

David Icke Claims
Conspiracy at the Highest Levels
a commentary by Jason Dunlap

Originally printed in Center Of Attention Newsletter

Subject: Report Of San Jose, Calif. UFO Town Meeting
by David Icke
About One World Order.
Sept. 23, 1996.
Center Of Attention.

Our "Town Meeting: was quite successful Over one hundred people attended the lecture by David Icke, author of several books and tapes concerning how governments, at the highest levels are controlling and manipulating the rest of humanity for the purpose of gaining absolute power over what is created on Earth.....at least for now. No doubt they intend to focus on the greater galaxy as soon as they can get us nailed down. On the surface, David's views sound like the ravings of your typical radical, where nothing but outrageous conspiracies, and clandestine plots are the foundation of leaders, world-wide, and the good of humanity is furthest from their minds. However, you can't avoid the simple logic and subtle British humor that David so artfully uses to present his case. On one level he brings a message of fear but it is couched in a positive aura of hope.

He began with a metaphor involving a sheep herder. The sheep herder arrives in his pickup truck, gets out and merely stands in one spot. There are thousands of sheep scattered aimlessly about the country-side, whereupon seeing the man, they slowly begin to gather and move toward the truck. How does it happen, that one man, with his trusty sheep dog is able to control and herd so many? It is so easy! Sheep are so simple, you see. For whatever reason, one or two sheep unconsciously react to the presence of the man and begin to move. The sheep, next to them will follow the movement and so on until all are merely following what is in front of them. For the few stragglers, the sheep dog supplies some fear, which they move away from, not wanting to be hassled, and there you are. The sheep tend to stay within "hassle-free" zones, and the sheep dog sets the perimeter of the hassle-free zone. As long as you follow along, you aren't hassled. It's easy to control those that "get out of line" because the majority form an identifiable pattern and anyone "going their own way" will stick out like a sore thumb. For them, more and more fear is induced the farther "astray" they go, and is lessened as they move back into the acceptable pattern. And, so it is with most of humanity.

Basically, we are loving, cooperative beings that are not obsessed with having our own way. We believe in living as hassle-free as possible. However, not every one is this way, and those that are not are paranoid about losing control, and obsessed with dominating every aspect of reality-especially other humans- because of a demented thirst for the recognition and power given by the masses. These people, who we often find in positions of power, do not believe in live and let live, and in being cooperative. In fact, they always want to hassle someone, just to stay in practice. Honesty and "The highest good for humanity" are merely slogans, and a sales tool, for such as these. Like a magician, they practice the art of deception, double-talk, confusion etc, but not for entertainment, but rather to gain advantage, to cheat and dominate. In fact, they are the authors of such lofty ideals as "together we can do it", and "sacrifice for the good of all". An ideal that promotes the of giving up your personal power for the benefit of the many is the tool used to pit the few against the many, independent action and thought is considered selfish, self-serving, and basically anti-social and deserves repudiation, if not the perpetration of violence upon those that will not conform, ideally, the "sheep dogs" will be those among the many that will turn you in, or attack you out of a sense of self-righteous indignation at the fact that you are not willing to conform, and hoping that some day, they can find themselves promoted from "sheep dog' to farmer.

David Icke makes a good case for most of us being "sheep" and willing to stay within the "hassle-free" zones that our leaders have created for us. What's disturbing is that he also make a good case for the existence of a pyramidal structure of power, where a handful of men (not women) wield awesome power and authority, and all of these men are corrupted and perverted beyond believability. He explains in some detail how these men came to such power and how it connects back centuries where world power was in the hands of Kings, the heads of Religious and secret societies. Nothing has changed, either. When you look back at the history of Kings, the Henry the VIII and others, where barbaric behavior, such as cutting off heads and torture were common place, it isn't difficult to imagine that only those with the same mentality would be assigned positions of power, and those that would criticize or attempt to challenge such authority would be quickly "weeded out". The children of such men would be taught, from childhood, to become "like them: and so on, and so on. The Spanish inquisition was born out of the fear that mankind might find his personal power and use it to rediscover the secrets held only by the elite. To waken to your ability to contact G--, or perceive beings in another realm, or trust your own opinions of how life should be lived would be disastrous for them, the, corrupted leaders of the church. The "problem" with demons and devils. of evil beings infesting the land was created by these maniacs, who wanted to keep the sacred teaching of G--, secret. The "problem" Manifested in the the imaginations of sheep and the "hassle-free zones was established, using the fear of being tortured and killed if one were to question the interpretations of the "The Hierarchical Church". The problem was created by the church and the church made everyone believe that only "the Church" could solve it. After a couple of million people were killed off, the problem would mysteriously disappear and everyone could relax, knowing the church leaders had saved us all form disaster. How grateful we must have been.

