisee. See Secondary Franchises, supra.
[Black's Law Dictionary, Fourth Edition, pp. 786-787]

4. An "excise tax" or "privilege tax" upon privileges incident to federal contracts, employment, or agency.

"Excises are taxes laid upon the manufacture, sale or consumption of commodities within the country, upon licenses to pursue certain occupations and upon corporate privileges...the requirement to pay such taxes involves the exercise of [220 U.S. 107, 152] privileges, and the element of absolute and unavoidable demand is lacking.."

...It is therefore well settled by the decisions of this court that when the sovereign authority has exercised the right to tax a legitimate subject of taxation as an exercise of a franchise or privilege, it is no objection that the measure of taxation is found in the income produced in part from property which of itself considered is nontaxable...

Conceding the power of Congress to tax the business activities of private corporations.. the tax must be measured by some standard..."
[Flint v. Stone Tracy Co., 220 U.S. 107 (1911)]

Hoverdale Letter, SEDM Exhibit #09.023
<http://sedm.org/Exhibits/ExhibitIndex.htm>

The rules for administering the "trade or business" franchise followed universally by the IRS and the courts are as follows:

1. The method of conveying consent to participate in the "trade or business" franchise is any one or more of the following:

1.1. Signing and submitting SSA Form SS-5, the Application for Social Security. See:

Resignation of Compelled Social Security Trustee, Form #06.002
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

1.2. Signing and submitting IRS Form W-4, which is the WRONG form for persons NOT engaging in the franchise. See:

Federal and State Tax Withholding Options for Private Employers
<http://famguardian.org/Publications/FedStateWHOptions/FedStateWHOptions.pdf>

1.3. Signing and submitting IRS Form 1040 and assessing yourself with a liability:

"... the government can collect the tax from a district court suitor by exercising it's power of distraint... but we cannot believe that compelling resort to this extraordinary procedure is either wise or in accord with congressional intent. Our system of taxation is based upon VOLUNTARY ASSESSMENT AND PAYMENT , NOT UPON DISTRAINT" [Footnote 43] If the government is forced to use these remedies(distraint) on a large scale, it will affect adversely the taxpayers willingness to perform under our VOLUNTARY assessment system."
[Flora v. U.S., 362 U.S. 145, (1959)]

1.4. Failing or refusing to rebut false information returns that connect you to the franchise. 26 U.S.C. §6041(a) says that information returns, such as IRS Forms W-2, 1042-S, 1098, and 1099 may ONLY lawfully be filed against those engaged in the "trade or business" franchise. If you don't rebut these when they are mailed to you, then your failure to rebut is an admission that they are truthful. See:

1.4.1. Correcting Erroneous Information Returns, Form #04.001

<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

1.4.2. Correcting Erroneous IRS Form 1042's, Form #04.003

<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

1.4.3. Correcting Erroneous IRS Form 1098's, Form #04.004

<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

1.4.4. Correcting Erroneous IRS Form 1099's, Form #04.005

<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

1.4.5. Correcting Erroneous IRS Form W-2's, Form #04.006

<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

1.5. Failing to rebut the use of federal identifying numbers on government correspondence sent to you, which constitute a "prima facie" license number to participate in "public rights" and franchises. See:

Wrong Party Notice, Form #07.105

<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

2. Those who do NOT participate in the "trade or business" franchise:

2.1. Cannot legally withhold on their earnings. Anyone who withholds upon them against their will is committing THEFT for which they are personally liable.

2.2. Do not earn "wages" as legally defined in 26 U.S.C. §3401, 26 C.F.R. §31.3401(a)-3, or 26 C.F.R. §31.3402(p)-1. Therefore, any amount reported on an IRS Form W-2 MUST be ZERO, because it only reports "wages" as legally defined and not as commonly understood or used.

2.3. Have their private rights protected by the Constitution but not by most federal law. Most federal law is "foreign" in relation to them:

"The revenue laws are a code or system in regulation of tax assessment and collection. They relate to taxpayers, and not to nontaxpayers. The latter are without their scope. No procedure is prescribed for nontaxpayers, and no attempt is made to annul any of their rights and remedies in due course of law. With them Congress does not assume to deal, and they are neither of the subject nor of the object of the revenue laws..."
[Long v. Rasmussen, 281 F. 236 (1922)]

"Revenue Laws relate to taxpayers [instrumentalities, officers, employees, and elected officials of the Federal Government] and not to non-taxpayers [American Citizens/American Nationals not subject to the exclusive jurisdiction of the Federal Government]. The latter are without their scope. No procedures are prescribed for non-taxpayers and no attempt is made to annul any of their Rights or Remedies in due course of law. With them [non-taxpayers] Congress does not assume to deal and they are neither of the subject nor of the object of federal revenue laws."
[Economy Plumbing & Heating v. U.S., 470 F.2d. 585 (1972)]

2.4. May not cite any provision of the franchise agreements codified in the I.R.C. and the Social Security Act because they are "foreign law" in relation to them and their estate is a "foreign estate" pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §7701\(a\)\(31\)

2.5. If they cite any provision of the franchise agreements, imply their voluntary consent to be bound by them, which is all that is needed to enforce these provisions of "private law"/"contract law" against them.

2.6. Are called the following in the context of federal law:

2.6.1. "nontaxpayers". See:

Who are "Taxpayers" and Who Needs a "Taxpayer Identification Number"?, Form #05.013

<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

2.6.2. "non-resident non-persons".

2.6.3. "nonresident alien non-persons engaged in a 'trade or business'" as defined in 26 C.F.R. §1.871-1(b)(1)(i) .

See:

Non-Resident Non-Person Position, Form #05.020

<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

2.6.4. "transient foreigners"

2.6.5. "stateless persons" in relation to the federal courts.

2.6.6. "non-citizen nationals"

2.6.7. American Citizens or "citizens of the United States OF AMERICA". See 1 Stat. 477, in which the U.S. Congress identifies those domiciled in states of the Union as both "American Citizens" and "citizens of the United States OF AMERICA"

3. Those who participate in the "trade or business" franchise:

3.1. Earn "wages" as legally defined in 26 U.S.C. §3401 because they signed a voluntary W-4 "agreement" consenting to call such earnings "wages" pursuant to 26 C.F.R. §31.3401(a)-3, or 26 C.F.R. §31.3402(p)-1. Therefore, any amount reported on an IRS Form W-2 MUST include all earnings subject to the W-4 "agreement".

3.2. If they are individuals, are called the following in the context of federal law:

3.2.1. "taxpayers"

- 1 3.2.2. "public officers"
 2 3.2.3. "employees"
 3 3.2.4. "employers"
 4 3.2.5. "citizens" or "citizens of the United States" as defined in 8 U.S.C. §1401 and 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1(c)-1, where 5 "United States" means either the federal zone or the U.S. government.
 6 3.2.6. "residents of the United States" as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701\(b\)\(1\)\(A\), , where "United States" means
 7 either the federal zone or the U.S. government.
 8 3.3. If they are federal territories and possessions:
 9 3.3.1. Must enter an Agreement on Coordination of Tax Administration (ACTA) agreement with the Secretary of 10 the Treasury pursuant to:
 11 3.3.1.1. 26 U.S.C. §6361 through 6365
 12 3.3.1.2. 26 C.F.R. §301.6361-1 through 301.6361-5
 13 3.3.2. Are called "States" within federal law, which are territories and possessions of the United States pursuant to 14 4 U.S.C. §110(d). See also the following for further examples in state law:

15 California Revenue and Taxation Code
 16 Division 2: Other Taxes
 17 Part 10: Personal Income Tax

18 17018. "State" includes the District of Columbia, and the possessions of the United States.
 19

20 California Revenue and Taxation Code
 21 Division 2: Other Taxes
 22 Part 1: Sales and Use Taxes

23 6017. "In this State" or "in the State" means within the exterior limits of the State of California and includes all
 24 territory within these limits owned by or ceded to the United States of America.

- 25 3.4. If they are states of the Union, may not lawfully participate in the federal tax system because they do not fit the 26 definition of "State" found in 4 U.S.C. §110(d). See:

State Income Taxes, Form #05.031
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

- 27 3.5. May have any provision of the franchise agreements codified in the Internal Revenue Code or the Social Security 28 Act cited against them in court. See:

Why You Shouldn't Cite Federal Statutes as Authority for Protecting Your Rights
<http://famguardian.org/Subjects/Discrimination/CivilRights/DontCiteFederalLaw.htm>

- 29 3.6. Become "trustees" of the "public trust" as well as officers of the federal corporation identified in 28 U.S.C.
 30 §3002\(15\)\(A\).

- 31 3.7. Are acting in a representative capacity on behalf of the federal government pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil 32 Procedure 17\(b\) as "officers of a federal corporation".

- 33 4. All franchises and "public rights" RECOGNIZE AND EXTEND but cannot lawfully CREATE NEW federal agency
 34 and "public office" to one extent or another, and it is this agency that is the subject of most federal legislation. Nearly 35 all laws passed by Congress pertain only to their own territory, possessions, offices, employees, and franchises. You
 36 must therefore become part of the government for them to lawfully regulate the exercise of the franchise.

37 "The restrictions that the Constitution places upon the government in its capacity as lawmaker, i.e., as the
 38 regulator of private conduct, are not the same as the restrictions that it places upon the government in its 39 capacity as employer. We have recognized this in many contexts, with respect to many different constitutional
 40 guarantees. Private citizens perhaps cannot be prevented from wearing long hair, but policemen can. Kelley v.
 41 Johnson, 425 U.S. 238, 247 (1976). Private citizens cannot have their property searched without probable
 42 cause, but in many circumstances government employees can. O'Connor v. Ortega, 480 U.S. 709, 723 (1987)
 43 (plurality opinion); id., at 732 (SCALIA, J., concurring in judgment). Private citizens cannot be punished for 44 refusing to provide the government information that may incriminate them, but government employees can be
 45 dismissed when the incriminating information that they refuse to provide relates to the performance of their job.
 46 Gardner v. Broderick, 392 U.S. 273, 277-278 (1968). With regard to freedom of speech in particular: Private 47 citizens cannot be punished for speech of merely private concern, but government employees can be fired for 48 that reason. Connick v. Myers, 461 U.S. 138, 147 (1983). Private citizens cannot be punished for partisan
 49 political activity, but federal and state employees can be dismissed and otherwise punished for that reason.
 50 Public Workers v. Mitchell, 330 U.S. 75, 101 (1947); Civil Service Comm'n v. Letter Carriers, 413 U.S. 548,
 51 556 (1973); Broadrick v. Oklahoma, 413 U.S. 601, 616-617 (1973)."
 52 [Rutan v. Republican Party of Illinois, 497 U.S. 62 (1990)]

5. All privileged activities and franchises are usually licensed by the government and cause a surrender of constitutional rights;

5.1. The application of the license causes a surrender of constitutional rights.

*“And here a thought suggests itself. As the Meadors, subsequently to the passage of this act of July 20, 1868, applied for and obtained from the government a license or permit to deal in manufactured tobacco, snuff and cigars, I am inclined to be of the opinion that they are, by this their own voluntary act, precluded from assailing the constitutionality of this law, or otherwise controverting it. For the granting of a license or permit—the yielding of a particular privilege—and its acceptance by the Meadors, was a contract, in which it was implied that the provisions of the statute which governed, or in any way affected their business, and all other statutes previously passed, which were in pari materia with those provisions, should be recognized and obeyed by them. When the Meadors sought and accepted the privilege, the law was before them. And can they now impugn its constitutionality or refuse to obey its provisions and stipulations, and so exempt themselves from the consequences of their own acts?”

[In re Meador, 1 Abb.U.S. 317, 16 F.Cas. 1294, D.C.Ga. (1869)]

5.2. Those participating in the “benefits” of the franchise have implicitly surrendered the right to challenge any encroachments against their “private rights” or “constitutional rights” that result from said participation:

The Court developed, for its own governance in the cases confessedly within its jurisdiction, a series of rules under which it has avoided passing upon a large part of all the constitutional questions pressed upon it for decision. They are:

[ . . . ]

6. The Court will not pass upon the constitutionality of a statute at the instance of one who has availed himself of its benefits.<sup>FN7</sup> Great Falls Mfg. Co. v. Attorney General, 124 U.S. 581, 8 S.Ct. 631, 31 L.Ed. 527; Wall v. Parrot Silver & Copper Co., 244 U.S. 407, 411, 412, 37 S.Ct. 609, 61 L.Ed. 1229; St. Louis Malleable Casting Co. v. Prendergast Construction Co., 260 U.S. 469, 43 S.Ct. 178, 67 L.Ed. 351.

[Ashwander v. Tennessee Valley Authority, 297 U.S. 288, 56 S.Ct. 466 (1936)]

6. The Social Security Number is the “de facto” license number which is used to track and control all those who voluntarily engage in public franchises and “public rights”.

6.1. The number is “de facto” rather than “de jure” because Congress cannot lawfully license any trade or business, including a “public office” in a state of the Union, by the admission of no less than the U.S. Supreme Court:

“Thus, Congress having power to regulate commerce with foreign nations, and among the several States, and with the Indian tribes, may, without doubt, provide for granting coasting licenses, licenses to pilots, licenses to trade with the Indians, and any other licenses necessary or proper for the exercise of that great and extensive power; and the same observation is applicable to every other power of Congress, to the exercise of which the granting of licenses may be incident. All such licenses confer authority, and give rights to the licensee.

But very different considerations apply to the internal commerce or domestic trade of the States. Over this commerce and trade Congress has no power of regulation nor any direct control. This power belongs exclusively to the States. No interference by Congress with the business of citizens transacted within a State is warranted by the Constitution, except such as is strictly incidental to the exercise of powers clearly granted to the legislature. The power to authorize a business within a State is plainly repugnant to the exclusive power of the State over the same subject. It is true that the power of Congress to tax is a very extensive power. It is given in the Constitution, with only one exception and only two qualifications. Congress cannot tax exports, and it must impose direct taxes by the rule of apportionment, and indirect taxes by the rule of uniformity. Thus limited, and thus only, it reaches every subject, and may be exercised at discretion. But, it reaches only existing subjects. Congress cannot authorize a trade or business within a State in order to tax it.”

[License Tax Cases, 72 U.S. 462, 18 L.Ed. 497, 5 Wall. 462, 2 A.F.T.R. 2224 (1866) ]

6.2. If you don't want to be in a “privileged” state and suffer the legal disabilities of accepting the privilege, then you CANNOT have or use Social Security Numbers.

7. Use of a Social Security Number constitutes prima facie consent to engage in the franchise. Use of this number constitutes prima facie evidence of implied consent because:

7.1. It is a crime to compel use or disclosure of Social Security Numbers. 42 U.S.C. §408.

7.2. You can withdraw from the franchise lawfully at any time if you don't want to participate. See SSA Form 521. See:

Resignation of Compelled Social Security Trustee, Form #06.002

<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

- 7.3. If the government uses the SSN trustee licenses number to communicate with you and you don't object or correct them, then you once again consented to their jurisdiction to administer the program. See:

Wrong Party Notice, Form #07.105

<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

8. The Social Security Number is property of the government and NOT the person using it. 20 C.F.R. §422.103(d).
- 8.1. The Social Security card confirms this, which says: "Property of the Social Security Administration and must be returned upon request.
- 8.2. Anything the Social Security Number is attached to becomes "private property" voluntarily donated to a "public use" to procure the benefits of the "public right" or franchise. Only "public officers" on official business may have public property in their possession such as the Social Security Number.

5.1.3 Overview of the Income Taxation Process

This section provides basic background on how the income tax described in Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A functions. This will help you fit the explanation contained in this memorandum into the overall taxation process. Below is a summary of the taxation process:

1. The purpose for establishing governments is mainly to protect private property. The Declaration of Independence affirms this:

"We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness.--That to secure these rights, Governments are instituted among Men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed, -"

[Declaration of Independence, 1776]

2. Government protects private rights by keeping "public [government] property" and "private property" separate and never allowing them to be joined together. This is the heart of the separation of powers doctrine: separation of what is private from what is public with the goal of protecting mainly what is private. See:

Government Conspiracy to Destroy the Separation of Powers, Form #05.023

<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

3. All property BEGINS as private property. The only way to lawfully change it to public property is through the exercise of your unalienable constitutional right to contract. All franchises qualify as a type of contract, and therefore, franchises are one of many methods to lawfully convert PRIVATE property to PUBLIC property. The exercise of the right to contract, in turn, is an act of consent that eliminates any possibility of a legal remedy of the donor against the donee:

"Volunt non fit injuria.

He who consents cannot receive an injury. 2 Bouv. Inst. n. 2279, 2327; 4 T. R. 657; Shelf. on mar. & Div. 449.

Melius est omnia mala pati quam malo concentire.

It is better to suffer every wrong or ill, than to consent to it. 3 Co. Inst. 23.

1 Nemo videtur fraudare eos qui sciunt, et consentiunt.

2 One cannot complain of having been deceived when he knew the fact and gave his consent. Dig. 50, 17, 145."

3 [Bouvier's Maxims of Law, 1856;

4 SOURCE: <http://famguardian.org/Publications/BouvierMaximsOfLaw/BouviereMaxims.htm>]

5 4. In law, all rights are "property".

6 Property. That which is peculiar or proper to any person; that which belongs exclusively to one. In the strict
 7 legal sense, an aggregate of rights which are guaranteed and protected by the government. Fulton Light, Heat
 8 & Power Co. v. State, 65 Misc.Rep. 263, 121 N.Y.S. 536. The term is said to extend to every species of valuable
 9 right and interest. More specifically, ownership; the unrestricted and exclusive right to a thing; the right to
 10 dispose of a thing in every legal way, to possess it, to use it, and to exclude every one else from interfering with 11 it. That dominion or indefinite right of use or disposition which one may lawfully exercise over particular things
 12 or subjects. The exclusive right of possessing, enjoying, and disposing of a thing. The highest right a man can 13 have to anything; being used to refer to that right which one has to lands or tenements, goods or chattels, which 14 no way depends on another man's courtesy.

15 The word is also commonly used to denote everything which is the subject of ownership, corporeal or 16 incorporeal, tangible or intangible, visible or invisible, real or personal, everything that has an exchangeable
 17 value or which goes to make up wealth or estate. It extends to every species of valuable right and interest, and 18 includes real and personal property, easements, franchises, and incorporeal hereditaments, and includes
 19 every invasion of one's property rights by actionable wrong. Labberton v. General Cas. Co. of America, 53
 20 Wash.2d. 180, 332 P.2d. 250, 252, 254.

21 Property embraces everything which is or may be the subject of ownership, whether a legal ownership. or 22 whether beneficial, or a private ownership. Davis v. Davis. TexCiv-App., 495 S.W.2d. 607. 611. Term includes
 23 not only ownership and possession but also the right of use and enjoyment for lawful purposes. Hoffmann v.
 24 Kinealy, Mo., 389 S.W.2d. 745, 752.

25 Property, within constitutional protection, denotes group of rights inhering in citizen's relation to physical
 26 thing, as right to possess, use and dispose of it. Cereghino v. State By and Through State Highway
 27 Commission, 230 Or. 439, 370 P.2d. 694, 697.
 28 [Black's Law Dictionary, Fifth Edition, p. 1095]

29 By protecting your constitutional rights, the government is protecting your PRIVATE property. Your rights are private 30 property because they came from God, not from the government. Only what the government creates can become 31 public property. An example is corporations, which are a public franchise that makes officers of the corporation into 32 public officers.

33 5. The process of taxation is the process of converting "private property" into a "public use" and a "public purpose".
 34 Below are definitions of these terms for your enlightenment.

35 Public use. Eminent domain. The constitutional and statutory basis for taking property by eminent domain.
 36 For condemnation purposes, "public use" is one which confers some benefit or advantage to the public; it is not
 37 confined to actual use by public. It is measured in terms of right of public to use proposed facilities for which 38 condemnation is sought and, as long as public has right of use, whether exercised by one or many members of 39 public, a "public advantage" or "public benefit" accrues sufficient to constitute a public use. Montana Power
 40 Co. v. Bokma, Mont., 457 P.2d. 769, 772, 773.

41 Public use, in constitutional provisions restricting the exercise of the right to take property in virtue of eminent
 42 domain, means a use concerning the whole community distinguished from particular individuals. But each and 43 every member of society need not be equally interested in such use, or be personally and directly affected by it;
 44 if the object is to satisfy a great public want or exigency, that is sufficient. Ringe Co. v. Los Angeles County, 262

are left to private interest, inclination, or liberality. The constitutional requirement that the purpose of any tax, police regulation, or particular exertion of the power of eminent domain shall be the convenience, safety, or welfare of the entire community and not the welfare of a specific individual or class of persons [such as, for instance, federal benefit recipients as individuals]. "Public purpose" that will justify expenditure of public money generally means such an activity as will serve as benefit to community as a body and which at same time is directly related function of government. Pack v. Southwestern Bell Tel. & Tel. Co., 215 Tenn. 503, 387 S.W.2d. 789, 794 .

The term is synonymous with governmental purpose. As employed to denote the objects for which taxes may be levied, it has no relation to the urgency of the public need or to the extent of the public benefit which is to follow; the essential requisite being that a public service or use shall affect the inhabitants as a community, and not merely as individuals. A public purpose or public business has for its objective the promotion of the public health, safety, morals, general welfare, security, prosperity, and contentment of all the inhabitants or residents within a given political division, as, for example, a state, the sovereign powers of which are exercised to promote such public purpose or public business."
[Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1231, Emphasis added]

6. The federal government has no power of eminent domain within states of the Union. This means that they cannot lawfully convert private property to a public use or a public purpose within the exclusive jurisdiction of states of the Union:

"The United States have no constitutional capacity to exercise municipal jurisdiction, sovereignty, or eminent domain, within the limits of a State or elsewhere, except in cases where it is delegated, and the court denies the faculty of the Federal Government to add to its powers by treaty or compact."

[Dred Scott v. Sandford, 60 U.S. 393, 508-509 (1856)]

7. The Fifth Amendment prohibits converting private property to a public use or a public purpose without just compensation if the owner does not consent, and this prohibition applies to the Federal government as well as states of the Union. It was made applicable to states of the Union by the Fourteenth Amendment in 1868.

Fifth Amendment - Rights of Persons

No person shall be held to answer for a capital, or otherwise infamous crime, unless on a presentment or indictment of a Grand Jury, except in cases arising in the land or naval forces, or in the Militia, when in actual service in time of War or public danger; nor shall any person be subject for the same offence to be twice put in jeopardy of life or limb; nor shall be compelled in any criminal case to be a witness against himself, nor be deprived of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law; nor shall private property be taken for public use, without just compensation.

[United States Constitution, Fifth Amendment]

If the conversion of private property to public property is done without the express consent of the party affected by the conversion and without compensation, then the following violations have occurred:

7.1. Violation of the Fifth Amendment "takings clause" above.

7.2. "Conversion" in violation of 18 U.S.C. §654.

7.3. Theft.

8. Because taxation involves converting private property to a public use, public purpose, and public office, then it involves eminent domain if the owner of the property did not expressly consent to the taking:

Eminent domain. The power to take private property for public use by the state, municipalities, and private persons or corporations authorized to exercise functions of public character. Housing Authority of Cherokee National of Oklahoma v. Langley, Okl., 555 P.2d. 1025, 1028. Fifth Amendment, U.S. Constitution.

In the United States, the power of eminent domain is founded in both the federal (Fifth Amend.) and state constitutions. However, the Constitution limits the power to taking for a public purpose and prohibits the exercise of the power of eminent domain without just compensation to the owners of the property which is taken. The process of exercising the power of eminent domain is commonly referred to as "condemnation" or, "expropriation".

The right of eminent domain is the right of the state, through its regular organization, to reassert, either temporarily or permanently, its dominion over any portion of the soil of the state on account of public exigency and for the public good. Thus, in time of war or insurrection, the proper authorities may possess and hold any part of the territory of the state for the common safety; and in time of peace the legislature may authorize the appropriation of the same to public purposes, such as the opening of roads, construction of defenses, or

1 providing channels for trade or travel. Eminent domain is the highest and most exact idea of property
 2 remaining in the government, or in the aggregate body of the people in their sovereign capacity. It gives a right
 3 to resume the possession of the property in the manner directed by the constitution and the laws of the state,
 4 whenever the public interest requires it.

5 See also Adequate compensation; Condemnation; Constructive taking; Damages; Expropriation; Fair market
 6 value; Just compensation; Larger parcel; Public use; Take.
 7 [Black's Law Dictionary, Fifth Edition, p. 470]

- 8 9. The Fifth Amendment requires that any taking of private property without the consent of the owner must involve 9 compensation. The Constitution must be consistent with itself. The taxation clauses found in Article 1, Section 8,
 10 Clauses 1 and 3 cannot conflict with the Fifth Amendment. The Fifth Amendment contains no exception to the 11 requirement for just compensation upon conversion of private property to a public use, even in the case of taxation.
 12 This is why all taxes must be indirect excise taxes against people who provide their consent by applying for a license to 13 engage in the taxed activity: The application for the license constitutes constructive consent to donate the fruits of the 14 activity to a public use, public purpose, and public office.
- 15 10. There is only ONE condition in which the conversion of private property to public property does NOT require 16 compensation, which is when the owner donates the private property to a public use, public purpose, or public office.
 17 To wit:

18 "Men are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable rights, 'life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness,'
 19 and to 'secure,' not grant or create, these rights, governments are instituted. That property for income] which a
 20 man has honestly acquired he retains full control of, subject to these limitations: First, that he shall not use
 21 it to his neighbor's injury, and that does not mean that he must use it for his neighbor's benefit [e.g. SOCIAL
 22 SECURITY, Medicare, and every other public "benefit"]; second, that if he devotes it to a public use, he
 23 gives to the public a right to control that use; and third, that whenever the public needs require, the public
 24 may take it upon payment of due compensation."
 25 [Budd v. People of State of New York, 143 U.S. 517 (1892) ]

26 The above rules are summarized below:

27 Table 5-1: Rules for converting private property to a public use or a public office

1	The owner of property justly acquired enjoys full and exclusive use and control over the property. This right includes the right to exclude government uses or ownership of said property.	Yes
2	He may not use the property to injure the equal rights of his neighbor. For instance, when you murder someone, the government can take your liberty and labor from you by putting you in jail or your life from you by instituting the death penalty against you. Both your life and your labor are "property". Therefore, the basis for the "taking" was violation of the equal rights of a fellow sovereign "neighbor".	No
3	He cannot be compelled or required to use it to "benefit" his neighbor. That means he cannot be compelled to donate the property to any franchise that would "benefit" his neighbor such as Social Security, Medicare, etc.	Yes
4	If he donates it to a public use, he gives the public the right to control that use.	Yes
5	Whenever the public needs require, the public may take it without his consent upon payment of due compensation. E.g. "eminent domain".	No

- 28 11. The following two methods are the ONLY methods involving consent of the owner that may be LAWFULLY
 29 employed to convert PRIVATE property into PUBLIC property. Anything else is unlawful and THEFT:

11.1. DIRECT CONVERSION: Owner donates the property by conveying title or possession to the government.<sup>8</sup>

11.2. INDIRECT CONVERSION: Owner assumes a PUBLIC status as a PUBLIC officer in the HOLDING of title to the property.<sup>9</sup> All such statuses and the rights that attach to it are creations and property of the government, the use of which is a privilege. The status and all PUBLIC RIGHTS that attach to it conveys a "benefit" for which the status user must pay an excise tax. The tax acts as a rental or use fee for the status, which is government property.

12. You and ONLY you can authorize your private property to be donated to a public use, public purpose, and public office. No third party can lawfully convert or donate your private property to a public use, public purpose, or public office without your knowledge and express consent. If they do, they are guilty of theft and conversion, and especially if they are acting in a quasi-governmental capacity as a "withholding agent" as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(16) .

12.1. A withholding agent cannot file an information return connecting your earnings to a "trade or business" without you actually occupying a "public office" in the government BEFORE you filled out any tax form.

12.2. A withholding agent cannot file IRS Form W-2 against your earnings if you didn't sign an IRS Form W-4 contract and thereby consent to donate your private property to a public office in the U.S. government and therefore a "public use".

12.3. That donation process is accomplished by your own voluntary self-assessment and ONLY by that method. Before such a self-assessment, you are a "nontaxpayer" and a private person. After the assessment, you become a "taxpayer" and a public officer in the government engaged in the "trade or business" franchise.

12.4. In order to have an income tax liability, you must complete, sign, and "file" an income tax return and thereby assess yourself:

"Our system of taxation is based upon voluntary assessment and payment, not distraint."
[Flora v. U.S., 362 U.S. 145 (1960)]

By assessing yourself, you implicitly give your consent to allow the public the right to control that use of the formerly PRIVATE property donated to a public use.

12.5. IRS Forms W-2 and W-4 are identified as Tax Class 5: Estate and Gift Taxes. Payroll withholdings are GIFTS, not "taxes" in a common law sense.

TITLE 31 > SUBTITLE 1 > CHAPTER 3 > SUBCHAPTER II > § 321
§ 321. General authority of the Secretary

(1) The Secretary of the Treasury may accept, hold, administer, and use gifts and bequests of property, both real and personal, for the purpose of aiding or facilitating the work of the Department of the Treasury. Gifts and bequests of money and the proceeds from sales of other property received as gifts or bequests shall be deposited in the Treasury in a separate fund and shall be disbursed on order of the Secretary of the Treasury. Property accepted under this paragraph, and the proceeds thereof, shall be used as nearly as possible in accordance with the terms of the gift or bequest.

(2) For purposes of the Federal income, estate, and gift taxes, property accepted under paragraph (1) shall be considered as a gift or bequest to or for the use of the United States.

They don't become "taxes" and assessments until you attach the Form W-2 "gift statement" to an assessment called a IRS Form 1040 and create a liability with your own self-assessment signature. IRS has no delegated authority to convert a "gift" into a "tax". That is why when you file the IRS Form 1040, you must attach the W-2 gift statement. See section 5.6.16 of this book for details.

12.6. The IRS cannot execute a lawful assessment without your knowledge and express consent because if they didn't have your consent, then it would be criminal conversion and theft. That is why every time they do an assessment, they have to call you into their office and present it to you to procure your consent in what is called an "examination". If you make it clear that you don't consent and hand them the following, they have to delete the assessment because it's only a proposal. See:

<sup>8</sup> An example of direct conversion would be the process of "registering" a vehicle with the Department of Motor Vehicles in your state. The act of registration constitutes consent by original ABSOLUTE owner to change the ownership of the property from ABSOLUTE to QUALIFIED and to convey legal title to the state and qualified title to himself.

Why the Government Can't Lawfully Assess Human Beings With an Income Tax Liability Without Their Consent, Form #05.011
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

There is no way other than the above to lawfully create an income tax liability without violating the Fifth Amendment takings clause. If you assess yourself, you consent to become a "public officer" and thereby donate the fruits of your labor as such officer to a public use and a public purpose.

13. The IRS won't admit this, but this in fact is how the de facto unlawful system currently functions:
  - 13.1. You can't unilaterally "elect" yourself into a "public office", even if you do consent.
  - 13.2. No IRS form nor any provision in the Internal Revenue Code CREATES any new public offices in the government.
  - 13.3. The I.R.C. only taxes EXISTING public offices lawfully exercised ONLY in the District of Columbia and in all places expressly authorized pursuant to 4 U.S.C. §72.
14. Information returns are being abused in effect as "federal election" forms.
  - 14.1. Third parties in effect are nominating private persons into public offices in the government without their knowledge, without their consent, and without compensation. Thus, information returns are being used to impose the obligations of a public office upon people without compensation and thereby impose slavery in violation of the Thirteenth Amendment.
  - 14.2. Anyone who files a false information return connecting a person to the "trade or business"/"public office" franchise who in fact does not ALREADY lawfully occupy a public office in the U.S. government is guilty of impersonating a public officer in criminal violation of 18 U.S.C. §912.
15. The IRS Form W-4 cannot and does not create an office in the U.S. government, but allows EXISTING public officers to elect to connect their private earnings to a public use, a public office, and a public purpose. The IRS abuses this form to unlawfully create public offices, and this abuse of the I.R.C. is the heart of the tax fraud: They are making a system that only applies to EXISTING public offices lawfully exercised in order to:
  - 15.1. Unlawfully create new public offices in places where they are not authorized to exist.
  - 15.2. Destroy the separation of powers between what is public and what is private.
  - 15.3. Institute eminent domain over private labor using false third party reports. Omission in preventing such fraud accomplishes involuntary servitude in violation of the Thirteenth Amendment, 42 U.S.C. §1994, and 18 U.S.C. §1581.
  - 15.4. Destroy the separation of powers between the federal and state governments. Any state employee who participates in the federal income tax is serving in TWO offices, which is a violation of most state constitutions.
  - 15.5. Enslave innocent people to go to work for them without compensation, without recourse, and in violation of the thirteenth amendment prohibition against involuntary servitude. That prohibition, incidentally, applies EVERYWHERE, including on federal territory.
16. The right to control the use of private property donated to a public use to procure the benefits of a franchise is enforced through the Internal Revenue Code, which is the equivalent of the employment agreement for franchisees called "taxpayers".

The above criteria explains why:

1. You cannot be subject to either employment tax withholding or employment tax reporting without voluntarily signing an IRS Form W-4.

Title 26: Internal Revenue
PART 31—EMPLOYMENT TAXES AND COLLECTION OF INCOME TAX AT SOURCE
Subpart E—Collection of Income Tax at Source
Sec. 31.3402\(p\)-1 Voluntary withholding agreements.

An employee and his employer may enter into an agreement under section 3402(b) to provide for the withholding of income tax upon payments of amounts described in paragraph (b)(1) of §31.3401(a)-3, made after December 31, 1970. An agreement may be entered into under this section only with respect to amounts which are includible in the gross income of the employee under section 61, and must be applicable to all such amounts paid by the employer to the employee. The amount to be withheld pursuant to an agreement under section 3402(p) shall be determined under the rules contained in section 3402 and the regulations thereunder. See §31.3405(c)-1, Q&A-3 concerning agreements to have more than 20-percent Federal income tax withheld from eligible rollover distributions within the meaning of section 402.

(b) Form and duration of agreement

(2) An agreement under section 3402 (p) shall be effective for such period as the employer and employee mutually agree upon. However, either the employer or the employee may terminate the agreement prior to the end of such period by furnishing a signed written notice to the other. Unless the employer and employee agree to an earlier termination date, the notice shall be effective with respect to the first payment of an amount in respect of which the agreement is in effect which is made on or after the first "status determination date" (January 1, May 1, July 1, and October 1 of each year) that occurs at least 30 days after the date on which the notice is furnished. If the employee executes a new Form W-4, the request upon which an agreement under section 3402 (p) is based shall be attached to, and constitute a part of, such new Form W-4.

26 C.F.R. §31.3401(a)-3 Amounts deemed wages under voluntary withholding agreements

(a) In general.

Notwithstanding the exceptions to the definition of wages specified in section 3401(a) and the regulations thereunder, the term "wages" includes the amounts described in paragraph (b)(1) of this section with respect to which there is a voluntary withholding agreement in effect under section 3402(p). References in this chapter to the definition of wages contained in section 3401(a) shall be deemed to refer also to this section (§31.3401(a)-3).

(b) Remuneration for services.

(1) Except as provided in subparagraph (2) of this paragraph, the amounts referred to in paragraph (a) of this section include any remuneration for services performed by an employee for an employer which, without regard to this section, does not constitute wages under section 3401(a). For example, remuneration for services performed by an agricultural worker or a domestic worker in a private home (amounts which are specifically excluded from the definition of wages by section 3401(a) (2) and (3), respectively) are amounts with respect to which a voluntary withholding agreement may be entered into under section 3402(p). See §§31.3401(c)-1 and 31.3401(d)-1 for the definitions of "employee" and "employer".

2. The courts have no authority under the Declaratory Judgments Act, 28 U.S.C. §2201(a) to declare you a franchisee called a "taxpayer". You own yourself.

Specifically, Rowen seeks a declaratory judgment against the United States of America with respect to "whether or not the plaintiff is a taxpayer pursuant to, and/or under 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(14)." (See Compl. at 2.) This Court lacks jurisdiction to issue a declaratory judgment "with respect to Federal taxes other than actions brought under section 7428 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986," a code section that is not at issue in the instant action. See 28 U.S.C. § 2201; see also Hughes v. United States, 953 F.2d. 531, 536-537 (9th Cir. 1991) (affirming dismissal of claim for declaratory relief under § 2201 where claim concerned question of tax liability). Accordingly, defendant's motion to dismiss is hereby GRANTED, and the instant action is hereby DISMISSED.
[Rowen v. U.S., 05-3766MMC. (N.D.Cal. 11/02/2005)]

3. The revenue laws may not be cited or enforced against a person who is not a "taxpayer":

"The revenue laws are a code or system in regulation of tax assessment and collection. They relate to taxpayers, and not to nontaxpayers. The latter are without their scope. No procedure is prescribed for nontaxpayers, and no attempt is made to annul any of their rights and remedies in due course of law. With them Congress does not assume to deal, and they are neither of the subject nor of the object of the revenue laws..."
[Long v. Rasmussen, 281 F. 236 (1922) ]

"Revenue Laws relate to taxpayers [officers, employees, instrumentalities, and elected officials of the Federal Government] and not to non-taxpayers [American Citizens/American Nationals not subject to the exclusive jurisdiction of the Federal Government and who did not volunteer to participate in the federal "trade or business" franchise]. The latter are without their scope. No procedures are prescribed for non-taxpayers and no attempt is made to annul any of their Rights or Remedies in due course of law. With them[non-taxpayers] Congress does not assume to deal and they are neither of the subject nor of the object of federal revenue laws."
[Economy Plumbing & Heating v. U.S., 470 F.2d. 585 (1972)]

"And by statutory definition, 'taxpayer' includes any person, trust or estate subject to a tax imposed by the revenue act. ...Since the statutory definition of 'taxpayer' is exclusive, the federal courts do not have the power to create nonstatutory taxpayers for the purpose of applying the provisions of the Revenue Acts..."
[C.I.R. v. Trustees of L. Inv. Ass'n., 100 F.2d. 18 (1939) ]

All of the above requirements have in common that violating them would result in the equivalent of exercising eminent domain over the private property of the private person without their consent and without just compensation, which the U.S. Supreme Court said violates the Fifth Amendment takings clause:

"To lay, with one hand, the power of the government on the property of the citizen, and with the other to bestow it upon favored individuals to aid private enterprises and build up private fortunes, is none the less a robbery because it is done under the forms of law and is called taxation. This is not legislation. It is a decree under legislative forms.

Nor is it taxation. 'A tax,' says Webster's Dictionary, 'is a rate or sum of money assessed on the person or property of a citizen by government for the use of the nation or State.' 'Taxes are burdens or charges imposed by the Legislature upon persons or property to raise money for public purposes.' Cooley, Const. Lim., 479.

Coulter, J., in Northern Liberties v. St. John's Church, 13 Pa.St., 104 says, very forcibly, 'I think the common mind has everywhere taken in the understanding that taxes are a public imposition, levied by authority of the government for the purposes of carrying on the government in all its machinery and operations—that they are imposed for a public purpose.' See, also Pray v. Northern Liberties, 31 Pa.St., 69; Matter of Mayor of N.Y., 11 Johns., 77; Camden v. Allen, 2 Dutch., 398; Sharpless v. Mayor, supra; Hanson v. Vernon, 27 Ia., 47; Whiting v. Fond du Lac, supra."
[Loan Association v. Topeka, 20 Wall. 655 (1874)]

As a consequence of the above considerations, any government officer or employee who does any of the following is unlawfully converting private property to a public use without the consent of the owner and without consideration:

1. Assuming or "presuming" you are a "taxpayer" without producing evidence that you consented to become one. In our system of jurisprudence, a person must be presumed innocent until proven guilty with court admissible evidence. Presumptions are NOT evidence. That means they must be presumed to be a "nontaxpayer" until they are proven with admissible evidence to be a "taxpayer". See:

Presumption: Chief Weapon for Unlawfully Enlarging Federal Jurisdiction, Form #05.017
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

2. Performing a tax assessment or re-assessment if you haven't first voluntarily assessed yourself by filing a tax return. See:

Why the Government Can't Lawfully Assess Human Beings With an Income Tax Liability Without Their Consent, Form #05.011

3. Citing provisions of the franchise agreement against those who never consented to participate. This is an abuse of law for political purposes and an attempt to exploit the innocent and the ignorant. The legislature cannot delegate authority to the Executive Branch to convert innocent persons called "nontaxpayers" into franchisees called "taxpayers" without producing evidence of consent to become "taxpayers".

