Document adds to preponderance of proof in Meier UFO case

LOS ANGELES, CA - In light of the recent, ever-growing increase in public awareness and controversy surrounding the photographic and film evidence of UFOs in the Billy Meier contacts (January 20, 2004 issue of the national tabloid the SUN; Art Bell radio show March 7 - 8, 2004), the time has come to effectively eliminate any doubts that the case is indeed authentic. While the contacts have been ongoing for 62 years, to a large degree there has been a concerted effort by vested governmental, religious, political and media interests to discredit and keep knowledge of the contacts from the public. This has been aided, in part, by the (conscious or unconscious) help of various professional skeptics.

For the uninformed, professional skeptics are usually non-objective, uncredentialed, unscientific people who approach matters not in the spirit of discovery but from the perspective of categorically ruling out anything as real that does not fit their preconceived beliefs. They are not used to having their illegitimate authority challenged, as is the same with most cultic, religious hierarchies, and attract to their ranks all shades of true believers who likewise aspire to keep their limited worldview safe, at any cost, from encroachment by unfamiliar realities. Quite often this cost is incurred by others, as the professional skeptics freely assail the character and motivation of anyone who offers credible evidence that contradicts their preconceptions. While one may have compassion for their personal insecurity and terror of the unknown, it in no way justifies the slanderous and blatant attacks on those whose evidence meets legal and scientific standards of proof, as Meier's does.

Fake Challenges

Certain parties, such as CFI-West of Los Angeles, and James “Amazing” Randi, also offer fake challenges with non-existent financial awards promised to anyone who can provide evidence of the “paranormal”. Such disingenuous offers are based on the cynical assumption by the skeptics that, since no such things exist anyway, no such monies need be available to back up the challenge. The actual parameters for meeting the challenge, i.e. for proving that something is paranormal, are ludicrous and intellectually dishonest, based as they are on the premise that, if the skeptic didn’t personally observe something, it didn’t happen or doesn’t exist. Such flawed premises are not only unscientific, their application would also result, for instance, in no one ever being convicted of a crime they committed and, by logical extension, invalidate reality for all but a hand full of people who have ever lived.

As I’ve said before, a thing either is or isn't paranormal by definition and that attempting to superimpose one's own arbitrary requirements for proof is, at the very least, unethical.

Sinking Their Own Ship

For some time, professional skeptics such as James Randi, Michael Shermer, Dr. Steven Novella, Kal Korff and members of CFI-West, i.e. Vaughn Rees, James Underdown and Derek Bartholomaeus, have been conducting a smear campaign by loudly asserting, without providing any substantiation whatsoever, that Meier’s photographic evidence, and therefore the case itself, was hoaxed and fraudulent. (We won’t discuss the abundant, prophetically accurate information published by Meier since the skeptics have, as one could “predict”, vigorously avoided dealing with it at all.) They’ve used stunningly brilliant but unsupported arguments, such as claiming that young children could make the same quality UFO photos, that the photos are hoaxed simply because the skeptic says they’re hoaxed and that, since a UFO appears “as if” suspended by a string that it is, therefore, actually suspended by a string.

This last assertion, by Dr. Novella, was then immediately disproved - by Dr. Novella himself - when he stated that there were no discernible suspension lines for the UFO and that all the objects involved are too far away from the camera, thereby effectively invalidating his very own theory regarding models!

That the skeptics have completely discredited only themselves by their reprehensible conduct was made abundantly clear to millions of listeners when Mr. Rees, who called in during my recent appearance on the Art Bell radio show, flatly and shamelessly refused to have CFI-West's hoaxed UFO photos tested and analyzed according to the same standards Meier's were.

Hidden In Plain View

The results of, and standards for, the actual scientific photographic analysis and evaluation, which substantiated the absolute authenticity of Meier's photographic evidence, were initially published by Lt. Col. Wendelle Stevens (USAF, Ret.) more than 20 years ago, and are described in a 23-page excerpt from the comprehensive preliminary investigation by Stevens and his team. It has been effectively hidden in plain view, where it's been safe from the non-prying eyes of the skeptics who were so sure the case had to be fraudulent that they never even looked for, or at, the document.

So sure were they, in fact, that none of the skeptics, or any organization with which they are affiliated, accepted our numerous offers to receive and to review the 23-page document, conclusively proving that their agenda has always been simply to defame and discredit Meier in order to further their own beliefs and prejudices, a most unscientific and unethical approach, as I've said before.

Why We Waited

It was deemed necessary by the Plejaren and Meier, for the ultimate credibility of the case, and in order to not force the reality of the contacts on masses of people who weren't prepared to handle it, that the photographic evidence be allowed (if not encouraged) to be called into question. It was clear from the controversy that arose, from the first moment that Meier began presenting his evidence and information to the public, that "proving" that the Plejaren and their UFOs were real, through actual widespread contacts or sightings, was completely out of the question. In fact, the irrational, unscientific, behavior of the skeptics is a clear testament to the inability (or unwillingness) of many seemingly intelligent people to calmly and logically evaluate, let alone accept, the stunning physical evidence in the case.

So, in consideration of the impact on the collective human psyche, such inescapable proof (easy as it would have been for the Plejaren to provide it, had it been their intention) was not forced on the population and, instead, Meier suffered through the numerous, decades-long attacks on his credibility and character as hurled by defamers, skeptics and self-professed UFO "experts", and even on his life by potential assassins, some 19 to date.

A Final Farewell

Seen from a broader perspective, the skeptics, while thinking they were running the game, have actually played the role of a perfect foil, unwittingly providing the dark background upon which the light of truth would ultimately shine. In that way, it can be said that they have served their purpose, different as it may be from what they conceived. And, in an additionally bizarre display of what can only be described as inexplicable masochism, they have deigned to publish some of the correspondence between us at: <http://www.iigwest.com/horn.letters.html>

Though they have not hesitated in the past to cast aspersions at real scientific experts (James Randi actually attacked the reputation of IBM scientist Marcel Vogel, who held 32 patents, by saying that he was “not very smart” and that “anyone” could buy a patent), in light of the now overwhelming amount of scientific and legal proof authenticating the Meier contacts, as well as their own buffoonery, they’ll probably busy themselves with performing magic tricks at children’s parties, or some other harmless activities. Thus, having exhausted their challenges, their proverbial 15-minutes of fame and what, if any, credibility they may once have had, the professional skeptics now effectively fade into their well-deserved, and complete, anonymous irrelevancy.

Free To You Now

Now, trusting that the time has come for people to be responsible enough to think through and evaluate all of the different evidence themselves, the 23-page overview of the photo analysis is available, free, to the public, as is the sound recording analysis (also posted at www.theyfly.com). A crucial excerpt of the videotaped analysis of the metal alloy sample by IBM research chemist Marcel Vogel is shown on the DVD “The Meier Contacts”.

Hopefully, this latest addition to the body of proof will encourage people to seriously consider the importance of the Meier contacts for what they are, the key to our future survival.