At the top of the pyramid of power sits a handful of crazy people, whether such craziness from inter-breeding or just the effects of having bizarre and crazy parents, who knows. The next step on the pyramid is a larger group with complete allegiance. All of the secrets are known at this level. Whether you are Free-Mason, Knights of Malta, Trilateral Commission or whatever, you are privy to astounding information. You learn psychic secrets, are able to communicate with extraterrestrials, mind-control vast number of people....it's witchcraft and wizardry at its highest levels, none of which is revealed to the "ordinary people". Once again, fear is used, the threat of death and torture if anyone reveals these secrets. In this way, none below that level will ever know what is really going on. The next level on the pyramid are those given the honor of serving those above, and anyone who does not properly feel grateful and honored are weeded out. These are those that make up the "Unquestioning Obedient". Just for the privilege of holding high office, and having all the comforts one could imagine, these people follow orders without question. They don't even want to know about the top pyramid. They are the heads of churches, Banks, secret societies, huge corporations, Presidents, Prime Ministers, our so-called leaders. Being President is beneath such men as G----- B--h, David Rockefeller and such.

According to David Icke, and I'm not so sure he's not right, all our World Wars were instigated and orchestrated by the "royal elite", that handful of men, who's agenda was merely to create enormous wealth. And, so it did, and it was easy as training your sheep to gather when you appear, and they were in complete control of It. "The end justifies the means" is the only principle at this level of the pyramid. By acquiring money, one controls more and more authority to do whatever they want. There are times that two thirds of the world's monetary wealth has been in the hands of just a handful of men! They can choose to distribute it in anyway they want, and they do. They fund research for super-weapons, mind-control experiments, heinous genetic research, time-travel, CIA activities, underground cities, and what-have you. He makes a good case for any of the bizarre and outrageous stories of secret government activities you may have heard. Unbelievable?

Think about it? If all this is true, and our world is controlled by an insane and self-serving global elite that is bent on bring humanity into conformity with their bizarre vision of the world, could the world really look as it does to you? If you take the position that much of this gloomy analysis is bunk, then what do you think the world would be like if it were true? Do you really believe that things would be completely different, would it be some horrible nightmare instead? Is that why it can't be true, because it would be much worse if it were?

If you are one of those that believe it is all true, then what do you think the world would look like it if our leaders were moral, honest, and of the light? Are you sure it would be so different, if so, what would it be like? One thing is true, for sure, you aren't going to figure it out by just thinking about it. You'd have to research, like David Icke has done. All we can do is speculate, for now. This is one of those times when you have to believe what you want to, because you can't figure it out, for sure. If you have no response that it doesn't matter what you believe, otherwise you will take action according to what you do believe.

The question is, "what is there to do about it."

Unfortunately, David Icke's solution is more philosophical than substantive. The "lightworkers" philosophy of love and light, harm no one, is as appropriate as anything else, and starting a violent revolution as a stupid alternative. However, in consideration of philosophy, David's solutions involve personal growth and developing an awareness of when you are asked to give up your power. He stresses the necessity in becoming responsible and independent as the foundation of future social development. More and more we must resist the temptation of becoming more dependent on government to solve our problems, especially since it is the government that is creating most of them, in the first place. We must resist cultivating a "welfare" mentality and examine our situation before cooperating. It would seem sensible, for all of us, to avoid conforming and find great acceptance in the differences between each other. You can't have it both ways. You can't say you have tolerance for all religions, and opinions and yet create "hassle zones" for those who don't go along with the program.

There are more inspiring ideas than I will go into here, but suffice it to say, that David Icke's information, will bring about a deeper understanding of the monumental task required to dismantle the present system and create a better one. ... I recommend his two books, "... and the Truth Shall Set You Free", and "Robots Rebellion", which go into great detail on how everything is connected up with proof of this accusations. He also has his solutions outlined in "Trance Formation of America", which I have not read yet.