"In Calder v. Bull, which was here in 1798, Mr. Justice Chase said, that there were acts which the Federal and State legislatures could not do without exceeding their authority, and among them he mentioned a law which punished a citizen for an innocent act; a law that destroyed or impaired the lawful private [labor] contracts [and labor compensation, e.g. earnings from employment through compelled W-4 withholding] of citizens; a law that made a man judge in his own case; and a law that took the property from A [the worker], and gave it to B [the government or another citizen, such as through social welfare programs]. 'It is against all reason and justice,' he added, 'for a people to intrust a legislature with such powers, and therefore it cannot be presumed that they have done it. They may command what is right and prohibit what is wrong; but they cannot change innocence into guilt, or punish innocence as a crime, or violate the right of an antecedent lawful private [employment] contract [by compelling W-4 withholding, for instance], or the right of private property. To maintain that a Federal or State legislature possesses such powers [of THEFT!] if they had not been expressly restrained, would, in my opinion, be a political heresy altogether inadmissible in all free republican governments.' 3 Dall. 388."
[Sinking Fund Cases, 99 U.S. 700 (1878)]

4. Relying on third party information returns that are unsigned as evidence supporting the conclusion that you are a "taxpayer". These forms include IRS Forms W-2, 1042-S, 1098, and 1099 and they are NOT signed and are inadmissible as evidence under Federal Rule of Evidence 802 because not signed under penalty of perjury. Furthermore, the submitters of these forms seldom have personal knowledge that you are in fact and in deed engaged in a "trade or business" as required by 26 U.S.C. §6041(a). Most people don't know, for instance, that a "trade or business" includes ONLY "the functions of a public office".

Pictures really are worth a THOUSAND words. There is no better place we know of to use a picture to describe relationship than in the context of citizenship, domicile, and residency. Below is a table summarizing citizenship status v. Tax status. After that, we show a graphical diagram that makes the relationships perfectly clear. Finally, after the graphical diagram, we present a text summary for all the legal rules that govern transitioning between the various citizenship and domicile conditions described. The content of this entire section is available in a single convenient form that you can use at depositions, as attachments to government forms, and in legal proceedings. You can find this form at:

5.1.4.1 The Four "United States"

It is very important to understand that there are THREE separate and distinct CONTEXTS in which the term "United States" can be used, and each has a mutually exclusive and different meaning. These three definitions of "United States" were described by the U.S. Supreme Court in Hooven and Allison v. Evatt, 324 U.S. 652 \(1945\):

Table 5-2: Geographical terms used throughout this page

Term	# in diagrams	Meaning
United States*	1	The country "United States" in the family of nations throughout the world.
United States	2	The "federal zone".
United States	3	Collective states of the Union mentioned throughout the Constitution.

In addition to the above GEOGRAPHICAL context, there is also a legal, non-geographical context in which the term "United States" can be used, which is the GOVERNMENT as a legal entity. Throughout this page and this website, we identify THIS context as "United States****" or "United States<sup>4</sup>". The only types of "persons" within THIS context are public offices within the national and not state government. It is THIS context in which "sources within the United States" is used for the purposes of "income" and "gross income" within the Internal Revenue Code, as proven by:

The reason these contexts are not expressly distinguished in the statutes by the Legislative Branch or on government forms crafted by the Executive Branch is that they are the KEY mechanism by which:

1. Federal jurisdiction is unlawfully enlarged by abusing presumption, which is a violation of due process of law. See:

Presumption: Chief Weapon for Unlawfully Enlarging Federal Jurisdiction, Form #05.017
FORMS PAGE: <http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>
DIRECT LINK: <http://sedm.org/Forms/05-MemLaw/Presumption.pdf>

2. The separation of powers between the states and the national government is destroyed, in violation of the legislative intent of the Constitution. See:

Government Conspiracy to Destroy the Separation of Powers, Form #05.023
FORMS PAGE: <http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>
DIRECT LINK: <http://sedm.org/Forms/05-MemLaw/SeparationOfPowers.pdf>

3. A "society of law" is transformed into a "society of men" in violation of Marbury v. Madison, 5 U.S. 137 \(1803\):

"The government of the United States has been emphatically termed a government of laws, and not of men. It will certainly cease to deserve this high appellation, if the laws furnish no remedy for the violation of a vested legal right."

[Marbury v. Madison, 5 U.S. 137, 163 \(1803\)]

4. Exclusively PRIVATE rights are transformed into public rights in a process we call "invisible eminent domain using presumption and words of art".

5. Judges are unconstitutionally delegated undue discretion and "arbitrary power" to unlawfully enlarge federal jurisdiction. See:

Federal Jurisdiction, Form #05.018

FORMS PAGE: <http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

DIRECT LINK: <http://sedm.org/Forms/05-MemLaw/FederalJurisdiction.pdf>

The way a corrupted Executive Branch or judge accomplish the above is to unconstitutionally:

1. PRESUME that ALL of the four contexts for "United States" are equivalent.

2. PRESUME that CONSTITUTIONAL citizens and STATUTORY citizens are EQUIVALENT under federal law. They are NOT. A CONSTITUTIONAL citizen is a "non-resident" under federal civil law and NOT a STATUTORY "national and citizen of the United States** at birth" per 8 U.S.C. §1401. See the document below:

Why You are a "national", "state national", and Constitutional but not Statutory Citizen, Form #05.006

FORMS PAGE: <http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

DIRECT LINK: <http://sedm.org/Forms/05-MemLaw/WhyANational.pdf>

3. PRESUME that "nationality" and "domicile" are equivalent. They are NOT. See:

Why Domicile and Becoming a "Taxpayer" Require Your Consent, Form #05.002

FORMS PAGE: <http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

DIRECT LINK: <http://sedm.org/Forms/05-MemLaw/Domicile.pdf>

4. Use the word "citizenship" in place of "nationality" OR "domicile", and refuse to disclose WHICH of the two they mean in EVERY context.

5. Confuse the POLITICAL/CONSTITUTIONAL meaning of words with the civil STATUTORY context. For instance, asking on government forms whether you are a POLITICAL/CONSTITUTIONAL citizen and then FALSELY PRESUMING that you are a STATUTORY citizen under 8 U.S.C. §1401.

6. Confuse the words "domicile" and "residence" or impute either to you without satisfying the burden of proving that you EXPRESSLY CONSENTED to it and thereby illegally kidnap your civil legal identity against your will. One can have only one "domicile" but many "residences" and BOTH require your consent. See:

Why Domicile and Becoming a "Taxpayer" Require Your Consent, Form #05.002

FORMS PAGE: <http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

DIRECT LINK: <http://sedm.org/Forms/05-MemLaw/Domicile.pdf>

7. Add things or classes of things to the meaning of statutory terms that do not EXPRESSLY appear in their definitions, in violation of the rules of statutory construction. See:

Meaning of the Words "includes" and "including", Form #05.014

FORMS PAGE: <http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

DIRECT LINK: <http://sedm.org/Forms/05-MemLaw/Includes.pdf>

8. PRESUME that STATUTORY diversity of citizenship under 28 U.S.C. §1332 and CONSTITUTIONAL diversity of citizenship under Article III, Section 2 of the United States Constitution are equivalent.

8.1. STATUTORY and CONSTITUTIONAL diversity are NOT equal and in fact are mutually exclusive.

8.2. The STATUTORY definition of "State" in 28 U.S.C. §1332(e) is a federal territory. The definition of "State" in the CONSTITUTION is a State of the Union and NOT federal territory.

8.3. They try to increase this confusion by dismissing diversity cases where only diversity of RESIDENCE (domicile) is implied, instead insisting on "diversity of CITIZENSHIP" and yet REFUSING to define whether they mean DOMICILE or NATIONALITY when the term "CITIZENSHIP" is invoked. See Lamm v. Bekins Van Lines, Co, 139 F.Supp.2d. 1300, 1314 (M.D. Ala. 2001) ("To invoke removal jurisdiction on the basis of diversity, a notice of removal must distinctly and affirmatively allege each party's citizenship.", "[a]verments of residence are wholly insufficient for purposes of removal.", "[a]lthough 'citizenship' and 'residence' may be interchangeable terms in common parlance, the existence of citizenship cannot be inferred from allegations of residence alone.").

- 1 9. Refuse to allow the jury to read the definitions in the law and then give them a definition that is in conflict with the
 2 statutory definition. This substitutes the JUDGES will for what the law expressly says and thereby substitutes PUBLIC
 3 POLICY for the written law.
 4 10. Publish deceptive government publications that are in deliberate conflict with what the statutes define "United States"
 5 as and then tell the public that they CANNOT rely on the publication. The IRS does this with ALL of their publications
 6 and it is FRAUD. See:

7 This kind of arbitrary discretion is PROHIBITED by the Constitution, as held by the U.S. Supreme Court:

38 5.1.4.2 Statutory v. Constitutional contexts

39 It is very important to understand that there are TWO separate, distinct, and mutually exclusive contexts in which 40 geographical "words of art" can be used at the federal or national level:

- 41 1. Constitutional.
 42 2. Statutory.

43 The purpose of providing a statutory definition of a legal "term" is to supersede and not enlarge the ordinary, common law,
 44 constitutional, or common meaning of a term. Geographical words of art include:

- 45 1. "State"
 46 2. "United States"

- 1 3. "alien"
- 2 4. "citizen"
- 3 5. "resident"
- 4 6. "U.S. person"

5 The terms "State" and "United States" within the Constitution implies the constitutional states of the Union and excludes
6 federal territory, statutory "States" (federal territories), or the statutory "United States" (the collection of all federal 7 territory). This is an outcome of the separation of powers doctrine. See:

Government Conspiracy to Destroy the Separation of Powers, Form #05.023
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

8 The U.S. Constitution creates a public trust which is the delegation of authority order that the U.S. Government uses to 9 manage federal territory and property. That property includes franchises, such as the "trade or business" franchise. All
10 statutory civil law it creates can and does regulate only THAT property and not the constitutional States, which are foreign,
11 sovereign, and statutory "aliens" for the purposes of federal legislative jurisdiction.

12 It is very important to realize the consequences of this constitutional separation of powers between the states and national 13 government. Some of these consequences include the following:

- 14 1. Statutory "States" as indicated in 4 U.S.C. §110(d) and "States" in nearly all federal statutes are in fact federal 15 territories and the definition does NOT include constitutional states of the Union.
- 16 2. The statutory "United States" defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10) and 4 U.S.C. §110(d) includes federal 17 territory and excludes any land within the exclusive jurisdiction of a constitutional state of the Union.
- 18 3. Terms on government forms assume the statutory context and NOT the constitutional context.
- 19 4. Domicile is the origin of civil legislative jurisdiction over human beings. This jurisdiction is called "in personam 20 jurisdiction".
- 21 5. Since the separation of powers doctrine creates two separate jurisdictions that are legislatively "foreign" in relation to 22 each other, then there are TWO types of political communities, two types of "citizens", and two types of jurisdictions
23 exercised by the national government.

24 *"It is clear that Congress, as a legislative body, exercise two species of legislative power: the one, limited as to
25 its objects, but extending all over the Union: the other, an absolute, exclusive legislative power over the District
26 of Columbia. The preliminary inquiry in the case now before the Court, is, by virtue of which of these 27 authorities was the law in question passed?"*
28 [Cohens v. Virginia, 19 U.S. 264, 6 Wheat. 265, 5 L.Ed. 257 (1821)]

- 29 6. A human being domiciled in a Constitutional state and born or naturalized anywhere in the Union. These are:
30 6.1. A state national pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21)
31 6.2. A statutory "non-resident non-person" if exclusively PRIVATE and not engaged in a public office.
32 6.3. A statutory "nonresident alien" (26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(B)) in relation to the national government if they lawfully 33 serve in a public office.
- 34 7. You can be a statutory "nonresident alien" pursuant to 26 C.F.R. §1.1441-1(c)(3)(ii) and a constitutional or Fourteenth 35 Amendment "Citizen" AT THE SAME TIME. Why? Because the Supreme Court ruled in Hooven and Allison v.
36 Evatt, 324 U.S. 652 (1945), that there are THREE different and mutually exclusive "United States", and therefore 37 THREE types of "citizens of the United States". Here is an example:

38 *"The 1st section of the 14th article [Fourteenth Amendment], to which our attention is more specifically invited,
39 opens with a definition of citizenship—not only citizenship of the United States[***], but citizenship of the 40 states. No such definition was previously found in the Constitution, nor had any attempt been made to define
41 it by act of Congress. It had been the occasion of much discussion in the courts, by the executive departments
42 and in the public journals. It had been said by eminent judges that no man was a citizen of the [***] except 43 as he was a citizen of one of the states composing the Union. Those therefore, who had been born and 44 resided always in the District of Columbia or in the territories [STATUTORY citizens], though within the 45 United States[*], were not [CONSTITUTIONAL] citizens."*
46 [Slaughter-House Cases, 83 U.S. (16 Wall.) 36, 21 L.Ed. 394 (1873)]

The Court today holds that the Citizenship Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment has no application to Bellei [an 8 U.S.C. §1401 STATUTORY citizen]. The Court first notes that Afroyim was essentially a case construing the Citizenship Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment. Since the Citizenship Clause declares that: 'All persons born or naturalized in the United States * * * are citizens of the United States * * *.' the Court reasons that the protections against involuntary expatriation declared in Afroyim do not protect all American citizens, but only those 'born or naturalized in the United States.' Afroyim, the argument runs, was naturalized in this country so he was protected by the Citizenship Clause, but Bellei, since he acquired his American citizenship at birth in Italy as a foreignborn child of an American citizen, was neither born nor naturalized in the United States and, hence, falls outside the scope of the Fourteenth Amendment guarantees declared in Afroyim. One could hardly call this a generous reading of the great purposes the Fourteenth Amendment was adopted to bring about. While conceding that Bellei is an American citizen, the majority states: 'He simply is not a Fourteenth-Amendment-first-sentence citizen.' Therefore, the majority reasons, the congressional revocation of his citizenship is not barred by the Constitution. I cannot accept the Court's conclusion that the Fourteenth Amendment protects the citizenship of some Americans and not others. [ . . . ]

The Court today puts aside the Fourteenth Amendment as a standard by which to measure congressional action with respect to citizenship, and substitutes in its place the majority's own vague notions of 'fairness.' The majority takes a new step with the recurring theme that the test of constitutionality is the Court's own view of what is 'fair, reasonable, and right.' Despite the concession that Bellei was admittedly an American citizen, and despite the holding in Afroyim that the Fourteenth Amendment has put citizenship, once conferred, beyond the power of Congress to revoke, the majority today upholds the revocation of Bellei's citizenship on the ground that the congressional action was not 'irrational or arbitrary or unfair.' The majority applies the 'shock-the-conscience' test to uphold, rather than strike, a federal statute. It is a dangerous concept of constitutional law that allows the majority to conclude that, because it cannot say the statute is 'irrational or arbitrary or unfair,' the statute must be constitutional.

Since the Court this Term has already downgraded citizens receiving public welfare, Wyman v. James, 400 U.S. 309, 91 S.Ct. 381, 27 L.Ed.2d. 408 (1971), and citizens having the misfortune to be illegitimate, Labine v. Vincent, 401 U.S. 532, 91 S.Ct. 1917, 28 L.Ed.2d. 288, I suppose today's decision downgrading citizens born outside the United States should have been expected. Once again, as in James and Labine, the Court's opinion makes evident that its holding is contrary to earlier decisions. Concededly, petitioner was a citizen at birth, not by constitutional right, but only through operation of a federal statute. [Rogers v. Bellei, 401 U.S. 815 (1971)]

The "citizen of the United States" mentioned in the Fourteenth Amendment is a constitutional "citizen of the United States", and the term "United States" in that context includes states of the Union and excludes federal territory. Hence, you would NOT be a "citizen of the United States" within any federal statute, because all such statutes define "United States" to mean federal territory and EXCLUDE states of the Union. For more details, see:

Why You are a "national", "state national", and Constitutional but not Statutory Citizen, Form #05.006

<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

8. Your job, if you say you are a "citizen of the United States" or "U.S. citizen" on a government form ( a VERY DANGEROUS undertaking!) is to understand that all government forms presume the statutory and not constitutional context, and to ensure that you define precisely WHICH one of the three "United States" you are a "citizen" of, and do so in a way that excludes you from the civil jurisdiction of the national government because domiciled in a "foreign state". Both foreign countries and states of the Union are legislatively "foreign" and therefore "foreign states" in relation to the national government of the United States. The following form does that very carefully:

Affidavit of Citizenship, Domicile, and Tax Status, Form #02.001

<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

9. Even the IRS says you CANNOT trust or rely on ANYTHING on any of their forms and publications. This is covered in Reasonable Belief About Income Tax Liability, Form #05.007. Hence, if you are compelled to fill out a government form, you have an OBLIGATION to ensure that you define all "words of art" used on the form in such a way that there is no room for presumption, no judicial or government discretion to "interpret" the form to their benefit, and no injury to your rights or status by filling out the government form. This includes attaching the following forms to all tax forms you submit:

9.1. Affidavit of Citizenship, Domicile, and Tax Status, Form #02.001

<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

9.2. Tax Form Attachment, Form #04.201

<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

1 We started off this document with maxims of law proving that "a deceiver deals in generals". Anyone who refuses to
2 identify the precise context, statutory or constitutional, for EVERY "term of art" they are using in the legal field
3 ABSOLUTELY IS A DECEIVER.

5.1.4.3 Statutory v. Constitutional citizens

“When words lose their meaning [or their CONTEXT WHICH ESTABLISHES THEIR MEANING], people lose their freedom.”
[Confucius (551 BCE - 479 BCE) Chinese thinker and social philosopher]

Statutory citizenship is a legal status that designates a person's domicile while constitutional citizenship is a political status that designates a person's nationality. Understanding the distinction between nationality and domicile is absolutely critical.

1. Nationality:

- 1.1. Is not necessarily consensual or discretionary. For instance, acquiring nationality by birth in a specific place was not a matter of choice whereas acquiring it by naturalization is.
- 1.2. Is a political status.
- 1.3. Is defined by the Constitution, which is a political document.
- 1.4. Is synonymous with being a “national” within statutory law.
- 1.5. Is associated with a specific COUNTRY.
- 1.6. Is called a “political citizen” or a “citizen of the United States in a political sense” by the courts to distinguish it from a STATUTORY citizen. See Powe v. United States, 109 F.2d. 147 (1940).

2. Domicile:

- 2.1. Always requires your consent and therefore is discretionary. See:

Why Domicile and Becoming a “Taxpayer” Require Your Consent, Form #05.002
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

- 2.2. Is a civil status.
- 2.3. Is not even addressed in the constitution.
- 2.4. Is defined by civil statutory law RATHER than the constitution.
- 2.5. Is in NO WAY connected with one's nationality.
- 2.6. Is usually connected with the word “person”, “citizen”, “resident”, or “inhabitant” in statutory law.
- 2.7. Is associated with a specific COUNTY and a STATE rather than a COUNTRY.
- 2.8. Implies one is a “SUBJECT” of a SPECIFIC MUNICIPAL but not NATIONAL government.

Nationality and domicile, TOGETHER determine the political/CONSTITUTIONAL AND civil/STATUTORY status of a human being respectively. These important distinctions are recognized in Black's Law Dictionary:

“nationality – That quality or character which arises from the fact of a person's belonging to a nation or state. Nationality determines the political status of the individual, especially with reference to allegiance; while domicile determines his civil [statutory] status. Nationality arises either by birth or by naturalization.”
[Black's Law Dictionary (6th ed. 1990), p. 1025]

The U.S. Supreme Court also confirmed the above when they held the following. Note the key phrase “political jurisdiction”, which is NOT the same as legislative/statutory jurisdiction. One can have a political status of “citizen” under the constitution while NOT being a “citizen” under federal statutory law because not domiciled on federal territory. To have the status of “citizen” under federal statutory law, one must have a domicile on federal territory:

“This section contemplates two sources of citizenship, and two sources only, -birth and naturalization. The persons declared to be citizens are 'all persons born or naturalized in the United States, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof.' The evident meaning of these last words is, not merely subject in some respect or degree to the jurisdiction of the United States, but completely subject to their [plural, not singular, meaning states of the Union] political jurisdiction, and owing them [the state of the Union] direct and immediate allegiance. And the words relate to the time of birth in the one case, as they do [169 U.S. 649, 725] to the time of naturalization in the other. Persons not thus subject to the jurisdiction of the United States at the time of birth cannot become so afterwards, except by being naturalized, either individually, as by proceedings under the naturalization acts, or collectively, as by the force of a treaty by which foreign territory is acquired.”
[U.S. v. Wong Kim Ark, 169 U.S. 649, 18 S.Ct. 456; 42 L.Ed. 890 (1898)]

“This right to protect persons having a domicile, though not native-born or naturalized citizens, rests on the firm foundation of justice, and the claim to be protected is earned by considerations which the protecting power is not at liberty to disregard. Such domiciled citizen pays the same price for his protection as native-born or naturalized citizens pay for theirs. He is under the bonds of allegiance to the country of his residence, and, if he breaks them, incurs the same penalties. He owes the same obedience to the civil laws. His property is, in the same way and to the same extent as theirs, liable to contribute to the support of the Government. In nearly all respects, his and their condition as to the duties and burdens of Government are undistinguishable.”

Fong Yue Ting v. United States, [149 U.S. 698 (1893) ]

Notice in the last quote above that they referred to a foreign national born in another country as a “citizen”. THIS is the REAL “citizen” (a domiciled foreign national) that judges and even tax withholding documents are really talking about, rather than the “national” described in the constitution.

Domicile and NOT nationality is what imputes a status under the tax code and a liability for tax. Tax liability is a civil liability that attaches to civil statutory law, which in turn attaches to the person through their choice of domicile. When you CHOOSE a domicile, you elect or nominate a protector, which in turn gives rise to an obligation to pay for the civil protection demanded. The method of providing that protection is the civil laws of the municipal (as in COUNTY) jurisdiction that you chose a domicile within.

“domicile. A person's legal home. That place where a man has his true, fixed, and permanent home and principal establishment, and to which whenever he is absent he has the intention of returning. Smith v. Smith, 206 Pa.Super. 310, 213 A.2d. 94. Generally, physical presence within a state and the intention to make it one's home are the requisites of establishing a “domicile” therein. The permanent residence of a person or the place to which he intends to return even though he may actually reside elsewhere. A person may have more than one residence but only one domicile. The legal domicile of a person is important since it, rather than the actual residence, often controls the jurisdiction of the taxing authorities and determines where a person may exercise the privilege of voting and other legal rights and privileges.”
[Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 485]

Later versions of Black's Law Dictionary attempt to cloud this important distinction between nationality and domicile in order to unlawfully and unconstitutionally expand federal power into the states of the Union and to give federal judges unnecessary and unwarranted discretion to kidnap people into their jurisdiction using false presumptions. They do this by trying to make you believe that domicile and nationality are equivalent, when they are EMPHATICALLY NOT. Here is an example:

“nationality – The relationship between a citizen of a nation and the nation itself, customarily involving allegiance by the citizen and protection by the state; membership in a nation. This term is often used synonymously with citizenship.”
[Black's Law Dictionary (8th ed. 2004)]

Federal courts regard the term “citizenship” as equivalent to domicile, meaning domicile on federal territory.

“The words “citizen” and citizenship,” however, usually include the idea of domicile, Delaware, L. & W.R. Co. v. Petrowsky, C.C.A.N.Y., 250 F. 554, 557;”
[Black's Law Dictionary, Fourth Edition, p. 310]

Hence:

1. The term “citizenship” is being stealthily used by government officials as a magic word that allows them to hide their presumptions about your status. Sometimes they use it to mean NATIONALITY, and sometimes they use it to mean DOMICILE.
2. The use of the word “citizenship” should therefore be AVOIDED when dealing with the government because its meaning is unclear and leaves too much discretion to judges and prosecutors.
3. When someone from any government uses the word “citizenship”, you should:
  - 3.1. Tell them NOT to use the word, and instead to use “nationality” or “domicile”.
  - 3.2. Ask them whether they mean “nationality” or “domicile”.
  - 3.3. Ask them WHICH political subdivision they imply a domicile within: federal territory or a constitutional state of the Union.

A failure to either understand or apply the above concepts can literally mean the difference between being a government pet in a legal cage called a franchise, and being a free and sovereign man or woman.

NOTES:

1. Domicile is a prerequisite to having any civil status per Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 17. One therefore cannot be a statutory "alien" under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(3) without a domicile on federal territory. Without such a domicile, you are a transient foreigner and neither an "alien" nor a "nonresident alien".
2. "United States" is described in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(38), (a)(36) and 8 C.F.R. §215.1(f) and includes only federal territory and possessions and excludes all Constitutional Union states. This is a product of the separation of powers doctrine that is the heart of the United States Constitution.
3. A "nonresident alien individual" who has made an election under 26 U.S.C. §6013(g) and (h) to be treated as a "resident alien" is treated as a "nonresident alien" for the purposes of withholding under I.R.C. Subtitle C but retains their status as a "resident alien" under I.R.C. Subtitle A. See 26 C.F.R. §1.1441-1(c)(3)(ii).
4. A "non-person" is really just a transient foreigner who is not "purposefully availing themselves" of commerce within the legislative jurisdiction of the United States on federal territory under the Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act, 28 U.S.C. Chapter 97. The real transition from a "NON-person" to an "individual" occurs when one:
  - 4.1. "Purposefully avails himself" of commerce on federal territory and thus waives sovereign immunity. Examples of such purposeful availment are the next three items.
  - 4.2. Lawfully and consensually occupying a public office in the U.S. government and thereby being an "officer and individual" as identified in 5 U.S.C. §2105(a). Otherwise, you are PRIVATE and therefore beyond the civil legislative jurisdiction of the national government.
  - 4.3. Voluntarily files an IRS Form 1040 as a citizen or resident abroad and takes the foreign tax deduction under 26 U.S.C. §911. This too is essentially an act of "purposeful availment". Nonresidents are not mentioned in section 911. The upper left corner of the form identifies the filer as a "U.S. individual". You cannot be an "U.S. individual" without ALSO being an "individual". All the "trade or business" deductions on the form presume the applicant is a public officer, and therefore the "individual" on the form is REALLY a public officer in the government and would be committing FRAUD if he or she was NOT.
  - 4.4. VOLUNTARILY fills out an IRS Form W-7 ITIN Application (IRS identifies the applicant as an "individual") AND only uses the assigned number in connection with their compensation as an elected or appointed public officer. Using it in connection with PRIVATE earnings is FRAUD.
5. What turns a "non-resident NON-person" into a "nonresident alien individual" is meeting one or more of the following two criteria found in 26 C.F.R. §1.1441-1(c)(3)(ii):
  - 5.1. Residence/domicile in a foreign country under the residence article of an income tax treaty and 26 C.F.R. §301.7701(b)-7(a)(1).
  - 5.2. Residence/domicile as an alien in Puerto Rico, Guam, the Commonwealth of Northern Mariana Islands, the U.S. Virgin Islands, or American Samoa as determined under 26 C.F.R. §301.7701(b)-1(d).
6. All "taxpayers" are STATUTORY "aliens" or "nonresident aliens". The definition of "individual" found in 26 C.F.R. §1.1441-1(c)(3) does NOT include "citizens". The only occasion where a "citizen" can also be an "individual" is when they are abroad under 26 U.S.C. §911 and interface to the I.R.C. under a tax treaty with a foreign country as an alien pursuant to 26 C.F.R. §301.7701(b)-7(a)(1)

And when he had come into the house, Jesus anticipated him, saying, "What do you think, Simon? From whom do the kings [governments] of the earth [lawfully] take customs or taxes, from their sons [citizens and subjects] or from strangers [aliens], which are synonymous with "residents" in the tax code, and exclude "citizens"?"

Peter said to Him, "From strangers [aliens]/"residents" ONLY. See 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1\(a\)\(2\)\(ii\) and 26 C.F.R. §301.6109-1\(d\)\(3\)."

Jesus said to him, "Then the sons [citizens] of the Republic, who are all sovereign "nationals" and "nonresident aliens" under federal law] are free [sovereign over their own person and labor. e.g. SOVEREIGN IMMUNITY]. "

Status if DOMESTIC “national of the United States”	“national and citizen of the United States at birth” per 8 U.S.C. §1401 and “citizen of the United States” per 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22)(A) if born in on federal territory. (Not required to file if physically present in the “United States” because no statute requires it)	Citizen abroad 26 U.S.C. §911 (Meets presence test)	“non-resident” if born in a state of the Union 8 U.S.C. §1408 , 8 U.S.C. §1452 , and 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22)(B) if born in a possession.
Status if FOREIGN “national” pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21)	“Resident alien” 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(A)	“Resident alien abroad” 26 U.S.C. §911 (Meets presence test)	“Nonresident alien individual” if a public officer in the U.S. government. 26 C.F.R. §1.1441-1(c)(3)(ii) “Non-resident NON-person” if NOT a public officer in the U.S. government

NOTES:

- “United States” is defined as federal territory within 26 U.S.C. §§7701\(a\)\(9\) and (a)(10), 7701\(a\)\(39\), and 7408\(d\), and 4 U.S.C. §110\(d\). It does not include any portion of a Constitutional state of the Union.
- The “District of Columbia” is defined as a federal corporation but not a physical place, a “body politic”, or a de jure “government” within the District of Columbia Act of 1871, 16 Stat. 419, 426, Sec. 34. See: Corporatization and Privatization of the Government, Form #05.024; <http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>.
- “nationals” of the United States of America who are domiciled outside of federal jurisdiction, either in a state of the Union or a foreign country, are “nationals” but not “citizens” under federal law. They also qualify as “nonresident aliens” under 26 U.S.C. §7701\(b\)\(1\)\(B\) if and only if they are engaged in a public office. See sections 4.11.2 of the Great IRS Hoax, Form #11.302 for details.

- 1 4. Temporary domicile in the middle column on the right must meet the requirements of the "Presence test" documented
2 in IRS publications.
- 3 5. "FEDERAL ZONE"=District of Columbia and territories of the United States in the above table
- 4 6. The term "individual" as used on the IRS Form 1040 means an "alien" engaged in a "trade or business". All
5 "taxpayers" are "aliens" engaged in a "trade or business". This is confirmed by 26 C.F.R. §1.1441-1(c)(3), 26 C.F.R.
6 §1.1-1(a)(2)(ii), and 5 U.S.C. §552a(a)(2). Statutory "U.S. citizens" as defined in 8 U.S.C. §1401 are not "individuals"
7 unless temporarily abroad pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §911 and subject to an income tax treaty with a foreign country. In
8 that capacity, statutory "U.S. citizens" interface to the I.R.C. as "aliens" rather than "U.S. citizens" through the tax
9 treaty.

5.1.4.6 Meaning of Geographical “Words of Art”

Because the states of the Union and the federal government are “foreign” to each other for the purposes of legislative jurisdiction, then it also follows that the definitions of terms in the context of all state and federal statutes must be consistent with this fact. The table below was extracted from section 4.9 if you would like to investigate further, and it clearly shows the restrictions placed upon definitions of terms within the various contexts that they are used within state and federal law:

Table 5-5: Meaning of geographical “words of art”

Law	Federal constitution	Federal statutes	Federal regulations	State constitutions	State statutes	State regulations
Author	Union States/ “We The People”	Federal Government		“We The People”	State Government
“state”	Foreign country	Union state or foreign country	Union state or foreign country	Other Union state or federal government	Other Union state or federal government	Other Union state or federal government
“State”	Union state	Federal state	Federal state	Union state	Union state	Union state
“in this State” or “in the State” <sup>10</sup>	NA	NA	NA	NA	Federal enclave within state	Federal enclave within state
“State” <sup>11</sup> (State Revenue and taxation code only)	NA	NA	NA	NA	Federal enclave within state	Federal enclave within state
“several States”	Union states collectively. <sup>12</sup>	Federal “States” collectively	Federal “States” collectively	Federal “States” collectively	Federal “States” collectively	Federal “States” collectively
“United States”	states of the Union collectively	Federal United States	Federal United States	United States* the country	Federal United States	Federal United States

NOTES:

1. The term “Federal state” or “Federal ‘States’” as used above means a federal territory as defined in 4 U.S.C. §110\(d\) and EXCLUDES states of the Union.
2. The term “Union state” means a “State” mentioned in the United States Constitution, and this term EXCLUDES and is mutually exclusive to a federal “State”.

1 5.1.4.7 Citizenship and Domicile Options and Relationships

2 Figure 5-2: Citizenship and domicile options and relationships

4

- 1 1. Changing domicile from “foreign” on the left to “domestic” on the right can occur EITHER by:
  - 2 1.1. Physically moving to the federal zone.
  - 3 1.2. Being lawfully elected or appointed to political office, in which case the OFFICE/STATUS has a domicile on federal territory but the 4 OFFICER does not.
- 5 2. Statuses on the right are civil franchises granted by Congress. As such, they are public offices within the national government. Those not seeking 6 office should not claim any of these statuses.

5.1.4.8 Statutory Rules for Converting Between Various Domicile and Citizenship Options Within Federal Law

The rules depicted above are also described in text form using the list below, if you would like to investigate the above diagram further:

1. “non-resident non-person”: Those with no domicile on federal territory and who are born either in a foreign country, a state of the Union, or within the federal zone. Also called a “nonresident”, “stateless person”, or “transient foreigner”. They are exclusively PRIVATE and beyond the reach of the civil statutory law because:
  - 1.1. They are not a “person” or “individual” because not engaged in an elected or appointed office.
  - 1.2. They have not waived sovereign immunity under the Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act, 28 U.S.C. Chapter 97.
  - 1.3. They have not “purposefully” or “consensually” availed themselves of commerce within the exclusive or general jurisdiction of the national government within federal territory.
  - 1.4. They waived the “benefit” of any and all licenses or permits in the context of a specific transaction or agreement.
  - 1.5. In the context of a specific business dealing, they have not invoked any statutory status under federal civil law that might connect them with a government franchise, such as “U.S. citizen”, “U.S. resident”, “person”, “individual”, “taxpayer”, etc.
  - 1.6. If they are demanded to produce an identifying number, they say they don't consent and attach the following form to every application or withholding document:

Why It is Illegal for Me to Request or Use a “Taxpayer Identification Number”, Form #04.205
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

2. “Aliens” or “alien individuals”: Those born in a foreign country and not within any state of the Union or within any federal territory.
  - 2.1. “Alien” is defined in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(3) as a person who is neither a citizen nor a national.
  - 2.2. “Alien individual” is defined in 26 C.F.R. §1.1441-1(c)(3)(i).
  - 2.3. An alien is defined in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(3) as a person who is neither a statutory “U.S.** citizen” per 8 U.S.C. §1401 nor a “national of the United States**” per 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22).
  - 2.4. An alien with no domicile in the “United States” is presumed to be a “nonresident alien” pursuant to 26 C.F.R. §1.871-4(b).
3. “Residents” or “resident aliens”: An “alien” or “alien individual” with a legal domicile on federal territory.
  - 3.1. “Resident aliens” are defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(A).
  - 3.2. A “resident alien” is an alien as defined in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(3) who has a legal domicile on federal territory that is no part of the exclusive jurisdiction of any state of the Union.
  - 3.3. An “alien” becomes a “resident alien” by filing IRS Form 1078 pursuant to 26 C.F.R. §1.871-4(c)(ii) and thereby electing to have a domicile on federal territory.
4. “Nonresident aliens”: Those with no domicile on federal territory and who are born either in a foreign country, a state of the Union, or within the federal zone. They serve in a public office in the national but not state government.
  - 4.1. Defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(B).
  - 4.2. A “nonresident alien” is defined as a person who is neither a statutory “citizen” pursuant to 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1(c) nor a statutory “resident” pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(A).
  - 4.3. A person who is a “non-citizen national” pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1452 and 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22)(B) is a “nonresident alien”, but only if they are lawfully engaged in a public office of the national government.
5. “Nonresident alien individuals”: Those who are aliens and who do not have a domicile on federal territory.
  - 5.1. Defined in 26 C.F.R. §1.1441-1(c)(3)(ii).
  - 5.2. Status is indicated in block 3 of the IRS Form W-8BEN under the term “Individual”.
  - 5.3. Includes only nonresidents not domiciled on federal territory but serving in public offices of the national government. “person” and “individual” are synonymous with said office in 26 U.S.C. §6671(b) and 26 U.S.C. §7343.
6. Convertibility between “aliens”, “resident aliens”, and “nonresident aliens”, and “nonresident alien individuals”:
  - 6.1. A “nonresident alien” is not the legal equivalent of an “alien” in law nor is it a subset of “alien”.
  - 6.2. IRS Form W-8BEN, Block 3 has no block to check for those who are “non-resident non-persons” but not “nonresident aliens” or “nonresident alien individuals”. Thus, the submitter of this form who is a statutory “non-resident non-person” but not a “nonresident alien” or “nonresident alien individual” is effectively compelled to make an illegal and fraudulent election to become an alien and an “individual” if they do not add a block for “transient foreigner” or “Union State Citizen” to the form. See section 5.3 of the following:

About IRS Form W-8BEN, Form #04.202
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

- 6.3. 26 U.S.C. §6013(g) and (h) and 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(4)(B) authorize a “nonresident alien” who is married to a statutory “U.S. citizen” as defined in 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1(c) to make an “election” to become a “resident alien”.
- 6.4. It is unlawful for an unmarried “state national” pursuant to either 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) to become a “resident alien”. This can only happen by either fraud or mistake.
- 6.5. An alien may overcome the presumption that he is a “nonresident alien” and change his status to that of a “resident alien” by filing IRS Form 1078 pursuant to 26 C.F.R. §1.871-4(c)(ii) while he is in the “United States”.
- 6.6. The term “residence” can only lawfully be used to describe the domicile of an “alien”. Nowhere is this term used to describe the domicile of a “state national” or a “nonresident alien”. See 26 C.F.R. §1.871-2.
- 6.7. The only way a statutory “alien” under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(3) can become both a “state national” and a “nonresident alien” at the same time is to be naturalized pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1421 and to have a domicile in either a U.S. possession or a state of the Union.

7. Sources of confusion on these issues:

- 7.1. One can be a “non-resident non-person” without being an “individual” or a “nonresident alien individual” under the Internal Revenue Code. An example would be a human being born within the exclusive jurisdiction of a state of the Union who is therefore a “state national” pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) who does not participate in Social Security or use a Taxpayer Identification Number.
- 7.2. The term “United States” is defined in the Internal Revenue Code at 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10).
- 7.3. The term “United States” for the purposes of citizenship is defined in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(38).
- 7.4. Any “U.S. Person” as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(30) who is not found in the “United States” (District of Columbia pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10)) shall be treated as having an effective domicile within the District of Columbia pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(39) and 26 U.S.C. §7408(d).
- 7.5. The term “United States” is equivalent for the purposes of statutory “citizens” pursuant to 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1(c) and “citizens” as used in the Internal Revenue Code. See 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1(c).
- 7.6. The term “United States” as used in the Constitution of the United States is NOT equivalent to the statutory definition of the term used in:
- 7.6.1. 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10).
- 7.6.2. 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(38).
- The “United States” as used in the Constitution means the states of the Union and excludes federal territory, while the term “United States” as used in federal statutory law means federal territory and excludes states of the Union.
- 7.7. A constitutional “citizen of the United States” as mentioned in the Fourteenth Amendment is NOT equivalent to a statutory “national and citizen of the United States” as used in 8 U.S.C. §1401. See:

Why You are a “national”, “state national”, and Constitutional but not Statutory Citizen, Form #05.006
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

- 7.8. In the case of jurisdiction over CONSTITUTIONAL aliens only (meaning foreign NATIONALS), the term “United States” implies all 50 states and the federal zone, and is not restricted only to the federal zone. See:
- 7.8.1. Non-Resident Non-Person Position, Form #05.020

- 7.8.2. Kleindienst v. Mandel, 408 U.S. 753 (1972)

In accord with ancient principles of the international law of nation-states, the Court in The Chinese Exclusion Case, 130 U.S. 581, 609 (1889), and in Fong Yue Ting v. United States, 149 U.S. 698 (1893), held broadly, as the Government describes it, Brief for Appellants 20, that the power to exclude aliens is “inherent in sovereignty, necessary for maintaining normal international relations and defending the country against foreign encroachments and dangers - a power to be exercised exclusively by the political branches of government . . . .” Since that time, the Court’s general reaffirmations of this principle have [408 U.S. 753, 766] been legion. 6 The Court without exception has sustained Congress’ “plenary power to make rules for the admission of aliens and to exclude those who possess those characteristics which Congress has forbidden.” Boutilier v. Immigration and Naturalization Service, 387 U.S. 118, 123 (1967). “[O]ver no conceivable subject is the legislative power of Congress more complete than it is over” the admission of aliens. Oceanic Navigation Co. v. Stranahan, 214 U.S. 320, 339 (1909). [Kleindienst v. Mandel, 408 U.S. 753 (1972)]

7.8.3. Chae Chan Ping v. U.S., 130 U.S. 581 (1889)

While under our constitution and form of government the great mass of local matters is controlled by local authorities, the United States, in their relation to foreign countries and their subjects or citizens, are one nation, invested with powers which belong to independent nations, the exercise of which can be invoked for the maintenance of its absolute independence and security throughout its entire territory. The powers to declare war, make treaties, suppress insurrection, repel invasion, regulate foreign commerce, secure republican governments to the states, and admit subjects of other nations to citizenship, are all sovereign powers, restricted in their exercise only by the constitution itself and considerations of public policy and justice

1 which control, more or less, the conduct of all civilized nations. As said by this court in the case of Cohens v.
 2 Virginia, 6 Wheat. 264, 413, speaking by the same great chief justice: "That the United States form, for many,
 3 and for most important purposes, a single nation, has not yet been denied. In war, we are one people. In
 4 making peace, we are one people. In all commercial regulations, we are one and the same people. In many
 5 other respects, the American people are one; and the government which is alone capable of controlling and
 6 managing their interests in all these respects is the government of the Union. It is their government, and in
 7 that character they have no other. America has chosen to [130 U.S. 581, 605] be in many respects, and to 8 many purposes, a nation; and for all these purposes her government is complete; to all these objects, it is 9 competent. The people have declared that in the exercise of all powers given for these objects it is supreme. It
 10 can, then, in effecting these objects, legitimately control all individuals or governments within the American 11 territory."

12 [. . .]

 14
 15 "The power of exclusion of foreigners being an incident of sovereignty belonging to the government of the 16 United States as a part of those sovereign powers delegated by the constitution, the right to its exercise at any 17 time when, in the judgment of the government, the interests of the country require it, cannot be granted away or
 18 restrained on behalf of any one. The powers of government are delegated in trust to the United States, and are
 19 incapable of transfer to any other parties. They cannot be abandoned or surrendered. Nor can their exercise
 20 be hampered, when needed for the public good, by any considerations of private interest. The exercise of 21 these public trusts is not the subject of barter or contract."
 22 [Chae Chan Ping v. U.S., 130 U.S. 581 (1889)]

23 5.1.4.9 Effect of Federal Franchises and Offices Upon Your Citizenship and Standing in Court

24 Another important element of citizenship is that artificial entities like corporations are statutory but not Constitutional
 25 citizens in the context of civil litigation.

26 "A corporation is a citizen, resident, or inhabitant of the state or country by or under the laws of which it was 27 created, and of that state or country only."
 28 [19 Corpus Juris Secundum (C.J.S.), Corporations, §886 (2003)]

 30 "A corporation is not a citizen within the meaning of that provision of the Constitution, which declares that the 31 citizens of each State shall be entitled to all the privileges and immunities of citizens of the several States."
 32 [Paul v. Virginia, 8 Wall (U.S.) 168, 19 L.Ed. 357 (1868)]

33 Likewise, all governments are "corporations" as well.

34 "Corporations are also of all grades, and made for varied objects; all governments are corporations, created
 35 by usage and common consent, or grants and charters which create a body politic for prescribed purposes;
 36 but whether they are private, local or general, in their objects, for the enjoyment of property, or the exercise
 37 of power, they are all governed by the same rules of law, as to the construction and the obligation of the 38 instrument by which the incorporation is made. One universal rule of law protects persons and property. It is 39 a fundamental principle of the common law of England, that the term freemen of the kingdom, includes 'all
 40 persons,' ecclesiastical and temporal, incorporate, politique or natural; it is a part of their magna charta (2 41 Inst. 4), and is incorporated into our institutions. The persons of the members of corporations are on the same
 42 footing of protection as other persons, and their corporate property secured by the same laws which protect
 43 that of individuals. 2 Inst. 46-7. 'No man shall be taken,' 'no man shall be disseised,' without due process of law,
 44 is a principle taken from magna charta, infused into all our state constitutions, and is made inviolable by the 45 federal government, by the amendments to the constitution."
 46 [Proprietors of Charles River Bridge v. Proprietors of Warren Bridge, 36 U.S. 420 (1837)]

 48 TITLE 28 - JUDICIARY AND JUDICIAL PROCEDURE
 49 PART VI - PARTICULAR PROCEEDINGS
 50 CHAPTER 176 - FEDERAL DEBT COLLECTION PROCEDURE
 51 SUBCHAPTER A - DEFINITIONS AND GENERAL PROVISIONS
 52 Sec. 3002. Definitions

53 (15) "United States" means -
 54 (A) a Federal corporation;
 55 (B) an agency, department, commission, board, or other entity of the United States; or 56 (C) an instrumentality of the United States.

57
 58 "A federal corporation operating within a state is considered a domestic corporation rather than a foreign 59 corporation. The United States government is a foreign corporation with respect to a state."

1 [19 Corpus Juris Secundum (C.J.S.), Corporations, §883 (2003)]

2 Those who are acting in a representative capacity on behalf of the national government as “public officers” therefore
3 assume the same status as their employer pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 17(b). To wit:

4 IV. PARTIES > Rule 17.
5 Rule 17. Parties Plaintiff and Defendant; Capacity

6 (b) Capacity to Sue or be Sued.

7 Capacity to sue or be sued is determined as follows:

8 (1) for an individual who is not acting in a representative capacity, by the law of the individual's domicile;

9 (2) for a corporation [the “United States”, in this case, or its officers on official duty representing the 10 corporation], by the law under which it was organized; and

11 (3) for all other parties, by the law of the state where the court is located, except that:

12 (A) a partnership or other unincorporated association with no such capacity under that state's law may sue
13 or be sued in its common name to enforce a substantive right existing under the United States Constitution
14 or laws; and

15 (B) 28 U.S.C. §§754 and 959\(a\) govern the capacity of a receiver appointed by a United States court to sue
16 or be sued in a United States court.

17 [SOURCE: <http://www.law.cornell.edu/rules/frcp/Rule17.htm>]

18 Persons acting in the capacity as “public officers” of the national government are therefore acting as “officers of a 19 corporation” as described in 26 U.S.C. §6671\(b\) and 26 U.S.C. §7343 and become “persons” within the meaning of federal 20 statutory law.

21 TITLE 26 > Subtitle F > CHAPTER 68 > Subchapter B > PART I > § 6671
22 § 6671. Rules for application of assessable penalties

23 (b) Person defined

24 The term “person”, as used in this subchapter, includes an officer or employee of a corporation, or a member
25 or employee of a partnership, who as such officer, employee, or member is under a duty to perform the act in 26 respect of which the violation occurs.
27

28 TITLE 26 > Subtitle F > CHAPTER 75 > Subchapter D > § 7343
29 §7343. Definition of term “person”

30 The term “person” as used in this chapter includes an officer or employee of a corporation, or a member or
31 employee of a partnership, who as such officer, employee, or member is under a duty to perform the act in
32 respect of which the violation occurs.

33 Because all corporations are “citizens”, then “public officers” also take on the character of “U.S. citizens” in the capacity of 34 their official duties, regardless of what they are as private individuals. It is also interesting to note that IRS correspondence
35 very conspicuously warns the recipient right underneath the return address the following, confirming that they are 36 corresponding with a “public officer” and not a private individual:

37 “Penalty for private use $300.”

38 Note that all “taxpayers” are “public officers” of the national government, and they are referred to in the Internal Revenue
39 Code as “effectively connected with a trade or business”. The term “trade or business” is defined as “the functions of a
40 public office”:

41 26 U.S.C. Sec. 7701\(a\)\(26\)

42 “The term ‘trade or business’ includes the performance of the functions of a public office.”

6 The U.S. Supreme Court has also said it is "repugnant to the constitution" for the government to regulate private conduct.
 7 The only way you can lawfully become subject to the government's jurisdiction or the tax laws is to engage in "public
 8 conduct" as a "public officer" of the national government.

9 "The power to "legislate generally upon" life, liberty, and property, as opposed to the "power to provide modes
 10 of redress" against offensive state action, was "repugnant" to the Constitution. Id., at 15. See also United States

 13 modified, see, e.g., Heart of Atlanta Motel, Inc. v. United States, 379 U.S. 241 (1964); United States v. Guest,
 14 383 U.S. 745 (1966), their treatment of Congress' §5 power as corrective or preventive, not definitional, has not 15 been questioned."

17 Note also that ordinary "employees" are NOT "public officers":

18 Treatise on the Law of Public Offices and Officers
 19 Book 1: Of the Office and the Officer: How Officer Chosen and Qualified
 20 Chapter I: Definitions and Divisions

21 §2 How Office Differs from Employment.-A public office differs in material particulars from a public
 22 employment, for, as was said by Chief Justice MARSHALL, "although an office is an employment, it does not
 23 follow that every employment is an office. A man may certainly be employed under a contract, express or 24 implied, to perform a service without becoming an officer."

25 "We apprehend that the term 'office,'" said the judges of the supreme court of Maine, "implies a delegation of a
 26 portion of the sovereign power to, and the possession of it by, the person filling the office; and the exercise of 27 such power within legal limits constitutes the correct discharge of the duties of such office. The power thus 28 delegated and possessed may be a portion belonging sometimes to one of the three great departments and
 29 sometimes to another; still it is a legal power which may be rightfully exercised, and in its effects it will bind the 30 rights of others and be subject to revision and correction only according to the standing laws of the state. An 31 employment merely has none of these distinguishing features. A public agent acts only on behalf of his 32 principal, the public, whose sanction is generally considered as necessary to give the acts performed the 33 *authority and power of a public act or law. And if the act be such as not to require subsequent sanction, still it
 34 is only a species of service performed under the public authority and for the public good, but not in the 35 exercise of any standing laws which are considered as roles of action and guardians of rights."

36 "The officer is distinguished from the employee," says Judge COOLEY, "in the greater importance, dignity and
 37 independence of his position; in being required to take an official oath, and perhaps to give an official bond; in 38 the liability to be called to account as a public offender for misfeasance or non-feasance in office, and usually,
 39 though not necessarily, in the tenure of his position. In particular cases, other distinctions will appear which 40 are not general."

43 The ruse described in this section of making corporations into "citizens" and those who work for them into "public
 44 officers" of the government and "taxpayers" started just after the Civil War. Congress has always been limited to taxing
 45 things that it creates, which means it has never been able to tax anything but federal and not state corporations. The 46 Supreme Court has confirmed, for instance, that the income tax is and always has been a franchise or privilege tax upon 47 profit of federal corporations.

48 "Excises are taxes laid upon the manufacture, sale or consumption of commodities within the country, upon
 49 licenses to pursue certain occupations and upon corporate privileges...the requirement to pay such taxes
 50 involves the exercise of [220 U.S. 107, 152] privileges, and the element of absolute and unavoidable demand
 51 is lacking...

52 ...It is therefore well settled by the decisions of this court that when the sovereign authority has exercised the
 53 right to tax a legitimate subject of taxation as an exercise of a franchise or privilege, it is no objection that the 54 measure of taxation is found in the income produced in part from property which of itself considered is 55 nontaxable...

1 Conceding the power of Congress to tax the business activities of private corporations.. the tax must be
2 measured by some standard..."

3 [Flint v. Stone Tracy Co., 220 U.S. 107 \(1911\)]

5 "The Sixteenth Amendment declares that Congress shall have power to levy and collect taxes on income, "from 6 [271 U.S. 174] whatever source derived," without apportionment among the several states and without regard
7 to any census or enumeration. It was not the purpose or effect of that amendment to bring any new subject
8 within the taxing power. Congress already had power to tax all incomes. But taxes on incomes from some 9 sources had been held to be "direct taxes" within the meaning of the constitutional requirement as to 10 apportionment. Art. 1, § 2, cl. 3, § 9, cl. 4; Pollock v. Farmers' Loan & Trust Co., 158 U.S. 601. The 11 Amendment relieved from that requirement, and obliterated the distinction in that respect between taxes on 12 income that are direct taxes and those that are not, and so put on the same basis all incomes "from whatever
13 source derived." Brushaber v. Union P. R. Co., 240 U.S. 1, 17. "Income" has been taken to mean the same
14 thing as used in the Corporation Excise Tax Act of 1909, in the Sixteenth Amendment, and in the various 15 revenue acts subsequently passed. Southern Pacific Co. v. Lowe, 247 U.S. 330, 335; Merchants' L. & T. Co.
16 v. Smietanka, 255 U.S. 509, 219. After full consideration, this Court declared that income may be defined as 17 gain derived from capital, from labor, or from both combined, including profit gained through sale or 18 conversion of capital. Stratton's Independence v. Howbert, 231 U.S. 399, 415; Doyle v. Mitchell Brothers
19 Co., 247 U.S. 179, 185; Eisner v. Macomber, 252 U.S. 189, 207. And that definition has been adhered to and 20 applied repeatedly. See, e.g., Merchants' L. & T. Co. v. Smietanka, supra; 518; Goodrich v. Edwards, 255 U.S.
21 527, 535; United States v. Phellis, 257 U.S. 156, 169; Miles v. Safe Deposit Co., 259 U.S. 247, 252-253; United 22 States v. Supplee-Biddle Co., 265 U.S. 189, 194; Irwin v. Gavit, 268 U.S. 161, 167; Edwards v. Cuba Railroad,
23 268 U.S. 628, 633. In determining what constitutes income, substance rather than form is to be given
24 controlling weight. Eisner v. Macomber, supra, 206. [271 U.S. 175]"

25 Bowers v. Kerbaugh-Empire Co., [271 U.S. 170, 174, (1926)]

26
27 "As repeatedly pointed out by this court, the Corporation Tax Law of 1909..imposed an excise or privilege tax,
28 and not in any sense, a tax upon property or upon income merely as income. It was enacted in view of the 29 decision of Pollock v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co., 157 U.S. 429, 29 L.Ed. 759, 15 Sup. St. Rep. 673, 158 U.S. 601, 30 39 L.Ed. 1108, 15 Sup.Ct.Rep. 912, which held the income tax provisions of a previous law to be 31 unconstitutional because amounting in effect to a direct tax upon property within the meaning of the 32 Constitution, and because not apportioned in the manner required by that instrument."
33 U.S. v. Whiteridge, [231 U.S. 144, 34 S.Sup.Ct. 24 (1913)]

34 To create and expand a national income tax, the federal government therefore had to make the municipal government of the 35 District of Columbia into a federal corporation in 1871 and then impose an income tax upon the officers of the corporation
36 ("public officers") by making all of their earnings from the office into "profit" and "gross income" subject to excise tax
37 upon the franchise they participate in. Below is the history of this transformation. You can find more in Great IRS Hoax,

- 40 2. The License Tax Cases was heard in 1866 by the Supreme Court, in which the Supreme Court said that Congress could 41 not license a trade or business in a state in order to tax it, referring to the civil war tax enacted in 1862. See:

License Tax Cases, 72 U.S. 462 (1866)

<http://caselaw.lp.findlaw.com/scripts/getcase.pl?navby=case&court=us&vol=72&page=462>

- 42 3. The Fourteenth Amendment was ratified in 1868. This Amendment uses the phrase "citizens of the United States" in 43 order to confuse it with statutory "citizens of the United States" domiciled on federal territory in the exclusive
44 jurisdiction of Congress.
45 4. The civil war income tax was repealed in 1871. See:
46 4.1. 17 Stat. 401
47 4.2. Great IRS Hoax, Section 6.5.20.
48 5. Congress incorporated the District of Columbia in 1871. The incorporation of the District of Columbia was done to 49 expand the income tax by taxing the government's own "public officers" as a federal corporation. See the following:

NOTES:

1. "United States" is described in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(38), (a)(36) and 8 C.F.R. §215.1(f) and includes only federal territory and possessions and excludes all Constitutional Union states. This is a product of the separation of powers doctrine that is the heart of the United States Constitution.
2. E-Verify CANNOT be used by those who are a NOT lawfully engaged in a public office in the U.S. government at the time of making application. Its use is VOLUNTARY and cannot be compelled. Those who use it MUST have a Social Security Number or Taxpayer Identification Number and it is ILLEGAL to apply for, use, or disclose said number for those not lawfully engaged in a public office in the U.S. government at the time of application. 5.1.4.11.2 How to describe your citizenship on government forms<sup>13</sup>

This section provides some pointers on how to describe your citizenship status on government forms in order to avoid being confused with a someone who has a domicile on federal territory and therefore no Constitutional rights. Below is a summary of how we recommend protecting yourself from the prejudicial presumptions of others about your citizenship status:

1. Keep in mind the following facts about all government forms:
  - 1.1. Government forms ALWAYS imply the LEGAL/STATUTORY rather than POLITICAL/CONSTITUTIONAL status of the party in the context of all franchises, including income taxes and social security.
  - 1.2. "Alien" on government forms always means a person born or naturalized in a foreign country.
  - 1.3. The Internal Revenue Code does NOT define the term "nonresident alien". The closest thing to a definition is that found in 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(B), which defines what it ISN'T, but NOT what it IS. If you look on IRS Form W-8BEN, Block 3, you can see that there are many different types of entities that can be nonresident aliens, none of which are EXPRESSLY included in the definition at 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(B). It is therefore IMPOSSIBLE to conclude based on any vague definition in the Internal Revenue Code that a specific person IS or IS NOT a "nonresident alien."
  - 1.4. On tax forms, the term "nonresident alien" is NOT a subset of the term "alien", but rather a SUPERSET. It includes both FOREIGN nationals domiciled in a foreign country and also persons in Constitutional states of the Union. A "national of the United States*", for instance, although NOT an "alien" under Title 8 of the U.S. Code, is a "nonresident alien" under Title 26 of the U.S. Code. Therefore, a "nonresident alien" is a "word of art" designed to confuse people, and the fact that uses the word "alien" doesn't mean it IS an "alien". This is covered in:

Flawed Tax Arguments to Avoid, Form #08.004, Section 6.7
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

2. Anyone who PRESUMES any of the following should promptly be DEMANDED to prove the presumption with legally admissible evidence from the law. ALL of these presumptions are FALSE and cannot be proven:

2.1. That you can trust ANYTHING that either a government form OR a government employee says. The courts say not only that you CANNOT, but that you can be PENALIZED for doing so. See:

Reasonable Belief About Income Tax Liability, Form #05.007

<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

2.2. That nationality and domicile are synonymous.

2.3. That “nonresident aliens” are a SUBSET of “aliens” within the Internal Revenue Code.

2.4. That the term “United States” has the SAME meaning in Title 8 of the U.S. Code as it has in Title 26.

2.5. That a Fourteenth Amendment “citizen of the United States” is equivalent to any of the following:

2.5.1. 8 U.S.C. §1401 “national and citizen of the United States”.

2.5.2. 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1 “citizen”.

2.5.3. 26 U.S.C. §3121(e) “citizen of the United States”.

All of the above statuses have similar sounding names, but they rely on a DIFFERENT definition of “United States” from that found in the USA Constitution.

2.6. That you can be a statutory “taxpayer” or statutory “citizen” of any kind WITHOUT your consent. See:

Why Domicile and Becoming a “Taxpayer” Require Your Consent, Form #05.002

<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

3. The safest way to describe oneself is to check “Other” for citizenship or add an “Other” box if the form doesn’t have one and then do one of the following:

3.1. Write in the “Other” box

“See attached mandatory Affidavit of Citizenship, Domicile, and Tax Status, Form #02.001”

and then attach the following completed form:

Affidavit of Citizenship, Domicile, and Tax Status, Form #02.001

<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

3.2. If you don’t want to include an attachment, add the following mandatory language to the form that you are a:

3.2.1. A “Citizen and national of ____ (statename)”

3.2.2. NOT a statutory “national and citizen of the United States” or “U.S. citizen” per 8 U.S.C. §1401

3.2.3. A constitutional or Fourteenth Amendment Citizen.

3.2.4. A statutory alien per 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(A) for the purposes of the federal income tax.

4. If the recipient of the form says they won’t accept attachments or won’t allow you to write explanatory information on the form needed to prevent perjury on the form, then send them an update via certified mail AFTER they accept your submission so that you have legal evidence that they tried to tamper with a federal witness and conspired to commit perjury on the form.

5. For detailed instructions on how to fill out the Department of State Form I-9, See:

I-9 Form Amended, Form #06.028

<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

6. For detailed instructions on how to participate in E-Verify for the purposes of PRIVATE employment, see:

About E-Verify, Form #04.107

<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

7. To undo the damage you have done over the years to your status by incorrectly describing your status, send in the following form and submit according to the instructions provided. This form says that all future government forms submitted shall have this form included or attached by reference.

Legal Notice of Change in Domicile/Citizenship Records and Divorce from the United States, Form #10.001

<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

8. Quit using Taxpayer Identifying Numbers (TINs). 20 C.F.R. §422.104 says that only statutory “U.S. citizens” and “permanent residents” can lawfully apply for Social Security Numbers, both of which share in common a domicile on federal territory such as statutory “U.S. citizens” and “residents” (aliens), can lawfully use such a number. 26 C.F.R. §301.6109-1(b) also indicates that “U.S. persons”, meaning persons with a domicile on federal territory, are required to furnish such a number if they file tax forms. “Foreign persons” are also mentioned in 26 C.F.R. §301.6109-1(b), but these parties also elect to have an effective domicile on federal territory and thereby become “persons” by engaging in federal franchises. See:

8.1. Who are “Taxpayers” and Who Needs a “Taxpayer Identification Number”?, Form #05.013

<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

8.2. Why It is Illegal for Me to Request or Use a “Taxpayer Identification Number”, Form #04.205-attach this form to every government form that asks for a Social Security Number or Taxpayer Identification Number. Write in the SSN/TIN Box (NONE: See attached form #04.205).

8.3. Resignation of Compelled Social Security Trustee, Form #06.002-use this form to quit Social Security lawfully.

<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

9. If you are completing any kind of government form or application to any kind of financial institution other than a tax form and you are asked for your citizenship status, TIN, or Social Security Number, attach the following form and prepare according to the instructions provided:

Affidavit of Citizenship, Domicile, and Tax Status, Form #02.001

<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

10. If you are completing and submitting a government tax form, attach the following form and prepare according to the instructions provided:

Tax Form Attachment, Form #04.201

<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

11. If you are submitting a voter registration, attach the following form and prepare according to the instructions provided:

Voter Registration Attachment, Form #06.003

<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

12. If you are applying for a USA passport, attach the following form and prepare according to the instructions provided:

USA Passport Application Attachment, Form #06.007

<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

13. If you are submitting a complaint, response, pleading, or motion to a federal court, you should attach the following form:

Federal Pleading/Motion/Petition Attachment, Litigation Tool #01.002

<http://sedm.org/Litigation/LitIndex.htm>

14. Use as many of the free forms as you can from the page below. They are very well thought out to avoid traps set by the predators who run the American government:

SEDM Forms Page

<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

15. When engaging in correspondence with anyone in the government, legal, or financial profession about your status that occurs on other than a standard government form, use the following guidelines:

15.1. In the return address for the correspondence, place the phrase “(NOT A DOMICILE OR RESIDENCE)”.

15.2. Entirely avoid the use of the words “citizen”, “citizenship”, “resident”, “inhabitant”. Instead, prefer the term “non-resident”, and “transient foreigner”.

15.3. Never describe yourself as an “individual” or “person”. 5 U.S.C. §552a(a)(2) says that this entity is a government employee who is a statutory “U.S. citizen” or “resident” (alien). Instead, refer to yourself as a “transient foreigner” and a “nonresident”. Some forms such as IRS form W-8BEN Block 3 have no block for “transient foreigner” or “nonresident NON-individual”, in which case modify the form to add that option. See the following for details:

About IRS Form W-8BEN, Form #04.202

<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

15.4. Entirely avoid the use of the phrase “United States”, because it has so many different and mutually exclusive meanings in the U.S. code and state law. Instead, replace this phrase with the name of the state you either are physically present within or with “USA” and then define that “USA” includes the states of the Union and excludes federal territory. For instance, you could say “Citizen of California Republic” and then put an asterisk next to it and at the bottom of the page explain the asterisk as follows:

\ NOT a citizen of the STATE of California, which is a corporate extension of the federal government, but instead a sovereign Citizen of the California Republic*

California Revenue and Taxation Code, Section 6017 defines “State of” as follows:

“6017. ‘In this State’ or ‘in the State’ means within the exterior limits of the State of California and includes all territory within these limits owned by or ceded to the United States of America.”

15.5. Never use the word “residence”, “permanent address”, or “domicile” in connection with either the term “United States”, or the name of the state you are in.

15.6. If someone else refers to you improperly, vociferously correct them so that they are prevented from making presumptions that would injure your rights.

15.7. Avoid words that are undefined in statutes that relate to citizenship. Always use words that are statutorily defined and if you can't find the definition, define it yourself on the form or correspondence you are sending. Use of undefined words encourages false presumptions that will eventually injure your rights and give judges and administrators discretion that they undoubtedly will abuse to their benefit. There isn't even a common definition of "citizen of the United States" or "U.S. citizen" in the standard dictionary, then the definition of "U.S. citizen" in all the state statutes and on all government forms is up to us! Therefore, once again, whenever you fill out any kind of form that specifies either "U.S. citizen" or "citizen of the United States", you should be very careful to clarify that it means "national" under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) or you will be "presumed" to be a federal citizen and a "citizen of the United States**" under 8 U.S.C. §1401, and this is one of the biggest injuries to your rights that you could ever inflict. Watch out folks! Here is the definition we recommend that you use on any government form that uses these terms that makes the meaning perfectly clear and unambiguous:

"U.S.*** citizen" or "citizen of the United States****": A "National" defined in either 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) or 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22)(B) and 8 U.S.C. §1452 who owes their permanent allegiance to the confederation of states called the "United States". Someone who was not born in the federal "United States" as defined in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(38) and who is NOT a "citizen of the United States" under 8 U.S.C. §1401.

15.8. Refer them to this pamphlet if they have questions and tell them to do their homework.

16. Citizenship status in Social Security NUMIDENT record:

16.1. The NUMIDENT record derives from what was filled out on the SSA Form SS-5, Block 5. See:

<http://www.ssa.gov/online/ss-5.pdf>

16.2. One's citizenship status is encoded within the NUMIDENT record using the "CSP code" within the Numident record. This code is called the "citizenship code" by the Social Security administration.

16.3. Like all government forms, the terms used on the SSA Form SS-5 use the STATUTORY context, not the CONSTITUTIONAL context for all citizenship words. Hence, block 5 of the SSA Form SS-5 should be filled out with "Other", which means you are a non-resident. This is consistent with the definition of "individual" found in 26 C.F.R. §1.1441-1(c)(3), which defines the term to include ONLY STATUTORY "aliens".

16.4. Those who are not STATUTORY "nationals and citizens of the United States**" at birth per 8 U.S.C. §1401 or 26 U.S.C. §3121(e), and 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1(c) have a "CSP code" of B in their NUMIDENT record, which corresponds with a CSP code of "B". The comment field of the NUMIDENT record should also be annotated with the following to ensure that it is not changed during an audit because of confusion on the part of the SSA employee:

"CSP Code B not designated in error-- applicant is an American national with a domicile and residence in a foreign state for the purposes of the Social Security Act."

16.5. The local SSA office cannot provide a copy of the NUMIDENT record. Only the central SSA headquarters can provide it by submitting a Privacy Act request rather than a FOIA using the following resource:

Guide to Freedom of Information Act, Social Security Administration

http://www.ssa.gov/foia/html/foia\_guide.htm

16.6. Information in the NUMIDENT record is shared with:

16.6.1. The Department of Homeland Security (DHS).

16.6.2. State Department of Motor Vehicles in verifying SSNs.

16.6.3. E-Verify.

<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

16.7. The procedures for requesting NUMIDENT information using the Freedom of Information Act or Privacy Act are described in:

Social Security Program Operations Manual System (POMS), Section RM 00299.005 Form SSA-L669 Request for Evidence in Support of an SSN Application — U.S.-Born Applicant

5.1.5 You Don't Pay "Taxes" to the IRS: You are instead subsidizing socialism

"Politics is the gentle art of getting votes from the poor, and campaign funds from the rich, by promising to protect each from the other."
[Oscar Ameringer]

Below is a definition of the word "taxation" by the U.S. Supreme Court that is very enlightening. It succinctly reveals the proper meaning and function of the word "tax" from a legal perspective:

"The power to tax is, therefore, the strongest, the most pervading of all powers of government, reaching directly or indirectly to all classes of the people. It was said by Chief Justice Marshall, in the case of McCulloch v. Md., 4 Wheat. 431, that the power to tax is the power to destroy. A striking instance of the truth of the proposition is seen in the fact that the existing tax of ten per cent, imposed by the United States on the circulation of all other banks than the National Banks, drove out of existence every *state bank of circulation within a year or two after its passage. This power can be readily employed against one class of individuals and in favor of another, so as to ruin the one class and give unlimited wealth and prosperity to the other, if there is no implied limitation of the uses for which the power may be exercised.

To lay, with one hand, the power of the government on the property of the citizen, and with the other to bestow it upon favored individuals to aid private enterprises and build up private fortunes, is none the less a robbery because it is done under the forms of law and is called taxation. This is not legislation. It is a decree under legislative forms.

Nor is it taxation. 'A tax,' says Webster's Dictionary, 'is a rate or sum of money assessed on the person or property of a citizen by government for the use of the nation or State.' 'Taxes are burdens or charges imposed by the Legislature upon persons or property to raise money for public purposes.' Cooley, Const. Lim., 479.

Coulter, J., in Northern Liberties v. St. John's Church, 13 Pa.St., 104 says, very forcibly, 'I think the common mind has everywhere taken in the understanding that taxes are a public imposition, levied by authority of the government for the purposes of carrying on the government in all its machinery and operations—that they are imposed for a public purpose.' See, also Pray v. Northern Liberties, 31 Pa.St., 69; Matter of Mayor of N.Y., 11 Johns., 77; Camden v. Allen, 2 Dutch., 398; Sharpless v. Mayor, supra; Hanson v. Vernon, 27 Ia., 47; Whiting v. Fond du Lac, supra."
[Loan Association v. Topeka, 20 Wall. 655 (1874)]

Black's Law Dictionary also defines the word "tax" as follows:

"Tax: A charge by the government on the income of an individual, corporation, or trust, as well as the value of an estate or gift. The objective in assessing the tax is to generate revenue to be used for the needs of the public.

*A pecuniary [relating to money] burden laid upon individuals or property to support the government, and is a payment exacted by legislative authority. In re Mytinger, D.C.Tex. 31 F.Supp. 977,978,979. Essential characteristics of a tax are that it is NOT A VOLUNTARY PAYMENT OR DONATION, BUT AN ENFORCED CONTRIBUTION, EXACTED PURSUANT TO LEGISLATIVE AUTHORITY. Michigan Employment Sec. Commission v. Patt, 4 Mich.App. 228, 144 N.W.2d. 663, 665. ..."
[Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1457]*

So in order to be legitimately called a "tax" or "taxation", the money we pay to the government must fit all of the following criteria:

1. The money must be used ONLY for the support of government.
2. The subject of the tax must be "liable", and responsible to pay for the support of government under the force of law.
3. The money must go toward a "public purpose" rather than a "private purpose".
4. The monies paid cannot be described as wealth transfer between two people or classes of people within society
5. The monies paid cannot aid one group of private individuals in society at the expense of another group, because this violates the concept of equal protection of law for all citizens found in section 1 of the Fourteenth Amendment

If the monies demanded by government do not fit all of the above requirements, then they are being used for a "private" purpose and cannot be called "taxes" or "taxation", according to the Supreme Court. Actions by the government to enforce the payment of any monies that do not meet all the above requirements can therefore only be described as:

1. Theft and robbery by the government in the guise of "taxation"
2. Government by decree rather than by law
3. Extortion under the color of law in violation 18 U.S.C. §872.
4. Tyranny
5. Socialism

- 1 6. Mob rule and a tyranny by the “have-nots” against the “haves”
- 2 7. 18 U.S.C. §241: Conspiracy against rights. The IRS shares tax return information with states of the union, so that both
- 3 of them can conspire to deprive you of your property.
- 4 8. 18 U.S.C. §242: Deprivation of rights under the color of law. The Fifth Amendment says that people in states of the
- 5 Union cannot be deprived of their property without due process of law or a court hearing. Yet, the IRS tries to make it
- 6 appear like they have the authority to just STEAL these people’s property for a fabricated tax debt that they aren’t even
- 7 legally liable for.
- 8 9. 18 U.S.C. §247: Damage to religious property; obstruction of persons in the free exercise of religious beliefs
- 9 10. 18 U.S.C. §872: Extortion by officers or employees of the United States.
- 10 11. 18 U.S.C. §876: Mailing threatening communications. This includes all the threatening notices regarding levies, liens,
- 11 and idiotic IRS letters that refuse to justify why government thinks we are “liable”.
- 12 12. 18 U.S.C. §880: Receiving the proceeds of extortion. Any money collected from Americans through illegal
- 13 enforcement actions and for which the contributors are not "liable" under the law is extorted money, and the IRS is in
- 14 receipt of the proceeds of illegal extortion.
- 15 13. 18 U.S.C. §1581: Peonage, obstructing enforcement. IRS is obstructing the proper administration of the tax code. In a
- 16 society based entirely on the requirement for consent of the governed, the government must respect the choice of those
- 17 who choose NOT to volunteer to participate in the federal donation program identified under I.R.C., Subtitle A
- 18 14. 18 U.S.C. §1583: Enticement into slavery. IRS tries to enlist “nontaxpayers” to rejoin the ranks of other peons who
- 19 pay taxes they aren't demonstrably liable for, which amount to slavery.
- 20 15. 18 U.S.C. §1589: Forced labor. Being forced to expend one’s personal time responding to frivolous IRS notices and
- 21 pay taxes on my labor that I am not liable for.

22 In order to prove that what we pay the IRS under Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A isn't a “tax” in the legal sense, all we
23 have to show is that any part of the income tax revenues are spent for social welfare or wealth transfer payments. At that
24 point, the monies are being used for “wealth transfer” and the government becomes a thief and a Robinhood, because it is 25 using public money for private purposes. It is committing robbery disguised as taxation if it takes public funds (also called 26 the “General fund”) and puts them into the pocket of private individuals who did not earn them with their labor or 27 compensated services. Understanding these facts helps explain some of the following interesting observations:

- 28 • Social Security is called O.A.S.D.I., or Old Age Survivor’s Disability Insurance. It isn’t a “tax”, it is “insurance”,
29 which is why it doesn’t appear anywhere under Title 26, Subtitle A “Income Taxes”. Instead, it appears under 42
30 U.S.C. Chapter 7 entitled “Social Security”. All insurance must be voluntary so it can’t be called a tax.
- 31 • Medicare also isn’t a “tax” because it too goes to private individuals. This is a form of insurance and is found in 32 42 U.S.C. Chapter 7, Subchapter XVIII rather than in the Internal Revenue Code. Once again, participation is 33 voluntary and cannot be compelled because the funds are used for private purposes.

34 The best place to go to find out how your tax dollars are spent is the Treasury Financial Management Service (FMS)
35 Website. We compiled a detailed breakdown of all federal receipts and expenditures earlier in section 1.12 using this 36 website, which is located at:

37 <http://www.fms.treas.gov/fr/index.html>

38 If you download the latest financial report of the U.S. Government for 2002 and examine page 69, there is an analysis of 39 “Trust Fund Financing”. The trust funds are the individual social programs maintained by the U.S. government, including
40 Social Security (called Old Age Survivors Disability Insurance, or OASDI), Medicare, FICA unemployment, and Railroad
41 Retirement. This analysis shows that there are certain socialist programs which are running a deficit, which means that they 42 must be financed from the General Fund. The General Fund means the individual income tax, as the report explains.
43 Below is a summary of the various wealth redistribution programs that are funded from general revenues:

- 44 • Unemployment \(FICA\): 12 Billion dollar deficit for 2003. This is based on expected economic conditions.
45 See page 87 of the 2002 report.
- 46 • Medicare Part B: Expenditures come entirely from the general fund. See page 82 of the report.

47 Another good place to look is on expenditures for welfare. You have to dig for these but basically, they are paid by the 48 Department of Health and Human Services (DHHS) under a program called Temporary Assistance for Needy Families
49 (TANF). The statistics on spending for this program may be found on the web at:

<http://www.acf.dhhs.gov/programs/ofs/data/index.html>

The total federal expenditures in 2002 for the TANF program was approximately 23 Billion dollars, and all of the money to pay for this welfare program came from the funding for DHHS, which in turn came from the General Fund. The General Fund, in turn, is paid for mostly out of personal income taxes, which means that your income tax pays for socialism and charity.

In conclusion, a significant amount of money contributed under I.R.C., Subtitles A and C DOES go to support wealth transfer, which means that the income tax cannot be classified as a "tax" according to the Supreme Court. The Treasury Financial Management Service (FMS) report above also reveals that there are massive future shortfalls predicted for Medicare and Social Security, which means that an increasing amount of individual income tax revenues will have to subsidize these programs over the next several years in order to ensure their viability. The problem is therefore predicted to get MUCH worse, not better in the future if current trends and rates of expenditures continue.

5.1.6 Lawful Subjects of Constitutional Taxation within States of the Union

*"Most of the presidential candidates' economic packages involve 'tax breaks,' which is when the government, amid great fanfare, generously decides not to take quite so much of your income. In other words, these candidates are trying to buy your votes with your own [stolen] money."
[Dave Barry]*

Below is a list of the only constitutional and lawful taxes in the United States of America as derived right from the Constitution itself. Note that these are the limits defined by the Constitution upon federal taxation only within states of the Union. Federal taxing powers upon those domiciled within the federal zone and outside of states of the Union are not limited in any way by the Constitution and do not need to fall within the table below. This is a point that many people overlook:

Table 5-7: What can be Legally Taxed by the Federal Government?

Class of Tax	Nature of Tax	Subject of Tax	Constitutional Requirement
Indirect Taxes	Excises Duties Imposts	Taxable activities Taxable events Taxable incidents Taxable occasions	* Must be geographically uniform
Direct Taxes	Capitation taxes	People	* Must be apportioned among the states
	Property taxes	Property (which property?) (Be specific.)
* see Penn Mutual Indemnity Co. v. C.I.R. , 277 F.2d. 16, at 19-20 (3rd Cir. 1960) Seward Machine Co. v. Davis , 301 U.S. 548, at 581-582 (1937)

NOTES:

1. Direct taxes are on biological people, which are called "natural persons" in the legal field.
2. Indirect taxes are on legal fictions, such as businesses, corporations, and partnerships.

There are no other types of legal or constitutional taxes within states of the Union, and the supreme Court agreed with this in its findings in Pollock v. Farmers' Loan & Trust Co., 157 U.S. 429, 158 U.S. 601 (1895):

*And although there have been, from time to time, intimations that there might be some tax which was not a direct tax, nor included under the words 'duties, imports, and excises,' such a tax, for more than 100 years of national existence, has as yet remained undiscovered, notwithstanding the stress of particular circumstances has invited thorough investigation into sources of revenue. [157 U.S. 429, 558]
[Pollock v. Farmers' Loan & Trust Co., 157 U.S. 429, 158 U.S. 601 (1895)]*

Property taxes can be on tangibles or intangibles. In order to have a situs for taxation (a basis for imposing the tax), tangible property (physical property) must reside within the territorial jurisdiction of the taxing authority, and intangibles (patents, copyrights, receipts, etc) must be subject to choses in action within the territorial jurisdiction of the taxing authority. See Wheeling Steel Corp. v. Fox, 298 U.S. 193 (1936).

1 After reading the above, you might then ask the following, as a person domiciled in a state of the Union and therefore who
2 is protected by the Constitutional limitations on taxation described in this section:

- 3 1. What is the subject of the so-called “income” tax?
- 4 2. In which section, if any, of the Internal Revenue Code (26 U.S.C.) does it create a liability on a particular subject?
- 5 3. If you can't find an answer which meets the constitutional requirements identified above, don't feel alone. Neither can
6 anyone else find a subject of an unapportioned tax which should apply to individuals domiciled in states of the Union
7 and not within any federal enclave, and who are not connected with any licensed or privileged activities.
- 8 4. If the subject of the tax cannot be found in the IRS Code which meets the constitutional requirement for the imposition 9 of a type of tax, how can it be proved anyone is subject to or liable for any so-called “income” tax?

10 “The income tax is, therefore, not a tax on income as such. It is an excise with respect to certain activities and
11 privileges, measured by reference to the income which they produce. The income is not the subject of the tax, it 12 is the basis for determining the amount of tax”.
13 [House Congressional Record, March 27, 1943, p. 2580.]

14 The important thing to remember as you try to answer the questions above is that the Internal Revenue Code describes how
15 taxing is to be done both within the federal zone AND within states of the Union and only the states of the Union are 16 subject to the limitations in this section. We know from Article 1, Section 8, Clause 1 of the Constitution, that the only way
17 the Congress can tax within the states of the Union is through a uniform indirect excise or “privilege” tax. Therefore, the 18 only proper “subject of” the I.R.C. within states of the Union is taxable activities, events incidents and occasions. The 19 amount of tax to be paid is measured by “income”, but the event of receiving income relating only to foreign commerce, or 20 more specifically importation, is the “activity” that is being taxed. 26 U.S.C. §7001 identifies “foreign commerce” as a 21 privileged activity that must be licensed.

22 TITLE 26 > Subtitle F > CHAPTER 72 > Subchapter A > §7001
23 §7001. Collection of foreign items

24 (a) License

25 All persons undertaking as a matter of business or for profit the collection of foreign payments of interest or
26 dividends by means of coupons, checks, or bills of exchange shall obtain a license from the Secretary and
27 shall be subject to such regulations enabling the Government to obtain the information required under 28 subtitle A (relating to income taxes) as the Secretary shall prescribe.

29 (b) Penalty for failure to obtain license

30 For penalty for failure to obtain the license provided for in this section, see section 7231.

31 Foreign commerce is the ONLY activity identified in the Internal Revenue Code that requires a “license” or receipt of a
32 federal privilege and which applies anywhere within states of the Union. We could find no others. There are lots of other
33 types of licenses mentioned within the Internal Revenue Code, but none are authorized by the Constitution to be issued to 34 people in states of the Union OTHER than that above. This was covered in the License Tax Cases, when the Supreme 35 Court ruled:

36 “Thus, Congress having power to regulate commerce with foreign nations, and among the several States, and
37 with the Indian tribes, may, without doubt, provide for granting coasting licenses, licenses to pilots, licenses to
38 trade with the Indians, and any other licenses necessary or proper for the exercise of that great and extensive
39 power; and the same observation is applicable to every other power of Congress, to the exercise of which the
40 granting of licenses may be incident. All such licenses confer authority, and give rights to the licensee.

41 But very different considerations apply to the internal commerce or domestic trade of the States. Over this
42 commerce and trade Congress has no power of regulation nor any direct control. This power belongs
43 *exclusively to the States. No interference by Congress with the business of citizens transacted within a State is
44 warranted by the Constitution, except such as is strictly incidental to the exercise of powers clearly granted to
45 the legislature. The power to authorize a business within a State is plainly repugnant to the exclusive power of
46 the State over the same subject. It is true that the power of Congress to tax is a very extensive power. It is given
47 in the Constitution, with only one exception and only two qualifications. Congress cannot tax exports, and it
48 must impose direct taxes by the rule of apportionment, and indirect taxes by the rule of uniformity. Thus limited,
49 and thus only, it reaches every subject, and may be exercised at discretion. But, it reaches only existing
50 subjects. Congress cannot authorize a trade or business within a State in order to tax it.”

51 [License Tax Cases, 72 U.S. 462, 18 L.Ed. 497, 5 Wall. 462, 2 A.F.T.R. 2224 (1866)]

1 Notice the conspicuous use of the term “trade or business” by the Supreme Court above, way before its use became
 2 commonplace in the Internal Revenue Code starting in the early 1900’s. This term is very important, you will find out
 3 later. By getting a license, one receives a federal “privilege” and thereby “volunteers” to pay an indirect excise tax relating
 4 to foreign commerce. We will expand upon this theme throughout the rest of the chapter in sections 5.2.14, 5.2.17, and
 5 5.1.11 to make this concept clearer in your mind. The reason this must be true is because:

- 6 1. Congress cannot tax exports from a state of the Union. See Constitution Article 1, Section 9, Clause 5, which prohibits 7 taxes on exports from states of the Union.
- 8 2. Congress cannot tax activities within a state that don’t involve foreign commerce, because the states are Sovereign and 9 their power over exclusively internal taxation is exclusive, which is also called “plenary”.

10 *“It is no longer open to question that the general government, unlike the states, Hammer v. Dagenhart, 247
 11 U.S. 251, 275, 38 S.Ct. 529, 3 A.L.R. 649, Ann.Cas.1918E 724, possesses no inherent power in respect of the 12 internal affairs of the states; and emphatically not with regard to legislation.”
 13 [Carter v. Carter Coal Co., 298 U.S. 238, 56 S.Ct. 855 (1936)]*

- 14 3. Article 1, Section 8, Clause 3 of the Constitution authorizes the regulation of foreign and interstate commerce, but not 15 INTRAsate commerce. This is called the “Commerce Clause”.

16 *“And in Railroad Co. v. Husen, 95 U.S. 474, Mr. Justice STRONG, delivering the opinion of the court, said
 17 that 'the police power of a state cannot obstruct foreign commerce or interstate commerce beyond the 18 necessity for its exercise; and, under color of it, objects not within its scope cannot be secured at the expense
 19 of the protection afforded by the federal constitution.'”
 20 [New Orleans Gas Company v. Louisiana Light Company, 115 U.S. 650 (1885)]*

- 21 4. Because Congress has the power to regulate foreign and interstate commerce under Article 1, Section 8, Clause 3 of the 22 Constitution, then it can require all those legal “persons” who engage in such regulated and licensed activities to obtain
 23 a “license”. Receipt of such a license conveys a “privilege” and constitutes an act of volunteering to pay taxes relating 24 to the regulated activity. In that sense, excise taxes are voluntary and avoidable. Those who don’t want to engage in 25 the licensed activities aren’t subject to the tax. The purpose of paying such legitimate and constitutional taxes is 26 ONLY to pay for the cost of regulating the activity so that the public is not harmed. Regulation cannot be done 27 without taxation and the two always go together.
- 28 5. Article 1, Section 8, Clause 1 of the Constitution requires that all indirect taxes must be “uniform”, which means that 29 the same percentage rate must apply throughout all states of the Union. The reason is to promote “equal protection of 30 the laws”.
- 31 6. An indirect excise tax is not a tax on “income” per se, but on the earnings in connection with exercise of the privileged 32 activity. The amount of tax is measured by the “income” derived from the activity, which is actually defined as the 33 “profit”.

34 *“The income tax is, therefore, not a tax on income as such. It is an excise tax with respect to certain activities
 35 and privileges which is measured by reference to the income which they produce. The income is not the subject
 36 of the tax: it is the basis for determining the amount of the tax.”
 37 [Congressional Record from March 27, 1943, p. 2580, Statement by F. Morse Hubbard, former legislative 38 draftsman for the Treasury Department]*

- 39 7. If Congress attempts to tax commerce within states that is not connected with foreign or interstate commerce, then it is 40 competing with the state and taxing the same object, which the U.S. Supreme Court said it cannot do:

41 *“Two governments acting independently of each other cannot exercise the same power for the same object.”
 42 [Fox v. The State of Ohio, 46 U.S. 410, 5 Howard 410, 12 L.Ed. 213 (1847)]*

43 *“Congress is authorized to lay and collect taxes, and to pay the debts, and provide for the common defence
 44 and general welfare of the United States. This does not interfere with the power of the States to tax
 45 [internally] for the support of their own governments; nor is the exercise of that power by the States [to tax
 46 INTERNALLY], an exercise of any portion of the power that is granted to the United States [to tax
 47 EXTERNALLY]. In imposing taxes for State purposes, they are not doing what Congress is empowered to 48 do. Congress is not empowered to tax for those purposes which are within 49 the exclusive province of the States. When, then, each government
 50 exercises the power of taxation, neither is exercising the power
 51 of the other. But, when a State proceeds to regulate commerce with foreign nations, or among the* several States, it is exercising the very power that is granted to Congress, [22 U.S. 1, 200] and is doing the very thing which Congress is authorized to do. There is no analogy, then, between the power of taxation and the power of regulating commerce. "

[Gibbons v. Ogden, 22 U.S. 1 (1824)]

5.1.7 Direct Taxes Defined<sup>14</sup>

When any tax includes all the following elements, it is a direct tax:

1. Either it places a tax on the whole of something because of ownership and falls on the owner of the thing taxed, or it is a tax on a species of property or on a natural person, a tax on the existence of the thing taxed.
2. The thing or property or person taxed is diminished by the tax.
3. The tax cannot be shifted. For instance, you are not a corporate manufacturer selling products who can shift the burden of the tax to the ultimate consumers by raising the price of the end product.
4. It is not a tax on consumption, nor a tax on an identified activity, nor a tax on a privilege, nor a tax on the happening of an event.

Any tax that does not satisfy these elements is not a direct tax and is therefore an indirect tax. Generally, a tax on gross receipts is a direct tax while a tax on net income (profit) is an indirect tax under the Constitution. Consequently, the Supreme Court went too far in the Pollock v. Farmers' Loan & Trust Co., 157 U.S. 429 (1895) decision, as a tax on the net income of real estate is not a tax on the ownership of the real estate. Income from real estate is the fruit of the invested capital; it is the net. It may be severed from the capital leaving the underlying investment whole. When only income (profit) is taxed, the underlying investment is not diminished. The tax on the income from real estate may be shifted to those who pay the rents. The tax on the income from real estate may not even be payable by the owner of the real estate if there were some kind of management arrangement in place where the owner does not receive the income stream. Nor is it a tax on the existence of the real estate, as the amount of the tax is measured by the degree to which the property is successfully managed. It does not fall on the ownership of the real estate. A successfully managed building may pay a lot of tax while an identical building next door, that is poorly managed, might not pay any tax at all. Clearly the Pollock tax was not levied on the ownership nor the value of the building. Tax in the Pollock Case was an indirect tax and the Supreme Court went too far in linking an inherently indirect income tax with the source of the income. The boundary line between the two being that point where the underlying asset is diminished by the tax. The purpose of the 16th Amendment was to overturn Pollock.

The first apportioned direct tax we are aware of was imposed by Congress during the Civil War and is found in Volume 37 of the Statutes at Large. Below is a link to that original enactment that you can use to show how the Constitutional requirement for apportionment was implemented the first time it was used:

Statutes at Large, Volume 12, pp. 292-313

<http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/CitesByTopic/DirectTax-12Stat292-313.pdf>

The above apportioned direct tax was enacted on August 5, 1861 and repealed following the end of the Civil War by the Act of June 30, 1864, Statutes at Large, Volume 13, Ch. 173, section 173, page 304. The amount was $20 million and 12 Stat 294 bottom of the page shows how it was apportioned. The tax was extended once to April 1, 1865, per Statutes at Large, July 1, 1862, Volume 12, Chapter 119, page 489. 12 Stat 297 Section 13 says that the tax is apportioned on all real estate, and 12 Stat. 304 says:

"That it shall not be lawful to make distraint of the tools or implements of a trade or profession, beasts of the plough necessary for the cultivation of improved lands, arms, or household furniture, or apparel necessary for a family."
[12 Stat. 304, Statutes at Large, 37th Congress, 1st Session]

The most fascinating and impassioned legal definition of "direct taxes" we have found appears in the Congressional Record and was presented by Congressman Reeves of New York on June 2, 1870. Below is his very lucid definition of "direct taxes", and why the income tax that is mis-enforced by the IRS is not authorized by the Constitution. We have highlighted the important parts to emphasize them:

1 Income tax.
2 REMARKS OF HON. H. A. REEVES, OF NEW YORK,
3 IN THE House OF REPRESENTATIVES,
4 June 2, 1870,

5 On the bill (H.R. No. 2015) to reduce internal taxes,
6 and for other purposes.

7 Mr. REEVES. Mr. Speaker, I desire, in as brief a manner as possible, to state some considerations which
8 constrain me to vote for the motion of my colleague [Air. MCCARTHY] to strike out the provisions of this bill
9 relating to the income tax. Having on yesterday voted to reduce this tax from five to three per cent., I am
10 unwilling to let that vote stand open to the inference that I approve the principle of such a tax, and merely favor
11 its reduction to a lower figure from prudential or political motives.

12 I oppose its theory and its practice, its principle as well as its policy, and shall so vote. The main controlling 13 reason that sways my judgment is one to which comparatively little attention, incidental allusion only, has been
14 given in the discussion on either side of this question, as, indeed, unhappily seems to be the case with many 15 other questions that come before this House. It relates to the constitutional power of Congress to enact such a
16 law. The fact that it was enacted by a previous Congress, and has continued in force from that time to this,
17 annually extorting vast sums of money from the pockets of "a favored few," whom the caprice of fortune
18 happened to have endowed with a surplus of filthy lucre over and above an arbitrary limit, and with the rare
19 honesty to tell the truth when pressed in the close embrace of the internal revenue's "Black Maria," does not in 20 the least remove this constitutional difficulty, does not confer on the present Congress the smallest modicum of 21 new power, and does not in any degree lessen the duty incumbent on all honest legislators to carefully examine
22 the warrant and measure of the power they are invited to exercise. We have before us in the pending bill
23 provisions for reenacting and enforcing the income tax substantially in the same form and upon the same basis
24 as when it was first created by the fiat of Congress.

25 The increase in the amount of exemption from ten to fifteen hundred dollars, which is the only really new
26 feature in this bill, while it diminishes the number of those upon whom the law takes effect, does not alter or
27 affect the principle or lack of principle involved in its original enactment. If from the first it was a
28 usurpation, void of any constitutional authority, it remains just the same now, for the Constitution has not in 29 the interim been "amended" so as to bestow on Congress any new grant of power in respect to taxation.
30 What, then, did and does the Constitution provide touching this vital matter of laying and collecting taxes,
31 this supreme power over the purse of the people, second only in the attributes of delegated authority to that
32 control over the lives of the people which results from the undoubted right to declare war and conclude peace
33 ? Does the Constitution authorize Congress to levy a tax on incomes?

34 I maintain that it does not; and I am persuaded that had this question been fairly presented to the Supreme 35 Court of the United States, judicially constituted, it would have been definitely settled in the negative. What 36 says the Constitution upon the subject of taxation? There are but four places in the Constitution, and none in
37 the articles of amendment thereto, where the subject of taxation is treated, namely, clause three of section
38 two of article one; clause one of section eight of article one; clauses four and five of section nine of article
39 one; and clause two of section ten of article one. A careful analysis and comparison of these provisions
40 leaves no doubt on my mind that the existing tax on incomes, which it is proposed to reenact, does not fall
41 within the enumerated or clearly-implied powers of Congress, and is therefore absolutely void. Let us
42 examine these various provisions of the Constitution in the order in which they stand in that instrument.

43 The third clause of section two of the first article reads as follows:

44 "Representatives and direct taxes shall be apportioned among the several States which 45 may be included within this Union according to their respective numbers, which shall 46 be determined by adding to the whole number of free persons, including those bound to 47 service for a term of years, and excluding Indians not taxed, three fifths of all other 48 persons."

49 The rest of the clause relates to the mode of taking the census, &c. This is an affirmative and peremptory
50 regulation of the mode of levying direct taxes, and commands that they shall in all cases be apportioned
51 among the States according to population. Section eight, which specifies the particular powers of Congress,
52 the primary powers from which secondary ones are implied, under the provision that Congress shall have the 53 right "to make all laws which shall be necessary and proper for carrying into execution the foregoing 54 powers," in its first clause says:

55 "To lay and collect taxes, duties, imposts, and excises; to pay the debts and provide for 56 the common defense and general welfare of the United States; but all duties, imposts,
57 and excises shall be uniform throughout the United States."

58 This is an explicit limitation as to duties, imposts, and excises, that their operation shall be uniform
59 throughout the country, and the reason that the word "taxes" does not occur in the limitation. as it does in

1 the grant of power to lay and collect, is manifestly because of the distinction already made between direct and
 2 indirect taxes, the former of which had been ordered to be apportioned " among the several States"
 3 according to population, while the latter alone were to be made "uniform throughout the United States."

4 Duties are charges laid upon goods exported, imported, or consumed;
 5 imposts are charges laid upon products of industry, and are generally
 6 applied only to commodities when imported into a country; and excises
 7 are charges laid upon franchises or licenses to carry on particular lines
 8 of trade or branches of business. Congress has the clear constitutional
 9 right to lay and collect charges of these sorts; but if it does so the law
 10 must have a uniform operation in all the States; there must be no
 11 exceptional privileges to one section, no favoritism to one class; all 12 sections and all classes must share alike in the burdens as well as the 13 benefits of the General Government. Congress also has, under this same 14 clause, an equally clear right to "lay and collect taxes," meaning by 15 that significant little word, "direct" taxes, for no other are referred to in 16 the Constitution; but it is bound to see that such taxes, whenever laid 17 and collected, shall be "apportioned among the several States according 18 to their respective numbers."

19 Section nine, which specifically circumscribes, defines, and restrains the powers of Congress, in its fourth
 20 clause ordains :

21 "No capitation or other direct tax shall be laid, unless in proportion to the census or 22 enumeration hereinbefore directed to be taken."

23 This is a repetition, with redoubled emphasis, of the restriction contained in the third clause of the second
 24 section, before referred to, and makes it absolutely certain that no direct tax can be levied by Congress except 25 in pro-portion to population. Clause five of section nine forbids Congress from levying a tax or duty "on any 26 article exported from any State." Clause two of section ten prohibits the State from laying "any imposts or 27 duties on imports or exports, except what may be absolutely necessary for executing its inspection laws;" and 28 also from levying any "duty of tonnage."

29 These are all the provisions of the Constitution in relation to taxation.
 30 Do they severally or collectively authorize Congress today a tax on 31 incomes? What kind of a tax is it ? If a direct tax, within the meaning of 32 the Constitution, it must be apportioned according to population. Is it
 33 thus apportioned? Nobody so pretends.

34 A reference to the last published report of the 35 Commissioner of Internal Revenue will demonstrate that it was not apportioned according to population. From 36 that suggestive document it appears that the State of New York paid on account of the income tax for the year
 37 1868 the sum of $10,726,769 21, while the State of Ohio paid for the same period $2,039,588 99. By the census of 1860 New York had a population of 3,880,735, while Ohio had a population of 2,339,511.

38 Assuming that this income tax had been apportioned according to population, and that the amount collected
 39 from the people of Ohio was in just accordance with the unit of apportionment, whatever that might be, then the 40 amount levied upon the people of New York should have been less than three and a half millions instead of 41 almost ten and three quarters millions ; or, to take the reverse of the hypothesis, if the amount collected from
 42 the people of New York was according to the unit of measurement, Ohio ought to have paid nearly six and a 43 half millions instead of a little over two millions. Similar analogies, or antitheses rather, yet more striking than 44 that afforded by this parallel between New York and Ohio, might be drawn from the same full repertory of 45 official testimony to the inequality, the injustice, and the utter incompatibility of this tax with the provision of 46 the Constitution that all direct taxes shall be according to numbers; but it would be useless. No one contends
 47 that the income tax is apportioned according to numbers, and no proofs are needed to show that it is not so
 48 apportioned. It only remains to consider whether it is a direct tax within the meaning of the Constitution.

49 To the determination of such a question no surer test can be applied
 50 than that which is supplied by the Constitution itself, to wit: can the tax
 51 be apportioned among the several States according to numbers? I

1 maintain that it can and ought to be so apportioned, if laid at all; and 2 this appears to be clear from a consideration of the important and most 3 suggestive words among the several States," in connection with and 4 direct sequence to the words " shall be apportioned." These words are 5 evidently inseparable, and in any complete view of the question must be 6 taken together. Taking them together, they can be construed in no other 7 sense than as forming the substantive proposition of the sentence, which 8 is qualified as a whole, and not in its separate parts, by the subsequent 9 words "according to their respective numbers." It follows, therefore, that 10 any tax which is susceptible of apportionment, not among individual
11 citizens of the States, but among the States themselves, in just proportion 12 to their respective population, is a direct tax, and must be so apportioned
13 as the Constitution directs.

14 Is the income tax of that character? The only ground for doubt is the element of uncertainty as to the amount
15 which such a tax may yield. Because the net income of the country cannot be determined in advance, and 16 because we could not tell beforehand what the tax arbitrarily proposed to be assessed against that income
17 would amount to, it seems to have been assumed that the tax could not be apportioned according to population.
18 If the Constitution provided for an apportionment among individuals this would be true, and would constitute a 19 valid defense of the tax against any such objection; but we have seen that the apportionment must be "among 20 the several States," in the doing of which there would be found no impossibility and no serious difficulty. All the 21 data requisite for a fair, safe, and correct estimate of the income reasonably certain to accrue from the active
22 business and the invested wealth of the country are at hand, and are sufficient to fix the aggregate revenue to be
23 derived from that source. This done, the apportionment becomes simply a matter of arithmetic, of easy
24 calculation.

25 If the maximum sum of $25,000,000 were to be raised under the head of a tax on incomes the proportion which 26 the population of any State bears to the whole population fixes the amount to be collected from that State. Then,
27 if we remit the collection to the States, abolishing the Federal machinery now in use, each State will collect its 28 share in whatever mode it may prefer, and pay over to the Federal Treasury the whole sum assessed upon it,
29 free from any deductions on account of expense of collection-certainly a great saving over the present system,
30 which costs nearly or quite twenty-five per cent. This would be a truly equal and equitable, a truly effective and
31 economical method of direct taxation for Federal purposes; it would comply strictly with the constitutional
32 requirement ; it would exactly accord with the spirit and intent of the framers of that instrument, whose great
33 object was to devise a scheme of Government the operation of which should, above every other attribute, bear
34 equally upon all the people of all the States.

35 Taxation, or the power of compelling the people to part with some of their possessions for the purpose of 36 being protected in the enjoyment of the remainder, was a subject which they had pondered deeply and had
37 mastered in all its comprehensive extent and bearing. All the ordinary protection which organized society
38 needs being afforded by the existing State governments, they had only to provide means for enabling the 39 Federal agency of the States to perform its intended functions. This they did in the clauses of the 40 Constitution which I have cited. In my judgment no candid mind can examine those provisions and compare
41 them with the whole scope and body of the instrument without coming to the conclusion that the power
42 conferred on Congress to lay and collect taxes is both expressly and impliedly limited to " direct" taxes ; that,
43 in brief, the word tax, wherever it occurs in the Constitution, means a "direct" tax, and that, as equality (the 44 grand, distinguishing element of the Constitution) could only be maintained by dividing the burdens it
45 imposes among all the States according to population, it was appointed so to be done in terms as explicit as 46 could well be used.

47 No one then dreamed of spreading a network of Federal tax-gatherers
48 over the land more numerous and more wasting than the "swarm"
49 which the colonists complained had been sent from Great Britain to "
50 harass the people and eat out their substance ;" it was never 51 contemplated that Congress should lay its grasping hands on the 52 earnings of business or the gains of capital for any purpose whatever, 53 and certainly nobody dared imagine that, should such a bold stretch of 54 Federal authority ever be exercised, it would seek to execute itself

without regard to the clear directions of the very instrument on which alone it could rely for its warrant.

I stop not now to discuss the flagrant injustice of a tax on the earnings of business, be they more or less ; the inequality of a tax on the gains of accumulated capital which, how-ever fair and just in theory, is incapable of being reduced to practical effect without inflicting gross wrongs on individuals; the inquisitorial, odious, and tyrannical character of an income tax, however apportioned and levied ; nor any of the other grave objections which have been so well presented and illustrated by others. For me it is enough to be convinced that such a tax is at variance with the spirit and letter of the Constitution. That view of the question once fixed in my mind, I am concluded from any incidental consideration of advantages or disadvantages that may attend the proposed measure. But one course lies before me, and that leads straight to the vote I shall cast.

In this connection I only need to glance at another aspect of the question confirmatory of the one I have already taken and susceptible of being put into the compact and concise form of a syllogism whose cogency countervails the necessity for further argument.

*Income is derived from two sources, earnings and invested capital. In either case, when considered as a basis for taxation, it is inseparably associated with, and in greater or less part is made up from the rents, gains, or profits of land. A tax on incomes is therefore, in substance and in fact, a tax on land. There may be, as we know there are, individuals who do not own a foot of land, and a tax on whose income would in no sense involve the idea of taxing lands; but this can be said of a few only out of the mass of those whose incomes are subject to tax; indeed a large, if not the largest, part of the taxed incomes in this country comes from the rents, gains, or profits of land. Now, it has been distinctly and repeatedly held that a tax on lands is a "direct" tax such as the Constitution requires to be apportioned "among the several States," as much so as the capitation tax itself. Hence, the income tax, involving as it inevitably does the principle of taxing lands, is a "direct" tax. Being a direct tax, it must be apportioned as the Constitution commands. But it is not so apportioned. Therefore the tax is unconstitutional, and should be immediately abrogated.

I know, Mr. Speaker, it may appear presumptuous for one little versed in the subtleties of dialectics, much less in the maxims and canons of constitutional interpretation, to essay an argument of this kind, based solely upon a construction of the Constitution. But I am profoundly impressed with the belief that the great men who framed our Constitution meant to make it so plain that even the most unlettered need not err as to its meaning, and that one of its cardinal merits is this very fact that they did succeed in imbedding the immortal principles of civil and religious liberty, which filled their own minds, in language at once so simple, so perspicuous, so nervous, and so strong as could neither be washed away by sophistry nor broken down by the weight of glosses and critical emendations.

*It is in the light of this plain, common sense understanding of the Constitution that I have attempted to explore its meaning with respect to the question of taxation. I also know that it is unfashionable and unusual in this revolutionary period to even refer to a document whose precepts, once sacred, have now become almost obsolete; that he who avows devotion to the fundamental source of all power in a free government, the will of the people embodied in a written constitution, is too apt to be stigmatized as obstructive, unprogressive, old-fogyish, or by still harsher terms ; that partisan malevolence even sees " disloyalty" in a text and "treason" in a paragraph from the grand gospel of our American freedom.

Be it so. I gladly accept the odium and proudly wear the brand which attaches to the unwavering few who still uplift the banner of "the Constitution as it was;" the integrity of the Union which our fathers established, and which, administered in the spirit of its authors, for seventy years poured manifold blessings upon all the people; the sovereignty of the States as the creators of the new political system then established, which, allowed to distribute harmoniously its beneficent influences, expanded the few and feeble members of the Confederacy into the august proportions of a mighty republic of republics; the supremacy and undivided rule of the superior white race-in fine, all the glorious truths of the earlier and purer days of American democracy, before "new lights" had risen to shed their baleful glare over a land till then united, free, and happy; before sectional passions had been organized to do their devil's work of alienation and distrust; before fanaticism and folly had combined to rend asunder the silken cords of

1 fraternal affection and mutual esteem which held us together with bands
 2 infinitely stronger than "hooks of steel."

3 In those days debt and taxation, bonds and bondholders, were figments
 4 of the imagination, not the tremendous realities which now confront us ;
 5 in those days peace, real peace, prosperity, real prosperity, liberty, real
 6 liberty, sat triply throned in our midst and held their scepter of bounty
 7 and blessing over thirty million freemen. If to wish those halcyon days

15 To our knowledge, the question of whether or not a tax on a man's wage (not "wage" as defined in the Internal Revenue
 16 Code, 26 C.F.R. §31.3401(a)-3(a), but "wage" as defined in its common or more general sense) or salary is an indirect tax
 17 or a direct tax has never been before the Supreme Court, except in the case of Evans v. Gore, 253 U.S. 245 (1920). Evans
 18 v. Gore was a 1920 case about a federal judge who was having his government salary diminished by an income tax and the 19 Supreme Court ruled the tax was unconstitutional. But the question in this case related to a constitutional provision
 20 affecting only federal judges. Since most of us reading this book are not federal judges or public officers in the 21 government, Evans v. Gore does not affect us. But the Court has discussed the issue three times in its dicta.

22 The first time was in the Hylton v. United States, 3 U.S. 171 (1796), where they quoted with approval Adam Smith's book
 23 entitled Wealth of Nations in stating that a tax on a man's revenue is a direct tax. The second time was in the Springer v.
 24 United States, 102 U.S. 586 (1881), where Springer failed to put this question directly in front of the court. It is unfortunate
 25 that Springer made numerous strategic errors in prosecuting his case. The third time was in Pollock v. Farmers' Loan &
 26 Trust Co., 157 U.S. 529 (1895), where the court said, quoting with approval Springer:

27 "While this language is broad enough to cover interest as well as the professional earnings, the case would
 28 have been more significant as a precedent if the distinction had been brought out in the report and commented
 29 on in arriving at judgment, for a tax on professional receipts might be treated as an excise or duty, and 30 therefore indirect, when a tax on the income of personalty might be held to be direct."
 31 [Pollock v. Farmers' Loan & Trust Co., 157 U.S. 429, 579 (1895)]

32 The reality of a tax on a man's labor was very well described by Senator Bailey of Texas as he debated the income tax
 33 amendment [16th Amendment]. Senator Bailey had one of the more vocal voices in this debate. As a Democrat he was an 34 avid supporter of the 16th Amendment. Here is his statement:

35 "I believe in earning an income by personal service every man consumes a part of his principal, and that fact
 36 ought always to be taken into consideration. The man who has his fortune invested in securities may find in a
 37 hundred years, if he spent his income, that the fortune still intact, but the lawyer or the physician or the man
 38 engaged in other personal employment is spending his principal in earning his income. That fact ought under 39 every just system of income taxation to be recognized and provided against."
 40 [44 Cong.Rec. 4007 (1909)]

41 A tax on the labor of a man, whether or not he is a construction worker or a rocket scientist, is a tax on the man. It is a
 42 species of a capitation tax. Adam Smith described it as a capitation tax and a direct tax. It diminishes the man as the man
 43 consumes part of his capital in earning his wage or salary. It is a direct tax. Such a tax in the post 16th Amendment era
 44 must be apportioned among the 50 states of the Union before it can be collected from those who, absent a privilege, work
 45 and live within the several States of the Union.

46 A tax on a privilege, although measured by income, is not an income tax either. It is an excise tax. The tax of the Spreckels
 47 Sugar Case from the Spanish-American War and the Corporate Excise Tax of 1909 are such taxes. The 16th Amendment
 48 provides no authority for such a tax. These taxes are levied under the authority of the original Constitution, not the 16th
 49 Amendment.

1 An income tax within the meaning of the 16th Amendment is a tax on net income (profit). It is not necessarily a tax on a
 2 privilege nor is it necessarily a tax on a source. There are many species of income taxes. An income tax can be direct or it
 3 can be indirect. It would be a whole lot less confusing if we would stop calling a gross receipts tax an income tax. It is not,
 4 as the tax does not fall on income, but instead falls on the source of the income. Any tax that falls on the source of income
 5 is a direct tax.

6 The table below summarizes the types of income taxes found within the United States in relation to the chronology
 7 associated with both the 16th Amendment and the Pollock v. Farmers' Loan and Trust case so as to make the meanings of 8 "Direct tax" and "Indirect tax" perfectly clear:

9 Table 5-8: Species of income taxes in the United States<sup>15</sup>

10 5.1.8 The Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A is an excise tax

11 The supreme Court has ruled several times that an "income tax" is, and always has been, an indirect or excise tax. With or 12 without the Sixteenth Amendment, this HAS ALWAYS been the case. Because direct taxes are taxes on natural persons
 13 (biological people) and property, then indirect taxes are taxes on other than real people. Therefore, the income tax can't, by 14 definition, apply to you and me as a person.

15 Excise taxes are taxes on privileges granted by the government ONLY to artificial entities other than natural persons, such 16 as corporations, partnerships. Public officers of the U.S. government in receipt of the federal privileges can also be "subject
 17 to" subtitle A income/excise taxes but only if they VOLUNTEER because there is no statute making them liable. Likewise,
 18 these same public officers are the main ONLY persons defined in Subtitle C (Employment Taxes) of the Internal Revenue
 19 Code as "employees". Excise taxes are also commonly referred to in legal circles as "privilege taxes". Here is the 20 definition of "excise tax" from Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, on page 563:

21 "excise tax: A tax imposed on the performance of an act, the engaging in an occupation, or the enjoyment of a*
 22 privilege. Rapa v. Haines, Ohio Comm.Pl., 101 N.E.2d. 733, 735. A tax on the manufacture, sale, or use of* 23 *goods or on the carrying on of an occupation or activity, or a tax on the transfer of property. In current usage
 24 the term has been extended to include various license fees and practically every internal revenue tax except
 25 the income tax (e.g. federal alcohol and tobacco excise taxes, I.R.C. §5001 et seq.)*
 26 [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 563]

27 Did you notice the phrase: "In current usage the term has been extended to include various license fees and practically
 28 *every internal revenue tax EXCEPT THE INCOME TAX." Well then we should be asking ourselves WHAT KIND OF 29 TAX IS THE INCOME TAX from among the five constitutional taxes listed in table 5-1? You can't tell by reading the 30 legal dictionary, and this is no accident, friends. They are trying to hide the truth!

31 Furthermore, that last part of the definition from above "or a tax on the transfer of property" is an embellishment and a
 32 self-serving distortion of the definition of "excise" by our dishonest government that was not part of the original
 33 Constitution, or any supreme court ruling before about 1900. The addition of that phrase is where most courts think they
 34 get their authority to impose income taxes on Americans domiciled in states of the Union, and it was not part of the intent
 35 of the founding fathers, but is an insidious addition by the unethical legal profession and politicians to illegally extend the 36 jurisdiction of our the federal government to impose income taxes against Americans in the states of the Union. We cover
 37 this subject in excruciating detail in section 6.9.4 entitled "Judicial Conspiracy to Protect the Income Tax: The Changing 38 Definition of 'Direct, Indirect, and Excise Taxes'". To pique your interest at this point, below is the definition of "excises"

<sup>15</sup> Adapted from Constitutional Income: Do You Have Any?; Phil Hart, ISBN 0-9711880-0-9, pp. 172-173.

1 from Bouvier's Law Dictionary, Revised Sixth Edition, 1856, which was the law dictionary used by the U.S. supreme Court
2 back in 1856:

3 EXCISES. This word is used to signify an inland imposition, paid sometimes upon the consumption of the 4 commodity, and frequently upon the retail sale. 1 Bl. Com. 318; 1 Tuck. Bl. Com. Appx. 341; Story, Const. Sec.
5 950.

7 Do you see "transfer of property" anywhere here? You will note that the definition from Bouvier's Law dictionary would,
8 on the surface, appear to create the impression that 26 U.S.C. Subtitle A income taxes are NOT excise taxes, but this is not
9 true because as you will find out next, even the Congressional Research Service calls income taxes indirect excise taxes.

10 As you will learn by reading the following:

Rebutted Version of Congressional Research Service Report 97-59A, Family Guardian Fellowship
<http://famguardian.org/PublishedAuthors/Govt/CRS/CRS-97-59A-rebuts.pdf>

11 . . .the U.S. Congress calls the income tax an indirect excise tax. To make things even more confusing, the IRS contends
12 that the Sixteenth Amendment authorizes a direct, unapportioned tax, as ruled by the circuit courts.

13 So let's summarize all the confusing and contradictory propaganda and claims of the various legal authorities and sources
14 below for your benefit to help clarify things:

The first thing you notice about the table above is that the IRS definition of income taxes as being direct taxes relies exclusively on Circuit court rulings but completely ignores and overrides the rulings of the Supreme Court on this subject! However, the IRS' own Internal Revenue Manual says the following about this matter:

Internal Revenue Manual (I.R.M.), Section 4.10.7.2.9.8 (05/14/99)

1 "Decisions made at various levels of the court system are considered to be interpretations of tax laws and may be used by either examiners or taxpayers to support a position.

2. Certain court cases lend more weight to a position than others. A case decided by the U.S. Supreme Court becomes the law of the land and takes precedence over decisions of lower courts. The Internal Revenue Service must follow Supreme Court decisions. For examiners, Supreme Court decisions have the same weight as the Code.

3. Decisions made by lower courts, such as Tax Court, District Courts, or Claims Court, are binding on the Service only for the particular taxpayer and the years litigated. Adverse decisions of lower courts do not require the Service to alter its position for other taxpayers."

What this means is that the IRS is obligated to quote the Supreme Court in all cases and ignore the lower courts in determining general tax liabilities of all Americans, and especially where there is a conflict between the two. The Supreme Court is the only court whose rulings can universally apply to all "taxpayers" (which incidentally doesn't necessarily mean all Americans, as you will find out later in section 5.3.1). All other rulings of lower courts apply only to specific cases and not generally to all Americans. Therefore, we must conclude that the Congressional and Supreme Court views are to take precedent and that the income tax, when it is an enforced tax, is an indirect excise tax. The IRS pushes deliberate misinformation on this subject only because it benefits them financially to do so. This amounts to a clear conflict of interest, and a violation of their own IRM. Now if the IRS and the Congress, who are in two different branches of the same federal government can't even agree on what the income tax is, then what are us Americans supposed to think? Don't you think this creates enough confusion in the minds of law abiding Americans such that the Internal Revenue Code or at least the enforcement of it, ought to be declared "void for vagueness" as we point out later in section 5.10? We do! This seeming contradiction also provides compelling evidence of the existence of a "judicial conspiracy to protect the income tax" at the circuit court level which we thoroughly explain later in section 6.6. Here is what one federal court said on this subject:

1 "Lower court owes deference to higher court and ordinarily has no authority to reject doctrine developed by
2 higher court."
3 [United States Ex. Rel. Shore v. O'Leary, 833 F.2d. 663 (7th Cir. 1987)]

4 To conclude our in-depth investigation, here is our definition of what kind of "taxes" Subtitles A and C income taxes are:

5 *If 26 U.S.C. Subtitle A Income Taxes are ENFORCED against artificial entities like "persons" (in the legal 6 sense, which aren't the same as "natural born persons") through distraint (penalties, interest, etc), then they
7 are indirect excise taxes.*

8 Below are just a few citations from U.S. supreme Court Rulings over the years that conclusively demonstrate that income
9 taxes imposed through FORCE or DISTRAINT, are always excise taxes made on privileges, and that DIRECT TAXES on 10 individuals rather than states. The target of the enforcement can only be those artificial entities that have elected or 11 volunteered to engage in privileged taxable activities such as foreign commerce or a "trade or business".

12 *"Nothing can be clearer than that what the constitution intended to guard against was the exercise by the 13 general government of the power of directly taxing persons and property within any state through a majority
14 made up from the other states. It is true that the effect of requiring direct taxes to be apportioned among the 15 states in proportion to their population is necessarily that the amount of taxes on the individual [157 U.S. 429,
16 583] taxpayer in a state having the taxable subject-matter to a larger extent in proportion to its population
17 than another state has, would be less than in such other state; but this inequality must be held to have been 18 contemplated, and was manifestly designed to operate to restrain the exercise of the power of direct taxation to 19 extraordinary emergencies, and to prevent an attack upon accumulated property by mere force of numbers. "*

20 ...

21 "Here I close my opinion. I could not say less in view of questions of such gravity that they go down to the very 22 foundations of the government. If the provisions of the Constitution can be set aside by an act of Congress, 23 where is the course of usurpation to end?"

24 *The present assault upon capital is but the beginning. It will be but the stepping stone to others larger and
25 more sweeping, until our political contest will become war of the poor against the rich; a war of growing 26 intensity and bitterness."*
27 [Pollock v. Farmers' Loan & Trust Co., 157 U.S. 429, 158 U.S. 601 (1895).]

28
29 *"[Excise taxes are]...taxes laid upon the manufacture, sale, or consumption of commodities within the country, 30 upon licenses to pursue occupations, and upon corporate privileges."
31 [Flint v. Stone Tracy Co., 220 U.S. 107 (1911)]*

32
33 *...Moreover in addition the Conclusion reached in the Pollock Case did not in any degree involve holding that
34 income taxes generically and necessarily came within the class of direct taxes on property, but on the contrary
35 recognized the fact that taxation on income was in its nature an excise entitled to be enforced as such unless 36 and until it was concluded that to enforce it would amount to accomplishing the result which the requirement as 37 to apportionment of direct taxation was adopted to prevent, in which case the duty would arise to disregard 38 form and consider substance alone and hence subject the tax to the regulation as to apportionment which 39 otherwise as an excise would not apply to it.*

40 ...the Amendment demonstrates that no such purpose was intended and on the contrary shows that it was drawn 41 with the object of maintaining the limitations of the Constitution and harmonizing their operation."

42 *...the [16th] Amendment contains nothing repudiating or challenging the ruling in the Pollock Case that the 43 word direct had a broader significance since it embraced also taxes levied directly on personal property
44 because of its ownership, and therefore the Amendment at least impliedly makes such wider significance a part
45 of the Constitution -- a condition which clearly demonstrates that the purpose was not to change the existing 46 interpretation except to the extent necessary to accomplish the result intended, that is, the prevention of the 47 resort to the sources from which a taxed income was derived in order to cause a direct tax on the income to 48 be a direct tax on the source itself and thereby to take an income tax out of the class of excises, duties and 49 imposts and place it in the class of direct taxes...*

50 *Indeed in the light of the history which we have given and of the decision is the Pollock Case and the ground
51 upon which the ruling in that case was based, there is no escape from the Conclusion that the Amendment was 52 drawn for the purpose of doing away for the future with the principle upon which the Pollock Case was*

1 decided, that is, of determining whether a tax on income was direct not by a consideration of the burden
 2 placed on the taxed income upon which it directly operated, but by taking into view the burden which
 3 resulted on the property from which the income was derived, since in express terms the Amendment provides
 4 that income taxes, from whatever source the income may be derived, shall not be subject to the regulation of 5 apportionment..."
 6 [Brushaber v. Union Pacific Railroad Co., 240 U.S. 1 (1916)]

 8 "[The 16h Amendment]...prohibited the ... power of income taxation possessed by Congress from the beginning 9 from being taken out of the category of indirect taxation to which it inherently belonged..."
 10 [Stanton v. Baltic Mining Co., 240 U.S. 103 (1916)]

11
 12 "After further consideration, we adhere to that view and accordingly hold that the Sixteenth Amendment does 13 not authorize or support the tax in question. " [A direct tax on salary income of a federal judge]
 14 [Evans v. Gore, 253 U.S. 245 (1920)]

15
 16 The Sixteenth Amendment must be construed in connection with the taxing clauses of the original Constitution
 17 and the effect attributed to them before the amendment was adopted. In Pollock v. Farmers' Loan & Trust Co.,
 18 158 U.S. 601, 15 Sup.Ct. 912, under the Act of August 27, 1894 (28 Stat. 509, 553, c. 349, 27), it was held that
 19 taxes upon rents and profits of real estate and upon returns from investments of personal property were in effect
 20 direct taxes upon the property from which such income arose, imposed by reason of ownership; and that
 21 Congress could not impose such taxes without apportioning them among the states according to population, as 22 required by article 1, 2, cl. 3, and section 9, cl. 4, of the original Constitution.

23 Afterwards, and evidently in recognition of the limitation upon the taxing power of Congress thus determined,
 24 the Sixteenth Amendment was adopted, in words lucidly expressing the object to be accomplished:

25 'The Congress shall have power to lay and collect taxes on incomes, from whatever source derived, without 26 apportionment among [252 U.S. 189, 206] the several states, and without regard to any census or 27 enumeration.'

28 As repeatedly held, this did not extend the taxing power to new subjects, but merely removed the necessity
 29 which otherwise might exist for an apportionment among the states of taxes laid on income. Brushaber v. Union
 32 38 Sup.Ct. 432.

33 A proper regard for its genesis, as well as its very clear language, requires also that this amendment shall not
 34 be extended by loose construction, so as to repeal or modify, except as applied to income, those provisions of 35 the Constitution that require an apportionment according to population for direct taxes upon property, real and 36 personal. This limitation still has an appropriate and important function, and is not to be overridden by 37 Congress or disregarded by the courts.

38 [...]

39 After examining dictionaries in common use (Bouv. L. D.; Standard Dict.; Webster's Internat. Dict.; Century
 40 Dict.), we find little to add to the succinct definition adopted in two cases arising under the Corporation Tax
 42 *Doyle v. Mitchell Bros. Co., 247 U.S. 179, 185, 38 S.Sup.Ct. 467, 469 [62 L.Ed. 1054]). 'Income may be
 43 defined as the gain derived from capital, from labor, or from both combined,' provided it be understood to 44 include profit gained through a sale or conversion of capital assets, to which it was applied in the Doyle
 45 Case, 247 U.S. 183, 185, 38 S.Sup.Ct. 467, 469 (62 L.Ed. 1054).

46 Brief as it is, it indicates the characteristic and distinguishing attribute of income essential for a correct
 47 solution of the present controversy. The government, although basing its argument upon the definition as 48 quoted, placed chief emphasis upon the word 'gain,' which was extended to include a variety of meanings; while
 49 the significance of the next three words was either overlooked or misconceived. 'Derived-from- capital'; 'the
 50 gain-derived-from-capital,' etc. Here we have the essential matter: not a gain accruing to capital; not a growth
 51 or increment of value in the investment; but a gain, a profit, something of exchangeable value, proceeding from 52 the property, severed from the capital, however invested or employed, and coming in, being 'derived'-that is,
 53 received or drawn by the recipient (the taxpayer) for his separate use, benefit and disposal- that is income
 54 derived from property. Nothing else answers the description.

1 [...]

2 Thus, from every point of view we are brought irresistibly to the conclusion that neither under the Sixteenth
3 Amendment nor otherwise has Congress power to tax without apportionment a true stock dividend made
4 lawfully and in good faith, or the accumulated profits behind it, as income of the stockholder. The Revenue Act
5 of 1916, in so far as it imposes a tax upon the stockholder because of such dividend, contravenes the provisions
6 of article 1, 2, cl. 3, and article 1, 9, cl. 4, of the Constitution, and to this extent is invalid, notwithstanding the 7 Sixteenth Amendment."

8 [Eisner v. Macomber, 252 U.S. 189 (1920)]

9 If you would like a more thorough treatment of this subject, we refer you to section 6.9.4 et seq. We don't have the space
10 to repeat ourselves here, especially because the treatment is so much more thorough in that section.

11 5.1.9 What type of "Tax" Are You Paying the IRS--Direct or Indirect?

12 There are still only two types of taxes allowed under the Constitution, direct and indirect. Here, as they say, is the sixty-
13 four dollar question. When you file IRS Form 1040, aside from whether or not it's the correct form for an American 14 working outside the federal zone to use, you're certainly not paying an indirect excise tax for the privilege of conducting
15 your private profession, are you? Wouldn't your employer be paying that instead of you?

16 Aren't you in fact paying an unapportioned direct tax based upon the amount of money you receive each year, according to 17 the tax tables? But that's not an indirect tax based upon an excise taxable activity identified under the Constitution, is it?
18 After all, even the 16th Amendment states:

19 "... a tax on income..from whatever source derived..."

20 doesn't it? According to the Supreme Court in the case of Pollock v. Farmers' Loan and Trust Company, 157 U.S. 429,
21 158 U.S. 601 (1895), the money you receive in exchange for your labor is your personal property and cannot be directly
22 taxed. They said it again earlier in 1825 as well:

23 "Every man has a natural right to the fruits of his own labor, is generally admitted; and no other person can 24 rightfully deprive him of those fruits, and appropriate them against his will ..."
25 [The Antelope, 23 U.S. 66, 10 Wheat 66, 6 L.Ed. 268 (1825)]

26 Maybe your State is sending you a bill each year for your share of your State's share of a constitutionally apportioned direct 27 tax? They aren't? So what are you paying?

28 Aren't you in fact paying a direct tax that has not been apportioned? It certainly looks that way, doesn't it? How does the 29 IRS get away with this? Why don't the federal judges speak up? Is it possible that the high officials of the IRS have been
30 so busy trying to convict everyone who objects to their gross violation of the Constitution that they haven't had time to read
31 the Brushaber case and other still standing Supreme Court Decisions? Or could they all be victims of outcome based 32 education and can't understand these court decisions? Or do you think that perhaps the current and former Secretaries of the 33 Treasury and Commissioners of Internal Revenue have read these decisions and just ignore them--and hope you won't 34 notice, or at least not object if you do?

35 Amazingly, the truth is that the IRS has never rebutted the Brushaber or Stanton decisions or any subsequent decisions of 36 the Supreme Court that declared income taxes to be indirect excise taxes, either. They also don't dare deal with the issue in 37 any of their propaganda publications such as the following:

Rebutted Version of the IRS "The Truth About Frivolous Tax Arguments", Family Guardian Fellowship
http://famguardian.org/PublishedAuthors/Govt/IRS/friv\_tax\_rebuts.pdf

38 Instead, in trying to sustain the income tax, the IRS has completely ignored these decisions and only quoted from District
39 and Circuit court cases that said what they wanted and ignored the rulings of the Supreme Court, in direct violation of their
40 own Internal Revenue Manual, section 4.10.7.2.9.8 and in contradiction to established precedent of the Supreme Court!<sup>16</sup>

<sup>16</sup> See Internal Revenue Manual (I.R.M.), Section 4.10.7.2.9.8 for the evidence.

The founding fathers understood the distinction between direct and indirect taxes. Here is what they said in the Federalist Papers that were the foundation of our Constitution. At the writing of these papers, the Congress had already ratified the Constitution and now ratification was put for vote before the American people. The Papers were written to encourage ratification of the new United States Constitution by the American people to replace the Articles of Confederation. The Papers convey very simply and exactly what the authors, Alexander Hamilton, James Madison, and John Jay explained to the American people about the meaning and content of the constitution for the united States of America:

Federalist Paper #15, 15 FP § 6:

"The existing Confederation's great and fundamental defect is the principle of LEGISLATION for STATES in their COLLECTIVE CAPACITIES rather than for the INDIVIDUALS living in the States. Although this principle does not apply to all the powers delegated to the Union, it pervades those on which the effectiveness of the rest depends. Except for the rule of apportionment, the United States has indefinite discretion to requisition men and money. But it has no authority to raise either directly from individual citizens of America." [Emph added]

So what are we missing here? How can the IRS legally enforce a direct unapportioned tax upon people in states of the Union? The answer is that they are the tax collection agency exclusively and only for the municipal government of the District of Columbia and they have no authority to operate in states of the Union. Treasury Order 150-02, in fact, reveals that the ONLY remaining Internal Revenue District that they can operate within is the District of Columbia. They are responsible for administering a system of excise taxation that is perfectly constitutional, because all of the taxable subjects maintain a domicile within the District of Columbia and not within states of the Union under 26 U.S.C. §911(d)(3). Somewhere along the way, you gave them permission to treat you as a person whose legal identity actually "resides" in the District of Columbia. See 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(39), which says effectively that if you file a form 1040, which is only authorized to be used by "citizens and residents of the United States", then you are treated as though you have a domicile in the District of Columbia by the federal courts. 26 U.S.C. §7408(d) contains the same provisions. In effect, you helped the IRS kidnap your legal identity and move it to the District of Columbia and thereby put you under the exclusive jurisdiction of the federal courts. If the IRS had told you the WHOLE truth in their publications, which is that you are neither a "citizen" nor a "resident" under any federal law and that the "United States" is defined as the District of Columbia in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10), then you never would have filed the wrong form, the 1040, to begin with. Receipt of this form by the IRS provided court-admissible evidence under penalty of perjury that you are the proper subject of an excise tax upon earnings of those holding "public office" within the District of Columbia. This condition or activity, by the way, is called a "trade or business" within the I.R.C., which is a "word of art" that means "public office".

If you submitted an IRS Form W-4 to a private employer outside of federal territorial jurisdiction, then you announced to the IRS that you are a federal "employee" domiciled in the District of Columbia under 26 C.F.R. §31.3401(c)-1 who is engaged in a taxable activity called a "trade or business". Note that the upper left corner of the W-4 says "EMPLOYEE Withholding Allowance Certificate". The EMPLOYEE is YOU, friends, and its' not the "employee" you think it is! Now do you know why they call it "the code"? It's encrypted and you have to decrypt it by looking up all the definitions. Do you think they are going to make it convenient to stop paying extortion money to them? Does the mafia do what you tell them to? By voluntarily signing that W-4 under penalty of perjury, you also consented to treat all of your earnings as "gross income" under the Internal Revenue Code.

Title 26
CHAPTER I
SUBCHAPTER C
PART 31
Subpart E
Sec. 31.3402(p)-1 Voluntary withholding agreements.

(a) In general. An employee and his employer may enter into an agreement under section 3402(b) to provide for the withholding of income tax upon payments of amounts described in paragraph (b)(1) of Sec. 31.3401(a)-3, made after December 31, 1970. An agreement may be entered into under this section only with respect to amounts which are includible in the gross income of the employee under section 61, and must be applicable to all such amounts paid by the employer to the employee. The amount to be withheld pursuant to an agreement under section 3402(p) shall be determined under the rules contained in section 3402 and the regulations thereunder. (b) Form and duration of agreement. (1)(i) Except as provided in subdivision (ii) of this subparagraph, an employee who desires to enter into an agreement under section 3402(p) shall furnish his employer with Form W-4 (withholding exemption certificate) executed in accordance with the provisions of section 3402(f) and the regulations thereunder. The furnishing of such Form W-4 shall constitute a request for withholding.

1 So when you filed that dastardly W-4, which was the wrong form, you gave the IRS permission to treat amounts earned at 2 your employer's place of business as taxable "gross income" under the Internal Revenue Code and which is connected with
 3 the "trade or business" franchise described in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26). What makes it taxable, is that you essentially
 4 volunteered to become a "taxpayer" by submitting that false IRS Form W-4. Signing and submitting that form made you
 5 into a "taxpayer" subject to the Internal Revenue Code and a party to a voluntary "contract" between you and your new
 6 boss, the IRS. Always remember that the IRS only "helps" people who want to be "taxpayers" and the Internal Revenue
 7 Code is written to apply ONLY to "taxpayers". The IRS doesn't deal with or help "nontaxpayers". Their mission
 8 statement even bluntly confirms this, which says:

9 Internal Revenue Manual (I.R.M.), Section 1.1.1.1 (02-26-1999)
 10 IRS Mission and Basic Organization

11 The IRS Mission: Provide America's taxpayers top quality service by helping them understand and meet their 12 tax responsibilities and by applying the tax law with integrity and fairness to all.

13 Do you see "nontaxpayers" anywhere in that mission statement? Therefore, you are a "taxpayer", if you ask for help from 14 the IRS. If you want help, you are going to have to pay for it, friends, by becoming a "taxpayer"! Do you think they work
 15 for "free" out of the generosity of their heart? If you think the cost of education is high, then try ignorance of the laws for a 16 while and tell us which is more expensive.

17 "One who turns his ear from hearing the law, even his prayer is an abomination."
 18 [Prov. 28:9, Bible, NKJV]

19 If you filed a 1040 or took deductions on your return, then you also indirectly announced that you are involved in a "trade
 20 or business", which again is a "public office" in the District of Columbia. We cover these subjects in more detail later in 21 section 5.6.11. 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1(a)(2)(ii) indicates that the only type of taxable income is that which is "effectively
 22 connected with a trade of business". If people would stop acting like "taxpayers", read the law for themselves, correct their
 23 status on all their government paperwork, and stop believing or reading the deceptive IRS publications and phone support,
 24 which are deliberately wrong more than 80% of the time, then we could at least hope that things might start getting better.
 25 When are people going to learn?

26 So the answer to the question posed by this section is that the money that most Americans pay to the IRS is, indeed, a
 27 lawful direct, unapportioned tax upon their earnings that is perfectly Constitutional, because it is done against a legal 28 "person" who is "resident" within the District of Columbia, which is within exclusive federal jurisdiction. The problem is,
 29 that this legal "person" or "res" is something that was created and continues to exist without your knowledge or explicit
 30 informed consent. The IRS never told you in their deliberately deceptive publications exactly what you were "consenting"
 31 to by submitting an IRS Form W-4 or 1040. You didn't even know a form W-4 was an "Agreement" or "contract", now
 32 did you, but the regulations make that point abundantly clear. The problem is, do the IRS publications make this point 33 equally clear?

34 26 C.F.R. Sec. 31.3401(a)-3 Amounts deemed wages under voluntary withholding 35 agreements.

36 (a) IN GENERAL. Notwithstanding the exceptions to the definition of wages specified in section 3401(a) and 37 *the regulations thereunder, the term "wages" includes the amounts described in paragraph (b)(1) of this
 38 section with respect to which there is a voluntary withholding agreement in effect under section 3402(p).
 39 References in this chapter to the definition of wages contained in section 3401(a) shall be deemed to refer also 40 to this section (Section 31.3401(a)-3).

41 They didn't tell you it was "voluntary" and that you could choose NOT to volunteer, now did they? As such, the tax
 42 "codes" are administered by the IRS in a way that is constructively fraudulent, unjust, and usurious. Through smoke and 43 mirrors, the IRS has made the I.R.C. to "appear" like a mandatory unapportioned direct tax upon EVERYONE in states of 44 the Union, when in fact, your informed, voluntary consent as an American Citizen not living within federal jurisdiction is 45 required and mandatory in order to create the taxable legal "person" engaged in the excise taxable privilege called a "trade
 46 or business" who is the target of their fraudulent and unlawful enforcement actions. Why would they want the truth to get
 47 out about this elaborate trap, if it would just reduce their revenues, cause IRS agents to have to be laid off, and worsen the 48 federal budget deficit? Would you tell just a few "white lies" to the American Public for the sizable sum of one TRILLION
 49 dollars a year of cold hard stolen loot? I know a lot of people who would do that, and most of them work for the IRS and 50 the government! Here is a joke about that subject:

1 Late one night in the capitol city a mugger wearing a ski mask jumped into the path of a well-dressed man and
 2 stuck a gun in his ribs. "Give me your money!" he demanded.

3 Indignant, the affluent man replied, "You can't do this - I'm a U.S. Congressman!"

4 "In that case," replied the robber, "give me MY money!"

5 5.1.10 The Income Tax: Constitutional or Unconstitutional?

6 So is the income tax constitutional or unconstitutional? If you're like most people, you probably suspect that its
 7 unconstitutional and that Americans pay income taxes in direct violation of the Constitution. Well, in light of everything
 8 we just told you, the real answer will likely astonish you. If you don't have a headache by now, you may want to go take an
 9 aspirin at this point, because it gets worse. Here, as they say, is the "story behind the story."

- 10 1. In spite of the fact that most Americans have never been lawful withholding agents for nonresident aliens or other 11 foreign entities;
- 12 2. In spite of the fact that Americans living and working within the states of the Union have never been made liable by 13 Congress for a tax on "income" under Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A;
- 14 3. In spite of the fact that most Americans have been filing IRS Form 1040 every year although it is not a required form
 15 for a U.S. citizen domiciled in a state of the Union to use according to the OMB;
- 16 4. In spite of the fact that most Americans have been paying what appears to be a direct, unapportioned income tax
 17 directly to the IRS;

18 In spite of all this, the money that Americans have VOLUNTEERED to self-assess and pay to the 19 IRS are in fact absolutely and 100% constitutional. Paying what are actually donations to the federal 20 government deceitfully disguised as lawful "taxes" is constitutional when Americans are not compelled to do so. They are 21 really donations, but your dishonest public servants call them "taxes" to increase "voluntary compliance". This kind of 22 manipulation is dishonest and fraudulent, but the courts refuse to force the government to tell the truth about the voluntary
 23 nature of Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A, so we continue to be the victim of such constructive fraud. For an eye-
 24 opening article on this subject, read:

Federal Courts and the IRS' Own IRM Say the IRS is NOT RESPONSIBLE for Its Actions or its Words or for Following Its Own Written Procedures, Family Guardian Fellowship
<http://famguardian.org/Subjects/Taxes/Articles/IRSNotResponsible.htm>

25 How is this possible? Because the Internal Revenue Code is limited in its application to what is specifically written and 26 stated. All law is always specific to the subjects it is directed at and no others, and is never generally applied to persons or 27 activities that are not mentioned. In real estate the term is "location, location, location".

28 The first and foremost principle of law is jurisdiction, jurisdiction, jurisdiction. Therefore, the first question to be answered
 29 is: where are you? Are you abroad in a foreign country or in a U.S. possession or territory such as Guam or Samoa? Or 30 are you within one of the now 50 Union states and outside of plenary or exclusive federal jurisdiction?

31 In Hooven & Allison Co. v. Evatt, 324 U.S. 652 (1945) the high Court stated that, in exercising its constitutional power to 32 make all needful regulations respecting territory belonging to the United States, Congress is not subject to the same
 33 constitutional limitations as when legislating for the 50 Union states.

34 In Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 (1901), the Supreme Court stated that constitutional restrictions and limitations were 35 not applicable to the areas, enclaves, territories and possessions over which Congress had exclusive legislative authority--
 36 i.e., not the 50 Union states.

37 The constitution and the Bill of Rights, which is the First ten Amendments to the Constitution, attach not to your citizenship
 38 status, but to the land you live on and it protects ALL, whether citizen or alien.

39 "The difficulties arising out of our dual form of government and the opportunities for differing opinions
 40 concerning the relative rights of state and national governments are many; but for a very long time this court
 41 has steadfastly adhered to the doctrine that the taxing power of Congress does not extend to the states or

1 their political subdivisions. The same basic reasoning which leads to that conclusion, we think, requires like
 2 limitation upon the power which springs from the bankruptcy clause. United States v. Butler, supra.
 3 [Ashton v. Cameron County Water Improvement District No. 1, 298 U.S. 513, 56 S.Ct. 892 (1936)]

4 The constitutional protection against direct taxation afforded to Americans, however, ends at the borders of the states of the 5 Union and affords no protection within the territories and possessions where Congress has exclusive and plenary power to 6 tax. In short-row out past the international limit and Congress has you by the short hairs. But here within the 50 states of 7 the Union.. you're FREE! (remember the Bible, Matthew 17:24-27?)

8 So the question where you are is primary. The next question is: who are you? Are you:

- 9 1. A STATUTORY "national and citizen of the United States** at birth" under 8 U.S.C. §1401 and 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1(c)
- 10 domiciled on federal territory.
- 11 2. A STATUTORY "resident" (alien) under 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(A) domiciled on federal territory.
- 12 3. A "nonresident alien" under 26 U.S.C. §771(b)(1)(B).
- 13 4. A statutory "non-resident non-person" who is NONE of the above and outside of federal jurisdiction because:
- 14 4.1. Not domiciled on present anywhere in the federal zone.
- 15 4.2. Not representing a public office domiciled in the federal zone under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 17.

16 Under the Internal Revenue Code, a "resident alien" or "resident" for short is a foreigner who has received permission to
 17 live in the stay in the District of Columbia for a prolonged period and may be in the process of relocating here permanently
 18 and becoming a naturalized citizen. If you are domiciled in a state of the Union, on the other hand, you are called a "non-
 19 resident non-person" if not engaged in a public office and a "nonresident alien" if engaged in a public office. Other than in 20 the context of their official duties as a public officer, "nonresident aliens" are afforded the same protections as a citizen
 21 under the Constitution.

22 A "non-resident non-person" could be a French tourist just visiting our country. What if he sold a painting to an American
 23 citizen while visiting here? Under no circumstances would he be made liable to pay a tax to the U.S. Government on that
 24 transaction unless he is in receipt of federal payments from within the District of Columbia and volunteers to declare
 25 himself to be engaged in a taxable activity called a "trade or business", as you will find out later. France might tax him
 26 under a treaty with our government, but our government would have no jurisdiction.

27 The next question is what. What were you doing that made you liable for a particular class of taxation? Were you engaged 28 in a privileged excise taxable activity such as the sale, manufacture or distribution or alcohol, tobacco or firearms within the 29 federal zone? Or were you engaged in the exercise of a natural right, such as your right to exchange your labor for money?

30 The next question is when? When were you engaged in the particular taxable activity, because, if you were liable for the 31 particular tax, the rate of taxation may have been different than at another time.

32 Let's put all this together into a specific example. Let's say you're an American citizen domiciled in the middle of the 33 country, say in Kansas, in 1998. Where are you? In one of the states of the Union, which are "foreign" with respect to 34 federal general legislative jurisdiction. Therefore, you fall under the protection of the Constitution.

35 Who are you? If you have never renounced your citizenship, you're an American National, therefore you cannot be taxed
 36 directly by the federal government under Article 1, Section 2, Clause 3 of the Constitution as we have already seen.

37 What are you doing? Selling your house, so that's a capital gain, right? Not for you. You're a citizen within the state of 38 Kansas. You do not live in the "United States" under the Internal Revenue Code, which is limited to the District of 39 Columbia (see 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10)). Congress cannot directly tax the proceeds from the sale of your 40 property because they can't collect a tax in an area over which they have no legislative or subject matter jurisdiction:

 42 U.S. 251, 275, 38 S.Ct. 529, 3 A.L.R. 649, Ann.Cas.1918E 724, possesses no inherent power in respect of the
 43 internal affairs of the states; and emphatically not with regard to legislation."

1 When did you do this? Sometime during 1998. Was the Constitution in full force and effect? Yes, it's been in full force
 2 and effect since the day it was ratified and that included 1998. In other words, the law did not apply to you under these
 3 particular, limited circumstances.

4 However, what if you step outside the jurisdictional restrictions of the I.R.C. and volunteer to assess yourself a tax you
 5 don't owe and volunteer to pay it? Is that unconstitutional? No, of course not. It's called "voluntary compliance" and the 6 IRS thanks you for your generous and willing "donation".

11 Disregarding whether income taxes on U.S. (note capitalization, and as distinguished from "U.S.** citizens", as described in 12 section 3.12.1.24) Americans living and working in the 50 Union states are constitutional from the perspective of direct or 13 indirect taxes, there are many other legal reasons why they are unconstitutional if they are enforced rather than strictly
 14 voluntary. Consider all of the constitutional provisions that are violated by the provisions below as a consequence of 15 compelling Americans domiciled and working in the 50 Union states to involuntarily pay monies to the government or file
 16 a tax return:

Reason	Constitutional reference prohibiting this activity	Explanation
IRS routinely searches peoples assets and seizes them without court orders as a part of the collections process	4th Amendment prohibits unreasonable searches and seizure by the government without probable cause and without a warrant	They perform these searches at gun point and without court orders.
Being compelled to file a 1040 tax form and become a witness against oneself is unconstitutional	5th Amendment prohibits individuals from being compelled to be a witness against themselves	IRS forces you, with financial penalties, to sign your 1040 form "under penalty of perjury", and if you refuse to sign, then you are subject to a $500 fine for violation of the "Jurat" amendment and 26 U.S.C. §6702.
Being compelled to pay income taxes is a form of slavery	13 th Amendment abolished slavery	Being forced to pay graduated taxes on income is a form of slavery, and that is why the media frequently refers to "tax freedom day" and how it keeps getting later every year.
Tax collections violate due process protections	5 th and 14 th Amendments requires that citizens cannot be deprived of their property without a court hearing	IRS seizes property without a jury trial and without hearing your case in a federal court.

19 5.1.11 Taxable persons and objects within I.R.C., Subtitle A

20 As we said in previous sections, I.R.C., Subtitle A describes an indirect excise tax upon a privileged activity called a "trade
 21 or business", which is defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26) as "the functions of a public office". This section will identify 22 specific taxable persons and activities within the I.R.C. and where the tax upon these persons is found. Below is a
 23 simplified table summarizing all the taxable persons and activities:
 24

NOTES:

1. A "trade or business" is defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26) as "the functions of a public office". Congress can only tax a "trade or business" in the District of Columbia and outside the District of Columbia in places where it has expressly authorized "public offices", as required by 4 U.S.C. §72. The only place outside the District of Columbia where "public offices" have been expressly authorized is in the Virgin Islands, pursuant to 48 U.S.C. §1612. No "public offices" have been expressly authorized within any state of the Union except possibly in federal areas, and so taxes related to "trade or business" activities cannot apply in states of the Union.
2. For the purposes of above table, "federal zone" means the District of Columbia and the Virgin Islands, and excludes all other localities, including states of the Union. Title 48 of the U.S. Code indicates that all other territories and possessions do not have federal income taxes. This is covered in much greater detail later in section 5.14.
3. When statutory "U.S. citizens" as defined in 8 U.S.C. §1401 and 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1(c) are abroad, they interface to the I.R.C. as "aliens" through a tax treaty with a foreign country. The same is true of "residents" (aliens) domiciled in the federal zone who are temporarily abroad.
4. Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A is NOT a tax on "all earnings" or "gross receipts", but instead is a tax upon "profit" connected with excise taxable activity, which is a "trade or business", meaning a public office.

"We must reject in this case, as we have rejected in cases arising under the Corporation Excise Tax Act of 1909 (Doyle, Collector, v. Mitchell Brothers Co., 247 U.S. 179, 38 Sup.Ct. 467, 62 L.Ed.--), the broad contention submitted on behalf of the government that all receipts—everything that comes in—are income within the proper definition of the term 'gross income,' and that the entire proceeds of a conversion of capital assets, in whatever form and under whatever circumstances accomplished, should be treated as gross income. Certainly the term 'income' has no broader meaning in the 1913 act than in that of 1909 (see Stratton's Independence v. Howbert, 231 U.S. 399, 416, 417 S., 34 Sup.Ct. 136), and for the present purpose we assume there is not difference in its meaning as used in the two acts."
 [Southern Pacific Co. v. Lowe, 247 U.S. 330, 335, 38 S.Ct. 540 (1918)]

The bottom line to the above is that unless you are either domiciled in the federal zone or receive payments of some kind from the U.S. government, including employment compensation as a federal "employee", I.R.C., Subtitle A says you can't earn "gross income" or "taxable income". To confirm these findings, the following corroborating evidence is provided:

1. The Index in the back of the current edition to the Internal Revenue Code does not even mention "U.S. citizens", because the government cannot collect Subtitle A income taxes upon "citizens" of any description, including domiciled citizens, when they are situated within the place of their domicile. The only situation where a statutory "U.S. citizen" as defined in 8 U.S.C. §1401 can be a "taxpayer" is when they are abroad pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §911. This is consistent with the foundation of our tax system which is:

"Citizens abroad. Aliens at home."

1 There are many reasons for this, but the most important reason is that taxes destroy sovereignty, and a government
 2 cannot be in charge or protecting someone when it has the taxing power to take EVERYTHING they own away from
 3 them. If it could, then there would be no way to ensure a fair trial in any court, because no judge who is paid by 4 monies lawfully extorted from citizens could possibly claim to be operating impartially by simultaneously also
 5 protecting the rights of the same person. Nearly every country on earth runs its tax system this same way, and most
 6 have done just as masterful a job as the U.S. government in hiding the truth within their "codes". There is a reason
 7 they call it "code": Because you have to "decode it" to understand it. The truth is "encrypted" and kept from you using 8 words of art.

- 9 2. No statutory provision is provided in the I.R.C. for a statutory "U.S. citizen" under 8 U.S.C. §1401 domiciled in the 10 federal zone who is not abroad to be taxed because it is simply NOT allowed. This is also consistent with the U.S.
 11 Supreme Court's ruling in Cook v. Tait (1924), in which it said that statutory "U.S. citizens" abroad may be taxed for 12 the privilege of being protected, because they are not protected by the Constitution and the Bill of Rights when 13 overseas.

14 "The right to tax and regulate the national citizenship is an inherent right under the rule of the Law of Nations, 15 which is part of the law of the United States, as described in Article 1, Section 8, Clause 17." The Luisitania, 16 251 F.715, 732.

17 *"This jurisdiction extends to citizens of the United States, wherever resident, for the exercise of the privileges
 18 and immunities and protections of [federal] citizenship."
 19 [Cook v. Tait, 265 U.S. 47,44 S.Ct. 447, 11 Virginia Law Review, 607 (1924)]*

20 The "national citizenship" they are talking about is federal zone citizenship and NOT constitutional citizenship. This is 21 confirmed by the same Supreme Court, which said in Chisholm v. Georgia, 2 Dall. \(U.S.\) 419, 1 L.Ed. 440 (1793) that
 22 the U.S. is NOT a "nation", but a "society". The above statement also contains a deception, because the phrase
 23 "wherever resident" EXCLUDES persons within the exterior boundaries of a state of the Union on other than land
 24 subject to the exclusive jurisdiction or plenary power of the general government. When a statutory "citizen of the 25 United States" pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1401 moves his domicile to a state of the Union or anywhere outside the federal 26 zone, he at that point:

- 27 2.1. Ceases to be a statutory "U.S. citizen" pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1401. You cannot be a statutory "U.S. citizen" 28 without a domicile in the federal zone.
 29 2.2. Becomes a "national" but not a "citizen" pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) just like any other person domiciled
 30 in the state of the Union he is in.
 31 2.3. Is no longer "subject to the jurisdiction" of the United States, because no longer domiciled there. Domicile is the 32 source of all of the government's civil jurisdiction, including both its taxing and police powers.
 33 2.4. Becomes a "stateless person" in respect to the federal government for the purposes of legislative jurisdiction and 34 the jurisdiction of the federal courts. See Newman-Green v. Alfonso Larrain, 490 U.S. 826 \(1989\).
 35 3. 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1(a)(2)(ii) defines a "married individual" and an "unmarried individual" as an alien with earnings from 36 a "trade or business". The only "taxpayers" who are "individuals" are therefore "aliens", and a "nonresident alien" as 37 defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(B) is not equivalent to an "alien" as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(A).

38 *NORMAL TAXES AND SURTAXES

42 *(a)(2)(ii) For taxable years beginning after December 31, 1970, the tax imposed by section 1(d), as amended by 43 the Tax Reform Act of 1969, shall apply to the income effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or 44 business in the United States by a married alien individual who is a nonresident of the United States for all or 45 part of the taxable year or by a foreign estate or trust. For such years the tax imposed by section 1(c), as 46 amended by such Act, shall apply to the income effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business in 47 the United States by an unmarried alien individual (other than a surviving spouse) who is a nonresident of 48 the United States for all or part of the taxable year. See paragraph (b)(2) of section 1.871-8."
 49 [26 C.F.R. §1.1-1 (a)(2)(ii)]*

- 50 4. I.R.C. Section 1 imposes the Subtitle A income tax, but the word "domicile" are never mentioned, even though this is 51 the ONLY lawful basis for the tax according to the U.S. Supreme Court.

52 "Thus, the Court has frequently held that domicile or residence, more substantial than mere presence in
 53 transit or sojourn, is an adequate basis for taxation, including income, property, and death taxes. Since the
 54 Fourteenth Amendment makes one a citizen of the state wherein he resides, the fact of residence creates

universally reciprocal duties of protection by the state and of allegiance and support by the citizen. The latter obviously includes a duty to pay taxes, and their nature and measure is largely a political matter. Of course, the situs of property may tax it regardless of the citizenship, domicile, or residence of the owner, the most obvious illustration being a tax on realty laid by the state in which the realty is located."
 Miller Brothers Co. v. Maryland, [347 U.S. 340 (1954) ]

The requirement for domicile is carefully hidden in 26 U.S.C. §911(d)(3), by referring to it as “abode”, which the legal dictionary defines as domicile. The only tax liability connected with domicile therefore relates ONLY to “citizens and residents” while they are abroad, but not domestically (federal zone) situated. The reason the I.R.C. doesn’t mention the source of authority for income tax as “domicile” is because domicile is so hard to prove, and because it is voluntary. If you knew the law allowed you to “unvolunteer”, would you participate in the income tax system? This is covered later starting in section 5.4.8.

5. Nowhere in the Internal Revenue Code is the term “individual” defined, because if your corrupt public servants did truthfully define it, they would have to admit that it means a government (corporate) person domiciled in the federal zone and engaged in a public office. 5 U.S.C. §552a(a)(2) confirms that such an “individual” is a government employee or agent or “public officer”, because it falls under Title 5 of the U.S. Code, which is entitled “Government Organization and Employees”. The government cannot keep records on citizens who are not domiciled in their jurisdiction, because they would be engaging in a conspiracy to violate the privacy of those persons in violation of the Fourth Amendment, but it certainly has the authority to maintain records, protected by the Privacy Act, which describe public employees.

“The power to “legislate generally upon” life, liberty, and property, as opposed to the “power to provide modes of redress” against offensive state action, was “repugnant” to the Constitution. Id., at 15. See also United States v. Reese, 92 U.S. 214, 218 (1876); United States v. Harris, 106 U.S. 629, 639 (1883); James v. Bowman, 190 U.S. 127, 139 (1903). Although the specific holdings of these early cases might have been superseded or modified, see, e.g., Heart of Atlanta Motel, Inc. v. United States, 379 U.S. 241 (1964); United States v. Guest, 383 U.S. 745 (1966), their treatment of Congress’ §5 power as corrective or preventive, not definitional, has not been questioned.”
 City of Boerne v. Flores, Archbishop of San Antonio, [521 U.S. 507 (1997)]

6. 26 U.S.C. §871 lists all the taxable activities and “sources” together in one spot. Although this section describes the taxable activities for “nonresident aliens”, the same rules apply to ALL persons, because equal protection of the law mandated by Section 1 of the Fourteenth Amendment demands that everyone in states of the Union must pay the same amount and kind of taxes on the same activities. Notice that this section divides the taxable activities basically into two groups: 1. Earnings not connected with a “trade or business” in 26 U.S.C. §871(a); 2. Earnings connected with a “trade or business” in 26 U.S.C. §871(b). Notice also that all the items in 26 U.S.C. §871(a) are payments by the government to private persons of one kind or another or are earnings from passive activities in the District of Columbia, which is what the “United States” is defined as for that section in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10) .

The process of determining whether we are “taxpayers” under Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A is rather simple. Below are the questions you must answer and the consequences of each answer:

Table 5-12: Questions that help determine whether you are a "taxpayer"

#	Question	Authority	Explanation
1	Do I maintain a domicile in the federal zone and am I abroad for no more than 90 days out of the year so that I meet the presence test?	Miller Brothers Co. v. Maryland, 347 U.S. 340 (1954) 26 U.S.C. §911 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1(a)(2)(ii)	The tax is imposed on “citizens” and “residents”, who have in common a domicile within the legislative jurisdiction of the federal government. You cannot be taxed if you are physically present within the federal zone. Only abroad.
2	Am I engaged in a “trade or business”?	26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26) 26 U.S.C. §6041 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1(a)(2)(ii)	Information returns such as W-2, 1098, 1099, and 1042-S connect you with a “trade or business” under 26 U.S.C. §6041.
3	Do I receive payments from the United States government?	26 U.S.C. §871(a)	Includes Social Security, Medicare, etc.
4	Do I receive passive income from real property in the federal zone?	26 U.S.C. §871(a)	Does not apply in states of the Union

If the answer to all the above is NO, then you can't be a "taxpayer" under I.R.C., Subtitle A and must instead be a "nontaxpayer" not subject to any part of the Internal Revenue Code. Such a person would be a "foreign estate" as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(31) .

5.1.12 The "Dual" nature of the Internal Revenue Code

Congress legislates for two separate legal and political and territorial jurisdictions:

1. The states of the Union under the requirements of the Constitution of the United States. In this capacity, it is called the "federal/general government".
2. The U.S. government, the District of Columbia, U.S. possessions and territories, and enclaves within the states. In this capacity, it is called the "national government". The authority for this jurisdiction derives from Article 1, Section 8, Clause 17 of the United States Constitution. All laws passed essentially amount to municipal laws for federal property, and in that capacity, Congress is not restrained by either the Constitution or the Bill of Rights. We call the collection of all federal territories, possessions, and enclaves within the states "the federal zone" throughout this document.

The U.S. Supreme Court confirmed this division of powers of our general government described above when it said:

"It is clear that Congress, as a legislative body, exercise two species of legislative power: the one, limited as to its objects, but extending all over the Union: the other, an absolute, exclusive legislative power over the District of Columbia. The preliminary inquiry in the case now before the Court, is, by virtue of which of these authorities was the law in question passed?"

James Madison, one of our founding fathers, described these two separate jurisdictions in Federalist Paper #39, when he said:

First. In order to ascertain the real character of the government, it may be considered in relation to the foundation on which it is to be established; to the sources from which its ordinary powers are to be drawn; to the operation of those powers; to the extent of them; and to the authority by which future changes in the government are to be introduced.

On examining the first relation, it appears, on one hand, that the Constitution is to be founded on the assent and ratification of the people of America, given by deputies elected for the special purpose; but, on the other, that this assent and ratification is to be given by the people, not as individuals composing one entire nation, but as composing the distinct and independent States to which they respectively belong. It is to be the assent and ratification of the several States, derived from the supreme authority in each State, the authority of the people themselves. The act, therefore, establishing the Constitution, will not be a NATIONAL, but a FEDERAL act.

That it will be a federal and not a national act, as these terms are understood by the objectors; the act of the people, as forming so many independent States, not as forming one aggregate nation, is obvious from this single consideration, that it is to result neither from the decision of a MAJORITY of the people of the Union, nor from that of a MAJORITY of the States. It must result from the UNANIMOUS assent of the several States that are parties to it, differing no otherwise from their ordinary assent than in its being expressed, not by the legislative authority, but by that of the people themselves. Were the people regarded in this transaction as forming one nation, the will of the majority of the whole people of the United States would bind the minority, in the same manner as the majority in each State must bind the minority; and the will of the majority must be determined either by a comparison of the individual votes, or by considering the will of the majority of the States as evidence of the will of a majority of the people of the United States. Neither of these rules have been adopted. Each State, in ratifying the Constitution, is considered as a sovereign body, independent of all others, and only to be bound by its own voluntary act. In this relation, then, the new Constitution will, if established, be a FEDERAL, and not a NATIONAL constitution.

The next relation is, to the sources from which the ordinary powers of government are to be derived. The House of Representatives will derive its powers from the people of America; and the people will be represented in the same proportion, and on the same principle, as they are in the legislature of a particular State. So far the government is NATIONAL, not FEDERAL. The Senate, on the other hand, will derive its powers from the States, as political and coequal societies; and these will be represented on the principle of equality in the Senate, as they now are in the existing Congress. So far the government is FEDERAL, not NATIONAL. The executive power will be derived from a very compound source. The immediate election of the President is to be made by the States in their political characters. The votes allotted to them are in a compound ratio, which considers them partly as distinct and coequal societies, partly as unequal members of the same society. The eventual election, again, is to be made by that branch of the legislature which consists of the national representatives; but in this particular act they are to be thrown into the form of individual delegations,

1 from so many distinct and coequal bodies politic. From this aspect of the government it appears to be of a
2 mixed character, presenting at least as many FEDERAL as NATIONAL features.

3 The difference between a federal and national government, as it relates to the OPERATION OF THE 4 GOVERNMENT, is supposed to consist in this, that in the former the powers operate on the political bodies
5 composing the Confederacy, in their political capacities; in the latter, on the individual citizens composing 6 the nation, in their individual capacities. On trying the Constitution by this criterion, it falls under the 7 NATIONAL, not the FEDERAL character; though perhaps not so completely as has been understood. In several
8 cases, and particularly in the trial of controversies to which States may be parties, they must be viewed and 9 proceeded against in their collective and political capacities only. So far the national countenance of the 10 government on this side seems to be disfigured by a few federal features. But this blemish is perhaps 11 unavoidable in any plan; and the operation of the government on the people, in their individual capacities, in its 12 ordinary and most essential proceedings, may, on the whole, designate it, in this relation, a NATIONAL 13 government.

14 But if the government be national with regard to the OPERATION of its powers, it changes its aspect again
15 when we contemplate it in relation to the EXTENT of its powers. The idea of a national government involves in 16 it, not only an authority over the individual citizens, but an indefinite supremacy over all persons and things, so
17 far as they are objects of the lawful government. Among a people consolidated into one nation, this supremacy is 18 completely vested in the national legislature. Among communities united for particular purposes, it is vested
19 partly in the general and partly in the municipal legislatures. In the former case, all local authorities are 20 subordinate to the supreme; and may be controlled, directed, or abolished by it at pleasure. In the latter, the 21 local or municipal authorities form distinct and independent portions of the supremacy, no more subject, within
22 their respective spheres, to the general authority, than the general authority is subject to them, within its own
23 sphere. In this relation, then, the proposed government cannot be deemed a NATIONAL one; since its 24 jurisdiction extends to certain enumerated objects only, and leaves to the several States a residuary and 25 inviolable sovereignty over all other objects. It is true that in controversies relating to the boundary between 26 the two jurisdictions, the tribunal which is ultimately to decide, is to be established under the general
27 government. But this does not change the principle of the case. The decision is to be impartially made,
28 according to the rules of the Constitution; and all the usual and most effectual precautions are taken to secure
29 this impartiality. Some such tribunal is clearly essential to prevent an appeal to the sword and a dissolution of 30 the compact; and that it ought to be established under the general rather than under the local governments, or,
31 to speak more properly, that it could be safely established under the first alone, is a position not likely to be 32 combated.

33 If we try the Constitution by its last relation to the authority by which amendments are to be made, we find it
34 neither wholly NATIONAL nor wholly FEDERAL. Were it wholly national, the supreme and ultimate authority
35 would reside in the MAJORITY of the people of the Union; and this authority would be competent at all times,
36 like that of a majority of every national society, to alter or abolish its established government. Were it wholly
37 federal, on the other hand, the concurrence of each State in the Union would be essential to every alteration
38 that would be binding on all. The mode provided by the plan of the convention is not founded on either of these 39 principles. In requiring more than a majority, and principles. In requiring more than a majority, and 40 particularly in computing the proportion by STATES, not by CITIZENS, it departs from the NATIONAL and 41 advances towards the FEDERAL character; in rendering the concurrence of less than the whole number of 42 States sufficient, it loses again the FEDERAL and partakes of the NATIONAL character.

43 The proposed Constitution, therefore, is, in strictness, neither a national nor a federal Constitution, but a
44 composition of both. In its foundation it is federal, not national; in the sources from which the ordinary powers
45 of the government are drawn, it is partly federal and partly national; in the operation of these powers, it is 46 national, not federal; in the extent of them, again, it is federal, not national; and, finally, in the authoritative 47 mode of introducing amendments, it is neither wholly federal nor wholly national.

48 PUBLIUS.
49 [Federalist Paper #39, James Madison]

50 Based on Madison's comments, a "national government" operates upon and derives its authority from individual citizens
51 whereas a "federal government" operates upon and derives its authority from states. The only place where the central 52 government may operate directly upon the individual through the authority of law is within federal territory. Hence, when 53 courts use the word "national government", they are referring to federal territory only and to no part of any state of the 54 Union. The federal government has no jurisdiction within a state of the Union and therefore cannot operate directly upon 55 the individual there.

56 "It is no longer open to question that the general government, unlike the states, Hammer v. Dagenhart, 247
57 U.S. 251, 275, 38 S.Ct. 529, 3 A.L.R. 649, Ann.Cas.1918E 724, possesses no inherent power in respect of the 58 internal affairs of the states; and emphatically not with regard to legislation."
59 [Carter v. Carter Coal Co., 298 U.S. 238, 56 S.Ct. 855 (1936)]

1           The rights of life and personal liberty are natural rights of man. 'To secure these rights,' says the Declaration
 2 of Independence, 'governments are instituted among men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the 3 governed.' The very highest duty of the States, when they entered into the Union under the Constitution, was
 4 to protect all persons within their boundaries in the enjoyment of these 'unalienable rights with which they
 5 were endowed by their Creator.' Sovereignty, for this purpose, rests alone with the States. It is no more the 6 duty or within the power of the United States to punish for a conspiracy *554 to falsely imprison or murder
 7 within a State, than it would be to punish for false imprisonment or murder itself.

8           The fourteenth amendment prohibits a State from denying to any person within its jurisdiction the equal
 9 protection of the laws; but this provision does not, any more than the one which precedes it, and which we have 10 just considered, add any thing *555 to the rights which one citizen has under the Constitution against another.
 11 The equality of the rights of citizens is a principle of republicanism. Every republican government is in duty
 12 bound to protect all its citizens in the enjoyment of this principle, if within its power. That duty was originally 13 assumed by the States; and it still remains there. The only obligation resting upon the United States is to see 14 that the States do not deny the right. This the amendment guarantees, but no more. The power of the 15 national government is limited to the enforcement of this guaranty.
 16 [U.S. v. Cruikshank, 92 U.S. 542, 1875 WL 17550 (U.S.,1875)]

17 These two political/legal jurisdictions, federal territory v. states of the Union, are separate sovereignties, and the 18 Constitution dictates that these two distinct sovereignties MUST remain separate because of the Separation of Powers
 19 Doctrine:

20           "§79. This sovereignty pertains to the people of the United States as national citizens only, and not as citizens
 21 of any other government. There cannot be two separate and independent sovereignties within the same limits or 22 jurisdiction; nor can there be two distinct and separate sources of sovereign authority within the same
 23 jurisdiction. The right of commanding in the last resort can be possessed only by one body of people inhabiting
 24 the same territory,' and can be executed only by those intrusted with the execution of such authority."

27 In this section, we will summarize federal jurisdiction to tax by consolidating the analysis found throughout this chapter
 28 into one simple table to make our findings crystal clear. The vast majority of all laws passed by Congress apply to the latter
 29 jurisdiction above: the federal zone. The Internal Revenue Code actually describes the revenue collection "scheme" for 30 these two completely separate political and legal jurisdictions and the table below compares the two. In the capacity as the 31 "national government", the I.R.C. in Subtitles A (income tax), B (inheritance tax), and C (employment tax) acts as the 32 equivalent of a state income tax for the municipal government of the District of Columbia only. In the capacity of the 33 "federal government", the I.R.C. in subtitle D acts as an excise tax on imports only. We discussed the difference between 34 the "national government" and the "federal/general government" earlier in section 4.7, if you would like to review:

Table 5-13: Two jurisdictions within the I.R.C.

#	Description	Legislative jurisdiction
		"National government" of the District of Columbia	"Federal government" of the states of the Union
1	Constitutional authority for revenue collection	Article 1 , Section 8, Clause 1 Article 1 , Section 8, Clause 17	Article 1 , Section 8, Clause 3

13	Example "taxes"	1. W-4 withholding on federal "employees" 2. Estate taxes 3. Social security 4. Medicare 5. Alcohol, tobacco, and firearms under U.S.C. Title 27	Taxes on imported fuels
14	Applicable tax forms	941, 1040, 1040NR, 1120, W-2, W-4	CF 6084 (customs bill)

The “plenary” jurisdiction described above means exclusive sovereignty which is not shared by any other sovereignty and which is exercised over territorial lands owned by or ceded to the federal government under Article 1, Section 8, Clause 17 of the Constitution. Here is a cite that helps confirm what we are saying about the “plenary” word above:

*"In dealing with the meaning and application of an act of Congress enacted in the exercise of its plenary power under the Constitution to tax income and to grant exemptions from that tax, it is the will of Congress which controls, and the expression of its will, in the absence of language evidencing a different purpose, should be interpreted 'so as to give a uniform application to a nation-wide scheme of taxation'. Burnet v. Harmel, 287 U.S. 103, 110, 53 S.Ct. 74, 77. Congress establishes its own criteria and the state law may control only when the federal taxing act by express language or necessary implication makes its operation dependent upon state law. Burnet v. Harmel, supra. See Burk-Waggoner Oil Association v. Hopkins, 269 U.S. 110, 111, 114 S., 46 S.Ct. 48, 49; Weiss v. Wiener, 279 U.S. 333, 49 S.Ct. 337; Morrissey v. Commissioner, 296 U.S. 344, 356, 56 S.Ct. 289, 294. Compare Crooks v. Harrelson, 282 U.S. 55, 59, 51 S.Ct. 49, 50; Poe v. Seaborn, 282 U.S. 101, 109, 110 S., 51 S.Ct. 58; Blair v. Commissioner, 300 U.S. 5, 9, 10 S., 57 S.Ct. 330, 331." Lyeth v. Hoey, [305 U.S. 188, 59 S.Ct. 155 \(1938\)]*

Why is such jurisdiction “plenary” or “exclusive”? Because all those who file IRS 1040 returns implicitly consent to be treated as “virtual residents” of the District of Columbia, over which Congress has exclusive legislative jurisdiction under Article 1, Section 8, Clause 17 of the Constitution!:

Because kidnapping is illegal under 18 U.S.C. §1201, people domiciled in states of the Union subject to the provisions above must be volunteers and must explicitly consent to participate in federal taxation by filling out the WRONG tax form, which is the 1040, and signing it under penalty of perjury. The IRS Published Products Catalog for 2003 confirms that those who file IRS Form 1040 do indeed declare themselves to be “citizens or residents of the [federal] United States”, which is untrue for the vast majority of Americans:

If American Nationals domiciled in the states of the Union would learn to file with their correct status as “non-resident non-persons”, then most Americans wouldn’t owe anything. They would have no earnings from sources identified in 26 U.S.C. §871! The U.S. Congress and their IRS henchmen have become “sheep poachers”, where you, a person domiciled in state of the Union and outside of federal legislative jurisdiction, are the “sheep”. They are “legally kidnapping” people away from the Constitutional protections of their domicile within states using deceptive forms so that they volunteer into exclusive federal jurisdiction to become “U.S. persons”, “U.S. citizens”, or “residents” under federal law.

Notice the use of the term “nation-wide” in the Lyeth case above, which we now know means the “national government” in the context of its jurisdiction over federal territories, possessions, and the District of Columbia and which excludes states of the Union. They are just reiterating that federal jurisdiction over the federal zone is “exclusive” and “plenary” and that state law only applies where Congress consents to delegate authority, under the rules of “comity”, to the state relating to taxing matters over federal areas within the exterior limits of a state.

“comity. Courtesy; complaisance; respect; a willingness to grant a privilege, not as a matter of right, but out of deference and good will. Recognition that one sovereignty allows within its territory to the legislative, executive, or judicial act of another sovereignty, having due regard to rights of its own citizens. Nowell v. Nowell, Tex.Civ.App., 408 S.W.2d. 550, 553. In general, principle of "comity" is that courts of one state or jurisdiction will give effect to laws and judicial decisions of another state or jurisdiction, not as a matter of obligation, but out of deference and mutual respect. Brown v. Babbitt Ford, Inc., 117 Ariz. 192, 571 P.2d. 689, 695. See also Full faith and credit clause."

[Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 267]

An example of this kind of "comity" is the Buck Act, 4 U.S.C. §§110-113, in which 4 U.S.C. §106 delegates authority to federal territories and possessions, but not states of the Union, to tax areas within their boundaries subject to exclusive federal jurisdiction. That jurisdiction then is mentioned in the context of 5 U.S.C. §5517 as applying ONLY to federal "employees".

The above table is confirmed by the Supreme Court in the case of Downes v. Bidwell, which said on the subjects covered by the table:

"Loughborough v. Blake, 5 Wheat. 317, 5 L.Ed. 98, was an action of trespass or, as appears by the original record, replevin, brought in the circuit court for the District of Columbia to try the right of Congress to impose a direct tax for general purposes on that District. 3 Stat. at L. 216, chap. 60. It was insisted that Congress could act in a double capacity: in one as legislating [182 U.S. 244, 260] for the states; in the other as a local legislature for the District of Columbia. In the latter character, it was admitted that the power of levying direct taxes might be exercised, but for District purposes only, as a state legislature might tax for state purposes; but that it could not legislate for the District under art. 1, 8, giving to Congress the power 'to lay and collect taxes, imposts, and excises,' which 'shall be uniform throughout the United States,' inasmuch as the District was no part of the United States [described in the Constitution]. It was held that the grant of this power was a general one without limitation as to place, and consequently extended to all places over which the government extends; and that it extended to the District of Columbia as a constituent part of the United States. The fact that art. 1, 2, declares that 'representatives and direct taxes shall be apportioned among the several states . . . according to their respective numbers' furnished a standard by which taxes were apportioned, but not to exempt any part of the country from their operation. 'The words used do not mean that direct taxes shall be imposed on states only which are represented, or shall be apportioned to representatives; but that direct taxation, in its application to states, shall be apportioned to numbers.' That art. 1, 9, 4, declaring that direct taxes shall be laid in proportion to the census, was applicable to the District of Columbia, 'and will enable Congress to apportion on it its just and equal share of the burden, with the same accuracy as on the respective states. If the tax be laid in this proportion, it is within the very words of the restriction. It is a tax in proportion to the census or enumeration referred to.' It was further held that the words of the 9th section did not 'in terms require that the system of direct taxation, when resorted to, shall be extended to the territories, as the words of the 2d section require that it shall be extended to all the states. They therefore may, without violence, be understood to give a rule when the territories shall be taxed, without imposing the necessity of taxing them.'"

"There could be no doubt as to the correctness of this conclusion, so far, at least, as it applied to the District of Columbia. This District had been a part of the states of Maryland and [182 U.S. 244, 261] Virginia. It had been subject to the Constitution, and was a part of the United States[***]. The Constitution had attached to it irrevocably. There are steps which can never be taken backward. The tie that bound the states of Maryland and Virginia to the Constitution could not be dissolved, without at least the consent of the Federal and state governments to a formal separation. The mere cession of the District of Columbia to the Federal government relinquished the authority of the states, but it did not take it out of the United States or from under the aegis of the Constitution. Neither party had ever consented to that construction of the cession. If, before the District was set off, Congress had passed an unconstitutional act affecting its inhabitants, it would have been void. If done after the District was created, it would have been equally void; in other words, Congress could not do indirectly, by carving out the District, what it could not do directly. The District still remained a part of the United States, protected by the Constitution. Indeed, it would have been a fanciful construction to hold that territory which had been once a part of the United States ceased to be such by being ceded directly to the Federal government."

"Indeed, the practical interpretation put by Congress upon the Constitution has been long continued and uniform to the effect [182 U.S. 244, 279] that the Constitution is applicable to territories acquired by purchase or conquest, only when and so far as Congress shall so direct. Notwithstanding its duty to 'guarantee to every state in this Union a republican form of government' (art. 4, 4), by which we understand, according to the definition of Webster, 'a government in which the supreme power resides in the whole body of the people, and is exercised by representatives elected by them,' Congress did not hesitate, in the original organization of the territories of Louisiana, Florida, the Northwest Territory, and its subdivisions of Ohio, Indiana, Michigan, Illinois, and Wisconsin and still more recently in the case of Alaska, to establish a form of government bearing a much greater analogy to a British Crown colony than a republican state of America, and to vest the legislative power either in a governor and council, or a governor and judges, to be appointed by the President. It was not until they had attained a certain population that power was given them to organize a legislature by vote of the people. In all these cases, as well as in territories subsequently organized west of the Mississippi,

1 Congress thought it necessary either to extend to Constitution and laws of the United States over them, or to
2 declare that the inhabitants should be entitled to enjoy the right of trial by jury, of bail, and of the privilege of 3 the writ of habeas corpus, as well as other privileges of the bill of rights."
4 Downes v. Bidwell, [182 U.S. 244 (1901)]

5 Based on the above table, ALL of the revenues collected by the IRS under the authority of Subtitle A only apply to workers
6 of the employees, instrumentalities, and public officers of the U.S. government wherever located, those receiving federal
7 payments, and those domiciled in the federal zone, and they behave as the equivalent of a kickback of a federal payment,
8 and not lawful "taxes". In particular, Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A applies only within federal territory, as is revealed
9 by the definition of "United States" found in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10) and 4 U.S.C. §110(d). The IRS has been 10 involved in criminal extortion because they are:

- 11 1. Deliberately and systematically deceiving Americans about the requirements of the I.R.C. using their publications, as 12 we showed earlier in section 3.19. They are doing so by not explaining what "United States" means in their
13 publications and by not emphasizing that Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A is entirely voluntary and not a "tax", but a
14 donation. They also are trying to make most Americans falsely believe that the two jurisdictions identified above are 15 equivalent, and that all Americans domiciled in states of the Union are "citizens of the United States" or "residents"
16 under federal law, when in fact they are not. Americans who make false statements on their tax returns go to jail for 3
17 years minimum, but the I.R.S. does it with impunity every day in their publications and the federal judiciary refuses to 18 hold them accountable for this constructive fraud.
- 19 2. Applying Subtitles A through C of the Internal Revenue Code unlawfully to persons domiciled in states of the Union 20 over which they have no jurisdiction.
- 21 3. Are enforcing I.R.C. Subtitle A against other than federal "employees", "public officers", and instrumentalities. There
22 are no implementing regulations authorizing enforcement against other than federal "employees" as required by 44
23 U.S.C. §1505(a)(1), 26 C.F.R. §601.702(a)(2)(ii), and 5 U.S.C. §553(a)(2).
- 24 4. Enforcing that which is not "law" and is therefore unenforceable. The Internal Revenue Code is not "law" for those 25 not subject to it such as "nontaxpayers", as you will find out later in section 5.4.3, and therefore may not be enforced
26 against anyone absent explicit, informed, voluntary consent and a promise by the government of no repercussions for 27 not "volunteering". Those who explicitly consent in writing or implicitly consent by their conduct to be subject to it
28 are called "taxpayers", and for them ONLY, I.R.C., Subtitle A is "law".

29 5.1.13 Brief History of Circuit Court Rulings Relating to Income Taxes

30 Before we scare you or confuse you with the following, we wish to emphasize that in the cases cited below, those cases that
31 contradicted the idea that mandatory income taxes are excise taxes have a common thread, and that thread is that the
32 *individuals who ended up having to pay in effect a FORCED DIRECT income tax claimed they were U.S.** citizens and/or* 33 claimed they resided "within the United States Judicial District", which is a no-no as we emphasize throughout this book.
34 These are the two things that got them into most of their trouble. If they had insisted all along that:

- 35 1. They were "non-resident non-persons" not subject to the laws of Congress and outside their jurisdiction.
- 36 2. Filed their withholding forms consistent with this status. This means NOT filing I.R.S. Form W-4.
- 37 3. Changed their citizenship status to "nationals" in all government records. This includes passports.
- 38 4. Filed their "Revocation of Election" (see section 2.5.3.13 of the Sovereignty Forms and Instructions Manual, Form 39 #10.005) as required

40 . . . then the federal courts would have respected their rights and not tried to assert nonexistent jurisdiction over them to 41 assess federal income taxes.

42 In 1894, Congress adopted an income tax act which was declared unconstitutional in Pollock v. Farmers' Loan & Trust
43 Co., 157 U.S. 429, 15 S.Ct. 673, aff. reh., 158 U.S. 601, 15 S.Ct. 912 (1895). The Pollock Court found that the income tax
44 was a direct tax which could only be imposed if the tax was apportioned; since this tax was not apportioned, it was found
45 unconstitutional. In an effort to circumvent this decision, the 16th Amendment was proposed by Congress in 1909 and 46 allegedly ratified by the states in 1913. As a result, various opinions arose regarding the legal effect of the amendment.
47 Some factions contended that the 16th Amendment simply eliminated the apportionment requirement for one specific direct 48 tax known as the income tax, while others asserted that the amendment simply withdrew it from the direct tax category and 49 placed the income tax in the indirect, excise tax class. These competing contentions and interpretations were apparently resolved in Brushaber v. Union Pacific Railroad Co., 240 U.S. 1, 36 S.Ct. 236 (1916).<sup>17</sup> Rather than attempt a determination of what the Court held in this case, it is more important to learn what various courts have subsequently declared Brushaber to mean.

A little more than a week after the opinion in Brushaber, similar issues were present for decision in Stanton v. Baltic Mining Co., 240 U.S. 103, 112-13, 36 S.Ct. 278 (1916), which involved the question of whether an inadequate depletion allowance for a mining company constituted a direct tax on the company's property. As to Baltic's contention that "the 16th Amendment authorized only an exceptional direct income tax without apportionment," the Court rejected it by stating that this contention:

"... manifestly disregards the fact that by the previous ruling it was settled that the provisions of the 16th Amendment conferred no new power of taxation, but simply prohibited the previous complete and plenary power of income taxation possessed by Congress from the beginning from being taken out of the category of indirect taxation to which it inherently belonged, and being placed in the category of direct taxation."

The Court clearly held that income taxes inherently belonged to the indirect/excise tax class, but had been converted by Pollock to direct taxes by considering the source of the income; the 16th Amendment merely banished the rule in Pollock. See also Tyee Realty Co. v. Anderson, 240 U.S. 115, 36 S.Ct. 281 (1916), decided the same day.

Subsequently, there was a ruling on the issue in the case of William E. Peck and Co. v. Lowe, 247 U.S. 165, 172-73, 38 S.Ct. 432, 433 (1918), which involved a tax imposed on export earnings:

"The Sixteenth Amendment, although referred to in argument, has no real bearing and may be put out of view. As pointed out in recent decisions, it does not extend the taxing power to new or excepted subjects, but merely removed all occasion, which otherwise might exist, for an apportionment among the states of taxes laid on income, whether it be derived from one source or another."

The federal district courts deviated from these Supreme Court rulings subsequently as part of a "judicial conspiracy to uphold the income tax" described elsewhere in section 6.6. For instance, in Parker v. Commissioner, 724 F.2d. 469, 471 (5th Cir. 1984), the court clearly rejected the contention that income taxes are an excise:

"The Supreme Court promptly determined in Brushaber... that the sixteenth amendment provided the needed constitutional basis for the imposition of a direct non-apportioned income tax.

"The sixteenth amendment merely eliminates the requirement that the direct income tax be apportioned among the states.

"The sixteenth amendment was enacted for the express purpose of providing for a direct income tax."

In Coleman v. Commissioner, 791 F.2d. 68, 70 (7th Cir. 1986), the court held that an argument that this tax was an excise was frivolous on its face ("The power thus long predates the Sixteenth Amendment, which did no more than remove the apportionment requirement...").

In United States v. Francisco, 614 F.2d. 617, 619 (8th Cir. 1980), that court declared that Brushaber held this tax to be a direct one:

"The cases cited by Francisco clearly establish that the income tax is a direct tax, thus refuting the argument based upon his first theory. See Brushaber v. Union Pacific Railroad Co., 240 U.S. 1, 19, 36 S.Ct. 236, 242, 60 L.Ed. 493 (1916) (the purpose of the Sixteenth Amendment was to take the 'income tax' out of the class of excises, duties and imposts and place it in the class of direct taxes')."

Finally, in United States v. Lawson, 670 F.2d. 923, 927 (10th Cir. 1982), that court expressed in the following fashion its contempt for the contention that the federal income tax was an indirect excise tax:

"Lawson's 'jurisdictional' claim, more accurately a constitutional claim, is based on an argument that the Sixteenth Amendment only authorizes excise-type taxes on income derived from activities that are government-licensed or otherwise specially protected... The contention is totally without merit... The Sixteenth Amendment

<sup>17</sup> In this decision, there is a very lengthy sentence which contains the following phrase: "... by which alone such taxes were removed from the great class of excises, duties and imposts subject to the rule of uniformity, and were placed under the other or direct class," 240 U.S., at 19. This phrase and the one at the very end of this paragraph are almost identical. This language was used to describe the contention the Court was rejecting, not approving.

1 removed any need to apportion income taxes among the states that otherwise would have been required by
2 Article I, Section 9, Clause 4."

3 A direct tax applies to and taxes property while an indirect, excise tax is never imposed on property but usually a business
4 event such as sales; see Bromley v. McCaughn, 280 U.S. 124, 50 S.Ct. 46, 47 (1929).<sup>18</sup> The federal appellate courts which
5 now hold that an income tax is a direct property tax believe that income is property.<sup>19</sup>

6 Income is property according to St. Louis Union Trust Co. v. United States, 617 F.2d. 1293, 1301 (8th Cir. 1980). Accrued
7 wages and salaries are likewise property; see Sims v. United States, 252 F.2d. 434, 437 (4th Cir. 1958), aff'd., 359 U.S. 108,
8 79 S.Ct. 641 (1959); and Kolb v. Berlin, 356 F.2d. 269, 271 (5th Cir. 1966). Even private employment and a profession are 9 considered property; see United States v. Briggs, 514 F.2d. 794, 798 (5th Cir. 1975). In James v. United States, 970 F.2d.
10 750, 755, 756 n. 11 (10th Cir. 1992), the 10th Circuit made it clear that income is property. Pursuant to United States v.
11 Lawson, supra, the Tenth Circuit declares that the property known as income is subject to tax under the view that the 16th
12 Amendment eliminated the apportionment requirement for a specific class of property known as income.

13 5.1.14 The "Elevator Speech" Version of the History of the Federal Income Tax Fraud

14 Readers commonly ask us:

15 "Your book is great, and is so thorough about analyzing all the issues and providing very compelling evidence
16 and debate to support all your arguments. The trouble is, it's hard to get my relatives and friends interested or
17 motivated enough to read your whole large book. Can you give me a very short synopsis of the income tax
18 fraud that I could tell someone in a short enough time to communicate the essential elements during an 19 elevator ride? You know, kind of like the 10 second sound byte version that I can yell off a street corner or put 20 into a short pamphlet? That's about the attention span these days of a media saturated culture, you know, and 21 we have to meet them where they are at!"

22 Good question! In responding to this query, we must remember the words of one of the most brilliant scientists who ever
23 lived, Albert Einstein, when he said:

24 "The essence of genius is simplicity."

25 The remainder of this section is our attempt to answer this request in as simple and short a way as I know how. It sums up
26 the several hundred pages in this book into one concise brief statement in order to help you get the word out:

27 _____
28 To summarize the federal income tax fraud, what the federal government did to create the "appearance" of a lawful income
29 tax on natural persons is the following, in the order it was accomplished:

- 30 1. Starting in 1862 to fund the Civil War, Congress passed a municipal donation program that only applies to privileged 31 elected federal employees within the District of Columbia and to federal territories and possessions. See 12 Stat. 432.
32 These "employees" were all officers of the federal corporation called the "United States" identified in 28 U.S.C.
33 §3002(15)(A). The "privilege" that was being "taxed" was that of holding a public office, which is called a "trade or 34 business" in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26). The definition of "employee" found in 5 U.S.C. §2105 continues to be entirely 35 consistent with this scheme.
- 36 2. They fraudulently called this donation or "kickback" program a "tax", even though the Supreme Court admitted it isn't.
37 See section 5.1.2 earlier.
- 38 3. Following the Civil War in 1871, an Act of Congress, 19 Stat. 419, made the District of Columbia into a federal 39 corporation so that this municipal donation program could be made to "appear" like a "tax" on the officers of this 40 federal corporation service in the District of Columbia.

<sup>18</sup> The Court defined these two types of taxes in the following manner: "While taxes levied upon or collected from persons because of their general ownership of property may be taken to be direct.... a tax imposed upon a particular use of property or the exercise of a single power over property incidental to ownership, is an excise which need not be apportioned..."

<sup>19</sup> At least one court has declared that the term "income" is not defined in the Internal Revenue Code; see United States v. Ballard, 535 F.2d. 400, 404 (8th Cir. 1976).

- 1 4. Starting with the Revenue Act of 1932, subjected federal judges to IRS terrorism and extortion in order to get them on
2 their side as enforcers and corrupters of the system. This program of extortion was made permanent in 1938, when the 3 Supreme Court wrongfully declared in O'Malley v. Woodrough, 307 U.S. 277 (1939) that it was Constitutional.
- 4 5. Since that time, they have:
  - 5 5.1. Created the Internal Revenue "Code" in 1939.
  - 6 5.2. Passed the Public Salary Tax Act of 1939 and the Buck Act in 1940, in order to unlawfully make the I.R.C. apply 7 within federal areas in the exterior limits of the states.
  - 8 5.3. Obfuscated and confused the "code" over the years to expand its operation, all the while knowing full well that 9 the I.R.C. was repealed in 1939 (see 53 Stat. 1) and has never been "positive law". That which is not positive law
10 cannot be enforced against those who do not consent.
- 11 6. Congress repealed the Internal Revenue Code in 1939 just before the start of the Second World War and then forgot to 12 tell everyone it was repealed. This made the I.R.C. into a state-sponsored religion for all those who obeyed it from that 13 point on. See:

53 Stat. 1, SEDM Exhibit #05.027
<http://sedm.org/Exhibits/ExhibitIndex.htm>
- 14 7. Then they spent decades propagandizing American Nationals in the states into thinking that this "tax", which is really 15 just a federal public officer "kickback program" and a voluntary franchise, applied to them. They did so as follows:
  - 16 7.1. Produced misleading and deceptive IRS publications
  - 17 7.2. By refusing to acknowledge or admit the truth about the limited scope of their jurisdiction. In short, they "played 18 stupid".
  - 19 7.3. Encouraging people to file the wrong tax form: the 1040. The 1040NR is the correct form for Americans
20 domiciled in states of the Union on other than federal territory. This created a false presumption that people
21 domiciled in the states were "U.S. citizens" and "residents" domiciled within the federal zone and subject to 22 federal legislative jurisdiction, when in fact, they were not. This gave the IRS court-admissible evidence that they 23 could use as a basis to launch bogus enforcement actions against sovereign American Nationals in the states.
  - 24 7.4. Instituted an "Enrolled agent" program to "license" tax professionals so that they could be manipulated and 25 propagandized, and have their license pulled and starve to death if they told the truth about the IRS fraud.
  - 26 7.5. Using "words of art" on government forms that are not defined on the form or in the statutes, such as "State", 27 "United States", "employee", "income", knowing full well that all these terms refer ONLY to the U.S.
28 government and not any state of the Union or the people domiciled therein.
- 29 8. They started a program called Agreements on Coordination of Tax Administration (ACTA) in 1949 and promised the 30 states "kickbacks" from this extortion if they would sign an agreement with the Secretary of the Treasury. This got the 31 states involved in the fraud and created financial incentives for them to help the IRS expand this illegal organized
32 crime and conspiracy against rights by helping them break down the separation of taxing powers between the states and
33 the federal government. The states at the point became a party to expanding the propaganda to get their citizens
34 participating in the federal system, because if they didn't, then they most couldn't collect anything from state citizens
35 because the Bill of Rights made that process too difficult. This destroyed the separation of powers between the state
36 and federal government by causing states of the Union to act like the federal "States" described in the Buck Act, 4
37 U.S.C. §110(d).
- 38 9. The IRS then launched an automated, computerized, paper-terrorism campaign with their IDRS system throughout the 39 50 states and outside of their jurisdiction to illegally enforce this donation program. Since the IRS had no 40 implementing regulations authorizing enforcement, they encouraged "voluntary compliance" through:
  - 41 9.1. Constructive fraud in their publications, which the federal courts refused to hold them accountable for.
  - 42 9.2. Incorrect telephone support advice, which the federal courts also refused to hold them accountable for.
  - 43 9.3. Encouraging "false presumption" in their treatment of Americans.
  - 44 9.4. Scare tactics on their website.
  - 45 9.5. Mistreatment of selected famous personalities that would get a lot of media coverage.
  - 46 9.6. Careful use of the media through their "Press Releases" website.
  - 47 9.7. Terrorizing tax publishers like Ernst and Young to change their publications to deceive Americans.
- 48 10. The IRS met with little resistance to the above illegal efforts at enforcement within the states because of the relative 49 legal ignorance of most people.

50 The legal profession conspired with the IRS in this extortion because doing so would increase their revenues, power, and 51 control over the society. In the process, they committed a constructive fraud, but the corrupt federal courts let them get 52 away with it because their salaries were paid by the money they were extorting. The cite below from the U.S. Supreme 53 Court helps clarify the validity of this approach:

1 "... [Counsel] has contended, that Congress must be considered in two distinct characters. In one character as
 2 legislating for the states; in the other, as a local legislature for the district [of Columbia]. In the latter
 3 character, it is admitted, the power of levying direct taxes may be exercised; but, it is contended, for district
 4 purposes only, in like manner as the legislature of a state may tax the people of a state for state purposes.
 5 Without inquiring at present into the soundness of this distinction, its possible influence on the application in
 6 this district of the first article of the constitution, and of several of the amendments, may not be altogether
 7 unworthy of consideration."
 8 [Loughborough v. Blake, 18 U.S. 317 (1820)]

9 5.2 Federal Jurisdiction to Tax

10 "Giving money and power to government is like giving Whiskey and Car keys to teenage boys"
 11 [P.J O'Rourke, Parliament of Whores]

12 "The difference between death and taxes is death doesn't get worse every time Congress meets."
 13 [Will Rogers, 1920's]

14 After reading our thorough discussion of the law in chapter 3, you ought to have a good idea the legal background we are 15 operating in. Now let's apply that to the case of an American national living and working in the 50 United States who has 16 income only from within the 50 Union states of the United States of America. We will find out from this section that the 17 federal government has jurisdiction to tax only the following items. We are showing this picture because "a picture is 18 worth a thousand words", as they say. This picture applies ONLY to states of the Union, by the way. There are NO
 19 LIMITS upon federal taxation within the federal zone or abroad, because neither of these two places are protected by the
 20 Constitution:

21 Table 5-14: Constitutional federal jurisdictions for taxation

Class of Tax	Nature of Tax	Subject of Tax	Constitutional Authority	Valid Jurisdiction(s)
Indirect Taxes	Excises Duties Imposts	Taxable activities Taxable events Taxable incidents Taxable occasions	Article 1, Section 8, Clauses 1,3 (1:8:1 and 1:8:3) 1:9:5	Throughout the federal United States on corporations and partnerships involved in foreign (outside the country) commerce only . Congress cannot tax exports from states per 1:9:5. Can only tax corporate profits of corporations derived from foreign commerce within the states.
Direct Taxes	Capitation taxes	People	1:9:4 4:3:2	Must be apportioned among the states and cannot be directly on people domiciled in states of the Union. Inside the Federal zone, anything goes per Downes v. Bidwell , 182 U.S. 244 (1901) and 4:3:2 of the Constitution.
	Property taxes	Property (which property?) (Be specific.)

22 NOTES:

- 23 1. The Sixteenth Amendment did NOT eliminate the constitutional requirement for apportionment of direct or capitation
 24 taxes, but simply placed all taxes on income in the category of indirect excise taxes, to which they inherently belonged.
 25 2. "Excise taxes" may only be placed on the sale or manufacture of goods which are imported from foreign countries.
 26 Excise taxes are synonymous to "privilege" taxes and apply only to corporations and the profits of corporations, but 27 not to natural born persons.
 28 3. Excise taxes may not be placed on exports from states or sales between two entities entirely within a single state. This
 29 requirement comes from Article 1, Section 9, Clause 5 (1:9:5) of the Constitution, which states:

30 Article 1, Section 9, Clause 5

No Tax or Duty shall be laid on Articles exported from any State.

4. The supreme Court case of Flint v. Stone Tracy Co., 220 U.S. 107 (1911) defined excise taxes as:

"...taxes laid upon the manufacture, sale, or consumption of commodities within the country, upon licenses to pursue occupations, and upon corporate privileges."

5. When the supreme Court said "licenses", they meant licenses granted by the taxing authority. For instance, under I.R.C., Subtitle A, one must be a federal corporation or franchise with a domicile in the federal zone and involved in foreign commerce in order to be liable for excise taxes. The same thing goes for state income taxes.

6. If you want to avoid income taxes altogether as a corporation, then just make sure that you have no profits and that all profits are passed on to the wage earners through a means such as employee ownership of the corporation.

Before a court can hear a matter dealing with jurisdiction, at least one of two elements that make up jurisdiction must be present. We now quote Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, on this subject:

"Subject matter jurisdiction: This term refers to a court's power to hear and determine cases of the general class or category to which proceedings in question belong; the power to deal with the general subject involved in the action. Standard Oil Co. v. Montecatini Edison S. p. A., D.C.Del., 342 F.Supp. 125, 129. See also Jurisdiction of the Subject matter."
[Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1425]

"Territorial jurisdiction: Territory over which a government or a subdivision thereof, or court, has jurisdiction. State v. Cox, 106 Utah 253, 147 P.2d. 858, 861. Jurisdiction considered as limited to cases arising or persons residing within a defined territory, as, a country, a judicial district, etc. The authority of any court is limited by the boundaries thus fixed. See also Extraterritorial jurisdiction: Jurisdiction."
[Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1473]

Lastly, if you would like to know more about the subject of the federal tax jurisdiction, we have prepared a whole line of deposition questions on the subject useful in an IRS audit or deposition that basically backs the government into the corner of admitting based on facts and evidence and their own words that they have absolutely no basis to assert jurisdiction to impose federal taxes upon sovereign Americans such as yourself. It is at:

Tax Deposition Questions, Family Guardian Fellowship
<http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/Forms/Discovery/Deposition/Deposition.htm>

Look under section 3 of the questions entitled "Jurisdiction" for some rather compelling evidence showing that what we are saying here is true.

5.2.1 Territorial Jurisdiction

Defining jurisdiction is the key to understanding what Congress can lawfully tax. This is the same as the way the real estate field works:

"The three key things in deciding property value are location, location, and location!"

In the case of the government, we could rewrite this as :

"The three key things in deciding the amount of tax that can be extracted/extorted is location, jurisdiction, and what the ignorance and apathy of the voters will let you get away with!"

In this section, we'll establish the jurisdiction of the federal government of the United States. We have compiled a list of a few court cases and statutory citations that confirm the importance of jurisdiction and geographical boundaries and their extent when establishing the relevancy of the federal tax code:

"The law of Congress in respect to those matters do not extend into the territorial limits of the states, but have force only in the District of Columbia, and other places that are within the exclusive jurisdiction of the national government."
[Caha v. United States, 152 U.S. 211 (March 5, 1894)]

1                   “. . . the states are separate sovereigns with respect to the federal government. The states are no less sovereign
2 with respect to each other than they are with respect to the federal government. The Court expressly refused to
3 find that only state and federal government could be considered distinct sovereign with respect to each other: '
4 [Heath v. Alabama, 474 U.S. 82 (December 3, 1985)]

5                   "All legislation is prima facie territorial."
6 [American Banana Co. v. United Fruit Co., 213 U.S. 347, at 357-358 (1909)]

7                   "A canon of construction which teaches that of Congress, unless a contrary intent appears, is meant to apply
8 only within the territorial jurisdiction of the United States."
9 [U.S. v. Spelar, 338 U.S. 217 at 222 (1949)]

10                   NOTE: An example of this construction and limitation is found in Title 18 USC
11 (Criminal Code) at §7 which specifies such jurisdiction outside of any particular state.
12 The Federal income tax of 1939 recorded in the Statues at Large of October 3, 1913 on 13 page 177 states the limitation to be only that of "any Federal territory, Alaska, District of 14 Columbia, Puerto Rico and Philippine Islands." Alaska is now a Sovereign state and the 15 Philippine islands are no longer a territory of the United States** and you cannot find any 16 reference to these former territories in the Internal Revenue Code. Why is that?

17                   "The United States government is a foreign corporation with respect to a state."
18 [N.Y. re: Merriam, 36 N.E. 505, 141 N.Y. 479, Affirmed 16 S.Ct. 1973, 41 L.Ed. 287]

19                   "Legislation is presumptively territorial and confined to the limits over which the law making power has 20 jurisdiction."
21 [N.Y. R.R. v. Chisholm, 268 U.S. 29 at 31-32 (1925)]

22 In addition to these cases, the most enlightening case of all on the subject of federal jurisdiction and the division of 23 responsibilities between the states and the Federal government is the supreme Court case of U.S. v. Lopez, 514 U.S. 549
24 (1995). This case firmly establishes that the only thing that the federal government can regulate or tax within states are 25 activities that impact commerce between states, under the Commerce Clause of the U.S. Constitution, Article 1, Section 8,
26 Clause 3. There is no other constitutional basis for any federal taxation or intervention within a sovereign state than the 27 Commerce Clause. Direct taxes on citizens assessed within states violate the Commerce Clause and usurp the power,
28 sovereignty, and authority of the states and implementation of such taxes by the IRS and the Treasury should have been 29 declared unconstitutional by all federal courts long ago.

30 Now that we have established the importance of geography and sovereignty of the states vis a vis the Federal Government,
31 let's look at the definitions of the term "United States". Looking into the IRC we find specifics about the definition of the 32 "United States". It is not the same as the "United States of America".

33 1. "United States": general definition for the entire Title 26. This definition is to be used in all chapters, sub-chapter,
34 sections, sub-sections, etc., unless there is another definition for the "United States" for that specific chapter, sub-chapter,
35 section, sub-section, etc.”:

36                   Sec. 7701 Definitions:

37                   (a) When used in this title, where not otherwise distinctly expressed or manifestly incompatible with the intent
38 thereof –

39                   (9) United States. The term "United States" when used in the geographical sense includes only the States and 40 the District Of Columbia.

41 2. Section 3121 of the I.R.C. deals with the Rate of tax, in Subchapter A - Tax on Employees of Chapter 21-Federal 42 Insurance Contributions Act (FICA). This definition is for chapter 21 ONLY. This definition does not apply to any other 43 chapter, subchapter, section subsection, etc.

44                   Sec. 3121 Definitions: (e) State, United States and citizen.

45                   For purposes of this chapter -(2) United States. The term "United States" when used in the geographical sense
46 includes the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, Guam, and American Samoa.

3. Section 3306 deals with Chapter 23-Federal Unemployment Tax Act. This definition is for Chapter 23 ONLY. This definition does not apply to any other chapter, subchapter, section subsection, etc.

Sec. 3306 Definitions:

(j) State, United States and citizen. For purposes of this chapter –

(2) United States. The term "United States" when used in the geographical sense includes the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, Guam, and American Samoa.

From these citations, we can clearly infer that jurisdiction and geography are the foundation of all laws! That is why references to legitimate "sources" of tax are so important and why they can't be ignored, even though the Congress and the IRS would like for you to do so! This section also explains the otherwise absurd definitions of the following two terms found earlier in the document:

Employee: An officer or employee of the federal government (see section 3.11.1.3 and 26 U.S.C. § 3401(c))

State: The District of Columbia (see section 3.12.1.19 and 26 U.S.C. § 7701).

5.2.2 Sovereignty: Key to Understanding Federal Territorial Jurisdiction

The concept of sovereignty is the key to understanding federal jurisdiction. First, let's define the term from Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, page 1396:

sovereignty. The power to do everything in a state without accountability, --to make laws, to execute and to apply them, to impose and collect taxes and levy contributions, to make war or peace, to form treaties of alliance or of commerce with foreign nations, and the like.

Sovereignty in government is that public authority which directs or orders what is to be done by each member associated in relation to the end of the association. It is the supreme power by which any citizen is governed and is the person or body of persons in the necessary existence of the state and that right and power which necessarily follow is "sovereignty." By "sovereignty" in its largest sense it means supreme, absolute, uncontrollable power, the absolute right to govern. The word which by itself comes nearest to being the definition of "sovereignty" is will or volition as applied to political affairs. City of Bisbee v. Cochise County, 52 Ariz. 1, 78 P.2d. 982, 986."
[Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1396]

The issue of sovereignty as it relates to jurisdiction is the foundation of understanding our system of government under the Constitution. In the most common sense of the word, "sovereignty" is autonomy, freedom from external control. The sovereignty of any government usually extends up to, but not beyond, the geographical borders of its jurisdiction. This jurisdiction defines a specific territorial boundary which separates the "external" from the "internal", the "within" from the "without", or the "domestic" from the "foreign". It may also define a specific function, or set of functions, which a government may lawfully perform within a particular geographic boundary.

Sovereignty is a term to be used very thoughtfully and carefully. In fact, in America, it is the foundation for all governmental authority, because it is always delegated downwards from the true source of sovereignty, the People themselves! This is the entire basis of our Constitutional Republic as follows:

"The ultimate authority ... resides in the people alone."
James Madison, [The Federalist, No. 46.]

"Whatever these Constitutions and laws validly determine to be property, it is the duty of the Federal Government, through the domain of jurisdiction merely Federal, to recognize to be property.

"And this principle follows from the structure of the respective Governments, State and Federal, and their reciprocal relations. They are different agents and trustees of the people of the several States, appointed with different powers and with distinct purposes, but whose acts, within the scope of their respective jurisdictions, are mutually obligatory."
[Dred Scott v. Sandford, 60 U.S. 393 (1856)]

1 "While sovereign powers are delegated to ... the government, sovereignty itself remains with the people.."
2 Yick Wo v. Hopkins, [118 U.S. 356 (1886)]

3 "There is no such thing as a power of inherent sovereignty in the government of the United States .... In this
4 country sovereignty resides in the people, and Congress can exercise no power which they have not, by their
5 Constitution entrusted to it: All else is withheld."
6 [Juilliard v. Greenman, 110 U.S. 421 (1884)]

7 "In the United States***, sovereignty resides in the people who act through the organs established by the 8 Constitution. [cites omitted] The Congress as the instrumentality of sovereignty is endowed with certain
9 powers to be exerted on behalf of the people in the manner and with the effect the Constitution ordains. The 10 Congress cannot invoke the sovereign power of the people to override their will as thus declared."
11 Perry v. United States, [294 U.S. 330, 353 (1935)]

12 The "federal zone" is that area over which the sovereignty or "general legislative jurisdiction" or "police powers" of the 13 federal government extends under the authority of Article 1, Section 8, Clause 17 of the U.S. Constitution. It consists of the 14 District of Columbia, the territories and possessions belonging to Congress under Title 48 of the U.S. Code, and a limited
15 amount of land within the states of the Union called "federal enclaves" or "federal areas". Enclaves are often referred to in 16 U.S. government regulations simply as "the states" or "the States", which can and often does deceive people into thinking
17 this means all of the nonfederal land in the 50 sovereign states of the union when in fact it does not in nearly all cases. The 18 U.S. Supreme Court, in the case of Hooven and Allison v. Evatt, confirmed this view in its definition of "United States":

19 "The term 'United States' may be used in any one of several senses. [1] It may be merely the name of a
20 sovereign* occupying the position analogous to that of other sovereigns in the family of nations. [2] It may 21 designate the territory over which the sovereignty of the United States** extends, or [3] it may be the 22 collective name of the states*** which are united by and under the Constitution."
23 Hooven & Allison Co. v. Evatt, [324 U.S. 652 (1945)]

24 Note that only the second definition of the term "United States" above uses the word "sovereignty", and this area is the 25 "federal zone". Let's clarify the other word, "territory" used in this second definition:

26 "Various meanings are sought to be attributed to the term 'territory' in the phrase 'the United States and all
27 territory subject to the jurisdiction thereof.' We are of opinion that it means the regional areas- of land and 28 adjacent waters-over which the United States claims and exercises dominion and control as a sovereign
29 power. The immediate context and the purport of the entire section show that the term is used in a physical 30 and not a metaphorical sense-that it refers to areas or districts having fixity of location and recognized
31 boundaries. See United States v. Bevans, 3 Wheat. 336, 390.

32 "It now is settled in the United States and recognized elsewhere that the territory subject to US jurisdiction
33 includes the land areas under its dominion and control, the ports, harbors, bays and other enclosed arms of 34 the sea along its coast and a marginal belt of the sea extending from the coast line outward a marine league,
35 or three geographic miles. Church v. Hubbard, 2 Cranch, 187, 234; The Ann, 1 Fed.Cas. No. 397, p. 926;
36 United States v. Smiley, 27 Fed.Cas. No. 16317, p. 1132; Manchester v. Massachusetts, 139 U.S. 240, 257, 258

43 An examination of the authoritative publication called Words and Phrases also clarifies the distinction between a sovereign
44 Union "state" and a federal "territory":

45 "A territory is not a state, nor are the words "territory" and 'state' used as synonymous or convertible terms
46 in the acts of Congress. For instance, in 1853, Congress passed "An act regulating the fees and costs in the 47 several states." By act of 1855 Congress extended the provisions of the act of 1853 to the territories 'as fully in 48 all particulars as they would be had the word 'territories' been inserted after the word 'states,'" and the act
49 had read in the several states and territories of the United States. Smith v. U.S., 1 Wash.T. 262, 268. See Brigh
50 Dig. Pp. 273, 279."

51 "The "state" is only a corporate name for all the citizens within certain territorial limits. Regents of 52 University System of Georgia v. Blanton, 176 S.E. 673, 49 Ga.App. 602."

53 ""State" means a body of people occupying definite territory and politically organized under one government.

[40 Words and Phrases, p. 12-20.]

So Union “states” are not “territories” of the federal government. They are, instead, independent sovereignties and are not part of the “sovereignty” of the federal government in a general sense. This was confirmed by the U.S. Supreme Court in the case of Clyatt v. U.S., 197 U.S. 207 (1905), which was a case about slavery and the Thirteenth Amendment which we quote below. Note how the court distinguishes in its ruling between “sovereignty of the United States” and “the states” (note the capitalization of the word “states” by the way).

“Other authorities to the same effect might be cited. It is not open to doubt that Congress may enforce the Thirteenth Amendment by direct legislation, punishing the holding of a person in slavery or in involuntary servitude except as a punishment for a crime. In the exercise of that power Congress has enacted these sections denouncing peonage, and punishing one who holds another in that condition of involuntary servitude. This legislation is not limited to the territories or other parts of the strictly national domain, but is operative in the states and wherever the sovereignty of the United States extends. We entertain no doubt of the validity of this legislation, or of its applicability to the case of any person holding another in a state of peonage, and this whether there be municipal ordinance or state law sanctioning such holding. It operates directly on every citizen of the Republic, wherever his residence may be.”
[Clyatt v. U.S., 197 U.S. 207 (1905)]

In the above, if the term “sovereignty of the United States” and “the states” were equivalent, then the sentence “This legislation ...is operative in the states and whenever the sovereignty of the United States extends” would be redundant and unnecessary. Below is another example of how the states of the union are sovereign and independent of the federal government, again right from the mouth of the U.S. Supreme Court:

*“The several States of the Union are not, it is true, in every respect independent, many of the right and powers which originally belonged to them being now vested in the government created by the Constitution. But, except as restrained and limited by that instrument, they possess and exercise the authority of independent States, and the principles of public law to which we have referred are applicable to them. One of these principles is, that every State possesses exclusive jurisdiction and sovereignty over persons and property within its territory. As a consequence, every State has the power to determine for itself the civil status [e.g. citizenship] and capacities of its inhabitants; to prescribe the subjects upon which they may contract, the forms and solemnities with which their contracts shall be executed, the rights and obligations arising from them, and the mode in which their validity shall be determined and their obligations enforced; and also the regulate the manner and conditions upon which property situated within such territory, both personal and real, may be acquired, enjoyed, and transferred. The other principle of public law referred to follows from the one mentioned; that is, that no State can exercise direct jurisdiction and authority over persons or property without its territory. Story, Confl. Laws, c. 2; Wheat. Int. Law, pt. 2, c. 2. The several States are of equal dignity and authority, and the independence of one implies the exclusion of power from all others.”*
[Pennoyer v. Neff, 95 U.S. 714 (1877)]

The federal zone area, which we abbreviate as “United States**” throughout this book or simply as the “federal United States” is described in the Treasury Regulations as follows:

*“The term “United States**” when used in a geographical sense includes any territory under the sovereignty of the United States**. It includes the [federal enclaves with the] states, the District of Columbia, the possessions and territories of the United States**, the territorial waters of the United States**, the air space over the United States**, and the seabed and subsoil of those submarine areas which are adjacent to the territorial waters of the United States** and over which the United States** has exclusive rights, in accordance with international law, with respect to the exploration and exploitation of natural resources.”*
[26 C.F.R. §1.911-2(g) ]

Unfortunately, nowhere in the Internal Revenue Code or Treasury Regulations does it indicate how to distinguish between “United States” in its geographic sense indicated above, and “United States” in any of the other two senses defined by the Supreme Court in Hooven, nor do they say that the geographic sense is the only sense in which that term is used in the code or regulations. Consequently, once again, the Internal Revenue Code is “void for vagueness” and unenforceable, as we point out later in section 5.10 of this chapter.

A nation or state has no jurisdiction outside its own territory, as made clear by the U.S. supreme Court in Dred Scott v. John F.A. Sanford, 60 U.S. 393 (1856):

“Every State or nation possesses an exclusive sovereignty and jurisdiction within her own territory, and her laws affect and bind all property and persons residing within it. It may regulate the manner and circumstances under which property is held, and the condition, capacity, and state of all persons therein, and also the remedy and modes of administering justice. And it is equally true that no State or nation can affect or bind property out of its territory, or persons not residing within it. No State therefore can enact laws to operate beyond its own dominions, and if it attempts to do so, it may be lawfully refused obedience. Such laws can have no inherent authority extraterritorially. This is the necessary result of the independence of distinct and separate sovereignties."

Now it follows from these principles that whatever force or effect the laws of one State or nation may have in the territories of another must depend solely upon the laws and municipal regulations of the latter, upon its own jurisprudence and polity, and upon its own express or tacit consent."
[Dred Scott v. John F.A. Sanford, 60 U.S. 393 (1856)]

IMPORTANT NOTE: In law, everything outside the "territory" (which describes the "exclusive" or "general" sovereignty, sometimes also called "plenary jurisdiction") of a nation or state is considered "foreign" with respect to it. It is absolutely crucial that you understand this concept. A person born in a state of the Union, for instance, is called a "national" but not a "citizen" under federal law, and his status is defined in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) but not limited or regulated in any way. The reason for this is clear, by reading the case above

"As a consequence, every State has the power to determine for itself the civil status [e.g. citizenship] and capacities of its inhabitants" [ . . . ] The several States are of equal dignity and authority, and the independence of one implies the exclusion of power from all others.
[Pennoyer v. Neff, 95 U.S. 714 (1877)]

A "national but not a citizen" is "foreign" with respect to federal government because he does not come under the jurisdiction of its law, and therefore is called a "non-resident non-person" under the tax code. If they are also engaged in a public office, they become a "nonresident alien". The definition of "nonresident alien" confirms this, noting that a "national" fits the criteria for being a "nonresident alien":

26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(B)

An individual is a nonresident alien if such individual is neither a citizen of the United States nor a resident of the United States (within the meaning of subparagraph (A)).

Most people in ordinary speech have an aversion to being called an "alien" or a "non-resident non-person" or "nonresident alien" in respect to the federal government. Our corrupted politicians and the legal profession have capitalized on this "cognitive dissonance" by refusing to cover such important subjects as the "Separation of Powers Doctrine" in the public school curricula or in the IRS publications. Understanding the Separation of Powers Doctrine can have profound effect on how we describe our status on government forms. The fact that most Americans do not understand this important concept has caused them to misrepresent their status to the Internal Revenue Service by submitting the wrong tax form, the 1040. The correct form for a person born in a state of the Union is the 1040NR, and not the 1040 with the following attached:

1. Tax Form Attachment, Form #04.201
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>
2. Affidavit of Citizenship, Domicile, and Tax Status, Form #02.001
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

The 1040NR form is completed by "nonresident aliens". The fact that the term "foreign" is nowhere defined in the Internal Revenue Code is no accident, and results from the fact that your public dis-servants do not want you to know about the Separation of Powers Doctrine and its effect on their jurisdiction over you. They want to undermine and destroy your sovereignty by devious legal means, because it makes the job of governing you "more convenient" and empowering for them. SCUM BAGS!

If Americans would just learn how the Separation of Powers Doctrine works and not have an aversion to being called a "nonresident alien", then we could at least have hope that things would get better and that the federal government would once again be put back inside the legal box that the founders bequeathed to us.

None of the 50 united States comes under the general sovereignty of the federal "United States*" under Article 1, Section 8, Clause 17 of the Constitution, nor are the nonfederal areas of the 50 Union states subject to the exclusive rights or jurisdiction of the federal government. Therefore, we must conclude that the term "the states" in 26 C.F.R. §1.911-2(g) above refers only to federal enclaves inside the borders of the sovereign states, and most people do NOT live in these areas. Furthermore, 26 C.F.R. §1.911-2(h) reveals that anything outside the "federal zone" is considered a "foreign country", including the 50 Union states united by the Constitution!:

1 26 C.F.R. §1.911-2(h):

2 "The term "foreign country" when used in a geographical sense includes any territory under the sovereignty
 3 of a government other than that of the [federal] United States**. It includes the territorial waters of the 4 foreign country (determined in accordance with the laws of the United States**), the air space over the foreign
 5 country, and the seabed and subsoil of those submarine areas which are adjacent to the territorial waters of the 6 foreign country and over which the foreign country has exclusive rights, in accordance with international
 7 law, with respect to the exploration and exploitation of natural resources."

8 That's right(!): all of the 50 sovereign states are foreign with respect to each other and are under the exclusive sovereignty
 9 of their respective legislatures, except where a specific power has been expressly delegated to Congress over lands within 10 their borders. For cases where such a specific power has been delegated by the states to the federal government, this is 11 called "subject matter jurisdiction" rather than "territorial jurisdiction". Each of these states, in turn, is also foreign to the 12 territorial jurisdiction of the U.S. government for the purposes of income taxes as well. The Citizens of each Union state
 13 are foreigners and aliens with respect to another Union state, unless they establish a domicile therein under the laws of that 14 Union state. Otherwise, they are "nonresident aliens" with respect to all the other Union states and with respect to the 15 Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A. As far as legal fictions such as corporations, "domestic" corporations within a state are 16 those corporations chartered within that state. Those corporations chartered in other states are considered "foreign 17 corporations". Here are a few quotes to back this up:

18 Foreign Laws: "The laws of a foreign country or sister state."
 19 [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 647]

20 Foreign States: "Nations outside of the United States...Term may also refer to another state; i.e. a sister state.
 21 The term 'foreign nations', ...should be construed to mean all nations and states other than that in which the
 22 action is brought; and hence, one state of the Union is foreign to another, in that sense."
 23 [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 648]

24 When the U.S. Supreme Court is trying to describe places where the "sovereignty" of a state or the federal government is 25 exclusive and complete and entire, their favorite word is "plenary":

26 "Plenary. Full, entire, complete, absolute, perfect, unqualified. Mashunkashney v. Mashunkashney, 191 Okl.
 27 501, 134 P.2d. 976, 979."
 28 [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1154]

29 Here are a few examples of how the U.S. Supreme Court uses the word "plenary":

30 "In the states, there reposes the sovereignty to manage their own affairs except only as the requirements of the 31 Constitution otherwise provide. Within these constitutional limits the power of the state over taxation is 32 plenary."
 33 [Madden v. Commonwealth of Kentucky, 309 U.S. 83 (1940)]

34 "In dealing with the meaning and application of an act of Congress enacted in the exercise of its plenary
 35 power under the Constitution to tax income and to grant exemptions from that tax, it is the will of Congress
 36 which controls, and the expression of its will, in the absence of language evidencing a different purpose,
 37 should be interpreted 'so as to give a uniform application to a nation-wide scheme of taxation'. Burnet v.
 38 Harmel, 287 U.S. 103, 110, 53 S.Ct. 74, 77. Congress establishes its own criteria and the state law may control
 39 only when the federal taxing act by express language or necessary implication makes its operation dependent
 40 upon state law. Burnet v. Harmel, supra. See Burk-Waggoner Oil Association v. Hopkins, 269 U.S. 110, 111,
 41 114 S., 46 S.Ct. 48, 49; Weiss v. Wiener, 279 U.S. 333, 49 S.Ct. 337; Morrissey v. Commissioner, 296 U.S. 344,
 42 356, 56 S.Ct. 289, 294. Compare Crooks v. Harrelson, 282 U.S. 55, 59, 51 S.Ct. 49, 50; Poe v. Seaborn, 282
 43 U.S. 101, 109, 110 S., 51 S.Ct. 58; Blair v. Commissioner, 300 U.S. 5, 9, 10 S., 57 S.Ct. 330, 331."
 44 Lyeth v. Hoey, [305 U.S. 188, 59 S.Ct. 155 \(1938\)]

45 Notice in the above that the term "state" is in lower case, because the court is talking about federal statutes, and in these 46 statutes, states of the Union are "foreign countries" and are not part of the general sovereignty of the federal government.
 47 The Supreme Court basically says in Madden above that the power of the states in regards to taxation is plenary within their 48 own borders, which means it is absolute and isn't shared with anyone, including the federal government. You will also find
 49 out in sections 7.4.1 and 7.4.2 of the Tax Fraud Prevention Manual, Form #06.008 that "Acts of Congress" mentioned in
 50 Lyeth above only have force within the "federal zone" and nowhere else by default. The subject of the Madden case above
 51 is a state tax. The court said that the power of the state government to impose taxes on persons within their borders who are
 52 "U.S. citizens" is "plenary", which means unrestrained or not limited by federal taxing powers. In doing so, they overruled
 53 Colgate v. Harvey, 296 U.S. 404 (1935), which was a case that made state citizen status inferior to that of federal or

1 constitutional "U.S. citizen" status. Reading Madden further confirms that Madden was a constitutional "U.S. citizen",
 2 because the Mr. Madden's executor counsel claimed that Mr. Madden was a constitutional "U.S. citizen" who came under
 3 the "privileges and immunities clause" of the Fourteenth Amendment:

4 "II. Privileges and Immunities.-

5 The appellant [for Mr. Madden, the deceased] presses urgently upon us the argument that the privileges and
 6 immunities clause of the Fourteenth Amendment of the Constitution of the United States forbids the 7 enforcement by the Commonwealth of Kentucky of this enactment which imposes upon the testator taxes five
 8 times as great on money deposited in banks outside the State as it does on money of others deposited in banks
 9 within the State. The privilege or immunity which appellant contends is abridged is the right to carry on 10 business beyond the lines of the State of his residence, a right claimed as appertaining to national citizenship. "
 11 [Madden v. Commonwealth of Kentucky, 309 U.S. 83 (1940)]

12 To summarize, we need to think of Congress as "City Hall" for the "federal zone". In 1820, Justice Marshall described it
 13 this way:

14 "... [Counsel] has contended, that Congress must be considered in two distinct characters. In one character as
 15 legislating for the states; in the other, as a local legislature for the district [of Columbia]. In the latter
 16 character, it is admitted, the power of levying direct taxes may be exercised; but, it is contended, for district
 17 purposes only, in like manner as the legislature of a state may tax the people of a state for state purposes.
 18 Without inquiring at present into the soundness of this distinction, its possible influence on the application in
 19 this district of the first article of the constitution, and of several of the amendments, may not be altogether
 20 unworthy of consideration."
 21 [Loughborough v. Blake, 18 U.S. 317 (1820)]

22 The two distinct characters are mentioned again in a case the following year heard before the same Supreme Court, Cohens
 23 v. Virginia, 6 Wheat. 264, 5 L.Ed. 257 (1821):

24 "It is clear that Congress as a legislative body, exercises two species of legislative power: the one, limited as to
 25 its objects but extending all over the Union; the other, an absolute, exclusive legislative power over the District
 26 of Columbia."

27 The problem thus becomes one of deciding which of these "two distinct jurisdictions" is being referred to in the context of 28 whatever tax statute or citizenship statute we are reading. The IRC language used to express the meaning of the word
 29 "State" is arguably the best place to undertake a careful diagnosis of this split personality. However, one good place to start
 30 appears in the cite below, which establishes that we should assume in any law passed by Congress that the jurisdiction they
 31 are referring to is only the federal zone and not the 50 Union states, unless an express contrary intent is clearly shown:

32 "A canon of [statutory] construction which teaches that of Congress, unless a contrary intent appears, is meant
 33 to apply only within the territorial jurisdiction of the United States."
 34 [U.S. v. Spelar, 338 U.S. 217 at 222 (1949)]

35 The reasons why we must conclude that federal statutes only apply within the federal zone by default are very clear: the 36 federal government has no "police powers" within the borders of the states, as we covered thoroughly under section 4.9.
 37 "Police powers" are synonymous with "legislative jurisdiction" or "criminal jurisdiction". 40 U.S.C. §3112 abundantly
 38 confirms these conclusions by stating that the federal government has no jurisdiction within the borders of a state of the 39 union except by an act of the legislature ceding specific lands to the federal government.

40 A very interesting exposition on the relationship of the states to the federal government can be found in the book entitled 41 Conflicts in a Nutshell, Third Edition, David D. Siegel and Patrick J. Borchers, ISBN 0-314-160669-3, West Publishing.
 42 This exposition helps underscore the content of this section. On pp. 39-41 of this document, we find the following very 43 revealing quote:

44 §22 Federal Subject Matter Jurisdiction

45 Because of our federal system, in which more than 50 sovereigns function within the framework of a
 46 national sovereign, the federal court structure is unique in that its principal trial court, the U.S. District
 47 Court, is a court of limited rather than general jurisdiction. The state is left to supply the "general" court.
 48 The federal constitution permits Congress to confer on federal courts of its creation only such jurisdiction as is
 49 outlined in section 2 of Article III. Hence the source of these federal limitations is the constitution itself.

Even within the federal system, however, one can find courts of general jurisdiction. Areas within the jurisdiction of the United States that lack their own sovereignty, and thus a court system of their own, must depend on the federal legislature for a complete court system: the District of Columbia and the few remaining territories of the United States are in this category. For them, Congress has the power (from Article I of the constitution for the District and from Article IV of the constitution for the territories) to create courts of general jurisdiction. But Congress has no such power with respect to the states, for which reason all of the federal courts sitting within the states, including the district courts, must trace their powers to those within the limits of Article III and are hence courts of "limited" jurisdiction.

This is one reason why issues of subject matter jurisdiction arise more frequently in the federal system than in state courts. Another is that for a variety of reasons, federal jurisdiction is often preferred by a plaintiff who has a choice of forums. Taken together, this means that more cases near the subject matter jurisdiction borderline appear in the federal than in the state courts.

One of the major sources of federal subject matter jurisdiction is the diversity of citizenship of the parties. It authorizes federal suit even though the dispute involves no issues of federal law. The statute that authorizes this jurisdiction, however (28 U.S.C.A. §1332), requires that there be more than $75,000 in controversy. A plaintiff near that figure and who wants federal jurisdiction will try for it, while a defendant who prefers that the state courts hear the case may try to get it dismissed from federal court on the ground that it can't support a judgment for more than $75,000.

A major source of federal jurisdiction is that the case "arises under" federal law, the phrase the constitution itself uses (Article III, §2). Unless it so arises, there is no subject matter jurisdiction under this caption, and whether it does or does not is often the subject of a dispute between the parties to a federal action.

For these and other reasons, the study of "subject matter" jurisdiction is a more extensive one in federal than in state practice. Indeed, a law school course on federal courts is likely to be devoted in the main to subject matter jurisdiction, with a correspondingly similar time allotment left for mere procedure, rather the reverse of what usually occurs in a course studying the state courts. [Conflicts in a Nutshell, Third Edition, David D. Siegel and Patrick J. Borchers, ISBN 0-314-160669-3, West Publishing, pp. 39-41]

To give you an idea of the extent of federal jurisdiction relating to various areas of law, we've prepared a table summarizing the jurisdiction of the federal government in various subject matters. A picture is worth a thousand words, and this table is the equivalent of a picture of federal sovereignty and jurisdiction. The important thing to remember as you examine the table below is that Subtitle A personal income taxes are indirect excise taxes which apply to persons and federal corporations domiciled within the federal zone as per Eisner v. Macomber, 252 U.S. 189 (1920). This conclusion explains items 6 and 7:

Table 5-15: Limits of U.S. Sovereignty by Subject Matter

#	Subject matter	Legal reference	"Federal zone" Jurisdiction? (U.S.)	Sovereign 50 Union states jurisdiction? (nonfederal areas, U.S* or U.S.)
1	Immigration and naturalization	Constitution 1:8:4	YES	YES
2	Regulate/tax foreign commerce (excises on imports )	Constitution 1:8:3	YES	YES
3	Tax exports from sovereign states	Constitution 1:9:5	NO	NO
4	Coining money and punishing counterfeiting	Constitution 1:8:5	YES	YES
5	Establish military, forts, magazines	Constitution 1:8:12 thru 1:8:16	YES (on land ceded to U.S. by states)	NO
6	Subtitle A-C personal income taxes on natural persons	Constitution 1:2:3 and 1:9:4 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) 26 U.S.C. §77019(a)(10) U.S. v. Spelar, 338 U.S. 217 (1949)	YES	NO
7	Subtitle A income taxes on corporations involved in foreign commerce	Constitution 1:8:1 and 1:8:3	YES	YES
8	Subtitle D and E excise taxes on U.S. chartered licenses and corporations only	Constitution 1:8:1 and 1:8:3	YES	YES

EXAMPLE: 1:9:4=Article 1, Section 9, Clause 4 of the U.S. Constitution.

NOTE: The federal government may only reach inside the borders of a sovereign state for the sake of enforcing areas over which the government has subject matter jurisdiction, because it cannot have territorial jurisdiction and cannot be sovereign there. Sovereignty is only exercised when the type of jurisdiction is exclusively territorial. This point is very important to remember when you read the Constitution.

5.2.3 Two Species of Federal Legislative Jurisdiction

Before we proceed further, we need to remember that our Congress legislates for two jurisdictions. In the United States of America, there are two (2) separated and distinct jurisdictions,

1. The jurisdiction of states of the Union within their own state boundaries. These areas are subject to the sovereignty of the states and the federal government can only have subject matter but not territorial jurisdiction or sovereignty within these areas. Any federal courts created or authorized by legislation or the Constitution to adjudicate matters in these areas must come under Article III of the U.S. Constitution. An example of an Article III court is the Supreme Court. District and Circuit courts of the United States are Article I territorial courts that do not have jurisdiction within states of the Union.
2. Federal jurisdiction (United States), which is limited to the District of Columbia, the U.S. Territories and possessions, and federal enclaves within the states, under Article I, Section 8, Clause 17 of the federal Constitution as well as to federal property wherever located. We call these areas the “federal zone” within this book. These areas are subject only to the general or plenary sovereignty of the U.S. government, and do not come under the jurisdiction of the states of the Union except by mutual agreement between the federal government and a state in a cession document. Any federal courts created by legislation to address matters exclusively within these areas are Article I (of the Constitution) courts. An example of an Article I court is the U.S. Tax Court. Article III courts can also address issues within these areas, but are exercising Article I powers when they do so. Portions of the federal zone are without Constitutional protections, and it is only in those areas where direct taxes or taxes on natural persons can lawfully be collected. In most cases, the areas without Constitutional protections are limited to U.S. territories such as Guam, Puerto Rico, American Samoa, and the Virgin Islands, which are also called federal States and are listed in Title 48 of the U.S. Code.

As we described in detail earlier in sections 4.8 and 4.11.4, only those areas that do not have Constitutional protections, that is the Bill of Rights, can be the proper subject of unapportioned direct taxes on natural persons. These areas are, in almost all cases, federal territories. It is also true that the only place anywhere where the U.S. Congress has the authority or legislative power to suspend the operation of any part of the Constitution is in U.S. territories and enclaves within the states that have never been under the protection of the U.S. Constitution. With this in mind, we can then turn a critical eye at a highly suspect piece of legislation below to establish precisely where Subtitle A federal income taxes can properly apply:

United States Code
 TITLE 28 - JUDICIARY AND JUDICIAL PROCEDURE
 PART VI - PARTICULAR PROCEEDINGS
 CHAPTER 151 - DECLARATORY JUDGMENTS
 Sec. 2201. Creation of remedy

(a) In a case of actual controversy within its jurisdiction, except with respect to Federal taxes other than actions brought under section 7428 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, a proceeding under section 505 or 1146 of title 11, or in any civil action involving an antidumping or countervailing duty proceeding regarding a class or kind of merchandise of a free trade area country (as defined in section 516A(f)(10) of the Tariff Act of 1930), as determined by the administering authority, any court of the United States, upon the filing of an appropriate pleading, may declare the rights and other legal relations of any interested party seeking such declaration, whether or not further relief is or could be sought. Any such declaration shall have the force and effect of a final judgment or decree and shall be reviewable as such.

(b) For limitations on actions brought with respect to drug patents see section 505 or 512 of the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act.

So what the Congress is saying in the above statute that it authored, is that federal courts, in the case of Subtitle A income tax cases (which apply mainly to natural persons) may not address RIGHTS, and the rights they are talking about are the Bill of Rights, which are the first fourteen amendments to the Constitution! But wait a minute: Congress is bound by the Constitution and they can't legislate it out of existence in the 50 Union states. Even the Supreme Court admitted this:

1 “The Constitution had attached to it irrevocably. There are steps which can never**
 2 be taken backward. The tie that bound the states of Maryland and Virginia to the Constitution
 3 could not be dissolved, without at least the consent of the Federal and state governments to a formal
 4 separation. The mere cession of the District of Columbia to the Federal government relinquished the
 5 authority of the states, but it did not take it out of the United States or from under the aegis of the 6 Constitution. Neither party had ever consented to that construction of the cession. If, before the District was 7 set off, Congress had passed an unconstitutional act affecting its inhabitants, it would have been void.”
 8 [Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 (1901)]

9 There is only one place where the Congress can pass legislation that suspends enforcement of the Constitution, and that is
 10 in Constitution Article I, II, or IV courts inside the federal zone or Article III courts in administering laws that only apply to 11 the federal zone or abroad. This ought to be a BIG clue that Subtitle A federal income taxes can only apply in federal 12 territories that are already devoid of Constitutional protections. This can be confirmed by reading the rest of the Supreme 13 Court Case of Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 (1901), cited above:

14 “Loughborough v. Blake, 5 Wheat. 317, 5 L.Ed. 98, was an action of trespass or, as appears by the original
 15 record, replevin, brought in the circuit court for the District of Columbia to try the right of Congress to impose
 16 a direct tax for general purposes on that District. 3 Stat. at L. 216, chap. 60. It was insisted that Congress
 17 could act in a double capacity: in one as legislating [182 U.S. 244, 260] for the states; in the other as a local
 18 legislature for the District of Columbia. In the latter character, it was admitted that the power of levying direct
 19 taxes might be exercised, but for District purposes only, as a state legislature might tax for state purposes; but 20 that it could not legislate for the District under art. 1, 8, giving to Congress the power 'to lay and collect taxes,
 21 imposts, and excises,' which 'shall be uniform throughout the United States,' inasmuch as the District was no
 22 part of the United States. It was held that the grant of this power was a general one without limitation as to
 23 place, and consequently extended to all places over which the government extends; and that it extended to the 24 District of Columbia as a constituent part of the United States. The fact that art. 1, 2, declares that 25 'representatives and direct taxes shall be apportioned among the several states . . . according to their respective 26 numbers' furnished a standard by which taxes were apportioned, but not to exempt any part of the country from 27 their operation. The words used do not mean that direct taxes shall be imposed on states only which are 28 represented, or shall be apportioned to representatives; but that direct taxation, in its application to states,
 29 shall be apportioned to numbers.' That art. 1, 9, 4, declaring that direct taxes shall be laid in proportion to the 30 census, was applicable to the District of Columbia, 'and will enable Congress to apportion on it its just and
 31 equal share of the burden, with the same accuracy as on the respective states. If the tax be laid in this
 32 proportion, it is within the very words of the restriction. It is a tax in proportion to the census or enumeration
 33 referred to.' It was further held that the words of the 9th section did not 'in terms require that the system of 34 direct taxation, when resorted to, shall be extended to the territories, as the words of the 2d section require that 35 it shall be extended to all the states. They therefore may, without violence, be understood to give a rule when 36 the territories shall be taxed, without imposing the necessity of taxing them.'”

37 “There could be no doubt as to the correctness of this conclusion, so far, at least, as it applied to the District
 38 of Columbia. This District had been a part of the states of Maryland and [182 U.S. 244, 261] Virginia. It had
 39 *been subject to the Constitution, and was a part of the United States[***]. The Constitution had attached to it
 40 irrevocably. There are steps which can never be taken backward. The 41 tie that bound the states of Maryland and Virginia to the Constitution could not be dissolved, without at least
 42 the consent of the Federal and state governments to a formal separation. The mere cession of the District of 43 Columbia to the Federal government relinquished the authority of the states, but it did not take it out of the 44 United States or from under the aegis of the Constitution. Neither party had ever consented to that
 45 construction of the cession. If, before the District was set off, Congress had passed an unconstitutional act
 46 affecting its inhabitants, it would have been void. If done after the District was created, it would have been
 47 equally void; in other words, Congress could not do indirectly, by carving out the District, what it could not do
 48 directly. The District still remained a part of the United States, protected by the Constitution. Indeed, it would
 49 have been a fanciful construction to hold that territory which had been once a part of the United States ceased
 50 to be such by being ceded directly to the Federal government.”

51 This means that direct Subtitle A income taxes can't apply in the sovereign 50 Union states, the District of Columbia
 52 (which was formerly covered by Constitutional protections before it was ceded to the federal government), or federal 53 enclaves within states that were formerly owned by the state prior to being ceded to the federal government. The only 54 exception to this exclusion is that it can apply voluntarily to natural persons domiciled outside the federal zone, which
 55 means you have to volunteer into federal jurisdiction by volunteering to become a “taxpayer” subject to the Internal 56 Revenue Code who has an effective domicile within the federal zone under 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(39). This is done by filing
 57 an IRS Form W-4 or submitting a 1040 form rather than the correct 1040NR form.

The territorial jurisdiction that all Congressional legislation is intended to apply to absent a clearly expressed intent to the contrary is the second jurisdiction from above, which are federal zone areas coming under Article 1, Section 8, Clause 17 of the U.S. Constitution as revealed by the U.S. Supreme Court below in U.S. v. Spelar, 338 U.S. 217 at 222 (1949):

"A canon of construction which teaches that of Congress, unless a contrary intent appears, is meant to apply only within the territorial jurisdiction of the United States."

As you will learn in the next few sections, states of the Union are "foreign" with respect to the federal government for the purposes of legislative jurisdiction. The federal/general government has no "police powers" or legislative jurisdiction within states of the Union, as pointed out by the Supreme Court. Keep in mind that the term "legislation" in the quote below INCLUDES the Internal Revenue Code, folks!:

*"It is no longer open to question that the general government, unlike the states, Hammer v. Dagenhart, 247 U.S. 251, 275, 38 S.Ct. 529, 3 A.L.R. 649, Ann.Cas.1918E 724, possesses no inherent power in respect of the internal affairs of the states; and emphatically not with regard to legislation."*
Carter v. Carter Coal Co., [298 U.S. 238, 56 S.Ct. 855 (1936)]

5.2.4 The Three Geographical Definitions of "United States"

Most of us are completely unaware that the term "United States" has several distinct and separate legal meanings and that it is up to us to know and understand these differences, to use them appropriately, and to clarify exactly which one we mean whenever we sign any government or financial form (including voter registration, tax documents, etc). If we do not, we could unknowingly, unwillingly and involuntarily be creating false presumptions that cause us to surrender our Constitutional rights and our sovereignty. The fact is, most of us have unwittingly been doing just that for most, if not all, of our lives. Much of this misunderstanding and legal ignorance has been deliberately "manufactured" by our corrupted government in the public school system. It is a fact that our public dis-servants want docile sheep who are easy to govern, not "high maintenance" sovereigns capable of critical and independent thinking and who demand their rights. We have become so casual in our use of the term "United States" that it is no longer understood, even within the legal profession, that there are actually three different legal meanings to the term. In fact, the legal profession has contributed to this confusion over this term by removing its definitions from all legal dictionaries currently in print that we have looked at. See Section 6.10.1 for details on this scam.

Most of us have grown up thinking the term "United States" indicates and includes all 50 states of the Union. This is true in the context of the U.S. Constitution but it is not true in all contexts. As you will see, this is the third meaning assigned to the term "United States" by the United States Supreme Court. But, usually when we (Joe six pack) use the term United States we actually think we are saying the united States, as we are generally thinking of the several states or the union of States. As you will learn in this section, the meaning of the term depends entirely on the context and when we are filling out federal forms or speaking with the federal government, this is a very costly false presumption.

First, it should be noted that the term United States is a noun. In fact, it is the proper name and title "We the people..." gave to the corporate entity (non-living thing) of the federal (central) government created by the Constitution. This in turn describes where the "United States" federal corporation referenced in 28 U.S.C. §3002(15)(A) was to be housed as the Seat of the Government - In the District of Columbia, not to exceed a ten mile square.

*Constitution
Article 1, Section 8, Clause 17*

To exercise exclusive Legislation in all Cases whatsoever, over such District (not exceeding ten Miles square) as may, by Cession of particular States, and the Acceptance of Congress, become the Seat of the Government of the United States, and to exercise like Authority over all Places purchased by the Consent of the Legislature of the State in which the Same shall be for the Erection of Forts, Magazines, Arsenals, dock-Yards, and other needful Buildings;—And [underlines added]

Below is how the united States Supreme Court addressed the question of the meaning of the term "United States" (see Black's Law Dictionary) in the famous case of Hooven & Allison Co. v. Evatt, 324 U.S. 652 (1945). The Court ruled that the term United States has three uses:

"The term 'United States' may be used in any one of several senses. It may be merely the name of a sovereign occupying the position analogous to that of other sovereigns in the family of nations. It may designate the territory over which the sovereignty of the United States extends, or it may be the collective name of the states which are united by and under the Constitution."

 [Hooven & Allison Co. v. Evatt, 324 U.S. 652 (1945)]

We will now break the above definition into its three contexts and show what each means.

Table 5-16: Meanings assigned to "United States" by the U.S. Supreme Court in Hooven & Allison v. Evatt

#	U.S. Supreme Court Definition of "United States" in Hooven	Context in which usually used	Referred to in this article as	Interpretation
1	"It may be merely the name of a sovereign occupying the position analogous to that of other sovereigns in the family of nations."	International law	"United States*"	"These united States ," when traveling abroad, you come under the jurisdiction of the President through his agents in the U.S. State Department, where "U.S." refers to the sovereign society. You are a "Citizen of the United States" like someone is a Citizen of France, or England. We identify this version of "United States" with a single asterisk after its name: "United States*" throughout this article.
2	"It may designate the territory over which the sovereignty of the United States extends, or"	Federal law Federal forms	"United States"	"The United States (the District of Columbia, possessions and territories)". Here Congress has exclusive legislative jurisdiction. In this sense, the term "United States" is a singular noun. You are a person residing in the District of Columbia, one of its Territories or Federal areas (enclaves). Hence, even a person living in the one of the sovereign States could still be a member of the Federal area and therefore a "citizen of the United States." This is the definition used in most "Acts of Congress" and federal statutes. We identify this version of "United States" with two asterisks after its name: "United States" throughout this article. This definition is also synonymous with the "United States" corporation found in 28 U.S.C. §3002(15)(A).
3	"...as the collective name for the states which are united by and under the Constitution."	Constitution of the United States	"United States"	"The several States which is the united States of America ." Referring to the 50 sovereign States, which are united under the Constitution of the United States of America . The federal areas within these states are not included in this definition because the Congress does not have exclusive legislative authority over any of the 50 sovereign States within the Union of States . Rights are retained by the States in the 9th and 10th Amendments, and you are a " Citizen of these united States ." This is the definition used in the Constitution for the United States of America. We identify this version of "United States" with a three asterisks after its name: "United States" throughout this article.

The U.S. Supreme Court helped to clarify which of the three definitions above is the one used in the U.S. Constitution, when it held the following. Note they are implying the THIRD definition above and not the other two:

*"The earliest case is that of Hepburn v. Ellzey, 2 Cranch, 445, 2 L.Ed. 332, in which this court held that, under that clause of the Constitution limiting the jurisdiction of the courts of the United States to controversies between citizens of different states, a citizen of the District of Columbia could not maintain an action in the circuit court of the United States. It was argued that the word 'state,' in that connection, was used simply to denote a distinct political society. 'But,' said the Chief Justice, 'as the act of Congress obviously used the word 'state' in reference to that term as used in the Constitution, it becomes necessary to inquire whether Columbia is a state in the sense of that instrument. The result of that examination is a conviction that the members of the American confederacy only are the states contemplated in the Constitution, . . . and excludes from the term the signification attached to it by writers on the law of nations.' This case was followed in Barney v. Baltimore, 6 Wall. 280, 18 L.Ed. 825, and quite recently in Hooe v. Jamieson, 166 U.S. 395, 41 L.Ed. 1049, 17 Sup.Ct.Rep. 596. The same rule was applied to citizens of territories in New Orleans v. Winter, 1 Wheat. 91, 4 L.Ed. 44, in which an attempt was made to distinguish a territory from the District of Columbia. But it was said that 'neither of them is a state in the sense in which that term is used in the Constitution.' In Scott v. Jones, 5 How. 343, 12 L.Ed. 181, and in Miners' Bank v. Iowa ex rel. District Prosecuting Attorney, 12 How. 1, 13 L.Ed. 867, it was held that under the judiciary act, permitting writs of error to the supreme court of a state in cases where the validity of a state statute is drawn in question, an act of a territorial legislature was not within the contemplation of Congress."
 [Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 (1901) ]*

The Supreme Court further clarified that the Constitution implies the third definition above, which is the United States*** when they held the following. Notice that they say "not part of the United States within the meaning of the Constitution" and that the word "the" implies only ONE rather than multiple meanings:

"As the only judicial power vested in Congress is to create courts whose judges shall hold their offices during good behavior, it necessarily follows that, if Congress authorizes the creation of courts and the appointment of judges for limited time, it must act independently of the Constitution upon territory which is not part of the United States within the meaning of the Constitution."

1 O'Donoghue v. United States, [289 U.S. 516, 53 S.Ct. 740 (1933)]

2 And finally, the U.S. Supreme Court has also held that the Constitution does not and cannot determine or limit the authority
3 of Congress over federal territory and that the ONLY portion of the Constitution that does in fact expressly refer to federal
4 territory and therefore the statutory "United States" is Article 1, Section 8, Clause 17. Notice they ruled that Puerto Rico is
5 NOT part of the "United States" within the meaning of the Constitution, just like they ruled in O'Donoghue above that
6 territory was no part of the "United States":

7 In passing upon the questions involved in this and kindred cases, we ought not to overlook the fact that, while
8 the Constitution was intended to establish a permanent form of government for the states which should elect
9 to take advantage of its conditions, and continue for an indefinite future, the vast possibilities of that future
10 could never have entered the minds of its framers. The states had but recently emerged from a war with one of 11 the most powerful nations of Europe, were disheartened by the failure of the confederacy, and were doubtful as
12 to the feasibility of a stronger union. Their territory was confined to a narrow strip of land on the Atlantic coast
13 from Canada to Florida, with a somewhat indefinite claim to territory beyond the Alleghenies, where their
14 sovereignty was disputed by tribes of hostile Indians supported, as was popularly believed, by the British, who
15 had never formally delivered possession [182 U.S. 244, 285] under the treaty of peace. The vast territory
16 beyond the Mississippi, which formerly had been claimed by France, since 1762 had belonged to Spain, still a
17 powerful nation and the owner of a great part of the Western Hemisphere. Under these circumstances it is little 18 wonder that the question of annexing these territories was not made a subject of debate. The difficulties of 19 bringing about a union of the states were so great, the objections to it seemed so formidable, that the whole
20 thought of the convention centered upon surmounting these obstacles. The question of territories was 21 dismissed with a single clause, apparently applicable only to the territories then existing, giving Congress the 22 power to govern and dispose of them.

23 Had the acquisition of other territories been contemplated as a possibility, could it have been foreseen that,
24 within little more than one hundred years, we were destined to acquire, not only the whole vast region between
25 the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans, but the Russian possessions in America and distant islands in the Pacific, it is
26 incredible that no provision should have been made for them, and the question whether the Constitution should 27 or should not extend to them have been definitely settled. If it be once conceded that we are at liberty to 28 acquire foreign territory, a presumption arises that our power with respect to such territories is the same
29 power which other nations have been accustomed to exercise with respect to territories acquired by them. If,
30 *in limiting the power which Congress was to exercise within the United States[***], it was also intended to*
31 *limit it with regard to such territories as the people of the United States[***] should thereafter acquire, such* 32 limitations should have been expressed. Instead of that, we find the Constitution speaking only to states,
33 except in the territorial clause, which is absolute in its terms, and suggestive of no limitations upon the power
34 of Congress in dealing with them. The states could only delegate to Congress such powers as they themselves
35 possessed, and as they had no power to acquire new territory they had none to delegate in that connection.
36 The logical inference from this is that if Congress had power to acquire new territory, which is conceded,
37 that power was not hampered by the constitutional provisions. If, upon the other hand, we assume [182 U.S.
38 244, 286] that the territorial clause of the Constitution was not intended to be restricted to such territory as 39 the United States then possessed, there is nothing in the Constitution to indicate that the power of Congress in 40 dealing with them was intended to be restricted by any of the other provisions.

41 [ . . . ]

42 If those possessions are inhabited by alien races, differing from us in religion, customs, laws, methods of 43 taxation, and modes of thought, the administration of government and justice, according to Anglo-Saxon
44 principles, may for a time be impossible; and the question at once arises whether large concessions ought not to
45 be made for a time, that ultimately our own theories may be carried out, and the blessings of a free government
46 under the Constitution extended to them. We decline to hold that there is anything in the Constitution to forbid
47 such action.

48 We are therefore of opinion that the island of Porto Rico is a territory appurtenant and
49 belonging to the United States, but not a part of the United States[***] within the
50 revenue clauses of the Constitution; that the Foraker act is constitutional, so far as it imposes duties
51 upon imports from such island, and that the plaintiff cannot recover back the duties exacted in this case.
52 [Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 \(1901\)]

53 Another important distinction needs to be made. Definition 1 above refers to the country "United States*", but this country
54 is not a "nation", in the sense of international law. This very important point was made clear by the U.S. Supreme Court in 55 1794 in the case of Chisholm v. Georgia, 2 Dall. (U.S.) 419, 1 L.Ed. 440 (1793), when it said:

56 This is a case of uncommon magnitude. One of the parties to it is a State; certainly respectable, claiming to be
57 sovereign. The question to be determined is, whether this State, so respectable, and whose claim soars so
58 high, is amenable to the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court of the United States? This question, important in

1 itself, will depend on others, more important still; and, may, perhaps, be ultimately resolved into one, no less
2 radical than this 'do the people of the United States form a Nation?'

3 A cause so conspicuous and interesting, should be carefully and accurately viewed from every possible point of 4 sight. I shall examine it; 1st. By the principles of general jurisprudence. 2nd. By the laws and practice of 5 particular States and Kingdoms. From the law of nations little or no
6 illustration of this subject can be expected. By that law the 7 several States and Governments spread over our globe, are
8 considered as forming a society, not a NATION. It has only been by a
9 very few comprehensive minds, such as those of Elizabeth and the Fourth Henry, that this last great idea has 10 been even contemplated. 3rdly. and chiefly, I shall examine the important question before us, by the 11 Constitution of the United States, and the legitimate result of that valuable instrument.
12 [Chisholm v. Georgia, 2 Dall. (U.S.) 419, 1 L.Ed. 440 (1793)]

13 Black's Law Dictionary further clarifies the distinction between a "nation" and a "society" by clarifying the differences 14 between a national government and a federal government, and keep in mind that our government is called "federal 15 government":

16 "NATIONAL GOVERNMENT. The government of a whole nation, as distinguished from that of a local or
17 territorial division of the nation, and also as distinguished from that of a league or confederation.

18 "A national government is a government of the people of a single state or nation, united as a community by
19 what is termed the "social compact," and possessing complete and perfect supremacy over persons and things,
20 so far as they can be made the lawful objects of civil government. A federal government is distinguished from 21 a national government by its being the government of a community of independent and sovereign states,
22 united by compact." Piqua Branch Bank v. Knoup, 6 Ohio.St. 393."
23 [Black's Law Dictionary, Revised Fourth Edition, 1968, p. 1176]
24

25 "FEDERAL GOVERNMENT. The system of government administered in a state formed by the union or
26 confederation of several independent or quasi independent states; also the composite state so formed.

27 In strict usage, there is a distinction between a confederation and a federal government. The former term
28 denotes a league or permanent alliance between several states, each of which is fully sovereign and
29 independent, and each of which retains its full dignity, organization, and sovereignty, though yielding to the
30 central authority a controlling power for a few limited purposes, such as external and diplomatic relations.
31 In this case, the component states are the units, with respect to the confederation, and the central
32 government acts upon them, not upon the individual citizens. In a federal government, on the other hand, the
33 allied states form a union,-not, indeed, to such an extent as to destroy their separate organization or deprive
34 them of quasi sovereignty with respect to the administration of their purely local concerns, but so that the
35 central power is erected into a true state or nation, possessing sovereignty both external and internal,-while 36 the administration of national affairs is directed, and its effects felt, not by the separate states deliberating as
37 units, but by the people of all, in their collective capacity, as citizens of the nation. The distinction is 38 expressed, by the German writers, by the use of the two words "Staatenbund" and "Bundesstaat;" the former 39 denoting a league or confederation of states, and the latter a federal government, or state formed by means of a 40 league or confederation."
41 [Black's Law Dictionary, Revised Fourth Edition, 1968, p. 740]

42 So the "United States*" the country is a "society" and a "sovereignty" but not a "nation" under the law of nations, by the 43 Supreme Court's own admission. Because the Supreme Court has ruled on this matter, it is now incumbent upon each of us
44 to always remember it and to apply it in all of our dealings with the Federal Government. If not, we lose our individual
45 Sovereignty by default and the Federal Government assumes jurisdiction over us. So, while those who wish to preserve
46 their sovereign immunity will want to be the third type of Citizen, which is a "Citizen of the United States***" and on 47 occasion a "citizen of the United States**", he would never want to be the second, which is a "citizen of the United 48 States*". A human being who is a "citizen" of the second is called a statutory "U.S. citizen" under 8 U.S.C. §1401, and
49 he is treated in law as occupying a place not protected by the Bill of Rights, which is the first ten amendments of the United 50 States Constitution. Below is how the U.S. Supreme Court, in a dissenting opinion, described this "other" United States,
51 which we call the "federal zone":

52 "The idea prevails with some, indeed it has found expression in arguments at the bar, that we have in this
53 country substantially two national governments; one to be maintained under the Constitution, with all of its
54 restrictions; the other to be maintained by Congress outside the independently of that instrument, by
55 exercising such powers [of absolutism] as other nations of the earth are accustomed to.. I take leave to say

1 that, if the principles thus announced should ever receive the sanction of a majority of this court, a radical
 2 and mischievous change in our system of government will result. We will, in that event, pass from the era of
 3 constitutional liberty guarded and protected by a written constitution into an era of legislative absolutism. It
 4 will be an evil day for American liberty if the theory of a government outside the supreme law of the land
 5 finds lodgment in our constitutional jurisprudence. No higher duty rests upon this court than to exert its full
 6 authority to prevent all violation of the principles of the Constitution."
 7 Downes v. Bidwell, [182 U.S. 244 (1901)]

8 The second definition of "United States**" above is also a federal corporation. This corporation was formed in 1871. It is 9 described in 28 U.S.C. §3002(15)(A):

10 TITLE 28 > PART VI > CHAPTER 176 > SUBCHAPTER A > Sec. 3002.
 11 TITLE 28 - JUDICIARY AND JUDICIAL PROCEDURE
 12 PART VI - PARTICULAR PROCEEDINGS
 13 CHAPTER 176 - FEDERAL DEBT COLLECTION PROCEDURE
 14 SUBCHAPTER A - DEFINITIONS AND GENERAL PROVISIONS
 15 Sec. 3002. Definitions

16
 17 (15) "United States" means -
 18 (A) a Federal corporation;
 19 (B) an agency, department, commission, board, or other entity of the United States; or
 20 (C) an instrumentality of the United States.

21 The U.S. Supreme Court, in fact, has admitted that all governments are corporations when it said:

22 "Corporations are also of all grades, and made for varied objects; all governments are corporations, created
 23 by usage and common consent, or grants and charters which create a body politic for prescribed purposes;
 24 but whether they are private, local or general, in their objects, for the enjoyment of property, or the exercise
 25 of power, they are all governed by the same rules of law, as to the construction and the obligation of the 26 instrument by which the incorporation is made [the Constitution is the corporate charter]. One universal rule
 27 of law protects persons and property. It is a fundamental principle of the common law of England, that the term
 28 freemen of the kingdom, includes 'all persons,' ecclesiastical and temporal, incorporate, politique or natural; it
 29 is a part of their magna charta (2 Inst. 4), and is incorporated into our institutions. The persons of the members
 30 of corporations are on the same footing of protection as other persons, and their corporate property secured by 31 the same laws which protect that of individuals. 2 Inst. 46-7. 'No man shall be taken,' 'no man shall be
 32 disseised,' without due process of law, is a principle taken from magna charta, infused into all our state
 33 constitutions, and is made inviolable by the federal government, by the amendments to the constitution."
 34 Proprietors of Charles River Bridge v. Proprietors of, [36 U.S. 420 (1837)]

35 If we are acting as a federal "public official" or contractor, then we are representing the "United States** federal 36 corporation". That corporation is a statutory "U.S. citizen" under 8 U.S.C. §1401 which is completely subject to all federal 37 law.

38 "A corporation is a citizen, resident, or inhabitant of the state or country by or under the laws of which it was 39 created, and of that state or country only."
 40 [19 Corpus Juris Secundum (C.J.S.), Corporations, §886 (2003)]

41 Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 17(b) says that when we are representing that corporation as "officers" or "employees", we 42 therefore become statutory "U.S. citizens" completely subject to federal territorial law:

43 IV. PARTIES > Rule 17.
 44 Rule 17. Parties Plaintiff and Defendant; Capacity

45 (b) Capacity to Sue or be Sued.

46 Capacity to sue or be sued is determined as follows:

47 (1) for an individual who is not acting in a representative capacity, by the law of the individual's domicile;

48 (2) for a corporation, by the law under which it was organized; and

49 (3) for all other parties, by the law of the state where the court is located, except that:

50 (A) a partnership or other unincorporated association with no such capacity under that state's law may sue
 51 or be sued in its common name to enforce a substantive right existing under the United States Constitution
 52 or laws; and

53 (B) 28 U.S.C. §§ 754 and 959(a) govern the capacity of a receiver appointed by a United States court to sue
 54 or be sued in a United States court.

1 Yet on every government (any level) document we sign (e.g. Social Security, Marriage License, Voter Registration,
 2 Driver's License, BATF 4473, etc.) they either require you to be a "citizen of the United States" or they ask "are you a
 3 resident of Illinois?". They are in effect asking you to assume or presume the second definition, the "United States**",
 4 when you fill out the form, but they don't want to tell you this because then you would realize they are asking you to
 5 commit perjury on a government form under penalty of perjury. They in effect are asking you if you wish to act in the 6 official capacity of a public employee of the federal corporation. The form you are filling out therefore is serving the dual
 7 capacity of a federal job application and an application for benefits. The reason this must be so, is that they are not allowed
 8 to pay "benefits" to private citizens and can only lawfully pay them to public employees. Any other approach makes the 9 government into a thief. See the article below for details on this scam:

Why Your Government is Either a Thief or You are a "Public Officer" for Income Tax Purposes, Form #05.008
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

10 If you accept the false and self-serving presumption of your public dis-servants, or you answer "Yes" to the question of 11 whether you are a "citizen of the United States" or a "U.S. citizen" on a federal or state form, usually under penalty of 12 perjury, then you have committed perjury under penalty of perjury and also voluntarily placed yourself under their
 13 exclusive/plenary legislative jurisdiction as a public official/"employee" and are therefore subject to Federal & State Codes
 14 and Regulations (Statutes). The Social Security Number they ask for on the form, in fact, is prima facie evidence that you
 15 are a federal employee, in fact. Look at the evidence for yourself, paying particular attention to sections 6.1, 6.2 and 6.6:

16 Most laws passed by government are, in effect, law only for government. They are private law or contract law that act as 17 the equivalent of a government employment agreement.

18 "The power to "legislate generally upon" life, liberty, and property, as opposed to the "power to provide modes
 19 of redress" against offensive state action, was "repugnant" to the Constitution. Id., at 15. See also United States
 20 v. Reese, 92 U.S. 214, 218 (1876); United States v. Harris, 106 U.S. 629, 639 (1883); James v. Bowman, 190
 21 U.S. 127, 139 (1903). Although the specific holdings of these early cases might have been superseded or
 22 modified, see, e.g., Heart of Atlanta Motel, Inc. v. United States, 379 U.S. 241 (1964); United States v. Guest,
 23 383 U.S. 745 (1966), their treatment of Congress' §5 power as corrective or preventive, not definitional, has not

 25 [City of Boerne v. Flores, Archbishop of San Antonio, 521 U.S. 507 (1997)]

26 What the U.S. Supreme Court is saying above is that the government has no authority to tell you how to run your private 27 life. This is contrary to the whole idea of the Internal Revenue Code, whose main purpose is to monitor and control every 28 aspect of those who are subject to it. In fact, it has become the chief means for Congress to implement what we call "social 29 engineering". Just by the deductions they offer, people who are not engaged in a "trade or business" and thus have no
 30 income tax liability are incentivized into all kinds of crazy behaviors in pursuit of reductions in a liability that they in fact
 31 do not even have. Therefore, the only reasonable thing to conclude is that Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A, which would 32 "appear" to regulate the private conduct of all individuals in states of the Union, in fact only applies to "public officials" in 33 the official conduct of their duties while present in the District of Columbia, which 4 U.S.C. §72 makes the "seat of 34 government". The I.R.C. therefore essentially amounts to a part of the job responsibility and the "employment contract" of 35 "public officials". This was also confirmed by the House of Representatives, who said that only those who take an oath of 36 "public office" are subject to the requirements of the personal income tax. See:

The W-4 is a federal “election” form and you are the only voter. They are asking you if you want to elect yourself into “public office”, and if you say “yes”, then you got the job and a cage is reserved for you on the federal plantation:

“The restrictions that the Constitution places upon the government in its capacity as lawmaker, i.e., as the regulator of private conduct, are not the same as the restrictions that it places upon the government in its capacity as employer. We have recognized this in many contexts, with respect to many different constitutional guarantees. Private citizens perhaps cannot be prevented from wearing long hair, but policemen can. Kelley v. Johnson, 425 U.S. 238, 247 (1976). Private citizens cannot have their property searched without probable cause, but in many circumstances government employees can. O'Connor v. Ortega, 480 U.S. 709, 723 (1987) (plurality opinion); id., at 732 (SCALIA, J., concurring in judgment). Private citizens cannot be punished for refusing to provide the government information that may incriminate them, but government employees can be dismissed when the incriminating information that they refuse to provide relates to the performance of their job. Gardner v. Broderick, [497 U.S. 62, 95] 392 U.S. 273, 277-278 (1968). With regard to freedom of speech in particular: Private citizens cannot be punished for speech of merely private concern, but government employees can be fired for that reason. Connick v. Myers, 461 U.S. 138, 147 (1983). Private citizens cannot be punished for partisan political activity, but federal and state employees can be dismissed and otherwise punished for that reason. Public Workers v. Mitchell, 330 U.S. 75, 101 (1947); Civil Service Comm'n v. Letter Carriers, 413 U.S. 548, 556 (1973); Broadrick v. Oklahoma, 413 U.S. 601, 616-617 (1973).”
[Rutan v. Republican Party of Illinois, 497 U.S. 62 (1990)]

By making you into a “public official” or “employee”, they are intentionally destroying the separation of powers that is the main purpose of the Constitution and which was put there to protect your rights.

“To the contrary, the Constitution divides authority between federal and state governments for the protection of individuals. State sovereignty is not just an end in itself: “Rather, federalism secures to citizens the liberties that derive from the diffusion of sovereign power.” Coleman v. Thompson, 501 U.S. 722, 759 (1991) (BLACKMUN, J., dissenting). “Just as the separation and independence of the coordinate branches of the Federal Government serve to prevent the accumulation of excessive power in any one branch, a healthy balance of power between the States and the Federal Government will reduce the risk of tyranny and abuse from either front.” Gregory v. [505 U.S. 144, 182] Ashcroft, 501 U.S., at 458. See The Federalist No. 51, p. 323. (C. Rossiter ed. 1961).”
[New York v. United States, 505 U.S. 144 (1992)]

They are causing you to voluntarily waive sovereign immunity under the Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act, 28 U.S.C. §1601-1611. 28 U.S.C. §1605(a)(2) of the act says that those who conduct “commerce” within the legislative jurisdiction of the “United States” (federal zone), whether as public official or federal benefit recipient, surrender their sovereign immunity.

TITLE 28 > PART IV > CHAPTER 97 > § 1605
§ 1605. General exceptions to the jurisdictional immunity of a foreign state

(a) A foreign state shall not be immune from the jurisdiction of courts of the United States or of the States in any case—

(2) in which the action is based upon a commercial activity carried on in the United States by the foreign state; or upon an act performed in the United States in connection with a commercial [employment or federal benefit] activity of the foreign state elsewhere; or upon an act outside the territory of the United States in connection with a commercial activity of the foreign state elsewhere and that act causes a direct effect in the United States;

They are also destroying the separation of powers by fooling you into declaring yourself to be a statutory “U.S.** citizen” under 8 U.S.C. §1401. 28 U.S.C. §1603(b)(3) and 28 U.S.C. §1332(e) specifically exclude such statutory “U.S. citizens” from being foreign sovereigns who can file under statutory diversity of citizenship. This is also confirmed by the Department of State Website:

“Section 1603(b) defines an “agency or instrumentality” of a foreign state as an entity (1) which is a separate legal person, corporate or otherwise, and (2) which is an organ of a foreign state or political subdivision thereof, or a majority of whose shares or other ownership interest is owned by a foreign state or political subdivision thereof, and (3) which is neither a citizen of the a state of the United States as defined in Sec. 1332(e) nor created under the laws of any third country.”

Department of State Website, [http://travel.state.gov/law/info/judicial/judicial\_693.html]

In effect, they kidnapped your legal identity and made you into a “resident alien federal employee” working in the “king’s castle”, the District of Criminals, and changed your status from “foreign” to “domestic” by creating false presumptions about citizenship and using the Social Security Number, IRS Form W-4, and SSA Form SS-5 to make you into a “subject citizen” and a “public employee” with no constitutional rights.

The nature of most federal law as private/contract law is carefully explained below:

Requirement for Consent, Form #05.003

<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

As you will soon read, the government uses various ways to mislead and trick us into their private/contract laws (outside our Constitutional protections) and make you into the equivalent of their “employee”, and thereby commits a great fraud on the American People. It is the purpose of this document to expose the most important aspect of that willful deception, which is the citizenship trap.

5.2.5 Dual sovereignty

An old version of our Test for Federal Tax Professionals document found in section 2.2.1 of the Sovereignty Forms and Instructions Online, Form #10.004 was posted on the MSN Tax Bulletin Board, Jeff Schnepfer and commented on by several readers. One of the readers in that discussion group posted two intriguing U.S. Supreme Court cites to rebut the contents of this book which relate to the subject of sovereignty and which we verified were accurate:

"The laws of the United States are laws in the several States, and just as much binding on the citizens and courts thereof as the State laws are. The United States is not a foreign sovereignty as regards the several States, but is a concurrent, and, within its jurisdiction, paramount sovereignty. Every citizen of a State is a subject of two distinct sovereignties, having concurrent jurisdiction in the State,-concurrent as to place and persons, though distinct as to subject-matter."

[Clafin v. Houseman, 93 U.S. 130, 136 (1876)]

"And the powers of the General Government, and of the State, although both exist and are exercised within the same territorial limits, are yet separate and distinct sovereignties, acting separately and independently of each other, within their respective spheres."

[Ableman v. Booth, 62 U.S. 506, 516 (1858)]

The issue he raised relates to the concept of what we call “dual sovereignty”, and he implied in his comments and his emphasis in the above two cases that there is such a thing as “dual sovereignty” within the states of the union, but is there? Can two entities be simultaneously sovereign over a single geographic region and the same subject matter? Let’s investigate this intriguing matter further, keeping in mind that such controversies result from a fundamental misunderstanding of what “sovereignty” really means.

We allege and a book on Constitutional government also alleges that it is a legal impossibility for two sovereign bodies to enjoy concurrent jurisdiction over the same subject, and especially when it comes to jurisdiction to tax.

"§79. This sovereignty pertains to the people of the United States as national citizens only, and not as citizens of any other government. There cannot be two separate and independent sovereignties within the same limits or jurisdiction; nor can there be two distinct and separate sources of sovereign authority within the same jurisdiction. The right of commanding in the last resort can be possessed only by one body of people inhabiting the same territory, and can be executed only by those intrusted with the execution of such authority."

[Treatise on Government, Joel Tiffany, p. 49, Section 78;

What detractors are trying to do is deceive you, because they are confusing federal “States” described in federal statutes with states of the Union mentioned in the Constitution. These two types of entities are mutually exclusive and “foreign” with respect to each other.

"The earliest case is that of Hepburn v. Ellzey, 2 Cranch, 445, 2 L.Ed. 332, in which this court held that, under that clause of the Constitution limiting the jurisdiction of the courts of the United States to controversies between citizens of different states, a citizen of the District of Columbia could not maintain an action in the circuit court of the United States. It was argued that the word 'state,' in that connection, was used simply to

1 denote a distinct political society. 'But,' said the Chief Justice, 'as the act of Congress obviously used the word
 2 'state' in reference to that term as used in the Constitution, it becomes necessary to inquire whether Columbia is
 3 a state in the sense of that instrument. The result of that examination is a conviction that the members of the 4 American confederacy only are the states contemplated in the Constitution, . . . and excludes from the term
 5 the signification attached to it by writers on the law of nations.' This case was followed in Barney v.
 6 Baltimore, 6 Wall. 280, 18 L.Ed. 825, and quite recently in Hooe v. Jamieson, 166 U.S. 395, 41 L.Ed. 1049,
 7 17 Sup.Ct.Rep. 596. The same rule was applied to citizens of territories in New Orleans v. Winter, 1 Wheat.
 8 91, 4 L.Ed. 44, in which an attempt was made to distinguish a territory from the District of Columbia. But it
 9 was said that 'neither of them is a state in the sense in which that term is used in the Constitution.' In Scott v.
 10 Jones, 5 How. 343, 12 L.Ed. 181, and in Miners' Bank v. Iowa ex rel. District Prosecuting Attorney, 12 How. 1, 11 13 L.Ed. 867, it was held that under the judiciary act, permitting writs of error to the supreme court of a state in 12 cases where the validity of a state statute is drawn in question, an act of a territorial legislature was not within 13 the contemplation of Congress."
 14 [Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 (1901) ]

15 The definition of "State" for the purposes of federal income taxes confirms that states of the Union are NOT included
 16 within the definitions used in the Internal Revenue Code, and that only federal territories are. This is no accident, but proof
 17 that there really is a separation of powers and of legislative jurisdiction between states of the Union and the Federal
 18 government:

19 TITLE 4 - FLAG AND SEAL, SEAT OF GOVERNMENT, AND THE STATES
 20 CHAPTER 4 - THE STATES
 21 Sec. 110. Same; definitions

22 (d) The term "State" includes any Territory or possession of the United States.

23
 24
 25 TITLE 26 > Subtitle F > CHAPTER 79 > § 7701
 26 § 7701. Definitions

27 (a) Definitions

28 (10)State

29 The term "State" shall be construed to include the District of Columbia, where such construction is necessary to
 30 carry out provisions of this title.

31 We like to think of the word "sovereignty" in the context of government as the combination of "exclusive authority" with 32 "exclusive responsibility". The Constitution in effect very clearly divides authority and responsibility for specific matters
 33 between the states and federal government based on the specific subject matter, and ensures that the functions of each will 34 never overlap or conflict. It delegates certain powers to each of the two sovereigns and keeps the two sovereigns from 35 competing with each other so that public peace, tranquility, security, and political harmony have the most ideal
 36 environment in which to flourish.

37 If we therefore examine the Constitution and the Supreme court cases interpreting it, we find that the complex division of 38 authority that it makes between the states and the federal government accomplishes the following objectives:

- 39 1. Delegates primarily internal matters to the states. These matters involve mainly public health, morals, and welfare and 40 require exclusive legislative authority within the state.

41 "While the states are not sovereign in the true sense of that term, but only quasi sovereign, yet in respect of all
 42 powers reserved to them they are supreme-as independent of the general government as that government within 43 its sphere is independent of the States.' The Collector v. Day, 11 Wall. 113, 124. And since every addition to the 44 national legislative power to some extent detracts from or invades the power of the states, it is of vital moment
 45 that, in order to preserve the fixed balance intended by the Constitution, the powers of the general government
 46 [298 U.S. 238, 295] be not so extended as to embrace any not within the express terms of the several 47 grants or the implications necessarily to be drawn therefrom. It is no longer open to question that the general
 48 government, unlike the states, Hammer v. Dagenhart, 247 U.S. 251, 275, 38 S.Ct. 529, 3 A.L.R. 649,
 49 Ann.Cas.1918E 724, possesses no inherent power in respect of the internal affairs of the states; and
 50 emphatically not with regard to legislation. The question in respect of the inherent power of that government
 51 as to the external affairs of the Nation and in the field of international law is a wholly different matter which 52 it is not necessary now to consider. See, however, Jones v. United States, 137 U.S. 202, 212, 11 S.Ct. 80;
 53 Nishimur Ekiu v. United States, 142 U.S. 651, 659, 12 S.Ct. 336; Fong Yue Ting v. United States, 149 U.S. 698

“Thus, Congress having power to regulate commerce with foreign nations, and among the several States, and with the Indian tribes, may, without doubt, provide for granting coasting licenses, licenses to pilots, licenses to trade with the Indians, and any other licenses necessary or proper for the exercise of that great and extensive power; and the same observation is applicable to every other power of Congress, to the exercise of which the granting of licenses may be incident. All such licenses confer authority, and give rights to the licensee.

But very different considerations apply to the internal commerce or domestic trade of the States. Over this commerce and trade Congress has no power of regulation nor any direct control. This power belongs exclusively to the States. No interference by Congress with the business of citizens transacted within a State is warranted by the Constitution, except such as is strictly incidental to the exercise of powers clearly granted to the legislature. The power to authorize a business within a State is plainly repugnant to the exclusive power of the State over the same subject. It is true that the power of Congress to tax is a very extensive power. It is given in the Constitution, with only one exception and only two qualifications. Congress cannot tax exports, and it must impose direct taxes by the rule of apportionment, and indirect taxes by the rule of uniformity. Thus limited, and thus only, it reaches every subject, and may be exercised at discretion. But, it reaches only existing subjects. Congress cannot authorize a trade or business within a State in order to tax it.”

  - 2.1. Article 1, Section 8, Clause 3 of the constitution authorizes the feds to tax and regulate foreign commerce and interstate commerce, but not intrastate commerce.
  - 2.2. Article 1, Section 8, Clauses 11-16 authorize the establishment of a military and the authority to make war.
  - 2.3. Article 1, Section 8, Clause 4 allows the fed to determine uniform rules for naturalization and immigration from outside the country. However, it does not take away the authority of states to naturalize as well.
3. Ensures that the same criminal offense is never prosecuted or punished twice or simultaneously under two sets of laws.

“Consequently no State court will undertake to enforce the criminal law of the Union, except as regards the arrest of persons charged under such law. It is therefore clear, that the same power cannot be exercised by a State court as is exercised by the courts of the United States, in giving effect to their criminal laws...”

“There is no principle better established by the common law, none more fully recognized in the federal and State constitutions, than that an individual shall not be put in jeopardy twice for the same offense. This, it is true, applies to the respective governments; but its spirit applies with equal force against a double punishment, for the same act, by a State and the federal government.....

Nothing can be more repugnant or contradictory than two punishments for the same act. It would be a mockery of justice and a reproach to civilization. It would bring our system of government into merited contempt.”
[Fox v. The State of Ohio, 46 U.S. 410, 5 Howard 410, 12 L.Ed. 213 (1847)]

4. Ensures that the two sovereigns never tax the same objects or activities, because then they would be competing for revenues.

“Two governments acting independently of each other cannot exercise the same power for the same object.”
[Fox v. The State of Ohio, 46 U.S. 410, 5 Howard 410, 12 L.Ed. 213 (1847)]

As far as the last item above goes, which is that of taxation, however, the U.S. Supreme Court has stated:

“The States, after they formed the Union, continued to have the same range of taxing power which they had before, barring only duties affecting exports, imports, and on tonnage. 2 Congress, on the other hand, to lay taxes in order 'to pay the Debts and provide for the common Defence and general Welfare of the United States', Art. 1, Sec. 8, U.S.C.A.Const., can reach every person and every dollar in the land with due regard to Constitutional limitations as to the method of laying taxes.”
Graves v. People of State of New York, [306 U.S. 466 (1939)]

“The difficulties arising out of our dual form of government and the opportunities for differing opinions concerning the relative rights of state and national governments are many; but for a very long time this court has steadfastly adhered to the doctrine that the taxing power of Congress does not extend to the states or their political subdivisions. The same basic reasoning which leads to that conclusion, we think, requires like limitation upon the power which springs from the bankruptcy clause. United States v. Butler, supra.”

Ashton v. Cameron County Water Improvement District No. 1, [298 U.S. 513; 56 S.Ct. 892 (1936)]

"The grant of the power to lay and collect taxes is, like the power to regulate commerce, made in general terms, and has never been understood to interfere with the exercise of the same power by the State; and hence has been drawn an argument which has been applied to the question under consideration. But the two grants are not, it is conceived, similar in their terms or their nature. Although many of the powers formerly [22 U.S. 1, 199] exercised by the States, are transferred to the government of the Union, yet the State governments remain, and constitute a most important part of our system. The power of taxation is indispensable to their existence, and is a power which, in its own nature, is capable of residing in, and being exercised by, different authorities at the same time. We are accustomed to see it placed, for different purposes, in different hands. Taxation is the simple operation of taking small portions from a perpetually accumulating mass, susceptible of almost infinite division; and a power in one to take what is necessary for certain purposes, is not, in its nature, incompatible with a power in another to take what is necessary for other purposes. Congress is authorized to lay and collect taxes, and to pay the debts, and provide for the common defence and general welfare of the United States. This does not interfere with the power of the States to tax [internally] for the support of their own governments; nor is the exercise of that power by the States [to tax INTERNALLY], an exercise of any portion of the power that is granted to the United States [to tax EXTERNALLY]. In imposing taxes for State purposes, they are not doing what Congress is empowered to do. Congress is not empowered to tax for those purposes which are within the exclusive province of the States. When, then, each government exercises the power of taxation, neither is exercising the power of the other. But, when a State proceeds to regulate commerce with foreign nations, or among the several States, it is exercising the very power that is granted to Congress, [22 U.S. 1, 200] and is doing the very thing which Congress is authorized to do. There is no analogy, then, between the power of taxation and the power of regulating commerce. "

Gibbons v. Ogden, [22 U.S. 21 (1824)]

"In Slaughter-House Cases, 16 Wall. 62, it was said that the police power is, from its nature, incapable of any exact definition or limitation; and in Stone v. Mississippi, 101 U.S. 818, that it is 'easier to determine whether particular cases come within the general scope of the power than to give an abstract definition of the power itself, which will be in all respects accurate.' That there is a power, sometimes called the police power, which has never been surrendered by the states, in virtue of which they may, within certain limits, control everything within their respective territories, and upon the proper exercise of which, under some circumstances, may depend the public health, the public morals, or the public safety, is conceded in all the cases. Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 203. In its broadest sense, as sometimes defined, it includes all legislation and almost every function of civil government. Barbier v. Connolly, 113 U.S. 31 ; S.C. 5 Sup.Ct.Rep. 357. [ . . . ] Definitions of the police power must, however, be taken subject to the condition that the state cannot, in its exercise, for any purpose whatever, encroach upon the powers of the general [federal] government, or rights granted or secured by the supreme law of the land.

"Illustrations of interference with the rightful authority of the general government by state legislation-which was defended upon the ground that it was enacted under the police power-are found in cases where enactments concerning the introduction of foreign paupers, convicts, and diseased persons were held to be unconstitutional as conflicting, by their necessary operation and effect, with the paramount authority of congress to regulate commerce with foreign nations, and among the several states. In Henderson v. Mayor of New York, 92 U.S. 263, the court, speaking by Mr. Justice MILLER, while declining to decide whether in the absence of congressional action the states can, or how far they may, by appropriate legislation protect themselves against actual paupers, vagrants, criminals, [115 U.S. 650, 662] and diseased persons, arriving from foreign countries, said, that no definition of the police power, and 'no urgency for its use, can authorize a state to exercise it in regard to a subject-matter which has been confided exclusively to the discretion of congress by the constitution.' Chy Lung v. Freeman, 92 U.S. 276. And in Railroad Co. v. Husen, 95 U.S. 474, Mr. Justice STRONG, delivering the opinion of the court, said that 'the police power of a state cannot obstruct foreign commerce or interstate commerce beyond the necessity for its exercise; and, under color of it, objects not within its scope cannot be secured at the expense of the protection afforded by the federal constitution.' 1 And the Federalist Paper # 45 confirms this view in regards to taxation:

2 "It is true, that the Confederacy is to possess, and may exercise, the power of collecting internal as well as 3 external taxes throughout the States; but it is probable that this power will not be resorted to, except for
 4 supplemental purposes of revenue; that an option will then be given to the States to supply their quotas by
 5 previous collections of their own; and that the eventual collection, under the immediate authority of the 6 *Union, will generally be made by the officers, and according to 7 the rules, appointed by the several States. Indeed it is 8 extremely probable, that in other instances, particularly in the 9 organization of the judicial power, the officers of the States
 10 will be clothed with the correspondent authority of the Union.
 11 "

12 "Should it happen, however, that separate collectors of internal revenue should be appointed under the federal
 13 government, the influence of the whole number would not bear a comparison with that of the multitude of State
 14 officers in the opposite scale. "

15 "Within every district to which a federal collector would be allotted, there would not be less than thirty or forty,
 16 or even more, officers of different descriptions, and many of them persons of character and weight, whose
 17 influence would lie on the side of the State. The powers delegated by the proposed Constitution to the federal 18 government are few and defined. Those which are to remain in the State governments are numerous and 19 indefinite. The former will be exercised principally on external objects, as war, peace, negotiation, and 20 foreign commerce; with which last the power of taxation will, for the most part, be connected. The powers
 21 reserved to the several States will extend to all the objects which, in the ordinary course of affairs, concern
 22 the lives, liberties, and properties of the people, and the internal order, improvement, and prosperity of the 23 State. The operations of the federal government will be most extensive and important in times of war and 24 danger; those of the State governments, in times of peace and security. As the former periods will probably 25 bear a small proportion to the latter, the State governments will here enjoy another advantage over the 26 federal government. The more adequate, indeed, the federal powers may be rendered to the national defense, 27 the less frequent will be those scenes of danger which might favor their ascendancy over the governments of 28 the particular States. "

30 The introduction of the Sixteenth Amendment did not change any of the above, because Subtitle A income taxes only apply
